You know, a lot of things that have been attributable to HAARP, clearly, that HAARP is not capable of, firstly; and secondly, if it is capable of it, it may not be at this particular stage of its development, as we see the developments taking place.

Some people have criticized us for not jumping on those bandwagons, but the reality is, Earthpulse Press does, and says, what it does when it has the evidence in its hands that is available to the media and to anyone else who want it. And the fact is, when we approach things that way, that's what has allowed, essentially, three people to carry these issues into huge arenas, with the help of hundreds and hundreds of people who have run into our material, because it is properly supported by evidence, not word of mouth evidence, but hard documents. I guess that's our dividing line.

Many of these other stories are based on word of mouth, and quite frankly, we don't accept that as strong enough evidence to present to the public because there is too much room for error. We want hard documents to substantiate the issues. And what we also find, there's enough issues to demonstrate the overall theme of government secrecy, and abuse of that secrecy in terms of accountability, where we can show that with any number of things which can be clearly proven. The speculation isn't necessary, either in the case of HAARP or any other weapons system. What can be proven is sufficient to have a reasoned and rational debate.

These other things, are they possible? Is it possible for HAARP-type instruments to shunt energy down from the ionosphere in a way that could be destructive? Absolutely, yes. Are they doing it? Who knows. No one is independently monitoring it, and anyone suggesting that they are is speculating, and speculation doesn't lead to a their own word, unless they want to retract it, and that would be fine with us if they would retract some of the actions that they've taken.

Martin: This is along the same line we were talking about earlier with weather control. Obviously there is a lot of weather control technology out there. The question is: who's using it? And in what places are they using it? Under what conditions?

Dr. Begich: This is a good question, actually. I'll give you a coincidence, and it's strictly a coincidence, because there is, again, no independent monitoring to confirm it. But you remember back when those tornados appeared in Orlando a couple of years ago? And there was quite a stir because they shouldn't have been there? This isn't a place where tornados are generated.

What we found was interesting. In Scientific American for April/May 2000 was an article, in fact the whole issue is on weather. And in that issue it shows a map of Alaska with a little jog in the jet stream, where the jet stream moved about 60-70 miles out of its normal path, and then switched back and came back down, just a little dog-leg turn.

It happened to occur right above the HAARP facility, and I say "happened to" because we don't know that it was active that particular day. But that alteration in the jet stream here in Alaska, that very small alteration, when you think of it on the global scale, caused the storm front to move from East Texas and Louisiana into Central Florida, and deposited those two tornados in that location where, normally, they would not have been.

Now, is it coincidental? Could HAARP alter the jet stream in that way? Absolutely, yes. Could it do it at this stage of the development? Absolutely, yes. Did it do it in that instance? God only knows, and whoever might have been operating it at the time; if it was operating at the time.

The point is, you can show how an effect can occur, and what it can do, but you can't solution, particularly if they're wrong. Because, if you're wrong enough times, the only thing people remember is when you were wrong, not when you were right.

It's better to stick with what you can prove, with their own words, with their own documents, which has been our rule. And, as a result, they cannot refute necessarily draw the conclusion that HAARP did it, without that independent monitoring. And THAT the Europeans have called for, but as of this date it has not happened.

Again, what kinds of things can happen on a disastrous scale, people need to lift their eyes off of HAARP long enough to realize that HAARP IS NOT THE ONLY SYSTEM. People go back to that continuously because it's where we got these issues the most widely known, so they tend to connect them together. Many of these issues are totally disconnected from HAARP, have nothing to do with HAARP, have to do with totally different technologies that we've discussed in the context of discussing HAARP.

Bear in mind there are lots of technologies fueling this Revolution of Military Affairs. HAARP IS ONLY ONE OF THEM, AND IT IS A SMALL PART OF A VERY, VERY BIG, NEW HORIZON OF TECHNOLOGY, and we need to remember that; keep it in perspective. It's one of many. It's a grain of sand on the beach of new innovation. It is not THE new innovation; it is just one of them.

Martin: Well, certainly I would think—without belaboring the subject—that the subject of "controllable lightning" would be a very powerful tool by the military, or by anyone, for that matter.

Dr. Begich: Absolutely. In fact, in Earth Rising: The Revolution we talk about controlled lightning, but not using the HAARP instrument to do it. Yeah, it's desirable, because if you can direct it, I mean, think about it!

Martin: You know, the old thunderbolt.

Dr. Begich: But the idea that you could have a weather front within a country that's totally innocent, and be able to direct it against the adversary's targets, I mean, talk about the ultimate covert warfare! Right? And that's, again, desirable on the part of the military. The idea of directing lightning bolts is part of their thought, in terms of weather modification, controlling the weather. Divorce that from HAARP for the moment, but that's something they've actively pursued and believe they have the capability of delivering.

Martin: And what kind of technology is involved for that?

Dr. Begich: It's, essentially, using energy to act as a waveguide, so whether you're using a radio-frequency signal, or some other signal that allows, more or less, a pathway to be formed—just like an electric current is run through an electric conductor. If you can create an energy path, if you will, that taps energy of a storm front and directs it, that's the kind of thing that they're talking about.

So being able to shunt down the electrical discharges from a thunder cloud, being able to control the direction and discharge, is something they are actively seeking.

Martin: So that's not really science fiction? That's something that is real, in terms of their interest?

Dr. Begich: Absolutely. And this whole area of weather modification has gotten A LOT more interest lately, not only for controlling lightning, but also for controlling cloud formation.

In other words, to create cloud formations so that adversaries, people with less sophisticated electronics, have a little bit more difficulty spotting things—or the ability to confirm, or the ability to create holes in the cloud formation so that when we're dropping bombs or bringing in cruise missiles, or whatever, we can penetrate the cloud cover and come in, or dissipate fog, or whatever we want to do in terms of controlling the "battle environment".

Weather modification, I mean, weather as a force multiplier as been contemplated by the military. The idea that, if you can control the battlefield environment itself, to the greatest extent, you control the outcome of the battle. I mean, if you can totally demoralize your adversary first, by giving them a blast of bad weather, and then come in to mop-up the mess, Nature has tremendous potential if that energy can be directed and released on a population.

That's what weather modification is about. The thing that's unforeseen is, when you do that in one area of the world, or maybe you do it for agricultural reasons to enhance your agriculture, you may create an unexpected and profound effect elsewhere.

Martin: Or even wipe-out agriculture, for that matter.

Dr. Begich: Right, and it's like if you look at El Niño and La Niña on global weather activity, and then think about throwing man into the equation, deliberately screwing it up or changing it in some way, we have no idea what might happen. This isn't speculative, in terms of expecting the worst; it's expected to have the worst because you are throwing into a system that's already demonstrating huge amounts of disproportionate energy release above what we're normally used to.

In other words, with all the weather anomalies and weird changes in weather that are happening around the planet, is this the time to play games with it and see what else we might be able to do? I don't think so.

And I think most scientists, with any good sense, would agree that you don't throw gas on a burning fire, but that's what we may be doing. It may be that final proverbial straw on the camel's back that flips the system into dis-equilibrium; especially, one of the theories is over the solar storm we just had. What would happen if you were discharging HAARP at the same time, in the right mode? Could you shunt that energy down?

That's one of the scary thoughts: what would that do? Would that, literally, create a huge change, in terms of what was coming to the Earth from these huge storms? Would that create a shunting of that energy, causing great disruption on the planet? Nobody really knows, and yet this is what they're experimenting with.

Martin: You're up there in Alaska. I imagine you're in touch with Native Americans there. What are they saying about what's happening?

Dr. Begich: Well, I am in touch. In fact, I work a couple of days a week for the Chickaloon Village, which is part of the Athabascan Native culture. In fact, they are a federally recognized Native government here.

The whole idea of military experimentation in Alaska, and the use of military systems in Alaska, is highly disturbing. I mean, they're just finally settling, in this year's budget, with Native Alaskans from the northern part of the state for injections of radioactive iodine, in non-consensual experimentation during the Cold War, where they're finally paying them for what it cost them, in terms of their health.

You know, you can't compensate someone for their health. It's particularly disturbing to see that they did it without people's properly informed consent, but that has happened here. Native Alaskans are not thrilled with the idea of being used in any experiment, or having risk presented in Arctic environments that may interfere with their lifestyles and traditional uses of this land. There are too many abuses.

The biggest polluters in this state happen to be the United States military. Some of the biggest superfund messes in Alaska are military related. It's not going to be cleaned-up here for another couple of hundred years, if they go at the same pace they're going now.

So there's a lot of concern that introducing new systems to an already messed-up environment, quite frankly, from military experiments here, is not a particularly desirable thing. And yet, missile defense, our governor has just appointed a new missile defense co-ordinator who is all excited about the wonderful economic benefits of missile defense in Alaska.

The fact is, all of that excitement for the economic benefits are to celebrate the unilateral abrogation of an international treaty that has offered the planet stability, in terms of peace, for the last 20 years. And we're about to abandon it for a few shekels, and in exchange for those shekels we're placing the world in jeopardy, again, by accelerating an arms race that is just a draw of human potential and human creativity into a very negative and paranoid world.

It's time to revisit that, to change that, and to refocus that energy into something that enhances. Yes, we have risks. Yes, we need strong defense. But it needs to be balanced against real human values that, hopefully, we're trying to perpetuate around the world, instead of these commercial values that say "Exploit, expand, burn, and plunter whatever is in our path." I think that is the wrong approach.

Martin: I think what I was looking for with the Native American question was more on the spiritual or philosophical or prophetic level, having to do with the increased Sun activity.

Dr. Begich: Well, that certainly comes up. I mean, Native cultures, not just in Alaska but all over the United States, speak about a time when the sky goes red. And those times can happen even now. I mean, they happened this last weekend with the auroral discharges. What does all that mean? We really don't have a clear understanding.

When you look at things on the planet and what we've discovered, say in the last 100 years, and then we try to extrapolate what all of those things mean, say for the last 100,000 years, we're really like the blind guy feeling the elephant. We think we know what it looks like, but we really don't. And I think that's the case.

As we begin to understand more about how the planet works, and how living organisms work, it is NOT THE TIME TO TRY THESE MASSIVE GLOBAL EXPERIMENTS IN TERMS OF MANIPULATING THOSE SYSTEMS. I THINK WE NEED TO MOVE A LITTLE MORE SLOWLY AND A LITTLE MORE CAUTIOUSLY.

The idea that the military is the lead on environmental modification should be a concern to everyone because they don't have a generally good history of leaving things in pretty good shape when they're done—and that's whether it's in the United States, Europe, or anywhere on the planet. Just go and look at the results of the military's zeal to perpetuate technologies and what they have left behind, and it won't take very long to see that the picture they paint is not one that we want to see—totally unaccountable to the public—which is the case for too much of it today.

Martin: They're certainly not known for their humanitarian efforts.

Dr. Begich: No, it's not about humanity. It's about control. It's about power. And it's about dominance. And those are the values that are driving too many of our innovative technologies today, rather than the higher human values that need to be expressed in our public policy.

Martin: And fear.

Dr. Begich: Fear. Fear is the big motivator. You know, one of the big things that we really have tried hard to say to folks is: "Look, all of this information certainly is disturbing, but it's not the generation of fear that we're interested in. It's the idea that once we know what's happening, then there's some constructive things that maybe we can do to resolve some of these problems."

I think that's, again, through the political process. But the first step in that process is education.

[Editor's note: We here at The SPECTRUM couldn't agree more with Nick on the point that all productive or wise action begins with education. Of course some regard such information as merely inducing fear, but that tends to be the excuse (not reason) of those who prefer to look the other way and remain comfortable on the couch being entertained by the mind-numbing sedatives of the idiot box. As the Hosts of God and Ascended Masters have said many times through their writings in these pages, they will gladly work WITH us but not FOR us. That's bad news for the lazy couch potatos but good news for those of conscience and persistence who wish to see this planet restored to a level of balance and harmony.]

There's a lot of people, as I said earlier, who merely offer speculation. The speculation needs to end because it just generates fear—because when you have speculation, and you can't wrap your hands around hard evidence, you feel pretty helpless. That sense of helplessness leads to additional decay, rather than real solutions.

By getting educated on these issues, with specific things that we might be able to do, we're then no longer helpless, but we're activists engaged in the change. And recognize that there are millions of us out there. We don't need to "organize". We don't need to have a formal "structure". We just need to do whatever little part is in front of us, and for each of us it may be as simple as talking to a friend, writing a letter to a Congressman, or maybe something more than that. But whatever it is, if we each engage in some small step, believe me, the cumulative effect is huge.

And we've seen it in our work, as people have helped us, anonymously, in numerous ways by just doing something that gets the issue out. And I think that's where it, ultimately, is our responsibility. When we say this generation is responsible, we're responsible for taking the steps in front of us. No one has some huge burden, some huge weight on their back to carry around in this regard. Just do the small things that we can do right in front of us.

Each of us has a sphere of influence. Utilize our knowledge in what we learn in our education to affect that sphere of influence, and eventually things will change. It won't change by standing still, guaranteed!

Martin: Let's back-up for a moment, if you would, and let's talk about the effects of low-level frequencies on humans.

Dr. Begich: The idea of creating physiological effects in humans, let's talk about, first of all, low levels of energy, because this is where a lot of the debate has been centered.

If you think about low-level energy, for instance, a television set, if we're watching the television set, do you remember when color TV first came out and people were saying "Don't sit too close to the TV, because it will be unhealthy."? And then they reduced the radiation levels and did some things, but basically, with the modern television set, sitting 10 feet away is thought to be perfectly harmless. And yet, in Japan, a few years ago, 700 children went to the hospital with epileptic seizures, having watched a cartoon.

Now, the cartoon was flickering light at a very specific window frequency that the brain recognized and began to react to, with a chemical reaction in the brain causing those epileptic seizures. But this was from very low levels of light. It wasn't the amount of light, the energy, or the concentration, or the power density, it was the flicker rate, the frequency of the light, that caused that effect in the brain.

What has been discovered is that any electromagnetic medium, whether it is sound, light, electric current, a magnetic field, a microwave, a pulsed microwave, any number of carriers can be used to affect the human brain, the human body, in unique ways. What they've discovered, by mapping the body, and the chemicals and elements of the body, they've been able to figure out what specific frequencies trigger specific events, and then use this knowledge to evolve weapons systems.

At the same time, the same knowledge has been used to develop, in the private sector, some of the most innovative healing systems that are out there, in terms of understanding how the human body works, and how to create changes in the body by manipulating the energy that flows through our system.

Acupuncture is the oldest form of this kind of treatment, and interestingly enough, and many people don't realize this, but every acupuncture point can be located on the surface of the skin, not by just its location but because of the energy differentials on the surface of the skin that can be actually measured with instruments. One of those instruments, that we've demonstrated often, is a "pointer plus", which actually locates the acupuncture points on the surface of the skin, so that you can then discharge an electrical current into those acupuncture points and create the same effects as needling, except you never miss because you've located it utilizing the knowledge of the electrical component, if you will, of what acupuncture really is; it's an energy system of the body, and it can be measured, and it can be quantified.

Now, you take that to the modern level of what's happening, and we're seeing really innovative areas—like the electrolaser. Acupuncture methods using Class-4 cold lasers in Europe have been developed for reorganizing the energy system of the body, causing profound changes in our body chemistry, resulting in some pretty profound healing applications.

The same can be said for disrupting the human body. In fact, the leading scientists in Finland, who report extensively on some of the work being done north of them, in Russia, actually evolved as far back as the mid-1960s, and is referenced in current Chinese work, as well as major work coming out of Russia today.

Martin: I notice you have something here in Earth Rising called HALE or High Altitude Long Endurance platform. Can you talk about that?

Dr. Begich: This is, again, space-based platforms where you can keep them aloft for long periods of time, in low orbit. And the key there is, again, this whole concept of how to get the energy there. As I explained earlier, there's a couple of different ways to do it that we at least know about. These are, again, in the battlefield of space.

You know, people have not really thought about it, but one of the things the Chinese point out is that if you can control the space environment, in terms of running a naval battle it's actually now a requirement. Your satellite technology is more important than what you may have in your other observation technologies on the ground.

I think, when you look at space platforms, not just for surveillance possibilities, but actually using them for launching defensive weapons, for instance, if you look at the missile defense debate right now, and they're talking about ground-to-air missiles being used as part of that interceptor, you're probably going to see that evolve. They're probably going to build it.

But the reality is, that's not what's going to stop a missile coming out of a silo. The idea of hitting a bullet with a bullet is what they're really talking about, and sending a rocket 30,000 miles an hour to intercept another one traveling about the same speed—the odds are not in your favor.

What is more likely the case, and what shows up in the patent record with the Dept. of Energy and others, are energy weapons that would, literally, launch their discharge, their energy discharge, just under the speed of light, about 186,000 miles per second, rather than 30,000 miles per hour [or 8.3 miles per second]. And this energy discharge, from these kinds of weapons, launched from space platforms, make for a really interesting scenario. You could, literally, knock the missile out before it ever got out of the silo. I mean, from the time the silo opened, and you could spot it within milliseconds, you could discharge this type of technology and stop it, right there, boom. That's where we see missile defense probably going. The utilization of space-based platforms, or reflective platforms with ground-based technology, would be more likely, at least in the short-term.

Martin: Going back a number of years, there certainly was a reaction when Ronald Reagan talked about "Star Wars". When he even mentioned it, there was an immediate response.

Dr. Begich: Right. And "Star Wars" back then, one of the big concerns was, from these space platforms, they tend to wobble a little bit. And if you get just a fraction of an inch wobble, and you're discharging something from that far away, it can move miles by the time it ends-up on Earth; wherever your target is could be miles off. And what they've done since that time is, they announced that they had the technology to stabilize these satellites and these space platforms, making these weapons now very, very feasible.

The Reagan era people think was the "Star Wars" era; it was actually the Clinton era. Reagan initiated all of this, spent billions of dollars, but the highest level of expenditure he made was actually duplicated with a higher expenditure, adjusted for inflation, during the Clinton administration, to build the basic technology for a ground-based "Star Wars" Weapons System that this new administration, now, has embraced.

The expectation is that it will cost about $80 billion to construct the component here in Alaska. But the reality is, we're probably looking, over 10 years, at something more the order of 5 or 6 times that amount, by the time they deploy it globally and continue to advance it. I think that's more realistic. It's probably more like $500 billion by the time they get to the finish line.

Martin: A lot of money.

Dr. Begich: Yeah, and this is OUR money. We keep hearing that from this administration: "It's your money. It's your money." Well don't give us back a grain of sand of our money when you're about to run up the debt another half-a-trillion dollars for something that may present a risk to our whole environmental system, which certainly will affect all of our personal economies! And we're already seeing it.

I mean, look at what's going on in energy. Wouldn't you rather see them spend some of this money coming up with some alternatives besides the price of natural gas in the United States, or the price of energizing our automobiles and the cost to the environment? Don't you believe there's probably better technologies that could be developed with all of the might and muscle of our technological military-industrial-academic complex? And the answer to that is absolutely "yes".

In fact, even NASA finally announced their own programs in alternative, innovative technologies, along with Great Britain. In January of this year, The Observer in London reported a major alternate-energy conference involving previously classified NASA programs and UK programs, dealing with the zero-point energy—pulling the energy right out of the aether, so to speak. These kinds of approaches toward solving problems need to be reconsidered.

Part of the problem in considering them is, another aspect of national security is economic security, and when that military-industrial-academic complex exists on fossil fuels, and those fossil fuels fuel industries like the automobile industry, all heavy equipment industries, power-generation industries, airline industries, the idea of switching something out is not an easy burden to overcome, and yet those are the kinds of things that will profoundly change the way in which the world operates.

I mean, if energy costs could be reduced and made environmentally sound, food production problems could be addressed, education problems could be addressed, a lot of other problems could be addressed because money in the economy would be available to take care of those problems.

At the same time, when the choices of military expenditures or civilian expenditures are traded-off, remember we're giving up things that enhance life in order to feed the paranoia and the methods for killing and taking life. And those are the choices that we're making. How we make them, and how we balance those choices, will determine the level of security that we have, in conjunction with the level of freedom that's worth securing that we retain.

Martin: Well, I'm old enough, and I know you are too, to remember the rhetoric that was taking place during the construction of the Alaskan pipeline, back in the '60s and '70s. And the rhetoric was energy independence, less reliance on foreign energy, foreign oil. I don't know about you, you're in Alaska, but down here in California, as far as I know, we never saw any of it. It just went away.

Dr. Begich: What happened is, the demand increased, and it really didn't make that big of a dent. I mean, it does take up quite a bit, when you think about it; Alaska is providing about 20-25% of U.S. energy needs.

Concerning the pipeline, I can go back; my dad was in the U.S. Congress at the time. They settled the Native land claims which cleared the right of ways, so they could get the corridor to build this pipeline. People, too, remember the oil embargo of the '70s that jacked the price of oil astronomically high before that pipeline got completed.

It originally was supposed to cost $1 billion, was contracted on a cost-plus basis, and cost over $9 billion. The oil companies really, basically, collected all of the money back by setting a tariff to recapture their cost of the pipeline over its projected life, which is now gone. They've basically gotten their money back. And, basically, in doing that they denied—the way they were able to get the tax structured—they didn't pay a nickel for it. What happened is, the public paid for it, again.

What it was, was one of the biggest appropriations of one of the largest reserves of oil and gas in the United States. In fact, the largest reserve of oil and gas in the United States appropriated a public resource for a private benefit, which generates 12.5 percent royalties to the state of Alaska, which is 1/4 the royalty level for equivalent fields in Eastern Europe being developed by the very same companies today. The facts are, it was, again, the picking of the public purse because the public didn't get to understand the full scope of it, because we were too worried about the energy to heat our homes and fuel our cars to take a look at the bigger, underlying issues of what was happening at the time with energy policy.

Our new president has announced this sweeping approach to energy policy, which essentially is an extension of the same exploitive technologies that have not resolved any problems. We're paying more for energy than we ever paid before. We're paying higher prices for energy than we ever paid before. And we're reaping the consequences of having expended that energy in the way we have.

The real motivation should be toward the alternatives, the REAL alternatives, which are going to get the same superficial approach that they had in the '70s, that we all remember, when wind and hydroelectric and solar were being touted as the answer. The only countries that have aggressively pursued them are countries that have no energy at all, and no clear hook into the energy industry—like Japan, which pursues, even to this day, a lot of different areas of alternative energy that, in the West, we're still kind-of ignoring.

Martin: Well, and of course, it's hard not to be a little cynical about having an oil man as President.

Dr. Begich: (Laughter) Right.

Martin: There's no conflict of interest there!

Dr. Begich: Why is the President picking up $20 million on his way out of his last job, right? You certainly expect objectivity with regard to the oil industry.

Martin: Somehow I don't see "solar" as being high on the priority list there. Somehow I don't see "free-energy devices" as being number one.

Dr. Begich: No. Ultimately, I think what we have to recognize is—and this is why I say whistle-blowing should extend to the corporate side, not just government—when you look at corporations and their structure, they keep score by how well they rack up the chips, which is the cash, not how well they perform in terms of their human qualities.

Corporations aren't designed to have human qualities, although they have existence as an entity in terms of courts; they just don't ever die. They're perpetual, in terms of who they are and what they are. But their value set for corporations is profits, profit margins, and not necessarily balanced against human values, which is why you have to have corporate accountability, along with government accountability.

One of the ways that the government avoids telling the public what they're doing is they defer to corporations. Under the Freedom Of Information Act, corporate records are not part of that Act, so you can spin-off some of your authority—let corporations act on your behalf.

This is what we do with the big companies like Boeing, or the big multi-national companies involved in aerospace, like Martin Marietta, all of these big guys. They work, sort-of, in a vacuum. You can't FOIA what happens between them and the government, in terms of their communications. Those are private. Your access information is being restricted under the guise of openness. The Freedom Of Information Act was supposed to open things up. It defined the better ways to lie, or manage perception, or perception management issues.

Martin: Sure.

Dr. Begich: Because here's what happens. If you have a technical memorandum, or a memorandum that represents internal communication between parties, you don't have to disclose it. In the case of HAARP, one of those technical memorandums came to light.

It involved many, many private companies, but the report was actually printed by the United States government, distributed by the United States government, the conference where the data was generated was paid for by the United States government, and the United States government said that this out-product was not a public document, was non-published, and wasn't available to anybody who wasn't involved in the program. It was a 613-page memorandum that laid the perimeters for the HAARP program, and we got a copy of it.

But under any Freedom Of Information Act request, they would have, under normal conditions, had to say: "Yeah, we have a record, but we're not giving it out." In this case, because it was a private communication, and the way they postured—they even said in the beginning "this was non-published"—well heck, it was in my hand. It was published.

Martin: (Laughter)

Dr. Begich: But because they wrote that it was "non-published", and say it is a non-published document, they wouldn't even have had to acknowledge its existence, and they didn't. In fact, they denied its existence when confronted on a Canadian broadcast. The person who denied they knew anything about it was the person on the cover who was responsible for its distribution. And it was a case of, how do you forget a distribution list of 88 people, with a 613-page document?!

Martin: (Laughter)

Dr. Begich: Unless that's your routine for the day, that you do that every day. And he doesn't. It was just a denial because they didn't think anyone could get it. And we got it, and it wasn't classified, so we didn't violate any national security laws in having had it. (Laughter)

So it worked to our benefit as much as it worked to their benefit.

The point is, the Freedom Of Information Act request only gets you part way to the finish line. We need a greater level of disclosure, and we need to revisit this issue.

This law evolved after Watergate was disclosed, after the CIA abuses of the 1960s and 1970s was disclosed in Congressional hearings, after the CIA shredded hundreds and hundreds of documents dealing with mind-control technologies and the use of hallucinogenics that were disclosed in Congressional hearings in the 1970s.

We then got the Freedom Of Information Act request, which was to keep us free of the tyranny of out-of-control bureaucrats. Actually, what it has provided them is another layer of cover to hide behind, from the public—again, to pacify us, while they march down the road that they call progress, and what we call a trip back to the Dark Ages.

Martin: Even if you have a whistle-blower willing to come forward, either in private enterprise or in the military, many of them are bound by non-disclosure agreements within whatever structure they were working in.

Dr. Begich: Right. And what we have to do is create a body of law that supercedes that, that says when people have something to report that's of greater human interest, those restrictions are gone. They have the ability to do that. Within an environment where a person can be insulated and protected, as well as legitimate issues of national security can be protected, but we have to come up with a mechanism. And it isn't going to be in secret courts and broom closets, and run by the military.

In an open society environment, or an open inquiry environment, where the whistle-blower is properly protected and feels like that individual can come forward, and in good conscience as a human being do what is necessary as a human being and be true to who they are. That fact of not allowing people to be humane enough to recognize when things are immoral, those are the things that lead to the last statement of the Nuremberg trial: "I was just following orders."

It doesn't fly. It didn't fly then, and it doesn't fly now.

We need to realize that a half-a-million Americans being victims of human experimentation, by our government's own admission, is something that somebody, somewhere along the line, needs to be in jail for. But no one is.

Earth Rising - The Revolution:

Toward a Thousand Years of Peace

By Dr. Nick Begich and James Roderick

Earth Rising - The Revolution: Toward a Thousand Years of Peace is about technology and its impact on humanity. This book is about the basis of freedom, human dignity, sovereign individuality and self-determination. The material will be shocking to all. This is an exposé on technological advances which will reshape the destiny of mankind in the next millennium. This book covers a number of separate areas with extensive documentation from government, academic and major media reports including:

- The Revolution in Military Affairs and its impact on freedom.
- Mind control and the manipulation of human health through the use of drugs, electromagnetic weapons and other means.
- Non-lethal weapons and their use and impact on people.
- Environmental and weather control.
- New technologies which will virtually eliminate privacy from the world scene.
- Militarization of law enforcement around the country.
- The HAARP story is updated, showing additional evidence of the military's plans to manipulate the environment.

The book concludes with solutions that could be initiated in the next few years which could change the implications of these technologies from negative to positive. This book carries a message about our humanity and our reach toward higher purposes.

And we should be outraged by the fact that our fellow citizens, and others around this planet, have been victimized by a government that prides itself on—at least its population prides itself on—our high human values and civil behavior. This is not civil. It is not humane, and represents the very lowest of what human beings are capable of, the very lowest that we saw in every major conflict on the planet that all of us rally against. And yet, in our own country, we stand by and watch it happen. It needs to end, but it has not ended yet.

Martin: Where are we going to be in 5 years in terms of technology's ability to control group protest within this country?

Dr. Begich: I think we're going to be at the point where, when we see the things like in Seattle, they're going to be contained very rapidly. In fact, in the Department of Justice and the Department of Defense protocols on the development of new weapons technology, there is priority funding for dual-use things, with particular emphasis on riot control and control of assembly.

What is said in this is that the targets within this protocol are "anyone who opposes national policy". That means everyone who opposes what our Congress might elect, or our Executive Branch might elect to do, would be faced with this position of being considered an adversary worthy of being shot at with these weapons, even if we are in a non-violent assembly.

The idea of creating the ability to disperse a crowd, where politically you don't want all of your allies to see the fact that your country doesn't support your trade policy, and be able to disperse that crowd by heating up their skin to 130 degrees and making them run away—that might be politically reasonable to do, to further your own political ends as a leader within a government. But it is totally immoral and unethical, and violates the very foundation of constitutional law in the United States, when you fail to allow the peaceful assembly of our citizens to exercise their rights of disagreement with what this government does. That right should never have been infringed, and should never be abridged. These technologies do both, and they do so because such unrest doesn't make a good CNN story from the point of view of the technology users.

Gas makes people mad. Beating people with clubs makes people mad. Hitting them and watching them run away doesn't create the same kind of anger, but it should when the fundamental issue is: "Do Americans have the right to speak out against their government in a peaceful and responsible way? Or do we not? Do our technologies promote and provide for the ability to invigorate the public debate? Or do they deny us the ability to have that debate?"

If they deny that debate by containing the population in this way, it's fundamentally wrong. And that's where it's headed, and that's, essentially, what it's about; it's about control of the population, and control of political outcomes, and the management of perceptions.

Martin: I see something mentioned here in Earth Rising called the Black Widow. Can you talk about that?

Dr. Begich: If I recall correctly, I believe this was an instrument used to discharge jolts of electricity into people's bodies. It would be considered torture in most countries, and yet this instrument and others like it are exported. We're the biggest exporter, the United States, of what would be thought of as a "cattle prod", which is used, often, on prisoners to extract information from them by torturing them, by essentially electrocution, and using it in the most disgusting and gross ways. These technologies are used by the Third World despots who we all read about in the paper. And the biggest exporter of that technology is right here, the United States. We make it possible to torture people.

If you want to look at what happened in Tiananmen Square, you could look at it on a footage film with American cameras in Tiananmen Square because they happen to be the best for surveillance, so we provide the Chinese the way to absolutely insist on the compliance of their populations in Tiananmen Square when they were running over them with tanks. It's ludicrous what we do to enhance other people's ability to oppress with technologies that we've developed and we fail to restrict.

At American companies, if it's illegal in this country because it's immoral, unethical, and irresponsible, we should not be providing subsidies or contracts or any other privilege of being an American company, with a company that can't carry those values wherever it goes. Those values, if they're subsidized by our efforts as Americans, those values should be traveling with them, and they're not.

Martin: To your way of thinking, what should people be thinking about as a course of action, that they can actually do in their own lives, without being overwhelmed by this kind of information?

Dr. Begich: That's a big part of it. Something that we've asked people to do, I mean, obviously people help us a lot when they buy our materials. That's how we function, as we started this interview with.

But getting that material to the right policy-makers is KEY. It doesn't do any good if you read it and it sits on the shelf. What actually got our issue in front of the European Parliament was somebody in the United States who heard us on the radio, sent their copy of our book to someone who knew someone, who turned out to be the Environmental Chair of the European Parliament. Later, he became the Chairman of Foreign Affairs, and through that position facilitated hearings and disclosures in this area.

So, informing people is the first step. That's one thing you can do.

The other thing that we've done, we've published a couple of essays on our www.earthpulse.com website. These essays are under "Political Empowerment". They're like step-by-step guides for organizing as a committee of one, what you can do that's simple, whether it's this issue or some other issue. And what we've said to people is, take those articles, give them to people, hand them out to people where people can use them. We don't care whether it's this issue or some other issue that you're passionate about, the same tools exist for creating political change.

Our view is, if everyone does a small part, a little bit of what's in front of them, and use these tools to accomplish it, the job will get done. We don't have to feel overwhelmed.

We lay out a lot of strategies for taking issues public, that have worked for us, that we have been able to demonstrate over the years. And those are posted on the website. They're free to anyone who wants them. And we just encourage people to get them out, and to use that information to deal with these kinds of issues, and other issues important to us, whether it's local, state, or national.

Martin: We were talking about the military and their emphasis on power, control, fear. How can the average citizen out there reading this, either in this country or somewhere else in the world, how can they read about this kind of technological capability and not be totally freaked-out?

Dr. Begich: It's certainly disturbing, but I think the other parts of it are, how do we look at distributing the information?

First of all, we don't look at the average person in the military as someone who is a villain, I mean, quite the contrary. These are people who got into these jobs to really defend the basic constitutional rights. It's not those folks who we're talking about when we talk about military. It's how the overall program is run and what's behind it.

think, is useful in a sense that “Ok, now we know what we’re up against. What can we do about it?” It’s our political processes that take us to the solutions, ultimately, and I think that’s where it has to be.

Does it mean that the solutions are going to be easily arrived at, or not arrived at without significant debate? The answer is “No”. There’s a lot of money at stake; there’s a lot at stake all the way around. And the reality is, national security for democracies is a major issue. But we need to have more of a comprehensive government, and that government was originally intended to be comprehensive.

Now what we have is fragmented government, and it is fragmented by the government bending to every special interest, until you’ve got something that doesn’t even make sense. You’ve got a patchwork quilt made out of rags, instead of something that shows some integration and quality of design.

In the centralized economies, like China, you still have this sort-of weaving of the carpet in a central design, and that design is based on a political philosophy that is contrary to most Westerners. And that political philosophy disregards many of the human rights and human values. And yet, here we are. We’re fueling the economies of these countries that become our adversaries, that then cause us to be motivated to create new technologies to help us to bail out of a situation that never should have existed in the first place.

The ultimate solutions for all of these issues deals with an informed public making informed decisions. These weapons systems cannot be used without the full knowledge of any sophisticated government because they create energy signatures that are very unique, very easily observable from space platforms. These are technologies that could be guarded against, and we know probably already who has demonstrated some level of capacity in these areas.

We have to have a discussion. We can’t just allow bureaucrats in a closet to have that discussion. I mean, we have to demonstrate some hope that the political processes can work. But they only work when people engage. And the biggest thing that I’ve heard in my life has always been “Well, you know, everyone is so apathetic. There’s only 10 or 20 percent of the population who are active.” That makes it a heck-of-a-lot easier if you can convince 5 or 10 percent that you’re right, and get them to exercise their political prerogatives. You can actually carry the day. And every major change, socially, religiously, culturally, that’s ever happened on the planet Earth started with one or two people, including the American Revolution, which started with a minority, as little as 5 or 6 percent of the population believing it was a good idea.

Change happens by people acting. Acting is the act of faith, stepping into what’s in front of you. Winning or losing isn’t the issue; it’s the act of doing. And that’s what we’re required to do—learn from each of our mistakes. But at the same time, carry our version of the truth out, and be flexible enough to recognize when we make our mistakes along the way.

Doing nothing doesn’t solve it. Take a step, a small step, and the solutions will present themselves.

Martin: Let’s take this last moment here to sit back and scan away from the planet, taking a larger view. What would you say to our readers in closing remarks? Take as long as you like—words to consider, to ponder philosophically or spiritually. What kind of counsel would you give to those reading this article?

Dr. Begich: I’ve grown up in a very political environment my whole life. I’ve been engaged in the process as a young person. My father was in the Senate, I grew up in that kind of household, later in the United States Congress. At the same time, I’ve grown up with a lot of knowledge in the sciences and technology, and being able to study those areas.

But I still have to look at all of those things in conjunction with, really, an underlying philosophy of how we should live. Any policy-maker I’ve ever met, every person, regardless of the position they occupy in life, that I’ve ever met who had anything to say, always had a deep spiritual component to who they were. I think discovering a little bit about that tells you a lot about what they do in life. I think we’re all in the same boat.

People with the most obscure positions accomplish the most profound things. I mean, think about the greatest inventions on the planet. Who started those? Ford, Ford Motor Company, or the Wright Brothers, or even coffee makers and Apple computers; I mean, these were started by mavericks who didn’t jump out of some huge academic institution.

Each of us has that same creative capacity to create change within our sphere of influence, and that sphere changes as we step into each of the things that we believe in. That’s what we have found, in the last 7 or 8 years, particularly, as we’ve addressed these issues. We have found resources materialize, people materialize, the necessary things come into our lives that allow us to further our efforts in this area—only because we continue to try. And I think that’s the real underlying message to all of this—assess what’s going on, assess our own spiritual inventory.

If we’re being motivated by fear and panic, STOP right where you are, refocus your energy, because you cannot—if you look at brain activity in that state of mind, you will not, absolutely will not make good decisions that are the right decisions. And if you are experiencing anxiety, chances are it’s because you are moving too fast, too far in the wrong direction, or something is not balanced in your life. That’s what needs to be addressed, first.

I think what we find is that people do what they know they can do, whether it’s talking to their friend, or whether it’s something as simple as smiling at someone. It all starts with an action that you can do. Fear comes from being threatened with something that you can’t control, or is unattainable.

There are lots of things each of us can do that result in a solution. I think it’s a chain that we all need to recognize. It’s no longer that you need these formal structures to accomplish it.

The Internet represents an information exchange. But recognize that there’s an “organic Internet”. It’s the exchange between human beings. And if we know that there are other people trying to do good things along these lines, and we each do a little bit, the accumulative effect is that the problems get solved.

If we spend our time organizing groups, you end up, usually, spending time arguing the fine points of structures and organizations, rather than dealing with the merits of the issues that you’re most concerned about. So the “organic Internet” is where we live and where we work, and it’s that organic nature of human beings that has allowed us to create the changes that we’re now facing.

I think that’s how the big changes are possible, when individuals act in their own self-interest, and continue to try, in each of the ways that we, as individuals, can try to make a difference.

That’s all we’ve done. With a handful of people and a whole lot of effort, we have been able to see a lot accomplished. It’s been accomplished because individuals, sometimes against great odds, have taken that knowledge a little bit further. And we would encourage people to pursue their version of the truth and recognize that there are others doing the same.

Martin: This has been a real pleasure. Thank you, so much, for taking the time to talk with us.

Dr. Begich: Thanks for covering the issues; I appreciate it. I look forward to reading the article.

Dealing With Inner Stirrings Of Unrest

5/4/01 SOLTEC

Good afternoon, my friend. It is I, Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec, come in the Radiant One Light of Creator Source. Be still and know that you are never alone or without MUCH support from the Lighted Realms.

Dear ones, you are IN the time of the transition or the “quickenings” as it has been referred to by many. This speeding-up phenomenon is causing a great stirring within all ones. Everyone is feeling the effects in one way or another. Some of you who keep your attitude positive at all times (we often refer to this as “keeping your frequency up”), and thus remain well grounded and centered, are still impacted in many ways by those who are struggling to understand what is causing the inner stirrings.

TO ALL ONES: Be very aware of the sudden mood swings and erratic behavior, both within self as well as those around you. Depression and anxiety are perhaps the two greatest “attacks” we see the majority of you having to deal with.

There are many factors that are affecting all ones. For many of you who are more sensitive to subtle energy shifts and non-physical phenomena (psychic-type experiences), you may very well be feeling the incoming “percussion wave” that is generated in etheric space prior to physical manifestation of many of these energy effects.

Many of you more sensitive ones (we often refer to you as Groundcrew for a Larger Mission) who have yet to find your inner connection—or who have found it, but want to ignore the messages coming in—are finding life to be getting more and more, shall we say, tedious. The little things are becoming major disturbances and, for some, the idea of peacefulness has become a distant, fanciful place that doesn’t really exist.

My friends, these times of transition do not need to be experienced from a position of painfulness or hardship. If you buy into the materialism of the world or the need for status and prestige, you will likely find that you have an ever-building anxiety as the monetary systems continue to crumble and the illusionary façade of “modern” living comes to an abrupt conclusion.

So, what is this “Groundcrew” of which I speak? And what is the “Larger Mission” that we, of the Lighted Realms, often refer to?

Many of you have a good grasp of what I speak, yet there are significant new readers of this information who are not yet familiar with this terminology. We, of the Lighted Realms of Creation (some know us as the Lighted Brotherhood), are constantly reaching out to assist our brothers and sisters who have gotten themselves “trapped” in the third-dimensional karmic wheel of repetition.

This means that there are ones who incarnate lifetime after lifetime, and tend to fall back into the same “rut” of repetitive behavior and denial of their inner connection to God and all of Creation. Because of this phenomenon, we, of the Lighted Brotherhood, send forth volunteers (Groundcrew—that’s you!) who have agreed to incarnate into a physical body so as to provide physical conduits for large amounts of positive energy (Love and Compassion), and thus help these “stuck” ones to see a larger perspective of who they really are—part of a much larger Wholeness that permeates all perceivable time, space, matter, and beyond. This “Wholeness” is often referred to as God or Creator Source—The One who created you. This is the “Larger Mission” of which I spoke.

You ones who are Groundcrew (assume that you are if you resonate with the idea of helping others and being a positive influence on those with whom you come into contact) may very well be struggling with the “jangled vibrations” that currently exist in your environment. Your planetary solar system is vibrating at a faster and faster rate, and your Sun is preparing to send to your planet some much needed healing energies. These energies is balancing for the planetary orb you commonly refer to as Mother Earth. These energies are to help her to stabilize and to cleanse her of the great negative infestation.

This “negative infestation” is, in large part, the byproduct of the individuals who refuse to grow and see the immense value in pursuing spiritual wealth, rather than constantly seeking material wealth and physical status. As a result, the planet’s many natural resources and her ecological balance are greatly out of alignment with respect to where they should be. As I have discussed many times before, Mother Earth is calling out for help, and Great Lighted Forces are responding to her petitions, resulting in the Great Healing that is well underway.

The inhabitants of Earth have been given many, many opportunities to lessen or avoid the kinds of “harsher” experiences which, when your planet becomes very much out of balance, are a necessary part of the rebalancing process. However, for many these opportunities have constantly been ignored. This is simply to state the facts of the matter.

If the facts of the matter are that you just jumped out of an airplane and your parachute fails to open and YOU CHOSE not to take the advice of a more experienced instructor who said you should wear a reserve chute, and you then petition to God at the last moment to save you (from your own ignorance), then what would be the prudent thing for the Master Teacher to do?

It is well known and understood that there is no substitute for first-hand experience. You ones are in a schoolroom wherein you are efforting toward a higher understanding of your innate abilities to become a balanced co-creator. You must learn to TAKE RESPONSIBILITY for your actions—as well as for your inactions. Inactions are CHOICES you made to do NOTHING. You are still responsible for ALL of your choices as being part of your personal growth.

We, of the Lighted Realms, do not view physical death of the body as a major tragedy. You each will continue on and, if need be, reincarnate to further your schooling. What we do see as “tragedy” is all the missed opportunities to grow beyond the self-imposed limitations. We find great sorrow when we observe ones, who see Truth that will break the chains of self-imprisonment, still turn away for various reasons of doubt and self-punishment.

Recognizing the Truth of who you are, and your place within the Infinite Source, Creator God, and that your actions and choices directly affect all ones, everywhere—albeit seemingly ever so slightly, sometimes, from the physical perception—are among the very first few steps ones need to take in order to pull themselves up out of the “quicksand” they have been struggling with, lifetime after lifetime.

You who have chosen to come forth to help your brothers and sisters in need do so out of great compassion and love. You also recognize the opportunity to expand your own awareness of self, and thus hone and refine your own abilities. There is a phrase that is commonly quoted on your planet: “Necessity is the mother of invention.” Let us state this another way: “Desire is that which summons forth a CREATIVE answer to the question posed.”

When your desire is to help others, and you hold your desire strong within your heart, Great Creative Energies begin to focus through you, as well as a myriad of like-minded entities who share this same desire, and thus the amplification is indeed great.

By contrast, let’s say that your desire is to simply help yourself. The energy is still focused through you, but often it will lack the support of the many like-minded entities adding their energy to yours, simply because in this case the like-minded entities are only interested in helping themselves.

There are ALWAYS exceptions to be philosophized about in regard to this last subject, however, a general understanding will help you ones to find the answers you seek. Often we state things in such a way as to trigger knowledge or understanding within you who are seeking this type of information. Most of you will resonate with Truth when you hear it, and thus it “rings true” within.

Let us please go back to our original topic of discussion—the inner “stirring” that may be giving you ones, or ones you know, a bit of difficulty. Many are proclaiming to not be happy, and feeling like they are somehow missing out on “something” in life. These ones are being diagnosed by the “doctors” as having severe or chronic depression, and are often being treated with chemical concoctions that more or less disconnect the entity from the body. In turn, this will make the individual VERY susceptible to being invaded by negatively oriented higher-dimensional entities. This is most pronounced in younger children who have not yet developed a strong sense of self and lack a strong affinity for the physical body. Thus you have a recipe for things such as has become somewhat of a trend—school shootings.

Besides the natural frequency upshifts caused by your solar system entering the “cosmic carwash” (a very-high-frequency section of space within your solar system’s orbit around the large central Sun called Alcyone), you also have very man-made energy waves being produced by devices such as the HAARP system up in Alaska and at other locations all around your globe. These energy waves are causing a “scrambled” feeling within many of you, and are in large part the reason for the ringing in the ears (tinnitus) and the disrupted sleep patterns.

The experiments not only affect the weather patterns across the surface of the Earth, they also affect the natural curvature and thickness of your planet’s electromagnetic field, and thus create an unnatural bending of the energies that come in from your Sun. This, in turn, causes erratic climate shifts and localized conditions that are quite unpredictable by your scientists who think they know what they are doing.

There is also an emotional strain added to you ones, along with straining the planetary being herself. The more games these scientist play with the ionosphere, the greater will be your Mother Earth’s need for healing, and thus you shall witness greater and greater solar activity from your Sun who, as a parent, is responding to the call for help from an offspring.

These manmade disruptive conditions are in no way limited to just the HAARP system, but include cellphone towers, radio waves, and other, more exotic “scalar” or “pranic” energy wave devices less-known-about in public circles. Each of these so-called “modern marvels” in technology would be banned if the mass population fully understood the detrimental effects they are having on the mental and emotional well-being of the planet and its inhabitants.

The next logical question should be: “What can I do to keep from falling into a depression or from feeling the waves of anxiety?” The single most effective way for the average person to raise their frequency, and thus establish a positive mental attitude, is to get busy helping others.

Some of you may feel like you are the one who needs help, and so “How can I possibly help another when I myself feel like I am falling apart?”

Call upon Higher Source for guidance and assistance. Find the SMALL things in life that bring at least a sense of contentment, if not joy. Look at these small things and see what they have in common. Most will find that there is an element of creativity associated with these pleasant undertakings. Creative activities are ALWAYS pleasing to a Lighted individual. Look for various creative outlets. Humor is a very powerful way to achieve a high-frequency state almost instantly. Some ones thoroughly enjoy deep philosophical debates, while others may prefer a “lighter” discussion regarding such as free-energy devices or UFOs.

Get busy learning about the things that fascinate you. If UFOs are your passion, then spend time reading or studying that phenomenon. If Angels are more your fancy, then by all means learn all you can about Angels. The point is to pull yourself out of the induced depression or anxiety state.

To just sit and “stew” in your own self-absorbed mess will only worsen the condition. Continually dwelling on past woes, sorrows, and angers, as if these just happened today, will only serve to keep you in a low-frequency disconnected state, and thus amplify the inner discord.

Once you get busy doing something that, at the very least, gives you a sense of contentment, then you will be in a much more receptive (higher-frequency) state that allows a greater flow of creative ideas through you. This, in turn, will lead to more positive energy around you, and you will eventually be much more able to help others who are trying to cope with the same type of problems.

Please remember that the best teachers are the ones who teach by example. A very busy person is almost never depressed.

Remember to seek out something new every day. This can be done simply by taking a refreshing walk and observing something or someone you have not seen prior. Your personal Guides work diligently in this regard, though many of you hardly notice the little miracles which unfold all around you each day. Observing new things each day will help you to stay grounded (connected within) and will help you to break any repetitive “rut” you may have fallen into without really knowing it. True happiness comes from living in the moment and experiencing newness as it unfolds.

Dear ones, these are mere suggestions designed to assist you who are calling out for greater understanding. The only way to achieve TRUE self-growth is to walk the path for yourself. There is no magic or mystery when you come into the understanding of who you really are and what Potential lies within your grasp.

We, of the Lighted Realms, wish only to see you each come into a greater self-awareness because, from that place of realization of your Divine heritage, you amplify Creator’s Love many, many times over.

I am Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec, Friend, Wayshower, and Geophysical Coordinator of this Earth Transition Project, come with the Hosts of God, in Light and Service to The One Light—Creator God. May you find the recognition of God within the newness and opportunities that come as gifts with each new day.

Blessings and Peace to you ALL! Salu.

“Our Elder Brothers from the Higher Realms of Creation are attempting to communicate with ALL of us at this time. Why? Take a look around you. The old ways of doing things aren't working. Our planet is entering a time of massive, turbulent change and renewal. To put it bluntly: we NEED help! And that's where these books come into the picture. Yes, eventually 'the Phoenix will arise from the ashes' after this Great Cleansing process, but the ride could be quite a bumpy one, especially for those ill-prepared for what is to happen.” — From the back cover of Volume I

China Incident: Technology Transfer

Editor’s note: The following eye-opening discussion adds yet more clues that widen the gap between reality and the government-fed news media versions of what’s going on with the recent China spy-plane events. But that gap shouldn’t surprise any regular readers of this publication. Those of you who listened carefully to the subtle (or sometimes not so subtle) changes in successive media reports must have thought you were either losing your mind, or the liars were THAT uncoordinated.

(Make sure you see Sherman Skolnick’s comments on this subject elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM. And as you read early on below, Al Martin labels the Hanssen spy case as patently phony as Sherman Skolnick did when he supplied intriguing details about Hanssen’s background that we presented back in our March issue of this newspaper.)

For those of you unfamiliar with this guy, Al Martin is a retired U.S. Navy Lt. Commander and former officer in the Office of Naval Intelligence. In his own biographical statement he claims to be: “America’s foremost whistleblower on government fraud and corruption, having testified before the congressional Kerry Committee and the Alexander Committee. He lives at an undisclosed location, since the criminals named in the book have been returned to national power and prominence. Aries II Down: Another Technology Transfer to China

In the continuing effort to make China the bogeyman of the 21st century, Washington has scored yet another coup—the loss of the EP-3E Aries II surveillance aircraft.

It’s very reminiscent of the phony FBI Hanssen Spy Case. In other words, what the U.S. Government is saying just doesn’t jibe with the facts.

The implausible government story states that the Aries II aircraft was supposedly escorted by ancient Chinese F-8 fighter planes to a Chinese military base at Hainan Island.

The Aries II has an electronic counter-measure capability that could completely fry the electronic components of a state-of-the-art MIG 29, let alone a vintage Chinese F-8. Its defensive capability consists of highly advanced directional microwave weaponry.

Also this U.S. Navy aircraft uses technology that is proprietary to the National Security Agency. Most of the technology on the aircraft is electronic intercept in nature.

According to Department of Defense statements, all protocols were broken. This indicates that the incident has been staged to create a deliberate transfer of this technology. This technology is so advanced that even the NSA was queasy about giving it to the Chinese.

Since this technology is not proprietary to the Department of Defense, and since the NSA directly controls the contractors who produce this equipment, there wasn’t any way for those who are in favor of transferring this technology to China, as a matter of illegal covert State policy, to effect this transfer without staging an international incident. Therefore, an incident had to be created to give the Chinese this technology.

Whoever was in charge of the aircraft command must have been in on it. Otherwise they would not have had the authority to circumvent the protocols, unless directly ordered to do so. The aircraft then would either be in pieces and the crew would be floating in life rafts. Or they would all be dead.

By the way, the military designation of the EP-3E Aries II aircraft is high enough that all crew members carry cyanide capsules. They must not fall into enemy hands for interrogation. And that is precisely where they are at this moment.

The Department of Defense claims they know nothing—another bogus claim, since throughout the inside of the aircraft there is a discreet video system which continues to broadcast.

The Defense Department is also trying to imply that the Chinese are jamming the signals, but what they’re not saying is that the Chinese don’t have the technological capability to jam these signals. These are highly advanced microburst transmissions that can even be bounced off of China’s own satellites. The Chinese would not even be aware of it. Russian and Chinese equipment cannot even detect such complex microburst transmissions.

The protocol on this aircraft is very simple. If there was any chance that the aircraft could fall into hostile hands, the crew is deemed to be completely expendable. The protocol can only be overridden by the President of the United States.

The only logical conclusion about this incident is that it is simply an ongoing transfer of sophisticated technology to the Chinese military.

First, the government had admitted that there were 24 personnel on the aircraft the “majority of which were U.S. Navy personnel”. The aircraft has 19 operating stations. Who are the non-Navy personnel, which the government refuses to identify?

Second, why did the crew not execute its emergency protocol and destroy the aircraft?

The media is reporting that the crew is supposed to destroy the technology by any means necessary. What they’re not saying is that the aircraft has a self-destruct mechanism already built in. It could have been completely destroyed.

If it appears that the aircraft is about to fall into “hostile” hands, the normal protocol is that the self-destruct mechanism is supposed to be activated. If the aircraft is over international waters, they are supposed to actually ditch the plane and land on the water. The aircraft is built so it can make an emergency water landing.

Since the Aries II is a naval aircraft, it is built to stay afloat long enough for the crew to get out and the life rafts to automatically inflate. The aircraft also carries emergency survival equipment with an EBIRB, an emergency locating system.

The protocol then would have been to either destroy the plane or land on the water, in which case, had the emergency self-destruct mechanism been rendered inoperable for any reason, as the plane began to sink, the emergency self-destruct mechanism would have been activated automatically when sea water came into contact with the amitol derivative explosives in the mechanism. Amitol automatically explodes when sufficiently saturated by seawater.

Even if the self-destruct mechanism had been rendered inoperable, as the aircraft sank into the ocean and filled with seawater, it would have automatically detonated. The question remains: why weren't these protocols followed?

If the plane was able to travel an additional 76 miles and land on hostile territory, why couldn't it have flown to Vietnamese territorial waters? The U.S. Government claims that the plane was "severely damaged" and had to make an emergency landing.

How "severely damaged" could the plane have been and still have flown 76 miles to make a landing at a Chinese air force base?

The aircraft had to fly north when it could have simply turned west. Since it was less than 76 miles from Vietnamese territorial waters, there would have been no threat there, given the extremely hostile relationship between Vietnam and China regarding territorial disputes in that region.

One could almost say that the reason the protocol was not invoked was because China was not considered a "hostile" country.

The "coincidental" nature of this international incident also plays into the hands of the Republican right and the defense contractors clamoring to sell Taiwan the large and profitable arms package which includes the Aegis II missile system.

The longstanding Bush family connections with defense contractors who would profit handsomely by this sale should also not be underestimated vis-à-vis the creation of this current incident. Regarding the yet unidentified extra personnel on the aircraft—could they in fact be electronics experts who were there to help the Chinese dismantle the technology?

The key system the Chinese want from this aircraft is called SCSS, Story Classic Surveillance System. It is the most sophisticated electronics surveillance and communications reception technology ever constructed.

It has the ability to intercept and decode transmissions. It can locate the source of the transmissions and automatically translate from any language into English. It can pick up computer transmissions, telephone and fax transmission, and long-wave transmissions from submarines. In short, this device can intercept any electronics communication generated anywhere on the planet, underneath the ocean, and even in outer space. There has never been anything like it. It is estimated to be 20 years ahead of any other similar technology.

The reason why Washington wasn't able to get this device to China through the usual illicit means is that it is proprietary to the National Security Agency. They're the ones who control these devices and they're the ones who build these devices.

Its capabilities are truly fantastic—simultaneous translation in all languages from any intercepts—underwater traffic, cable traffic, email traffic, telephone traffic, and satellite traffic. And it can also pinpoint the location of where the transmission originates.

The National Security Agency has been consistently opposed to the Washington policy of covertly arming China. NSA does not have the same vested interest that those in the shadows of the White House and the Department of Defense have in arming China.

It must be remembered that the modus operandi is to rearm China and to make China the bogeyman of the 21st century, so everybody can start making money again. Essentially it's an effort to turn back the clock.

NSA does not have a vested interest in this because it doesn't need to operate from a large covert infrastructure. It doesn't have to generate illicit covert monies the way others do. It's not like the CIA or Department of Defense. It is really a more technically oriented agency dealing in electronics. It doesn't deal in a lot of field intelligence, and the sales of weapons and narcotics to produce illegal covert revenue streams pursuant to the sustenance of illegal illicit or surreptitious State policy. It is more of a technical adjunct, and therefore the NSA doesn't have this vested interest.

The SCSS is proprietary technology built by the NSA. It's built by a shadowy electronics company known as Vtek Industries, which is secretly controlled by the NSA. It's so tightly controlled that the DoD and others in Washington haven't been able to get their hands on it.

This SCSS system is also the same system used in the NSA Westar 7 satellite, which has the ability to monitor all telephone communications on Earth. Unlike the Echelon system, which is an invasive system, the SCSS is a passive intelligence-gathering system.

The Chinese F-8 fighters, which supposedly forced the Aries II to land, are knock-offs of early MIG-21 jets from about 1961.

The U.S. Government is saying that the two Chinese F-8 fighters were on "routine patrol" (you could ask: how do they know that?) and one of them collided with the EP-3E.

They're not mentioning the fact that the Chinese actually scrambled the aircraft out of their airbase on Hainan Island to intercept the Aries II, even though the aircraft was over international waters.

The electronic countermeasure capability of this aircraft is so advanced, and the Chinese ECCM (electronic counter-counter measure) is so antiquated, that it is in fact possible that the only way the Chinese aircraft could do anything would be to ram the U.S. aircraft.

The Aries II ECM capability would have completely fried-out the fire and control mechanisms of the F-8. They couldn't have fired. They couldn't have locked on the radar and target imaging system. The only thing they could have done to be a threat is to have rammed the aircraft.

That part of the story has plausibility, but now they're saying the contact was accidental.

How do you make "accidental" contact with weather conditions of a brilliant clear sky and unlimited ceiling?

They would have visually seen it from a long way off, since it's a large aircraft.

The other explanation is that the Chinese aircraft was letting the Aries II know that, if they didn't fly to Hainan Island, the Chinese pilots were prepared to sacrifice their lives and ram the plane. In other words: "Your ECM technology may have fried our fire and control mechanism, and our target imaging system, but we will still ram you."

The Chinese pilots didn't have the bigger picture. They were scrambled out on a mission and sent after this aircraft with the instructions to force this aircraft to land on Chinese territory by any means necessary.

It's also unlikely that the Navy personnel on the Aries II knew the reasons. It's probably only the shadowy unidentified non-Navy extra personnel who knew what was going on. Therefore, the Navy personnel didn't really have any choice. It was either fly the plane to Chinese territory—or get rammed.

These are the issues the U.S. Government is dancing around. And just like the Hanssen case, the more the government talks about this incident, the more they contradict what they said before.

First they said there were 24 people on the aircraft. Then, when everyone noticed the aircraft complement of people was less, they said there were additional non-Navy personnel, which they weren't prepared to identify. Then, suddenly, the F-8s were on patrol. Then they admitted that they were scrambled out. Then they said the plane had to make an emergency landing.

The Department of Defense briefing stated that the plane was in "severe distress" and "they were going down and they had to make an emergency landing" when they were able to fly an additional 76 miles.

This always happens because you've got the State Department issuing press releases. You've got Defense issuing press releases. The Navy is issuing press releases. And as always in government, they don't coordinate the lies.

Everyone has different agendas, and consequently there isn't any cooperation for the LCC. The LCC (Lie Coordination Committee) function doesn't work. And this really exists. Usually it comprises one of the Deputy Assistant Secretaries of each agency in the cabinet.

The problem is, when there are so many turf battles and cases of inter-agency rivalry, these agencies have different agendas and the normal Lie Coordination function doesn't work.

Most recently, the Navy has issued another contradicting statement—that contrary to public knowledge, the aircraft was not fitted with an explosive self-destruct mechanism.

The Navy spokesman actually said that the self-destruct mechanism in the aircraft consisted in having a hammer at every operating station. Every operating station comes with its own emergency hammer that's built into it.

The instructions on the hammer state that if there's any chance that the plane will fall into hostile hands, the station operator is instructed to "take the hammer and beat the ever loving piss out of this piece of equipment".

In fact, the Department of Defense issued a statement that, as the plane was being escorted to Chinese territory, the crew was supposed to be taking their hammers and beating the piss out of their stations. Why did the aircraft personnel wait until the aircraft was on the ground before attempting to destroy the equipment, while armed Chinese troops were entering the aircraft?

The DoD has repeatedly stated the level of technology is so advanced that, if it were to fall into hostile hands, it would seriously impact U.S. offensive military capabilities for a decade. Therefore, either the Department of Defense is over-hyping this equipment. Or someone in Washington wanted this equipment to be in Chinese hands. There is no other explanation.

And here's the ludicrous context of this ludicrous story.

With the most secret electronics surveillance system in existence—for which crews are supposed to become expendable, before the equipment falls into enemy hands—the only self-destruct mechanism, according to the Department of Defense, is a spare hammer with the instructions on the label "to beat the ever loving piss out of it".

This is not your ordinary hammer, but a "special" Department of Defense hammer, which undoubtedly cost the American taxpayer $600.

But the real operating protocol for the emergency procedures of the Aries II—if there is any possibility that the aircraft should become involved in a situation wherein said technology may fall into hostile hands—the crew becomes completely expendable.

They are to undertake whatever measures are necessary to prevent this equipment from falling into hostile hands. In other words, the technology on this aircraft is so sophisticated that it is CL-1 (Compartmentalized Level 1) technology, the highest possible classification that exists.

The people who fly the Aries II surveillance aircraft equipped with this technology are essentially operating on a wartime protocol, while flying parallel to the coast of a hostile nation. They must counter any threat to this technology by its destruction.

If the Department of Defense claims that the aircraft doesn't have an explosive self-destruct mechanism, the question remains: why didn't they just let the plane go into the ocean?

The crew's lives are immediately expendable upon threat, which means that they are to expend their lives to prevent the technology and equipment in question from falling into hostile hands. So why is the crew still alive? And why is the aircraft still intact?

ARIES II REVISITED: THE DELUGE OF GOVERNMENT LIES CONTINUES

The U.S. Government's Ludicrous Statement Index regarding the Aries II incident once more scales to new heights of ludicrousness.

It all started again on Wednesday, April 25, when, according to Jane's Defense Weekly, the Department of Defense was put under more pressure by the facts recited in the Al Martin Raw article on the downed plane incident.

Besides Jane's, there was a plethora of other media outlets that "hammered" the Department of Defense's previous assertion that the Aries crew had successfully destroyed the bulk of the technology in question.

Interestingly enough, the Aries II Down story published on Al Martin Raw was the only story in the world that actually called this incident a "technology transfer" from the very beginning.

It is by now reasonable to conclude that the government has actually made a defacto admission, that this incident was in fact a technology transfer from the United States to China.

Suddenly the Department of Defense added "axes" to their ludicrous story (as in "the crew tried to destroy the top secret equipment with axes") when in fact there were no axes in the inventory on the aircraft. Then they admitted that there were no axes anywhere.

What happened is, they got their wires crossed. That was the Department of Defense release. Subsequently, when the Navy released the inventory of what was on the plane, people noticed there were no axes. After all, why would you have "axes" on this type of an aircraft? I mean, you're not chopping firewood up there.

This is called Bad Lie Coordination, as usual, as it's been all along in this story.

Then the Department of Defense admitted that "not as much technology" was destroyed as they previously had said, and that they now believe that the Chinese are in possession of certain technology that they didn't think they were in possession of before.

Subsequently, on April 27, the Department of Defense finally admitted that "no technology was destroyed". In fact, they say that it is reasonable to assume that the Chinese are in possession of the entire Story Classic System—the key technology they were interested in which is the technology that interprets the data, not necessarily that which collects the data.

For a long time, the Chinese have tried to buy the Aries II system surreptitiously and they have not been successful. The Russians don't have anything that's equivalent. In addition, the Aries II has multi-channel capability, which allows it to collect an unusually large amount of data at one time. It's called one source point technology.

Now let's take a look at the Government's latest pronouncement. According to the Department of Defense, the Chinese have agreed to have a delegation of DoD representatives come to Hainan Island to inspect the aircraft.

However (I love it), no photographs can be taken because it is a "secure Chinese military base". And no media will be allowed, thus allowing the Department of Defense the opportunity to backpedal on their previous statement of Friday, wherein they admitted that they suspected that the Chinese had taken 95% of the technology on the aircraft.

The American media will be fed dummied-up photographs showing how much of the equipment was supposedly destroyed.

Furthermore, the Department of Defense has stated that they are negotiating with the Chinese request for monetary reparations to be paid by the United States for the incident.

[Editor's note: Go read what Sherman Skolnick wrote on the actual scope of this money deal, elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM, to answer the perennial question of where our tax dollars are going—besides those $600 "special" hammers Al mentioned earlier!]

Meanwhile, at the weekly meeting of the group at Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville Alabama, the generals were in stitches about it. (By the way, the group of retired generals and colonels call themselves the MICs, which stands for Military Industrial Complexers. They even have a bowling team called "The Complexers".)

The U.S. major general there is very friendly with the Chinese major general from the People's Liberation Army, which runs an arms company surreptitiously out of Hong Kong. The Chinese position was that this was supposed to be a "clean technology transfer" and they're supposed to get everything.

What gummed up the works is that not everyone on the aircraft was in the loop. The only people who were in the loop were the five so-called unidentified non-military personnel, which incidentally the Department of Defense still refuses to identify.

Conveniently, when they show photographs of the people who have been returned, they only show the Navy personnel. They have still never shown these other civilian personnel. No pictures of them landing or being transported. Nothing. It's very convenient.

In fact, some of it—a little of it—was evidently really destroyed. So the Chinese are now demanding that U.S. taxpayer money be paid to them to illegally purchase from surreptitious U.S. arms merchants the same technology.

This will allow the Department of Defense to backpedal on their previous statement, since there can be no independent corroboration on the photographs they're going to show.

Regarding previous statements, the use of the hammers to bang the high-tech equipment on the plane has been confirmed—but they were ball-peen hammers, not the eight-pound hammers the Department of Defense claimed.

The government also claimed there were "axes" used to smash the equipment, but the only axes that were ever known to be around the aircraft were the axes that the Chinese soldiers used to break down the doors.

Contrary to the Ludicrous Government Statements, there are no other axes on the aircraft. The plane has an internal fire extinguishing system, so there is no need for the typical "break this glass" cabinets on board. The only axes were the axes the Chinese soldiers left behind after they broke down the door.

What makes it even more ludicrous is the Department of Defense statement no.16, out of the 142 they've now made. First they said that the crew had time to destroy the technology while the plane was still in the air. Then they said—no, that's not true, because the plane was so severely damaged, they were busy trying to land, so they didn't have time.

Then they went to a second line where they got hammers after the plane was on the ground in order to try to destroy it. Despite this story, subsequently a press release from the Chinese Army through the Chinese State Media claimed that the Chinese soldiers were inside the aircraft within 60 seconds after it came to a stop on the ground.

Historically speaking, dummied-up video footage and photographs for publication by the Department of Defense is nothing new.

For example, in the September 1985 ASAT tests, the DoD showed videotape of a high-altitude anti-satellite missile launch from an F-15 successfully destroying a low-orbit satellite.

Later the Department of Defense admitted it was a fake and that the missile in fact didn't hit anything. In other words, the entire thing was dummied-up.

Then, in 1989, the Department of Defense videotape showed one of the new Patriot missiles systems striking a target. Subsequently they admitted that that videotape was also dummied-up.

Then, in 1996, they showed the V-22 Osprey on "successful military maneuvers" stating that the aircraft performed to its full specifications. Later they back-pedaled on that too, saying that this video and the accompanying photographs had also been dummied-up.

In this incident, they were videotaping the actual Osprey. It was one of the first times they showed the Osprey in camouflage colors. The plane, during the test, actually crashed—after they said "it performed flawlessly". Actually, they spliced the footage together, as they commonly do.

It should also be noted that the Department of State said that they would negotiate with the Chinese for reparation payments.

Meanwhile, the Department of Defense denied it, then later backpedaled again and said that they have no knowledge because State didn't tell Defense in advance what they were going to do.

Interestingly enough, the Department of State isn't linking this reparation to the loss of the Chinese fighter. Thus reparations would be an admission that the U.S. had done something wrong. They're essentially caving in. What they will do for public consumption is subsequently tie this payment to reparations for the loss of the aircraft and payment to the pilot's family.

Meanwhile the Complexers were all laughing at the manufactured indignation of the Chinese Government over Bush's announcement of military sales to Taiwan. Bush, as everybody knows, refused to sell Taiwan the Aegis-class guided missile destroyers. Instead, he decided to sell them the Kidd-class guided missile destroyers.

The media didn't explain what this really means. The Kidd-class guided missile destroyers were first manufactured in the 1970s. They have long since been retired from our own naval inventory. As a matter of fact, they had to take them out of mothballs to sell them to the Taiwanese. They carry a missile system that "couldn't hit a flying elephant". This is the weapons system that the U.S. decided to sell to Taiwan.

The infamous illegal Chinese arms merchant, Lanny Chin, was also there. He said that, of course, his government would come out with some righteously indignant statement threatening the United States, regarding the sale, when in fact the Chinese are actually laughing about it.

As a matter of fact, the United States Naval Museum has officially classified the Kidd-class guided missile destroyers as "antiques". They are absolutely no match whatsoever for the new Chinese Sunburn Class guided missile destroyers that the Chinese bought from the Russians.

What nobody seems to understand is that, according to the 1979 protocol between the United States and Taiwan (when Carter first backed away from Taiwan and when the U.S. withdrew its ambassador and put Taiwan on a special status), the Taiwanese were limited to purchasing weapons systems from the U.S. or U.S. allies that the U.S. approved of—in exchange for military protection from the United States.

This limits what the Taiwanese can buy. Also, the protocol allowed the U.S. to sell all its weapons through intermediaries since there is no direct diplomatic exchange. The weapons are sold to offshore companies, cutouts essentially, then sold to the Taiwanese at about three times what the weapons are actually worth.

It was done that way on purpose so the Complexers could make money.

The Democrats never really cared about it. It was more of a Republican issue. Essentially what the U.S. is doing is sacrificing Taiwan for a commercial relationship with the Peoples Republic of China.

When Bush Jr. reiterated American support for Taiwan, many people noticed the weakness of the statement. It is a reversal from the previous Reagan-Bush statements. The U.S. has backed away from the protocol that an attack on Taiwan from the Peoples Republic of China was an aggressive act of war against the United States, the Reagan-Bush interpretation.

What Bush Jr. has intimated in his statement is that an aggressive act against Taiwan will no longer be considered an act of war against the United States. As time goes by, the U.S. will slowly back away from Taiwan. Then it is likely that the Taiwanese will buy weapons from the Russians. It is the only place where they can buy sophisticated weapons that actually work.

If you look at the cutouts that are selling antique weapons systems to Taiwan at three times what they are worth, they are cutouts that are directly linked to defense contractors in which the Bush family has a vested financial interest—for example, Lockheed Martin, Rockwell, Boeing, and in particular, Loral—a company in which the Bush family is most heavily invested.

What they're doing now essentially is augmenting their own wallets.

It's all about money.

Healing Codes VIDEO Set (4-hrs.)

Could bioelectric technologies investigated during the Cold War provide the most advanced form of killing, enslaving, and coercing billions of unsuspecting people worldwide? More frightening: could infectious agents, including the "mad cow disease" protein "prion" crystal, have been engineered to effect a new insidious level of bio-spiritual warfare?

Dr. Len Horowitz investigates 2000 years of religious and political persecution and the latest technologies being used to enslave, coerce, and even kill billions of unsuspecting people.

This work returns the most precious spiritual knowledge, power, and "healing codes" to humanity. It offers new hope for the loving masses to survive the worldwide plagues, famines, and weather changes that are now at hand. In perfect time for these cataclysmic events, Healing Codes presents an urgent, monumental, and inspired work that will be hailed for generations to come.

Timing Signposts And A Message From The Hopi Elders

Editor's note: Most of you would recognize author John Hogue from his longtime excellent scholarship on the well-known 16th century French astrologer, physician, and visionary Michel de Nostre-Dame (1503-1566), otherwise known as Nostradamus.

Because of the persistently fine level of John's work in many areas of prophetic research over the past several decades, he has acquired an earned respect that, among other things, has opened doors for him to sources of Native American traditions that many have been denied access to enter. With that in mind, we would like to share this brief but thought-provoking analysis which John has recently offered.

A few editorial comments are within brackets, in italics, which may add some food for thought to John's analysis. Indeed, the Great Purification is well underway and we would be wise to remember—as the river flows faster and faster—an ancient Hopi proverb which says: "Hold fast to the words of your ancestors." Those words hold great guidance at this most critical evolutionary time.

4/16/01 JOHN HOGUE

A Message From The Hopi Elders:
"We are the ones we have been waiting for."

Dear friends,

The Hopi Native Americans of the American Southwest have an ancient prophecy that has long foreseen the destruction of our present world through a purification by fire. You will know the times for this purification are at hand when a series of prophecies known as the "final warnings" are fulfilled.

The first set of warnings were meant to alert the Hopi Elders of a future time when the purification of the world was at hand, after which, they were expected to break their silence and warn the world of a second set of predictions hastening the onset of the purification of the world by fire.

Here is the first set of warnings:

THE WARNING: An iron horse will come to the land of the Red man.

THE FULFILLMENT: This is the train. It appeared in the 19th century.

THE WARNING: The White man will raise metal wires into the skies.

THE FULFILLMENT: These are telegraph lines of the 19th, and later the power lines of the 20th century.

THE WARNING: Cobwebs will crisscross the skies.

THE FULFILLMENT: These are the contrails [and chemtrails] of planes and jets.

THE WARNING: The powers of the Red, the Swastika, and the Sun will threaten turtle island.

THE FULFILLMENT: North America, seen from space, looks like the outline of a turtle. (Don't ask me how pre-Columbian seers knew that.) In World War II and in the Cold War that followed, these three "powers" did threaten North America. The Swastika of the Nazis, and later the "Red" forces of the Communists of Russia and China beset Turtle Island. The powers of the Sun did directly scorch the earth of Native lands when the White man tested his atomic bombs in Nevada and New Mexico, near the Hopi sacred lands in Arizona.

[If we move forward a bit from the World War II timeframe to the present time, we have complicated threats from Red China happening right now. As well there are massive threatening corona/sunspot activities from the Sun going on. And, if you and I were able to monitor extremely secretive activities at the South Pole (and at a number of other places that would be regarded as secret underground bases), perhaps the Nazis are also involved in some kind of threatening activities going on right now.]

THE WARNING: The White man will create a Gourd of Ashes that will lay waste to the land and keep it infertile for generations.

THE FULFILLMENT: These are atomic bombs. Radiation is the sterilizing plague.

[And we also now have far more sophisticated and deadly destructive technologies—hydrogen, neutron, scalar. The neutron bomb case, in particular, is capable of destroying all lifeforms without particularly affecting matter. Such would super-sterilize any soil, including its important life-giving microorganisms. Who knows how long it would take to regenerate such soil back into a healthy "organic" state again.]

THE WARNING: The fulfillment of this first set of signs will warrant the Hopi Elders to end their long silence and spread their prophetic message that the Great Purification is at hand. They will share their message and their wisdom with the people of the world so that everyone could prepare or soften its blow upon the Earth.

THE FULFILLMENT: Indeed, over 50 years ago, the Hopi Elders agreed that the first wave of signs had all been fulfilled. They therefore began warning the world about the prophecies of a coming Purification. Some of the Elders, such as Thomas Banyaca, have explained the prophecies on national television and spoke before the entire delegation of the United Nations.

Now comes the second set of final warnings:

THE WARNING: A tribe of red-hat and red-cloaked people would come in great numbers from the East, traveling through the air. They would colonize the Western American lands, and then scatter and disappear.

THE FULFILLMENT: The Tibetans came calling on the Hopi Elders when the first three precursory signs in their own 1,200-year-old prophecy concerning the transplantation of their religion to America were fulfilled.

This prophecy, coming from Padmasambhava, the founder of Tibetan Buddhism, says: "When the iron bird flies (airplanes) and the horse runs on wheels (cars), the Tibetan people will be scattered like ants across the face of the Earth, and the Dharma will come to the land of the Red men."

Since the 1970s, the Dalai Lama and a number of marooned robed priests fulfilled Hopi prophecy by regularly paying a visit to the Hopi Elders and moving on. Many Hopis also believe a later visitation in the 1980s of red-cloaked and capped followers of Bhagwan Rajneesh coming in their thousands to Eastern Oregon completes the prophecy. Even a handful of Rajneeshees, aware of the prophecy, paid a visit to the Hopi elder-in-chief, Grandfather David Monongye, in 1985, before they and their fellow red-clothed travelers soon vanished from sight. I report on this meeting in detail in my book Messiahs: The Visions And Prophecies For The Second Coming.

THE WARNING: The White man will steal rocks from the Moon. This is a danger sign that we are in the final days before the Purification.

THE FULFILLMENT: The Apollo Moon landings unearthed (or should I say "un-mooned"?) hundreds of pounds of Moon rocks, taking them back to Earth. Indeed, I saw one sitting under glass at the United Nations, just outside the main theater where the Hopi Elders shared their prophecies to the full United Nations delegation just a few years before.

THE WARNING: The White man will build a permanent house in the sky. This is the final warning before the Purification.

THE FULFILLMENT: MIR may have blazed its way down to the sea in fragments, but the far-more-permanent International Space Station traverses our skies today. It will be fully operational in a few more years. One could argue that it is already operational and therefore the times of the Purification have come.

There are hundreds of prophecies from other apocalyptic traditions that support the idea of some death and rebirth of the world shortly after the turn of the millennium. Those who have read my books know that I interpret the coming Hopi Purification by fire in two ways.

If fear and robotic adherence to fossilized traditions remain the motive force of our destiny, then the “fires” of war, global warming, collective anger, and stress will burn our civilization down before the next 50 years are out. However, if in the same period of 50 years, the message of personal transformation and meditation is heeded by enough individuals around the world—and they start changing themselves—then the “fires” coming to purify the world will be those of love, awareness, genius, and compassion.

I believe we will see the blazing of both inner and outer fires in the coming years. The question then remains: Which fire would you like to be purified by?

With that said, I would like to share with you a message I received from the Internet. It is purportedly an open letter of advice on how to get through the year 2001, coming from a spokesperson for the Hopi Elders. I have not yet confirmed whether this message is indeed from the Hopi Elders, but my own understanding of their prophecies makes me presume that it is authentic. Here it is:

*To my fellow swimmers:
There is a river flowing now very fast.
It is so great and swift,
that there are those who will be afraid.
They will try to hold on to the shore;
they are being torn apart and will suffer greatly.
Know that the river has its destination.
The Elders say we must let go of the shore, push off into the middle of the river,
keep our heads above water.
And I say, see who is there with you and celebrate.
At this time in history,
we are to take nothing personally, least of all ourselves,
for the moment that we do,
our spiritual growth and journey come to a halt.
The time of the lone wolf is over.
Gather yourselves.
Banish the word “struggle” from your attitude and vocabulary.
All that we do now must be done in a sacred manner and in celebration.
We are the ones we have been waiting for.*

The river is a metaphor for the fast, white-water currents of our present times in this new millennium. The call to abandon “the shore” we know, and flow down the current of an unknown destiny, is a common theme in the Hopi Purification prophecy.

I have heard the Elders put it in another metaphorical way: People will “drop dead from their own fear of change” if they do not embrace the coming changes. Those people who cannot only embrace change, but celebrate their journey into an unknown and new millennium, will greatly benefit from the coming Purification of the world.

Certainly the call to celebrate life—and make every one of life’s simple actions sacred—is a common message shared by the Hopi with those modern mystics and prophets like Adi Da, Gurdjieff, or Osho. All of them promote a vision of a new humanity coming that transcends its past attachments through meditation and celebration of life.

Happy floating down the unknown river to you all!

The Indigo Children

The New Kids Have Arrived

by Lee Carroll & Jan Tober

(Featured interview in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

The “Indigo Child” is a boy or girl who displays a new and unusual set of psychological attributes, revealing a pattern of behavior generally undocumented before. This pattern has singularly unique factors that call for parents and teachers to change their treatment and upbringing of these kids to assist them in achieving balance and harmony in their lives, and to help them avoid frustration.

In this groundbreaking book, international authors and lecturers Lee Carroll and Jan Tober answer many of the often-puzzling questions surrounding Indigo Children, such as:

- Can we really be seeing human evolution in kids today?
- Are these kids smarter than we were at their age?
- How come a lot of our children today seem to be “system busters”?
- Why are so many of our brightest kids being diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)?
- Are there proven, working alternatives to Ritalin?

Throughout this work, Carroll and Tober bring together some very fine minds (doctors, educators, psychologists, and more) who shed light on the Indigo Child phenomenon. These children are truly special, representing a great percentage of all the kids being born today on a worldwide basis. They come in “knowing” who they are—so they must be recognized, appreciated for their exceptional qualities, and guided with love and care.

This book is a must for the parents of unusually bright and active children!

Fallen Angels

And The Origins Of Evil

Did rebel angels take on human bodies to fulfill their lust for the “daughters of men”?

Did these fallen angels teach men to build weapons of war?

That is the premise of the Book of Enoch, a text cherished by the Essenes, early Jews, and Christians, but later condemned by both rabbis and Church fathers. The book was denounced, banned, and “lost” for over a thousand years—until in 1773 a Scottish explorer discovered three copies in Ethiopia.

Elizabeth Clare Prophet examines the controversy surrounding this book and sheds new light on Enoch’s forbidden mysteries. She demonstrates that Jesus and the apostles studied the Book of Enoch, and tells why Church fathers suppressed its teaching that angels could incarnate in human bodies.

Contains Richard Laurence’s translation of the Book of Enoch, all the other Enoch texts (including the Book of the Secrets of Enoch), and biblical parallels.

Zulu Shaman & Elder Credo Mutwa's Plea To The Global Elite: Stop The Genocide In Africa!

4/30/01 RICK MARTIN

The weekend of April 28 you may have noticed that all the major prostituted print and broadcast media outlets announced yet another AIDS conference of "goodwill" had just ended in Africa. This latest public relations pageant (or pressure-relief valve) was orchestrated in Nigeria, a location of deep and protracted turmoil.

All the usual array of participants (from politicians to pharmaceutical companies to medical "experts") promised, with special practiced earnestness for the cameras, to work hard to combat this illness. Meanwhile, The Truth of the matter is far different from the likes of this major propaganda event, broadcast far and wide "coincidentally" with our receiving and sharing of the following heart-wrenching communication.

The deep pain and chronic suffering that is a daily experience for many South Africans has never been more vividly described than in my recent phone conversation with Credo Mutwa. Some of you will recall that we presented a remarkable front-page feature interview with Credo Mutwa back in our October 1999 edition of The SPECTRUM. Things have gotten quite a bit worse in South Africa since we last spoke, particularly as it relates to those infected with and dying from AIDS.

On the morning of April 23, I received a telephone call from David Icke's publicist for the United States, Royal Adams, relaying a request from Credo Mutwa to speak with me. I am grateful to both Royal Adams and David Icke for considering The SPECTRUM to be the appropriate conduit through which to share this great Zulu shaman's most impassioned message.

I called Credo Mutwa that same morning, and he was as genuine and cordial as I remembered him to be—but with a very serious edge of urgency in his voice. Actually, words fall terribly short at times like these for their inability to convey the kind of intense emotional impact his voice so tangibly carried.

It was as though Credo was speaking before the full assembly at the United Nations, delivering, in very measured wording, the most serious and important appeal imaginable. His plea is on behalf of humanity that the genocide (initiated covertly some years ago as part of the depopulation agenda of the dark, so-called "elite" global controllers) MUST CEASE in the land of Africa—which is rapidly becoming a graveyard populated by the walking dead.

With that brief introduction to a subject of tremendous moral consequence, let me just move directly into the message Credo Mutwa wishes to be shared. Keep those Kleenex handy.

Credo Mutwa: My call, sir, has to do with the terrible disease which is killing my people, the disease which is called AIDS.

My appeal is this, sir: I don't know who the people are who created this disease. But in the last 2 years or so, I have handled many cases. I have handled friends of mine who are dying of this disease. And I know now that this disease, sir, is a man-made one.

I wish to appeal to those human beings who created this disease: PLEASE STOP NOW! You have done enough. You have killed enough of the children of Africa. Stop now! Stop! The death of Africa will be the death of the whole world.

If it is correct for Dr. Simon Weisenthal to pursue Nazi war criminals many years after the end of the Second World War, will it also not be just and correct for future Africans to pursue these men and these women who have murdered Africa in this terrible way?

There are questions about AIDS which I want to be answered. AIDS is not just a disease. It is a spiritual disaster to our people. It destroys families, sir. It turns children against parents. It turns lovers against each other. It has turned our society upside-down.

But what chills my blood is the paralyzing that I see amongst our leaders. Men and women who suffered and died for the liberation of South Africa are paralyzed like little rabbits in front of a vicious fox when they have to turn around and face AIDS. I do not know what our leaders are afraid of, who they are afraid of. Are there, after all is said and done, humanoid shadows out there who scare our leaders witless?

And I say, sir, to the pharmaceutical organizations in South Africa: you have done enough! Your sham of a court case has been rebuked for what it is—an act of cheap advertisement for drugs which have been rejected in Europe, in America, and elsewhere.

On top of death, you are dumping more death on Africa. Why?

I say, to every human being on this planet, AIDS is not a God-made disease! If it was, I would not be trying to fight it—half-educated, semi-literate, and stupid as I am.

I say this disease was made BY people, and I am appealing to those people to stop, now! There are names which are being bandied about by frightened people in South Africa, people who talk in whispers.

One of the names that is mentioned is the name of the man called [Dr. Robert] Gallo. I say to Mr. Gallo: Remember your common humanity. You have done enough. Stop now!

[Editor's note: See Dr. Len Horowitz's monumental book Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola: Nature, Accident Or Intentional? for a wealth of documentation placing Dr. Gallo, longtime head of the National Institute of Health (NIH) and National Cancer Institute's (NCI) Section on Cellular Control Mechanisms, at center stage in the AIDS arena. Evidence suggests he created the AIDS virus about a decade before he received a lot of political accolades for having "discovered" it.]

I say to the pharmaceutical organizations: Sir, you are like octopuses. You have got tentacles sprawling all over the world. You play Jehovah [God] with the lives of our people.

But your tentacles can be lopped-off! You are driving African people into a situation where they will have to turn around and attack you with weapons. And if that happens, you will have only yourselves to blame.

I am not threatening anyone. I am only articulating the anger that our people convey to me—as they lay dying, in empty shacks, skeletons wasted to nothing, with skins like brown wet paper.

I say: stop now, my brothers, in the name of our humanity! If your aim is to destroy Africa, say so. Let us fight, and at least die with honor.

I say: four of my children are gripped by this terrible scourge. I cannot bear the prospect that I will have to bury my offspring before I die. It is unnatural and obscene.

I say, again, to those shadowy organizations in America, and in England, and Canada, and elsewhere: STOP!

You have done enough. Turn off the tap of murder. You have killed enough. STOP!

Or allow us the right of all threatened animals to retaliate, with weapons, for what is being done to us.

If there are, out there, the children of the serpent, the Chitauli, the walkers in darkness, let them know this: that I, Credo Mutwa, am not a brave man. But when I see my children ravaged by AIDS, when I see my children turning their eyes, turning away from me, I feel the courage of any beast that watches its offspring being slaughtered by a predator. You have done enough. Conspirators, you have done enough!

Do you know, sir, let me tell you one last thing before I stop. I, and a White doctor, are saving many of our people—not curing them, because we are not allowed to claim that we have a cure for this disease—but the herbal medicine that we use is making people, who have been condemned to go home and die, come back to life. And I am asking that the South African government and the United Nations, if they are not servants to Dark Forces, they must release this medicine and allow us to combat this scourge, until such a time as scientists can come up with a stronger medicine against AIDS.

I will not allow Africa to die! I am sorry, but I will not allow my people to perish! I am only doing my duty as a father and as a Black man, and as a human being, in a country which is being deliberately murdered. I cannot accept, and will not accept, the fact that in the United States, the magazine called TIME, states that there are only 920,000 people with AIDS in the United States. And yet, in sub-Saharan Africa, there are close to 44 million. This is illogical! And I want to know the reason behind it. I’m sorry, sir, but this is how I feel!

Martin: Please don’t apologize.

Credo Mutwa: These conspirators, sir, these ugly entities have shown a dangerous over-confidence, and it is high time we confronted them. I cannot—you know, sir, what happens in South Africa is that a child who has got AIDS runs away from his family and hides himself. And if you, the desperate parent, try to go looking for your child, your child fights you and can hit you with stones and drive you away. It happened to me, sir.

There are stories which newspapers never dare to print, which are happening in South Africa, centering around AIDS. And the newspapers in South Africa, which are directed by conspirators and liars, do not even try to stop the stigma, which they built-up, against AIDS and its victims.

In fact, sir, they are making it worse, with the resolve that people who are suffering from this disease find that they are being rejected by their families. Men die alone, in shacks behind their homes. Women chase their husbands out of their homes. Men murder their wives, sir, because of the spread of AIDS.

I appeal to you, and the editor of The SPECTRUM—please, please, tell the world the hell in which we are living. Please!

Like now, I am trying desperately to build clinics in South Africa, with the help of my initiate, Virginia Rathele, and others. But we are being blocked and frustrated at every turn. We are threatened.

My house has been broken into 3 times, and the seeds of the precious and endangered plant, which we use in helping our people, were stolen. But I was able to find more, and I intend to find a piece of land—God knows where and how—to plant them, so that this plant, which is on the brink of extinction, should come back and save our people, which it is doing.

I appeal to the world, sir, and to all decent human beings, that the strangle-hold that the Chitauli, the Reptile People, have over humanity, should be broken once and for all. The death of Africa will lead to the death of the entire human race.

People must be aware of that, please. Thank you, sir.

But, please, can you please tell me, sir: What should a half-educated man like me do? You know, sir, I expected my kids to bury me when I die. But now it seems it is going to be the other way around.

What father can see his children being slaughtered in this way? What parent can allow such an ugly thing? What should a parent legally do against these monsters who have unleashed AIDS?

Everything points to the fact, sir, that AIDS is a man-created disease. In fact, I was telling Mr. David Icke, only a few moments ago, that I have traveled widely through Africa, as you know, and I can tell you one thing that scientists who study AIDS cannot tell you: That people who die of AIDS, sir, immediately after death, show signs of people who have died of arrow poison—you know, as if they’d been shot with a poisoned arrow. They don’t die, merely, of a disease, as would happen in the case of tuberculosis or cancer. Their lips are discolored in a way that I have seen happening with people who had been hit by poisoned arrows. What is it in AIDS that behaves like an arrow poison?

And, another thing, sir: It is said that AIDS began as a disease of homosexuals. But wait. In Africa, most homosexuals do not penetrate each other, sir, as they do in Europe. African homosexuals do the sex act between each other’s thighs, not in each other’s, you now, back passage. So, how does it come that these people get AIDS, when there is no physical contact with the body fluids between them?

Another thing: How does it happen, as I have seen now many times, that you find a family of four—a mother, a father, and two children. You find, sir, that the parents are healthy, but the little kids have got full-blown AIDS. Can someone, kindly, explain this to me, this phenomenon which I have seen in many parts of southern Africa?

Another thing: You find a man who has got full-blown AIDS, and a wife who is free from AIDS, and these people have got a child who is totally free from AIDS. How can one—can anyone on the Earth who reads your paper, sir, kindly explain this amazing phenomenon to me?

What, other than sexual intercourse, what is another thing that is spreading AIDS? I Amazing confirmation that a reptilian extraterrestrial race has controlled the world for thousands of years.

the reptilian agenda

"The most extraordinary news of how I have been my lifetime to meet."

David Icke talks with the Zulu Shaman Credo Mutwa

David Icke has produced two amazing videos with the Zulu “sanusi” or shaman, Credo Mutwa, who reveals astonishing information which, until now, was only available to the highest initiates of the African shaman tradition.

Credo says, “The world must know this—and know it now.”

He reveals how a shapeshifting reptilian race (the “Chitauli” to Africans) has controlled humanity for thousands of years and how their bloodlines are in the positions of royal, political, and economic power today.

Credo Mutwa supports all the themes outlined in The Biggest Secret and adds his own unique knowledge and experience of traveling Africa for nearly 80 years.

These videos will re-write the UFO/extraterrestrial story in a way that will blow your mind. UFO researchers have ignored Africa and therefore ignored one of the greatest sources of knowledge on the planet.

While people still argue over Roswell and the extraterrestrial beings apparently found there, African tribes-people have been interacting with these ET “gods” for thousands of years, sometimes eating them, as Credo Mutwa did on one occasion with unforgettable consequences.

Credo has not only seen dead “greys” many times, he has seen them examined behind their “grey” exterior and he knows exactly what they really look like—and it is nothing like we think!

“This is the most amazing man it has ever been my honor to meet—a genius—and the importance of these videos is simply beyond words”. —David Icke

After making these videos, Credo was visited by two people from Cape Town who offered him 50,000 rand, and a house anywhere in South Africa he would like to name, if he would agree to never speak to David Icke again and never have anything to do with him. Credo’s reply can be imagined!

suspect there is something else, but the doctors disagree with me when we talk at conferences. I suspect there is another way by which AIDS spreads through people. Is it an insect, as I suspect, or is it a what? I don't know.

Please, let wise people out there help me, because these conspirators and their running dogs, these people who work in shadows, are, literally, destroying Africa. And if Africa is destroyed, other races of humankind will follow—one of them being the Black Americans in America. They won't survive the destruction of Africa.

What is the idea behind Africa's depopulation? I read a chilling book not so long ago, a book written about the "great" [The word should definitely be contained within quote marks, to depict the actual, opposite meaning of "respect" for this very prolific, now deceased member of a very major family among the so-called "elite" controllers. Credo knows very well that about which he speaks so humbly!] White man, Bertrand Russell. Russell stated that, one day, the Western nations would have to decimate Black people, using war, famine, and disease. And this has happened.

I say, please, you Russell followers, please, you racists and Malthusians, you have done enough harm! Stop now! Stop!

In the name of our common humanity, and in the name of the Intelligence that obviously exists behind the Cosmos, the Intelligence which human beings call by the cheap name, God, please stop now! Stop, please! Stop!

Thank you very much, sir.

Editor's note: While the following News Release from Dr. Len Horowitz's office could have been placed in our News Desk, its "coincidental" timeliness to the above topic argues strongly for placement here, to help underscore the accuracy and seriousness of the humble plea you just read above. Longtime readers of The SPECTRUM are well aware of Dr. Len Horowitz's ongoing, thorough crusade of exposing the layers upon layers of official lies—and digging out sometimes astonishing documentation telling The Truth—about how AIDS came to be.

Apparently enough ones in the scientific and medical communities have a guilty conscience about all the suppressed truthful information concerning AIDS that there is being made the allowance, in a credible scientific journal, for a larger broadcasting of Dr. Horowitz's research results. Maybe this kind of "conscience-cleansing action" will continue, and thereby help lend enormous support to Credo Mutwa's plea. The last thing the crooks in high places want is any kind of Light shining on and brightly exposing their diabolical shenanigans for world control that include massive depopulation schemes.

New Theory On AIDS Origin Explains Chimpanzee Connection

A new twist on the theory that vaccines may have triggered the AIDS pandemic is advanced in the May 2001 issue of the scientific journal of Medical Hypotheses by an independent investigator and author of a bestselling book on the subject, Dr. Leonard Horowitz. The report explains for the first time the link between the human AIDS virus, HIV, and the chimpanzee immunodeficiency virus.

Scientists who previously advanced the possibility that polio vaccines may have contributed to the initial African outbreak must take heed. This new theory proposes that HIV/AIDS was triggered by Hepatitis-B (HB) vaccines, partly developed in chimpanzees, given to gay men in New York City, and Blacks in central Africa during the mid-1970s, among persons who received suspected polio vaccines a decade earlier.

Dr. Horowitz, who holds a post-doctoral degree in public health from Harvard, presented his preliminary findings at the XI International Conference on AIDS in Vancouver in 1996. Last November, his controversial thesis attracted a standing-room-only audience in Boston at the annual American Public Health Association conference. The subject of a forthcoming BBC documentary, his publication in Medical Hypotheses underlies widespread suspicions, especially among minority populations, that HIV/AIDS was vaccine induced.

Based on a three-year study of the pandemic's origin, Dr. Horowitz determined that risky pilot HB vaccine trials involved growing Hepatitis viruses in chimpanzees commonly known to be contaminated with retroviruses related to HIV. These findings scientifically explain for the first time how the chimpanzee AIDS virus (SIVcpz), closely related to HIV's gene sequence, suddenly jumped species to humans simultaneously on two far removed continents.

Four lots of HB vaccine containing 200,000 human doses, believed to be contaminated with gene sequences common to HIV/SIVcpz, were prepared by passing live HB viruses, grown in chimpanzees, to polio vaccine recipients previously exposed to monkey cancer viruses already suspected of playing a role in initiating AIDS.

The final preparations were injected into gay men in New York City, and Blacks in central Africa between 1974 and 1975. According to several investigators, this may best explain how and why there was a sudden simultaneous outbreak of at least four major HIV strains, on two far-removed continents, in two demographically distinct populations, in the late 1970s, corresponding to the only complete virus discoveries.

These disclosures come at a time of heightened concern regarding the risks posed by HIV/AIDS to minority groups and U.S. national security. In recent months, the leader of the African National Congress, South African President Thabo Mbeki, and Kenya's Minister of State, Major Madoka, reported to the press that AIDS "did not originate in Africa".

"HIV certainly has links to sub-human African primates," Dr. Horowitz explained. "What was done to these monkeys and chimpanzees during viral vaccine experiments should come under closer scientific scrutiny." The doctor's documentation strongly supports the iatrogenic theory of AIDS versus the commonly accepted belief that the virus evolved naturally.

Dr. Horowitz's full thesis, published in Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola—Nature, Accident, Or Intentional? gained him the 1999 "Author of the Year Award" from the World Natural Health Organization. His work has gained increasing respect from members in Congress and the medical scientific communities, some of whom are calling for a re-evaluation of AIDS's origin with respect to vaccines.

NOTE TO JOURNALISTS: For an interview with Dr. Horowitz, or for review copies of his publications mentioned above, please call Elaine Zacky at either: 208-265-2575 or 1-888-508-4787. Dr. Horowitz's publication in Medical Hypotheses is confirmed for the May 2001 issue (volume 56, issue 5, pp. 677-686), and will be available at the end of April.

This is the first in-depth exploration into the origins of HIV and Ebola. Claims that these "emerging viruses" naturally evolved and then jumped species from ape to man seem grossly unfounded in light of the compelling evidence assembled in this extraordinary text. Alternatively, the possibility that these bizarre germs were laboratory creations, accidentally or intentionally transmitted via tainted hepatitis and smallpox vaccines in the U.S. and Africa—as numerous authorities have alleged—is investigated herein. This book reviews the numerous viral vaccine studies conducted simultaneously in New York City and Central West Africa by a narrow network of virologists working for major military-medical contractors under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and the World Health Organization (WHO). Included is Dr. Robert Gallo, the notorious discoverer of the AIDS virus. The text presents bizarre and horrifying facts about the biological weapons race of the 1960s and early 1970s when these researchers developed countless immune-system-ravaging viruses, and experimented with an assortment of antidote vaccines allegedly for "defense" and cancer prevention.

California Power Crisis Update

The Extortion Of California: The Wrath Of Bush And The Texas Power Cabal

Editor's note: As all of you are well aware, California's so-called electrical power "crisis" is far from being resolved and may well start to affect the rest of the North American power grid as air conditioning revs up for the summer.

Our February 2001 front-page feature on this matter illuminated an array of crooks on both sides of the equation (politics and business) in their "squeeze play" on the mostly confused and unsuspecting (but rapidly getting angry) public. We then presented a most revealing and validating update last month that illustrated how an old money-making formula exercised through Three Mile Island was still working quite well when implemented in present California.

But even if you're not a particularly suspicious type of person, prone to generating conspiracy theories, you probably sense that there are still more parts to this "crisis" puzzle that haven't yet been illuminated. One of them concerns Big Oil and its relentless push for expansion, despite significant (and frequently protested) negative effects on our planetary environment. There's nothing quite like a well-timed "crisis" hurting many people—just as Big Oil has ascended to the throne of the United States—to coerce a change in people's attitudes that tends to clear away any such inconvenient "green" roadblocks to the diabolical corporate agenda.

The following provocative information by investigative journalist Larry Chin (http://www.onlinejournal.com/Special_Reports/Chin021101/chin021101.html) found us by way of Jeff Rense's lively <http://rense.com> Internet website. What is outlayed here deserves very serious consideration as to how it may fit into the equation of the Larger Picture. And as you read along, Larry's narrative style may remind regular SPECTRUM readers of another great character who tells it like he sees it—the delightfully irreverent Sherman Skolnick.

As always, when you follow the money trail a very different picture of reality emerges from the one the media promotes. In this case, substitute "electric current" for money and trace a California crippled in a web of deceit.

2/11/01 LARRY CHIN

California teeters on the brink of darkness. The state is threatened with daily power blackouts. Natural gas may be cut off in the coming weeks. With a predicted hot and dry summer approaching, state politicians are scrambling for eleventh-hour remedies.

George W. Bush, Dick Cheney, and the consortium of Texas power companies could not be more pleased.

The state that overwhelmingly rejected Bush and the Republicans at the polls is being brought to its knees. The Democrats of California—which include many of Bush's staunchest foes—are being embarrassed and politically damaged.

As Governor Gray Davis struggles with bailout plans, Bush's Texas power supplier friends and campaign contributors, led by Kenneth Lay of Enron Corporation, are raking in billions of dollars by selling power at inflated prices into the sputtering California power system.

Enron reported a record fourth-quarter profit. Now, California has become its own power buyer (and is in the process of signing long-term contracts locking in power prices at historic highs) and "fast tracking" new power plant construction. Texas suppliers will make billions more in the years ahead.

Extorting California is even more fun than Florida election fraud. And considerably more profitable.

Bush's Partners In Crime: Follow The Money

Enron, TXU, Dynergy, AES, Reliant, and other oil-soaked Bush corporate surrogates are holding a gun to the head of California, whose economic and political future are at stake. Governor Davis has branded the Texas power players as "pirates and plunderers". He was being kind.

Two of the big Texas energy operatives, Enron's Kenneth Lay, and TXU's Earl Nye, have served on the energy team of Bush's transitional administration and were major campaign contributors. Enron contributed over $555,000—the most of any Bush corporate donor.

Lay, a former Pentagon operative, is a longtime friend to the Bush crime family. Enron, which has done business throughout the developing world with CIA assistance, was involved with the George H. W. Bush administration in a number of questionable Middle East business deals after the Gulf War. Lay employed two of former president George H. W. Bush's closest friends and cabinet operatives, James Baker and Robert Mosbacher, to hustle contracts after they left office.

Lay's residence is a stone's throw from Bush Jr.'s Texas ranch. The two have shared many beers and Houston Astros games (at Enron Field). According to the Center for Responsive Politics, Lay and Enron president Jeffrey Skilling personally donated $100,000 to Bush. Lay personally lobbied other top Enron executives to give at least $1,000 to Bush. The Bush campaign borrowed Enron's corporate jets eight times in 2000.

W's cozy business alliance with Lay and the Texas energy cabal is not news. While governor, Bush pushed aggressively and successfully for relaxation of environmental and consumer protection regulations. This in turn allowed the companies to post record profits, while polluting the skies and water of Texas.

Lay was rumored to be Bush's first choice to be energy secretary, prior to the appointment of Spencer Abraham. Many believe Lay serves in this capacity today, from behind the scenes. Although Lay has denied a quid pro quo relationship with the new administration, his denials are as believable as Jeb Bush's recusal during the Florida vote "recount".

When you are a friend of the Bush family, you are a friend for life.

Call It What It Is: War

The Bushes are old hands when it comes to staging, waging, and benefiting from war.

War is force designed to compel an adversary to submit to one's will. In wars of attrition, isolation (political, geographic, and economic) and the choking off of supplies (including electricity, light, gas, and heat) are standard techniques designed to inflict maximum suffering. Over an extended period, frustrated populaces (be they Iraqi, Nicaraguan, or Californian) are softened to the point that they will accept whatever ends the torture.

With California, Bush/Cheney pursue a number of "divide and smash" end games. They are attacking on three fronts:

1. Open doors to power companies to pillage California itself. By selling the severity of the crisis, and the myths of the benefits of deregulation and the free market, Bush and the Texans seek to rip apart environmental laws, and open up markets.

2. Use corporate media to promote, exploit, and exaggerate the “power crisis” to justify other parts of the Bush corporate/right wing agendas—including drilling in Alaska (“it will help relieve California’s supply problem”) and even the tax cut plan (“a tax cut will help pay higher energy bills”).

3. Inflict maximum political damage to Democrats and other opposition, and fuel outrage among voters.

Build Power Plants Now!

In one of his first and most telling comments about the state’s power problem, Bush said: “California must be aggressive about increasing the supply of power. We (Americans) cannot conserve our way to independence.”

This statement encapsulates Bush’s entire energy “policy”. Forget conservation, forget alternative energy, and just let The Boys plunder for profit.

Bush and the power companies are pushing the idea that California’s increased energy demand (fueled by the high-tech economy) has led to a shortage. But, according to Public Citizen, the “skyrocketing demand” is a sham. After analyzing hourly load data compiled by the California Independent System Operator (CAISO), Public Citizen has concluded that power demand in California during the past six months has actually been lower than during the same period in 1999.

The Bush junta is misrepresenting the facts, allowing the power companies to gouge consumers, and speed the reopening of old power plants and the construction of new plants by suspending environmental standards. They also seek to block the ability of communities to oppose new plants. In other words, bring a little Texas to California.

The supply side of the argument is also questionable. The problem has never been the supply of power, only the price state utilities can or cannot pay for the power coming from Texas. There is an additional suspicious element. According to Public Citizen: “Plants servicing the state with 11,000 megawatts of capacity have been taken out of service for a variety of reasons—most undisclosed.”

Bush finds it “interesting” that the harshest critics of a “balanced” environmental policy are “having rolling blackouts in their state”. By balanced, he means more accommodating to polluters. (Ominously, the phrase “balanced approach” has been used repeatedly and robotically by incoming environmental plunderer, Gale Norton, who is on record for supporting more drilling across the U.S.)

The “build more power plants” mantra is working. Threatened with blackouts (and increasing public frustration) the governor, the state legislature, and local officials are fast-tracking power plant repair and new construction—including plants previously rejected for environmental problems.

Deregulation: Fatten Corporate Wallets, Screw Consumers

When first approached by Gray Davis for help, Bush “bluntly rejected” price caps and other short-term measures. “I’m against price controls” he told the Associated Press. Bush has robotically echoed the business strategy statements of Lay and the other Texas power wholesalers and natural gas pipeline bandits. “California got itself into this mess. It’s their law that didn’t allow forward contracting of gas (and) forced wholesalers to purchase at the spot market” Bush muttered. “That’s fine as long as the price of gas is dropping. The failure of (the) energy policy has made the price of gas go up.”

In other words, if prices go up, California’s consumers should pay up and shut up.

Pushing For a Drilling Frenzy. Everywhere.

By raising fears of a power supply problem in California, they make drilling within California and off the California coast more acceptable. A moratorium that limits drilling off the California coast is due to expire this year. The timing of the crisis is no coincidence.

Bush is also using California as an excuse to sell the idea of drilling in the Alaska Wildlife Refuge and other pristine lands.

Selling The Tax Cut

Brazenly, Bush is trying to sell California on the benefits of his inherently foolish (and economically crippling) tax cut. In recent days, articles have abounded regarding how the tax cut would particularly help “high wage” Californians.

Casually Bush has bragged: “Lower taxes will help offset the higher energy bills for Californians.” As if energy prices should be high to begin with. As if higher energy prices in the future are a given. As if a tax cut that takes place over a ten-year period can provide one bit of immediate “energy bill-paying relief”.

Smash The Democrats

The political roots of the California “crisis” are Byzantine and tangled. The history of California power stretches back nearly 100 years. The cast of villains is dizzying, including the operators of the corrupt and monopolistic state utilities (Pacific Gas & Electric Company and Southern California Edison), and the corrupt state and local politicians of both parties that have colluded with the utilities for generations.

What is undisputed fact is that California’s flawed deregulation plan was conceived and spearheaded by former governor Pete Wilson—a Republican—in 1996. Yet today, the state’s current Democratic leaders at every level are taking 100 percent of the political blame.

Bush and Cheney have taken every opportunity to fan public outrage. They have not lifted a finger to help (except for their middle finger). What better way to cripple any Democrat up for election or re-election in 2002 and 2004?

For instance, Gray Davis, a darling of the Democratic National Committee with future presidential aspirations, has suffered irreparable damage. And what better way to distract and neuter the likes of Barbara Boxer and Dianne Feinstein and Maxine Waters than a rigged California disaster (at a time when Republicans are trying to ram through a number of extreme policies)?

If public frustration in California ratchets up, it will not be long before a “throw them all out” mentality kicks in—opening up an opportunity for the Republicans to finally seize a Democratic and progressive stronghold.

Tyranny With A Smirk

California’s “crisis” is providing an alarming showcase of what nightmares occur when corporations and corrupt politicians have the absolute power to play games with basic necessities. It is a spectacular example of Bush tyranny. An illegitimately installed and ruthless president is exploiting the miseries of common citizens to benefit wealthy corporations run by cronies and fellow political operatives.

Going forward, there is no end to the convenient uses that a battered and helpless California offers Bush and the Texans. As the administration postures for new military forays in the Gulf, pumping up the threats posed by Saddam Hussein and Middle East terrorists, it is certain that the administration will point to the California “supply problem” as a national problem that could justify military action. Lay and Enron have been aggressive in pushing for deregulation in other states, using California as an example of how “partial” deregulation (price controls) should be avoided.

Upon discovering a CIA/corporate conspiracy in the 1970s film Three Days Of The Condor, Robert Redford’s character whispers in shock and disgust: “Oil. This whole damned thing is about oil.”

Yes, the whole damned thing is indeed about oil. And electricity. And money. And it’s no movie. △

Skolnick's Scoop On Some REAL News

Editor's note: As usual, what Sherman Skolnick has to offer about some of the major items in our current news is "slightly" different from what you are being brainwashed to believe through the carefully controlled print and broadcast media outlets. While he and his respected sources provide a wealth of insights into the shenanigans going on in the world of money right now, probably his comments about China and the REAL hostage-release deal deserve a particularly careful read. (And then look at Al Martin's discussion of the "technology transfer" dance with China elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM for further corrections to the blarney blathered by the conventional news media.)

Who are the media spin-doctors kidding? Most of American manufacturing has been quietly shipped off to China over the past decade. That puts the trump cards all in China's hands. China could grind the United States to a halt simply by confiscating and nationalizing those extensive manufacturing operations. Then what do you think would happen to the already-in-cardiac-arrest stock markets? These days it's hard to tell that a war is even in progress—much less who is actually winning!

Greenspan Hoodwinks Stock
And Commodity Markets
(4/6/01)

Federal Reserve Commissar Alan Greenspan and his newsfaker wife are reportedly busy deceiving the stock and commodity suckers. Acting together with the Chief of the New York District Federal Reserve Bank, Greenspan is manipulating the markets at a time of suspected meltdown.

To fool those who fancy up their position by calling themselves "investors", the Fed boss has been spending billions and billions of dollars from the PRIVATE central bank masquerading as a "U.S. government" entity.

And how are markets massaged? One way is to support, temporarily, the Dow Jones 30 Industrials, a psychological barometer often with little meaning except to know-nothings unaware of the tremendous leveraging of the Dow figures.

Acting like a Soviet-style dictator, Greenspan is referred to by savvy folks as REDSPAN. If the 30 Industrials really go down hard, to some that would be a sign of collapsing financials. So, Redspan not only doctors up the 30 Industrials in that index, but has extended his hocus-pocus to NASDAQ which, since April 2000, has been the killing ground for the fantasies of would-be get-rich-quick types.

One major stock that, for a while, declined has been General Electric. NBC Network is owned by G.E., and Redspan's spouse, Andrea Mitchell, has been an NBC Network correspondent. Do we understand that "Mrs. Redspan" knows more about the rotten schemes of her husband and his conspiratorial bank gang than mere "pillow talk"? Some NBC honchos have been speculating, unlawfully and unfairly, using insider data reportedly made available to them through Andrea Mitchell.

Not just NBC types, but other Network and White House correspondents have for years been spending part of their time on the phone to their stock and/or commodity brokers, some in Chicago, Frankfurt, Singapore, Geneva, and elsewhere. The exchange regulators are willfully blind to these crimes committed by top-level news whores, men and women both.

Of course, poorly informed sorts have entirely too much confidence in the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC). Both of the supposed regulatory agencies are highly politicized and corrupt, afraid to dare finger network bigshots. (The SEC Enforcement Division boss in Chicago, in the past when I visited him, was so afraid of talking to me, he would leave his office and talk to me only in the hallway. I considered him a master crook after seeing how he dealt with my complaints about matters like herein. He dared let slip once that he traveled around on the private airplane of a key figure in Bank of Credit and Commerce International, BCCI. The SEC honcho saw nothing wrong with socializing with a bigtime bank and espionage criminal.)

During the Clinton Administration, the White House, with the apparent connivance of White House Senior Advisor and reputed "bagman", Rahm Emanuel, sought to blackmail White House and Network correspondents, to persuade the press pundits to steer clear of Clinton's treason, aiding the Red Chinese with U.S. industrial, financial, and MILITARY secrets.

Packages, with no return address shown, were received by various loudmouths. The apparently authentic records in the packages tended to show reportedly that news big-dealers and their relatives got rich with insider stock and commodity market details. The records included the federal tax returns of network correspondents and their relatives, together with reports and little-known court records of nasty divorces, child custody battles, and related dirt such as psychiatrists' reports on treatments of network biggies. Included were lists of married correspondents and their mistresses and gigolos. (Rev. Jesse Jackson's wife, apparently to blackmail reporters, likewise reportedly keeps track of such mistresses and gigolos.)

After all, White House correspondents were quite aware that Clinton, as President, used to meet from time to time with Wang Jun, head of the Red Chinese Secret Police. Supposed "independent" counsel Kenneth W. Starr was perceived by naive folks as running after Bill and Hillary Clinton. Not so, other than much less important matters, such as the sex goings on of Monica Lewinsky.

Starr spent the bulk of his time in PRIVATE law practice. His PRIVATE law client was Wang Jun. Further, Starr reportedly was the UNREGISTERED foreign lobbyist for the Red Chinese government. The Clinton Justice Department could have nailed and jailed Starr any time they wanted to. Starr's conflicts of interest and brazen criminality were not that secret, certainly not to knowledgeable sorts.

Starr benefitted the espionage agencies, for whom he acted as their "stooge", by covering up the murder of Clinton White House Deputy Counsel Vincent W. Foster, Jr., an espionage operative, before his short White House service, with the super-secret National Security Agency (NSA). (For related details, visit our website story "Greenspan Aids And Bribes Bush" Part 4.)

And why did Commissar and gulag boss Redspan use as his surrogate the Chief of the New York District Federal Reserve Bank? For one thing, that District Bank and the U.S. Treasury, Sub-Treasury Division in New York City, have stored, many floors below ground level, the huge horde of gold bullion belonging to foreign countries at whose orders the gold is shifted from one gold cage to another.

It may come as a shock to some, but the U.S. has very little so-called "U.S. Government" gold bullion in Fort Knox. A brave, outspoken journalist, Tom Valentine, in the 1970s exposed as a fraud that there was world-trade-quality gold at Fort Knox. All they have left are poor-quality, orangish-looking, melted-down coin metal from the seizure in 1934 of gold coins from America's common people. (The American aristocracy, warned in advance, shipped THEIR gold out of the U.S.)

The U.S. governmentt gold is gone. Why? Because it was shipped, under the supervision of a plyable U.S. general, to the private central octopus called the Bank of England, in 1968, to stem a run on that bank which had somehow lost all their own gold.)

What are some of the situations covered up by Commissar Redspan with his slim-jim wife, a fast-running news bandit?

(1) The Federal Reserve, without actual lawful authority to do so, has been reportedly seizing the below-ground depository of PRIVATE gold housed in the sub-basements of the First National Bank of Chicago, traditionally one of the Rockefeller banks. (To confuse people, now is called Bank One.)

Some who owned such private gold are wondering where they can go to complain about it reportedly not being there anymore in the sub-basements, which have a separate method of quietly trucking it out. Where did the gold go?

Japan and Saudi have a semi-secret arrangement with the U.S. Treasury and Federal Reserve in that THEIR purchases of U.S. Treasury securities are backed by gold on demand. This provision, of course, is not available to ordinary Americans who purchase U.S. Treasury Bills, Notes, and Bonds.

Bigshot currency speculators have led attacks on certain foreign currencies to try to force such weak-willed nations to disgorge their gold hordes in support of their paper money. This done, at a time when Redspan, the Rockefellers, and what we call the BUNK OF ENGLAND, have been violating price-fixing criminal statutes by artificially forcing down the price of gold to below the cost of production of the world's most efficient mines.

(2) Bank One has reportedly been involved in using their facilities to manipulate the gold markets and that of foreign currencies and soybeans, among other reasons, to aid the Red Chinese who have obtained an armlock on the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. This domination of the markets has been done reportedly with the connivance of Rahm Emanuel who, after leaving the Clinton White House, became a managing director of Wasserstein Perella & Co., which reportedly specializes in laundering the illicit proceeds of the Red China dope and gun smuggling trade, and the buying and selling of clandestine nuclear weapons and their detonators. (Visit our website series on the Red Chinese Secret Police IN THE UNITED STATES, including about the Rockefeller Hospitals and their buying and selling of human body parts harvested from Red Chinese dissidents condemned to death, as the human organs are needed in Chicago by wealthy sick people.)

Bank One, and their predecessor First

National Bank of Chicago, Rockefeller institutions, have been reportedly implicated as well in using their records and facilities to enable certain corrupt commodity and currency swindlers to ply their trade. The authorities, while knowing about the banks and their apparent doctoring of records, have taken no action as would seem to be warranted. The Rockefeller bank in Chicago, First National Bank of Chicago, as we have previously stated, loaned billions of dollars to the Red Chinese on the promise of repayment in gold. Instead of gold, the Chinese were allowed to flood the U.S. with high purity dope, called "China White" from Southwest China, using suburban airports ringing Chicago as the intake point.

Cynics call the Rockefeller Bank in Chicago "Bank Zero".

(3) Redspan has been using large sums from the Fed to try to doctor the markets to—temporarily only—fool know-nothings not to retrieve their funds from the thousands and thousands of Mutual Funds that have sprung up like so many locusts devouring the money of the common people of America.

Formerly called, in the 1920s and 1930s, "Investment Trusts", such pools of funds went to hell quicker than the stock market in the 1930s. Why? Because like the latterday money dumps, called Mutual Funds since after World War II, Investment Trusts had a provision whereby they became frozen if there were too many redemptions. How many of those "investing" in Mutual Funds read the prospectus where the freeze-up provisions are mentioned? At least with direct stock purchases you supposedly can sell it anytime. Not so with Mutual Funds, like their earlier relative, Investment Trusts. Read about Investment Trusts, following the 1929 debacle, in The Great Crash Of 1929 by Kenneth Galbraith.

(4) To divert attention from the growing number of apparent looming bankruptcies, Redspan has been temporarily pumping up the markets. Among those believed to be bankrupt, or about to file for bankruptcy, is Lucent Technologies, Inc., a spin-off former unit of AT&T. A top financial record official of Lucent has reportedly disappeared and may have been murdered, amidst unconfirmed reports that billions of dollars have disappeared, if not actually having been embezzled. And that Lucent reportedly has cooked books, not accurately showing their true condition.

Another sizeable firm, Amazon.com, according to some financial records experts, is actually bankrupt but is being presented by the Rockefeller banks as alive, when Amazon is actually dead. Smiling idiot wiseguy, Jeffrey Bezos, a publicity hypester and pretended buffoon con-man, is accused by some of reportedly covering up, through falsified records, the massive siphoning off of Amazon's funds with the reputed connivance of the Rockefeller banks. If you checked over the years with auditors and accountants, you would find that several major firms have quietly had to pay out huge damages when sued or confronted for having whitewashed frauds of various firms.

An open secret among the glib pundits of the oil-soaked monopoly press, is that Redspan's bedmate, Andrea Mitchell, is the one who conveys the marching orders, like a Moscow witch, to the pressfakers, what they can say or not say about money, banks, and financial matters. Others darkly refer to her as Madame Redspan, or Field Marshall Mitchell, riding on the General Electric horse, cracking the censorship whip on the news outlets of the venal and corrupt Establishment Press.

Red Chinese Get Big Bucks In Secret Hostage Deals (4/11/01)

The Red Chinese are to get massive funds and terms in the secret deals brokered by Federal Reserve Commissar Alan Greenspan. The agreements, European intelligence sources contend, would never, if soon fully revealed, get the approval of top honchos of both political parties in the U.S. Congress.

The protocols, forms of clandestine U.S. treaties, are highly favorable to mainland China and extremely adverse to the American White House occupied by what European and non-European sources affirm is a highly tainted and conflict-of-interest presidency. The secret deals, ending the ordeal of China holding 24 U.S. spy-plane airpeople hostages on an island offshore the China mainland, were hammered out with the help, among others of the following, many of whom have large business interests in Red China:

(1) The deals were orchestrated (maybe the "accident" also "created"?) by George Herbert Walker Bush, in supervising his son, George W. Bush.

The Elder Bush has a long history in strange events. With the American CIA since at least 1959, he was part of the cover up of the plot to assassinate President John F. Kennedy in 1963, as implicit in an FBI document that has surfaced.

In 1976, for less than a year, he was Director of Central Intelligence, heading up the American spy community. In the late 1970s, before the U.S. began official diplomatic relations with Red China, the Elder Bush was U.S. envoy to Beijing, traveling and living, not with his wife, but with his mistress.

The Elder Bush's brother, uncle of George W., Prescott Bush, Jr., has been a behind-the-scenes expert as a reputed money laundry expert, aiding criminally-inclined members of the Red Chinese Military and the Te-Wu, the Red Chinese Secret Police, in penetrating foreign currency and commodity markets, such as on the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. (Visit our website stories about the Red Chinese Secret Police operating on U.S. soil, arranging, for example, the shipments of human body parts harvested from Chinese dissidents condemned to death, as the body organs are ordered by the Rockefeller hospitals at the University of Chicago, major center of transplants.)

In October 1980, the Elder Bush, briefly visiting a Paris suburb, arranged a treasonous deal to supply weapons to Iran via Israel. In exchange, Iran agreed to keep holding 52 U.S. hostages to aid the Reagan/Bush ticket to win the 1980 Presidential election by showing Jimmy Carter, running for re-election, as a wimp not able to get the hostages released. The affair was called "The October Surprise". The hostages were released just at the moment in January 1981 when Reagan/Bush were successfully inaugurated, as President and Vice President.

(2) Another participant of the U.S.-China hostage pacts has been U.S. Secretary of State General Colin Powell, along with his sidekick, Richard Armitage, Deputy Secretary of State. The foreign press, unlike the captive U.S. mass media, have not hesitated in the past to point out that a Burmese General, in an apparently authentic videoed interview, contended from first-hand knowledge that three top-level Americans have been his worldwide dope trafficking partners in shipments from the "Golden Triangle" area of Southeast Asia, including Southwest China. In fact, they built him a highway through the jungle to facilitate the shipments, he asserts. Identified by this Asian dope kingpin as his long-time business partners reportedly have been George Herbert Walker Bush, General Colin Powell (who during the Viet Nam War covered up the Mai Li mass civilian murder incident), and Powell's ever-present crony Richard Armitage.

(3) Reportedly aiding in the hostage deals translations and terms has been the younger Bush administration's secretary of labor Elaine L. Chao, wife of Senator Mitch McConnell (R-KY) a husband and wife team that reportedly fronts for the Beijing government in Washington. Chao has numerous business links with the Red Chinese Secret Police.

For example, she has held a seat on the board of Protective Life Corp., which owns 50 percent of CRC Protective Life Insurance, as shown on Senate financial-disclosure documents. (Lippo Group, tied to Bill and Hillary Clinton as well as George W. Bush, owned First National Bank of Mena, Arkansas, arranging to launder hundreds of millions of dollars, proceeds of the American CIA dope shipments through the nearby airport at Mena.) The other half of the Hong Kong-located unit is owned by Lippo jointly with China Resources Holdings Co., a unit of the Red Chinese Secret Police and China's Military.

Elaine L. Chao's father, born in China, James S. C. Chao, is closely tied in business to the top officials of the Beijing government and owns a shipping company with business with the Beijing government.

Long part of highly secretive dirty deals has been the New York District Federal Reserve Bank, long tied to Maurice Greenberg, chairman of American International Group, Inc. AIG purchased 5 percent of Lippo Life and 70 percent of one of its units, Asuransi Jiwa Lippo Utama, paying upwards of $200 million. With gross sales of $40 billion, AIG was one of the first foreign firms permitted to sell insurance in Red China. Chao's husband, the U.S. Senator, has long received campaign pay-offs from Greenberg's firm.

European and American intelligence sources assert that Elaine L. Chao's reputed links to the Red Chinese Secret Police, together with that of her husband, the U.S. Senator, could easily fill a good-sized book or magazine article. Despite her connections, she has strangely been given, as a Bush cabinet member, access and clearance to top national security secrets of the FBI counter-intelligence division, the American CIA, and highly sensitive classified records relating to U.S. and foreign trade.

(4) Participating reportedly, if not actually fully facilitating the hostage deals, has been former Clinton White House senior advisor, Rahm Emanuel. After leaving the White House, Rahm became a managing director of Wasserstein Perella & Co., supposed "investment bankers", who reportedly specialize in secret Asian asset swaps, barter deals, and laundering funds of the Red Chinese Secret Police disguised as foreign currency and soybeans deals on the Chicago markets.

He has reportedly been quite involved in joint enterprises with Israel, where he is a dual citizen, jointly with the Red Chinese, in enterprises reportedly including nuclear bomb detonators. Rahm Emanuel has been the reputed Deputy Chief for North America of Israel intelligence, the Mossad. His deals, some contend, if fully publicly revealed, would anger some American Jews, particularly those who are not part of the aristocracy, as well as more common people in Israel.

European and non-European intelligence officials who penetrated the secret hostage release arrangements conveyed the specifics of the U.S.-Sino so-called "peace" covenant to certain outspoken, more independent-minded free-lance journalists and investigators. This was done to assure that some of the onerous terms somehow, somewhere, come to public attention without being screened by the monopoly press. Some of the specifics:

• For use by the Beijing government, the Federal Reserve agreed to transfer to a neutral designated country, as a neutral depository or escrow agent, $40 billion in U.S. credits, assets, gold bullion, and currencies, both U.S. and foreign. Title of this is to be conveyed to mainland China sovereignty upon the safe release of the U.S. hostages.

To facilitate this, certain foreign currencies have been artificially supported by the Federal Reserve at the same time, jointly with the Bank of England, Goldman Sachs & Co. (which moved to London to get away from U.S. jurisdiction), J.P. Morgan & Co., Bank One, with the aid of Wasserstein Perella & Co., and others, forcing down the price of gold below the cost of production of the world's most efficient mines.

• In the agreements between Red China and the U.S., the American CIA, by the Director of Central Intelligence, as head of the intelligence community, and as a signatory, certifies that the American mass media outlets will be ordered, or upon failure of such orders, technically and through satellites obstructed, from such major U.S. news outlets circulating or distributing, or causing or participating in the same, the details of the U.S.-Sino deals to gain release of the hostages. Guarantors of this, along with the American CIA and the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI), are signatories binding the National Security Agency (NSA), in charge of signal intelligence, and the National Reconnaissance Office (NRO), in charge of satellites, including those relied upon by the major media outlets.

(In federal documents long-since released but little mentioned, a similar deal for mass media censorship, in 1964, was agreed to by the Associated Press and United Press International, guaranteeing for an indefinite period of time that the wire services will carry no adverse criticism of the then-issued Warren Commission Report proclaiming that there was no conspiracy in the murder of President John F. Kennedy, and the deed was done by a lone assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.)

• A top official of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), as a signatory and guarantor binding as well on successors in office, assures that that Agency will use their best efforts and most merited personnel to prevent any publicity in the mass media news outlets, of any problems to be publicly discussed as to "China White", the high-purity dope from Southwest China funneling into the U.S. principally through Chicago, and the monetary proceeds of which are to be credited to pay back the loans from First National Bank of Chicago now called Bank One. That this embargo on data and press releases and public statements is to continue at least until one year after the expected Red China hosting of the International Olympics. The DEA official agrees that his agency will restrict their public comments on dope traffic interdictions to Mexico, Colombia, Nigeria, and related locations and not mention Southwest China or the term "China White". A top official of FBI counter-intelligence division, in supervision of overseas offices, likewise is a guarantor and signatory to these embargo provisions.

As part of these restrictions on public statements, press statements, and press releases, the DEA and FBI signatories and guarantors agree not to use the term, in any of its forms, of Te-Wu, Red Chinese Secret Police, or any words relating to or meaning the same. The signatories and guarantors, upon the agreement with the Chinese signatories, confirm that the purported activities of the Red Chinese Secret Police, by any term referring to them, and their acts and doings while within U.S. sovereignty, since 1956 or before, were at all times “peaceable, law-abiding, and that no criminal or other offenses were committed within U.S. sovereignty” and that all statements to the contrary are known to the DEA and its predecessors, as well as the FBI, “to be false and not supported by fact”.

(This declaration is in direct opposition to the numerous reports from an elite unit of retired intelligence operatives who documented the murder and mayhem, on U.S. soil, by the Red Chinese Secret Police, since at least 1956. Visit our website series.)

- As a signatory to the hostage agreements, the North American Chief of British Counter-Intelligence, with offices in Chicago, agrees to invoke the United Kingdom’s Official Secrets Act, to restrain and punish any British news outlets, including those with U.S. offices as well, from distributing and circulating the withheld details of the hostage pacts. For that purpose, the MI-6 chieftain agrees to recommend the seizure in the United Kingdom, and wherever else there is British sovereignty, of media machinery, facilities, transmitters, trucks, portable audio and video equipment, and other media items, from any British major media violating the terms. And further, agrees to recommend the prosecution and jailing of British mass media personnel violating the Official Secrets Act by circulating or causing to be circulated and distributed the withheld details of the hostage covenants and terms.

While releasing the specifics of the foregoing to certain independent-minded journalists and investigators, the European and non-European intelligence operatives who penetrated the U.S.-Sino concordat assert they are holding back still other details of the hostage release financial and other agreements, so as to, on a time-sensitive basis, safeguard some of their units still compiling inside data.

The principal financial terms of the hostage release are not to be publicized for at least until after Red China successfully arranges hosting the International Olympics. Top officials of the sports superfest participated in the hostage dealings, in a restricted portion only, of the bargaining negotiations, according to European and non-European intelligence sources.

The penetration of the super-secret hostage settlements was aided by intelligence operatives with a background from France, Portugal, and Spain. The Portuguese operatives in particular had a score to settle with the dirty conniving in the deals by the Bush family to cover up their secret business partnerships with the Red Chinese.

As published in the foreign press, former high-level officials in Lisbon have accused

George Herbert Walker Bush of arranging the political assassination, by way of a sabotaged plane crash, of the former Finance Minister of Portugal, who had documents proving the Elder Bush used Portugal as a trans-shipment point for Bush’s treasonous arrangement with Iran in 1980, to give them weapons via Israel, in exchange for holding back the release of the 52 U.S. hostages in Teheran. In other words, documents that proved the Elder Bush committed treason, to offset an “October Surprise” by Jimmy Carter trying to get the hostages released in the month prior to the 1980 election, to help Carter’s re-election bid.

More coming. Stay tuned.

Panic Expected In The Gold Market? (4/19/01)

With good reason, some call it the killer yellow metal. And savvy sorts will not have to put their ear to the ground to detect what is about to happen. Like the first atomic bomb, gold can be the destroyer of worlds. And those who understand the history of currencies, understand that if gold goes up, paper money goes down. And hard.

The monopoly presslords, oil-soaked and chained to the banks and the banker-judges, as promoters of hot-air-backed paper money, are never in a position to tell us the truth about important events. They fudged on the way the common people of the United States were dragooned into being poison-gassed, shot to pieces, and dying in World War One, in Europe’s own bloody mess. The liars and whores of the press did not tell us what was involved in 1941 in advance, in the attack on Pearl Harbor. They issued fake stories to explain away orchestrated events and political assassinations of the 20th Century.

Federal Reserve Commissar Alan “Redspan” announces interest rate cuts and the Establishment liars/pundits proclaim it is to help the poor economy and to prevent a recession. Some understand, however, that jiggling with the interest rates may have a secret reason.

Notice a few historic events: In 1932, campaigning for President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt pretended to calm the waters by saying he would continue the gold standard. U.S. paper money at the time was exchangeable for gold. And ordinary workers were happy to be paid their wages in gold coins. In those years, the U.S. President was elected in November and inaugurated the following March. Before FDR was inaugurated, the ultra rich, with advance secret information, shipped THEIR gold by boat-load out of the U.S. To be sure Roosevelt follows orders, eventually to grab all the gold of the common American people, there was a high-level plot to either scare him or to assassinate him, and blame it on a “lone assassin”. A secondary target was Anton Cermak, then Mayor of Chicago, while Cermak was sitting near Roosevelt.

Cermak was in the then-illegal booze business in the Windy City, competing with both Al Capone and another competitor, in a three-way struggle. Using a “lone nut” as a patsy, Chicago-based gangster-snipers, working for the very wealthy, killed Cermak but intentionally (or otherwise) did not kill Roosevelt in February 1933.

(Note: In the 1970s, our bribery investigations resulted in Cermak’s son-in-law, Otto Kerner, Jr., a Chicago-based sitting federal appeals judge, former Illinois governor, being sent to federal prison. He was also a banker. It was the highest level federal judge sent to jail for bribery in the history of the U.S. Years later, other judges in that same court, as a reprisal, have barred me and a TV show associate of mine, Joseph Andreuccetti, from all the federal courts, in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana.)

In 1934, less than a year after being sworn in as President, Roosevelt ordered to be seized all the gold of ordinary Americans. The claim was that there was an “emergency”. If you did not turn in your gold, the U.S. Secret Service had orders to search you out, grab your gold, and maybe even arrange to arbitrarily jail you. That is what old-timers later related to their children and grandchildren.

From 1934 to 1975, under federal edict, it was unlawful for Americans to own gold. (Some dentists, however, under the pretext of needing gold for fillings in patients’ teeth, obtained licenses to get gold, some of which ended up in the “gold underground”. The Rockefeller family were, and have been, the biggest importers of gold into the U.S., through the jewelry trade, through Rhode Island.)

Closing down the gold window, Nixon, as President, set off a near panic in 1971 when he blocked foreigners from getting U.S. gold at the then low fixed rate of about $35 per ounce. About the time gold became legal again in 1975 for Americans, an outspoken leading gold bug was pushed out a window to his death, in Indianapolis, Indiana. (That was one way to stop comments about the Rockefellers and gold.)

Starting about the 1990s, to promote paper money, private central banks worldwide, and bullion banks like Goldman Sachs (who reportedly have fled U.S. jurisdiction to be in London), and British-royalty-linked J.P.Morgan, have been attacking the price of gold. Through all kinds of market and news media tricks, through forward sales, derivatives, and such, this anti-gold gang pushed down the price of gold until it was way below the cost of production of the most efficient mines in the world. High-cost gold producers in South Africa had to lay off thousands of their workers, including Blacks paid a somewhat better wage since apartheid was ended.

In the process, the anti-gold cabal have been short upwards of ten years average annual gold production. An emergency obviously could and would be created if there was a squeeze on the "gold shorts", such as the price-fixing criminals interwoven with the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve, both actually PRIVATE central banks masquerading as official government entities.

In market industry lingo, if those who borrowed someone else's gold and sold it, then had to make it good (called "covering their shorts" or short positions) by buying gold later at the then market higher price—well, a great crunch could be caused. And gold would skyrocket while paper money would be generally devalued and discredited. That is a nightmare created for the paper money gang. The so-called "U.S. Dollar", not government currency but private notes of the Federal Reserve, backed by nothing but hot air, would suddenly be exposed as simply a skilled magician's trick, money rabbits multiplied out of a banker's fractional reserve hat.

Some U.S. megabanks have reserves of less than three cents on the dollar. Such banks are actually insolvent. The Federal Reserve has been quietly propping up these banks with low-interest fake "loans" while allowing these banks to violate regulatory requirements, such as a minimum of three cents on the dollar. These banking cadavers are handled by the Fed morticians prettying-up the occupant of a financial casket.

"Washington: Acting in an EMERGENCY CONFERENCE CALL, the Federal Reserve moved today to bolster the flagging economy by cutting interest rates by half a point for the fourth time this year." — Chicago Tribune 4/18/2001 (Emphasis added)

The Tribune was one of the few newspapers to use the term "emergency conference call". But, of course, they did not tell us what the REAL emergency might be. Traditionally, the parent, Tribune Company, has been headed by the one who was also the chairman or vice chairman of the Federal Reserve District Bank in Chicago.

So, are we, as ordinary Americans, facing commotions as to gold, the real reason for rate cuts? To somehow support the huge gold loans by the short-selling anti-gold mafia?

The consequences of exposing this could have a profound influence on the future of the Federal Reserve and what I prefer to call the Bunk of England, both private, yes, conspiratorial, central banks.

The real owners of the Federal Reserve are NOT the member banks, as mentioned in Establishment business textbooks, but rather a group of shadowy mostly non-Americans, some of whom meet once a year in secret meetings to plan the destiny of ordinary people, that is, the meetings of the Bilderberg Group. They meet each year in a different country, once even on a mountaintop in Switzerland. Always, under heavy, military-style security, as if guarding kings and queens and media moguls who do attend. Whose vassals and subjects would just as soon chop off their heads or arrange a firing squad for them.

Some contend that the Federal Reserve, without lawful authority to do so, has arranged to seize the private depositories of gold. One place private gold has been stored has been in the several sub-basements of the Rockefeller-owned First National Bank of Chicago, to confuse matters now called Bank One. Reportedly some of the private gold has been seized from there without legal formality. Because of the circumstances, we call it Bank Zero. There address, naturally, should be shown as Ground Zero.

(Why do we know so much? Well, for more than 40 years I and my associates have intensely investigated and researched financial intermediaries. Throughout the history of the U.S., as is seldom ever mentioned, most of the key judges owned and operated banks jointly with their lawyer cronies. Sometimes even with known mafiosos. We call them banker-judges. Some of the crooked judges we have fingered, and who ended up in jail for bribery, were bankers. The banker-judges do NOT disqualify themselves when their financial interests come up in their court. Guess who wins in their crooked court?)

What all is involved?

- At least six major hedge funds who bet wrong in the derivatives hocus-pocus.

- Six major banks including, reportedly, Bank of America and their parent Bank America, together, owned jointly by the Rothschilds, the Jesuits, and added on in recent years, the Japanese mafia, the Yakuza. Bank America are big in foreign currency transactions. The Federal Reserve, together with the U.S. Treasury, do not have enough "life boats" to reportedly rescue a ship as large as Bank America and their unit Bank of America.

- Several major stock brokerages. Question: Does the federal insurance fund for brokers have enough assets to underwrite huge stock brokerages going under? Commodity brokers are big in foreign currency trading. If such a brokerage goes under, as some expect, is there an insurance fund covering THEM?

The artificially low price of gold was part of a series of schemes to try to rescue such large ships using tricks to support these sinking ships.

What does any rescue committee really need? Some two trillion dollars.

Do the Federal Reserve and the U.S. Treasury, without the massive inflationary printing of Federal Reserve hot-air paper money, have two trillion dollars ready for a rescue attempt? Oh yeah? Tell us where.

More details coming. So: Panic Expected In The Gold Market? Stay tuned.

The Biggest Secret by David Icke

The blockbuster of all blockbusters! With stunning information never before released on the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales.

David Icke's most powerful and explosive book to date includes the astonishing background to the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales. Every man, woman, and child on the planet is affected by the stunning information that Icke exposes. He reveals in documented detail how the same interconnecting bloodlines have controlled the planet for thousands of years. How they created all the major religions and suppressed the spiritual and esoteric knowledge that will set humanity free from its mental and emotional prisons. It includes a devastating exposé of the true origins of Christianity and the other major religions, and documents suppressed science, which explains why the world is facing a time of incredible change and transformation. The Biggest Secret also exposes the true and astonishing background to the British Royal Family and, through enormous research and unique contacts, Icke reveals how and why Diana, Princess of Wales, was murdered in Paris in 1997. This includes information from a close confidant of Diana for nine years, which has never before been made public.

The Biggest Secret is a unique book and is quite rightly dubbed "The book that will change the world". No one who reads it will ever be the same again.

How To Handle Psychic Attacks

5/4/01 HATONN

Good afternoon, my scribe. I am Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, Commander of this Earth Transition Project. I come in the Light of Creator Source—The One Light.

Be still. See and feel the Light radiating outward from deep within you, forming a brilliant spherical bubble that completely surrounds you. This is your Protection from outside, low-frequency influences, such as negative thought-forms, low-level astral entities, and such.

Many ones efforting to connect to the Higher Realms in this manner simply entertain anything and everything that comes their way. This can, and often does, lead to great confusion. You must learn to discipline self to ALWAYS remember to surround yourselves with Light, and thereby clear your space, if you wish to remain beyond the reach or the influence of mischievous entities or thought-forms.

We see a need for clarification for some. What are these negative thought-forms? These are the result of individuals focusing their individual thoughts in a deliberate and persistent manner so as to cause another harm, discomfort, confusion, and such. Often the result on an unprotected individual will be a string of “bad-luck” happenings or a restless night of poor sleep that keeps the individual in a weakened mental or emotional state.

This kind of phenomena is most often referred to as witchcraft, sorcery, spiritual warfare, and such. The phenomena is QUITE real and is simply a negative focus of inner, God-given, creative potential you all have as a part of your ability to co-create. Many ones use these same abilities in subtle ways to, for instance, attract a mate or money, or in numerous other ways to affect and influence others.

Some ones become quite vicious and relentless in their attacks, especially when they perceive that another has somehow caused them to be a victim. In more distorted cases, wherein an individual has become the “chronic victim” and goes from one “tragedy” to another in total “soap opera” fashion, there will ALWAYS be a dark non-physical entity overshadowing the individual. This sort of entity feeds on the low-frequency turbulence created around such individuals.

Often this sort of person will go to great lengths to manipulate others so as to convince them to “buy into” the illusion of “victimhood” and thus, through manipulation, get others to focus their thoughts in the same negative manner. This, in turn, creates an amplification of negative energy that begins to manifest in the physical.

A good example of this process would be “holy” crusades wherein so-called “spiritual leaders” perceive a threat to their political control over the masses, and thus create great exaggerations and distortions of facts in order to condemn, literally, anyone they so choose to condemn. These ones (and the dark non-physical entities working through them) feed off the fear and anxiety that they create wherever they go.

This phenomenon, which occurs every day in your world, is responsible in a large way for the many wars that break out—especially the so-called “holy” wars. But, to bring this discussion down to a more personal level, this phenomenon occurs on a much smaller scale (and is more frequent) around those who effort to be Lighted wayshowers. Why? Because the Lighted individuals tend to bring order and stability into the world and, in essence, they are cutting off the “food supply” to those dark energies who feed and lust for negative emotional energy vibrations.

The Lighted wayshower who gains any sort of headway toward dissipating any significant amount of negativity becomes a target for attacks. These attacks are executed not only to try to stop any further positive efforts, but beyond that, to also try to achieve eventual overshadowment and control of the Lighted wayshower. Why? Because if that goal can be accomplished, then the “damage” done (from the negative entity point of view) can be undone, and perhaps the now-conquered person can be used to actually create great negativity, even if only in a subtle manner.

All this can EASILY be avoided by simply remembering to stay centered and call upon the Light (or God, or Angels of God, or Jesus, or whatever in your perception represents pureness of Goodness) and surround yourself with this Energy. There are myriads of Lighted Beings from the Higher Realms (Angels) who will respond to your heartfelt request.

Please know that the call for assistance is not viewed as a weakness. Rather, it is viewed as LEARNED WISDOM. Those who would laugh at you or ridicule you for believing in such things are simply those who are ignorant about such matters and are often parroting the “popular” opinion that is generated and reinforced by those dark controlling ones who wish to keep the masses dumb and pliable and thwarted from awakening to their true Potential.

Awakened individuals will see right through the lies, and they will see the games of manipulation. This sort of exposure causes the manipulators great restlessness as they perceive a very real threat to their ability to maintain control over others to do their will.

Many on your world are kept “in the dark” regarding these things. And, due to the great social pressures that society in general—and especially relatives and friends—are conditioned to exert upon those who seek out this sort of information, many searching ones are pressured away from the knowledge that would eventually free them from the shackles of ignorance, to thus reclaim their God-given power.

If you perceive that you MAY be under an attack from one who is either consciously or unconsciously sending negative thoughts your way, there are some very simple things you can do to protect yourself. First and foremost, surround yourself with the Love of Creator God. (His Light is a symbolic representation of this Love.) Number two, surround any and all ones whom you may feel could be the originator of the attack with the same Light/Love of Creator God. Picture a thousand Angels of Light holding your possible attacker in an affectionate embrace with the clear message that they are dearly Loved.

These things will ALWAYS prove effective.

By contrast, getting into a reactionary battle of who has the stronger will only results in a great karmic tie with the individual that will eventually need to be balanced out. Falling into this trap is a very quick way to ensure a “round-trip ticket” back into the physical for future lessons in learning how to utilize your creative energies in a mature and responsible manner.

As students of life, I should add here that there are ways to use these same creative energies in QUITE a positive way so as to NOT incur great karmic debts. Let us say that you have a neighbor who you don’t particularly get along with and you wish that they would move. You could wish them ill health or something else negative. Or, from a much more positive perspective, you could wish them great prosperity so that they perhaps acquire a better job or come into a lot of money, so as to bring forth the desire to move elsewhere.

Remember: when you send out energy (thought-forms), that energy is going to return to you AMPLIFIED. If you chronically dwell in the negative aspects of your life, and thus radiate that energy, you most certainly will be manifesting and experiencing more and more of that same negativity.

Learn to catch yourself when you are feeling any of the lower emotions, such as guilt, frustration, and anger. Know that YOU are responsible for your emotional state, and not anyone else. To attack or lash out at another will only serve to further disconnect you from that inner place of peace wherein you find communion with Creator Source, the One who created you.

To attack another is to attack another of God's creations and is, in essence, "spitting in the face" of God. Most of you, in your moments of anger and such, lash out upon another who is just as much loved by God, and an aspect of God, as are you. So how could such behavior EVER result in satisfaction? In the short term it may very well "feel" good to the fragile ego-self, for it may view such actions as a means of protecting its self. But, as you continue to grow, you will find that such cumulative attacks are what cause ulcers, tumors, cancer, and most commonly, heart attacks.

Remember: your environment is PERFECTLY balanced with respect to learning. This is to say that the "bio-feedback" signals which your environment and body produce are optimized for your growth potential. To ignore the subtle clues that give you insights which will lead to a greater understanding, will cause these "little" things to grow until you can no longer ignore them. Will it take a heart attack to get your attention? How about cancer?

Learn to view all sensations you encounter as SIGNIFICANT. Go within and ask for help from Higher Source if you cannot seem to grasp a meaning. Ask for confirmation of correct interpretation. You each have Guides ready and willing to assist you, and it is always much more expeditious if you try to meet them part way by being open to their presence.

Never overlook a "coincidence" or "chance" happening. Those things don't really exist except in the mind of those who deny their inner connection to Source and thus ignore the many ways that messages can be communicated to you.

I am Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come as a member of the Hosts of God, in Lighted Service to all ones. There is no discrimination, for we are ALL brothers and sisters born of the same Source—Creator God. May the words of this message help you to become a more positive influence on all ones you may have the pleasure of interacting with.

Blessings and Peace. Salu.

THE BOOK OF CHOICES: KEYS TO ENLIGHTENMENT BY ALLISONE HEARTSONG

All paths that lead to spiritual
are essentially a sequence of choices.

When made with whole-hearted sincerity, the choices contained in this little book constitute one version of the Way by means of which anyone who chooses may come into harmonious alignment with the Source of their being.

In short, these choices constitute the keys to the Kingdom of Heaven.

The undergraduate section of this book is composed of 52 choices, one for each week of the year. Daily contemplation of each choice for one whole week is the recommended procedure.

However, those who prefer a faster pace may choose to meditate on a different choice each day so as to move through the entire sequence of 52 choices seven times in one year.

The postgraduate course, which is comprised of 24 additional choices, may be undertaken whenever the undergraduate course of 52 choices has been completed.

Children Of The Matrix

How an interdimensional race has controlled the world for thousands of years—and still does!

We are born into a world controlled by unseen forces that have plagued and manipulated humanity for thousands of years. No, this is no script from a Hollywood movie. It is happening to you NOW.

You may look around and think that what you see is "real". But in truth you are living in an illusion—an illusion designed to keep you in a mental, emotional, and spiritual prison cell.

David Icke exposes these forces and their methods of human control and he reveals a fantastic web of global manipulation, orchestrated by forces beyond this physical realm.

He exposes the hidden bloodlines, through which other-dimensional entities live and operate unseen among us; and he shows how the bloodlines of the royal, political, and economic rulers of today are the same as those who ruled as the kings and queens of ancient times.

Icke takes the story on from his highly acclaimed And The Truth Shall Set You Free and The Biggest Secret, and he lifts still further the veil of secrecy that has maintained humanity in manipulated ignorance for so long.

*The truth is not only out there.
Much of it is right here.*

“Gregg Braden is a rare blend of scientist, visionary, and scholar with the ability to speak to our minds, while touching the wisdom of our hearts.” — Deepak Chopra, M.D.

It is always fascinating to watch as stories come together despite seemingly impossible odds, “coincidences”, and crazy schedules. This is one such powerful story. It reminds us WE are very much in the driver’s seat of our lives. But that process happens so fluently, with every seemingly small choice we make each moment, that we don’t generally recognize this exquisite process in action. Or that it has been known from very ancient times. That’s where Gregg Braden enters the picture.

Gregg Braden is an author of several most unusual books, a traveler and tour guide to some of the most interesting ancient places on this planet, and a world-class lecturer who speaks as much to our inner heart knowing as to the questions of our scientific intellect.

I managed to catch up with him immediately upon his return from a trip to Paris, and just before leaving for New York and then Tibet. While Gregg doesn’t normally do these kinds of interviews during this typically demanding time of the year, fortunately for us, he made time.

What an honor and what a joy this story has been to put together. I’m deeply humbled in the presence of such a man of practical wisdom AND genuine kindness. His clear and thoughtful teaching, while responding to my sometimes disjointed questioning, guides the reading audience (myself included) down a path of new discovery and ancient wonders, as only a Happy Second Anniversary!

Bless YOU Who Have Helped The SPECTRUM

Achieve Another Miracle Milestone

Do you believe in miracles? Perhaps you should. You're reading one right now!

The fact that this newspaper exists at all is a miracle beyond belief. The fact that it has made it, past the very bumpy first, to the "very much alive & growing" second anniversary, is a miracle definitely Guided from Above. We're not that clever or resourceful on our own.

(See the www.contactnews10.com website for the details of the clash which birthed this newspaper—in the final three issues of "our" CONTACT, for the dates of 3/15/99, 3/22/99, and 3/26/99. That website is operated by an archiving consortium that has been under continual attack by those who do not wish The Truth to be available concerning this matter.)

Now let's count our blessings. The happy situation wherein so many of you help us to stay financially afloat is perhaps our greatest blessing. But that must be followed closely by the blessing of wonderful letters and other encouraging communications from you.

If only each of you could see the outpouring of support that we see, day after day. We try to give you some idea of this in the "Kind Words From Our Readers" box in each issue of The SPECTRUM, but such a small sampling hardly does justice to the actual "tidal wave" of uplifting energies constantly being directed out way from you.

To update and answer the sensitive question asked by some of you and wondered (but politely left unasked) by the rest, we remain in a precarious financial condition. About 20% of our bare-bones monthly operating expenses are met through newspaper-related revenues. The rest is met through the generosity of donations.

In a typical month's donations, one person (not wealthy, but who feels strongly about this newspaper) provides about 80% of our needs; another dear friend provides about 10%; and the remaining 10% comes from many of you who are often in no better financial shape than we are. BUT—you still care deeply about The Truth, and put those feelings into ACTIONS, the likes of which often take our breath away.

I'll never forget when, many months ago, a Midwestern farming wife and mother—the salt of the Earth—sent some crumpled-up money in an envelope, folded within a short note. I don't have it in front of me right now, but the note said something like: "I have been saving this, a little at a time, for many months now, to buy a new set of tires for my going-to-town car. But I've decided your paper is more important; so please accept this donation to help out. I can live with the old tires a while longer."

See what I mean?! The MIRACLE is indeed that this newspaper is still alive, and we are BLESSED with you ones who care deeply about helping to make that miracle happen.

It is a Primary Law of this Universe: All things come full circle in the course of time. The wonderful, positive energies you FREELY send our way—be they in the form of thoughts or prayers or uplifting notes or actual volunteered financial assistance—MUST come, full-circle, back to you, amplified many times in proportion to how selflessly from the heart you have given. (By contrast, so-called "giving" wherein various strings or weights or other burdens are attached, is another matter entirely and has its own lessons of a much different nature in terms of return energy flows.)

Yes, we are grateful to have arrived at our Second Anniversary issue—thanks to YOU who have played a part in that achievement—even if the news to report can be more bad than good.

For instance, it looks, from all the official rhetoric, like pronounced Oklahoma City "bomber" Timothy McVeigh is headed for execution the same day this newspaper goes into production. Will there yet be a very last-minute reprieve? It doesn't look likely.

We have elected to share with you (in several articles in this issue of The SPECTRUM) some vastly unsettling Truth about that tragic and diabolical Oklahoma City event. Meanwhile, the mostly gullible public has been whipped, by a well-controlled media, into a "guilty" frenzy not much different than that of an Old West lynch mob.

How do the crooks in high places get away with this kind of travesty of Justice? Because the public is generally so completely unaware of The Truth—which is usually much more bizarre than the fictions the public is routinely fed. If the media news programs say a little truck with fertilizer bomb materials blew up the massively reinforced Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, then what is there to question?

Well, just about everything. And that is why The SPECTRUM exists—to fill-in those often inconvenient facts that have been quietly and methodically omitted from "official" reality.

Thanks to your ongoing generosity, we remain afloat (at least for this issue) to bring you, again, a wide array of revealing Truth which, while sometimes deeply disturbing, surely ought to be aired.

Look at what we ALL have accomplished so far with this unique information conduit. What do you think might be yet to come?

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT THROWS OUT JURY NULLIFICATION

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 5/10/01: [quoting]

* High court throws out "conscience".

* Jurors may no longer refuse to convict a person on the basis of a law they believe is unjust.

SACRAMENTO—California jurors must follow the law, and not their consciences, when deliberating, the state Supreme Court ruled Monday, dismissing the historic doctrine of jury nullification as "contrary to our ideal of equal justice for all".

The justices unanimously upheld a Santa Clara County judge's decision to remove a juror who refused, on principle, to consider convicting an 18-year-old defendant of statutory rape.

The ruling, the court's first on nullification, is a blow to proponents of the unwritten, but time-tested, principle that jurors are the "conscience of the community" and should reject unjust laws by refusing to convict.

"Judges have systematically refused to grapple with what nullification really means" said Alan Schefflin, a Santa Clara University law professor. "They've erected this bogeyman that they take great delight in destroying."

Nullification "may sound lofty", Chief Justice Ronald M. George wrote, "but such unchecked and unreviewable power can lead to verdicts based on bigotry and racism."

The court, in its 28-page opinion, also warned that nullification would leave the fate of defendants to the "whims of a particular jury" which could disregard the presumption of innocence or even convict "by the flip of a coin".

Jury nullification dates back hundreds of years, but rose to prominence during the Revolutionary War period. Juries have since used the principle, to acquit those who helped free slaves during the 1800s, as well as bootleggers prosecuted during Prohibition.

"There's no constitutional basis for jury nullification, yet it does exist" said Rita Simon, a law professor at American University. "De Toqueville even mentioned it when he praised the American jury system."

Monday's opinion stems from the 1995 conviction of Arasheik W. Williams by a Santa Clara jury on charges of torture, false imprisonment, assault, and statutory rape.

During closing arguments, Williams' attorney told the jurors that "a jury may, at times, afford a higher justice by refusing to enforce harsh laws".

Hours into deliberation, the jury foreman reported to the judge that juror James Kelly refused to discuss the statutory rape charge because "he believes the law is wrong".

Kelly told Judge Paul Teilh he couldn't consider the rape charge: "I simply cannot see staining a man, a young man, for the rest of his life for what I believe to be the wrong reason."

Under the American legal system, juries need not explain how they arrived at their verdicts. But judges can, and do, remove jurors who make it known they will practice nullification.

In the Williams case, the judge removed Kelly from the jury, saying he had violated his oath of service that required the juror to follow the judge's instructions.

The jury, with an alternate in place, voted the next day to convict Williams, who was later sentenced to six years in prison.

"This ruling will only encourage jurors to lie" Schefflin said. [End quoting]

This is another serious case where the so-called elite controllers are "tightening the screws" a bit more on our freedoms, hoping we won't notice and don't remember any history.

This kind of success is also a failure of our educational system (a success in the eyes of the controllers)—that so few have any awareness of our historical foundations, such as the Federalist Papers discourses by our Founding Fathers. Even the Law Professor at American University, noted above in the article, got it only half right. ("De Toqueville even mentioned it when he praised the American jury system.") Yes, he praised our system—but—WHY do you think he so praised our system?

Because the combined consciences of the jury IS central to the philosophy of our Founding Fathers on this matter of True Justice. The jurors thus have the right to CHANGE OR IGNORE ANY law that they consider erroneous to the case under consideration. This allows for all the exceptions that lawmakers, imperfect as the rest of us, cannot possibly cover in some fixed-in-stone law.

There has been a systematic "chipping away" at this important judge-by-conscience principle, especially since the 1950s, for the purposes of achieving more complete control OVER True Justice to fulfill hidden agendas of court outcome manipulation. You have to control the jurors to control the outcome of a trial.

This latest bold move looks to be a test balloon to see if "they" CAN GET AWAY WITH THE FINAL STEP of the subversion of True Justice—by tossing out the all important element of the human conscience. And naturally the "poison" is "packaged" in such a way as to convince you it's the right thing to accept. This is our testing, too—will we put up with such a strong noose around our neck?

EDUCRATS DECLARE WAR ON REMAINING PARENTAL RIGHTS

From FREE AMERICAN NEWSMAGAZINE, by Vin Suprynowicz, May 2001: [quoting]

According to reporting by Cheryl Romo in the Los Angeles Daily Journal, which covers legal matters for Southern California's attorneys, little Kameron Justin Demery, aged two-and-a-half, and his twin sister Karissa appeared to be doing fine until one early morning after the Christmas holiday, 1995.

That was when Karissa was taken to the hospital emergency room by her mom, suffering with what would later be diagnosed as bronchitis.

The first thing hospital officials requested from their mom, Jacqueline Bishop (then 29) were the children's immunization records. But since Ms. Bishop had been persuaded by her own mother, a licensed vocational nurse, not to immunize the twins because of the very real health risks, she didn't have any immunization records.

Within days came the late-night government raid in which the twins and their seven-year-old brother were seized from Ms. Bishop by brute force.

The twins, Kameron and Karissa, were placed in the foster care of David and Evelyn Miller, even though the Millers had previously had all foster children in their care removed by the DCFS because of "excessive discipline". The Millers had also been decertified as care providers in February 1995 by the Foster Family Network. But reporter Romo found the previous abuse allegations against the Millers were not reported to the DCFS hotline. They "fell through the cracks".

On October 14, 1996, little Karissa looked on as her brother Kameron, against whom she had cuddled as she fell asleep each night since she was born, was beaten to death by Evelyn Miller, his state-licensed foster care provider. Evelyn Miller is now serving a sentence of 15 years-to-life for murder. [End quoting]

When are we going to put a stop to this level of government intrusion under the guise of "helping" us? We here at The SPECTRUM could share many more articles like this, particularly concerning very informed parents who have taken on the medical mafia and refused vaccinations or other New World Order agenda items mandated by Big Brother.

In disguise, the educational system becomes the medical police in such matters, and that is one reason why the home-schooling movement is always under such pressure, even though home-schooled children routinely and vastly outperform their school-system peers. It will take a united effort of awake and responsible people to reverse such CALCULATED oppressive controls being imposed upon the public. (See page 37 ad, too.)

BREAST CANCER SAID TO BE CAUSED BY ANTIPERSPIRANTS

Elizabeth Morin, Dept. of Medicinal Chemistry, Merck Frosst Canada & Co., 514-428-3222.

I'm forwarding this to everyone I know because it makes so much sense. Please forward it to everyone you care about and even those you don't.

Ladies—some awareness! Gentlemen—pass on to the ladies in your life!

Please read this. Very important.

Some time ago, I attended a Breast Cancer Awareness seminar put on by Terry Birk with support from Dan Sullivan. During the Q&A period, I asked why the most common area for breast cancer was near the arm pit. My question could not be answered at that time.

This email was just sent to me, and I find it interesting that my question has been answered. I challenge you all to re-think your everyday use of a product that could ultimately lead to a terminal illness. As of today, I will change my use.

A friend forwarded this to me. I showed it to a friend going through chemotherapy and she said she learned this fact in a support group recently. I wish I had known it 14 years ago.

I just got information from a health seminar that I would like to share:

The leading cause of breast cancer is the use of antiperspirants.

What?

A concentration of toxins leads to cell mutations: a.k.a. CANCER.

Yes, ANTI-PERSPIRANTS.

Most of the products out there are an anti-perspirant/deodorant combination, so go home and check. Deodorant is fine; anti-perspirant is not. Here's why:

The human body has a few areas that it uses to purge toxins: behind the knees, behind the ears, groin area, and armpits. The toxins are purged in the form of perspiration.

Anti-perspirants, as the name clearly indicates, prevents you from perspiring, thereby inhibiting the body from purging toxins from below the armpits.

These toxins do not just magically disappear. Instead, the body deposits them in the lymph nodes below the arms since you cannot sweat them out.

Nearly all breast cancer tumors occur in the upper outside quadrant of the breast area. This is precisely where the lymph nodes are located.

Additionally, men are less likely (but not completely exempt) to develop breast cancer prompted by antiperspirant usage because most of the antiperspirant product is caught in their hair and is not directly applied to the skin. Women who apply antiperspirant right after shaving increase the risk further because shaving causes almost imperceptible nicks in the skin which give the chemicals entrance into the body from the armpit area.

PLEASE pass this along to anyone you care about. Breast cancer is becoming frighteningly common.

This awareness may save lives. If you are skeptical about these findings, I urge you to do some research for yourself.

You will arrive at the same conclusions, I assure you. [End quoting]

It pays to know what you are putting on and in your body. Especially when a product is designed to block natural body functions, we should consider carefully the consequences of our actions.

Remember a decade ago when so many of these products had aluminum as a main ingredient—being absorbed right through the skin. Great public awareness caused a “vote” whereby these products were not selling and the manufacturers (most of them) scrambled to reformulate their products—but only AFTER it became clear that what was happening was a real (and mostly permanent) boost to the products from manufacturers who avoided aluminum in their formulations.

HOW THE GOVERNMENT WORKS— PARASITES AND THE LAST FEW SCRAPS

From THE IDAHO OBSERVER, April 2001: [quoting]

It is pathetic what has become of this once productive nation—entire industries that created humble wealth for the working class have been replaced by scams to separate the few remaining middle-class Americans from what is left of their assets.

The post-WWII era allowed our parents and grandparents to work hard, buy a home, save money, acquire property, retire comfortably, and leave a modest inheritance for their posterity. Today it seems that you either make it big or you consider your access to high-interest credit to be your bank account. There is no more acquisition of assets—just a daily hand-to-mouth struggle to pay the bills after pouring over 50% of your income into one tax or another.

The parasites of society—con artists, thieves, and government agents and agencies—have already sucked most of the wealth from post-WWII estates through taxes, nursing homes, and pharmaceutical drug subscriptions. Since most production industries, farms, and ranches have been regulated out of making appreciable profit, and since almost all Americans make just enough money to get deeper into credit card debt each month, how do the parasites continue feeding themselves?

They go to court or lobby their legislators. Spend a morning in magistrate court watching people who have nothing plead guilty to misdemeanors, and watch them be ordered to pay fine after fine after fine; spend a day in probate court and watch the court steal an inheritance; spend a week in civil court and watch attorneys file endless motions in a civil dispute that bankrupts both parties without arriving at a just resolution. Then spend a month reading the thousands of bills being proposed by your legislature that intend to become laws which allow the parasites to suck every last nickel out of your pocket through taxes, permits, and regulations as they provide budgets for more agencies and agents to steal those nickels from you.

What you will see is the answer to the question above. The parasites of society are feeding off every last crumb of prosperity that can be found in the property and wages of the American people. Once the host-American people are all used up, then what will the parasites do? Feed off each other? [End quoting]

And then, soon, collapse—if the system continues on its present course. How better to collapse (and thus control) the will of the people than through the constant draining of all measures of independence?

Remember that old analogy of the frogs sitting in the pot of water on the stove: so long as the heat is turned up slowly enough, the frogs never notice or even suspect the actual goal of the situation. Shall we look away and pretend things are not as bad as they appear—or do something about it?

HOMES WASTE MAJOR ELECTRICITY EVEN ON “OFF” DAYS

By Peter Fearon <<http://nypost.com/news/regionalnews/40338.htm>>

New York's millions of faxes, televisions, computers, and radios use enough electricity when they're switched off to power every home in San Francisco.

And an even bigger electric shock: America's power-leaking household appliances use enough juice to keep New York City glowing.

Incredibly, while California is coping with rolling power outages, billions of dollars worth of power are leaking out of our appliances.

This does not bode well for the Big Apple, especially since President Bush's new plan to research and develop alternative energy does not address the looming threat of blackouts here this summer. Conservation could be key.

The power leaks come from so-called “energy-sippers” inside appliances like stereo systems and cable boxes, garage door openers, and cordless phones. Hard to believe, but some of these appliances use [almost] as much power when they are off as when they are on.

"These energy sippers are on, when you think they are off" said energy specialist Gary Davidson at the New York State Energy Research and Development Agency in Albany. Appliances used for only a few hours a week still draw electricity 24/7.

"In the average home, 90 percent of all the energy used to power audio products is used while the equipment is off" says one of Con Ed's energy savings advisories.

Alan Meier, of the Environmental Energy Technologies Division at Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory in Berkeley, Calif., investigated the amount of energy used when devices are supposedly switched off.

"The average house leaks constantly about 50 watts. This is about 5 percent of the residential electricity use in the United States" Meier said. That translates as enough power for 5 million homes. [End quoting]

The psychology of our instant-on modern society is to blame for as much of this electrical "leakage" as are product manufacturers who follow what the public demands in their ignorance to the engineering costs of those instant-on preferences.

Meanwhile, the power companies pretend they wish products didn't leak like they do—while laughing all the way to the bank. This is no different than our present $2 - $3 a gallon for gasoline due to "shortages" while these same oil companies enjoy record profits and have long suppressed even conventional gasoline-reduction technologies—such as carburetors which allow your car engine to get 100+ miles to the gallon of gasoline. (Such have been around since the late 1930s.)

NEA RESOLUTION ON HOMOSEXUALITY

The following resolution from the National Education Association on Homosexuality should be of interest. If you know of anyone who is a delegate to the NEA's national meeting who would oppose such a resolution, please contact me. — Thanks, Janine Hansen

This is why I have been asking you for contact info for delegates you know. Talk to your friends about this. It is a pretty solid endorsement of the homosexual lifestyle and bolder language than was previously adopted.

NEA Resolution "New B"

The National Education Association recognizes that the complex and diverse needs of gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, and questioning students; and gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender families and their children require the development of programs that promote a safe and inclusive environment.

a. Development of curriculum and instructional materials and programs designed to meet the needs of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender students.

b. Involvement of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender educators in developing educational material used in classroom instructions.

c. Dissemination of programs that support gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, and questioning students and address the high dropout rate, suicide rate, and health risk behaviors.

d. Recognition of the importance of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender education employees as role models.

e. Accurate portrayal of the roles and contributions of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people throughout history.

f. Dissemination of programs and information that include the contributions, heritage, culture, and history of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people.

g. Coordination with gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender organizations and concerned agencies that promote the contributions, heritage, culture, history, health, and care of gays, lesbians, bisexuals, and transgender people.

(End resolution text.)

Talking Points on the NEA's pro-homosexual resolution:

Supporters of "New B" say that it will protect homosexuals in schools by implementing pro-homosexual curricula, instructional materials, programs, and by hiring homosexual educators. But is this what we really want?

The passage of this resolution means that homosexuality could be taught to your children, as young as preschool. The homosexual agenda does not belong in public schools, but if the NEA supports this resolution, the nation's public schools will be only a step away from implementing it.

Also, these programs would occur without the consent of parents. The NEA's website tells parents that "you are your child's first and most important teacher". However, by supporting this resolution, the NEA takes the power from the parents to dictate what their children learn and when they learn it. Schools, not parents, would decide when and what the children learn about homosexuality.

Some of the main ideas in the resolution have already been tested in America's public schools—with horrific results:

- The school board in Provincetown, MA, approved a measure that allows preschoolers to be taught about homosexuality, and the group Parents, Families, and Friends of Lesbians and Gays to speak in kindergarten classes. (Washington Times, Aug 21, 1997)

- In Marin County, CA, all second-through fifth-graders at Pleasant Valley School were called to an assembly put on by a local theater group. The group taught the children slogans such as "I'm gay and it's okay." The skits included one in which Rapunzel cut her hair and ran away with her girlfriend. One fourth-grade child went home and told his parents that he learned about families with two daddies and two mommies, and words like “homosexual” and “lesbian”. One third-grade girl reportedly asked her father if she was a lesbian because she liked girls better than boys. Many parents were outraged because they had not been informed of the assembly or the material it would address. (Citizen magazine, July 2001)

- In California, elementary school students were forced to hear about their teacher’s homosexual lifestyle. When the teacher’s homosexual partner sent flowers to him in the class, he used the moment to talk about homosexuality. When one of the parents wrote to the teacher to complain, he responded with a letter that said, in essence, that while he agreed not to talk about homosexuality, he never agreed not to use “teachable moments” to educate the children about homosexual issues. (Family News in Focus, May 18, 2001)

- The Washington Times reported that “Kindergartners are learning about ‘homophobia’ as lessons about alternative lifestyles and homosexuality appear in America’s elementary schools, often without parental knowledge. (November 25, 1997)

- In Montpelier, VT, high school students were taken to an unannounced assembly. Once there, they were presented with a panel entirely made up of gays, lesbians, and bisexuals who talked about how happy, healthy, and productive they are. (Washington Times, November 25, 1997)

- A California labor commissioner ruled against the Hemet Unified School District, saying they “discriminated” against a teacher by allowing a tenth-grade girl to transfer out of the class. The transfer occurred after the teacher openly discussed her private relationship with her lesbian partner in front of the class, reportedly making the girl uncomfortable and anxious, and creating a hostile learning environment for her. (The [Riverside, CA] Press-Enterprise, February 6, 1999, and January 19, 2000; California Senate Judiciary Statement on SB 1804)

This resolution promotes an agenda, not education. “New B” seeks to advance the homosexual agenda in public schools through curricula and programs, without the consent of parents. Public schools should be a place for reading, writing, and arithmetic—not reading, writing, and social agendas. [End quoting]

Regular readers of The SPECTRUM will remember the in-depth feature article in our October 2000 issue titled “The Homosexual Agenda That Is Quietly Invading Our Schools” which, if it didn’t shock those of you with an interest in the school system, you better check your pulse.

Because of its inherent power for good, the collapse of the traditional family is a key item of the New World Order’s destabilization and control agenda. Go back to the second item in this News Desk for another example of this attack. Again, the antidote is vigilance-in-numbers. It is assumed that most of the public is asleep or doesn’t care enough—a very tempting environment for getting away with just about anything!

WHAT’S THIS ALL ABOUT? DOCTORS VERSUS GUNS

From the INTERNET, Ronald Cravens <rcravens@pineknot.com>, 5/26/01: [quoting]

Given this data, the way I see it is, the more guns you own, the better chance you have of living a long life.

Number of physicians in the US = 700,000.

Accidental deaths caused by physicians per year = 120,000.

Accidental deaths per physician = 0.171 (U.S. Dept. of Health & Human Services).

Number of gun owners in the US = 80,000,000.

Number of accidental gun deaths per year (all age groups) = 1,500.

Accidental deaths per gun owner = 0.0000188.

Therefore, doctors are over 9,000 times more dangerous than gun owners. Not everyone has a gun, but everyone has at least one doctor. [End quoting]

Does this sort of statistic make you think twice about what’s going on? We have presented this (or similar) data a long time ago, but it warrants repeating.

The sad fact of the matter is that these numbers would be MUCH WORSE if there was a straightforward way to count the illnesses and indirect deaths caused by what the medical mafia and their directors, the pharmaceutical companies, have imposed upon us through such as mandatory vaccinations and various medical procedures designed more to amplify cash flow than promote healing—while blocking the often very inexpensive TRUE cures.

INFERNAL REVENUE NEEDS YOUR TAX DOLLARS AT PLAY

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/21/01: [quoting]

It’s not true that the Internal Revenue Service devotes all of its time to harassing taxpayers. Half of the time IRS employees spend on computers is used to peruse pornography, gamble, trade stocks, and chat, according to the Treasury Department’s inspector general.

Its investigation of how 16,000 IRS employees used government computers covered several months. Investigators found that IRS employees spent 8,250 hours out of 16,275 hours online—about 51 percent of the time—doing personal business or visiting sex sites. [End quoting]

How’s that for an ironic situation? Would we rather these IRS employees become more industrious and focused upon their work—or goofing off and not harassing we-the-people?

SAVING GASOLINE AND MONEY

From the INTERNET site “earthspirit” <earthspirit@earthling.net>, 5/21/00: [quoting]

Very useful information for anyone looking to save some money on gasoline consumption by using inexpensive magnets.

Orgone Biophysical Research Lab <demeo@mind.net> <http://www.orgonelab.org> Forwarded News Item

Please copy and distribute to other interested individuals and groups.

As of today, I’ve got at least five or so emails from well-meaning folk organizing various gasoline station boycotts, car-free days, power-free days (candles only, please) and other ideas which, from my thinking, will have absolutely zero effect upon anything, except perhaps making people who participate in them feel a little better.

I wish to remind OBRL News subscribers of a very simple way to save from 5-15% on their automobile gasoline bill, by simply putting strong magnets on the gas line, close to where it enters the carburetor or fuel-injector.

Natural Energy Works formerly sold fancy magnetic fuel treatment devices which cost around $50, and you had to cut your fuel line to have them function. Later, I discovered these devices contained simple magnets with the south-seeking poles directed inward. So you don’t have to buy such expensive devices, nor cut into your fuel line. You can put a few dollars of strong magnets on the outside of the existing fuel line, and tape them into place, with similar beneficial results.

My Astrovan, a V-6, 4-wheel-drive behemoth that is necessary for winter snow at the Greensprings Center, routinely gave around 17 mpg. With the magnets on, the boost was to around 20 mpg, or 3 additional mpg for an increase of around 15%. The magnitude of efficiency boosting seems to vary a bit from car to car, and from region to region.

The magnets used are fairly strong rare-earth strontium ferroxide ceramic magnets which will pinch your fingers (Ouch!) if you are not careful, and four of them are enough for a single fuel-line for one car.

Any similar strong magnet will work. Two of them are stacked together on one side of the fuel line, with another two stacked magnets on the opposite side of the line, secured in place with multiple wrappings of black electrical tape. Simple!

Double fuel-lines for dual injectors need eight magnets. They sell for around $1 each. That’s a total of eight bucks maximum, plus a few cents for the tape, or an additional $2 for a hose clamp, if you wish to have something more secure than the tape. That’s a total cost of around $10 for saving from 5-15% on your gasoline bill, which today can pay for itself in about two or three tankfuls.

Like the orgone accumulator, it is too simple for most people to believe, so most people don't, but they will plunk down $150 for some other gadget that has a lot of slick brochures and multilevel marketing hysteria standing behind them. Open up those $150 devices (for fuel or water treatment) and in many cases you still have the same $4 worth of magnets.

You can get the magnets at any Radio Shack, but they have to be stronger than simple refrigerator magnets, strong enough to pinch your skin if you are not careful. Otherwise the field won't penetrate into the fuel line.

Get them wherever you want, but Natural Energy Works has been selling these simple strong magnets for years, available in sets of 10 for $10 plus $7 USA/Canada shipping, along with a little book on the subject for $12.95. (Natural Energy Works is the Mail Order Service of ORBL. Online Catalog: <<http://www.orgonelab.org/naturalenergy.htm>>)

The same effect works also on your propane or natural gas stove or furnace, when magnets are added to the feed lines just before the burners or combustion chambers.

Check out the following website for more information, and also the link recently added that provides the results of scientific studies backing up the magnetic effect (<http://www.orgonelab.org/xpmagnet.htm>).

Let's face it, Americans are the biggest energy hogs of the world, and our political leadership have been fiddling while Rome burned, totally failing us for years, on both sides of the political spectrum. Here's something you can do, today, which will directly benefit yourself, and allow you to walk a bit softer on Mother Earth. Boycott Exxon, walk to work, and read by candlelight if you wish, but a lot more can be done with clever considerations, and quite inexpensively. — JD

Sounds like an inexpensive way to do a little cost-saving experimenting on our own. I know that the magnets on my water pipe have made it easier to keep sinks, toilets, and showers clean from hard-water mineral deposits.

Back a few items in this News Desk mention was made of very fuel-efficient carburetors which REALLY save on gasoline consumption—and thus are not available to the public. At least the simple magnet technology IS available, probably because "they" couldn't

MILLIONS OF STUDENTS WRONGED BY TEST FLAWS

Excerpted from the INTERNET, John M. Novak <sovereignty4all@home.com>, 5/20/01: [quoting] Right Answer, Wrong Score: Test Flaws Take Toll, by Diana B. Henriques and Jacques Steinberg.

Entire 4-part story at: <<http://www.nytimes.com/2001/05/20/business/20EXAM.html>>

One day last May, a few weeks before commencement, Jake Plumley was pulled out of the classroom at Harding High School in St. Paul and told to report to his guidance counselor.

The counselor closed the door and asked him to sit down. The news was grim. Jake, a senior, had failed a standardized test required for graduation. To try to salvage his diploma, he had to give up a promising job and go to summer school. "It changed my whole life, that test" Jake recalled.

In fact, Jake should have been elated. He actually had passed the test. But the company that scored it had made an error, giving Jake and 47,000 other Minnesota students lower scores than they deserved.

An error like this—made by NCS Pearson, the nation's biggest test scorer—is every testing company's worst nightmare. One executive called it "the equivalent of a plane crash for us".

But it was not an isolated incident. The testing industry is coming off its three most problem-plagued years. Its missteps have affected millions of students who took standardized proficiency tests in at least 20 states.

An examination of recent mistakes and interviews with more than 120 people involved in the testing process suggest that the industry cannot guarantee the kind of error-free, high-speed testing that parents, educators, and politicians seem to take for granted.

Now President Bush is proposing a 50 percent increase in the workload of this tiny industry—a handful of giants with a few small rivals. The House could vote on the Bush plan this week, and if Congress signs off, every child in grades 3 to 8 will be tested each year in reading and math. Neither the Bush proposal nor the Congressional debate has addressed whether the industry can handle the daunting logistics of this additional business.

Already, a growing number of states use these so-called high-stakes exams—not to be confused with the SAT, the college entrance exam—to determine whether students in grades 3 to 12 can be promoted or granted a diploma. The tests are also used to evaluate teachers and principals and to decide how much tax money school districts receive. How well schools perform on these tests can even affect property values in surrounding neighborhoods.

Each recent flaw had its own tortured history. But all occurred as the testing industry was struggling to meet demands from states to test more students, with custom-tailored tests of greater complexity, designed and scored faster than ever.

In recent years, the four testing companies that dominate the market have experienced serious breakdowns in quality control. Problems at NCS, for example, extend beyond Minnesota. In the last three years, the company produced a flawed answer key that incorrectly lowered multiple-choice scores for 12,000 Arizona students, erred in adding up scores of essay tests for students in Michigan, and was forced with another company to rescore 204,000 essay tests in Washington because the state found the scores too generous. NCS also missed important deadlines for delivering test results in Florida and California.

“I wanted to just throw them out and hire a new company” said Christine Jax, Minnesota’s top education official. “But then my testing director warned me that there isn’t a blemish-free testing company out there. That really shocked me.”

One error by another big company resulted in nearly 9,000 students in New York City being mistakenly assigned to summer school in 1999. In Kentucky, a mistake in 1997 by a smaller company, Measured Progress, of Dover, NH, denied $2 million in achievement awards to deserving schools. In California, test booklets have been delivered to schools too late for the scheduled test, were left out in the rain, or arrived with missing pages.

Many industry executives attribute these errors to growing pains.... [End quoting]

If this topic pertains to you or your loved ones, I would highly suggest that you look up the source and get the remaining portions of this long article.

President Bush is pushing for a lot more testing. If the industry can’t handle what they are already doing, then what is going to be happening to a far larger number of children’s lives and related issues such as are discussed above?

This problem also causes one to question the automated scoring of other kinds of electronically-read documents—like election ballots. Without even factoring-in Votescam-type issues of purposeful electronic election manipulations, the scoring businesses can’t seem to get it right without any additional purposeful finagling!

What do you want to bet it all comes down to money? The technology to accurately scan scorecards has been around for a LONG time. BUT, you have to stop the machinery and clean the optical scanners on a regular basis. Every time you stop to clean, it’s “down time” from scoring cards, and scoring cards is what brings in the money.

DON’T COUNT ON GOLD

Dr. Paul Rein, <http://www.gold-eagle.com/gold_digest_01/hein051701.html>.

The readers of this website are certainly more perspicacious than the average person. They open their eyes and use their minds and realize that the truth is far from what they are told by possibly well-meaning, but nonetheless wrong, pundits and commentators. And they have the sophistication to detect the subtle, and sometimes not so subtle, ploys of the government/banking axis.

They appreciate, for example, the clever stratagem of “leasing” gold, which is then sold short, in anticipation of repaying it with cheaper gold; but understand that this can only work as long as banks have gold to sell. When there is no more bank gold to dump, what then? The game is over, and the price of gold will once again be determined by genuine market forces, not tricks of its avowed enemies, who have declared it a “barbarous relic”.

Furthermore, foreign investors in the “strong” dollar will drop it like a hot potato when that “strength” begins to evaporate. Of course, the government may counter by the issuance of another “dollar”, one intended for use by foreigners only. Or it might issue a new currency at a devalued rate, or both.

But once the bubble bursts, or even begins to leak, only a fool or an ignoramus will cling to dollars. Gold is, and always has been, sound money which cannot be depreciated: an ounce of gold is an ounce of gold, with the buying power of an ounce of gold, regardless of what its enemies in banking and government may call it, or say about it. The wise man has, and will, cling to gold.

Of course, an investment in gold earns no interest, and pays no dividends, but, on the other hand, its value remains constant, and in that sense, it earns interest over a depreciating fiat. What must be considered is timing: when to dump dollars for gold. Ideally, of course, this is just prior to the collapse of the dollar, and the feeling of some who write for Gold-Eagle seems to be that day is not far off.

So buy gold! Historically, logically, philosophically, economically: any way you look at it, it makes sense to buy gold! Even if your timing is off, better to get rid of your dollars a year too soon than a day late!

Except for technology! What will distinguish this crash of fiat from prior crashes is the technology available to the enemies of gold, and the utter disregard for the law and human rights which characterize modern governments, including, sadly, our own.

Admittedly, our government has already exhibited a total disdain for its citizens as long ago as 1935, when it seized, totally unlawfully, the people’s gold. But in those days, it relied upon the naiveté of the populace. People were asked to turn in their gold, and told that the government knew what they had in their safe-deposit boxes. Apparently, many, if not all, people believed this, and dutifully gave their gold to the government, never to see it again!

(Oddly, our government, which actively inserts itself into the effort by European Jews to recover gold seized from them by Nazis, has no interest in returning to Americans the gold seized by the Roosevelt gang.)

Today the people are not quite so gullible; they will not believe that Uncle Sam knows what they have in their safe-deposit boxes, or under their mattresses, or buried in their back yards. But will that make any difference?

My fear is that our enemies have, or will soon have, technology enabling them to detect the presence of gold on your property simply by driving past in a vehicle with the proper sensing equipment aboard. They may not only be able to tell that you’ve got gold secreted about your place, but how much. Ditto for silver. And surprise! Precious metal ownership will be illegal, again.

But suppose I am wrong: the gold you’ve planted under the tomatoes is safe, and cannot be detected. What will you do with it?

Eventually, you will want to exchange it for something. With the stroke of a pen, the President can issue an Executive Order (never mind what Congress might think, assuming they think at all) making all sales or trades involving gold illegal, with drastic punishments for those caught.

In that instance, everyone possessing gold becomes a potential felon. If it becomes unlawful to buy, sell, or swap gold, it probably isn’t even necessary to outlaw its ownership.

Can you take your gold to another country and sell it? Well, you’ll have to get past the metal-detector at the airport, or train station, and any significant amount of gold will be so heavy as to make it difficult to carry. Can you walk across the border into Canada or Mexico and sell it? Maybe, if the Berlin wall isn’t resurrected between the U.S. and its neighbors. Take a boat from Florida to Cuba, if you dare, but you’ll find Uncle’s agents everywhere, and the Coast Guard will be watching carefully. And if your gold is stolen, to whom will you complain?

Of course, a dedicated and intelligent person will find some way to exchange his illicit gold. Will you be among that number? Will you be able to do it more than once? Can you trust those with whom you deal not to accidentally, or on purpose, disclose the fact? The government can issue great rewards for those who snitch. What can you offer?

As I mentioned above, the readers of Gold Eagle are more sophisticated than most. But in realizing the obvious and undeniable superiority of gold over fiat as a medium of exchange, an additional bit of sophistication is needed. Anyone savvy enough to realize that the bankers, and the governments which they've bought with their credit, will do anything to discredit gold and prevent its use by the people, should also be savvy enough to realize that, when credit crashes as it always has and inevitably will, the government/banking axis will not simply shake its head and say "Well, too bad. There goes our power and influence. We're out of business. Let's start over."

At one time, the inability of the rulers to track down and seize gold might have made that possible. Today, with the power to rule the entire world at stake, and the technology to make gold ownership and/or exchange virtually impossible, it's a different story. Before you put all you own into gold, think about it! [End quoting]

This is certainly a matter for those with assets in precious metals to consider carefully. Perhaps excess funds are better converted into more useable (and barterable) items such as a well-developed vegetable garden and egg-laying chickens in a chicken coop, or other basic necessities.

WHY JFK WAS SHOT—THE SPEECH JFK WOULD HAVE MADE

From the INTERNET,
<VegaBobinfo@webtv.net>, 5/01: [quoting]

In <AndromedaCouncil@y...>, "Joe Pinter" <andromedaninsights~h...> wrote: Hello Everybody, I came across this little bit tonight, just before I retired for the evening. I do not know of its authenticity, but it is here for your discernment. I have heard from at least 3 sources that one of the main reasons that JFK was assassinated was because he was going to release technology from the aliens for the benefit of mankind (free energy, healing devices, etc), make an official announcement that they are here, and "scatter the CIA to the winds".

So I leave you with this:

Why JFK Was Shot—The Speech JFK Would Have Made.

"Citizens of this Earth, we are not alone." With those dramatic words, President John F. Kennedy intended to inform the American public and the world at large that the U.S. government had made contact with aliens from deep space.

But before he could deliver the speech, on November 22, 1963, the beloved leader was cut down by assassins' bullets.

That is the astonishing claim of JFK researcher Professor Lawrence Merrick, author of an upcoming blockbuster book Killing The Messenger: The Death Of JFK.

"We now know the real reason why President Kennedy was assassinated" declared Prof. Merrick of Cambridge, MA.

"It appears that some individuals within our government were determined to maintain the secrecy surrounding captured UFOs—and decided to silence the President before he could speak." Prof. Merrick says he began a search for the undelivered speech after learning the President's original handwritten notes had fallen into the hands of Texas Governor John Connally—who was riding in JFK's death car that fateful day in Dallas.

"I was surprised to find that Kennedy handed Connally the speech, which was on note cards, to look at, shortly before the motorcade set off at 12:55 p.m." said Prof. Merrick.

The governor was badly wounded in the gun attack.

"Connally was terrified for his own life" said the historian.

"He placed the bloodstained index cards in a safety deposit box with orders to a trusted aide that the contents not be revealed until after his death." When Gov. Connally died in 1993, the aide removed the cards and held on to them.

Last year, Prof. Merrick tracked down the aide, who passed the speech on with a guarantee of anonymity.

Prof. Merrick was flabbergasted when he read the cards. He took them to five handwriting analysts, who agreed the speech was "95 percent certain" to be Kennedy's.

Research reveals that just days before his trip to Dallas, JFK met with his predecessor, President Dwight D. Eisenhower, notes Prof. Merrick.

"I believe he was seeking advice on whether to go public with the facts about UFOs" Prof. Merrick said. "But other government insiders apparently felt the truth about UFOs would cause widespread panic. And they were willing to kill to keep the information secret.

Here is what the President would have said:

My fellow Americans, people of the world, today we set forth on a journey into a new era. One age, the childhood of mankind, is ending, and another age is about to begin.

Conspiracy-Con Show Update

Another GREAT success! We have to humbly and sincerely thank all of our wonderful readers who came to the ConspiracyCon show to see & hear all of the great speakers, and who came to see, meet, and support Gail, Rick, and The SPECTRUM. We loved meeting and talking with all of you, and appreciate the effort all of you made to come to the show. We saw readers from as far away as Maine, Michigan, New York, California, Idaho, Nevada, and other states that came for the show and to visit with us!

We also met lots of new people and reconnected with dear, old friends like Cathy O'Brien & Mark Phillips, Len Horowitz (thanks for the gas, Len!), David Icke, and others. It felt like a large family reunion!

It is always a dilemma for me (Gail) as to whether or not to do these shows because of both the time & effort it takes, and The SPECTRUM's precarious financial situation. But, in asking for Guidance and taking that "leap of faith", doing some shows always turns out to be such a blessing—and sometimes even a tiny bit financially rewarding.

So, once again, thanks to all of you who helped make this show another memorable event for The SPECTRUM. And to all the rest of our dedicated readers, thank you for all of your love and constant support.

— Love and Blessings, Gail and Rick

P.S. Around the second week in May, one of you dear subscribers sent in a photocopy of a SPECTRUM ad for renewal of your subscription. You wrote: "ck #3172" on it and highlighted the "$45.00 for 12 issues" choice. But there was no name on it and I failed to look at the envelope for a name. If you recognize this, please call me so that I can take care of your renewal! I apologize for my oversight and for any inconvenience to you. Thanks, Gail

The journey of which I speak is full of unknowable challenges, but I believe that all our yesterdays, all the struggles of the past, have uniquely prepared our generation to prevail.

Citizens of this Earth, we are not alone. God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to populate His universe with other beings—intelligent creatures such as ourselves.

How can I state this with such authority? In the year 1947 our military forces recovered from the dry New Mexico desert the remains of an aircraft of unknown origin. Science soon determined that this vehicle came from the far reaches of outer space. Since that time our government has made contact with the creators of that spacecraft.

Though this news may sound fantastic—and indeed, terrifying—I ask that you not greet it with undue fear or pessimism. I assure you, as your President, that these beings mean us no harm.

Rather, they promise to help our nation overcome the common enemies of all mankind—tyranny, poverty, disease, war.

We have determined that they are not foes, but friends.

Together with them we can create a better world. I cannot tell you that there will be no stumblings or missteps on the road ahead.

But I believe that we have found the true destiny of the people of this great land: To lead the world into a glorious future.

In the coming days, weeks, and months, you will learn more about these visitors, why they are here, and why our leaders have kept their presence a secret from you for so long.

I ask you to look to the future, not with timidity but with courage. Because we can achieve in our time the ancient vision of peace on Earth and prosperity for all humankind.

God bless you. [End quoting]

For many years there has been a “rumor” circulating from very reliable sources which asserted that JFK was eliminated because of a three-item agenda he was about to fulfill:

Item One was to stop the Vietnam War—which included stopping our government’s involvement in the drug business, especially in the “Golden Triangle” that involved Vietnam, and dissolving the CIA that was heavily involved in that drug business to fund covert operations which permitted circumventing presidential and congressional controls.

Item Two was to return our nation’s monetary system to the U.S. Treasury and take it away from the foreign-bankster-owned, private business enterprise called the Federal Reserve—which had been bleeding the country of wealth and resources since its sneaky beginnings during the Christmas holidays of 1913.

Item Three was to inform the public that we were not alone in the universe and the government had known about this for a long time but had kept it a secret.

Any one of these agenda items was enough to have one faction or another of the crooks in high places eliminate JFK. It would appear that Professor Merrick has, in his possession, some conclusive evidence to support at least one of the above three agenda items. Perhaps other materials will yet surface to support the other two.

U.N. THREAT TO OUR BASIC RIGHTS UNDER THE CONSTITUTION

From the INTERNET,
<Marlene32@email.msn.com>, 5/30/01:
[quoting]

Dear Friend:

You need to know how dangerously close the U.N. is to threatening our basic rights and liberties as Americans. You know of the scandals, impeachment, and national security failures of Bill Clinton—and the shameful pardons he issued. But there is a ticking “time bomb” of the Clinton “legacy” you may have never heard of—even though it could demolish the foundation of freedom if we take no action.

That “time bomb” is the United Nations International Criminal Court Treaty. In 1998, delegates from 160 countries met in Rome to plan an International Criminal Court (ICC).

This court:

- would not allow trial by jury. All cases are heard and verdicts rendered by a panel of judges. Americans could be tried by judges from China, Libya, Iran, or anywhere else hostile to our citizens and values;

- would not allow the accused to confront their accusers;

- would let persons being tried be held in prison indefinitely, because no bail may be set;

- would send convicted persons to serve their prison time in any country it chose. Americans could be sentenced to jail time in Cuba, Cambodia, Rwanda, or wherever!

- is run by judges and prosecutors who are answerable to no one! No appeal of the judges’ verdict is possible!

A perfect example of how such a court will destroy fundamental rights occurred when the European Union fired a British economist for writing an article that criticized its plans for one European currency. When the economist appealed to the European Court of Justice, that court ruled that the European Union could lawfully suppress political criticism of itself and its leading figures, and punish people who “damaged the institution’s image”.

Bill Clinton signed-on to the ICC treaty in the closing days of his administration. And even though the U.S. Senate has refused (so far) to consider approving it, the U.N. has announced it will begin implementing the treaty as soon as it has 60 signatures in favor of it—including the signature of Clinton himself.

We need to WIPE OUT any U.S. participation in this tyrannical treaty. Please join us in a three-pronged effort.

1: Go to the Internet website <www.conservativepetitions.com> to send a petition sponsored by Alan Keyes to President Bush, calling on him to repudiate this treaty NOW so this “time bomb” doesn’t blow up in our faces.

2: Email Congressman Ron Paul directly, letting him know you are behind his effort to introduce a resolution in Congress opposing the International Criminal Court and calling on the President to repudiate it. We’ll email you the address for this, along with a statement of support that you can just copy, paste, and forward to Ron Paul, as soon as you sign the petition to the President.

3: Please forward this message to everyone you know! It is imperative you help spread it wide and far so as much pressure is put on the President as possible to repudiate this horrendous “treaty”.

Thank you for acting promptly. — Phil Sheldon <www.conservativepetitions.com>

P.S. You can support Alan Keyes’ efforts in this and other areas by going to the Declaration Foundation Internet website <http://www.declaration.net/contribute.asp>.

[End quoting]

THIS IS A VERY SERIOUS MATTER AND WE SHOULD PUT A STOP TO THIS—NOW!

My personal opinion is Alan Keyes should not be supported in all of his endeavors—like any other situation “pick and choose” the ones you agree with.

SHOULD ANTIPSYCHOTIC DRUGS BE GIVEN TO CHILDREN?

From the INTERNET, CBS Evening News,
5/18/01: [quoting]

<http://www.cbshealthwatch.com/cx/viewarticle/402013>

In tonight’s Eye On America, CBS News begins a hard-news investigation into the use of new and powerful antipsychotic prescription drugs for problem children.

One problem with using such drugs is possible severe side effects in these children that could last a lifetime. CBS’s Wyatt Andrews has been investigating the risks and benefits.

Ronnie Hall, who turns 10 this week, is struggling to look normal, but watch carefully what he does with his hands. Involuntarily, Ronnie clenches his fingers and thumbs. His constant state of twitching is a form of brain damage called tardive dyskinesia.

His mother, Carole, recorded Ronnie’s affliction on this home video. She and Ronnie’s doctor believe the cause is a cocktail of antipsychotic drugs Ronnie began taking at age 3 after a diagnosis of conduct disorder.

The problem is, the labels on these drugs, the most popular of which is called Risperdal, specifically warn that tardive dyskinesia is a possible side effect in one-out-of-six adult patients. For children, safety and effectiveness have not been established at all.

"They need to do more testing with these drugs" says Carole Hall.

It turns out tardive dyskinesia is just one of many well-known side effects of antipsychotic drugs. Child advocate and Miami law professor Carolyn Salisbury has seen them all.

"I had a male client, a 16-year-old boy, who—his breasts began growing large and he began lactating [producing milk]" says Salisbury. "He was humiliated."

Risperdal is part of a class of drugs called atypical antipsychotics, which are known for having relatively few side effects in mentally ill adults. Now, however, these drugs are increasingly prescribed for children despite Food and Drug Administration warnings that their safety is unknown. Advocates like Carolyn Salibury say the problem is especially bad in state-run programs like foster care.

"The number of foster-care kids on these drugs is horrifying" says Salisbury.

Florida officials—who admit they do not know the number of kids on strong psychotropics—say drugs like Risperdal are necessary. Charles Auslander of the Department of Children and Families says Risperdal can allow a mentally ill or violent child to function normally.

"Without the use of these medications, there would not be the opportunity for other treatments or other interventions to be utilized" says Auslander.

The maker of Risperdal, Johnson & Johnson, declined an on-camera interview, but has told child advocates it does not promote Risperdal for use in children. [End quoting]

Do you suspect we may have a "little" problem concerning the drugging of our children? Why such an attack? Could it be to prevent the blossoming of some very talented young people coming into this planet at this critical time in its evolvment? We have covered this topic many times in the pages of this newspaper. (See page 37 ad, too.)

To begin to arrive at some insights into this shocking situation, and for some of the astonishing answers, at least go back to our March 2000 front-page feature on the "Indigo Children" as well as our July 2000 front-page feature titled: "The Ticking Time-Bomb—PROZAC—Prescription For Disaster" and our October 2000 article: "Stop Ritalin! 2.5 Million Children Across The Nation Are Being Given 'Cocaine' By Their Parents And Doctors".

Of course there are alternative methods of treatment that do not have poisonous side effects. Ask for Guidance and keep your intuition open for the answers. The children today have enough challenges without having to overcome the "legal" drugging of their bodies.

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.alternativescience.com>>, 5/16/01: [quoting]

In 1991, science journalist Forrest Mims was asked by Scientific American to take over its most popular column, "The Amateur Scientist".

Mims says: "During the course of a meeting with Jonathan Piel, the editor, in New York, I happened to mention that I write for a variety of magazines, including Christian magazines. Piel then asked what kind of Christian magazines. I stated I had written a few articles on how to take church kids on long-distance bicycle trips.

Piel, obviously agitated, then asked: "Do you believe in Darwinian evolution?" Knowing the consequences, I responded: "No, and neither does Stephen Jay Gould."

A few months later, Piel cancelled Mims's assignment to write the column, because he feared the magazine would be embarrassed should Mims's beliefs become known.

"I did publish three columns in the magazine" says Mims, "but only after the magazine's president intervened. I did not sue the magazine. Their lawyers did, however, send me various threatening communications in an effort to keep me from speaking out on the matter."

Scientific American now has a new editor and things are looking brighter for Mims. The magazine has published two of his letters, and Mims has been invited to make further submissions, although he no longer writes "The Amateur Scientist" column.

Mims also wrote a letter of complaint to the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The Association's committee which considers human rights abuses accepted his letter of complaint and voted 16-0 to endorse Mims's right to hold his own religious views.

Mims told me: "Good science requires skepticism. Many of us who are skeptical of Darwinism are concerned that philosophical agendas have interfered with and even blocked solid science." [End quoting]

This is a good snapshot of how carefully and thoroughly regular print and broadcast media outlets are controlled from well behind the scenes. Keeping one's job and keeping the paycheck are enough incentive for most to march to whatever beat they've been told to follow. High up the ladder, where the salaries are high and a "slip" would be more costly, the same control mechanisms prevail even more effectively, as such "bosses" are themselves controlled from well behind the scenes.

DOLLARIZATION DELAY

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/21/01: [quoting]

In a setback for the Bilderberg plan to create an "American Union" in the Western Hemisphere, Guatemala was forced to delay, if not abandon, its adoption of the U.S. dollar.

The dollar is to become the common currency of the American Union, like the European Union's euro, according to Kenneth Clarke, a member of the British Parliament, former chancellor of the exchequer, and Bilderberg stalwart.

Guatemala was to become the fourth Latin American country to adopt the dollar on May 1, when a law was to take effect forcing the people to demand paychecks in dollars, open bank accounts in dollars, and settle bills using any foreign currency. But Guatemala's highest court delayed implementation of the law after unions representing physicians, teachers, and others charged it is unconstitutional.

Other Latin American countries embracing the dollar are El Salvador, Ecuador, and Panama. The Federal Reserve would like to dollarize the whole world because it could then issue trillions of dollars at interest. [End quoting]

It would seem there are more aware people in some of these so-called "backward" nations than in the United States. They understand the shenanigans of the New World Order and its Federal Reserve con game a lot better than the citizens of the country in which the Federal Reserve maintains its central stranglehold, a nation in which there is precious little understanding of the bogus nature of this privately owned business enterprise marketed to resemble a division of the federal government. Remember the earlier News Desk item about the JFK assassination. And be sure to read the classic research volume by Eustace Mullins called The Secrets Of The Federal Reserve for the true story behind this longtime con game.

NOW CUT FLOWERS CARRY A HOSPITAL HEALTH WARNING

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 5/1/01: [quoting]

They are the traditional gift brought to sick people—as synonymous with illness as the lingering smell of disinfectant and hospital food.

But now a hospital has asked visitors to limit the number of flowers they bring their bedridden friends and relatives—or, better still, bring chocolate and pot plants—for fear they pose a health risk.

The Royal Shrewsbury hospital, in Shropshire, took the decision last week after its infection control unit advised doctors that patients who had open wounds, or had just had surgery, were in danger of catching infections from bugs in the flowers' water.

A bacterium called pseudomonas develops in the water when vegetation rots, thrives when the temperature rises, and can cause patients' wounds to produce a bluish-green pus.

The hospital realised that last week's hot weather was causing the water to become infected.

Last night a hospital spokesman said visitors had not been banned from bringing flowers, but admitted they might be sent away with them if the surgical ward still boasted high numbers of bunches.

Laminated signs have been put up asking visitors to limit flowers and encouraging them to offer alternatives, such as chocolate, pot plants, and fruit.

"We all love flowers and we're not imposing an outright ban on the surgical wards" the spokesman said. "But we're acutely aware of the risk of infection. We have infection control and we want people to get better from their surgery quickly and leave here."

He said that the policy would probably not continue now that the hot weather appeared to have ended and that the move had been viewed sympathetically.

Although the Department of Health has no guidelines banning flowers, it is standard practice for them to be barred from intensive care units and haematology departments. [End quoting]

The florists are really going to love this one! There have been many reports in recent months about rampant infections plaguing European, and especially English, hospitals—that's what's behind the "bug police" becoming so paranoid as to even accuse flowers. The next step will be "no visitors" since they are surely sources of many contaminants! Of course, no one wants to look into budget cutbacks of the cleaning staff or nursing staff—that would be too logical.

AMERICA — 2001 "HOME OF THE BLAME"

From the INTERNET, <illusions@beyond-the-illusion.com>, 5/22/01: [quoting]

Let's see if I understand the state of personal responsibility in America in the last 20 years:

If a woman burns her thighs on the hot coffee she was holding in her lap while driving, she blames the restaurant.

If your teen-age son kills himself, you blame the rock 'n' roll musician he liked.

If you smoke three packs a day for 40 years and die of lung cancer, your family blames the tobacco company.

If your daughter gets pregnant by the football captain, you blame the school for poor sex education.

If your neighbor crashes into a tree while driving home drunk, you blame the bartender.

If your cousin gets AIDS because the needle he used to shoot heroin was dirty, you blame the government for not providing clean ones.

If your grandchildren are brats without manners, you blame television.

If your friend is shot by a deranged madman, you blame the gun manufacturer.

And, if a crazed person breaks into the cockpit and tries to kill the pilot at 35,000 feet, and the passengers kill him instead, the mother of the deceased blames the airline.

God bless America, land of the free, home of the blame. [End quoting]

The hidden motivator behind most all of these shenanigans is an "ambulance chasing" lawyer or attorney who sees deep pockets ($$$) somewhere on the horizon. Such is the sorry state of our litigious society lubricated by a population glut in the legal profession.

However, there are still many good people, everywhere, who mostly don't make the news yet would do and give anything to help others in a time of need. We must always remember that fact when we come across these kinds of reports. They are true—sadly, all too true—but they are NOT the way things HAVE to be!

TOO HOT TO HANDLE

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.alternativescience.com>>, 5/18/01: [quoting]

In April 1993, the defence magazine Jane's International Defence Review announced the discovery by a British amateur inventor, Maurice Ward, of a thin plastic coating able to withstand temperatures of 2,700 degrees Centigrade.

The reason why it was a defence magazine who first published news of this revolutionary invention is that the coating is so resistant to heat that it can make tanks, ships, and aircraft impervious to the effects of nuclear weapons at quite close range—and hence is of great interest to the military mind.

A little later that year the whole nation had an opportunity to see for themselves the effectiveness of Maurice Ward's new paint on BBC Television when it was featured on Tomorrow's World. Presenter Michael Rodd showed viewers an ordinary chicken's egg that had been painted with the new coating. The paint was so thin it was not visible. Rodd then dramatically donned welder's visor and gauntlets, lit up an oxyacetylene torch, and played the flame directly onto the egg for several minutes.

When he removed the flame, and cracked the egg on the table top, viewers were able to see that the coating was so heat resistant that the egg was still raw and had not even begun to cook.

This invention, a simple paint that can render anything impervious to very high temperatures, has been the holy grail of chemical research for more than fifty years. Teams of scientists in the world's greatest industrial and defence laboratories have poured billions of pounds and hundreds of man-years into the search for such a substance—a quest which made Ward's discovery even more extraordinary.

Ward's invention is remarkable enough, but the story of how he came to make it, and the resistance he encountered in getting anyone to believe him, is even more remarkable.

Maurice Ward comes from Blackburn and has no professional scientific background. The closest he has come to the chemical industry was when, as a young man, he drove a fork lift truck in the warehouse of ICI. For the past two decades, he has earned a living as a ladies' hairdresser.

Part of his income was derived from selling his customers hair preparations such as shampoo, conditioner, and hairspray. To maximise his income, he rented a small workshop, bought standard chemicals, and mixed and bottled his own brand of hair products.

In the best traditions of Ealing Comedy, it was when playing around mixing up chemicals in his "skunk works" that Ward stumbled on the formula that had eluded the finest minds in chemical research.

Realising at once the value of his invention, Ward wrote to Britain's major chemical companies, offering to demonstrate his material to them. Every one sent him the standard brush-off letter they send to cranks and crackpots. After the Tomorrow's World demonstration, Ward stopped getting the brush-off and starting getting offers instead.

One consequence of his contacts with chemical companies was that the head of research of ICI's paint laboratory left the firm and went into partnership with Ward to exploit the discovery commercially.

One other interesting consequence is that the large corporations who had rejected his initial approaches in such a knee-jerk fashion, conducted internal inquests to find out what had gone wrong, both with their own research and with their dealings with the outside world.

On the face of it, it was perfectly understandable that Ward's claims should be ignored since he was merely an amateur, with no scientific training and no track record in research.

ICI's own paints laboratory held an internal audit, and what they found puts this claim in an entirely different light. For the audit showed that the most scientifically qualified of its research chemists had contributed to the least number of patents, and the fewer scientific qualifications the staff member possessed, the greater the number of patents they had contributed to. In the most striking case of all, the person who had contributed to most ICI's patents had no scientific qualifications at all.

IT SEEMS THAT MAURICE WARD'S GREATEST STRENGTH AS A RESEARCHER WAS THAT HE HAD NOT BEEN TAUGHT HOW TO THINK.

In the light of examples such as this, the phrase "Alternative Science" seems less a contradiction in terms and more a harbinger of something that professional science is likely to see more and more of in the future. [End quoting]

How's that for a stunning commentary on the importance of so-called "higher" education as a measure of contributing to success? Some of the best discoveries and inventions evolved under these same circumstances. So much so that some have been "confiscated" by those who don't want the public to have access to such as high-gas-mileage carburetors, free energy devices, healing machines like the Rife microscope—the list goes on and on.

HOME HEATING

From POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, June 2001: [quoting]

Your furnace needs electricity to run its fans and fuel pumps, which raises the cost of heating your home. And if the lights go out during a winter storm, say, so does your heat. But soon, your furnace could generate its own electricity and may even have juice to spare. So if a blizzard knocks out your power, you'll stay warm and the food in your refrigerator cold.

The promise grows out of a new use for thermophotovoltaic (TPV) technology. Like solar cells, these cells convert the energy of photons to electricity. But while silicon solar cells react to visible sunlight and produce only milliwatts of power per square centimeter, innovative gallium antimonide TPV cells are tuned to infrared energy. Placed near a furnace burner, these cells generate as much as 5 watts per square centimeter. Already, the $2,500 Midnight Sun gas-fired heating stove from JX Crystals in Issaquah, Washington, generates 100 watts of 12- or 24-volt power to run its own fan and charge its storage batteries—all while making enough heat for a small cabin.

And bigger equipment is on the way: JX spokesman Jason Keyes says projects on the drawing board may soon result in a home furnace that heats a two-to three-bedroom home and provides 3 kilowatts of power—1 kilowatt for the furnace, and another 2 of surplus current. That's enough to power your home at most times of the day, and to occasionally put excess juice back into the grid. — Ted Cushman [End quoting]

Let's hope these electricity-generating furnaces aren't priced beyond the reach of the average homeowner as they could really shift the demand for electric power away from the "collapsing" utility grids. It is possible these furnaces may consume a bit more natural gas or heating oil than a furnace designed just to heat with. But if their overall efficiency is higher again from today's models, then in a very practical way it would be like getting something (the extra electricity) for nothing!

HINDUS PROTEST McDONALD'S FRIES

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 5/5/01: [quoting]

NEW DELHI, India—Hindu activists charged into a McDonald's restaurant in a Bombay suburb Friday, smashing furniture and lights to protest the use of beef flavoring in the chain's french fries in the United States.

Restaurant customers fled as members of the Bajrang Dal raided the restaurant in Thane, but there were no reports of injuries, police said. In southern Bombay, another McDonald's was surrounded by demonstrators from the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party, who shouted slogans and smeared cow dung.

McDonald's says it does not use any animal extracts in its french fries in India, where the cow is considered sacred by most Hindus. But it confirmed it uses some beef flavoring, though not beef fat, in its American fries.

The Shiv Sena, another Hindu group, said it would protest outside the corporate office of McDonald's in India today.

The protests were touched off by front-page newspaper reports about a lawsuit filed in Seattle on Tuesday.

An Indian-American lawyer accused McDonald's of using beef fat in the preparation of french fries more than a decade after it said it would cook its fries in vegetable oil.

Most of India's Hindus—85 percent of the population—are vegetarians, although with urbanization more Indians are becoming meat eaters.

McDonald's Corp. in the United States announced in 1990 that its restaurants would no longer use beef fat in making french fries and that only pure vegetable oil would be used.

The fast-food chain released a statement Wednesday, saying it never claimed that the fries

U.S. LOSES SEAT ON DRUG BOARD

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 5/8/01: [quoting]

UNITED NATIONS—In another embarrassing blow, the United States lost its seat on an international drug monitoring body on the same day it was voted off the U.N. Human Rights Commission, U.S. officials confirmed Monday. The United States had campaigned for a third term for American representative Herbert Okun, who has served as vice president on the International Narcotics Control Board. [End quoting]

Perhaps this has something to do with our own United States government's covert running of one of the largest drug operations worldwide—in conjunction with the Queen of England. Others probably would like to have entry into this exclusive club.

SINGAPORE DEVELOPS NEW PROTON BEAM

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 5/28/01: [quoting]

High-tech manufacturers may soon be able to use proton beams to chisel out minuscule components and circuits thanks to pioneering research from a Singapore institute.

The proton beam is a stream of speeded-up sub-atomic particles which scientists have been trying to narrow down for practical use over the last 25 years.

The National University of Singapore Research Center for Nuclear Microscopy, which officially opened this week, currently holds the record for the narrowest proton beam—which measures just 1,000th of the diameter of a human hair.

“The proton beam as it goes through material will cause a rearrangement of the electronic structure of the atom” Professor Frank Watt, the center's director and a former Oxford University researcher who was instrumental in developing the beam, told Reuters Friday.

“The rearrangement of the atoms causes damage which we can actually then use...for micro-machining” he said.

The center, which is a culmination of eight years of Watt's work in Singapore, is patenting its proton-beam micro-machining processes.

Proton beams, which are used in ultra-sensitive microscopes and in experimental cancer therapy, have never been used for micro-machining before. The center will set up the world's first proton beam micro-machining facility in about two months.

“What we're doing is ‘writing’ in resistant materials and making very, very tiny three-dimensional channels and structures” Watt said.

Proton beams are well suited to micro-machining and offer very precise incisions as its particles maintain a straight line even after hitting a surface, unlike electrons which scatter.

Watt said the center is also working on using the proton beam to create micro-fiber optical switches, which will be a boon to the telecommunications industry. [End quoting]

It is curious that countries like Singapore, not known as centers of high-tech pursuits, are giving well-known high technology locations a run for their money. Perhaps industries such as these will help the economies of such countries to the extent they can avoid getting pulled into International Monetary Fund-types of New World Order control and coercion.

GIRL PITCHER, 8, GETS THE BOYS SWINGING

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, by Vincent Bonsignore, 5/8/01: [quoting]

SHERMAN OAKS, CA—Marti Sementelli winds up and fires the baseball toward home plate with all the strength in her 3-foot-10, 45-pound body.

Strike one, Strike two, Strike three.

Another whiff chalked up to the 8-year-old pitching pride of Sherman Oaks Little League's Triple-A Braves, a girl who can throw a hardball so wickedly fast or tantalizingly slow that she rarely gives up a hit or even a ball hit fair—and most of the players are boys a lot older and bigger than she is.

Last year she finished the season 11-1 with 110 strikeouts in 43 innings. This year she is 7-0 with 94 strikeouts in 38 innings.

“Sometimes you'll hear some of the other guys from different teams say something about her being a girl, but she's so good they can't say much” said her teammate, shortstop Matt Lathuras, 8. “Everyone's pretty much used to her being great.”

“All I know is I'm glad she's on my team.

Statistics weren't on Marti's mind Saturday. The pint-size phenom was more concerned with how a notoriously tough umpire was calling pitches.

“I was actually a little surprised” Marti said. “This umpire usually doesn't call many strikes. I thought I'd have to get them swinging.”

Just then Braves manager Gary Sementelli, who also happens to be Marti's father, smiled and shook his head. Sementelli didn't say anything, but he didn't need to. His face told everything.

Standing outside the dugout, parent Richard Hersh spoke for everyone.

“She's awesome, isn't she?” Hersh said. “Just awesome.”

It's hard to believe so much throwing power can be wrapped up in such a small body, but somehow, some way Marti, short for Martina, gets all of herself into her pitches, making batters look silly with fastballs that dart and break, a change-up that buckles batters' knees, and near perfect control.

“She's just a little itty bitty thing, but she can throw hard” Gary Sementelli said.

A former high school and American Legion baseball player, Sementelli knew talent when he saw his daughter throw with a natural, fluid rhythm by the time she was 4.

“I'd hit her fly balls to the outfield and on her throws back to me you could see the power and the arm motion” Sementelli said. “That's when I first started thinking maybe she had something to work with.”

So the dad tried an experiment, letting Marti throw the ball every day, hoping to build strength. The two of them would spend countless hours, day after day, playing catch. It's a ritual that continues today.

“That's what the (Atlanta) Braves do with their pitchers; even during the season the pitchers throw on off days” Sementelli said. “If it works for the Braves, I figured it could work for her.”

Marti is a baseball fanatic who loves to play the sport more than anything right now.

“This is fun” she said, pulling her cap over her head as she prepared to go pitch. “I like striking people out. That's the fun part.”

Her father taught her proper technique and the art of putting the ball where the catcher calls for it.

The result is nothing short of amazing. Marti spots all five of her pitches with accuracy, and changes speeds to keep batters off balance.

She even throws a cut fastball like the pros, one that tails off at the end, and it's a good one.

“But I like throwing the change-up the most” Marti said. “I like to fool batters.

In the stands, the fans are getting a kick out of watching Marti. When she struck out a batter to end the fourth inning, getting him to look at a change-up that barely crawled over the plate at the last possible second, there was whooping and hollering.

"The girl knows how to pitch" said Braves assistant coach Jack Lathurns. "I mean, did you see the change-up she threw to strike that last batter out? That's a great pitch."

Marti is a good hitter as well, batting .550. And baseball's not all. She averaged 25 points per game last year in a boys' basketball league.

People have tried to sway her to girls' softball, but at this point it's not even a consideration.

"I want to play baseball all the way until I'm grown up" she said.

Spoken like a true ballplayer. [End quoting]

What we are seeing today is, from one way of thinking, absolute miracles, but from another level it is that we are seeing young ones who know (and are teaching us) that there is nothing we can't do if we focus and put forth the necessary effort. (See page 37 ad, too.)

The awesome talents of those coming into the planet at this time are frightening to the crooks in high places who are struggling to maintain their control of the planetary populace. This little dynamo is just one example of why there is such a strong agenda to drug the children—through any route and excuse that can be made to appear legal—such as was mentioned in an earlier item in this News Desk.

SOUND YOU CAN SEE

From POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, June 2001: [quoting]

Imagine racing downhill on a mountain bike on a road littered with tiny obstacles, things you have to avoid or you'll crash. Oh, and you're blind too.

Sound like an impossible task? It may not be for long. A new perception device invented by Leslie Kay of Sonic Vision, based in Canterbury, New Zealand, is helping the blind "see" with their ears, the same way bats and whales do. The headband-like device, named Kaspas (for Kay's advanced spatial perception aid), relies on a new technology called "sonocular perception", or seeing with sound. When worn on a person's head, the device sends out sound waves and times the echoes produced when the waves bounce off objects. That information is instantly turned into stereo tones the wearer can hear—the farther the object, the higher the pitch.

"Zero distance equals zero pitch," says Dan Kish, executive director of the Los Angeles-based advocacy group World Access for the Blind, who took Kaspas out for a test run. "I was able to ride a bike down a megasteep hill into the wind, without a hitch," explains Kish, who is also blind. Sonic Vision says Kaspas takes practice, but users catch on fast. It is now working on scaling down the size of the device, while increasing its range, and hopes to have it in production by next year. — Kelli Miller [End quoting]

This device could be of tremendous help for increasing the mobility of the blind. And since blind people usually have acute auditory perception, this device, in taking advantage of that asset, ought to be a genuine success.

TURBOCHARGING GIVE ME TURBO...NOW!

From POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, June 2001: [quoting]

A motor gives a new turbocharger the shot it needs to beat turbo lag.

Think of a turbocharger as a pin-wheel that extracts energy from the exhaust gas of a car's engine. It uses this "wasted" energy to pump additional air into the engine, which boosts horsepower.

It also makes more power with a smaller displacement, which means the engine is comparatively fuel-efficient. This phenomenon has encouraged automakers, most notably Saab, to develop turbos even in midpriced sedans. A chronic problem has been the lag effect—the lack of power until the turbo spins up to speed, which usually happens a few seconds after you press the accelerator pedal.

The latest cure for lag comes from Garret Engine Boosting Systems of Torrance, California, which has introduced a small electric motor on the turbo drive-shaft of its Dynacharger system. The motor can quickly spin the turbo up to speed even before the engine begins to accelerate. A secondary benefit: The motor, powered by the exhaust stream, can make electricity to power itself and, say, to recharge a hybrid drive system.

Several automakers are looking at the system, which could hit the road by 2003.

Though not nearly as annoying as the 100-miles-to-the-gallon carburetor, this is yet another device the big oil companies would probably like to keep subdued as they "enjoy" record profits at our expense.

TELL NO LIES

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/14/01: [quoting]

The FBI recently announced that after the high-profile arrest of Robert Hanssen, the FBI agent accused of being a Russian double agent, it was expanding stops to polygraph all high-level employees, reports the Washington Post.

FBI Director Louis J. Freeh told the press that he, along with 500 agents with access to intelligence information, would undergo a lie detector test designed to root out spies. The Post reported that Hanssen, in his 25 years with the FBI's counterintelligence division, never took a polygraph test. [End quoting]

Perhaps it would have been an interesting and revealing experiment to conduct FBI Director Freeh's polygraph test during his recent interrogation on Capitol Hill concerning how the FBI could possibly have misplaced over 5000 pages of documents related to Timothy McVeigh and the Oklahoma City "bombing" case!

PASS IT ON PEOPLE HELPING PEOPLE GARAGE TUTORING

From GUIDEPOSTS, Jan. 2000, P.O. Box 1479, Carmel, NY 10512: [quoting]

Through the La Habra, California, of my girlhood was little more than a sprawling migrant camp, it was a close-knit community where people looked out for one another. A great place to raise a family, my husband, Alex, and I thought, so we moved back there with our young son in 1990.

To my shock, La Habra had turned into a town where gangs of kids roamed the streets making trouble.

"Looks like those kids don't have anywhere to go when school's out" my husband said one day.

"Well, maybe we can do something about that" I replied. With a folding table and a few chairs, Alex and I converted our garage into a makeshift classroom. Then we passed flyers out around the neighborhood, saying that we were available to tutor for a few hours every day after school.

In September 1991, Rosie's Garage opened its doors. Kids came in droves both to learn and to hang out in a safe place. Whenever a new student wanted to join, we asked their parents to help at the Garage, tutoring kids in subjects like English, math, and writing. Some parents found other ways to lend a hand, by providing snacks or setting up. The older students tutored the younger ones, and if there was no room left in the garage, kids spread out across our lawn to do their homework.

These days, we have three additional tutoring sites with books, desks, and computers. Things in La Habra have really changed. Crime has gone down, student performance has risen dramatically, and my town is a lot more like the community I remember from my girlhood. How did it happen? I think a lot of citizens decided that we had to band together to help. —Rose Espinoza, La Habra, California [End quoting]

When people put their minds to a task of helping others, it's amazing what the results can be. There is plenty of Unseen Help, which leads to this last astonishing item:

HIS MYSTERIOUS WAYS MORE THAN COINCIDENCE

From GUIDEPOSTS, Jan. 2000, P.O. Box 1479, Carmel, NY 10512: [quoting]

[Guideposts is an inter-faith, “positive thinking” ministry with a prayer group that meets every Monday morning at 9:45 a.m. Send requests to: Guideposts Associates, Ginger Vandemeer, Prayer Fellowship, 39 Seminary Hill Road, Carmel, NY 10512, or call 1-800-431-2344 and ask for Ginger.]

My husband, Rich, who'd been adopted as a baby, always brushed aside questions about whether he'd like to find his birth parents, saying: “If they didn't want me then, it's too late now.” Still I knew that his stoic surface hid a deep ache. One night I noticed Rich crying at a TV movie about a father and son. I decided to track down his birth family so he might find some closure.

All I had to go on was the information on Rich's birth certificate: his birthdate, October 16, 1941; his mother's name, Ruth Hicks Casselman; and her place of birth, Waupaca County, Wisconsin. I wrote to the hospital, went through old phone directories, searched the Internet—but no luck.

The only place left to try was the National Archives in Washington, D.C. One day in November 1999 I went to check the census records there. But I learned that, by law, census information isn't released for 72 years. I was crushed. What good was such dated material?

I pulled the latest Waupaca census reel available—1920—from its file drawer. As I passed the first rows of microfilm readers, I overheard a man mention Wisconsin to the older woman with him. That's interesting, I thought, before going on to my reader.

There was a listing for Hicks—Ruth! Encouraged, I went back for the 1910 reel. Maybe I could get names of relatives to follow up on. The slot where the reel should have been was empty. Then I remembered the folks I had overheard.

I walked over and peeked at their screen. Ruth Hicks, Waupaca County, 1910! Amazed, I asked: “May I take a look when you're done? I'm trying to locate the family of Ruth Hicks....”

“Casselman?” the woman gasped. “She was my mother! Our family split up when I was little and I'm trying to find my baby brother. I've been looking for him for years.

Later that evening over dinner, the last chapter in the family history was finally closed. Shirley Casselman Garnett met her long-lost baby brother, my husband, Rich. —Jan Noble, Oakton, Virginia [End quoting]

Isn't it amazing, sometimes, how precise those “coincidences” can be?! We should strive to be more consciously appreciative of the Unseen Help always around us.

Learning To Allow For Your Growth

5/27/01 SOLTEC

Good afternoon, my friend. It is I, Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec, come in the Radiant One Light of Creator Source. Be still.

We of the Higher Realms often speak of ALLOWING events to unfold in their proper sequence. This is because, from the much broader perspective of the Higher Realms, we do not perceive the localized phenomenon of time in the same manner as is common in your conscious perception of physical reality. From our perspective, we see “energy signatures” that precede and precipitate the ever unfolding physical events which mold your sense of reality.

These preceding energy phenomena give us (consider “us” to be among your Spirit Guides or Angels, etc.) a great advantage in helping each and every one of you so that we may assist you in maximizing your potential for growth. From our broader perspective, it is possible, within certain bounds, to see into and, in a sense, predict the future, based upon statistical probability.

However, there is always the element of free-will choice on the part of each participant in the ever unfolding drama called physical life experience. Due to the nature of the free-will choice of each individual, multiplied by the number of individuals interacting in any given experience, there are an endless number of variables governing any situation—and therefore it is not possible to predict with 100% accuracy the exact outcome of any event.

Sometimes when a challenge (learning experience or testing experience) is encountered, the “long-shot” happens and thus great dynamic energy shifts occur. This would be the “miracle” event as perceived by the physical participants.

The term “miracle” is often used to describe events which defy explanation or understanding on the part of the ones perceiving extraordinary happenings. However, if you could view these events from the larger perspective of behind-the-scenes energies involved, such “miracles” would be quite explainable and understandable, for the energy surges and flows would all “add-up” to result in the observed physically manifested happening.

We, as your Guides, effort to assist you in your understanding of the physical “play of life” so that you can learn to more deliberately use your God-given abilities and talents, and thus, in essence, more consciously and purposefully exercise your ability to create. It is this limitless Creative Potential that resides at the heart of the God-self “spark of Light” within each of you.

We often witness you ones struggling with your perceptions of self and others in an attempt to understand how it is that you “fit-in” to the overall scheme of things. Keep in mind that you are each UNIQUE in your creative abilities—what it is that you “bring to the party” so to speak. Thus there is no need to struggle with discerning how exactly you “fit-in”, but rather, ALLOW your unique expression to naturally unfold.

Again and again we will say to you ones: “ALLOW for the unfolding of events to occur in their own natural way.” We say this in an effort to convey to you ones the wisdom of recognizing the natural flow of life, as it purposefully unfolds, AND matching this energy, from an internal emotional perspective (what you would call a positive attitude), so as to achieve a “frictionless” state of high-frequency alignment with the God-force Energy

When you resist the natural evolution of change, you become like the boulder in the swiftly moving stream that is constantly being pounded by the water in what seems to be a never ending struggle of the same repetitive hardships. When the lesson (usually a fear) that has created the unnatural desire to resist change is finally recognized and learned, then there will once again be noticeable movement in your life.

As you continue to grow, you will find that the process of recognizing that you are “stuck” will come quicker and quicker. You will begin to find that, with patience and diligent persistence, all challenges can be surmounted and you will be ALLOWING more of the God-force Energy to flow through you in your own unique and beautiful manner—so as to be in perfect harmony with the natural flow of Creator’s unique plan for you. In essence, you will be fulfilling your “purpose” and having a perfectly joyous experience.

Many ones at this time are struggling with the various challenges in their life as the Energy flow of the present planetary experience continues to increase. Especially hard hit are the ones who have allowed strong emotional “anchors” to be attached to past events that caused great pain. Often this will be the loss of a loved one, or other experiences of great emotional trauma. Or, less commonly, ones become chronically obsessed with having to be right all the time; the “pain” of error is unbearable, and therefore is not allowed. Such obsession leads to delusional shifts in reality as the person becomes the “chronic victim”. Note how, in one way or another, these are all conditions of resistance to change or resisting “going with the flow” predicated by that old stumbling block—fear.

In any case, once the anchor is “set” (usually this occurs as the individual tries to grapple with the strong emotional overwhelm, and thus almost always drops down in frequency into a state of disconnect from Source), the person is bound to have recurring experiences that are directly related to the erroneous belief that they need the anchor. Many ones struggle with anchors that stem back to early childhood, wherein the conscious reasoning abilities are much more limited, thus often leading to distorted conclusions (such as when children think they are the cause of their parents’ divorce). These are among the most difficult ones to work through due to their being so deeply buried or attached.

Now that the Energy coming into your planet has increased quite noticeably, even the smaller anchors are creating great internal pressures. Most ones who are susceptible to this sort of “stuckness” have several anchors holding them back and weighing them down.

These ones are often viewed as chronic complainers who tend to suck energy out of those with whom they come in contact. They see themselves as ones who “must struggle” in order to survive, and THEIR problems are “worse than everyone else’s”—as no one can seem to understand what they are going through.

These ones are basically good people who simply refuse to take responsibility for their own condition—and realize that THEY CREATE THEIR OWN STATE OF VICTIMHOOD.

The only thing that any of you in the physical can become a victim of is your own ignorance (lack of understanding). Once you reach out for greater understanding, and take personal responsibility for your own knowing, you will begin on a journey that will help you to recognize the Light (God-force Energy) that shines within you and that you were created in perfection and given free-will choice to express as you so choose.

Creator God, in giving to you free-will choice, ALLOWS you to choose a state of ignorance. But He also realizes that you will eventually get bored with this choice, and once again seek out the balance and harmony associated with knowing that you are connected within to and through His One Light. He does not fear that you will “get lost”, for there are many ones (Spirit Guides) eager and willing to assist you, no matter how far away you think you may have strayed.

We of the Higher Realms urge you to ALLOW your inner connection to Source to be recognized in the conscious state.

We urge you to ALLOW the experiences of life to teach you the lessons that they offer.

We urge you to ALLOW your past experiences of discomfort to stand as examples that you are quite capable of dealing with anything that may cross your path, and that there is truly nothing to fear that warrants the self punishment of re-living those unpleasant events.

We urge you to ALLOW newness to be a part of your experience each and every day, thus ALLOWING greater opportunity to see the Hand of God working with you and through you.

We urge you to ALLOW the Love that is in this message to be felt within your heart so that you may know that Creator knows your situation and He knows the challenges you face. He also knows the Perfection and Love in which you are created and the many choices you freely made that resulted in your current situation. Call upon Creator God (the One who created you) and open your heart so that you might “hear” the answers you seek.

Hearing with a closed-down or hardened heart may be quite difficult, but NOT impossible. Be persistent and ALLOW for the impressions to come.

All sincere calls for assistance are answered and, if you truly pay attention, there will be great “coincidences” that will give you recognition that you are not alone and that there is great Assistance and Love being sent your way. All ones can “hear” with the Heart if the communication is ALLOWED to be felt and interpreted.

Learn to use your own internal Guidance. Relying solely on others will, in the long term, prove to be unwise, as you would be neglecting a very important lesson to be learned FOR YOURSELF while still in the physical. Yes, there can be much gain from your interactions with those who either “happen” to cross your path or who you have sought out for help in one form or another. But—“outer” input must ALWAYS be balanced with “inner” input to walk the path of wisdom in a personally responsible manner.

The seeker of information such as this would be quite wise to question every word and go within and ask, honestly: “How does it make me feel?” The Truth you need will always resonate with a positive (soul-knowing) feeling within—even if difficult to accept or carry out. Indifference means that it is probably something you already know, but perhaps have not considered from some particular “angle” of perception.

A negative feeling should especially be looked at, for there is something that you should really effort to get to the bottom of—meaning you should try to trace back what exactly is “bothering” you, and acknowledge that there is really something there to look at and confront. Know that your Guides are probably trying to get your attention, possibly even efforting to warn you.

Again, YOU are responsible for YOUR choices—and the consequences of those choices. Learn to follow your own internal Guidance, for it is truly the best guidance for you. Others can be helpful but, when you rely too much on others for your guidance, there will always come a time when you will be caused to confront your dependency.

You each can and will learn to recognize and interpret your own internal Guidance (intuition). It is part of the “graduation” requirements from the repetition of the physical schoolroom.

I am Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec, come in the One Light of Creator God. Thank you for ALLOWING me the opportunity to express these concepts to you each. I do so out of Love and Compassion.

As you now walk in the physical, so too have I and the many other Guides and Wayshowers who present in this manner. We know your challenges and we stand ever ready to assist you.

May you always remember to keep the Light of Creator God around you, and especially within your Heart, at all times.

Blessings and Peace to you all! Salu.

The Isaiah Effect

master teacher could accomplish.

This is definitely a man with a singular mission at this critical time of the awakening of this planet. To understand more about his background, let's look at Gregg Braden's biography, which was cordially supplied by his Santa Fe, New Mexico office.

[Quoting:]

Gregg Braden is a best selling author, and guide to sacred sites throughout the world, and has been a featured guest for conferences and media specials exploring personal and planetary change.

A former Earth scientist and senior aerospace computer systems designer (Phillips Petroleum, Martin Marietta Aerospace, Cisco Systems), Braden is now considered a leading authority on the spiritual philosophy of the ancient and indigenous traditions throughout the world. His travels into remote mountain villages, monasteries, and temples of times past afford him the opportunity to bridge ancient wisdom with modern science, bringing the benefit of long-lost traditions to the forefront of our lives today.

His inspiring sense of optimism is based in what he recognizes as the inner technologies of a wisdom lost to the West for over two millennia. Captivating audiences of all ages, Braden empowers our lives with a life-affirming message of hope through his remarkable synthesis of science and spirituality.

The solitude of Northern New Mexico's mountains and South Florida's coast serve as home and inspiration to Gregg and his wife, Melissa, between their travels. Additionally, as the timing and conditions allow, they lead journeys to sacred sites in Egypt, Bolivia, Peru, Tibet, and the American Desert Southwest.

Gregg Braden may be reached through his office: Sacred Spaces/Ancient Wisdom, P.O. Box 5182, Santa Fe, NM 87502; phone: (505) 424-6892; email: ssawbraden@aol.com; website: <http://www.greggbraden.net>.

And before we move along here, I would like to take just a moment to publicly thank Lori at Gregg's office for being so kind, professional, and instrumental in facilitating this connection on such a tight schedule. Some people are just a pleasure to work with.

In Gregg Braden's first book, Awakening To Zero Point: The Collective Initiation, he shares new scientific research essential to understanding the prophecies of the Essenes, Hopis, Mayans, Egyptians, and others. Hidden within these ancient teachings, asserts Braden, is a universal set of "sacred technologies" meant specifically for use now, at this critical juncture in our existence.

In his second book, Walking Between The Worlds—The Science Of Compassion, Braden draws from the teaching of the Essenes and explores fascinating evidence for a revolutionary shift in human biology, emotions, and consciousness.

And then, most recently, in his third book, The Isaiah Effect—Decoding The Lost Science Of Prayer And Prophecy, Braden brings home the message of empowerment in our daily lives through some very real, insightful instruction.

Before we embark on the two-hour conversation I had with Gregg Braden on May 23, 2001, let's take a look at a thought provoking article he wrote about his book The Isaiah Effect. Consider well the keys he points out to steering our destiny.

The Isaiah Effect: Lost Science Of A Forgotten People

[Excerpt from The Isaiah Effect: Decoding The Lost Science Of Prayer And Prophecy, ©2000 by Gregg Braden, reprinted with permission.]

Could there be a lost science that allows us to transcend the visions of war, disease and the greatest tragedies ever to face humankind?

Is it possible that somewhere in the mists of our ancient memory an event occurred that has left a gap in our understanding of how we relate to our world and one another?

Twenty-five-hundred-year-old texts, as well as modern science, suggest that the answer to these and similar questions is a resounding "yes!" Additionally, in the languages of their times, those who have come before us remind us of two empowering technologies with direct relevance to our lives today.

The first is the science of prophecy that allows us to witness future consequences of choices that we make in the present. The second is the sophisticated technology of prayer that allows us to choose which future prophecy we live.

The secrets to our lost sciences appear to have been shared openly by societies and traditions of our past. The last vestiges of this empowering wisdom were lost to Western traditions with the disappearance of rare texts referencing them in the fourth century. Through the eyes of modern science, recent translations of texts such as the Dead Sea

GREGG BRADEN

Scrolls, the Nag Hammadi Library, and Gnostic manuscripts discovered in Egypt have shed new light and opened the doors to possibilities hinted at in ancient folklore and fairy tales.

Only now, nearly two millennia after they were written, are we able to authenticate the power of a force that lives within us, a very real power with the ability to end suffering and bring a lasting peace to our world.

The visions of the Old Testament prophet Isaiah, for example, were recorded over five hundred years before the time of Christ. The only manuscript discovered intact among the Dead Sea Scrolls in 1946, the entire Isaiah scroll is unrolled and mounted upon a vertical cylinder displayed in Israel at the Shrine of the Book Museum in Jerusalem. Considered to be irreplaceable, the exhibit is designed to retract into a vault covered by steel doors to preserve the scroll for future generations in the event of nuclear attack.

The age, completeness, and written nature of the Isaiah Scroll provides a unique opportunity to consider it as representative of many prophecies regarding our time in history. Beyond the specifics of precise events, a generalized view of ancient predictions reveals threads of a common theme.

In each glimpse into our future, the prophecies follow a clear pattern: descriptions of catastrophe are immediately followed by a vision of life, joy, and possibility.

In the oldest known manuscript of its kind, Isaiah begins his vision of possible futures by detailing a time of global destruction occurring on an unparalleled scale. Clearly catastrophic in scope, Isaiah describes this ominous moment as a time when “the Earth is utterly laid waste, utterly stripped”.

Ironically, his glimpse into a time yet to come closely mirrors the descriptions of many other prophecies from varied and distinct traditions, including those of the Native North American Hopi, Navajo, and the Maya of Mexico and Guatemala.

In the verses that follow Isaiah’s description of devastation, however, his vision shifts dramatically to a theme of peace and healing. He writes that: “Streams will burst forth in the desert, and rivers in the steppe. The burning sands will become pools, and the thirsty ground, springs of water.” Additionally, Isaiah suggests that: “On that day the deaf shall hear the words of a book; and out of gloom and darkness the eyes of the blind shall see.”

For nearly twenty-five centuries, scholars have largely interpreted such visions as a description of events expected to occur in precisely the order as they are described in Isaiah’s scroll; FIRST the tribulation of destruction, THEN a time of peace and healing.

Is it possible that these visions from another time were saying something else? Could the insights of the prophets represent the skills of adept masters slipping between the worlds of possible futures and recording their experiences for future generations? If so, the details of their journeys may offer powerful clues to a time still to come.

Echoing the beliefs of twentieth century physicists, ancient prophets viewed time and the course of our history as a path that may be traveled in three directions: vertically, as well as reverse and forward. Seers of our past recognized that their visions merely portrayed possibilities for a given moment in time, rather than events that would occur with certainty. Each possibility was based upon the conditions at the time of prophecy. As conditions changed, the outcome of each prophecy would reflect the change.

The same line of reasoning reminds us that, by changing our course of action in the moment, sometimes in a very small way, we may redirect an entire outcome in our future. This principle applies to individual circumstances such as health and relationships, as well as the general well being of the world around us.

The science of prophecy could allow a visionary, in our example of war, for instance, to project their sight into a future time and alert the people of his or her day to the consequences of their actions. Many prophecies, in fact, are accompanied by emphatic pleas for change in an effort to avoid what the prophets have seen.

Modern scientists give careful consideration to such possibilities, creating names for the events themselves, as well as the places where the worlds are connected. Through the language of time waves, quantum outcomes, and choice points, prophecies such as those of Isaiah take on powerful new meanings.

Rather than being forecasts of events expected one day in our future, they are snapshots into the consequences of choices made in the present. Such descriptions often bring to mind the image of a great cosmic simulator, allowing us to witness the long-term effects of our actions.

Surprisingly similar to quantum principles, suggesting that time is a collection of malleable and diverse outcomes, Isaiah goes one step further reminding us that the possibilities of our future are actually determined by the collective choices in the present. By sharing a common choice, many individuals amplify the effect and accelerate the outcome.

Some of the clearest examples of this quantum principle are found in mass prayers of miracles—sudden jumps from one future outcome into the experience of another. In the early 1980s, the effects of a specific technique of prayer, focused in a specific manner were documented through controlled experiments in urban areas of crime. Through such studies, the localized effect of prayer has been well documented in the open literature. Do the same principles apply over larger areas, perhaps on a global scale?

On Friday, November 13, 1998, a mass prayer was implemented, on a worldwide basis, as a choice of peace during a time of escalating political tension in many parts of the world. Of specific interest that day was the expiration of a timeline given to the country of Iraq to comply with United Nations’ demands for weapons inspections. Following months of unsuccessful negotiations for access into sensitive sites, the nations of the West had made it clear that Iraq’s failure to comply would result in a massive and extended bombing campaign designed to damage suspected weapons sites. Such a maneuver would certainly result in the loss of life, civilian as well as military.

Linked through the miracle of a global community accessing the World Wide Web, several hundred thousand people chose peace as a specific mode of mass prayer, carefully synchronized to precise moments that evening. During the time of the prayer, an event occurred that many consider to be a miracle.

History books will show that thirty minutes into the aerial attack, the president of the United States issued a rare order to “stand down”—the military term to abort the mission. Having received a letter from Iraqi officials stating that they would now cooperate with the requested weapons inspections, the reason for the attack no longer existed.

The chances of such an event happening by coincidence in the same time-window as the global prayer are small. Confirming a tenet discovered in centuries-old texts, the evidence simply states that the choice of many people, focused in a specific manner, has a direct and measurable effect on our quality of life.

Appearing outwardly unexplained, quantum principles allow for such change as the inner force of collective or group choice. Perhaps encrypted in ancient traditions until the thinking of our day could recognize it, the lost science of prayer offers a course of action now to avoid experiencing predictions of sickness, destruction, war, and death for our future.

Our individual choices merge into our collective response to the present, with implications that range from a matter of days to many generations into our future. Now we have the language to bring this powerful message of hope and possibility into each moment of our lives.

Powerful tools, don’t you think? And for many, these are part of the awakening of deep knowing from the heart that has long been slumbering. It is truly an exciting time to be here on planet Earth!

Those of you readers familiar with the spiritual messages that are an integral part of this newspaper, and their collection together in the two (so far) WISDOM OF THE RAYS volumes of lessons from Master Teachers from the Higher Realms, will recognize great parallels with much of what Gregg recounts as principles from ancient texts as demonstrated through modern science. For instance, wait till you see what forefront science has recently been able to PROVE about the powerful importance of gratitude and appreciation, love and compassion.

The dark, so-called “elite” controllers of this planet KNOW ALL TOO WELL that their days are numbered and that they will quickly lose their grip as the “common” person grows in understanding and awakens to this vast Creative Potential Energy within, just waiting to be utilized. That is the main reason why they hid (and still hide) such ancient wisdom for their personal “secret” use and destroyed the rest, as Gregg gets into discussing early in this interview. With that tease, let’s turn now to a most intriguing conversation.

Martin: First of all I’d like to acknowledge your very busy international schedule, and I want to thank you publicly for taking the time to speak to our readers today. I know that it’s a real crunch for you, and I do appreciate it, deeply.

Braden: I’m just going to say it’s an honor, as well as a great opportunity. We are busy, our schedules are full, and I think it’s important to make time to communicate what our heart’s message is all about, and to find the venues, to search them out, and when they come to us, to acknowledge them. So, I’ll thank YOU for your vision and your work, and your courage to create this kind of publication, and to honor the speakers with the length of the articles and the depth that your articles carry. So I very much appreciate that about you as

Decoding The Lost Science Of Prayer And Prophecy

Quantum science suggests the existence of many possible futures for each moment of our lives. Each outcome lies in a state of rest, until it is awakened by choices made in the present. A two-thousand-year-old scroll written by the prophet Isaiah describes precisely such possibilities in a language that we are just beginning to understand. In addition to sharing his visions of our time, Isaiah describes the science of how we choose which future we experience. Each time we do so, we experience the Isaiah Effect.

Combining studies of quantum physics with the ancient texts of Isaiah, as well as Hopi, Mayan, and Egyptian traditions, Braden offers a compelling account of how modern scholars may have mistakenly interpreted the message of Isaiah's alternating tales of apocalypse, followed by times of peace. New research in quantum science leads Braden to view such accounts as snapshots into future possibilities, rather than forecasting events of certainty. Furthermore, Braden asserts, in addition to showing us consequences of choices made in the present, the texts remind us of how we may transcend our most frightening predictions of post-millennium chaos and suffering through a mode of prayer lost to the West nearly 2000 years ago.

In light of such evidence, what is the potential for applying our inner technologies of prayer and prophecy to an outcome of collective healing, global peace, and a graceful transition through the greatest challenges in recorded human history? The Isaiah Effect is a rare opportunity to recover our lost technology and bring a lasting end to war, disease, and suffering, initiate an unprecedented era of peace and cooperation between governments and nations, render destructive patterns of Nature harmless, and redefine ancient prophecies of destruction and catastrophic loss of life.

Martin: Thank you so much. People may be feeling out-of-sorts as this planetary transition, as we call it, or this planetary acceleration of increased energy and frequency continues. What words of counsel can you offer our readers in regard to maintaining balance in their day-to-day lives?

Braden: The balance that we find is directly related to our relationship to the world around us, to Creation in general, and to our relationships with one another.

What I think people are finding is that, as patterns of energy shift, we can speak about them very technically in terms of magnetics and frequencies, and we can speak about them in more familiar terms, in terms of honoring the relationships that we have with one another.

The ancient traditions that we're going to speak about extensively in this next hour-and-a-half or two hours, that we have here, are very clear about what those relationships mean in our lives. And, in a very non-technical language offered to us in 2500-year-old texts, they remind us that no matter what it is that's happening in the world around us, by simply honoring the principles of life in each moment of each day, that is how we demonstrate our mastery and become the masters of what's unfolding in our world.

So, while so many people out there are looking for things "to do", and projects to be

And what would you like to say about those?

Martin: How would you comment on those things in a way that can bring, again, balance to our readers who may be experiencing not enough money, and as a result, may be in a state of fear?

Braden: Well, Rick, what we can do—clearly, we're delving into territory that we have not developed the vocabulary in this interview or the language of the conceptual models to be able to answer them as completely as I would like. So, what I'm going to do is to answer it now, briefly, to reconcile that question, and then I would like to tie back into this as we go on further with the interview.

Martin: Ok.

Braden: And also, I'm just going to say you're speaking to me in South Florida right now. We have a massive thunder cell that is moving through this part of the country. It's the first time in almost two months there has been any rain here at all, and it's a tremendous lightning storm. So if we get disconnected, that's what is happening. I just want you to know. And there are 25 wildfires that are roaring right now, so I'm sure this is very welcome. But it's quite a spectacle we have going on involved in, as important as all those are, it all comes right back down to what happens in every moment of every day, how we speak to one another, how we honor the way that we nurture our bodies, the nutrition that we feed our bodies, our ability to demonstrate compassion, understanding, tolerance in each moment of each day, and in that way we fine-tune our bodies to the processes of Creation that are unfolding. It is an internal technology that allows us to do that.

Martin: Before we get into some of the more recent things that you've uncovered, let's talk about a topic that our readers may be familiar with, and that you mention in your latest book, namely: fear, prayer, and not enough money.

Braden: (Laughter)

outside my window here.

Martin: Sounds beautiful.

Braden: Well, it is. So, what I can say, in general—you've asked me about the specifics of fear and abundance that sometimes shows up as lack of income or finances. There is a general tenant that the ancient Essenes—those who transcribed the Dead Sea Scrolls—are very, very clear about.

What they simply say—and I'll caution the readers not to be deceived by the simplicity of this statement—what the Essenes remind us is that the world that we experience around us is nothing more, nothing less, than a mirror of what we have become from within. So, if we find ourselves in a world that appears to not be abundant in our daily lives, or a world that appears to be fearful, what we can be certain of is, to some degree, that the lack of abundance or the fear that's surrounding us are showing us something about ourselves.

The power of understanding that—not that it's an excuse—the power comes from knowing that, as we make the adjustments within our perceptions and our belief systems, the world around us, full well, will mirror that to us, again. And now, quantum science in just the last 5 years has actually developed the mathematics, they have shown the theorems, and they're demonstrating under laboratory conditions precisely these things, in the language we understand of 21st Century science. They are actually demonstrating very

WALKING BETWEEN THE WORLDS

THE SCIENCE OF COMPASSION

Ancient calendars indicate that we are living the completion of a grand cycle of human experience. Within the last years of this cycle, we have been asked to accommodate greater change in less time than at any other point in recorded human history. Our bodies, immune systems and emotions have been challenged to unprecedented levels. At the same time, science is witnessing phenomenon for which there are no reference points of comparison.

Two-thousand-year-old texts remind us that compassion is an accessible state of awareness determining the quality of our well being. Are we witnessing the birth of a new species of human, genetically shifting to accommodate this time of change? Recent data demonstrates that compassionate emotion may be our forgotten switch to turn "ON" powerful codes of genetic options.

Following his best selling book, Awakening To Zero Point: The Collective Initiation, Gregg Braden explores these and other possibilities in his latest work marrying science, relationships, and the ancient messages of compassion.

- A step-by-step guide to the ancient sciences of compassion and blessing, the Essene mysteries of relationship illustrated with case histories and true-life accounts.
- The latest research confirming the role of emotion in our immune response and life-giving relationships.
- The opportunity to redefine hate, fear, separation, and the role that they play in your life!
- Could our greatest challenges of health, relationship, and survival be our way of redefining beliefs accepted long ago in our ancient memory?

ancient tenants, again, in a language that is making more sense to people in our modern world.

Martin: Well, as Seth used to say years ago, we create our own reality. And with that in mind, what do the phrases probable futures, time waves, quantum outcomes and choice points really mean?

Braden: This is where we have to redefine what it means to participate in the reality that we're experiencing now. We've all heard it said that we create our reality. What quantum science is saying is, that's close. And it may, perhaps, be more accurate to say that there are many realities present, and we choose which of those realities becomes the experience of our lives. So, what we're finding now, ancient traditions, again, are very clear about this.

Modern science, beginning with Dr. Hugh Everett, III, Princeton University, 1957, was the first to coin the term "parallel universes", indicating that in any moment of time there are many, many, many possibilities that are playing out in our lives. Which of those possibilities becomes the reality that we experience is determined by what we have become from within.

In other words, our inner beliefs and our perceptions, our judgments and our fears, as well as our joys and our passions—those concepts that we've always attributed to feelings and emotions—quantum science is now discovering that those emotions are actually physical forces that awaken in the "quantum soup" all of the possibilities that mirror those emotions in our bodies.

So, when we are feeling the feelings of love and compassion, we can full well expect that our relationships in the world around us are going to mirror those back to us—and that's precisely what we're finding. And the flip-side works as well.

So, rather than creating our reality, what we can say is that we participate in determining which reality, as individuals and collectively, we experience by being very aware of what we have become from within. And this is one of the key tenants of the ancient Essenes and the language of their time—leaving us this information of an internal technology that we call a "lost mode" of prayer. And, I'm sure we'll talk more about.

Martin: Well, speaking of the lost science of prayer, most people pray for a desired outcome or intervention of some kind, and you are speaking about this from a much different vantage point, based on your research. Will you explain for our readers your understanding of prayer and what people may do to activate this key growth component?

Braden: Well, Rick, I can certainly do that, but what's happening here is that we're jumping all over the place and it's going to be very fragmented. And I really honor your ability to tie these things together. What I'd like to do, I'm going to back-off of that question.

Martin: Ok.

Braden: I'm going to lay a general foundation where we can develop some background language and terminology, and then tie-in to that foundation to answer the questions that you're asking.

Martin: Perfect.

Braden: Are you ok with that?

Martin: I'm fine with that.

Braden: What we know is, we're now standing at the dawn of the 21st Century, and as good as our science, and as good as our technology appears to be in some respects, there are lingering mysteries that are left over from 20th Century science. There are events unfolding in our lives, and events unfolding in our world that 20th Century science failed to understand or explain.

We have to ask ourselves the question: as good as our science is, could it be incomplete? Is there something missing in the traditions of Western science that, if we were to understand, could possibly explain many of the mysteries in ancient traditions, as well as fill-in the missing pieces of modern science. Within just the last 5 years,

Awakening To Zero Point: THE COLLECTIVE INITIATION

There is a process of unprecedented change unfolding within the Earth. You are part of the change. Without knowledge of the artificial boundaries of religion, science, or ancient mystic traditions, the change is characterized as dramatic shifts in the physical parameters of Earth accompanied by a rapid transformation in human understanding, perception, and experience. This time is historically referred to as "The Shift of the Ages".

As science witnesses events for which there are no reference points of comparison, ancient traditions say that the timetable is intact; the events of "The Shift" are happening now. Each event carries with it a similar message, and is a by-product of something much more significant than the event itself.

During key moments in human history, wisdom has been offered allowing individuals to experience rapid change without fear. This is one of those moments. You are living the completion of a cycle that began nearly 200,000 years ago, and a process of initiation that was demonstrated over 2,000 years ago.

The Lost Mode Of Prayer Learn a Lost Spiritual Technology for Changing Our World and Your Destiny

Is there a forgotten spiritual tool that offers each one of us the ability to heal ourselves, our relationships with others, and even our endangered planet? Yes, says Gregg Braden. On The Lost Mode Of Prayer, Braden, the author of Awakening To Zero Point, examines evidence from both modern science and ancient texts to shed light on a secret lost to humanity in the year 325. This knowledge was relegated to elite priesthoods and mystery schools in the fourth century, leaving a crucial gap in our understanding of the world. "At best," says Braden, "our view of history, religion, science—even the way we love—has been based on an incomplete understanding of our past."

Now, through newly translated texts preserved by the authors of the Dead Sea Scrolls, Braden reveals the inner workings of this powerful force sleeping in the mists of our ancient memory—and how to use this "inner technology" to create profound changes in ourselves and those around us. Join him, as he shares his message of hope in this fascinating journey beyond science, religion, and mysticism—with The Lost Mode Of Prayer.

the leading researchers of our time are finding that the answer to this question is “yes”.

As good as our science is, there are tremendous gaps in our science. What we know is, many people find a disparity between spiritual and religious traditions, and science, and feel that they’re actually mutually exclusive.

I’ve spoken with many colleagues who have felt that you cannot speak about spiritual traditions and scientific conditions in the same sentence. What I think helps our work to stand apart, perhaps from some of those colleagues in the industry that I worked with when I was a geologist, when I was a computer systems designer and aerospace engineer, was that I was looking at our world from a very different perspective.

Almost universally, ancient texts and traditions say to us that, a very long time ago, there was a time in our world when the “Wisdom of the Heavens”—all the wisdom of all of Creation—was given to the people of this world, and it was given to us in a language that was used over 5,000 years ago, and that language was intact. It described our relationship to Creation and the cosmos, our origins, why we are here, and the possibilities of our lives.

That wisdom was handed down through hundreds of generations in the same language in which it was offered over 5,000 years ago. And today, at the birth of the 21st Century, that language doesn’t have the same meaning to a world of science and technology. When we use the words “thee” and “thou” and “thou shalt do these things”, people don’t relate to those the same way.

Through the ancient, indigenous wisdom we’ve got this intact view, this explanation of Creation on the one hand. And on the other hand, within the last few hundred years, this new way of looking at life that we call science is “discovering”, and I think we’re actually “re-discovering” bits and pieces of a greater wisdom. And what’s happening with science, their discoveries are not contiguous. In other words, they’ll find a little piece of a discovery that talks about life, a little piece of a discovery that talks about the cosmos, and they may not be able to relate them together.

So, what we’ve done, as good as our science and the scientific method is, when we find ourselves in those places, my path has been to go back into the original wisdom and try to make sense, and understand what that wisdom is saying in one language, and then translate that into the language of modern science. It is actually working amazingly well.

So, having said that, the question that comes up when I share this with audiences and colleagues is: If we, at one time, had this information, if the Wisdom of the Heavens was, in fact, given to the people of this Earth, where is that wisdom today? Why don’t we have it?

Why can’t we bring it to bear upon the conditions, the suffering and the tragedies, that we see happening in our lives and the lives of the people around us?

What we know now is that at least twice, and possibly many other times, but we know of two primary times in recorded history, when the chain of wisdom that links ancient wisdom to the modern world has been broken.

The first of those breaks that we identify was in 48 B.C. when the great library of Alexandria was destroyed by fire in the civil war. Many people have heard of the library of Alexandria. What I’m finding is that very few people really know what was in that library.

It was a library created by the Ptolemies. The first time, that we’re aware of, in human history that a library was designed to record the memory of human kind from the very, very first documents ever recorded by our species. And Ptolemy [Roman] was very clear.

Emperor Ptolemy sent armies into all corners of the world searching for every text that had ever been written—many of them were already thousands of years old by 48 B.C.—to record what he called the memory of human kind for future generations.

The Roman historian Kalimachos actually documented what was in this great library. And it was when I found Kalimachos’ documentation that I really began to understand what was lost in that library, because we know that the entire Greek body of wisdom, the Greek science, the philosophy, the medicine, the astronomy, the history of human kind dating back to the origins of human kind, were in this library, as well as very rare Babylonian, Sumerian, and Hebraic texts.

Kalimachos actually counted documents, and what he found was that there were over 532,000 scrolls that were in the great library of Alexandria. Many of these scrolls had multiple authors. When the library was burned, we know that we lost these 532,000 documents. We can only begin to guess what we actually lost in that library, and THAT was the first time.

The second break in the wisdom was with, what scholars acknowledge, is the Biblical edits of the 4th Century A.D. The Emperor Constantine called together what is known as the Council of Nice [French town under Constantine’s rule in the 4th Century]. In the year 325 A.D. At that time, as scholars acknowledge, there was no “nice, neat” biblical texts; there was a loose assemblage, a collection of scrolls and documents. Some of them were very redundant; some of them were poorly written; some of them were so mystical no one understood them. And he said: “How can we make these meaningful to the people of our time, and for future generations?”

The Council came back and recommended 20 documents be removed completely—20 books were completely taken from what became our biblical texts—and an additional 25 supporting documents were removed and reserved for elite priesthods and scholars. And those 45 books, when those disappeared from the open literature, combined with the loss of the Alexandrian library in 48 B.C., to the Western world, we began to lose important references reminding us of our relationship to Creation and our origins, and how we relate to one another in our world—how we love, how we fear, the implications of the emotions in our bodies.

We’re just now beginning to understand that again, as quantum science is rediscovering precisely the principles that we’re finding in some of these texts that are over 2500 years old.

So, that brings us to the point: if we were to somehow, magically, bring all of this information back together, what can we say? What was lost?

What if we could state in a couple of sentences what was lost in those texts? Does it make a difference in our world today? Because it’s something people ask me all the time. They say: “Sure, we know we lost information, but this is the modern world. What difference could a 2500-year-old text possibly make in a world of microchips and nanotechnology?” And that’s a good question.

What we have to say to that is, as good as our science is and the scientific method, science only applies the scientific method to places where we see the relationships existing. So, this invisible world that exists between the emotions of our bodies and the physical world around us, up until recently, modern science hasn’t acknowledged that, so the scientific method hasn’t been applied to describe that relationship in our world.

That is one of the keys that’s missing, and that’s one of the reasons why we have the mysteries that 20th Century science couldn’t explain. Now 21st Century science, I think, is on the path, actually, to uncovering some of those mysteries.

So, if we could bring all of that information back together, what it would say to us is:

One, there is a Web, an invisible “Web of Energy” that links all of Creation in ways that we’re just beginning to understand. Every rock, every tree, every cell of every creature, including the cells of our bodies, are ALL linked through a form of energy that the ancients called “The Web Of Creation”.

And two, what these texts are saying, the common theme, is that this Web of Creation serves as what we can call a mirror. And it is this mirror around us that reflects what we have become from within.

So, there is a constant form of communication, a dialogue that’s going on with Creation. And we find ourselves in a world of peace, understanding, healing, and compassion.

What this concept says is that it is a mirror of the thoughts, feelings, emotions, and perceptions that we have become, as individuals—as well as collectively, as families and communities and societies.

We find, in times of anger and rage and hate and jealousy, warfare, and atrocities in our outer world, that the same concept applies—that the Creation is mirroring back to us elements of what we have become from within, either individually or collectively.

If we'd like to change that, rather than imposing our will in the "outer world", which simply buys us a temporary window of peace or a temporary window of healing, for lasting peace and lasting healing, the change has to come from within.

That is a very important foundation, I think, that we'll have to tie back into through the rest of our discussion. It was important to lay that out first, I think.

Martin: Thank you. As you're talking, I'm thinking about the Mayan culture, and this critical time that our planet is in right now. You talked about 5,000 years ago—our connection to the universe and, essentially, all knowledge and all language of the universe.

Braden: Sure.

Martin: There currently seems to be a widely held view that our DNA is being somehow activated and changed through this accelerated energy that's taking place. And this DNA activation, one could theorize, will, inevitably, open us up to, once again, understanding that universal language. Do you think that's true?

Braden: Well, yes. I see both of those things happening, maybe from a little different perspective.

What we're finding—my classical training is in the hard sciences. My degree is actually in geology, the Earth sciences, and I have an extensive background in biology and the life sciences, base sciences, computer science, and the ocean sciences as well. They all kind of merge together, in my view anyway, to help us to understand The Creation that we live in.

When I was in school, I was taught that our genetic code, the DNA in our bodies, is a "fixed" code—we have what we have when we come into this world, and we just learn to deal with it.

But, what ancient traditions appear to be saying, in the language of their time—and what our own science says, beginning in 1995, the studies began showing in our language, of our time, that this may NOT be true.

We come into this world with a preset series of codes. You can kind-of think of it as coming from the factory, I guess, with the "factory defaults" of the genetic codes—just enough of the codes turned-on to get us going and to allow us to have the experience of life.

Martin: And, perhaps, even a storehouse of "Zip disks" of information we can access.

Braden: Well, precisely. And one of the great mysteries—I mean, this was a mystery when I was learning biology, and I kept asking, something would well-up within me: "Well, if this is a mystery, why haven't we understood more of what this mystery is?"

The question has always been, in human DNA there are 64 possible combinations: carbon, oxygen, hydrogen, and nitrogen that make up what we call our genetic code. Out of those 64 possibilities, what scientists have acknowledged since the discovery of the code in the 1950s, is that we only use about 1/3 of that code. Of the 64 possibilities, we have 20 codes that are enabled, that we call our 20 amino acids.

One of the questions has been: "If we have these other possibilities, why aren't they turned-on?"

And: "What does it take to turn these other codes on?"

And: "What would happen if they were?"

Well, it was in the early 1980s with the sudden, I don't know if I would even use the word "discovery", but the sudden appearance of the HIV virus and the AIDS condition, that researchers for the first time began to look at global blood studies very seriously to find out what this virus meant in terms of global populations.

What scientists began to find is that there were actually changes—they call them "spontaneous genetic mutations"—that were occurring within the blood of global populations within the same generation where the HIV virus had appeared. And the reason this is important, we've always seen genetic mutations in the past. They're very well accepted, very well known. Generally, a genetic mutation occurs in response to some condition in the environment and we see the change in the next generation of offspring. So, for example, if one generation is exposed to high doses of radiation or high doses of mercury, then the offspring, the children, will have the genetic mutations, and often they are not desirable mutations at all.

BUT—you DON'T see it in the same generation, where people were exposed to the toxins in the environment. What was different about these studies was that humans, for the first time, were being documented with spontaneous genetic mutations in the same generation where they were being exposed to the challenge!

The challenge was the HIV virus. The mutations, rather than being debilitating mutations, were very positive mutations because there were codes that were turned-on in human DNA that we hadn't seen turned-on before in genetics, in recorded genetics we hadn't seen turned-on. As people were turning these codes on in their bodies, they had tremendously enhanced immune systems—to the point where they were transcending the challenge of the HIV virus in their bodies!

Now, scientists are very careful about words like "immune". So they wouldn't say that these people were immune to the HIV virus. What they would say is "they were tremendously tolerant", that "their bodies developed a 'tolerance' to the HIV virus"—up to 3,000 times the tolerance we had seen in people prior to these genetic mutations!

What I'm saying is, something changed in these people's lives, and that something was mirrored in the genetic code in their bodies. This was the first time we had ever seen this, because again, the conditioning is that this kind of thing simply doesn't happen.

So, relating this back to ancient texts and ancient traditions, in the language of their time, the Mayans and Egyptians, the ancient Essenes, those who transcribed the Dead Sea Scrolls, they, I believe, in the language of their time, were saying something very similar to us, that we have within us this Power and this "internal technology" that responds to the operating system of what we've become in our lives. It responds to our ability to lead our lives in a code of conduct that is based in compassion, understanding, and love, and loving tolerance, OR anger and hate, rage and jealousy. And that not only will our bodies respond to these, the DNA in our bodies is responding to these, but the world around us will respond to this as well.

This is what quantum science is now saying, at a quantum level. The rage that we feel in our bodies not only is mirrored in the DNA of our cells, it also is mirrored or reflected back to us.

Now, they're actually able to measure this for miles up to 50 miles away from the point where an individual is feeling a deeply coherent range of emotion, that the human cells are responding to that up to 50 miles away. We could talk about the experiments, in just a moment, that are demonstrating this relationship.

Martin: That's impressive.

Braden: I don't know, maybe this is a good time to talk about this.

Martin: Sure.

Braden: A lot of this, Rick, is new work that you haven't had the opportunity to see, because it's not in a written text yet. It's in our lives, programs, and we've done some videos and some audios. So you wouldn't have seen this in a book right now. I'll just explain that a little bit.

When the book The Isaiah Effect was released, our latest Random House hardback, it was designed to be one of three books, a series, that were based in what these ancient understandings mean in our lives, and how we can apply them in our world.

Because it was the close of the Millennium, and because the editors at Random House felt that the information of a lost mode of prayer had such relevance in people's lives, they chose to go with that as the first book and bypass what would, originally, have been the first book of that series. And now, we're going to go back and pick up the information that would have been in that first book, this is the science that demonstrates, in 21st Century language, what the ancient texts are saying in their language. And this lays the foundation for everything in The Isaiah Effect, and the lost mode of prayer, and many of the other traditions that so many teachers are tapping into today.

I'll just begin by saying: Between 1993 and 1998, three experiments, independent experiments, were conducted in accredited academic and research institutions in this country. Most of the researchers were unaware of the experiments that the others were doing. So, independently, the outcome of these experiments were anomalous; they were interesting. Researchers weren't sure, precisely, what to make of them, independently.

When we put the three experiments together within the context of what quantum science is finding in our world today, I believe these experiments are saying something very, very different to us. And what they are showing is that, undeniably, the evidence now exists in a language that Western science understands, to demonstrate that this Web of Creation the ancients spoke about is, in fact, there, that it is notable, it is measurable, and that we have enough information about this Web of Creation so that we can use this relationship and bring it to bear upon the conditions of our world—again, the suffering and tragedies of our world.

Experiment number one was initiated by a physicist from the Moscow Academy of Sciences. His name is Vladimir Poponin. He first had done these experiments at the Moscow Academy of Sciences, then he was on loan to a U.S. institution and was able to reproduce these and carry these experiments even further.

Essentially what he did was, and I'll do this very briefly, he took a vase, a glass vase, and took all of the air out of the vase, creating what we call a vacuum, knowing that, even in the presence of a vacuum, light particles still exist, and we call those photons. So, even though he took all of the air out of this vase, we knew that there were still photons inside.

They measured the distribution of these photons. The distribution was completely random, which was precisely what the scientists had expected. There were no surprises there.

Then they placed human DNA into the vacuum, and measured the photons, again, measured the distribution, the arrangement of the photons in the vacuum. And what they found was, they were no longer random, that the DNA had somehow influenced the particles of light; the DNA had exerted an influence on the photons!

Martin: That's amazing.

Braden: The photons were absolutely aligned with the DNA. This was a surprise, but the real surprise came with the next step.

They took the DNA out of the vacuum, so there was no human DNA in the vacuum at all. They remeasured the alignment of the photons in the vacuum, and to their amazement, the photons were still in the alignment that they had been in as if the DNA was there, although the DNA was nowhere near the tube!

The question was, what is it that is holding the pattern? What holds that alignment? Why are the photons still holding the same pattern, as if the DNA were there? What is connecting those particles of light to the DNA?!!

The name that this experiment was given, you may have seen it in some other references, it's called "The Phantom DNA Effect". What this experiment showed was that an unconventional form of energy was being addressed between the DNA and the particles of light; it was a form of energy that had not been previously recognized.

So that was the first experiment.

The second experiment was conducted in 1993, and it was a military experiment conducted by U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command; the acronym for that is INSCOM. What the researchers did—this is a very innovative experiment—they actually took a human donor, and every time I share this experiment, I always like to think the donor was a volunteer, but you never really know. (Laughter)

Martin: (Laughter)

Braden: But they took a human donor, and they took white blood cells, they're called leukocytes, from the inside of the donor's mouth. They simply scraped some tissue from the inside of the donor's mouth.

They put these blood cells in a very sensitive device that could measure them, electrically. They were expecting these cells to have some electrical response during the time of some stimulus.

What they did was, in one building they placed the cells in one room, and the donor in another room, and they began showing the donor visual stimuli. They were showing him video clips that were creating powerful emotions of anger, or jealousy, or compassion in his body. And what they found was that in the same instant of time the donor was having his emotional experiences in one room, his cells were undergoing the same experience; they were having this electrical shift in another room, even though they were not physically attached. Well, the Army said: "This is interesting; let's see."

Martin: Similar to plant experiments.

Braden: It is. And the next step is, as well. They said: "Let's see how far we can separate the cells and the donor, and still have the effect remain." And they stopped the experiments when they had separated the cells and the donor by 50 miles!

Martin: Wow!

Braden: Now, this is where it gets really interesting. What they found is that, at a distance of 50 miles, the donor would still have his emotional experiences, the cells were undergoing their experiences, and they were happening in the SAME INSTANT OF TIME. There was no lag-time, as if the donor were transmitting information from his location, as if the information had to travel 50 miles. They were in the same instant of time.

Martin: That almost implies that DNA has an inherent intelligence.

Braden: Well, they're acknowledging that intelligence. What this experiment actually shows is that cells communicate through what they're calling a "previously unrecognized form of energy", and that this energy—and the buzz word that's being used now, that you see in all the scientific and technical journals, you're seeing it on CNN and TIME Magazine, NEWSWEEK, 20/20—the buzz word that is used to describe this form of energy is "non-local energy".

Martin: (Laughter) What's the difference between non-local energy and telepathic?

Braden: Well, it may be almost the same thing. When we think of energy, traditionally, we think of energy as something that is generated in one place, and is broadcast or transmitted, somehow carried, to another location. This form of energy, non-local energy, appears to be a form of energy that is already existing, everywhere, all of the time.

Martin: Hmmm.

Braden: It apparently has been, for a long time. And it works beyond the bounds of conventional laws of physics. It works beyond the bounds of distance and time and space.

Martin: Fascinating.

Braden: So, a summary of experiment number one: what was found was that a previously—scientists like to say that they discovered a "new form" of energy—I prefer, in my background, to discuss this as a "previously unrecognized" form of energy. It's always been there; we just haven't seen it. I believe ancient traditions have talked about it in the language of their time. Experiment number one, with the phantom DNA—

Martin: If I can just interject here for a second, I don't want to interrupt your thought, but those from a spiritual or a religious understanding would say, of course, that the fabric of time and space of Creation is bound by Divine Thought, and that, in fact, the reason for this simultaneous communication is that it is rooted in Divine Thought and Divine Light.

Braden: Precisely! What we'll see, when we finish these, I'm going to share with you a quote from the father of quantum physics, Max Planck. When he accepted his Nobel Prize for quantum physics, he made a statement that just astounded the world of physics, and he is alluding to precisely that. But first I'm going to summarize these first three experiments.

Martin: Ok, sorry.

Braden: That's ok. I'm going into the third experiment, and then we're going to launch-off from there.

So, the first experiment, the phantom DNA, says that scientists found a previously unrecognized form of energy, and that DNA, apparently, communicates with matter through this form of energy. The DNA was communicating with particles of light, that's matter, through an "unseen", previously unrecognized form of energy. That was the first experiment.

The second one, now, these are independent experiments. These researchers, apparently, are not speaking with one another, and it's over a period of time. The second experiment says that cells communicate through this previously unrecognized form of energy. It is considered to be non-local, is actually the buzz word; that's the term that's applied, implying that the energy already exists; it's everywhere, all of the time at once, and that this form of energy operates beyond the bounds of conventional distance, time, and space.

So, experiment number three was done in 1993. People ask me, sometimes, if these experiments have happened, why don't we hear about them? Why isn't this on the cover of TIME magazine?

Traditionally, these kinds of experiments receive very little media from the press, and one of the reasons may be because of the way they're described in the title. For example, this 1993 paper, the title of this paper is about four lines long. It's called: Local And Non-Local Effects Of Coherent Heart Frequencies On Confirmational Changes of DNA.

Martin: That's quite a title.

Braden: Well, it is. And I think it might help to understand why, to the layperson, a title like that would probably have very little meaning in their lives, and once they saw the title, they may not want to read beyond that.

[Editor's note: Gregg is being very kind and generous to explain the situation this way. However, the media routinely digests complicated science—without being scared by the long titles of some technical papers—and blathers the watered-down sound-byte versions to the public every day on the news programs. You know how it is: one day "a study" finds salt is good for you; the next day "a study" finds salt will kill you!

To address the typical awareness level of the readers of this newspaper, The Truth of the matter is that the dark, so-called "elite" controllers of this planet do not want their beloved controlled media, which diligently programs the public mind, to raise attention or awareness to the very same latent abilities they are efforting to keep dormant in the "common" person so they can maintain their control! That's reason enough to "overlook" reporting on such studies in controlled media publications.]

Martin: It sounds very fascinating and important.

Braden: It is. What happened in this experiment, and I've worked very closely with these researchers. This is through the HeartMath Institute.

Martin: We have some of their material.

Braden: HeartMath is recognized as, probably, some of the pioneers in exploring heart-based technologies, relating human emotions to our physical world. And they have used only the most stringent of scientific and research protocols and methods.

Martin: This is a subject our readers will be very interested in.

Braden: One of the founders of HeartMath, his name is Howard Martin. He is also the co-author of the New York Times bestseller that is called The HeartMath Solution.

Martin: Yes, we have that one.

Braden: Actually, CNN just did a special on the HeartMath technologies, recently.

Martin: Really?

Braden: They're instituting these technologies. They're not going about it from a spiritual perspective, necessarily. They're using it in terms of stress management, and in large corporations, helping people understand how their heart has a unique language that can serve them in their daily lives.

By the way, people are beginning to understand that, when they do that, they are getting in touch with a part of themselves they hadn't expected to.

Martin: I'm trying not to get you off-track but, actually, this is right on track.

Braden: It is, it is! The people of HeartMath, in 1993, released this research paper, and the two researchers, Glen Rein and Rolan McCraty, were the two researchers who head this up. Rolan McCraty is the Director of Research at HeartMath. And what they did, it was very interesting, and very innovative for

Our extremes of emotion, love, as well as fear, may be viewed from the perspective of an electrical and magnetic field expressed as a wave. From this vantage point, fear is seen as a long and slow wave (Figure 6-2). Due to its length, relatively few complete waves are expressed per unit of DNA measured.

Figure 6-2: Fear viewed graphically as a relatively long and slow wave of emotion.

Love, on the other hand, may be viewed as a field of higher frequency. It appears as a shorter and faster wave with a greater number of complete waves expressed per unit of DNA measurement (Figure 6-3).

Figure 6-3: Love graphically represented as a relatively short and fast wave of emotion.

Superimposing the field of fear upon our double helix structure, we see that the length of the low-frequency waves allow few opportunities for the helix and wave to touch (Figure 6-4). The very nature of the wave discourages access to the biological structure allowing its expression. This perspective illustrates the limiting and contracted nature of fear.

Figure 6-4: Fear superimposed upon the double helix of DNA. Note the relatively few number of potential coding sites available due to the lack of intersection points.

Similarly, superimposing the field of love upon the double helix, we see that the shorter length of high-frequency waves allows more opportunities for the helix and wave to intersect (Figure 6-5). In this instance, the nature of the wave encourages access to the helix. From this perspective the emotion of love is seen as expansive.

Figure 6-5: Love superimposed upon the double helix of DNA. Note the relatively greater number of potential coding sites available due to the increased number of intersection points.

Excerpted from: Walking Between The Worlds: The Science Of Compassion, by Gregg Braden, pages 77 and 78.

them to explore these kinds of relationships that traditional science doesn't even expect to find.

What they did was, they took a number of individuals who were trained in what we call "emotional self-management"; in other words, they were trained in the ability to create very specific coherent emotions in their bodies, on demand, rather than just having them happen in response to something in their lives. They could become compassion, they could become anger, they could become rage, and they could become gratitude, within a period of just moments. There is a science to that.

So they took people who were trained in emotional self-management in a study group, and they gave them a flask, a glass vase, containing a very specific kind of human DNA—it's called placental DNA, from human placenta—very young DNA, very intact, very vibrant, vital DNA. And what they were exploring was whether or not people who could have very powerful qualities of emotion, whether that emotion would influence the DNA that they were holding in a vase in their hands, or not. And they could optically, they could actually magnify this DNA and see what was happening.

Well, to make a long story very brief, what they found was that there was a consistent and repeatable relationship when people had specific forms of emotion. The DNA would always respond in a certain way, and to everyone's amazement, what this response was, the DNA actually changed shape in response to the form of the emotion. In other words, emotions of love, compassion, understanding, forgiveness, gratitude, those are the English words that approximate the kinds of energy that were in the body. Other cultures would use other words. When those kinds of emotions were present, the DNA strands, the twin strands of the DNA, would actually relax and become very loose. And when they were experiencing rage and anger and hate and jealousy, just the opposite would happen. The DNA strands would begin to entwine even tighter, and actually constrict. The DNA was becoming shorter; they could see this happening under the microscope. And this is the first time that we've ever had this kind of information before.

The implications are tremendous, because we spoke earlier about specific codes of DNA that are turned-off and turned-on, the ability to turn those codes off and on appears to be linked to the kinds of emotion that we have in our bodies.

So when we are having emotions of gratitude and love and appreciation, and the strands are relaxing, we're actually turning on those codon sets, or genetic keys that are giving us enhanced immunity; and in the presence of constricting emotions of rage and anger and hate, we're actually short-circuiting those codes; we're turning them off. And this is precisely what the experiment shows. When we are frustrated or angry, our immune systems decline.

There is an antibody in our saliva called S-IGA antibody. It's our first line of defense against viruses and bacteria in our daily lives. When we're frustrated, in that saliva the S-IGA levels drop tremendously. And when we're in the presence of gratitude and appreciation, our levels of S-IGA increase. So what this experiment was showing, this experiment number three, was that there is a field of energy between the people having the emotions and the DNA—it was a non-physical form of energy that was connecting the two—that human intention was producing effects in the DNA that can defy conventional laws of electromagnetism.

This does not work the way that conventional physics says this form of energy could be. And this was all summarized in the 1993 paper.

So, when we put these three experiments together, what we're seeing is a story, I believe, unfolding. What has appeared in the past as anomalous scientific results are beginning to fill-in the missing pieces of a framework that says to us that we are related to the world around us in ways that we're just beginning to understand, that there is, what the ancients call, this Web, and what quantum science is now calling this field effect of non-local energy; and that what we become from within through our emotions and feelings, day-in and day-out, is the language that speaks to this Web in ways that we're just beginning to understand.

THAT opens a tremendous door of possibilities, now, as we go back into the ancient traditions because, apparently, not only did they understand this relationship, they had no need in those ancient traditions to demonstrate and to prove these relationships. They already accepted them as part of their world view. So, they spent tremendous amounts of energy recording volumes of information, entire libraries, to convey to the people of their future what this relationship meant.

They told us, in the language of their time, this is how it works, this is how you apply it in your life, and that, then, becomes the basis for the work and this conversation today, for the lost modes of prayer, and for the possibilities of lasting healing in our bodies, and lasting peace in our world through this relationship that quantum science is only beginning to understand.

Martin: Fantastic stuff! Well, I know that you travel the world. You've been in Tibet, and I presume South America, Egypt, and those places, Mayan culture. Have you found that the ancient knowledge or oral tradition of the Mayans dovetails with the ancient wisdom of the Tibetan culture?

Braden: What I'll say, Rick, is, I have spent tremendous amounts of time in Bolivia, Peru, Egypt, all through Egypt, including the Sinai Peninsula and the monasteries of the Coptic Christians, into Thailand and Nepal and Tibet. We have never been into the Yucatan, and although I am working with specific aspects of Mayan language and Mayan culture—actually, retranslating some of the Mayan mathematics—I have not worked with the indigenous people, the Maya, to be able to say to you, conclusively, that I see those relationships.

Martin: Ok, then let me ask you to comment about the ancient South American culture vs. the Near East culture.

Braden: What I do see—without having actually spent times with the indigenous people—in the writings, in the texts, certainly in the calendrical systems, in the systems of medicine, astronomy, and healing, I see those relationships there. How they are still lived by the people today, I don't know, because I haven't been there.

But this is where it gets very interesting. There is a universal theme that flows through every ancient culture and tradition that I've ever studied. I haven't studied all of them.

Every one that I have studied has a universal theme that says there was a time, in the history of the Earth, when the Wisdom of the Heavens was given to the people of this world. It was given to us intact. There was an entire chronology that showed us how we relate to the forces of Creation.

My sense was, if we were ever to find records of this text, we would find it in the places least disturbed by Western civilization. So, while we find bits and pieces of it in Mayan texts, and we find bits and pieces of it throughout Southern Peru and into Bolivia, and in the Pre-Incan and the Quechuan traditions, certainly on the Egyptian temple walls, and on the texts and in the monasteries there.

It was in 1998 that we ran across some very interesting texts from the Roman historians who were talking about, once again, the ancient Essenes. And the Essenes appear to be—if your readers are not familiar with the Essenes, I'll just say this quickly. We first see the Essenes about 500 years before the time of Christ; they are a sect that separated themselves from the people of their world, so that they could live a tradition that was given to them and handed-down to them through a lineage of wisdom that is traced back all the way through pre-Egyptian traditions, back into the Sumerian and the Babylonian traditions, as well.

So the Essenes saw that these traditions were being distorted, and they separated themselves from the cultures that were distorting them, isolating themselves in the desert so they could live these traditions, and also record them. And they did so, and left a tremendous library that we now know as the Dead Sea Scrolls.

After the crucifixion of Christ in the first century, the Roman historians say that the Essenes were persecuted, and they fled. When they fled, they scattered themselves across the face of the Earth.

We find records, Rick, of the ancient Essenes in every culture, now, that we have studied. Again, I haven't studied every culture, but every culture that I have studied has records of the Essenes, and their wisdom, that came to their culture, was incorporated into their culture.

So we find Essene traditions in Bolivia and Peru and South America. We actually find, three days South of Cusco, a three-day horseback ride South of Cusco, Peru, there are active Essene monasteries that are still there today!

Native American traditions—there's a whole story that we could do on this. Native American traditions, including Navajo and Hopi and Cherokee, say that many of their traditions are actually based in the Essene traditions, and that the Essenes walked the Americas and brought this wisdom to them, a long time ago.

Their bloodlines—I want to be very clear about this: Navajos are Navajo, Hopis are Hopi—but, I actually met with some Native Elders, back in the late 1990s, and they asked me a question. They said: "How do you know so much about our sacred traditions, because we've never shared them?"

I had to say: "I know very little about your sacred traditions. I identify with the Essene traditions."

They said "Well, there you go."

And I said "Well, what do you mean?"

They said: "We don't talk about this openly, but—" Many of the Native American cultures, the traditions in their tribal circles, will tell you that they trace their most sacred traditions back to the ancient Essenes. The similarities, I mean, when you look at them, if you put them side-by-side and compare them, it's very obvious—they're relationship to the Forces of Creation, the language that they use for Heaven and Earth, the Four Forces of Nature that weave their way in every moment of their lives. You'd be hard pressed to tell one from the other.

So, our question was: "Ok, the Essenes fled the Middle East, in the Qumran area of the Dead Sea, and they scattered themselves across the face of the Earth. If we were to find Essene records today, where would be a place to look where they had been least disturbed by Western civilization?"

The obvious answer, in April 1998, for me, was in the highlands of Central Tibet. We had the privilege and the honor of leading a 22-day pilgrimage into 12 monasteries and 2 nunneries in April and May of 1998. And, again, what we found was even beyond my greatest expectations.

Martin: I bet.

Braden: Through the camaraderie and through a series of very heartfelt connections with the monks and the nuns, in some of the very remote monasteries that don't see a lot of Westerners, very honestly. We were led to some of their libraries, and when the translators pulled the very ancient tests down from the library shelves, and they began reading us those pages, they sounded, almost word-for-word, like the Essene texts that we find coming out of the Vatican libraries and from the Dead Sea Scrolls. Not only are the texts there, but the monks and the nuns today have incorporated those Essene traditions into their daily practices.

Now, the irony of this is that the Essene traditions are the precursors of Christianity. So, what is happening here is, in the Tibetan monasteries there are actually pre-Christian documents, some of them more intact than what we have seen—because ours were edited in the 4th Century—up until the time that we saw Dead Sea Scrolls.

Not only are they practicing their traditions, that they call Tibetan Buddhism, but before they were Buddhists, they practiced a tradition they called Bon, and the Bon tradition is so similar to Native American traditions, and to the original traditions of the Essenes, you'd be hard-pressed to tell one from another if they were set side-by-side.

So, the farther we go back in the traditions, the more commonality we find between the Native, indigenous, what we call Buddhist, Christian, even Islamic and Hebrew traditions. They all become more similar the farther back we go, and appear, actually, to come from a common source of origin.

Martin: This is an entirely unrelated question, but are you familiar with a document called The Talmud Of Immanuel [translated into German by Isa Rashid and Eduard Albert "Billy" Meier, and translated into English by Julie H. Ziegler and B.L. Greene, Wild Flower Press, Tigard, OR; ISBN# 0-926524-12-7]?

Braden: Sure.

Martin: Which was given to Billy Meier.

Braden: I am, yes.

* * *

Editor's note: Many of our SPECTRUM readers are familiar with the document called The Talmud Of Immanuel, as well as with Eduard Albert "Billy" Meier and his longtime intriguing and convincing association with extraterrestrials from the Pleiades. One of the most controversial assertions of The Talmud Of Immanuel, that has found much in the way of corroborative documentation, is that Esu "Jesus" Immanuel did NOT die on the cross that day, but went on to live a long life and do much more teaching in other locations around the world.

This kind of information, if widely known, of course, would not help the various church "businesses" maintain their longtime controls over so many people. Thus such embarrassing history has, naturally, been fiercely attacked by conventional religion as heresy and fraud.

For the convenience of readers who may not be aware of this material, and to refresh the memories of those who are, we pause in this outstanding conversation with Gregg Braden to provide an excerpt from The Talmud Of Immanuel that discusses the Essenes.

Let it be STRONGLY emphasized that this aside is in no way meant to discredit or criticize Gregg Braden's point of view or his ongoing research, but rather, simply to inform you about what The Talmud Of Immanuel has to say on this controversial subject concerning the mysterious and secretive Essenes.

From a purely scientific point of view (in terms of resolving seemingly conflicting data) it is quite possible that "early" and "later" Essene cultures were not the same, likely due to infiltration by corruptive influences later on—which has long been the method (especially through various secret societies) of the dark "elite" ones working to control this planet since well before the time of the Essenes.

An excerpt from The Talmud Of Immanuel

There were many among them [in Ephesus] who knew Immanuel but felt hostile toward him; therefore he left them and veiled his face.

The dealers and merchants in Ephesus had spread the story of Immanuel and his supposed death, which had occurred two and a half years earlier.

However, after he had stayed in the city for a few days, behold, one of the merchants recognized him and informed those of like mind who belonged to a secret group called the Association of the Essenes.

They took Immanuel to a meeting that was secret because their association was not permitted and they feared the people.

Among them was one named Juthan, the oldest of the secret association in Jerusalem, who said: "Behold, we know very well what happened to you in your life, but we do not know why you are still among the living. So, do tell us your secret."

But Immanuel was afraid he would be tied up and returned to Jerusalem if he reported everything to the Association of the Essenes.

Yet he told them what had happened and how he fled from Jerusalem and came there.

Juthan, the eldest, said: "Behold, we belong to a secret group called the Association of the Essenes. Our seeking and knowledge are not attuned to the teachings of the scribes, but to the secrets of Nature and everything that is inexplicable to people.

"You are great in your knowledge, and by all measure you have progressed in knowledge far beyond us and the Pharisees, the astrologers, and even the elders and wise men.

“Therefore, join our group, be one of us, and teach us your knowledge.”

But Immanuel answered: “Even if I should teach you my knowledge, it would not agree with your teaching because you follow human wisdom, whereas I adhere to spiritual wisdom.

“Therefore I think that our different teachings will be incompatible with one another.

“It is not my inclination to spread my knowledge and teaching secretly, as you do, because your secret association is not permitted.

“But let me think over the pros and cons for three days, because I must think about everything before I give you my last word on it. Then I will tell you yes or no.”

Juthan said: “Be it as you say. Peace be with you. Go, and give us your answer in three days, if you want to.”

But Immanuel went away, fleeing from the city with his following, and traveled east, far into the country.

Immanuel said to his followers: “Behold, the Essenes live in a false sect, though their followers gather much of my teaching.

“Their old doctrine, however, is not the teaching of truth, knowledge, love, logic, wisdom, and Laws of Creation; therefore it is false and worthless.

“They have recognized this and are now weaving my doctrine of truth into their teaching of half-truths, to create a new sect, and they demean me by calling me one of them.

“They will claim that I am connected with their association and that they had helped me from the beginning of my life.

“They will also say that my teaching stemmed from the knowledge of their sect and that they had saved me from the cross as one of them.

“They will also claim that all my followers were of their sect.

“And that I am the Son of God.

“But I tell you that I never belonged to this Association of Essenes, and that I have nothing in common with it or its followers, and I never received any help from them.

“The Association of the Essenes is not the only group that will make use of my name. Many sects will come forth in my name and thereby consider themselves great and want to appear this way before all people.

“Thus, strange sects will arise and glorify me to make themselves more credible, so as to enslave more people.

“Many sects will be established in my name, but only for the purpose of enslaving the human consciousness and freedom, thereby bringing great power over the people and their land and money.

“But I tell you that no sect is just unless it recognizes Creation alone as the highest power and lives according to its Laws and Commandments.

“There will be no sect which preaches truth, knowledge, and wisdom.

“It will be two times a thousand years before the time comes when my teaching will be preached anew, without being falsified, when the condition of false teachings and sects, the lies, cheating, and deceit of the conjurers of the dead and spirits, the soothsayers and clairvoyants, as well as the charlatans will be at their peak.

“Until then, there will be so many false sects, liars, impostors, charlatans, conjurers of the dead and spirits, false soothsayers, clairvoyants, and false mediums who claim to be extraterrestrial, from other dimensions, and coming from the distant depths of the universe, that they can no longer be counted.

“They will be built on human blood, hatred, greed and power, lies, deception, trickery, misunderstanding, self-deceit, confusion of consciousness, and mania.

“But after they have been established they shall be destroyed, because the truth shall triumph.

“For there is no untruth that shall not be denounced as a lie.

“There is nothing hidden that shall not become evident.

“People shall recognize what is in front of their faces, and what is hidden from them will reveal itself, provided they search for truth and the explanation derived from wisdom.

“But the truth lies deep and within the Laws of Creation, and mankind shall seek and find it there alone.

“Those who seek shall not stop seeking until they find, and when they find, they will be deeply shocked and astonished, but then they will rule over the universe.

“People shall recognize from this that the kingdom is within them and outside of them.”

Martin: In The Talmud Of Immanuel, Immanuel makes the statement, I believe, that it was the Essenes who would distort his teachings. Do you find that to be true?

Braden: I do not, actually. What I find is that the Essenes were masters, much as Tibetans are today, of recording and transcribing knowledge. It was so important for them to transcribe every letter, precisely, letter-for-letter, precisely as it had been handed to them, that they actually said—and this is now passed-down into the Hebrew traditions—they said that if one letter was distorted in one of their texts, the implications of that letter in future teachings could change the course of the history of human kind.

So, what they would do—and they’ve actually found some of these scrolls where a mistake was made—and maybe it was a single sheet of animal hide that was 12 feet long, and on the 10th foot, if there was a mistake that was made, the whole thing was discarded, rather than take the chance of trying to cross it out and having it misinterpreted.

And the same thing—this does, actually, tie back in, because the Tibetans do something very similar. When we were in the monasteries in Tibet and, by the way, we’re going back in 3 weeks. We will be in Tibet for the month of June, researching further; the next time you and I talk, I’ll be happy to share with you whatever it is that we find.

Martin: What a fantastic trip! And thank you for the generous offer to inform our readers of what you may find.

Braden: Well, I’ll tell you what—hands-down, it is the toughest trip, either as an individual, or I’m also leading a group, that I’ve ever made.

Martin: I’m sure, physically, it’s very demanding.

Braden: It’s demanding! The elevations, for no other reason, we’re up over 17,000 feet above sea-level, and most of the people going are from relatively low, close to sea-level elevations. But even my wife and I—we live at 8,000 feet in the mountains of Northern New Mexico—but we’ll be almost 10,000 feet higher in Tibet than what we’re used to. The conditions are tough; the elevation makes it really difficult. Also, they are not really prepared for tourism. So the facilities are either non-existent, or the ones that are there, sometimes you wish they weren’t. (Laughter)

Martin: I understand. (Laughter)

Again, this is somewhat unrelated, but I want to ask you anyway. Have your journeys led you to any of the monasteries in Kashmir, specifically?

Braden: No, I’ve never been to any of the monasteries anywhere in India. We haven’t spent any time in India at all, or in the outlying regions in Pakistan. We know that they’re there. But, just because of time and research commitments, there are many places we have not been to.

Martin: I would imagine, from the research I’ve done, you would find a tremendous storehouse in Kashmir. Just for your information.

Braden: We understand that those are there, and they may not be quite as accessible, but what we’re finding in the Tibetan monasteries—I’m just going to go back to this, quickly—many of the books that are there, and I show the images of these in live programs; actually, I can send you an image to use.

Martin: Please.

Braden: When you actually look on the shelves at the books, they are so fragile. When the translator pulled one down, the corners of the pages just crumble when they open them up.

So I asked them, I said: “Where do these books come from?”

They said: “That’s the other library.”

And I said: “What do you mean by that?” So they took us down a dark hallway, into another room, and for every page of a Tibetan text, there is a mahogany, which is a very, very hard-wood block that has been carved.

Martin: Wow! (Whistle)

Braden: Every letter had to be carved to create that page. And they have that library intact. And the monks told us that it could take up to 8 months to create a single page of text because of the intricacy of the letters, and how hard the wood is.

Martin: I believe it! I’m familiar with working with various kinds of wood.

Braden: And if they get to the bottom of that block, and a monk makes a mistake, they will discard the entire block and begin again. It’s a very similar tradition.

To answer the question of the Essenes, my experience has been that the Essenes were meticulous record keepers. They had one body of work that they would record the ancient traditions. They had other bodies of work where they would explain and apply them in their lives, and they were very disciplined.

From my personal experience, I can find no records where—they were actually the ones who prevented the distortion of the texts when the religious cultures around them were changing, when Christianity, the Coptics, the Romans, the Greeks, and others, said that these laws that have come to us from our ancestors are too strict, so we have to relax these laws so that the people will follow them.

That is what the church began to do, in the other traditions. And the Essenes said: “No, this is the way that it was given to us, and this is what we’re going to live.” So they formed their own communities.

There is a tremendous text by the Roman historian Josephus that tells us how they did that. There is another, one of the Dead Sea Scrolls, and this is why it’s so controversial.

One of the ways we know about the Essenes—it’s called The Manual Of Discipline, and it is the—it’s not a military discipline, it just tells what their day was like. They would pray at sunrise. They would bathe in cold water, three times a day, dawn white garments, spend time in prayer, work in the fields honoring the forces that gave them the food, and how they would spent time with their families. Some of them were celibate, some were not, because they chose to perpetuate their family. So, my personal experience is that I have not found that about the Essenes.

Martin: Let’s shift this, now that we’ve laid some foundation here, toward the subject of prayer, and the roles of thought, feeling, and emotion, in creating effective prayer.

Braden: Now we have the foundation and the vocabulary to build some little conceptual models, and we can do this.

In our Western culture today, many people kind-of lump the three aspects of our internal technology together. Those three aspects are: thought, feeling, and emotion.

In Western traditions, feeling and emotions, people often say: “Well, what’s the difference? They’re both the same thing, aren’t they?”

The Essenes, in their traditions, are very clear. From the clearest instruction that I’ve seen, and I’m going to go back to this again. People ask me, they say: “Why do you speak so much from the Essene traditions? Are they the oldest?”

And what I’ll say is: “Certainly not.” We have many, many records, texts, and traditions that are much older than the ancient Essene—such as Babylonian, Sumerian, Egyptian traditions. The thing about the Essene texts is that they are the oldest texts that we have today that are recorded in the language that we still use today. This is ancient, Biblical Hebrew, so that we know, precisely, what those texts are saying.

In the other traditions, in the Egyptian hieroglyphs, and Mayan glyphs are a perfect example of this, the Mayan alphabet and the Mayan glyphs, or the Sumerian texts. We don’t actively use those. We can translate the texts, and to some degree we’re speculating about what they may have said.

But I’m sure, Rick, you seem pretty tied into the Mayan traditions, you know there is a movement now where they suspect that a good portion of the Mayan alphabet has been misinterpreted, mistranslated, and now, as we go back and reinterpret the Mayan texts through the new language, it’s saying something even more amazing than what we’ve considered in the past.

[Editor’s note: Once again, was this “error” yet another purposeful attempt to keep ancient Truth hidden from the common people and accessible only to the so-called “elite” controllers?]

So, the thing about the Essenes is they were recording their texts in the languages of Aramaic, Biblical Hebrew, and some Greek. The Biblical Hebrew is a continuously used language, so we know precisely what they were saying to us.

One of the things that they say is regarding prayer. They say that when we live in the Earth, we live in the Earth in three realms. They say that we walk this Earth in three realms. Those are the realms of thought, feeling, and body. They’re very clear about how these are three, distinct, yet related experiences that every individual has.

They go on to say that, when these three become one, when thought, feeling, and body become one, then you say to the mountain: “Mountain, move!” and the mountain will move. In other words, when we can focus thought, feeling, and body, or thought, feeling, and emotion into a single force, rather than scattered as three separate and non-related forces, that’s when we have the direct language that communicates with Creation.

They go on, very clear in their instructions, to tell us how to go about doing this. Other traditions do precisely the same thing, and it’s fragmented. It’s not nearly as complete. They don’t have nearly the eloquence of the language; it’s been distorted through the translations. So this is why, again, we come back to the Essenes.

What Western prayer researchers say to us today is that they identify four modes of prayer that we use alone, or in combination with one another. And prayer researchers acknowledge these; they’re called: colloquial, petitionary, ritualistic, and meditative prayer. Shall I identify those, quickly?

Martin: Yes, please.

Braden: Colloquial prayers are considered to be informal prayers, where we simply speak to God in our own language: “Dear God, if you let my car get to the Texaco station at the next exit, I’ll never let my gas tank get this low again.” That is a colloquial kind of prayer.

A petitionary prayer—for example, some of the spiritual traditions, such as those of the teachings of St. Germain and the I AM teachings we find based in the Mt. Shasta area here in North America: “Mighty I AM, I petition Creation for the right to heal and be healed, now, in all past, present, and future manifestations.” That’s a form of petitionary

Ritualistic prayer—is when we say a predetermined sequence of words, at a specific time, over and over again, like the dinnertime prayer: “God is great; God is good.” That is a ritualistic prayer. Or: “Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep.”

And as for meditative prayer—there is a lot of controversy as to whether or not meditation is even a form of prayer or not. But the prayer researchers say that meditative prayer is a prayer where we don’t use any words; we simply become aware of a Presence that moves through us, and allows us to commune with the Creation around us.

Western prayer researchers, historically, have said that, when we pray in the West, we use one or some combination of those four modes of prayer. Every one of them is valid. Every one of them has its role, its place in Creation.

And what had happened with me, Rick, is in our time with ancient and indigenous cultures, direct experience, and then through the experience of translating ancient texts, what we found is that there has always been a reference to a mode of prayer that doesn’t fit those four categories.

So we had to ask: “Could there be another mode of prayer?” And the answer to that became the book The Isaiah Effect because it was in the one Dead Sea Scroll that was found, completely intact, of all the 800 scrolls found between 1946 and 1959. It was called the Great Isaiah Scroll, with all 66 books of Isaiah’s wisdom there.

It was there that we found the best example and instructions for a mode of prayer that was lost when the Biblical texts were edited, 1700 years ago.

So we know there is at least one additional mode, or a 5th mode of prayer. And again, to make a long explanation very brief, what I will say is, this mode of prayer has no words. It has no outward expression, no mudras to hold, no body postures. It’s a prayer that is simply based in feeling, and it’s based in a feeling of what it’s like that the prayer has already been answered. And giving thanks of appreciation and gratitude, feeling the feeling as if the prayer were already answered, rather than asking for Divine intervention, and asking: “Please help this answer come to pass.”

So, where the first 4 modes of prayer are, more or less, forms of what we call supplication—where we feel powerless in a situation and say: “Dear God, or Forces of Creation, please intervene”—this 5th mode of prayer acknowledges our direct relationship to the Forces of Creation, and allows us to participate in the outcome of personal, or community, or a global event, simply by feeling the feeling of what it feels like as if the prayer is already answered.

Now, what quantum science says is, that is precisely the language! When we feel the feeling of the prayer already being answered, that is what awakens that possibility in the quantum soup and allows Creation to mirror that possibility back to us.

That all sounds maybe a little nebulous, a little esoteric. Or a little technical.

Martin: Not at all for our readers.

Braden: A direct example would be: What does that mean, when we’re praying for a loved one who is having a health crisis? Or for ourselves?

Well, in the first place, our conditioning is to pray FOR something—to pray for peace in our world, for example. This form of prayer says, instead of saying: “Dear God, please let there be peace in the world.” When we say, “please let there be peace”, we may, in fact, be acknowledging that peace doesn’t exist in this moment.

What this mode of prayer says is, if we feel the feelings of peace, so: “Dear God, I give thanks for the peace that already exists in this world.” And feel the gratitude and appreciation of that peace, then, in that way, we bring greater degrees of peace to bear on the conditions of our world. And the same thing applies in the healing of our loved ones, or the healing of our bodies. And this is what the ancients are saying, the Essenes specifically.

Martin: Well, this ties directly back to the experiments you talked about and the Fabric of Creation.

Braden: And we shared those experiments. Now I’m going to take those experiments one step further, and this is where modern science is now.

What science is saying today, and the agreement among scientists is that there are 4 forces that are responsible for all of Creation as we know it today. And those are the forces of gravity; the second one is the force of electromagnetism; the third one is what is called the weak nuclear force; and the fourth one is the strong nuclear force. I think everyone knows what gravity is, it’s what keeps everything from flying apart. Electromagnetics is the energy, the conventional form of energy that we rely upon to transmit information, energy, light in our world. All of our power systems are based on electromagnetics. The nuclear forces—the strong nuclear force is what fuels stars, and suns. And the weak nuclear force is related to radioactive decay, that we find in the Earth, for example.

So, scientists agree on that. Where this ties-in to the experiments that we spoke about earlier is through our heart. What we know is that our hearts are directly linked to the electromagnetic force of Creation. So what we can say is, without a doubt, through our hearts, or the emotions in our hearts, we speak to 25 percent of the forces of Creation, to one-fourth of the forces of Creation.

Now, there are other experiments that are ongoing, suggesting that we speak to even more of the forces of Creation. There is a process that is called Radio-Genesis that is being published, and there’s a tremendous amount of controversy about it right now, showing that human cells are actually capable of non-radioactive, biological fusion. In other words, human cells, from a biological perspective, are working with fusion of elements, but it doesn't have a radioactive outcome.

Fig. 2. Thought misaligned with feeling and emotion. This condition may render our prayer scattered and ineffective.

Fig. 3. “...whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed . . . those things which he saith shall come to pass.” (Mark 11:23). The key to effective prayer is the union of thought, feeling, and emotion.

I could send you some references on these. But these experiments now are showing that we are related to the weak nuclear forces of Creation through human emotion, as well. And as we find out more about that, it appears that humankind is now related to at least 50 percent of the Creative Forces of the Cosmos through human emotion.

Martin: Could you back-up for just one second to the weak nuclear forces. You lost me on that one.

Braden: The weak nuclear forces are weak nuclear bonds. It's a force. The strong nuclear forces are the ones that fuel the stars and the suns of Creation. The weak nuclear force is a force that we find on a smaller scale—for example, the decay of elements, radioactive decay of elements inside the Earth, and it generates heat. Much of the heat of the Earth comes from what we call the weak nuclear force.

Martin: Ok, thank you.

Braden: There's experimental evidence now, very interesting evidence, which shows that during the healing process, alternative methods of healing—for example, chiropractic, Reike, chi-gong, certain forms of chi-gong healing—that certain cells actually begin to absorb tremendous amounts of gamma rays from space, in the air around us. The amount of gamma radiation in the cells begins to increase in response to the feeling the person is having as the healing is occurring in their body.

So, this healing, the gamma radiation appears to be a trigger that allows the cells of our body to actually link directly to this weak nuclear force. And there's very good research showing that. These are suggesting now that at least 50 percent of the forces of Creation are directly tied to the emotions of the human body.

Now, there are additional studies, although I believe they are not strong enough to actually use in our programs right now, showing that the forces of gravity are also related to human emotion. There are studies where subjects will be on an atomic scale, and the scale will show them at one weight, and as they go into altered states of consciousness, through prayer-based and human emotion, they actually begin to weigh less on the scales. Which means there is something in their bodies, now, changing, and the force of gravity is being affected by that. If that's true, and the research bears that out, then we could say that we are related to at least 75 percent or three-quarters of the 4 forces of Creation.

What I suspect we will find within the next five to eight years, if the research continues, is that humankind, through the power of emotion—and, interestingly, this is the power that was edited out of the texts 1700 years ago—humankind, through the power of emotion, is actually linked to 100 percent of the forces of Creation.

As we remember to conduct ourselves and live in such a way that we incorporate specific forms of emotion into our lives, we're actually speaking to the Creative Forces of the Cosmos and participating in the outcome of the peace in our world and the healing in our bodies.

I think that is the message the ancients were so adamant about sharing with us, that was lost.

Martin: This is key to the entire interview, right here!

Braden: So what the ancients, what the Essenes are saying to us, is that there is a power that lives within our bodies. I think the irony—and I'm not judging this as right, wrong, good, or bad—the irony is that when we lost texts relating our modern world to the wisdom of the ancients, who were given access to, what their texts say is to, the Wisdom of the Heavens, when we began to lose that information, some of the key pieces that were lost were the pieces documenting precisely what we're speaking about right now.

The net result was that we began to feel very separate from Creation, separate from one another, powerless in our world, and powerless concerning that which unfolds in our lives, and our societies, and our relationships, on the one hand.

On the other hand, some of the best minds of our time, at the end of 1999, right before the close of the millennium, some of the greatest thinkers, spiritual leaders, researchers, scientists, were gathered together on a panel, right before the end of the millennium, and were asked: "What do you expect to see in the first two decades of the new millennium?"

Almost universally, these individuals, without discussing this with one another, said that they suspected that within the first 20 years of our new millennium humankind would be faced with the greatest challenges ever recorded by our kind.

That we would be faced with a disease, or viral epidemic, the medical people thought, which could wipe-out as much as two-thirds of the world's population, primarily in third-world and uneducated countries.

That we may, very well, find ourselves engaged in a third global conflict—whether it was nuclear or not, they weren't sure. But they said a third world war.

They said that the environmental effects of our technology are catching up with us so quickly that they expected we would be seeing that, within the next 10–20 years, a total breakdown of the ozone layers, and that the greenhouse gases and the temperature elevation and the weather effects would result in entire coastlines being decimated by all these things.

So, it's interesting that they were saying all of this. At the same time, these researchers, and spiritual and religious leaders, said that they believe that the very technology that was responsible for the challenges that humankind would face, that same technology would fail us in response to those challenges. They said that our technology won't be able to fix the viruses and the diseases. And our technology isn't going to know what to do with the weather patterns, and what's happening with global greenhouse effects.

People ask me about this. I'll say, first of all, I believe that none of those things need come to pass, and should we find ourselves in the position where our technology threatens our very civilization, which is what these ladies and gentlemen are saying, the ancients have a very clear response.

There is another technology that we have not really explored in recorded human history, and it's the technology that lives within. This internal technology of human emotion, that has a direct link to the Creative Forces of our world, and has been scientifically and statistically shown to have a direct effect on governments, on nations, on military choices, on disease and epidemics, on populations, widespread as well as localized populations, and if we find ourselves in a position where we are threatened, that we always have this inner technology.

I think it's important to become aware of it, and develop it NOW, before we actually need it, rather than waiting until the moment that we find it necessary in our lives. Instead, embrace a technology that has a direct effect on human immune systems, for example, human emotion, that can turn-on the key-codes of immunity that render the most potent viruses, life-threatening viruses, impotent. And we're finding that happening.

HIV/AIDS/Hepatitis C/Epstein Bar, these viruses have been rendered impotent in the presence of very specific qualities of human emotion, which has always been one of the key messages of the ancients—compassion, gratitude, love, understanding. And now we know that there is a biological equivalent for those kinds of emotions.

Martin: And it's not a stretch to say that those emotions are, in fact, in total harmony with Divine Thought and the Fabric of Creation.

Braden: Precisely! And that brings us back to the question you asked me earlier. Max Planck, who was the father of quantum theory, accepted his Nobel Prize for his theory. And when he accepted it, he made one of the most astounding statements in his speech, and I'll paraphrase the statement. I don't have it right in front of me right now, and I've recited it so many times that this will be close.

He said, as a man who has devoted his entire life to the most clear-headed science, to the study of matter, I can tell you about the atoms this much, and then he said: "There is no matter, as such." And then he goes on to say that: "Everything we see as our world is held together by a force that we're just beginning to understand." And he said: "Behind this force, we must assume the existence of a conscious and intelligent mind; this mind is the matrix of all matter." That is an amazing thing for a physicist to accept!

So, he's saying, behind everything we see in our world, we must assume the existence of a conscious and intelligent mind.

So my question is, and this is what we do in our programs: Who's mind is responsible for the matrix of all matter? Who's mind or what mind is it that we're dealing with?

That's the answer we're fleshing out through this interview, because what we find is, our conscious awareness is part of a Greater Consciousness, and together we are co-creating and participating in the process as it unfolds in our lives.

Our lives are not so much happening TO us; they are mirrors of what's happening WITHIN us. There is a way to align with that Divine Process, and I think that's what the ancients were saying to us in the language of their time.

Martin: Well, along this line, the scroll, if I am quoting from your book correctly, says that: "First there will be a time of devastation, shifting to peace and healing." And it goes on to say: "Time is a collection of malleable and diverse outcomes." And then you note that this is determined by our collective choices. So, it needn't be this way.

Braden: Right. This is where the controversy that has come around that book, The Isaiah Effect, has come from precisely this portion of the book, in that, historically, scholars have interpreted prophecy, what the ancients called prophecy. By the way, modern science takes prophecy very seriously—now, it's just getting a new name. They call it "remote viewing". And it's based precisely on the same principles.

Actually, a little aside: I just shared the stage at a conference in New York and presented with Dr. Russell Targ, who is the laser physicist who worked at Stanford Research Institute, SRI, in the development of remote viewing, back in 1971. What a really, really, genuinely nice man. Actually, I had a conversation with him, and he is not aware of the experiments I just shared with you. He said that, if these turn out to be true, then this changes everything. We're actually shipping the documents off to him this afternoon, so he can become more aware of what's been going on.

Martin: It seems like the lines between science and spirituality are becoming fuzzier with each passing day.

Braden: I agree. Yes, the boundary that has traditionally existed between science and religion is breaking down very quickly. The reason, I think, is because there was a time when science said that we had outgrown spiritual traditions; they said we no longer need them, on the one hand.

On the other hand, spiritual traditions and many religions said that science has gone too far, that science has transgressed into a realm where we can change the codes of life, in that we're moving into territory that is sacred and Divine territory, where we have no business being. That, historically, is what has been happening.

More recently, however, both science and religion are struggling. Religions of the world are finding themselves in the position where they're losing their following because their teachings have not addressed what is happening to people in their daily lives.

Martin: If I can just interject here, I think both science and religion have been victims of their own dogma.

Braden: Yes, precisely! That's what's happening. So, if the religions are struggling to maintain a following, science, on the other hand, is struggling because science has reached a place, and Max Planck stated it beautifully, we can only delve so far into the physicality of matter, and then we find that there is a Force that science doesn't account for.

So, what's happening, both science and religion are now looking to one another for explanations. Religions are looking to science, to say: "Can you help us validate the existence of God, or consciousness, or the mind?"

Whereas science is saying: "We've found these forces, and we don't know what they mean, and maybe the ancient religions have the information to help us understand how this all works together." So the boundary is becoming less defined.

I believe what's happening is, there is a marriage that will lead us to a wisdom—and I don't even know what to call the wisdom, it doesn't have a name as yet—but it's a wisdom where we marry the essence of our most ancient teachings with the language of modern science. And if we have the wisdom to do so, we'll allow those two to merge and carry us beyond, to transcend the great challenges of our time, rather than remain stuck in the dogma, as you pointed out.

Martin: I would predict that, as more and more of the "halls of records" are discovered around the world, as we move along, we will find, in fact, these two are not mutually exclusive but should work in harmony all along. I think that is part of what has been lost, and has been carried through all these millennia, and that is the fact that these two are NOT mutually exclusive, but that they work hand-in-glove.

Braden: Precisely! That's why we began the conversation and I was saying what I said—that this universal theme, that a long time ago the Wisdom of the Heavens was given to the people of this world, in the language of another time, and that language became the religious language that has carried those traditions to this very day. And that language really doesn't have any meaning to a technical society or a technological society, on the one hand; on the other hand, science is rediscovering bits and pieces of precisely that same understanding, but the bits and pieces don't appear to fit very well together.

So, as good as our science is, when they reach a place where they're stuck, if they will go back into this "Original Wisdom"—that's what I call it, and we actually have programs that are entitled "Original Wisdom"—so we go back into that Original Wisdom and say: "Ok, what does a 6,000-year-old text say about the relationship between human emotion and the condition of our bodies?" And then take that into the language of modern science, and what we now know to be true, what we're finding is, there is a viable marriage there, and it behooves us to do precisely that, if we have the wisdom and the humility to do that.

And I think this is the generation where that happens. This is the generation where there are those who are very much invested in the science that was developed in the 18th and 19th Centuries, and they're very clear that they're not going to change their viewpoints. And this is also the generation where there are lone scientists who are open to new possibilities. Even some older scientists are open to very new possibilities. But what's happening is, and this is why I made this point earlier, we find ourselves challenged with conditions that science can't fix, and that religions can't fix, then the two have to come together to find those solutions. And I think that's precisely what we're seeing happening.

I think there are conditions unfolding now that science never expected; they don't know what to do. And we have to answer the greatest questions about our relationship to Creation to know how to use our technology.

When we clone another being, does that being have a soul? How do we know the answer to that, because science has never seriously attempted to define the soul, or human consciousness, or the human mind, and they are all definable, in the language of our time.

So, we haven't even talked about this yet, but we're moving toward the understanding of what's called the "quantum hologram", what Dr. Edgar Mitchell, the Apollo astronaut, is calling the Mind of Nature. Now, I had the opportunity to share the stage with him twice in this last year, and we've had these conversations.

What we're finding is, the "quantum hologram" may be the 20th and 21st Century term to describe what the ancients have called The Heavens, and the home of the soul, and the root of the consciousness. As that becomes better understood, then I think we're going to move, very quickly, into our definitions of precisely what our soul and the consciousness in our minds are all about. The only way we can do that is to understand how we relate to Creation. As we do that, then the challenges of our time will take on less of a significance, because we'll understand what their role is really all about.

Martin: Now, you may not be comfortable moving into this area, and I'm fine if you don't want to. But, moving more into the esoteric realm, speaking of Peru and South America, the Pleiadians, and The Talmud Of Immanuel, it seems that the message that the Pleiadians and the ETs are trying to bring to us at this time is that same lost knowledge—the importance of unity of thought, feeling, and emotion to bring about a more perfect world, through our thoughts and actions.

Braden: I think I kind of know where you're going. This is the 15th year that we've done these programs, in one form or another, all over the world. We're with the public almost 11 months out of every year.

So, when people ask me why any mention

The Secret Of Our Reflected Universe Unlocking The Mystery Of Heaven, Through The Science Of Man

"There is no matter as such!

All matter originates and exists only by virtue of a force....

We must assume behind this force the existence of a conscious and intelligent Mind.

This Mind is the matrix of all matter."

Max Planck, Nobel Prize-winning father of quantum theory

Question: What "Mind" creates "the matrix of all matter"?

The oldest records of humankind suggest that Creation "speaks" to us each day through the language of a reflected universe—a language where the events of our daily lives are the product of relationships that begin in the unseen realms of Creation. The same texts remind us that we may use this language to "see the unseen, hear that which cannot be heard", and speak with Creation through "the unspoken word". Recent advances in quantum science now support precisely such understandings, providing the keys to translate our forgotten language, giving new meaning to each career, every relationship, and the "unexplained" events of our lives.

Three groundbreaking experiments in the late 1990s unveil dramatic and undeniable evidence of a newly discovered form of energy, a matrix, linking each member of our global family, Creation, and the events of our lives in unexpected and empowering ways. Relegated to technical journals, and receiving little attention from mainstream media, these experiments, reported by leading research institutions of our day, shake the foundation of our predominant worldview, scientifically documenting that:

- 1. We communicate with our world through a previously unrecognized form of energy that operates outside the bounds of measured time and space.¹*
- 2. Our DNA directly influences our physical world through this form of energy that has been previously overlooked, and is described as non-local (it appears to already exist everywhere at once, rather than being generated upon demand).²*
- 3. we influence our physical DNA through a non-physical, non-local form of energy that is directly linked to human emotion.³*

A growing body of evidence suggests that the events of our visible world, the failed relationships, broken agreements, disease, and conflict of our past, as well as the joy, peace and healing of the present, stem from relationships that begin with the "Matrix of all matter". Through the non-local energy associated with human emotion, and broadcast through human DNA, we create conditions in the realms where such events originate. Physicists suspect that it is in the higher dimensions of new creation theories, the quantum "heavens" referred to in ancient traditions, that the four known forces of Nature merge into a newly recognized force, the elusive unified field, that weaves its way into each moment of our lives. Inviting us one step further, ancient scholars describe how we may marry this unified field, now linked to human emotion, into the blueprints of peace, cooperation, and healing relationships that become the reality of our future.

The loss of such an important understanding is now attributed to the two interruptions in the knowledge chain, and the loss of over 530,000 documents, that have historically linked our modern world to ancient wisdom. Could the great mystery of science, and the great secret of ancient spiritual traditions, be one in the same? Join Gregg Braden on this journey bridging science and miracles through the lost language of our reflected universe.

of ET influence is conspicuously absent in our I think there's a tremendous body of programs, including Pleiadians, my answer to information that supports that presence and their that is simply this: I certainly acknowledge the influence throughout history. What I've found, presence of off-planet intelligence, and however, is that, for many people, that presence acknowledge their influence throughout history. and the exploring of that presence becomes a

Braden: —in their lives and they will spend so much time focusing on trying to prove or disprove the existence of non-terrestrial intelligence, that it actually becomes a diversion and moves people farther away from the focus of what's actually happening within them.

At the same time, what I have gleaned from the translations of some of the most ancient texts and temple walls that I've had the opportunity to examine, is the very reason that so many off-planet intelligences are interested in what's happening with us, precisely because of what's happening inside our bodies, precisely because of our ability to come to terms with the internal technology of thought, feeling, and emotion, and bring it to bear on the conditions of our lives, before we annihilate ourselves, essentially.

So, I acknowledge those, and the reason I don't speak about them publicly and don't really spend a lot of time on them is because my path, and my choice, has been to hold the focus in a relevant and meaningful way to what's happening inside our bodies and in people's day-to-day lives.

Martin: Well, and again, I didn't want to distract this well-grounded research on terra-firma that you've accomplished.

Braden: Let me summarize this another way, and it's actually part of the dedication for the book The Isaiah Effect, because the ancient Essenes certainly acknowledge off-planet intelligences, in the language of their day, and they answer some of the greatest questions that we have asked continuously, such as: Who are we? Why are we here?

And what the Essene texts say to us, in very, very, clear terms, is that although our souls may have come from many different places, with many different backgrounds, many different lifetimes, in a variety of histories, that we've come together on this Earth for one reason above all other reasons. And they say that we've come here to Love, number one, and to find a Love in this world greater than the Love of all of the Angels of all of the Heavens.

Now, readers can interpret the word Angel however they'd like to interpret it. But what the Essenes are saying is that there are experiences that we may create, among ourselves here on Earth, that can only be created here, and nowhere else, and regardless of our mastery in other worlds and other bodies, we all bring that mastery to bear in this world.

So, essentially, what they are saying is, we come to this world, we push ourselves to the very edge of who we believe we are, and the only way we survive the atrocities and the suffering of this world is through our ability to Love our way through it.

And every time we do—and this is where this is key—every time we on Earth find a way to transcend the suffering of humankind, through the power of Love, here, that our Love is not limited to this world, that all beings in all worlds learn a new way to Love through what we've done here.

They're very clear about that being the reason we are here, and the reason why so many other worlds are so interested in what we're doing—because through our experiences here, others are learning a new way to Love.

Apparently, the suffering that we find in our world is not possible in other worlds, the way it is here.

So we come to this world, pushing ourselves to the very edge of who we believe we are, and in doing so, have the suffering and the atrocities, and then find our way to Love through it. Other beings in other worlds are then learning from that, are benefiting from that.

Then the Essenes go on, in just the next paragraph, and they say something that I think helps to clear-up the mystery. They say the only difference between the Angels of the Heavens and the Angels who walk this Earth is that the Angels in the Heavens remember that they're Angels.

So, they're implying that everyone on this Earth is a highly sophisticated, highly evolved, highly developed being from somewhere else, who has come to this world to play a role in finding a greater way to Love. And sometimes the roles may be more apparent than others. Some are going to create the suffering, some are going to heal the suffering, and we're all working together to find a way to Love, and then all beings in all worlds are benefiting from that.

So, for whatever that's worth, that is the wisdom that some of our most ancient traditions leave to us, that was edited from our texts, by the way, 1700 years ago, that tell us why we're doing what we're doing. It doesn't condone or provide an excuse, certainly, for anything that's happening here. But, when people say "Why, why are these things happening?" for me it gives a little glimmer of reasoning, and helps me to make a little bit better sense out of what's happening in our lives today.

Martin: I'm comfortable with that as a place to end.

Braden: You know, Rick, it's interesting. It's at the end of the two hours. I have something else. The flow just happened to work.

Martin: I think that's a wonderful place to end. Thank you, so much, for spending this time with us. Our readers will definitely appreciate what you've shared with me today!

Emerging Viruses - AIDS & Ebola

Audio Tapes
3 hours:
$19.95 (+S/H)

This is the first in-depth exploration into the origins of HIV and Ebola. Claims that these "emerging viruses" naturally evolved and then jumped species from ape to man seem grossly unfounded in light of the compelling evidence assembled in this extraordinary text. Alternatively, the possibility that these bizarre germs were laboratory creations, accidentally or intentionally transmitted via tainted hepatitis and smallpox vaccines in the U.S. and Africa—as numerous authorities have alleged—is investigated herein. This book reviews the numerous viral vaccine studies conducted simultaneously in New York City and Central West Africa by a narrow network of virologists working for major military-medical contractors under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and the World Health Organization (WHO). Included is Dr. Robert Gallo, the notorious "discoverer" of the AIDS virus. The text presents bizarre and horrifying facts about the biological weapons race of the 1960s and early 1970s when these researchers developed countless immune-system-ravaging viruses, and experimented with an assortment of antidote vaccines allegedly for "defense" and cancer prevention.

Revelations of a Mother Goddess

An Interview by David Icke

The staggering story of human sacrifice and satanic ritual, involving the most famous people in the world. Arizona Wilder, formerly Jennifer Greene, was mind-programmed from birth to become one of the three most important female conductors of Satanic rituals on the planet. Her programmer was Josef Mengele, the notorious "Angel of Death" in the Nazi concentration camps. When he died in the late 1980s, her programming began to break down.

In this video interview with David Icke, she describes human sacrifice rituals at Glamis Castle and Balmoral, in which the Queen, the Queen Mother, and other members of the Royal Family sacrificed children in Satanic ceremonies.

She talks of the same experiences with Henry Kissinger, George Bush, Bill Clinton, members of the Rockefeller and Rothschild families, and a host of the most famous names in the United States and the United Kingdom.

Your view of the world will never be the same when you hear the revelations of Arizona Wilder and consider their relevance to your daily life.

Clearance Sale On High-Tech Weapons

Inside The Weekly Arms Bazaar At Redstone Arsenal

Editor's note: Recognizing connections between seemingly unconnected subjects is probably the hallmark of those who effort to discern truth despite the blarney dished out by the controlled print and broadcast media prostitutes. After all, that is what The SPECTRUM is all about—working to present the kinds of information that allow such revealing “ah-ha!” connections to be made by you, the discerning reader.

The following gem by Al Martin is important not just for what APPEARS to be the subject matter of this report, but for WHO Al notes are some of the players. As a hint for making those revealing connections, you may want to go back and review what Sherman Skolnick and Al Martin had to say about the Chinese and our downed spyplane (in the last issue of The SPECTRUM) in order to fully appreciate the implications here. Let it suffice to say that technology transfer with the Chinese AND Russians appears to be a thriving business-as-usual enterprise among “friends”.

Also note Al's insider comments about the present state of the FBI and, indirectly, about technology possibly used in the Oklahoma City bombing—comments which, as usual, dovetail with those made by Sherman Skolnick elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM.

For those of you unfamiliar with this guy, Al Martin is a retired U.S. Navy Lt. Commander and former officer in the Office of Naval Intelligence. In his own biographical statement he claims to be: “America's foremost whistle-blower on government fraud and corruption, having testified before the congressional Kerry Committee and the Alexander Committee. He lives at an undisclosed location, since the criminals named in the book have been returned to national power and prominence. His column ‘Behind The Scenes In The Beltway’ is published regularly on Al Martin Raw.”

Al has a new 384-page book titled: The Conspirators: Secrets Of An Iran Contra Insider which includes classic Al Martin columns which are as typically irreverent as they are factually eye-opening. It is available for $17.95. Call: 1-877-776-9004, or write to: National Liberty Press, P.O. Box 43, Pray MT 59065, or visit his www.almartinraw.com Internet website.

The Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Alabama hosted a taxpayer-funded seafood buffet for Certification Day. The Friendly Colonel reports: “The only thing that was any good out of the buffet was the cracked crab.” He also reports that he is constantly amazed at the new things he keeps finding out.

What he learned this weekend is that the Redstone Arsenal, unbeknownst to the public, is the key government facility for explosives training among the federal agencies. This includes training bomb squads within the FBI, BATF, and Secret Service. There were over two thousand people taking these courses, as well as foreign military, including Chinese and Russian Army personnel. There were also Germans, Israelis, and even people with Arab head-dress, who turned out to be Iranians.

The Friendly Colonel asked his friend: “Why in the hell are we training Iranians in the use of explosives on a supposedly sensitive U.S. Arsenal?” His friend replied that it was just business as usual.

The Friendly Colonel was invited to an arms sale at the Redstone Arsenal. An FBI agent friend of his told him that this would be his “last weekend” since he's being transferred to “an unspecified designation”. He's over the age limit for active field service, but they still won't put through his retirement papers. In fact, he doesn't even know where they will be sending him.

When they both arrived at the Arsenal, they found a weapons sale already in progress at one of the barracks. It was way out on the northern edge of the facility in a broken down old barracks building that was “all rusted out and leaky and the front door was kicked in”. There was absolutely no security as usual.

They were offering for sale every type of munition they had in inventory in that building. It's as if they were clearing out inventory—building by building, the Friendly Colonel noted. You could buy anything you wanted.

Biochemical. Chemical. Thermonuclear. Energy Weapons. Anything you wanted, you could buy.

You had to have a shopping list, of course. The building was full of Chinese agents who were buying. What it was supposed to be was the same old deal: ordinance and weapons systems that have been declared “obsolete”. In most cases, however, it was brand new. The cases hadn't even been opened.

They had a display table up front. The Friendly Colonel noted: “It looked like a display table for a James Bond movie.”

As a sample, he was given an explosive ink-pen. He was nervous about it, but it came with an instruction manual. All you have to do is twist the top off of it. It has an automatic timing device. It destroys everything within ten feet of wherever it explodes. There were no logos on it. It had a serial number, but that's all. It's a metal ink-pen, anodized black on chrome in color. And the pen—you could actually write with it.

The Friendly Colonel reports that everybody got different party favors. He got the explosive ink-pen.

Other party favors included radiation detection badges, like a lapel pin. It's a strip that lets you know whether the radiation is dangerously high.

In the back of the barracks was a caged-off section, where you have to wear these radiation badges in order to enter. It's where nuclear weapons are stored. You have to be specially cleared to buy the nuclear weapons. The only guys the Friendly Colonel saw in there were Russians and Chinese.

When he walked to the back of the building, he saw three brand new V-22 Ospreys on the tarmac, next to the building. They were completely unmarked. They appeared to be civilian models, since they were not painted in military colors. They were being loaded-up with crates from the back of the barracks. The crates were all marked “UNSPECIFIED WEAPONS SYSTEMS”.

These were not old wooden crates. They were some kind of boron or graphite high-tech material with digitized letters on them. They had electromechanical locks on them with different colored lights on them.

The Friendly Colonel actually handled one of the weapons from the crate before they auctioned them off. He described it as a shoulder-fired rifle-type weapon. It reminded him of a high-tech version of the old Vietnam-era 40-mm thump guns or “thumpers”. The barrel seemed to be about 40 mm. The ordinance was explained by the captain who was conducting the sale.

It's a canister and he couldn't figure out the material it was made from. It was a canister that was about 40 mm by 200 mm long. The weapon fires this canister. It apparently has a substantial range, several thousand meters or more. He doesn't know the contents of the canister except that the captain described it as having the explosive power to “level one city block”.

The Friendly Colonel is beginning to learn that conventional explosives have been developed that would astound the American people. He believes that a lot of this stuff is not nuclear, is not an energy or fusion weapon, but some sort of conventional explosive that has been developed, that the people have not been told about. That has simply tremendous destructive power.

[Editor's note: Keep the above in mind with respect to the fabrication that has been blamed on Timothy McVeigh and his supposedly truck-delivered simple fertilizer bomb. See Sherman Skolnick's information on this subject elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM for more food for thought concerning inconvenient facts about the Oklahoma City bombing.

And for those of you with a good memory for details—remember back to the problematic DOUBLE seismic event that was recorded on the University of Oklahoma seismometer at the time of the supposedly single-bomb blast. It suggested TWO events separated by a several-second time gap that was too long to have been due to one blast event. There were other inconvenient facts and revealing observations of VERY high-tech shenanigans operating to bring about that tragic event which seem to also have been “forgotten”—or were they

It is expected, by the dark, so-called “elite” crooks running the show from behind the scenes, that the public can be counted on to have a short memory AND an even shorter attention span—a span which has been carefully cultivated and tuned by our educational system to accept the kinds of mind-programming sound-bytes of disinformation the normal, prostituted print and broadcast media specialize in delivering.]

What should be again pointed out is the extraordinary lack of security in these facilities—where thermonuclear and biological and biochemical weapons are kept in dilapidated old barracks buildings with doors left open. The doors don't even lock, or they're off their hinges. There's no base security. And there's no inventory control at all. Nobody knows what's in them anymore. Nobody knows how much goes out of them. It's literally—you take what you want.

Anyway, these V-22 Ospreys were being loaded with this new type of weapon. On the orange air-freight tags it said “DESTINATION UNKNOWN”.

But what surprised him is that he had never

The Reptilian Agenda Parts I & II

(Featured interview in the October 1999 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

David Icke has produced two amazing videos with the Zulu “sanusi” or shaman, Credo Mutwa, who reveals astonishing information which, until now, was only available to the highest initiates of the African shaman tradition.

Credo says, “The world must know this—and know it now.”

He reveals how a shapeshifting reptilian race (the “Chitauli” to Africans) has controlled humanity for thousands of years and how their bloodlines are in the positions of royal, political, and economic power today.

Credo Mutwa supports all the themes outlined in The Biggest Secret and adds his own unique knowledge and experience of traveling Africa for nearly 80 years.

These videos will re-write the UFO/extraterrestrial story in a way that will blow your mind. UFO researchers have ignored Africa and therefore ignored one of the greatest sources of knowledge on the planet.

While people still argue over Roswell and the extraterrestrial beings apparently found there, African tribes-people have been interacting with these ET “gods” for thousands of years, sometimes eating them, as Credo Mutwa did on one occasion with unforgettable consequences.

Credo has not only seen dead “greys” many times, he has seen them examined behind their “grey” exterior and he knows exactly what they really look like—and it is nothing like we think!

“This is the most amazing man it has ever been my honor to meet—a genius—and the importance of these videos is simply beyond words.”

—David Icke

After making these videos, Credo was visited by two people from Cape Town who offered him 50,000 rand, and a house anywhere in South Africa he would like to name, if he would agree to never speak to David Icke again and never have anything to do with him. Credo's reply can be imagined!

This is the presentation that the Illuminati (the forces of global control) tried so hard to stop—media interviews were cancelled; immigration officials turned up at the theatre to question his right to speak; pressure was applied on the venue to cancel the event itself; and pies were even thrown at David at a book signing by a rent-a-mob who ludicrously and outrageously sought to dub him a “racist”.

even seen the new V-22 Osprey. Very few people have actually seen one. And he was surprised to see three of them lined up in a row, considering it's an airplane most of which have crashed.

The Friendly Colonel notes that these aircraft were used as cargo haulers. They were not samples to be sold. When he saw that it was all Chinese people in the back of the room, the first thing he thought—given the locale of Huntsville, Alabama and the range of the Osprey, and given the fact that it can land and take off like a helicopter—he thought that the reason they were used is because they could land on a cargo ship.

That's the only logical explanation. He remembered having heard the stories in recent weeks about the transport problems they're having, and here's an aircraft that can land on a cargo freighter at sea.

What astounded him the most is that everything appeared so normal, so business as usual, that nobody was really paying attention to anything that was going on. He says that he could have picked-up any weapons system, walked out and put it in his car, and nobody would have said a thing—because others were doing the same thing.

Anybody could pick-up anything. You could drive through the base without being stopped. He's never asked to say who he is. He's never asked to produce identification tags. Nothing.

Regarding the resignation of FBI Director Louis Freeh, the Friendly Colonel said that his source told him that Freeh was becoming overwhelmed by the FBI getting increasingly dragged into all these various investigations—by Congress, and GAO, and GSA. More of the FBI's involvement in illegal covert activities was coming to light. Freeh just wanted to get out, whilst the getting was good.

As Freeh uncovered more and more of the Bureau's involvement in the egregious, surreptitious, illicit, and covert acts, I think Freeh became increasingly depressed. It was well-known among the senior agents that Freeh had seen some doctor recently for depression.

That's what happens in government. The FBI agents get out of Quantico. They're young and they're hotshots. They're go-getters. They got their heads full of bullshit about the FBI's out there to do the right thing, enforce the law, and save the nation and all that.

But once they've been in the system for a while, they understand the real situation—that the FBI is aligned with numerous shadowy cliques and cabals. It's essentially the Party Whip for the Military-Industrial Complex. It keeps everything in line. Their job is to keep all the various components of the Great Illicit Machine in line. The FBI is simply used as a tool of enforcement to punish those who step out of line.

Ninety-eight percent of the adults in this country are decent, hard-working, honest Americans. It's the other lousy two percent who get all the publicity. But then—we elected them.

The Indigo Children

The New Kids Have Arrived

by Lee Carroll & Jan Tober

(Featured interview in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

The “Indigo Child” is a boy or girl who displays a new and unusual set of psychological attributes, revealing a pattern of behavior generally undocumented before. This pattern has singularly unique factors that call for parents and teachers to change their treatment and upbringing of these kids to assist them in achieving balance and harmony in their lives, and to help them avoid frustration.

In this groundbreaking book, international authors and lecturers Lee Carroll and Jan Tober answer many of the often-puzzling questions surrounding Indigo Children, such as:

- Can we really be seeing human evolution in kids today?
- Are these kids smarter than we were at their age?
- How come a lot of our children today seem to be “system busters”?
- Why are so many of our brightest kids being diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)?
- Are there proven, working alternatives to Ritalin?

Throughout this work, Carroll and Tober bring together some very fine minds (doctors, educators, psychologists, and more) who shed light on the Indigo Child phenomenon. These children are truly special, representing a great percentage of all the kids being born today on a worldwide basis. They come in “knowing” who they are—so they must be recognized, appreciated for their exceptional qualities, and guided with love and care.

This book is a must for the parents of unusually bright and active children!

Revisiting The Diabolical Oklahoma City ‘Bombing’

Editor’s note: People are busy. Memories fade. And the well-controlled print and broadcast media have been programming the public for over six years now with an “official” version of what happened at Oklahoma City on that terrible morning of April 19, 1995.

The impending (as this is being written) Timothy McVeigh execution has provided a new opportunity for the controlled media airheads to repeat and repeat and repeat their stories cementing the “official” propaganda into the public mindset. That means it is ALSO a good time to bring back to our attention some of the matters that seem to have slipped conveniently out of the picture. Like The Truth.

Elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM both Sherman Skolnick and Al Martin present other pieces of the “patchwork quilt” of Truth that are not being generally acknowledged or allowed to re-enter the conscious awareness of the public. Below we are including two very powerful additional contributions for your consideration and, in the first case, to also refresh your memory.

The first item is an excerpt from the December 1997-January 1998 issue of the excellent NEXUS magazine (<http://www.nexusmagazine.com>). The author is longtime professional geophysicist Harry Mason.

His highly credentialed biographical information states that: “Harry Mason, BSc, MSc, MAIMM, MIMM, FGS, is a UK-born geologist/geophysicist, resident in Perth, Western Australia. His 30-year international career in mineral exploration has had him stationed all over the world, including Alaska, India, Norway, Mexico, Morocco, Sudan, and UK. He has extensive field experience in geo-recce, geological mapping, geophysics/geochemistry, prospecting, remote-sensing/computer imaging technologies, and seismic and electromagnetic studies. He (usually) specialises in the geology and resource exploration of Western Australia’s eastern goldfields. Lately he has been devoting his time and expertise to researching mysterious Australian outback phenomena of natural and man-made origins.”

The larger context of Harry’s comprehensive NEXUS article was an exploration of evidence to support the hypothesis that “Tesla-style” (meaning scalar) electromagnetic weaponry was used in the very suspicious Kobe, Japan earthquake and the equally questionable downing of TWA Flight 800—in addition to the Oklahoma City “bombing” event. While regular readers of this newspaper are probably in complete agreement with his hypothesis (and would add many more items, like the Northridge, California earthquake EXACTLY one year earlier than the 17 January 1995 Kobe quake), our focus here is strictly to call attention to some details the mainstream media have been ever so diligently omitting from the “official” version of the actual orchestrated diabolical event that happened at Oklahoma City on that dark April morning.

Remember that Timothy J. McVeigh stated publicly (and the press made great fun about his saying that) he was “full of chips” from his military background. (He was a decorated Gulf War veteran with advanced training.) That is most likely the truth and adds an important mitigating dimension to exactly WHO—behind the scenes, pulling the strings—is morally responsible for even the relatively small part he (and co-defendant Terry L. Nichols) may have played in the staging of the “bombing” event.

In making the decision NOT to grant a stay of execution on Wednesday 6/6/01, the Honorable Judge Richard P. Matsch, who conducted the original Denver trial, was quoted on CNN News as saying that McVeigh was “an INSTRUMENT of death and destruction”. What an interesting—if sadly and cowardly veiled—way to put the same Truth I just mentioned above. Blaming and punishing him, as an INSTRUMENT under others’ control, gets to the Truth of the matter about as much as blaming and punishing the automobile that jumped the curb and hit you, while standing on the sidewalk, rather than blaming and punishing the drunk DRIVER of that car!

If people feel badly now about the tragic event that killed so many innocent people, how are they going to react when they finally find out that they were stirred-up by the media to hurry and to concur with the execution of a person who, besides being under various forms of serious mind-control, could not possibly have been responsible for the actual event being pinned upon him? Misplaced anger is no justification for gross injustice.

With the above in mind, the second item we are sharing below outlays the absurdity of the FBI just recently “discovering” all those 5000 pages of documents (the CNN-reported count slipped up from 3000 pages to 5000 pages all of a sudden on the same day McVeigh’s stay of execution was denied) which “could” have a bearing on Timothy McVeigh’s legal case. The report was extracted from the sightings.com Internet website, which posted it from a publication called The Free Republic. The insightful analysis is authored by a VERY informed source calling himself “Preacher Jon” for obvious reasons of anonymity.

No wonder FBI Director Freeh was in a hurry to get out of the driver’s seat. Perhaps he finally discovered that his “steering wheel” isn’t really connected to anything important—while others run the show from well behind the scenes!

JANUARY 1998 HARRY MASON

OKLAHOMA CITY “BOMBING”

On 19 April 1995, at a few minutes after 9:00 am, Oklahoma City was blasted by the “terrorist bombing” of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. One hundred and sixty eight men, women, and children were killed, and hundreds more were maimed or injured in this callous attack. The building was nearly totally destroyed by the explosion, whilst severe damage was inflicted on adjacent buildings, petering out at about a one-mile radius from ground zero.

This event was soon blamed upon a “right-wing militia group” composed of ex-Gulf War veterans utilising an ANFO bomb composed of from two to five tonnes of ammonium nitrate and Diesel fuel-oil set up in a hire truck parked in front of the target building.

A robotic Timothy McVeigh was recently convicted of the OKC “bombing”, and his alleged accomplice, Terry Nichols, awaits his trial (which is about to commence as this article goes to press).

On the day of the event, I, like many others, watched the CNN TV feed of the Oklahoma scene. Intriguingly, there were early reports of missiles being seen coming down vertically into the building, but these reports never resurfaced.

[Editor’s note: The bold-type emphasis is ours. There were also eyewitness reports early that day of “flashes of light” coming down from the sky just before the actual “explosive” event. Harry mentions some related observations later in this report.]

A survivor with blood over his face was interviewed about one hour into the rescue effort. He described how his life had been saved in his previous domicile in California. When the Murrah Building began to shake violently, he recognised an earthquake, just like those he had experienced in California, so he dived under his fifth-floor desk. Some five-to-ten seconds later, a huge explosion demolished the building around him, but the desk saved his life.

Then came reports that more bombs had been found, and a utility truck with a small armoured bomb box in its tray was shown, whilst the FBI's radio delivered a conversation alleging large drums of mercury fulminate explosive had been found attached to building support pillars next to the lift shaft.

I became agitated, since I had never heard of earthquake-type effects hitting a building BEFORE a bomb went off, and I knew mercury fulminate to be an extremely unstable explosive and very unlikely to have survived a major explosion. Also, the size of explosive drum reported then, and later photographed, would have been far too large to fit in the armoured bomb box that reportedly drove away with these dangerous prizes.

Explosives experts in Australia, the UK, and USA (e.g., the General Partin report) began to question the nature of the damage at OKC. The gist of their theses is that low-velocity explosives like ANFO cannot have demolished so many support pillars in the strange pattern seen at OKC, since the blast pressure falls off according to the inverse cube distance law—yet some near-bomb pillars were still standing, whilst some further away from the bomb were demolished by the blast. Their reports generally invoke a need for very-high-velocity explosives and individual charges attached to certain pillars inside the building—requiring hours of work to fit out.

Personal friends with experience in mining explosives and Belfast IRA ANFO terrorist-bomb damage have confirmed these points to me and have noted that the crater that developed at OKC does not fit with the truck bomb explanation or the truck's alleged parking lot position.

Another possible weapon candidate soon surfaced: the "A-Neutronic" bomb. In this scenario, a mad criminal scientist (the infamous Michael Riconosciuto, currently serving time in a U.S. prison) developed for the U.S. Government a new super-weapon that involved blowing a cloud of chemicals into the air, charging the cloud with a large excess of electrostatic energy by means of a small rocket-carried "wire", and then detonating the resultant "fuel-air" mix to create a small nuclear-type explosion.

I began to collect eyewitness reports and evidence from official source publications and Internet sites relating to the OKC event. Then, in late 1996, I visited Oklahoma City and, with the help of local author David Hoffman, examined the "bombing" site and interviewed local witnesses.

The outpourings of grief and anguish present, with messages and wreaths of the victims' relatives and friends on the targeted building site's protective fences, made me resolve to give this event my very best analysis to try to deduce the true nature of this explosive event and thereby help indicate the REAL culprits.

Seismic evidence recorded by local seismometers demonstrated a double-pronged explosive energy event, with two nearly identical three-to-five-second, low-amplitude, multiple wave trains separated by a null field, occurring over a nine-second interval.

USGS geophysicists argued that these two wave-packets were due to an initial ground "surface" wave arriving before a secondary wave that had travelled via deeper reflecting Earth layers, i.e., via the local basement. Other geophysicists argued that there were two wave-packets, representing the explosion followed by the building debris impacting with the ground.

These hypotheses were blown apart by the U.S. Government's explosive demolition action on the Alfred P. Murrah Building remains, which failed completely to demonstrate a two-pronged seismic response that was in any way similar to the original event recordings.

The original and best seismic recordings have been confiscated by the FBI, along with many other items of evidence such as the City video-surveillance tapes.

[Editor's note: Those original seismic tracings were faxed to me (E.Y.) shortly after the April 19, 1995 event by a very kind and cooperative fellow scientist at the Oklahoma Geological Survey seismology laboratory at Sarkeys Energy Center on the campus of the University of Oklahoma. What author Harry Mason described above is a VERY accurate assessment. And as this same cordial scientist shared with me during a 5/25/95 conversation: "The signatures are VERY different" in comparing the original "bomb" blast event's double seismic signature with that produced by the later leveling of the building.]

Furthermore, what a great stroke of irony (and the triumph of Truth) to have the government's own geophysical prostitutes' lies "blown up" when the government itself did the only experiment (demolishing the rest of the building) capable of conclusively DISproving their explanation! This is a good example of why truth is always stranger than any fiction a sensible mind might dream up.]

Hardly surprisingly, none of this evidence surfaced in the McVeigh trial.

Along with the evidence of seismic action shaking the building some five-to-ten seconds PRIOR to any explosion or blast-wave hitting the building, there were several other mysterious PRE-EXPLOSION events:

- A policeman working at his computer noticed electrical sparks and streamers in the wiring under the table several seconds BEFORE the explosion brought the building down around him.

- A woman on an upper floor noted a strong ionising electrical sensation and hot air-flow entering the windows several seconds PRIOR to the explosion which blew the same windows in on her.

- The lights in the building went out some five seconds BEFORE the explosion.

- A dictation tape recording made across the street from the "bombed" building recorded a loud "click" a few seconds BEFORE it recorded the sound of a huge explosion. This "click" was probably a local electromagnetic wave spike of considerable intensity.

- An eyewitness located in a car a couple of hundred metres from ground zero observed a silver-white light flash or beam coming out of the top of the building, followed by a large blue-white electrical arcing flash or beam, followed by an orange-red light flash or beam that shot out from the top of the building. These electrical and light effects took some five seconds and PRECEDED the actual explosion.

(Reports of "missiles" may have been mistaken identification of these pre-explosion energy beams.)

- They were followed immediately by two explosive shock waves, one trailing on the other, that propagated out and away from the base of the building. These waves lifted the ground and buildings violently upwards. The witness called this the "lid effect".

- Several cars located on the above-ground carpark had electronic ignition computers completely burnt out by the event.

- Two cars had factory-fitted digital magnetic compasses that were later found to have been thrown out by 180° and 45° respectively.

- Many nearby office computers went down with burnt-out circuit boards.

These facts point strongly to a major EM pulse having struck the area associated with the explosion.

The local area damage from the OKC event was huge. I cannot emphasise enough how devastated this area was.

I was quite amazed when I visited the site. Entire blocks of damaged office buildings had been knocked down due to their shattered state, some nearly a mile away from ground zero. Large open spaces were surrounded by boarded-up buildings with no windows, no roofs, and intensely shattered internal concrete beams and supporting pillars. I saw the intense damage inside the nearby newspaper building where internal dividing walls had been smashed asunder and horizontal three-foot-square reinforced concrete beams sagged down everywhere. This building had been built to very high 1930s standards to withstand tornados, yet it was wrecked. Many buildings had entire windowsills forced back in with their front brick walls sagging inwards. Nearer to ground zero, large, one-foot-wide, floor-and-wall reinforcing steel H-girders were twisted like spaghetti into grotesque shapes amidst the ruins of entire floors blown away to dust and rubble.

I showed a suite of local damage photos to retired SAS trooper friends, with experience in IRA ANFO bomb damage. They were as amazed as I was, and stated categorically that this was no ANFO damage. They said it would not have mattered how large an ANFO bomb had been detonated, it could not have caused the damage seen in the photos and/or described in the U.S. literature.

Funnily, the FBI released film of ANFO car-bomb test explosions that show significant fireball or fiery effects from such explosives. Yet no witnesses have described any fiery explosion or flames—just strange, pre-explosion light flashes or beams followed by pure energy waves, with very high plasma-type heat effects noted on nearby car paint.

It is my contention that the OKC event was the result of a double-pronged EM weapon strike that caused the Earth's dielectric field to erupt up through the building.

The building shook first because of harmonic reaction to the first EM wave packet, which also blew the building's electrical supply and created the various computer, digital compass, and ionising hot-air effects.

Having rocked the building sufficiently, the EM weapon mode was advanced in a second strike to initiate atomic-bond rupture and literally blow the building material apart.

No conventional or nuclear explosive, including a so-called "A-Neutronic" bomb, can cause seismic shaking and electrical light-energy effects in a structure, seconds BEFORE the explosion blast-wave hits.

Oblique aerial photos of the Murrah Building show two nearly vertical, tubelike damage forms running through the building. These represent slightly displaced near-vertical but divergent beam-pulse orientations, suggesting an orbital platform was involved in the action.

Any bomb or militia-terrorist character to this event was set in train by those who hit the building, to ensure that the true nature of the weapon system and its technology was hidden from public and possibly other U.S. Government personnel.

This implies that a faction from within the U.S. Government was responsible. Either that, or the U.S. Government was warned well in advance that this particular building would be hit that day by an advanced weapon over which there was no defence—so it quickly found a patsy and built up a cover story.

"Need-to-know" secrecy policy suggests that there then entered a cock-up of horrific dimensions. Lower-level personnel had been searching for a bomb earlier that morning, having been told that the building was targeted for bombing by terrorists, but, in failing to find it, they then did not proceed to evacuate the building.

Higher government levels, having decided to hide the horrible truth from even their own operatives, had to have a plausible McVeigh militia-type event. The Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms personnel were better served, as were the Judges in the adjacent court house: they were all warned to stay away that day.

Secret Service personnel engaged in anti-drug operations were in their offices, which lay in the centre of the damage and were wiped out by this OKC event. Interestingly, similar terrorist-bombing events in the past were apparently aimed at the same anti-drug Secret Service in both the downing of the Lockerbie Pan Am jumbo and the "bombing" of the New York World Trade Center. Indeed, it is possible that this entire series of events is being fought over a drugs empire.

WHY THE "MISSING OKC DOCUMENTS" ARE NOT MISSING

Writing this article may well reveal more about me than I would normally be willing to do, but I happen to be in a position to know something that most folks aren't aware of, and I feel compelled to "share" so that at least some people will stop following the red herring being dragged through the public square.

First, my bona fides: I was never employed by the FBI; however, I worked for more than 20 years with a "sister agency" and, because of my involvement in numerous joint efforts which included the FBI, I am more than a little knowledgeable with investigative case management procedures in place in all federal law enforcement agencies. This knowledge informs me that the "missing documents" being bandied about in the national press is a lie, a canard, and a cover story being foisted on the public for some purpose that yet remains hidden.

Allow me to present an overview of case management procedures so that my position will be readily understood.

Every open investigation is managed by a Controlling Office, or in the case of the Oklahoma City bombing, by a specially formulated Task Force. Each investigation is conducted by a Case Agent, or in OKBomb, by a Task Force Commander.

Invariably the conduct of an investigation will result in what are known as "undeveloped leads". These are simply investigative questions which have not yet been answered. Some undeveloped leads can be resolved by the Case Agent within his own area of responsibility (AOR). Others need to be sent to another field office because the answers are obviously to be found outside the AOR of the Case Agent. In an investigation with the extremely high profile of OKBomb these undeveloped leads would have been sent out to the respective field offices as soon as possible.

When received by the respective field office, an undeveloped lead is immediately assigned to an agent who is responsible for finding the answer(s) requested. These answers may turn out to be in the form of oral testimony from witnesses (in the FBI these are reduced to written reports of field interviews prepared by the agent, called in the FBI "302s"), or if the information developed is more substantial or material to the investigation, a written, sworn statement will be taken from the witness.

On occasion the person interviewed may be a "suspect", in which case almost anything he or she has to say will be taken down in writing and sworn. Original sworn statements are not kept by the outlying field office; they are always forwarded, under separate and secure cover, back to the Controlling Office.

In some cases, actual physical evidence may be recovered by the outlying field office (e.g., a receipt for the purchase of fertilizer). All items of physical evidence will be "logged in" on an evidence receipt to initiate chain-of-custody and stringent requirements to maintain chain-of-custody are implemented. These items, too, are forwarded expeditiously to the Controlling Office under even more exact requirements than those applied to written statements.

These are the normal procedures in place for many years within the FBI and all other federal law enforcement agencies. The only documentation kept by the outlying field office which ran the undeveloped lead would be file copies of statements or evidence receipts, and the only reason even file copies would be kept would be for later administrative inspections seeking to insure that the field office was conducting its business in a proper manner.

Therefore, the story that some 3,000+ documents concerning the OKBombing "were lying around in 86 different field offices" is either totally false—OR—in this one particular investigation, someone changed the rules.

Since it now appears that most of this "missing documentation" concerns the investigation into the identities and whereabouts of possible accomplices of McVeigh, the motivation for lying or changing normal case management rules would seem to be for the reason of hiding this specific line of investigation.

[Editor's note: Perhaps it would be illuminating to interpret the word "accomplices" above in the wider context of those who actually orchestrated the bombing event that utilized McVeigh as a front. You can be sure the crooks in high places would not wish to have THAT line of investigation see the light of day and there would ensue a serious struggle and "chess game" with those good people (we often call the "white hats") who are efforting to clean up corrupt government organizations from behind the scenes.]

same.

One: Some person in the chain-of-command higher than the OKBomb Task Force Commander sent out orders to all FBI field offices to retain any and all evidentiary matter pertaining to McVeigh's accomplices and/or conspiracy matters, and to not forward them back to the controlling office. The Task Force Commander may or may not have been aware of these orders. For that matter, FBI Director Freeh may not have known about such orders either. I'm no apologist for Freeh, but this should still be stated.

Two: A method was developed by which all items that were not to see the light of day were intercepted between the submitting field offices and the Controlling Office, and no orders were required to be sent out for the field offices to maintain these items in their possession. In this scenario plausible deniability is maintained by everyone involved in the investigation; in fact, in the normal course of events it would be expected that no one involved in the investigation would ever tumble to the fact that evidence was being hidden away.

Three: All items of evidence were forwarded to the Controlling Office as per normal routine, and the decision to withhold certain items from the defense teams involved was made at Task Force/Prosecution level.

This would have then required that all items in question be sent back to the respective field offices "just in case" or that they simply be "overlooked" at the Task Force. This scenario is the most unlikely, if only because too many people would have known what was going on.

Regardless how it was done, I am convinced that there was no "mistake". All these so-called "missing documents" went "missing" by design, not by accident.

Consequently, the burning questions remaining are these:

- Why is this information coming out into the public eye at all? The "archivist" who "discovered" this "mistake" could have been easily coerced into remaining silent if this was what really happened.
- And why is this information coming out now?
- What is happening that we are not supposed to notice?
- What is going on that is even more Earth-shattering than the revelation that the FBI once again screwed up?

[Editor's postscript: Again, go back and reconsider these well-thought-out questions from the point of view of "white hats" doing battle with "black hats"—and then an entire vista of possibilities come into view.

For example, remember back a few years when so many crimin—ah—Congress people all of a sudden were getting up in front of the microphone and announcing they wanted to "retire" and "spend more time with their family"? The behind-the-scenes "rumor" was that some industrious and patriotic "white hats" with, shall we say, advanced computer skills and equipment were uncovering certain secret bank accounts and kickbacks. A plain brown envelope containing the appropriate documentation detailing such matters was shared with the respective culprit and he/she was given the "free will" choice to either (1) "retire" or (2) have the information shared with the residents of their voting district, come election time, just so the voters had a more "well-rounded" and accurate picture of how "busy" the culprit had been.

Moral and legal questions aside, the objective of these "white hats" has been to work toward cleaning-up our government from within, without destabilizing it in the process. One wonders to what degree such behind-the-scenes activities figure in this McVeigh case, such as with respect to recent FBI gymnastics?

After all, on a planetary scale, we are IN the time of what our Native American brothers and sisters often call The Great Awakening and The Great Purification. None shall escape this cleansing, high-frequency energy "shower" bathing our entire solar system. And some would be quick to add: "It's about time!"]

Idaho Standoff: Exposing A Peculiar Land-Grab Scam

Editor's note: Well, what have we here: Dad has just recently died. Mom is declared incompetent to care for the children. Very valuable family property is sold out from under them for next to nothing. Dogs and children outsmart so-called professionals to a "standoff" condition. Good lawyer (yes, there are a few!) is denied access to clients. Media—for a change—is actually helping to some extent just by providing exposure of the goings on. County crooks and their puppets are desperately trying to contain the whole affair, exposing their ineptness rivaled only by the Feds in the Waco fiasco.

Is this the makings for a spectacular movie? Sure sounds like it. In fact, move over Erin Brockovich, this is super Oscar material!

What if there is more to the "land grab" aspect of this maneuver than simply the usual garden variety of greed on the part of those who underhandedly confiscated valuable property? What if the land in that location is important for more diabolical, high-tech pursuits such as we covered back in our September 2000 front-page story concerning this area of the country? (Remember all those curiously relentless, devastating, and property abandoning wildfires in that area last summer, with FEMA directing at center stage?) My, my, just what exactly have we here?

The following excerpts were compiled by our ever-vigilant News Desk guru, Dr. Al Overholt, from a wide variety of sources—once it became obvious that The Truth of the situation was becoming more interesting with each passing day and needed to be shared with you. Again it must be pointed out: if it weren't for you generous readers who help us remain financially afloat, how would we be in a position to sort and compile and share such intriguing information?

We would particularly like to commend the contribution from Don Harkins and Ingri Cassel of the Idaho Observer. They are looking deeper into this event than good journalists would typically be prepared to do. After all, you can bet your IRS refund check that there's much more to this than "just" some greedy land-grab by inept local crooks that got exposed through a series of fortuitous actions by smart children, dogs, a persevering mom, and even the blatherings of the media.

ATTORNEY'S STATEMENT

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.apfn.org/apfn/idaho.htm>>, 6/2/01:

Date: Thu. 31 May 2001 20:16:09

From: Edgar J. Steele, <steele@plainlawtalk.com>

My name is Edgar J. Steele. I am an attorney with an office in Sandpoint, Idaho. I have been asked by JoAnn McGuckin to provide representation to her where her court-appointed attorney's representation ends, as well as for her six children, now the subject of the highly publicized "standoff" in Sagle, Idaho, which is the rural township where I maintain my personal residence.

Here is the statement I released to the press this afternoon:

Edgar J. Steele, 102 South Fourth Avenue, Suite C, Sandpoint, Idaho 83864. Admitted in Idaho, Oregon, Washington & California; Fax: (208) 265-5329; Telephone: (208) 265-4153.

PRESS RELEASE—IMMEDIATE

May 31, 2001, 4:00 p.m., Sagle, Idaho

Contact: Edgar J. Steele, attorney for JoAnn McGuckin and her children, Sandpoint, Idaho.

A modern American tragedy in the making. That's what the Sagle, Idaho, McGuckin family "standoff" represents.

The McGuckin family home and the 40 acres upon which it stands were recently sold for a pittance by the county government for past-due taxes. It brought only $50,000, while the property is in prime territory, with fully half of Beaver Lake on its eastern edge.

Dad died recently, after a long and valiant struggle with multiple sclerosis, not of "malnutrition and dehydration", which has widely and falsely been reported as the cause of death. Just a couple days after this tight-knit family buried Dad, county government lured her out with a promise of money and free groceries, then arrested her, leaving them only to have to deal with the kids. That was a mistake, of course, but not their first.

Rather than allow this tightly-knit family a decent period to grieve the loss of their beloved husband and father, the county government instead is doing its best to make the family's worst nightmare come true.

For years, Mrs. McGuckin has been fearful of the government taking her property and her kids. Today, that fear is realized, with the issuance of an order through Child Protection Services, making the six children its wards. Of course, the Sheriff can't get near the house to make good on that order.

She has been jailed on a charge of felony child endangerment, allegedly for not providing a proper home for the children, including food, hygiene, and education.

Well, admittedly the running water is off temporarily, because the well pump broke and, what with Dad's severe condition as his days drew to a close, they just didn't have the time or the money to deal with it properly. So, they drew water from the crystal-clear lake on their property for washing and to flush their toilets with. And, yes, the laundry did pile up, but what family doesn't have a few domestic backlogs when it loses its patriarch?

And the children are home schooled, a fact which makes them politically incorrect, even by North Idaho standards.

But, they do have food, contrary to reports, and the power was hooked-up and paid for when Mrs. McGuckin was arrested.

Are they armed? Who knows? Nobody has seen any weapons and no gunshots have been fired. Sheriff Jarvis has shown great prudence in executing the orders he is lawfully obligated to follow. He did not cut off any essential services, as has been reported. He has vowed to keep his men well away from the house and allow us time to effect a peaceful resolution to this crisis.

That resolution must begin with the release from custody of JoAnn McGuckin and the rescission of the order giving custody of her children over to the government. Friends and family stand ready to accept responsibility for the children while Mrs. McGuckin puts her life in order and proves the outrageous charges against herself to be false. However, the demand by the county Prosecuting Attorney that the bail, initially set for $10,000, be elevated to $100,000, effectively guarantees that Mrs. McGuckin will not be given that opportunity.

We are now asking the court for a reduction in the bond requirement and will then seek a modification to the CPS order, whereby the children are given over, as a single unit, to the custody of a trusted family friend. Then, we will take on these outlandish charges and give them the ignominious end that they deserve.

We are also investigating this highly-questionable attempted seizure of the McGuckin family home.

Donations to the family can be made to:
McGuckin Family Trust, P.O. Box 1255,
Sagle, ID 83860.

“COMMON SENSE” COMMENT

From: <Cookieangel23@cs.com>

To: <apfn@apfn.org>

RE: Idaho Children

Seems to me that the community would have helped this woman a long time ago.

Seeing that her husband died and she had all those children to care for, where is the community helping?

The kids are in ragged clothes? How come none sent them or brought them clothes?

They needed money? Apparently because the sheriff got her out of the house with the thought that there was money to buy food. Sounds like entrapment to me.

But one last thought: Doesn't it seem strange that it only took one woman to take care of 8 children and the entire sheriff's department? Can't get them out of the house? Who is the incompetent here?

FIRST-HAND REPORT

acbcomp@sisna.com wrote:

I live in Sandpoint and have been a private party, working to try and help in the situation. As it stands, the county took the family's property two years ago, and sold it. It appears to have been a sweetheart deal, but no proof yet. The land is prime timber property, 40 acres, with lakefront access to Beaver Lake. You figure the math. It is yet to be confirmed, but it appears it sold for a mere $50K.

The family has endured a father's slow death from MS. The children were homeschooled and, from what I can gather from a brief visit with a friend, they were a respectable family. The view from the air showed a clean homesite. It all is stacking up to be a county con job.

We are trying to get the mother out of jail, but funds appear to be what is holding things up. The attorney is trying to get the $100K bond down to a “reasonable” amount. I know a fund has been established to help the family, but do not know the specifics YET. The attorney is Edgar J. Steel <Steele@PlainLawTalk.com> if you need to contact with support. There will be a press conference at 4 PM. I hope to be there with cameras blazing; I will try to keep everyone informed. This all appears to be a media/county government demonizing operation to cover things up.

Stalemate Continues, by Keith Kinnaird

The children, whose ages range from eight to 16, cut contact with outsiders shortly after their mother, JoAnn McGuckin, 45, was arrested on Tuesday.

McGuckin, who was described as being “mentally disturbed”, is charged with felony injury to a child for allegedly neglecting the children.

McGuckin was arrested at Garfield Bay Resort to avoid frightening the children into a confrontation. She complained of chest pains during her arrest and was taken to Bonner General Hospital, then to the county jail.

Deputies told the kids their mother was being hospitalized, but the children became suspicious and fled into the home. Someone in the home then sicced as many as 27 dogs on one of the deputies. Deputy Bill Tilson fired on the pack of dogs so he could get away, but it remains unknown if any of them were injured or killed.

CHILDREN’S STANDOFF OVER

Vow To Help Idaho Family Stay Together Ends 5-Day Drama, by John Wiley

GARFIELD BAY, Idaho—Five children relented in their five-day impasse with authorities Saturday, leaving their isolated home after negotiators promised to help the family stay together.

Sheriff’s deputies had vowed to wait as long as necessary to avoid a violent confrontation with the children who were believed to be armed and suspicious of authorities.

“I would term it a total success” Bonner County Sheriff’s Sgt. Rob Rahn said.

Authorities have been trying since Tuesday to take the children, and they agreed to leave after negotiators promised to do whatever they could to keep the family together, Sheriff Phil Jarvis said.

Bill Walker, a spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said the children must be thoroughly evaluated before authorities decide what will happen to them.

“We don’t know yet if they are all physically or mentally ready to take the next step” he said.

The children were driven past sheriff’s barricades in a large sport-utility vehicle at about 6 p.m. Saturday. They were taken to a hospital in nearby Sandpoint, where officials said they were in good condition and had no injuries.

“They’re in very good shape” said Susan Montgomery, director of nursing.

The children had been speaking to three negotiators most of the day on Saturday, Rahn said. One was identified as their older sister Erina, 19, who had left the house earlier after a falling-out with her parents.

The children and a 15-year-old brother who surrendered to authorities Thursday withdrew to the house when their mother, JoAnn McGuckin, was arrested for child neglect Tuesday. Their father died May 12.

After the mother’s arrest, sheriffs deputies returned to the home, about 10 miles south of here, to take the children into protective custody. But they withdrew after 15-year-old Benjamin McGuckin yelled “Get the guns!” and the children unleashed 27 dogs.

The family had become increasingly reclusive as financial hardships increased after father Michael McGuckin was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. His death was attributed to dehydration and malnutrition, complicated by his illness.

Residents said the family was suspicious of the government and had refused help from neighbors concerned about their living conditions.

Walled-off from the outside world by fear, trees, and the dogs, the children at the house were incommunicado until Friday, when they spoke with their mother’s court-appointed attorney and authorities.

The children who left the home Saturday evening were: Kathryn, 16; Mary, 13; James, 11; Frederick, 9; and Jane, 8.

Erina McGuckin’s concerns formed the basis of the neglect charge against JoAnn McGuckin, who was held in lieu of $100,000 bail. Bryce Powell, her court-appointed attorney, said JoAnn McGuckin is innocent.

Benjamin McGuckin, who turned himself in Thursday, was in temporary “shelter care” provided by the state, Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson said.

By all accounts, the family had been relatively prosperous until their sawmill business went bankrupt in the 1980s. The family has rejected offers of help.

The home was sold at auction last year to cover unpaid back taxes, but the McGuckin family stayed on under arrangements that remain unclear, officials said.

JoAnn McGuckin refused to seek state aid as she grew increasingly paranoid about the government, local relief workers say.

“STANDOFF” HAS ENDED McGUCKIN FAMILY: THE REAL STORY FROM THE IDAHO OBSERVER

From the INTERNET, <APFN@apfn.org>.

6/3/01:

"Don Harkins" <observer@coldreams.com>
Organization: Idaho Observer, <<http://disc.server.com/discussion.cgi?id=149495&article=2207>>

The bulk of this release has been composed over the last two days.

As you will see, it is our contention that this is a land grab, and the children and the international media attention got in the way. Well, we just moments ago learned that we were more right than we thought and certain members of Bonner County government are intimately involved in the foreclosure, seizure, and disposal of the McGuckin property to pave the way for a real estate development.

Apparently, the McGuckins, who the media reported had no water, are sitting on the best source of clean water in the area, and that source is sufficient enough to supply several sites with water. We will not comment further on this aspect of the story until we have more information. But, what we will be reporting soon is the real story here and it may be explosive enough to really damage some very big players in Bonner County government. Stay tuned.

The McGuckin Story
by Don Harkins
Idaho Observer

The McGuckin story, as I will explain, epitomizes both the arrogance of county government and the power of network dominant media. The story, which on the surface seems like a simple state-concern-for-the-welfare-of-children case, is incredibly complex. I believe that it boils down to a four (or more)-year persecution of an unfortunate family that has a really neat, and possibly strategic, 40-acre piece of property with a pristine lake. This entire travesty would never have made more than a few lines of the local evening news if it had not been for one thing: The McGuckin children sicced their dogs on the "authorities" and made a stand.

Since the Idaho Observer keeps its office within 17 miles of the "standoff" and since no other media in the area has the editorial license to tell the truth and since millions of people all over the world are fixated on understanding the truth behind this surreal scenario, I will place things into proper perspective. My wife Ingri and I were able to gain the proper perspective by riding with Joann McGuckin's (former) attorney Edgar Steele while he delivered a letter that withdrew his representation from this case, and when we discovered that a bond reduction hearing that had been scheduled for 4 p.m. had been postponed until Monday, June 4, 2001 amid strange circumstances.

Rather than turn this into a series of news stories, this is just going to be Don talking. There will be a mixture of facts that can be verified by documentation and my own interpretation of events based upon my knowledge of the characters involved and other stories that I have covered which are connected or related. I will, however, break each segment down under a headline to make things easier to explain.

To fully understand the McGuckin story, it would be best to obtain copies of the November and May editions of The Idaho Observer wherein we reported the christening of the Cutthroat (a 110-foot unmanned submarine that is now being used for research in Lake Pend Oreille), and the Parkison story wherein another Bonner County family was squeezed for several years until they lost their property. I also suggest that you obtain a copy of the September, 2000 edition of The SPECTRUM newspaper (1-877-280-2866) wherein some interesting clues regarding this region's importance to sophisticated technology research are found.

It appears that the veneer of propriety on the part of the state is extremely thin in this case. Now that the "standoff" has ended, it will be a matter of simple investigation to prove that the McGuckin land was stolen from them illegally and that the charges of child neglect alleged by Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson were fabrications and are not supported by evidence.

"Standoff" Has Ended

By the evening of June 2, 2001, the standoff ended peacefully and the five remaining children have been taken to Bonner General Hospital where they were to spend the night. Three persons, including a family friend and neighbor whom the children trusted, made contact with the children and it was that contact which ultimately led to their decision to come out.

Bonner County Sheriff Phil Jarvis claims that he sent word to the children that they would not be separated if he has anything to say about it. The three mediators also gave the kids a note from their mother in jail. It is reported that the note allegedly from mom was what compelled them to go with "authorities". Jarvis' promise that they would not be separated may not be his to keep as the children are now in the custody of state child welfare workers who have made no such promises to the children.

By all reports the children were all in fine shape physically, and mentally were in good spirits when they left their home.

The children were taken to the hospital where they would all be given physicals.

It is also likely that the hospital staff was ordered to administer vaccines to make them current with state recommended vaccination regimen. If the children are healthy now and then begin to experience adverse reactions to vaccines, I am concerned that the mother will somehow be blamed for the delayed reaction of ill health and that the introduction of toxic substances directly into their blood streams will not be considered as the cause.

I am also concerned that the "authorities" will, in their attempts to pacify the children's emotional needs, start feeding them a bunch of junk food, which will exacerbate vaccine-related health complications and compromise their psychological equanimity.

There is still no word on when Joann McGuckin will be released from jail, though it appears there is no reason to continue holding her because her children are obviously not the victims of neglect as alleged in the complaint filed by Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson May 29, 2001.

Myths and fabrications:

1. The children have no food and are eating lily-pad soup. This is not true, as more than one person reports that the children have plenty of food.

2. The children have no heat. This is north Idaho. They have wood and a wood stove.

3. The children have no electricity. The house has electricity that is hooked-up and paid for.

4. The family has 27 vicious and hungry dogs running wild and hunting in a pack. The number is probably closer to 15 dogs that are more protective than they are vicious.

5. The children are victims of neglect. Though they may not live in a family like yours, these kids are not behaving like neglected kids. These kids love each other, their deceased father, their mother, and their home.

6. Joann McGuckin spends her money on alcohol. There is no evidence of this.

7. The children are armed. Benjamin said "go get the guns" to start this standoff. Since that time, nobody has seen them brandishing any weapons. Benjamin, however, has allegedly admitted that there were five guns in the house.

8. Joann McGuckin has mental problems and does not trust the government. Joann has lost her husband, she has been slipping into poverty for the last several years as her husband's health deteriorated, and has been in full knowledge that the loss of her home was imminent. Intrusive government has not attempted to help her, it has been attempting to remove her from the property by a variety of means. Then, charges of child neglect are fabricated, she is tricked by police into being arrested, she is thrown in jail, and her kids decide to defend their home. How would you feel?

9. The children must be taken into custody for their own protection because there is no place else for them to go. A family friend of ten years, whom the children trust and like, who lives 30 minutes away on a 140-acre ranch, has offered to take the children in, but the state will not allow them to because they are not "licensed".

10. Benjamin "gave himself up to authorities". Benjamin had apparently left the house on a recon mission two days previously. He was unable to cross the police line and his coming into police custody more closely resembles capture than a voluntary surrender. Since he was taken into custody, nobody but "authorities" have had access to him.

11. The bond reduction hearing was canceled because of a power outage in the courthouse. The hearing was to take place at Bonner County Jail, not at the courthouse. There was a TV setup at the courthouse for media members who were going to watch the hearing from that location. There had been no power outage at the courthouse as of 4:20 p.m. when Ingri and I left. At 3:55 p.m. we learned that Judge Heise was still in the building and that Public Defender Bryce Powell was nowhere to be found.

12. Ed Steele had his license to practice law in Idaho suspended. Ed never mentioned such a thing and it does not stand to reason that he would volunteer to represent McGuckin in this high-profile manner if he was going to be prevented from representing her in court. Steele said that he has not been informed that he is no longer licensed to practice law in Idaho.

13. The children are unhealthy and malnourished. There is no evidence to suggest this is true. The children appear to be healthy, vibrant, and intelligent. Benjamin was given a physical after being taken into custody, and is reportedly in excellent health. Benjamin reported that there is plenty of food and water in the house.

14. The children have been home-schooled and taught to be suspicious of the government. Both of these things might be true, however the media spin is negative where I see nothing but positives. The children were smart enough to not be taken into custody by police who had tricked their mother into going to jail and had sold their property at auction when it appears that the foreclosure, seizure, and sale of the property was conducted illegally. It would appear that being suspicious of government is a survival skill that all children should be taught. They are survivors, they are close-knit, and they have proven to be more capable than most children who attend public school.

15. The father died of malnutrition and dehydration. This may be partially true, but persons who suffer for years from the ravages of degenerative disease may not feel like eating or drinking the last few days or weeks of their lives. It would be absurd to conclude that the last four years of his declining health was because he decided to starve himself and not drink water.

Steele Withdraws From McGuckin Case— For Now

SANDPOINT, June 1, 2001—At 2:30 p.m. today Attorney Edgar Steele hand delivered a letter to public defender Bryce Powell and Joann McGuckin that announced his withdrawal from the case. Steele, who I must say is a personal friend of mine, has stated to me that he would rather not practice law in the courts of north Idaho because it has been his experience that law is not the most important part of the judicial equation here. The fact that he decided to try to help this woman and her six children was, in my estimation, a purely selfless and noble gesture on his part.

Steele had an excellent visit with McGuckin May 31. McGuckin thanked Steele for representing her without charge and definitely, according to Steele, wanted him to represent her and the children in matters not related to Robinson's criminal complaint. He learned a lot and found that there were several areas that he could be of service to her because she and her family had been given a raw deal with regard to the loss of the property.

Powell was representing her on the absurd criminal charges of felonious injury to children. Steele was up until midnight researching and studying documents pertaining to the case and working out a strategy. The following morning he was unable to talk to her; she only wanted to communicate with Steele through written memoranda and a couple of people friendly to McGuckin were suddenly noncommunicative. Steele said that he cannot adequately represent her under these conditions. He did tell Ingri and I that he left the door open for her, though, and that if she was able to get her thoughts together when things calm down, he would be glad to reconsider.

Based upon what we can infer from the characters involved, the fact that Powell is a young attorney trying to make a living in a tightly-controlled small-town legal environment, that he is very likely in way over his head in this case, and that he must listen to the local power clique to have a future practicing law in Bonner county, it would appear that Powell convinced McGuckin to dissuade Steele, an extremely competent attorney who cannot be controlled by the local power clique, from digging into the injustices that have been done to the McGuckins.

After delivering the letter to McGuckin through her jailers, Steele was stopped by the news media to give on-camera interviews. In anticipation of the bond reduction hearing scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. (it was at this time 3 p.m.) there were several local and national news teams and two satellite trucks waiting around in the Bonner County Sheriff's Department parking lot.

Steele very eloquently and accurately said several things to the news media that would have made all concerned Americans very proud. When asked what he thought would be the best resolution of this matter, Steele said that McGuckin should be let out of jail immediately so she can go home to her kids, and the police should go home to their families. He also indicated that it was his belief that Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson's charges of child abuse were unfounded and demonstrably false.

Bond Reduction Hearing Delayed

SANDPOINT, June 1, 2001—A bond reduction hearing for Joann McGuckin that had been scheduled to take place at the Bonner County Jail at 4 p.m. here today in the court of Magistrate Judge Heise has been postponed until Monday, June 4 because public defender Bryce Powell was nowhere to be found.

McGuckin, 45, was arrested through deception by the Bonner County Sheriff's Department Tuesday after Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson filed a complaint against McGuckin for felonious injury to children. McGuckin is being held on $100,000 bond though most of the charges Robinson alleged against McGuckin have been demonstrated to be false.

Bond is a mechanism that is used to protect the community from the accused if they are at risk for fleeing prosecution or pose a danger to the community. McGuckin is not a danger to the community and the likelihood that she would flee the area and leave her children behind is so remote as to be absurd to contemplate. Therefore it would appear that $100,000 bond is excessive and put in place to keep her in jail so that she does not have the opportunity to speak to the press, have unmonitored access to legal counsel, or have contact with her children.

Local and national media with satellite uplinks were positioned at the jail and courtroom 2 at the Bonner County Courthouse in anticipation of the hearing. Ingri and I were with several other reporters in the courthouse at 3:30 p.m. when it was learned that Judge Heise was still on-site because Powell was nowhere to be found though he was well aware of the hearing time, date, and location.

It was learned later that he had been out attempting to talk the children into giving themselves up. I believe that he was there doing that, but that it was an excuse to not be present at the bond reduction hearing at the jail. I believe that his controllers, the county that appointed him to represent McGuckin in this case, arranged his not being present for the hearing so that they could continue the hearing to Monday. I think they wanted a couple days to think, hoping that something magical would bring the standoff to an end before Monday.

The more conspiratorial side of me is concerned that she will be psychologically manipulated into saying things that will compromise public perception of her in a negative way.

The kids are: Kathryn, 16; Benjamin, 14; Mary, 13; James, 11; Fred, 9; and Jane, 8. I have heard several people say that the kids, though sometimes a little dirty, are nice, a little shy, but polite, intelligent, and well spoken. It sounds like these children should be used as poster children for the benefits of home schooling rather than being labeled as outcasts unfit to function in polite society. I, for one, am proud of the McGuckin children and hope to meet them someday and tell them so.

Conclusions To Date

This is a land grab case not a child abuse case.

The kids are fine except that their father is dead and the police tricked their mom into being arrested on charges of felonious injury to children that are either bold-faced lies or baseless accusations. In either event there is no evidence to support the charges against Joann McGuckin, there is no reason for her to be in jail, and there is no justification of $100,000 bond as she is not a flight risk or a danger to society.

The McGuckin property—which has a homestead exemption and is worth nearly $500,000—was seized for $5,000 in back taxes and sold at auction for $50,000. It appears that the McGuckins have been under attack for at least four years and the intent was to steal their property.

I personally believe the attack was subtle, and conducted with the use of sophisticated technologies that, to most people, are the stuff of science fiction. They became increasingly reclusive, I think, because nobody would believe them if they told them what was going on, and they were afraid that people would think they were crazy.

So, the two components of this surrealistic scene is the provably illegal seizure and disposal of their property, and the provably fabricated charges of child abuse and neglect. The veneer is so thin that, when this thing begins to unravel, the corruption and arrogance behind this property theft will become obvious.

I was disappointed that, though there are millions of people talking about this, the public was not represented at the jail or the courthouse. The only people on hand were media types. I guess people wish to be angered by the events by understanding the issue through the eyes of the dominant media.

As I (E.Y.) pointed out in the note introducing this compilation article: “What if the land in that location is important for more diabolical, high-tech pursuits such as we covered back in our September 2000 front-page story concerning this area of the country? (Remember all those curiously relentless, devastating, and property abandoning wildfires in that area last summer, with FEMA directing at center stage?)”

The lightning witnessed by many during those terrible fires, and the newly built, mysterious, fenced-off technical facilities that appeared to be responsible for generating that lightning—as well as causing other, very strange electrical effects—probably figure in this matter somewhere.

Another good question to ask is what secret underground military bases are in that area and what are they up to? Last month's front-page feature article about HAARP-system technologies noted the spread of similar systems to other geographic areas. Perhaps this present real-estate swindle is “deeper”, literally, than it appears on the surface!]

Re: Sandpoint, ID: A Modern American Tragedy

In this case things are moving so fast, it is hard to keep up. Included you will find the handout by the attorney who was representing the kids. But today, a switch took place, I am told, that the mother denied that Steele was representing them, refused to see him, and as he was working on this at no charge, without a client, he was out of it.

Then, hardly before I could digest that, a report came that the county had cut off all communication to Steele, and right after that the “powers” in Bonner County had contacted the Idaho State Bar, and Steele had been suspended from practicing law. No part of this I got first hand, and the later, second hand. So I hailed down a Spokane TV news team and asked them if they were aware that Steele was shut down, and they said yes they were aware.

Folks, we know that if we dug into the internal politics for the “powers” of about any community these days, in comparison a sewer would smell sweet. But something is going on here. I have never seen a county so concerned about the children—unless maybe the Fed at Waco.

Emotions are running high on both sides here. An ABC poll from Spokane was 47% to 40% against the county in public sentiment. But if the things above are actually true, then something addressed in the following news release from Attorney Steele has this county government enraged. The following is a handout by the Attorney for the children under siege by the prosecuting attorney and Sheriff's Department of Bonner County (Sandpoint, Idaho area).

[Editor's note: That handout or Press Release, with introductory comments by the author, Attorney Steele, is the first item of the presentations of this story and need not be repeated here.]

IDAHO STANDOFF WITH CHILDREN ENDS—OR, IS IT JUST BEGINNING?

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 6/4/01:

Idaho Standoff With CHILDREN Ends— Or, Is It Just Beginning?

The Sierra Times, 6-3-01

While Bonner County officials are reporting that the five McGuckin children have willingly left their home after promises by the State's CPS officials to “try to keep them together in state care”, Attorney Edgar Steele has another tale to tell.

“This is quite literally breaking news” he said in a press release this evening. “The local authorities have just persuaded the children, who were holed-up in the family home, to come out and have spirited them away to an unknown location. I am delighted this has ended without any injury to any person. Now we can move on to consideration of what is happening to this family by keeping their mother and her children separated since just a couple of days after they buried their husband and father. Of course, there is also the matter of the property that was taken by the county for only about $8,000 in back taxes....”

In another Press Release at noon today, Mr. Steele set straight the record on his representation of the McGuckins:

“It has been represented to me by members of the press that Bonner County's Prosecuting Attorney, Phil Robinson, is reporting that I was fired last night by Mrs. McGuckin. That simply is not true and is merely another of many false statements made in this matter by local government officials.

"What is true is that, early yesterday afternoon, I served written notice that I was voluntarily withdrawing for the time being because I have been cut off from all access to Mrs. McGuckin and her children by the local government. This is forced upon me by the strictures of applicable law and rules of ethics.

"Now, I may continue to speak out publicly about the outrageous conduct of county officials in this matter. I have not abandoned the McGuckins, and will return to actively represent and support any member of the family, and for any purpose, immediately upon being asked in person. I continue to offer my support and counsel pro bono (free of charge), of course.

"The Bonner County Sheriff has now totally cut-off my access to JoAnn McGuckin, though I have been representing her and her children strictly for civil issues related to the pending criminal charge (for which she has been provided a taxpayer-paid public defender, Bryce Powell).

"The Sheriff's rejoinder has been that I cannot see her since Mr. Powell is her attorney; Sheriff Jarvis refuses to recognize my status as her personal civil attorney. I have been told by the Sheriff's deputies that Mrs. McGuckin desires that I communicate with her henceforth only in writing, and only through Mr. Powell. I have been unable to confirm that with her in person.

"Mr. Powell seems intent upon enforcing that arrangement, as well. Even if true, I find this intolerable and unworkable, since I pledged that I would serve only her interests and that of her children. I cannot do that if others are claiming to speak to me for her. The duties of a personal lawyer are just that—personal.

"I originally met with Mrs. McGuckin for nearly two hours, shortly after her arrest, during which she requested my assistance for herself and her children. Since then, my firm has been working nonstop to develop a number of civil issues for the family, such as our inquiry into the sale of their property for back taxes. I am not willing to continue to pay others to develop aspects of the case or work on it myself, all for free, only to turn over the products of our effort to anybody other than my original clients.

"Interestingly, Mr. Powell has requested that I continue to speak out on the family's behalf, which I certainly would have done, in any event. It has also been represented to me by the press that Mr. Robinson claims he refused to make Benjamin McGuckin available as I requested, merely because I had not yet filed a formal notice of appearance. That, too, is false, because county officials simply ignored my request to speak with Ben, as well as my request for copies of the child seizure order so that I could prepare and file the initial representation notice.

"Nor was I able to see Mrs. McGuckin "once or twice (yesterday)" as Mr. Robinson reportedly told the press. The truth is that I did not even speak with her personally, and was and am being denied access to her altogether, even by telephone.

"I have been particularly gratified by the worldwide response to the request for funding of Mrs. McGuckin's bail bond fund. There have been substantial pledges, which make me very hopeful that any reasonable bail can easily be posted on her behalf.

"I was disturbed to hear that her bail reduction hearing, for which I had pressed so hard, went by the wayside yesterday, with nobody appearing on JoAnn's behalf.

"My office has been flooded with messages of support from throughout the Western World, and more offers of help than we can possibly even acknowledge. We are all deeply touched by this outpouring of human generosity and concern for this family which continues to be under siege by its own government. I call upon all who are following these events to refrain from jumping to conclusions.

"Please keep in mind the real objectives here: First, the safety of the children. Second, keeping the children together as a unit. Third, reuniting the children with their mother and ensuring that they are allowed the space to heal from the blows that their family has taken lately, not the least of which was the loss of their long-suffering and beloved husband and father.

"All other considerations are of little significance, in my opinion, until these objectives are met. Donations to the bail bond fund may still be made to: McGuckin Family Trust, P.O. Box 1255, Sagle, ID 83860. Rest assured that every penny contributed to this fund will inure directly to the benefit of only members of the McGuckin family. In particular, I will, with my last dying breath, ensure that nothing is ever paid out from the fund to any lawyer."

SANDPOINT: NEXT PHASE OF THE BATTLE

From the INTERNET, "Ingri Cassel" <vaclib@coldreams.com>, 6/4/01:

The Story Consuming Us! Date: Monday 4 June 2001 10:53:43

I attached all the latest "stuff". Hide the Family; Hide the Truth. No one outside of county employees have had access to the family. We are organizing a protest for tomorrow. — Love, Ingri (Idaho Observer)

Exclusive Interview with Attorney Edgar Steele, by J. J. Johnson 06/04/01 <Sierra Times.com>:

SANDPOINT, ID—As the last of the McGuckin family has been removed from the Garfield Bay property, questions are now being raised about the nature of the charges against JoAnn McGuckin. In an exclusive interview with the Sierra Times, Idaho Attorney Edgar Steele raised issues about why the legal and public relations end of the McGuckin case seem so

...and the truth shall set you free

David Icke exposes the real story behind global events which shape the future of human existence and the world we leave our children. Fearlessly, he lifts the veil on an astonishing web of interconnected manipulation to reveal that the same few people, secret societies, and organizations control the daily direction of our lives. They engineer the wars, violent revolutions, terrorist outrages, and political assassinations; they control the world market in hard drugs and the media indoctrination machine. Every global negative event of the 20th Century, and earlier, can be traced back to the same Global Elite, and some of the names involved are very well known. Never before has this web, its personnel, and methods been revealed in such a detailed and devastating fashion.

If you don't want your view of life to be transformed, then steer clear of this book.

Icke reveals the esoteric background to the global conspiracy and offers an inspiring spiritual solution in which every man, woman, and child on planet Earth breaks free from the daily programming—the "coup d'état on the human mind"—and takes back their infinite power to think for themselves and decide their own destiny. His words are designed to inspire all of us to be who we really are, to fling open the door of the mental prison we build for ourselves, and to walk into the light of freedom.

chaotic. “The national media have folded up the satellites, and are packing to go home, but this story is far from over” said Steele.

JoAnn McGuckin was arrested for child neglect Tuesday. But what led to her arrest remains unclear. Court documents obtained by Sierra Times show that the Bonner County Prosecutor, Phil Robinson, testified under oath of malnourishment and lack of electricity at the McGuckin home.

“On [May 17], the children were in tents, ill, no food, and on the verge of starvation” said Robinson in Magistrate Debra A. Heise’s court. It was even reported at this hearing that one of the children has stress fractures due to malnutrition.

It was these charges which led to the warrant for JoAnn McGuckin’s arrest. But after 5 days in a standoff situation—after the mother was taken into custody, the children were driven past Sheriff’s barricades in a large sport-utility vehicle at about 6 p.m. Saturday. They were taken to a hospital in nearby Sandpoint, where officials said they were in good condition and had no injuries.

The Idaho Observer reported on Benjamin McGuckin’s case stating: “Benjamin was given a physical after being taken into custody and is reportedly in excellent health. Benjamin reported that there is plenty of food and water in the house.” The Observer also reports that in the past there were only two reports about the dogs—numbering about 15. Sierra Times has learned that many of the dog pack were in fact puppies. As of this time, the area is still cordoned off, and no one knows the condition of the dogs.

“They’re in very good shape” said Susan Montgomery, director of nursing as reported in the Associated Press. Nancy Johnson, Sierra Times Legal Analyst said: “The evidence leads to a question of perjury by the prosecutor in open court.”

Nancy Johnson—Legal Analyst Believes Prosecutor Perjured Himself

Johnson also questions the manner in which the prosecutor testified himself. “There is clear case law on this. Prosecutors should not be their own witness at a hearing to determine probable cause to issue a warrant. By testifying as a witness as to probable cause for an arrest warrant, the prosecutor destroyed his absolute immunity because he acted as a witness, not a prosecutor. This means that if Mrs. McGuckin decides to sue him for a civil rights violation, he is no longer immune, Johnson concluded.

Steele told Sierra Times he is “glad the children have been removed safely”. He also gave praise to the Bonner County Sheriff’s Office on how they handled the situation. Much of the telephone interview was used to deflect false and misleading rumors that are cropping up—specifically on the Internet.

The first was one of his possible disbarment.

“I have offices in both California and Idaho. I have received no reports from either bar concerning any actions taken against me. I am still a licensed attorney,” said Steele.

Attorney Edgar Steele heavily criticized many Internet reports.

Another was an Internet message saying: “Attorney Edgar Steele on Thursday warned that antigovernment activists from around the country would converge on northern Idaho if the children’s mother was not released from jail.” Steele passionately denied making any such statements, saying: “It’s stuff like this that we don’t need out there.”

Steele insists the battle can be won in the court. Sierra Times can confirm the above statements cannot be attributed to Steele.

During the hearing, when the bail was raised from $10,000 to $100,000, the prosecutor argued for a higher bond not because JoAnn was a flight risk, not because she was a danger to the community, but “to keep her away from her children”. This alone is a violation of Mrs. McGuckin’s civil rights, said Nancy Johnson.

Steele said he was told of JoAnn’s alleged request that he communicate only through her court appointed attorney. He was never told this by JoAnn, face to face, and he did not feel the arrangement was in her best interests. Experts say that Steele is eminently more qualified than the young public defender, who appears to be too chummy with county officials. However, rather than pressing the issue, Mr. Steele felt withdrawal was prudent.

Nancy Johnson has been in the same situation. “An incarcerated victim of government excess (Nancy’s client held off police for four hours on Highway 78 in San Diego) is emotionally fragile” said Johnson.

“Jail is a bad place to be, and it is easy for the jailers to manipulate the victim and turn her against even a well-meaning, pro bono attorney.”

In this case, Nancy questions the propriety of the public defender’s visit with Mrs. McGuckin after she had agreed to Mr. Steele’s representation: “Contact with a represented person in the attorney’s absence is strictly prohibited by the ethical rules.”

Mr. Steele remains willing and eager to help if Mrs. McGuckin so requests (in person), or to represent anyone else in her family. Steele did not give any indication that she was a threat to herself or in bad health of any kind. He said the best hope for the truth coming to light is if JoAnn is released from jail as soon as possible. Those handling the trust for the McGuckin family say donations and pledges are pouring in, but more are needed.

Steele indicated that this is not an unusual case. “I have received numerous communications from across the country from victims who have suffered the same fate—losing their land by the hands of authorities for bogus reasons.”

The whereabouts of the children are unknown at this time. Neighbors are concerned as well.

Several, who spoke with Sierra Times on condition of anonymity, stated that JoAnn had been very concerned about “the government taking her land”. One stated that the 40-acre parcel around Beaver Lake “would make a prime Nature conservancy”.

All who spoke with Sierra Times said there were never any indications that the children had faced starvation or malnutrition.

Neither the investment firm of Korenngut, Schumel & Amy, nor attorney J. T. Diehl of Sandpoint who, according to public records, closed the deal for $50,000 on property estimated worth $500,000, could be reached for comment.

Sierra Times has confirmed that the Bonner County Sheriff’s Office has no order to take the property at this time. Sierra Times will continue to monitor this situation as it develops.

THE REAL STORY OF THE IDAHO SIEGE!

From the INTERNET, 6/7/01:
Sierra Times Update
<<http://www.SierraTimes.com>>

Sandpoint, Idaho—The time has come to directly address the many false representations made about the McGuckin case by local government, as personified by the Prosecuting Attorney, Phil Robinson. By way of doing so, Edgar J. Steele, the McGuckin Family Lawyer-in-Exile releases the following open letter, since Mr. Robinson refuses to communicate with him in private:

Dear Phil,

Well, it’s been a pretty wild ride so far, hasn’t it? Guess you didn’t expect it to turn into quite the media circus that it has become. Of course, if those kids hadn’t possessed the moxie to defy your storm troopers, this whole affair would have gone down without a hitch, with nobody the wiser, wouldn’t it?

I can appreciate why you might be worried now, particularly since you swore, under penalty of perjury before Magistrate Heise, to so many things that so many people now claim are so false.

Like that business about there being no power to the house? Northern Lights, the utility company, said it was hooked up and working all along, but they must be mistaken. They don’t seem to believe you, Phil, but don’t worry—I do.

And about the kids starving and having no food in the house? The people at the Food Bank, who gave them 200 pounds of food the week prior, don’t seem to believe you. Nor do the good people at Bonner General Hospital, who examined the kids after being holed-up in the bathroom of that little house for five days while under siege from their own government, yet pronounced them to be “in good health”. But don’t worry, Phil—I believe you.

And about that lily pad soup you said the kids were cooking up in their backyard over the camp fire? I know many people have researched it and claim it's not true because lily pads are poisonous and the kids would all be dead now, so they must not believe you, either. Don't worry, though, Phil—I believe you.

And about the husband, Michael, dying of malnutrition and dehydration, the same things you say the kids are suffering from? I hear that Mr. Coffelt, the coroner, has now recanted and says the death certificate is wrong, that Mr. McGuckin actually died as a result of multiple sclerosis, so he must not believe you, either. But don't worry, Phil—I do.

And about that pack of marauding, vicious dogs? Lots of people, including the vet and the receiving animal facility seem to think there's a lot fewer than 27 and that many of them are actually puppies, to boot, so they don't seem to believe you. Can you imagine? Now, I saw them myself the other day and thought they were pretty small and could have sworn many of them were wagging their tails, but I just figured it must be some breed of midget fighting dog. Don't worry, Phil—I'm with you on this one, too.

And about the house being filthy and strewn with dog feces? Well, I'm absolutely sure you're right about this, and it's a good thing that, once the kids were out of there, you had your people in there taking pictures without wasting time to get a search warrant, to prove it. I know there are those doubting Thomases who say the kids had the dogs inside with them during the siege so your "jackbooted thugs" (not a phrase I would ever use, of course) wouldn't shoot them and, of course those vicious, huge, marauding canines couldn't be expected to use the toilets because the water was off, so of course there was a huge mess, with dog feces everywhere. I'm sure it was like that all along, just like you said, so don't worry, Phil—I believe you here, too.

And about the kids being poorly educated? Well, we all know how inadequate home schooling is—after all, the only reason home-schooled kids are taking top honors in all the national spelling and geography bees is because they sit at home, 24 hours a day, boning up just for those things and ignoring the really important stuff that is taught in the government schools these days. Yep, Phil, I'm with you all the way on this one, too.

And about me being disbarred? They haven't told me about it yet and, when I called them to discuss the ethics of what you have been doing and saying, they said they didn't know anything about my being disbarred, so the people at the Idaho State Bar don't seem to believe you. But I'm sure you're in contact with those who are really in the know, so, don't worry, Phil—I believe you on this one, too.

And about me being fired by JoAnn McGuckin? Well, of course, you have issued orders to everybody, including the Sheriff (isn't he an elected official, by the way?), that I am not to be allowed even to talk with any McGuckin family member by telephone, and I am not to be told when the secret hearings about the kids take place, so of course I have to take your word for this one, as well. But I know you wouldn't lie about something like this, Phil.

And about JoAnn being held incommunicado despite Magistrate Heise's recent order? Well, we all know she is stubbornly refusing to sign that O.R. release paper, thereby admitting that she is guilty and that she will stay away from her own children, so of course you can't just let her go. We all understand that, Phil.

And, of course, since she is pretty fragile mentally and extremely susceptible to being unduly influenced, there are those who say you and your minions have been keeping her that way until she falls in line. But don't worry, Phil, because I know you would never stoop to that sort of thing—I believe you.

And about the public defender, Mr. Powell, being in your pocket? There are those who say, because he was a Shoshone County PD before he came here and because he's kind of hurting for money (his words, not mine) and would be doing much better financially if he was one of your assistants, that he is carrying your water on this case. I think that is a simply scurrilous suggestion and refuse to believe one word of it, even though he also refuses to let me talk to JoAnn. Don't worry, Phil, I believe you on this one, too.

And about your pushing for $100,000 bail for JoAnn, even though her public defender hadn't gotten around to seeing to her interests, and getting it without a struggle from Magistrate Heise, even though you and I both know how difficult it is to get bonds like that for murderers? I know you, Phil, and I am absolutely certain this is true.

And about your being sorry you didn't have JoAnn arrested during her husband's funeral? I have no doubt whatsoever about this one, Phil.

I realize you have a powerful motivation to ensure that everything you swore to before Magistrate Heise is shown to be true, since you gave up your unqualified government official immunity when you chose to testify yourself. That's the problem with actually swearing out your own arrest warrant, of course, and why so many district and prosecuting attorneys know better. I know, however, Phil, that everybody who says that is why you are pushing the above things with such a vengeance is just being mean-spirited, because you would never allow your self interest to come into play in a case involving a citizen.

Thousands wouldn't believe you, Phil. But don't worry—because I do.

Sincerely, Edgar J. Steele

[Editor's note: Ok, readers. The above gem was the perfect place to end this story—for now. You can be sure that more shenanigans will surface before the dust finally settles and we will share the ongoing circus with you at a later time.

BUT—what have we here? Right in the middle of all this activity in Idaho, could the following item, that would usually go in the News Desk, possibly be "just" a coincidence of timing and location?! No wonder Truth is always stranger than Fiction.]

RULING ALLOWS TRIAL OF RUBY RIDGE SHARPSHOOTER

Excerpted from THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 6/6/01:

A federal appeals court ruled Tuesday that an FBI sharpshooter can be tried by Idaho prosecutors for manslaughter in the slaying of White separatist Randy Weaver's wife during the 1992 Ruby Ridge standoff. The ruling, from a sharply divided 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, revives a case mentioned in the same breath as Waco and cited by Timothy McVeigh as motivation for the Oklahoma City bombing.

It could also mean the FBI officials will be hauled into court to defend decisions made during the 11-day confrontation in northern Idaho. The agency is already stinging from recent gaffes in the bombing case and the recent indictment of agent Robert Hanssen on espionage charges.

Editor's postscript: Well, we've covered the Robert Hanssen fiction in recent past issues of this newspaper, and we revisit the McVeigh & FBI fabrications elsewhere in this issue. But why on Earth did the Appeals Court happen to make their decision on THIS old matter, tragic as it was, at exactly THIS time?

So, next we're going to discover that those "27" tail-wagging, ferocious puppies—er—dogs are actually part of an advance alien invasion force, out to secure the state of Idaho from corrupt politicians.

Or is that going too far? ☞

Skolnick's Latest Updates

Not For The Weakhearted

Editor's note: First Sherman Skolnick and his well-connected sources present an eye-opening lesson about the Yakuza—the Japanese mafia—and their behind-the-scenes strongholds in the United States. This is not a subject usually open to much journalistic discussion as researchers poking around in Yakuza business seem to have shortened lifespans.

Then, in two back-to-back detailed writings, we are reminded of some of the hidden or forgotten data concerning the convoluted matter of the FBI and the tragic Oklahoma City “bombing” event. Let's see now—we are supposed to swallow, without question, the news that the FBI “just happened” to find, at the last minute, over three thousand documents related to that matter? Perhaps a better question might be to ask WHAT CAUSED those documents to be acknowledged all of a sudden!

And then there's the legal matter of “fraud upon the court” as it pertains to the McVeigh case and, of course, the verdict. A central question might be WHY McVeigh's own defense attorneys have been, in Sherman's words, “too chicken” to accuse the trial judge and declare that a fraud has been committed.

Meanwhile, the Bush-Cheney White House has been thrown into a destabilizing power play by the recent U.S. Senator who departed his political party. Is this a continuation of the ongoing tug-of-war for position by those working from behind the Democratic and Republican party façades? See what Sherman has to offer below as connections on this—and many other matters—that don't at first appear to be related. These are issues you aren't likely to observe being analyzed on the evening news!

The Japanese Mafia In The United States
(4/28/01)

They own half of the skyscrapers built in the 1980s in downtown Chicago. They are major owners of one of America's largest banks and its holding company. They are unpublicized kingpins in dope trafficking in America.

Banks in Japan do not dare foreclose on tens of billions of dollars of certain mortgaged properties owned by them. They get hush money by threatening to disrupt, with scandals, business meetings in Japan. For many years, they have been instrumental in installing the topmost officials of the Japanese government, and some in America as well.

They are the collectors and enforcers for gambling and prostitution on the West Coast of the United States. In the U.S., Japan, and elsewhere, they operate covert firms, proprietaries, for the American CIA. One of their key members, according to a book on the subject, reportedly founded and owns a stylish restaurant chain in America.

Five of their strong-arms tried to murder O.J. Simpson—an outgrowth of a business deal he reportedly had with them that went sour or in which they tried to muscle in on O.J.'s chain of restaurants. The American monopoly press, handcuffed and shackled to large corporations with business in Asia, dare not mention their existence in the U.S.

They leaned on a judge in Chicago who reportedly permitted local extortionists to try to shake them down. They own most every bank in California. They constitute a form of dreaded foreign secret police operating on American soil with total immunity from the American government.

You probably never, ever heard about them. They are the Yakuza, the Japanese mafia. Knowledgeable sources contend there are more of the Yakuza than the traditional Sicilian and Italian mafia.

If you put that name into a large computer database, you might not come up with much. Why? They are a forbidden subject.

If a property owner in Japan stops paying on their mortgage, the bank will not seek to foreclose or collect—not if they know the property is owned by, or protected by, a member of the Yakuza. To send a message, the Yakuza murdered a top banker in Japan who would not co-operate with this vast underworld. The Yakuza are bold and arrogant. Every once in a while, dressed all in black, they march proudly, with complete impunity, right in the street. In their stronghold of Osaka, Japan, they are the accepted adjunct of the local police.

By 1984, the Yakuza had placed $20 billion of their hot money in Continental Illinois Corporation, holding firm for Continental Bank of Chicago. They were falsely led to believe their funds were “deposited” there. Yet, a bank holding company is not a “bank of deposit”, and has no federal deposit insurance.

In the spring of 1984, I was one of the first commentators in the U.S. to accurately predict the then upcoming downfall of Continental Bank, owned principally by the Vatican and the Queen of England. An agent of British royalty, by tradition, always sat, together with a Jesuit, on Continental's Board of Directors. It was a really sticky situation.

Another major owner of the bank was Walter Cummings, Jr., a “man of trust” selected to handle the secret funds of the Catholic Church hierarchy. For many years he was also Chief Judge of Chicago-based U.S. Court of Appeals, 7th Circuit. His court was the end-of-the-line for most federal cases from Wisconsin, Illinois, and Indiana, since the U.S. Supreme Court only lets in to be heard a few handful of cases per year. Required to gain entry into the high court in Washington is the filing of a “begging” petition, imploring the nine members of the court priesthood to please, please, allow the litigant to enter.

Then, as now, most of the federal appeals judges in Chicago, as well as around the nation, are tied to the Federal Reserve and the banking system. And by the way, judges like to own banks right near their courthouse. From the federal courthouse in Chicago, the banker-judges have full view of the rear entrance of Continental, now merged with Bank of America, owned principally by the Rothschilds, the Jesuits, and jointly now with the Yakuza.

In 1984, some called me a liar. But I was, however, the only reporter who stationed himself, starting at 3 o'clock early one morning, at the back entrance of the Continental bank. I and an associate noticed well-dressed apparent orientals rushing from waiting cabs into the door with their suitcases. Cab drivers later confirmed that they were paid to wait for oriental messengers who were then rushed back with guards to O'Hare International Airport with heavy suitcases of money. The Yakuza did not wait for or want the money to be wired to them in the impending emergency.

JiJi Press Service, owned by the Japanese, with a staff in Chicago, started the run on Continental with a story of their insolvency in not being able to return huge funds entrusted to them by Japanese “investors”. Continental never really returned all the money, but instead gave their Osaka branch and other parts of their business to the Yakuza as return payment.

One of the only detailed books on the subject is simply titled Yakuza, by authors Kaplan and Dubro. Some years ago, one of the authors was on a local Chicago radio talk-show. He outlined how the Japanese underworld owned half of all the tall buildings in the 1980s built in the “Loop”, slang for downtown Chicago.

The book asserts that the very fancy, unusual serving-style restaurant chain in America, Benihana, was founded and is owned by a member of the Yakuza. At such restaurants, the patrons sit right at a Japanese-style stove while the chef, in traditional Japanese garb, prepares the meal from scratch right in front of them. It is all done with dramatic oriental movements and wielding great sharp knives.

Several months before the double-murder for which he was accused, O.J. Simpson reported to the police that five orientals (apparently Yakuza) tried to murder him by operating five cars that tried to run him off the road. O.J. owned a chain of restaurants, part of which was given to his ex-wife Nicole as part of a bitter divorce settlement. The businesses had brought in, as silent partners, Los Angeles police brass who reportedly arranged to launder the funds from a huge dope traffic supervised by the Yakuza. There were apparent quarrels among the "partners".

To associates of his in other businesses, O.J. complained of his growing problems with the businesses which he, in part, turned over to Nicole. According to those business associates (who we interviewed), O.J. said he is going to have to "do something" to end the problems.

The one who reportedly was in a position to understand all of this was the judge in the first O.J. case, judge Lance Ito, of Japanese descent. The judge's wife, Los Angeles police captain Margaret York, reportedly had direct knowledge of these problems with corrupt police brass, the chain of O.J. businesses, and the Yakuza. She was at the time in charge of L.A. police Internal Affairs, supposedly investigating corruption within the police department.

The judge himself was apparently in a position to be a blackmailer. He heard the case against the red-light district madam, Heidi Fleiss. Somehow judge Ito seized her "little black book" and kept it. Listed there were the prominent patrons of her crew of fancy hookers and dope distributors.

The "customers" included important lawyers, doctors, congressmen, Hollywood stars, FBI officials, and drug enforcement agents, and such, according to some in law enforcement familiar with the situation. Experts in whorehouse matters, the Yakuza were interested in Fleiss' notations for shakedown purposes.

In his hometown of Buffalo, New York, O.J. Simpson reportedly had a business partner. Together they owned a cocktail lounge through which dope was distributed, supplied reportedly by the Yakuza. During O.J.'s first trial in California, his Buffalo business partner was murdered. Also murdered in the middle of that trial was judge Lance Ito's courtroom bailiff. A masked man came up to the bailiff at his home, in the presence of his wife, and did not rob him but simply blew him away. A reporter of a Philadelphia newspaper, attending the trial every day, was likewise murdered. He apparently began asking forbidden questions about the Yakuza links. Also done in was a fellow restaurant employee of Goldman, victim of the double murder for which O.J. was accused. The upscale restaurant was reportedly a place for distribution of dope from the Yakuza.

With the apparent aid of a corruptible bankruptcy judge, a band of his cronies tried to put the arm, in Chicago, on a Japanese businessman, a key official of a Japanese automaker. The judge and his select group make up a "bankruptcy court club", of most every judge in the place together with certain chosen lawyers, bankruptcy trustees, court clerks, bankruptcy assignees, and such.

As we found out from our investigations over a period of years, "The Club" meets every month at a certain lawyer's house. For mandatory "dues" of three thousand dollars a month, certain lawyers get the run of the bankruptcy court. Their court petitions are granted without question, regardless of the law and the facts to the contrary. They must also pay, to fill the judge's demands, without question, certain "assessments" levied on the club lawyers from time to time. In return, the lawyers are to easily make a quarter million dollars a year in bankruptcy court rackets condoned by the judges. "The Club" payments are deposited, coincidentally or not, in the Caribbean branch of a Japanese bank.

Several lawyers complained to us, not to be publicly identified, that their failure to join "The Club" and pay the "dues" and "assessments" caused them to lose more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in a previous year in cases they should have easily prevailed. A prominent attorney, who was a guest on our television show, once confirmed the existence of a "Club" but said it was harmless, that they merely met after court for "coffee".

In December, 1991, a bankruptcy court auctioneer, about to "sing" to a federal grand jury about "The Club", was assassinated right near a bank linked to "The Club". We are the only ones who did a TV documentary on-location about the killing.

In a case involving the bankruptcy of a car undercoating firm, Rusty Jones, some of "The Club" members tried to shake-down the Japanese auto manufacturing official. They falsely contended he and his firm were financially implicated in the bankruptcy and were obligated to come up with big bucks or suffer the consequences at the hands of the Bankruptcy Trustee seeking out assets of the debtor.

The would-be extortionists failed to determine that they were messing around with the Yakuza, which could be violent if not fatal. No resulting shootings or stabbings, however, were reported to the police. The judge on the case, a member of "The Club", was, in addition, closely aligned with Israeli intelligence that, for years, has skimmed off funds from the Chicago bankruptcy court rackets. As a foreign secret police operating in America, the Mossad's amoral view is that they are not obligated to seek enforcement of American criminal laws and they are just taking advantage of "business" opportunities in Chicago.

The judge on the case of the rust-preventing firm must have somehow, because of the extreme stress of us poking into his corruption, become "rusted out" himself. He needed heart surgery.

A growing amount of the litigation in the federal courts, like in Chicago, involves Japanese firms. Often, not knowing or finding out ahead of time which of these firms are linked to the Yakuza, some of the judges think it is cute to push around some of these Japanese firms, as if the companies and their officials are not entitled to Due Process and fair & square proceedings in American courts. No one close to the judges, with sense, seem to warn these judicial pirates that it is dangerous to steal property from some Japanese who might actually be the Yakuza on U.S. soil.

A cynic said some foolhardy court member might end up someday as a "judge-burger", carved up and cooked right in front of some unsuspecting patrons at Benihana.

More coming. Stay tuned.

(5/11/01)

A possible split in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and other federal agencies, may open up various possibilities as to what really happened as to the bombings in Oklahoma City, April 19, 1995. And we use the term BOMBINGS in the plural advisedly, because some explosives experts contend fertilizer bombs in a front-of-the-building truck could not have wrecked the building pillars as occurred.

Background: President Clinton felt his power slipping away. The 1994 congressional

Children Of The Matrix

How an interdimensional race has controlled the world for thousands of years—and still does!

We are born into a world controlled by unseen forces that have plagued and manipulated humanity for thousands of years. No, this is no script from a Hollywood movie. It is happening to you NOW.

You may look around and think that what you see is "real". But in truth you are living in an illusion—an illusion designed to keep you in a mental, emotional, and spiritual prison cell.

David Icke exposes these forces and their methods of human control and he reveals a fantastic web of global manipulation, orchestrated by forces beyond this physical realm.

He exposes the hidden bloodlines, through which other-dimensional entities live and operate unseen among us; and he shows how the bloodlines of the royal, political, and economic rulers of today are the same as those who ruled as the kings and queens of ancient times.

Icke takes the story on from his highly acclaimed And The Truth Shall Set You Free and The Biggest Secret, and he lifts still further the veil of secrecy that has maintained humanity in manipulated ignorance for so long.

*The truth is not only out there.
Much of it is right here.*

What you get on this CD-ROM is the most in-depth compilation of interviews with survivors of the Philadelphia Experiment and Montauk Project to date on one computer CD.

The information on this CD comes from the memories of those who were interviewed. Because these projects are so secretive, gaining hard evidence is nearly impossible. However, that doesn't mean the projects never happened.

This information is for those who want to pursue and know the truth. Sometimes, finding the truth becomes elusive. There are many out there who do not want you to know the truth about these projects. Use your own judgment as you hear the words of these survivors.

As you follow this story, use this information as the beginning resource to hopefully, get you on the right track.

The five people featured on this CD all testify that they worked with Al at the Montauk Project, and some even remember him as Ed Cameron during the Philadelphia Experiment.

CD-ROM contains over 25 hours of audio interviews encoded in MP3 and RealAudio G2. CD is formatted in ISO 9660 format and is IBM, Mac, and Unix compatible.

elections, considered by fellow Democrats as a Clinton-caused disaster, brought in a noisy GOP majority. In the spring of 1995, a small group of highly patriotic flag officers were plotting to arrest their Commander-in-Chief Clinton for giving military secrets to the Red Chinese, a sworn enemy of the U.S.—an arrest provided for and authorized under the military code.

As titular head of both the U.S. civilian and military Establishment, Clinton, on the other hand, could have arrested the 24 Admirals and Generals for mutiny. If they were not assassinated, they intended to defend themselves with proof, such as Clinton giving, to the head of the Red Chinese Secret Police, in the White House and elsewhere, U.S. financial, industrial, and MILITARY secrets. Giving aid and comfort to a sworn enemy of the U.S. is the classical definition of treason. Clinton felt he could nevertheless control the situation, notwithstanding the plot against him.

Just prior to the 1994 elections there was appointed, to investigate Bill and Hillary, a supposed "Independent Counsel", Kenneth W. Starr. But Starr had built-in conflicts of interest, as Clinton was aware. Starr had, as a private law client, Wang Jun, head of the Red Chinese Secret Police. Wang Jun also headed a Red Chinese military-owned company that made and marketed AK-47 submachine guns, intended for shipment to U.S. inner-city narco-terrorist street gangs, for shoot-em-ups with big city police, to destabilize the U.S. government.

Moreover, Starr was reportedly the UNREGISTERED foreign lobbyist for the Red Chinese government. Starr was thus subject at any time to Clinton Justice Department punishment.

(See our extensive research series: "Red Chinese Secret Police IN THE UNITED STATES" for important background to the above.)

On Monday, April 17, 1995, a military jet planeload of top military was enroute to Dallas. They had onboard what is not supposed to exist, an American prisoner-of-war, prepared to finger the Pentagon as perpetuated by Clinton, as continuing the POW/Missing in Action cover-up from the Viet Nam War.

From sabotage, the plane blew up in the air, killing all onboard, near Alexander City, Alabama. The Pentagon made every effort to cover up what happened. Families of the victims were reportedly not permitted to have any possessions or details.

There are strong reasons to believe the plane had a portion of a group of "Seven Days in May"-style military officers plotting a coup against the White House. Thereafter, the small group of other flag officers, out of uniform, took up residence in a Paris suburb.

A year later, the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Jeremy Boorda, apparently aware of the coup, was assassinated and it was covered up as a "suicide", a favorite whitewash by the monopoly press. And about the time of Boorda's murder, William Colby was assassinated, former Director of Central Intelligence. He reportedly was assisting the plotters with detailed data. Colby's death was explained by the pressfakers as a "boat accident", although his friends contend it was murder.

Clinton, as President, was fully aware that Oklahoma City had, as residents, a large number of Iraqi military officers and their families, some officers of Iraqi Intelligence units, supposed defectors after the Persian Gulf War, 1991, brought into the U.S. by President George Herbert Walker Bush. Iraq, as Clinton knew, was planning a revenge terrorist attack against a federal office building in Oklahoma City, using U.S. dissidents as surrogates, but insulated from the actual Iraqi handlers. The FBI, the CIA, and other in the intelligence community have pictures and records showing the Iraqi military officers supervising the Murrah Building bombings. (Local Oklahoma TV reporters confirming this in part were fired or otherwise punished.)

Little, if at all, publicized was that prior to the Timothy McVeigh trial, the head of his defense team, Stephen Jones, filed an extraordinary petition in the Federal Appeals court, called Petition for Mandamus. It sought to force the Denver trial judge who was set to hear the McVeigh murder case (removed from Oklahoma City) to release certain secret documents possessed by various federal intelligence agencies. Referring to the secret as well as public court records, Jones' Petition pointed out that U.S. intelligence agencies were aware of Iraqi complicity in the Murrah Building bombing. For apparent reasons of "national security", a catch-all whitewash excuse, the federal appeals court rejected the Petition and the McVeigh murder trial, minus the revealing records, proceeded.

A U.S. Secret Service Agent, Witcher, in a position to finger Clinton on other matters, was steered into occupying an office in the Murrah Building. He died in the disaster. (We have one of the few pictures of him.) Clinton, apparently faking remorse, later attended a memorial for the agent.

At the time of the bombings, the U.S. Treasury's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Fire-Arms, headquartered in the Murrah Building, was planning an exercise as to how to "sting" or flush-out would-be domestic terrorists. Something went wrong with their "sting" operation. The BATF knew not to have their personnel in the Alfred Murrah Building on that Wednesday, April 19, 1995. A local fire official was likewise warned. So was a local judge in a nearby building, warned of an expected bombing that day.

Making a rare appearance on CBS' Sixty Minutes television news program, Clinton described the tragedy as a "plot to overthrow the government". With his power and prestige waning prior to the bombings, Clinton, with the complicity of the spy-riddled monopoly press,

The Masters and the Spiritual Path

You have friends in high places...

There are Masters who have come out of all the world's great spiritual traditions. These Great Lights of East and West have graduated from Earth's schoolroom and reunited with Spirit in the process known as The Ascension. Now they come to show us the pathway home.

The Masters tell us that they are examples and not exceptions to the rule. We, too, are destined to fulfill our life's purpose and reunite with Spirit.

In this intriguing work you will discover valuable keys to your own spiritual path: How The Ascension differs from nirvana and samadhi, the relationship between the spiritual and material universes, and the difference between ascended and unascended Masters. You will learn about the function of the spiritual hierarchy and the role of the Masters of East and West. Includes a unique meditation on the bliss of union with Spirit and a breathing exercise to help you balance and expand consciousness.

now urged the public to support and rally around their President.

Clinton and the presswhores used the bombings as an excuse to want to punish and round-up U.S. domestic dissidents who were heckling the central government in Washington. (Similarly, when Adolph Hitler came to power, he had the German Parliament burned down and falsely blamed on dissidents, to consolidate his power and have an excuse to round-up opponents to the Nazi Party.)

Right before the scheduled execution of McVeigh, an apparent split has developed in the FBI. There is reason to believe the split is also in other intelligence agencies. The target of the divergence is both current alleged “President” or White House “resident” George W. Bush and former President Clinton.

Through his father, George W. Bush is in a position to know—and want to cover up—the complicity of the Iraqi officers on U.S. soil in the Oklahoma City bombings. Also, former President Clinton, somewhere in the future, may well be subject to federal criminal prosecution for treason and the murder of the 168 who died in the Murrah Building bombings.

Are other records about to be revealed? Some believe so.

Based on a little-known Federal case in Chicago, 1991, where I was the only spectator and journalist present, I did exclusive stories on how the Elder Bush, in the decade of the 1980s, was a PRIVATE business partner of Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein. Together, they shook down the weak sheikdoms in the Persian Gulf for billions and billions of dollars of oil kick-backs.

The Persian Gulf War, in its simplest form, was merely two private business partners having a falling out and wanting to punish one another. Through foreign units of his firm, Halliburton, Vice President Richard Cheney has extensive business with Iraq on oil-country machinery and such. Prior to being Vice President, Cheney was CEO of Halliburton. Through Harken Energy, and a massive swindle, George W. Bush has extensive interests in the Persian Gulf and conflicts of interest as to Iraq as a so-called subdued “enemy” of the U.S.

Tell me, if you can, WHAT IS THE REASON NONE DARE CALL THIS TREASON?

More coming. Stay tuned.

Oklahoma City Bombings—Split In FBI?
Further Details
(5/11/01)

The following further details in this report might be helpful in understanding the situation:

1. As stated, the head of the McVeigh defense team, attorney Stephen Jones, prior to the 1997 McVeigh murder trial, filed a Petition for Mandamus, an extra-ordinary attempted remedy in the U.S. Court of Appeals, 10th Circuit, Denver. Because of perceived prejudice against a fair trial in Oklahoma, the case had been transferred to Denver U.S. District judge Richard Matsch.

Prior to the beginning of the trial, Jones was attempting to force Judge Matsch to order the release of secret records in the possession of U.S. intelligence agencies, corroborating that U.S. dissidents were secretly surrogates for an Iraqi revenge plot to carry out a major terrorist attack on an Oklahoma City federal office building. That these records, also referred to in secret court records, would show Iraqi complicity, as known in advance by U.S. intelligence agencies, as referred to in Jones’ unpublicized Petition of some 185 pages.

The spy-riddled monopoly press did not bring out an important detail. Namely, that judge Matsch was intimidated into keeping these records secret to protect the Clinton White House cover-up of the multiple bombings of the Murrah Building, as well as protecting the FBI, the CIA, the NSA, and others of the spy agency Establishment.

How? Judge Matsch’s daughter was apparently murdered. She somehow fell into a volcano in Hawaii. This apparent murder made the judge naturally distraught. The apparent murder example also was known to and intimidated the Federal Appeals judges in Denver who, after the McVeigh murder trial was conducted, without these highly revealing records, upheld the District Court’s guilty verdict of McVeigh. So both the trial judge and the federal appeals judges in Denver had been coerced into going along with a cover-up by murder close to home.

Will trial judge Matsch and/or the Federal Appeals judges, all apparently intimidated by the apparent murder, do something at this late date to bring out the true nature of the bombings of a federal office building in Oklahoma City?

2. The apparent split in the FBI, through which some three thousand records suddenly showed up, also involves the super-secret Federal Emergency Management Agency, FEMA. Seldom accurately referred to by the pressfakers, FEMA is not authorized OR FUNDED by Congress. According to very well placed sources, FEMA secretly funds their covert operations, of planning to run the U.S. FROM ABOVE THE U.S. CONSTITUTION, with huge funds garnered from the CIA’s dope trafficking into the U.S.

Vice President Richard Cheney has promoted the idea that FEMA should take over all anti-terrorist planning of the U.S., thus excluding the FBI, and causing a rift between the FBI and FEMA. Yes, FEMA seeks to run the U.S. from ABOVE the U.S. Constitution, and yes, I recognize such a doing is itself unconstitutional.

The Martial Law edict, quietly signed several years ago by President Clinton and carried over by alleged “President” or White House “resident” George W. Bush, provides—now get this—that no judge in the U.S. has jurisdiction to consider any challenge to the Martial Law edict. We are about the only ones publicly stating that several federal judges in the U.S. wear two hats—one as federal judge, and two, generally unknown, as FEMA official.

One such judge sits in the Federal Court in Chicago. We pointed all these details out in a several-hundred-page documented lawsuit, in January, 1991, against FEMA, in Chicago’s Federal District Court. Yes, a federal judge on behalf of FEMA dismissed our suit in secret, without any legal formality.

3. Despite the military coup planned against Clinton as President, referred to earlier in our story, Clinton was never concerned. Why? Because he had reason to know that his rise to and stay in power was orchestrated with the aid of blackmail and murder. We mentioned how supposed “Independent Counsel” Kenneth W. Starr was blackmailed. Clinton benefitted from an epidemic of suspicious, if not sabotaged, military aircraft crashes, and from the strange death of those who knew too much about Clinton and about the military coup plot against him.

One of those who knew too much and was reportedly sympathetic, if not supportive, of the coup, was General David McCloud, head of the Alaska Military District. He died in a sabotaged plane crash. His military colleagues are aware of the terrible details but refuse to allow a reporter to publicly identify them or take their position public. His relatives tend to agree with our details.

4. Some in the monopoly press, who talk to us off the record and we agree never to identify them as sources, contend such details as in our stories, which they believe to be true but cannot go in print or on the air with them, could well topple the U.S. government. Why? Because the ruling elite, whose faces are seldom seen, are governing us from behind the scenes in contradiction of the U.S. Constitution and laws.

5. Is there a rationale by the ruling elite for the cover-up of the true nature of the bombings of the Murrah Building? They fear, supposedly, a full-scale war with Iraq, which now has chemical and biological weapons as well as some types of nuclear bomb devices. Furthermore, any ruckus with Iraq over the Murrah Building inevitably would involve the current German government Establishment. Why? A German counter-intelligence agent, on behalf of Iraq, supervised the U.S. domestic dissidents in the limited role outside the Murrah Building while others had already planted explosive devices INSIDE the building to go off about the same moment as the ineffective truck fertilizer bomb outside. That agent, known to the American CIA, reportedly was Andreas Strasmeier, whose elders reportedly were pro-Hitler. Little understood: German industry has supplied much of the weaponry for Iraq. And, they built a 60-foot-under-the-ground bomb shelter for Saddam Hussein, as well as other super-secret buildings, machines, and weaponry for Iraq. All while Germany professes to be pro-West and pro-U.S.

Also, in our stories about the murder of Clinton White House deputy counsel Vincent W. Foster, Jr., we mentioned that German counter-intelligence (also tied to Strasmeyr) in Frankfurt, had advance knowledge of a foreign team set to murder Foster.

(See our website research: "Greenspan Aids And Bribes Bush", Part Four. And study our website story about how Foster was part of a team, trying to assist the FBI, in arresting international swindler Marc Rich, at the Swiss/French border: "Affidavit Of Former CIA Operative Leo Wanta.")

In an honest world, if McVeigh is to be severely punished for his limited role in the bombings, also deserving of major punishment would be William Rockefeller Clinton and his crony, George W. Bush, as well as the Elder Bush, George Herbert Walker Bush, for their cover-up complicity in the 168 murders on behalf of Iraq.

6. Timothy McVeigh, a purported expert in secret-code usage, cryptography, has been communicating in code with author Gore Vidal, who was on an extremely short list of those McVeigh wanted to witness his supposed execution.

(Study Gore Vidal's book 1876 and how it predicted the strange 2000 election. See our website series on "The Year-2000 Alleged Election".)

Gore Vidal, a third-level cousin of Albert Gore, Jr., (they are on the outs with each other) reportedly has a witnessed Affidavit from Timothy McVeigh supposedly setting forth "smoking gun" details that could scandalize the American government and Presidents George Herbert Walker Bush, Bill Clinton, and Bush's son, George W.

How is it that high-level types are so dedicated to destroying and discrediting the American central government? Isn't this something the British monarchy and aristocracy have been trying to do since at least the War of 1812?

And be aware of British complicity in the murders of President Abraham Lincoln, President James Garfield, and President William McKinley—all of whom opposed the British plans to take back this continent and its peoples as subjects of a British colonial rule.

(Visit our website series: "Greenspan Aids And Bribes Bush", to which are attached secret Federal Reserve wire transfer records showing billions and billions of dollars, from worldwide illicit dope trafficking and such, to the joint account of the Bush family with the Queen of England at her private bank, owned by the Queen, Coutts Bank London, as authorized under the secret codes of Greenspan.)

More coming. Stay tuned.

Reversal—U.S. Senate And White House?
(5/28/01)

An acute understanding of history and politics can be useful. Sometimes, however, others misunderstand.

Starting about a year before the Year-2000 Presidential Election, I repeatedly stated on numerous radio talk-shows that, as to the then upcoming Election, that we most likely would NOT have an election in the usual manner. A flood of questions arose: "Will we have martial law, and if so, why?" And: "Will the Election be called off?"

Studying past events, such as the strange alleged "election" of 1876, some put their ear to the ground. Did they hear the thundering horde a long way off? Others, history-deaf, heard nothing.

In January, 2001, at the time of the purported "Inauguration" of George W. Bush, I told a few confidants that I thought the results of the strange election of 2000 would be reversed. They angrily answered: "Reversed? How?" Adding: "The U.S. Constitution does not provide for such a thing." (Or does it?) With no quick rebuttal, I let the matter alone, for a while.

By a U.S. Senator departing his political party, the Senate majority and agenda have been overturned. By what means, if any, would the "election" of what some prefer to call "Bushfraud" be reversed? Many of the possibilities are known to the American press-fakers who more or less stay silent.

1. Some call Gore the "real president"—not the resident or occupant of the White House, but the one who won the Year-2000 popular vote by a 600,000 vote plurality but was not inaugurated. Why? Because the Electoral College vote, just like in 1876, was "stolen", some say, through Florida corruption. (See our related stories as to Gore Vidal's book 1876 reprinted in paperback form just before the Year-2000 Election. Was he just a clever author or a CIA-linked puppet, on a vast orchestrated scheme?) Suppose it becomes widely publicized that the GOP reportedly corrupted southern Florida DEMOCRATS to block a proper recount?

2. And, suppose it becomes widely publicized that, through treasonous use of Red Chinese funds laundered through the Chicago markets, the Bush Family bought top Democrats in southern Florida, to "steal" the crucial Florida Electoral College vote? (Again, see our website items on comparison to the 1876 Election and Florida. By the way, the British aristocracy wants the turmoil, since they have tried repeatedly, since the War of 1812, to destroy the U.S. Government and to try to revert this continent and its people back to being subjects of British colonies. The Brits played a role in the political assassination of three U.S. Presidents who resisted British efforts to divide up this nation: Presidents Abraham Lincoln, James Garfield, and William McKinley. The Elder Bush and his sons, George W., Jeb, and Neil, have a joint account with the Queen of England through her private bank, Coutts Bank London. (See the secret Federal Reserve wire transfer records, in our website series "Greenspan Aids And Bribes Bush". Together, they launder hundreds of billions of dollars from illicit dope trafficking, weapons smuggling, and other contraband.)

3. Suppose it becomes widely understood that the five-judge majority on the U.S. Supreme Court that installed George W. Bush as White House resident, was corrupted? Thus bringing America's highest court as well as the alleged Year-2000 "election" under the most severe cloud of suspicion and disgrace? Who notes

The blockbuster of all blockbusters! With stunning information never before released on the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales.

David Icke's most powerful and explosive book to date includes the astonishing background to the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales. Every man, woman, and child on the planet is affected by the stunning information that Icke exposes. He reveals in documented detail how the same interconnecting bloodlines have controlled the planet for thousands of years. How they created all the major religions and suppressed the spiritual and esoteric knowledge that will set humanity free from its mental and emotional prisons. It includes a devastating exposé of the true origins of Christianity and the other major religions, and documents suppressed science, which explains why the world is facing a time of incredible change and transformation. The Biggest Secret also exposes the true and astonishing background to the British Royal Family and, through enormous research and unique contacts, Icke reveals how and why Diana, Princess of Wales, was murdered in Paris in 1997. This includes information from a close confidant of Diana for nine years, which has never before been made public.

The Biggest Secret is a unique book and is quite rightly dubbed: "The book that will change the world." No one who reads it will ever be the same again.

that, after the disastrous Dred Scott Decision of 1856, ruling that Blacks are baggage and have no rights, that the high court went into several decades of never-never land. The Dred Scott Decision is still on the books. Some hard-hearts currently on the court seem to be apologists for the infamous ruling. Justice Clarence Thomas, at the time of his ratification in 1991, came almost to the point of saying the decision is okay, based on his idea of “natural justice”.

As to the Gang of Five on the U.S. Supreme Court, see the book The Betrayal Of America: How The Supreme Court Undermined The Constitution And Chose Our President by a legendary American prosecutor, Vincent Bugliosi. Nation Books, N.Y., 2001.

4. And suppose White House “resident” Bush cannot deal with a severe economic downturn, a collapse of the markets, and the so-called “U.S. Dollar”? So he goes bananas. Some psychiatrists already claim he has what they, in their trade, call a “nut-house face”, typically that of someone who for years and years has used mind-altering drugs.

5. Further, consider that purported Vice President Dick Cheney, a sick man, is shown to be in treasonous business dealings in oil-patch goods, through his firm Halliburton’s foreign units, with Iraq. Remember, Cheney has been CEO of Halliburton. And that these treacherous dealings overlap the Bush Family private business partnership dealings with Saddam Hussein, once subject of an unpublicized lawsuit in Chicago. (As detailed in earlier items, I was the only journalist covering the Bush-Saddam hearings.)

6. And suppose it becomes widely known that the Bush/Cheney White House has continued and perpetuated the Clinton cover-up of facts showing that the Oklahoma City bombings (more than one device was used) were arranged by Iraq as revenge. And that Iraq, to disguise their role, used U.S.-insulated domestic dissidents, like Timothy McVeigh, as surrogates. And that the Elder Bush, at the close of the Persian Gulf War with his former business partner Saddam Hussein, brought quietly into the U.S. several thousand Iraqi military officers, some with intelligence units, many of them living with their families IN OKLAHOMA CITY. And, that the American Gestapo, the FBI, has closed-circuit video showing an Iraqi military officer supervising the bombings. That is, a Clinton/Bush/Cheney cover-up that Iraq was responsible for the worst terrorist attack, so far, on U.S. soil. (Remember the detail: McVeigh murder trial judge Richard Matsch was intimidated to follow the cover-up because of the murder of the judge’s daughter. See our previous story.)

[Editor’s note: Among Sherman’s wide array of reliable “inside” information there is obviously something compelling linking Iraq with the Oklahoma City bombing tragedy, or else he would not be making such a big deal, in several writings now, about this supposed connection. We here at The SPECTRUM are not about to discount ANY plausible link to the matter, for there could be many, many hands stirring this particular dark soup pot for a number of different reasons.

However, for the sake of those of you longtime readers who are more aware of the actual technologies utilized for the “explosion”—as we remind you again in the first half of the article “Revisiting The Terrible Oklahoma City ‘Bombing’” elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM—Iraq could not possibly have been responsible for the actual execution of the diabolical deed. They may well have played some kind of a part, perhaps even duped into their role, as is common within such large-scale operations.

But the fact remains that some much, much bigger and much, much more technically savvy element of the equation had to have carried out such a technically advanced strike on that well-fortified building. Very few “suspects” would have access to such an array of equipment and be in a position to coordinate the necessary aspects so that what happened “looked like” the simple kind of bomb blast blamed on McVeigh and Nichols.

So, consider objectively what Sherman is offering about the “Iraq connection” to the Oklahoma City tragic event—but—likewise use your own discernment and perhaps allow an Iraq connection to be only a part of a much larger picture on the world stage of possibilities.]

7. Consider that it becomes widely known, with details, that the Younger Bush is merely a marionette, under the control of his CIA father, the Elder Bush, and handlers. And further, that it becomes more widely known and understood that the Elder Bush played a role in the cover-up of the political assassination of President John F. Kennedy. (An FBI document circulated by us and others shows this.) And that the Younger Bush helps perpetuate the false idea that a “lone nut”—and not the American CIA—was responsible for the Dallas murder.

8. Suppose it becomes widely known and understood that White House resident Bush and his pal, Mexican President Vicente Fox, together are closely linked, if not actually in business, reportedly with one of the most notorious drug kingpins in Mexico. Three Mexican newspapers have set forth the details generally ignored by the American newsmakers. (See Spotlight, a populist newspaper, 5/28/01.) Some contend Coca-Cola is a CIA proprietary operation used, in part, to launder worldwide narcotics funds. (See our website series “Coca-Cola, The CIA, And The Courts” and Vicente Fox has been head of Coca-Cola in Mexico.)

9. Suppose it becomes widely known and publicized that the Younger Bush aids his father, the Elder Bush, in covering up the treason of “The October Surprise”. That is, the Elder Bush arranged the treasonous delay in the release of 52 U.S. hostages by Iran, to show Jimmy Carter, running for re-election, as a wimp who could not get the hostages released. The Elder Bush paid off Iran, through secret weapons shipments through Israel, to further the Iraq-Iran War, 1980-88. The hostages were released at the very moment, in 1981, that Reagan/Bush were inaugurated. In a similar treasonous deal, the Younger Bush, through Greenspan, reportedly arranged the transmittal of billions of dollars to pay-off the Red Chinese to release, in April 2001, the 24 airpersons of the U.S. spy plane forced down in Red China. Some contend the pay-off funds got somehow blocked in transmittal through Singapore.

10. Suppose it becomes widely known that George W. Bush has appointed, if not already installed, cabinet members and agency heads who are either reportedly linked to the Red Chinese Secret Police, such as Elaine Chao, Labor Secretary, or Drug Enforcement Administration chief, Asa Hutchinson, a Congressman [R-AR]. Hutchinson, when he was Chief Federal Prosecutor in the Western District of Arkansas, protected a major drug smuggler, Barry Seal, linked to the Elder Bush, Bill Clinton, Ollie North, and CIA operations through the Mena, Arkansas Airport. By some corrupt arrangement, George W. Bush and brother Jeb became heir to Barry Seal’s airplane, later used by the two Bush brothers to pick up dope, with impunity, through a Florida military

Could bioelectric technologies investigated during the Cold War provide the most advanced form of killing, enslaving, and coercing billions of unsuspecting people worldwide? More frightening: could infectious agents, including the “mad cow disease” protein “prion” crystal, have been engineered to effect a new insidious level of bio-spiritual warfare?

Dr. Len Horowitz investigates 2000 years of religious and political persecution and the latest technologies being used to enslave, coerce, and even kill billions of unsuspecting people.

This work returns the most precious spiritual knowledge, power, and “healing codes” to humanity. It offers new hope for the loving masses to survive the worldwide plagues, famines, and weather changes that are now at hand. In perfect time for these cataclysmic events, Healing Codes presents an urgent, monumental, and inspired work that will be hailed for generations to come.

airport (while the Elder Bush, as Vice President, headed the supposed Anti-Drug Operation in southern Florida).

11. Suppose it becomes widely known and publicized that the Younger Bush, as White House resident, has aided his father in covering up the Bush Family role in the murder of Clinton White House Deputy Counsel Vincent W. Foster, Jr. The Elder Bush, as Vice President, together with then Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, arranged to pay-off some in the aristocracy in Israel for their role in transferring weapons shipments for treasonous "October Surprise". The pay-off was nuclear missile tracking secrets that Bush/Weinberger arranged to be taken through security checkpoints by a low-level Naval analyst, Jonathan Pollard. The middleman, making the deal work, was Foster, long before he had a role in the Clinton White House. From the late 1970s on, Foster was a super money laundry courier and espionage expert. (For more details, visit our website series "Greenspan Aids And Bribes Bush", Part Four.) Weinberger/Bush, when Pollard pleaded guilty, wanted Pollard somehow put before a firing squad—one way, they thought, of keeping him from ever identifying Foster as an accomplice with Weinberger/Bush. Pollard was locked-up in a prison basement and seldom sees daylight.

12. Also, Foster was part of a team arranging to arrest international swindler Marc Rich at the French-Swiss border. Rich had arranged treasonous deals for the Bush Family to violate the Iran oil embargo in the 1980s, and later, the Iraq oil embargo. The Bush Family profited by billions of dollars through this treachery. (See our website document Affidavit Of Leo Wanta.)

13. To benefit Enron Corp., a Texas-based major energy firm, and other energy firms in Texas linked to Dick Cheney, George W. Bush reportedly arranged to "screw" California on the electricity shortage matter. Enron and other Texas firms, supporters of the Bush Family and interlocked in business with them, have been permitted to charge California, in the emergency, of ten times or more the going rate for megawatts per hour. It was a reprisal, understood by many in California, for the state having voted heavily for Bush's opponent, Gore, in the year-2000 election. Some expect the California emergency to spread to the Chicago area. A California utility parent firm, through its unit, has purchased much of the power-generating facilities in the Chicago area. The California emergency is expected to therefore impact the Chicago area which, along with much of Illinois, voted for Gore. (The story of the mess is in Crain's Chicago Business, front page, 5/21/01.)

14. White House resident Bush, shortly after inauguration, came to Chicago. Among other things, in a closed meeting he sought to reportedly shake-down the Irish-Catholic aristocracy that runs the Chicago Board of Trade. He wanted more co-operation in laundering the dope funds of the Red Chinese through the Board of Trade, disguised as soybeans and other items. When traders and other honchos resisted, Bush threatened to have them prosecuted for something (he will think of something). Note: the Elder Bush, similarly, the day after HE was inaugurated, in January, 1989, started the prosecution of 46 young Chicago commodity and currency traders, mostly on five-dollar matters of which clients never complained.

The threatened federal criminal prosecutions of the Board of Trade people by the Younger Bush is to get at Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley. The pro-British Bush Family are out to stick it to the prominent Irish Catholics, supporters of Daley and the Democrats. To carry out the reprisals, Bush is sending in a New York Federal Prosecutor to be the new Chief Federal Hang-Man in Chicago. Remember, the Bush Family have a joint account with the anti-Irish Catholic, Queen of England.

A possible scenario: George W. Bush is removed as unfit to carry out the duties of his office, the procedure provided for under the 25th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The presidential power automatically devolves on the Vice President, Cheney, who, however, with an extremely bad heart condition, cannot serve. So, next considered, Secretary of State General Colin Powell takes over amidst his edict of martial law. (Others in line of succession ahead of him, not available.) Powell is no angel. As we and others have pointed out, General Powell along with the Elder Bush and Powell's crony, Richard Armitage, now Deputy Secretary of State, have controlled the dope traffic from the "Golden Triangle", Southeast Asia, Southwest China.

Just another story suppressed by the liars and whores of the press. You know who—those with the fifty dollar hairdos and the nickel heads. So, will there be a reversal of the Bush/Cheney White House?

More coming. Stay tuned.

McVeigh And
"Fraud Upon The Court"

There is one term lawyers seldom study about or use. Perhaps reading about this will help you understand why. That phrase is "fraud upon the court".

In Anglo-Saxon Law, lawyers are "officers of the court", pledged to uphold the court system. In the beginning of this nation, the lawyers and judges in the colonies generally were Tories who supported the Crown—the Monarchy in England that sought to tax the colonists without representation.

With the Declaration Of Independence from England and the American Revolutionary War, among other things, the non-lawyer colonists rose up against the lawyers and lawyers acting as judges. To identify these enemies of the people, the colonists painted black the chimneys of lawyers and judges, many of whom fled to Canada.

From the standpoint of lawyers and judges, the most troublesome "fraud upon the court" involves a corrupter or "bagman", working a malign—if not corrupt—influence on the judge or judges to procure an arbitrary ruling. In the whole history of jurisprudence in the United States, with just one rare exception of record, lawyers have NOT been the ones invoking, in court, the principle of "fraud upon the court" to challenge a court ruling by fingering the judge.

Even to this day, lawyers, generally by what they do and say in court, support the system, upholding whatever nowadays constitutes the "Crown".

With that one exception of record, in the entire history of the United States, all the invoking in court of "fraud upon the court" as to corrupt judges has been done in the last four decades by me and my associates in our court reform, investigation, and research group, Citizen's Committee To Clean Up The Courts, of which since 1963 I have been the founder/chairman.

As a group, we early on, by our work, came to understand the general principles of judicial corruption endemic in America. Such as, namely, oftentimes, the judges in the courthouse building own and operate a bank, together with their lawyers/cronies/corrupters. And, surprisingly, very often that selfsame bank is right across the alley or right across the street from the courthouse.

Identified by others as the greatest bribery-of-judges scandal in American history, was caused by us in 1969.

The State courthouse in Chicago at the time was called the Civic Center. It housed: the Circuit Court of Cook County; and the next higher level in a three-tier state court system, the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, Cook County; and the Chicago offices of three of the seven Justices of Illinois' highest tribunal, the Illinois Supreme Court, whose court building is in the state capitol.

Through an intense investigation, we, as non-lawyers but self-educated in law and not wishing to be members of the bar, unearthed documents and details supporting the following:

1. That across the street from the Civic Center was a small, CLOSELY HELD bank. Following the cynical tradition in America, it was called, naturally, the Civic Center Bank.

2. From all the details, we understood it was a quiet money laundry for criminal purposes. We called it "the shuttle bus to Switzerland".

3. It was founded by Illinois' chief tax collector, Theodore J. Isaacs, who had been Director of the Illinois Department of Revenue, interlocked with the highly corrupt Chicago

District office of the Internal Revenue Service.

4. Isaacs brought into his bank enterprise, as fellow owners, the Chief Bank Examiner, Otto Kerner, Jr., Governor of Illinois and later made a Federal Appeals Court judge, together with thirty state and federal judges, and nine name-brand Chicago-area gangsters.

5. To assure himself that the pressfakers would censor any negative stories about the criminal operation, Isaacs also brought in, as fellow owners, the head of Field Enterprises that at that time owned the Chicago Sun-Times and the Chicago Daily News; and the political editor of the Chicago Tribune; and a further assortment of City Hall and media bigshots.

Because of his previous activities, Isaacs was convicted of state criminal offenses. His appeal was pending in the Illinois Supreme Court. Being a man that understands the American judicial system, he did a natural thing. Just two weeks before the oral argument and presentation of his appeal, he brought into the bank, as fellow owners, most of the judges of the Illinois Supreme Court.

The high court judges did a natural thing. As banker-judges they understood the judicial system such as it is. They overturned the conviction of their fellow bank-owner Isaacs. (As we have pointed out on our website, the court system is riddled in key places with banker-judges. They do not disqualify themselves when their bank is in their court. Guess who wins in their crooked court?)

Our policy is and has always been: when we are convinced that certain judges are corrupt, we file and present, to their face, an extra-ordinary court petition, accusing the judge or judges openly that certain court judgments were procured by a malign, if not corrupt, influence on the judges. We do not engage in secret poison pen letters, or mere rumors, or tactics of disguise and evasion.

Direct confrontation is our motto and my job, as chairman, founder, and spokesman of our group since 1963. It is a hazard and jeopardy required by a court system which does not cure itself by the internal operation of the Bench and the Bar.

Designating ourselves as amici curiae, “friends of the court”, I and an associate of mine, by an extra-ordinary motion, filed in the criminal case of People of the State of Illinois versus Theodore J. Isaacs, directly confronted the state high court judges with their own crimes in their purported temple of justice.

Angry at our audacity, they ordered and supervised a Chicago judge to grill me. Under threat of jail, I was ordered by the accused high court judges to divulge all our methods of investigation of them. They evidently figured that, since I am a paraplegic from polio, in a wheelchair since childhood, I am a weakling and will fold up and disappear. I refused to divulge our methods to the accused judges and their hang-man.

Dealing with me as if I were a desperate and dangerous bank robber, they had four state troopers haul me to prison in an armored truck. After two weeks of the resulting public commotions, I was vindicated. The high court Chief Justice and an Associate Justice were ordered removed from the bench. A third accused high court justice promptly bugged out; he died under fire. A fourth high court justice and the remaining Associate Justices somehow escaped. As an institution of stone sitting on a hill, the state high court fell into the dark pit of infamy. It was a beautiful but temporary moment in history.

Thereafter, in the federal court system, likewise designating myself as a “friend of the court”, I filed an extra-ordinary court petition. I accused Chicago Federal Appeals Judge Otto Kerner, Jr., a pal of Isaacs, of specific bribery. After having been Illinois Governor, Kerner had been appointed to the U.S. Court of Appeals, 7th Circuit, Chicago.

Judge Kerner arranged with the Chief Judge of the U.S. District Court in Chicago to try to jail me for “contempt of court”. When that did not stop me, Kerner held a press conference, trying to smear me as a “liar”. Like a gangster making too much noise, when a pillar of the Government Establishment does not do his dirty work quietly, the Establishment throws him away. He serves no further purpose. No “sensible” bagman or fellow banker will corrupt him. Kerner was prosecuted and jailed on my charges and died an ex-convict. He became the highest-level sitting federal judge in American history to be jailed for bribery. (Isaacs was sent to jail as well on federal charges.)

The preceding are just two examples of our work as a group over the last four decades.

In the Timothy McVeigh murder case, the chief defense counsel, Stephen Jones, prior to the start of the trial, brought an extra-ordinary petition in the next higher court, U.S. Court of Appeals, 10th Circuit, Denver. In the 185-page document, Jones sought to compel trial judge Richard Matsch to be required to force the American CIA and other espionage agencies to divulge the details of Iraqi involvement in the Oklahoma City bombing. In his court papers, called Petition for Mandamus AGAINST JUDGE MATSCH, Jones referred to secret portions of the court records as well as other evidence showing the CIA cover-up, that the CIA and other espionage agencies had prior knowledge of the bombing. And that there were others involved.

(At the close of the Persian Gulf War, 1991, then President George Herbert Walker Bush arranged to quietly bring into the United States some four thousand Iraqi military officers, supposed defectors, many from Iraqi intelligence units, with their families. Some two thousand of these live in Oklahoma City or right nearby. Bush was in a position to know that some of them were double agents. The FBI has concealed that they have closed-circuit video showing an Iraqi military officer supervising the bombings. Multiple devices were used, some around or strapped to the pillars of the Alfred P. Murrah Building.)

Using U.S. domestic dissidents as patsies and surrogates, apparently insulated from knowing about the Iraqi link, Iraq thus got revenge upon the United States by the worst, so far, terrorist attack on U.S. soil. Iraq and others consider the Oklahoma bombings justified.

Some have contended that, at the close of the Persian Gulf War, the U.S. committed war crimes in that our military was ordered to shoot in the back some 150 thousand Iraqi soldiers, mostly conscripts, proceeding under a white flag of surrender. With bulldozers, the U.S. military buried many of them, still alive, in mass graves in the desert. The only, even remotely similar, event was late in World War Two, at the “Battle of the Bulge”, when German troops slaughtered some 86 U.S. soldiers proceeding under a white flag of surrender. Can 86 soldiers be compared to 150 thousand?

In the only case of its kind on record in U.S. history, is outlined, step by step, the procedure that is to be used in unearthing whether a court judgment or verdict has been procured by a malign, if not corrupt, influence on a judge, constituting a “fraud upon the court”. That case, invoked by us in the Illinois Supreme Court mess and the Kerner matter, is Root Refining Co. versus Universal Oil Products Co. In law libraries, it is Volume 169 Federal Reporter Second Series, starting at page 514. Legal researchers cite it as 169 F.2d 514 (3rd Circuit, 1948). This rare case provides that:

(A) A court, regardless of its level in the court system, whether trial court or reviewing court, has inherent power and original jurisdiction at any time (even years and years later) to inquire whether its judgments and decrees had been procured by a “fraud upon the court”, poisoning the temple of justice. That is, by some happening not known at the time of judgment and not previously in the court record, but becoming known at a later date.

(B) This inherent power is particularly so when the judgments and decrees had been obtained by a malign, if not corrupt, influence on one or more judges of the court.

(C) To supervise the investigation, and to assure the public that there will not be a cover-up, the Chief Justice of the United States has to designate judges from faraway to specifically sit in the district of the inquiry. Such faraway judges should appoint a Master, that is, a court-appointed taker-of-evidence, to quiz witnesses, to compile evidence and documents, and to submit a report to the special panel of faraway judges. And that the special panel consider the same.

(D) Without exception, every possible witness, document, and means is to be used, using court process, to compel the appearance of witnesses and production of documents, in order to be able to effectively unearth the “fraud upon the court”.

(E) The circumstances of the accused judges and how they went about entering the challenged and tainted judgments and decrees are to be examined and scrutinized, or whether others unlawfully and secretly entered such judgments and decrees for or on behalf of such judges. (One of the examined judges in the Root case was an elderly senile judge. Court orders were secretly entered by corrupters in his name without his apparent knowledge.) The circumstances have to be examined to determine if corrupters worked a malign, if not corrupt, influence on the accused judge or judges.

(F) To assist in the inquiry, there is to be permitted outsiders, not themselves directly involved in the judgments or decrees—that is, as amicus curiae, “friends of the court”.

(G) The special panel of faraway judges has to determine whether the court judgments, orders, and decrees, shown to be tainted by having been procured by malign influence and corruption, are to now be purged from the court records.

(H) The special panel has to consider whether the now identified perpetrators of the “fraud upon the court” are to hereafter be barred from the courthouse and not allowed to be further heard.

In the claim of “fraud upon the court”, the defense attorneys in the McVeigh case have not focused on the tainted role of the judges, which should be considered.

Those in the McVeigh case who should be questioned, under oath by a panel of faraway judges designated by the Chief Justice of the United States, to especially sit in Denver to consider the extraordinary situation should include the following:

- Denver Federal District Judge Richard Matsch, who apparently had been told certain matters are to be covered up because of “national security”—that is, the Iraqi connection.

Also, judge Matsch has reportedly been terrorized and intimidated by the reported murder of his daughter, who fell or was pushed into a volcano in Hawaii. Judge Matsch refused to compel the American CIA and other espionage agencies to produce records, which by other factual data they are known to have, showing prior U.S. government knowledge of the Murrah Building bombings.

The judge should have compelled the American CIA to divulge their records as to Andreas Strassmeier, connected to German Counter-Intelligence, and supervised by a secret CIA unit in the Justice Department. Strassmeier reportedly was a go-between for Iraqis and the American domestic dissidents as surrogates and patsies.

And remember our prior stories about German Counter-Intelligence having advance knowledge of the murder of Clinton White House Deputy Counsel Vincent W. Foster, Jr.

German big business supplied weapons to Iraq.

- Oklahoma City U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley, who was given, by federal officials, advance warning of a bombing to be at the Murrah Building on April 19, 1995. Judge Alley purposely did not come to his office that day. His office is close by the Murrah Building. Judge Alley admitted his prior knowledge in an interview in the newspaper The Oregonian, in his original home state of Oregon. Those who forewarned him should be compelled to be identified.

- Former President George Herbert Walker Bush, to testify under oath, subject to penalty for perjury about:

(a) How he arranged to bring into the U.S. the 4 thousand Iraqi military defectors, some of whom were known to Bush as being double-agents. And the interface arrangement between Bush and President Clinton as to the housing, payment, and work provided for the defectors, some two thousand of whom live in Oklahoma City or right nearby.

(b) The Elder Bush and his son George W. Bush should be questioned under oath about the private business partnership of the Elder Bush with Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein for the decade of the 1980s. To cover-up the bank records of the same, a federal suit was brought in Chicago, 1990-91, at the hearing of which the only journalist was Skolnick.

- Judges on the U.S. Court of Appeals, 10th Circuit, Denver, who were told in private that they should not compel Judge Matsch to force out the records of the CIA and other espionage agencies, because of so-called “national security”, being a link to Iraq. They were also terrorized and intimidated by the reported murder of Matsch’s daughter.

- William Rockefeller Clinton should be forced to testify under sworn oath, subject to penalty for perjury, about his interface with the Elder Bush and George W. Bush, as to the Iraqi defectors, some of them known double-agents, brought into the U.S., with some two thousand of them in Oklahoma City or right nearby. Clinton should be grilled as to why he had a U.S. Secret Service agent, Alan Whitchee, re-assigned to the Murrah Building, where he died in the bombings.

As known to Clinton, the agent had lots of knowledge about Clinton’s treason with the Red Chinese Secret Police. With Clinton’s prior knowledge of the bombings, Clinton thus arranged to snuff out the Secret Service agent. Showing fake remorse, Clinton as President attended a post-bombingS memorial for the agent.

- FBI agents and officials, current and former, should be questioned under sworn oath, subject to penalty for perjury, about the closed-circuit video that FBI has showing an Iraqi military officer supervising the multiple bombings of the Murrah Building, as well as FBI knowledge of the Strassmeier matters.

Note: A free-lance journalist interviewing Timothy McVeigh in prison wanted to ask him a question without being overheard. So the journalist wrote down the letters C-I-A on a piece of paper, and with a questioning look on the journalist’s face and holding up the paper for McVeigh to see while the journalist pointed to McVeigh for an answer, McVeigh nodded his head “Yes”.

- Past and present relevant Directors of Central Intelligence as to some of the matters here mentioned.

- Past and present members of Counter-Intelligence of Saudi Arabia, a U.S. ally, as to the Iraqi connection and U.S. intelligence prior knowledge of the Murrah Building bombings.

- The defense attorneys for Timothy McVeigh and their bringing up the matter of “fraud upon the court”. Nowhere do they seem ready or willing to bring up any matters of the judges operating in the McVeigh matter under a malign, if not corrupt, influence, constituting the strongest showing of a “fraud upon the court”.

At the minimum, bringing up some of the matters mentioned here would constitute strong grounds for a new trial and/or changing the death penalty for McVeigh. Like attorneys throughout the history of American courts, the McVeigh attorneys are not inclined to finger judges, even if rightfully necessary. In plain lingo, the lawyers are too chicken or they simply go along with supporting the “Crown”, regardless of the truth.

More coming. Stay tuned.

Fallen Angels

And The Origins Of Evil

Did rebel angels take on human bodies to fulfill their lust for the “daughters of men”?

Did these fallen angels teach men to build weapons of war?

That is the premise of the Book of Enoch, a text cherished by the Essenes, early Jews, and Christians, but later condemned by both rabbis and Church fathers. The book was denounced, banned, and “lost” for over a thousand years—until in 1773 a Scottish explorer discovered three copies in Ethiopia.

Elizabeth Clare Prophet examines the controversy surrounding this book and sheds new light on Enoch’s forbidden mysteries. She demonstrates that Jesus and the apostles studied the Book of Enoch, and tells why Church fathers suppressed its teaching that angels could incarnate in human bodies.

Contains Richard Laurence’s translation of the Book of Enoch, all the other Enoch texts (including the Book of the Secrets of Enoch), and biblical parallels.

Aligning Heart & Head Are Key To A Satisfying Life

6/7/01 ESU "JESUS" SANANDA

Good afternoon, my scribe. It is I, Esu "Jesus" Sananda, come in the Golden-White Light of Creator Source—The One Light.

Be still, my scribe, and allow the energies to settle. Feel the Light filling you from within and expanding outward. Allow the distractions of the day to fall away as your mind becomes still.

We of the Lighted Realms of Creation find great pleasure in bringing you ones these messages of Hope. As your planet and all "on board" continue in the evolutionary cycles of growth, there will always be challenges to face and conditions created wherein you will find a need to seek, from within yourself, a means by which to balance the energy flows of any given situation. This is to say that "challenges" are often, in their most fundamental form, nothing more than energy surges that need to be balanced in a responsible manner.

For example, let's say you encounter someone who is abusing a child, and as a result you react with a strong emotional charge of anger and frustration. This emotional energy surge has just created an unbalanced situation (challenge) that will need to eventually be balanced out within the person originating the surge.

This is perhaps a more technical way to view the human emotional condition, but we often feel that there is a great need to present the various spiritual concepts from a multitude of perspectives, so as to reach past perceptual differences and thus allow for a greater potential of understanding.

We have discussed with you ones many times the importance of having the "heart" (emotional) and the "head" (mental) in alignment so as to allow for a greater flow of Creative Energy into the physical. You would be wise to go back and re-read those earlier messages on this subject, for as you and your planet continue along in the next several weeks, months, and years, the consequences of this alignment (or misalignment) will become MUCH more a factor in your day-to-day lives.

As the frequency and energy of your planet continue to rise, the alignment of your mental and emotional energies (the heart and the head) will begin to manifest your desires at an ever increasing rate. If your head desires are in contradiction to what your heart wants, then you will likely generate great internal pressures at an ever increasing rate.

Let's say that your head wants money and material comfort and the usual external image of "success", and your mental focus on this is great—perhaps to the point of distraction and preoccupation. Meanwhile, your heart is crying out for opportunities to flow love and compassion to others, and to be of service to your fellow travelers along the journey of "life".

Can you see how this glaring misalignment between the heart and the head can lead to a great internal struggle (pressure) wherein NEITHER the heart nor the head win out over the other? The result is seeming stagnation of energy—like what happens when you have your feet on the accelerator and the brake at the same time in your car. In this kind of situation you will usually oscillate, in a restless manner, from extreme to extreme, but on average cancel-out any net manifestation of the conflicting energies. In short, you will have a whole lot of energy going nowhere.

For many of you this example will serve as useful and insightful information, and you will take it and adapt it to your more personal situation. Others will fail to recognize the significance of the concept of which I speak. The concept is of great spiritual significance in that, when you recognize the many SUBTLE ways you can and do become distracted by external situations from moment to moment, you will see how the vast majority of your Creative Potential is dissipated or diffused as you routinely repeat the same patterns of thought and emotion over and over until, as if by chance, "something" happens.

Unfortunately this "something" is often of a seemingly negative nature, strong enough to get your attention. These seemingly negative conditions are ALWAYS orchestrated by you (your Higher Self or soul-you) and your Guides so as to help you break the "going nowhere" repetitive routines you are susceptible to falling into.

We witness many of you ones seeking the ever elusive "something" that is missing in your life—that you can't seem to put your finger on, but somehow feel you are "missing out" on. Well, you are!

Most of you are missing out on great opportunities to express and flow the Infinite Creative Energy (God-Force Energy) in a very joyous and satisfying manner. Deep inside there is often created a nagging feeling of restlessness as you continue your search. This "restlessness" is the result of the heart and head being out of alignment.

Often ones REASON (a mental activity) that life should be lived a certain way. This mental picture is generally reinforced by millions in society following the same herd-like mentality so as to establish a state of apparent "normalcy".

The typical mental-conditioning pattern goes something like this: Go to grade school, then to high school; next go on to college, military, or learn a trade. Get a job and begin establishing your credit because that is "THE MOST IMPORTANT THING". Next start a family and buy a house, and thus establish your "stability" and "normalcy".

This is fine if it truly is your choice. Many of the older generations view this sort of scenario as "good, sound advice" and strongly recommend similar patterns to their children and grandchildren. This would all be fine and well—if it weren't for the fact that it places almost all emphasis on the external physical "comforts" and "securities" of living, rather than recognizing that, first and foremost, ALL ones are on an infinite SPIRITUAL journey.

The physical schoolroom is "just" one aspect of that journey; but it is an exquisite aspect which affords the opportunity to slow down the Energy exchange to a point where the whole process of creating—that is, expressing and flowing Creative Energies—can be studied in great detail. The study of these Creative Energy flows is the primary reason for the physical experience in the first place.

Please know that there is GREAT wisdom in seeking balance in your lives with respect to your current situation and the ideal situation. We do NOT advocate that anyone just pick up and leave their job, family, or any other responsibilities. The spiritual journey is an INNER journey, and great strides can be achieved with simple meditation and introspection. And responsibilities are typically the growth challenges you ones most prefer to ignore or avoid.

Learn first to interpret your own Guidance. When the heart and the head are out of alignment, there is ALWAYS a signal sent out for your "notification". The signal is subtle at first, and if ignored, will quickly grow into what you ones commonly refer to as "stress".

How many of you live a totally stress-free life, wherein all is perfect and there are no challenges to face or overcome? The answer is NONE!

It is natural to have challenges to face. It is natural to grow and learn from your experiences. Eventually the challenges will be looked upon as welcomed OPPORTUNITIES to explore a part of yourself, as you recognize the value to be gained in working through the energy dynamics that will allow you to regain proper alignment of energies between the heart and the head.

As maturity and wisdom are achieved, you will find that the balancing and alignment of energies will become the natural or "chronic" state. This will not mean that your life will be without challenges that will cause you to need to look within and tap the inner Creative Potential for answers. It means that you will be much quicker at recognizing an energy imbalance, and begin immediately to regain balance. Thus, the stressful (mis-aligned) condition does not linger very long at all, and you are quick to re-establish the condition of smoothness and peace in your life.

To each of you who partake of this message, please learn to follow your intuition and inner Guidance. Question yourself and ask: "Why do I do the things I do? Am I living my life the way I want to live it, or am I living the way others expect me to live?"

These can be difficult questions to ask, especially if the answers suggest that you have "fallen" for the usual mental conditioning reinforced by masses who tend to "frown" on the freedom-seeker who is too busy living and experiencing the "something" that is missing in so many people's lives.

The "something" is the exhilaration of allowing the natural Creative Energy of Creator God to flow through you in a deliberate manner of co-creation. This can only truly be achieved when the heart and the head are in alignment. The more perfect the alignment, the greater the flow—and thus the greater the Joy to be experienced.

This alignment results in: "Thy (God's) Will be done." Creator God's Will is what is naturally and fluently recognized when perfect alignment is achieved.

I am Esu "Jesus" Sananda. I come in Service to, and in Oneness (perfect alignment) with, The One Light—Creator Source. May you each continually seek the inner balance that leads to the inner recognition of this same state of Clarity and Oneness.

Blessings and peace. Salu.

"Our Elder Brothers from the Higher Realms of Creation are attempting to communicate with ALL of us at this time. Why? Take a look around you. The old ways of doing things aren't working. Our planet is entering a time of massive, turbulent change and renewal. To put it bluntly: we NEED help! And that's where these books come into the picture. Yes, eventually 'the Phoenix will arise from the ashes' after this Great Cleansing process, but the ride could be quite a bumpy one, especially for those ill-prepared for what is to happen." — From the back cover of Volume I

"Let us begin with WHO you are. You, the non-physical YOU, are an infinite thought projection of the One who created you (God!). You are the product of His desire. You are, in effect, Desire manifest in uniqueness of purpose." — Esu "Jesus" Sananda (Vol. II)

A HORSE IN BALANCE WEARS A CROWN OF LIGHT

A story honoring en-Light-ened riding masters who developed Guidelines to bring: discipline, beauty, grace, and balance in the movements of a horse, from a girl who desired to be a better rider. She became the first equestrian American woman in Olympic history. This is her own life story; how their Guidelines produced oneness with her horses, also the realization of Creator-God, the Balancing Fulcrum, from riding the Figure 8. The en-Light-ened equestrian masters were Fritz Stecken and Ludwig Von Zeiner, Head Rider of The Spanish Riding School.

Did you know you have a seven times greater chance of dying walking into your doctor's office than you do getting behind the wheel of your car? Prescription drug adverse reactions are the third leading cause of death in America!

Every year approximately 200,000 die from prescription drug reactions and another 80,000 die from medical malpractice, while 41,000 die in auto accidents. [DRUG TOPICS, October 23, 1995, pg. 14-16.] What is wrong with our focus on the "drug war" when 200,000 die each year from prescription drugs, yet approximately only 20,000 die as a result of illegal drug use?

Drugs like Prozac, Zoloft, Paxil, Luvox, Effexor, Serzone, Anafranil, etc. are some of the biggest money makers ever for the pharmaceutical companies. Yet are you aware that the use of Prozac among children from ages 6-12 went from 41,000 in 1995 to 203,000 in 1996? The number of new prescriptions written increased almost 400% in just one year?! This is a very powerful mind-altering drug that has not been approved for use in children and yet our children are popping it like candy!

Thanks To The SPECTRUM

Staff And Supporters

6/7//01 HATONN

Greetings, my friend. It is I, Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come in the One Light of Creator God. Be at peace.

I take this opportunity to thank each and every one of you who have persisted in establishing a very respected news and information conduit in The SPECTRUM newspaper on this, the TWO-year anniversary since your first publication. This is the time of the Great Awakening on your planet and The SPECTRUM has a pivotal role to play in that educational process.

I also thank each and every one of you who have helped along the way. Without the generosity of a handful of people who recognize the value of the information offered in The SPECTRUM, the publication would have stopped long ago. It is not popular to present Truth, as there are so many ones who work very diligently to hide their past deeds so as to continue in the illusion they have created.

I assure each and every one of you that the Great Awakening is well underway, and there is being generated a great thirst for knowledge and understanding as the slumber-time has ended and the bleary-eyed masses begin to establish their bearings. You ones shall witness an ever increasing interest in your publication, since it integrates a balance between the physical and the spiritual in an attempt to show to the world that you can include God in all your undertakings—and thereby establish a perspective and product that has a true lasting quality to it.

As with any and all ones who try to help awaken humanity, you will have critics along the way. This is natural and to be expected. Learn to allow each their own path and freedom to express as they see fit. Send these critical ones Light and Love in return for their compulsion to attack. This will help you to avoid any unnecessary karmic baggage.

Most often the ones who attack do so out of jealousy, moreso than actual animosity or anger. These ones are also frightened that you may be moving ahead without them, and so they often get frustrated that they have chosen a different path. Deep down inside they wish they could turn back the clock and choose differently. Their attacks upon you only affirm their own insecurities and inner emotional state of unbalance and unrest.

Always show these ones compassion. I assure you, you will never regret flowing LOVE, LIGHT, and COMPASSION to another person, for we are ALL connected, one to another, through Creator God (the One who Created us).

Many of you readers and supporters should know that The SPECTRUM has established itself as a well respected voice among many of the alternative news publications. This is due to the level of professionalism of its small staff, along with a strong conviction to HELP as many people as possible. It is a true test of balance and focus in your physical world to walk the line that The SPECTRUM walks in spite of the constant financial pressures.

The SPECTRUM, as many of you long-term readers know, was born in controversy wherein it was strongly felt by its founding members that Truth, at the previous newspaper, was being sacrificed at the whims of a few highly emotional ones with a strong dispensation toward negative emotional reaction. I have always told you ones that if you believe you could do a job better, then by all means go do it. This is exactly what those at The SPECTRUM did, over two years ago. What you hold in your hands is the product of that vision and desire.

As you each start on the third year of publication, I tell you that the journey is far from over. With persistence and patience there will come greater and greater success.

Please know that, as long as you stay the course and keep the desire to help others above all else, you will have the support of countless energies—Angels, if you will—to assist you along your way, and you will always be successful and the publication will grow.

Eventually it would be nice to see the newspaper evolve into a magazine format, so as to enhance its acceptance into a much broader distribution network. Eventually the financial situation will allow for this, but again, please be patient and persistent.

I will keep this short. Let me again convey a sincere Thank You to ALL of you who have contributed your time, effort, and financial support to keeping this voice of Truth alive and well. Thank you each for recognizing and responding to the call.

I am Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn. I come in Light, and in Service to The ONE LIGHT—Creator Source. Salu.

You can't throw too much style into a miracle.

— Mark Twain

WHY THE END?

TWO MILLENNIA OF PROPHECY AND ITS FRUITLESS ATTEMPT TO AWAKEN HUMANITY

By
J. T. Revelator

Price: $29.95 (+S/H)

8X10 format with large, easy-to-read print. Over 350 pages.

The book that dares to ask the ultimate question. Many prophets over the last two millennia, each with their own perspective, have tried to warn humanity about the “future” catastrophic “end-time events” in the hopes of altering them. That time is now upon us.

WHY THE END? is a distillation of prophecies and messages spanning the last 2,000 years, sorted by topic for you, the awakening human. Unlike other books that dwell on past history or vague fragments of events, WHY THE END? gets to the point, chronicling the diverse range of prophecies and offering the facts and clues from scientific disciplines.

You may have pondered on some of these questions:

- Why is time “speeding up”?
- Why are animals exhibiting strange behaviors, some dying inexplicably?
- Why is the weather fluctuating and getting more severe?
- Are you feeling “on edge” as if something profound is about to happen soon?
- Is there a limit to humanity’s abuse of the planet?
- When does the “New Age” begin?

WHY THE END? intends to answer these questions, and more, in a no-frills, uncompromising manner. Some of these projections are quite harsh and could be interpreted as “doom and gloom”, depending on your perspective. But if you have an appetite for what is really on the horizon, then WHY THE END? is the book for you.

The bottom line is that the Purification of the Earth is underway, and will continue to escalate. WHY THE END? will prepare you mentally for the events, while those less informed will become incapacitated by fear as they witness the end of life as we know it. In reality, it is the cleansing of the old to make way for the new “Golden Age”. It then becomes your choice as to how you will view and interpret and experience these events.

No political event or circumstance can be evaluated without the knowledge of the Vatican's part in it. And no significant world situation exists in which the Vatican does not play an important explicit or implicit role. — Avro Manhattan, “Protestant” Knight of Malta, English Historian and Agitator, 1960, The Vatican And World Politics.

The Jesuits offer the world at large a system of theology by which every law, Divine and human, may be broken with impunity, and by which the very Bulls of Popes may be defied. It is a ghastly religion; it is a religion to be abhorred by all honest and honorable men. — M. F. Cusack, Converted Nun of Kenmare, 1896, The Black Pope.

The Jesuits laugh at us; and during their hilarity, the rattlesnake is coiled at our feet, climbing to strike us in the heart. — Edwin A. Sherman, American Shriner Freemason, Friend of Charles Chiniquy, 1883, The Engineer Corps Of Hell.

You could call Eric Jon Phelps a controversial author. We know him as a consummate researcher, a beloved friend, and a gentleman who lives his truth. Our readers will know him best as my interviewee in our now

Un-learning The Baloney And Then Learning The Truth

According to friends who teach at the high school and college/university level, textbooks are noticeably dumbing-down with each successive revision. The latest edition of a nearby high school's American History text devotes one-half of a page to George Washington, yet nearly four times as much space to Marilyn Monroe.

It wouldn't be so bad if they actually told the truth about ol' Marilyn. THEN it really might take several pages to explain, among other things, her training and function as one of the CIA's early Project Monarch "butterfly" models for intelligence gathering and blackmail purposes. Born Norma Jean Mortenson, her questionable August 4, 1962 "suicide" at age 36 surely makes one wonder just how far such technologies have progressed in the forty years since the Marilyn experiment.

But you and I both know that the textbooks have no particular inclination toward telling the truth. And the fables we spend so much time learning in school are getting to be further and further from reality—whether about history or science or whatever.

A number of years ago, I periodically had to interview freshly-minted young electrical engineering students with Bachelor's and Master's degrees for some job positions in Silicon Valley. Once I got over the shock (pun intended) that they didn't really know much of anything about fundamental electrical matters—only cookbook knowledge of formulas and computer programs that did all the thinking for them—I often asked if they knew who Nikola Tesla was. Rarely did any have even the slightest clue; and yet Edison and his lightbulb were almost hard-wired in their brains. The indoctrination of "religious" "truths" seemingly was quite effective and readily substituted for basic thinking skills.

That situation is bad enough, and it especially predisposes the "children" who graduate from the so-called premier universities to walk around thinking they're God's gift to the technical world. But that usually only lasts until they run head-on into practical reality (producing results), at which time many move into the sales department—where baloney can work to your advantage.

A worse situation occurs when some of these prima donnas go on to acquire advanced graduate school degrees. Now they're really dangerous when unleashed upon the world—as university professors teaching unsuspecting students, and/or directing so-called advanced research & development projects under layers of narrow-mindedness reinforced by government grant monies that provide sufficient financial incentives to make them think very hard before wandering from their religion's accepted (controlled) dogma.

These are the same "experts" you see being interviewed by the print and broadcast media prostitutes all the time. You know, the ones who say "don't eat salt" one week, and "eat a lot of salt" the next. What you don't see is the flimflam that goes on behind the scenes to arrive at the supposed "pure research" conclusions. Truth usually only gets in the way of more materialistic agendas.

It reminds me of a great TV commercial running right now for a fast-food chain. The very recognizable "cartoon character" boss is behind his desk, with his personnel manager standing nearby. They're watching a film clip of a possible research department hiree. On the film, this "scientist" in white labcoat is standing in front of charts and graphs making more and more absurd health statements about hamburgers and french fries that are, of course, glowing toward the fast-food chain's main products. The cartoon-character president, himself even having trouble swallowing such outright baloney, finally says to the personnel manager: "Where did you get this guy?" And the personnel manager simply replies: "From a tobacco company." There was no need to say any more.

So while we're worrying about air pollution and water pollution and such, keep in mind that we here at The SPECTRUM are very aware that we fight an uphill battle against a much more insidious problem of mind pollution. And so do you who attempt to discuss many of the subjects presented herein with closed-minded family and friends. Prejudice and fear go a long way toward keeping the sheep from straying outside the "accepted dogma" corral.

When we're putting together each issue of The SPECTRUM, I often find myself thinking back to a wonderful old "Peanuts" cartoon by the beloved Charles M. Schulz. I may not remember the details quite right, but it goes something like this: First you see Charlie Brown and Pigpen outside in the country, leaning on a waist-high wall, musing at the passersby along the roadway. Then Lucy and little-brother Linus walk by, and the two young philosophers overhear Lucy, without any hesitation, answer a good question by Linus (like: "Why are the clouds white?") with a ludicrous answer (like: "Because they are full of cotton.").

In the final frame of the cartoon, Charlie Brown and Pigpen turn and look at each other and one says to the other: "I really feel sorry for poor Linus. He's going to have to go to school TWICE. Once to un-learn the baloney Lucy taught him, and then to learn the truth!"

Thank you wonderful seekers who have chosen to persist with us along this unique and challenging journey of learning The Truth, called The SPECTRUM. And especially, bless you ones who, additionally, are helping to make the journey possible in the first place through your financial generosity. This month's paper is the latest in a long series of such miracles. Thanks to you, we're still here.

A SPARK IS STRUCK!
THIRD CITY IN UTAH
TO SAY "NO" TO THE U.N.!"

From the INTERNET, 7/4/01: [quoting]

This to inform you that today, 4th of July, 2001, the city of Laverkin, Utah, struck a spark for liberty. The city council passed a local ordinance declaring themselves a "United Nations-free Zone" effective immediately.

It is now illegal to fly the U.N. flag on city property. The city has forbidden itself from doing business with the United Nations in any way. It also forbids doing business with contractors who do. As soon as possible, they will post a sign on the city limits signs at all approaches to the city, stating: "Welcome to Laverkin, a United Nations-free Zone by city ordinance, 2001."

The City Fathers of Laverkin were careful to preserve the First Amendment rights of all citizens to fly any flag from their private property. Mayor Dan Howard and Council Member Allison Snow were particularly pleased with the community support.

Where normally five to ten people show up for a City Council meeting, there were 150 citizens present for this 225th birthday of the USA.

The Laverkin version has modifications from the version drawn up by Dr. Herb Titus and myself. I am waiting to see what changes they made.

The original version forbids the paying of any levy, tax, or fee to any United Nations agency, forbids any judgement by any International Court to be imposed upon local citizens, forbids the quartering of United Nations troops in the city limits, forbids the forcing of local citizens for involuntary servitude as soldiers under a United Nations, etc. (You can see the original at the <http://www.UNWatch.com/> Internet website.)

Mayor Jay Lee, of nearby Virgin, Utah, expressed his support, even though he was disappointed that Virgin did not beat Laverkin to the punch. In a conversation with Mayor Lee tonight, he told me that nearby Toquerville has asked for someone to present the ordinance to their next Town Council meeting.

Can city councils do something like that? Well, there's a pretty good precedent, which apparently withstood several court challenges in the sixties, when Berkeley, California, decided to declare themselves a "nuclear-free zone". It really didn't affect the city of Berkeley so much as it affected the national debate.

Supporters of this ordinance agree that the psychological effect is probably the greatest. It expresses the way people feel about the United Nations, and about their own nation's sovereignty.

As one in Virgin told me last week: "America has a lot of problems, and nobody's saying it's perfect, but I would rather they be fixed by Americans than by some foreign bureaucrat who has no clue about what makes America work."

The legal doctrine of "interposition of the lower magistrate" is well recognized. When a higher governmental authority either breaks the law, or refuses to enforce it, it is the right and the duty of lower magistrates to intervene and function as a check and a balance on the system. That is how the Magna Carta was passed in 1215. It's how the Declaration Of Independence was passed in 1776. It's how Sheriff Richard Mack sued the U.S. Government over the Brady Bill, and at great personal cost, wound up with a Supreme Court decision declaring Brady as unconstitutional.

It's how Army Spc. Michael New said: "No, I'll not violate my exclusive oath of allegiance to my country by wearing a United Nations patch and headgear, and serving under foreign (illegal) officers." (Real Americans don't wear U.N. blue! See the <http://www.MikeNew.com/> Internet website.)

And it's how the town of Laverkin, Utah, tells "elected servants of The People" that they have gone too far.

Inquiries from towns all over the United States are beginning to roll in. The question now becomes: "What will this nation do with such a spark?" Will it die for lack of tinder? Will others nurture it, and add fuel to the fire, and strike other sparks in their communities?

What can YOU do? If you know your City Councilors, or County Commissioners, and if they are already informed on the threat the United Nations poses to our national sovereignty, to our very concept of private property, to freedom, then get a copy of this ordinance and urge them to pass it.

If they aren't informed, then don't go in and badger them with this out of the blue. Start today educating them to this issue and their role in protecting the private property of our local citizens.

Pass it on.

Daniel New, Texas

Looks like a very worthwhile grassroots educational and political effort that could rapidly travel all across the United States—and maybe even enter towns in other countries. If it makes it to U.N. Headquarters in New York City, they may have a REAL problem!

SURPRISE ASSAULT ON GUN OWNERSHIP

From the Eagle Forum
<eagle@eagleforum.org> Internet website &

<DavidPangborn@webtv.net>, 6/11/01: [quoting]

By Phyllis Schlafly

The gun-control lobby is on the warpath in a most surprising venue. A group called Doctors Against Handgun Injury is calling on doctors, including psychiatrists, to ask their patients nosy questions about their gun ownership.

As far back as we can remember, doctors have vigorously opposed any interference with the confidentiality of the doctor-patient relationship. We could always count on medical associations to defend patient privacy against any invasion by government, the media, or others into personal medical records.

Psychiatrists have been outspoken in the past about the importance of patient-doctor confidentiality because trust in the doctor is particularly important. Their patients are usually in a very vulnerable and exploitable state of mind.

Somehow, this is changing under a new onslaught by the gun-control lobby. It has lined-up a coalition consisting of the American Psychiatric Association, the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics, and ten other medical organizations claiming a membership of 600,000 doctors.

The Doctors Against Handgun Injury plan to engage in what it calls "upstream intervention". That means using regular medical checkups to ask patients about firearm ownership and storage in their homes and warn them of the risks of this behavior.

But that's not all. Doctors Against Handgun Injury is also calling for changes in public policy, such as mandatory background checks on buyers at gun shows, limits on the number of guns an individual can buy, and a waiting period for all gun purchasers.

Will patients no longer see their physician as a trusted professional in whom they can confide their most private facts about mind and health? Will the physician instead be perceived as an arm of the government prying into their private lives, or as a spokesman of a special-interest advocacy group pursuing a political agenda?

Doctors should be especially leery of this project because of the 20th Century experience of medicine under Soviet Communism and Nazism. The Nuremberg War Crimes Trial showed how the German medical profession became a collaborator with the Nazi regime by collecting data on their patients that were then used against them.

Unfortunately, some gun-control lawmakers are trying to lock doctors into the ban-the-gun agenda. A bill now under consideration in the California State Legislature would require pediatricians to subject children and their parents to all sorts of nosy questions about "family, environmental, and social risk factors" including whether there are guns in the home and whether their parents spank them.

You would think that the American Medical Association (AMA) would be shouting from the housetops against this government and outside interference with private medical practice, but it looks like the AMA has joined the ban-the-guns movement. The AMA uses its publications, including its Journal (JAMA), to publish biased research with preordained conclusions, such as “easy gun availability results in crime”.

The AMA has plenty of money to pursue its political agenda, which is increasingly left-liberal, and it doesn't have to depend on the support of member doctors. Two-thirds of the AMA's annual $200 million operating budget comes from sources other than membership, which has now dwindled to only a third of U.S. physicians.

A principal source of AMA wealth is a contract (kept secret from 1983 to 1998) with the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) by which HCFA requires all doctors to buy the AMA codes and use them to bill the government and third-party insurance carriers for all medical services. Failure to use the AMA codes accurately may result in government accusations of fraud and abuse, and prosecution and imprisonment.

The taxpayer-financed Centers for Disease Control (CDC) is also climbing aboard the ban-the-guns movement. It is trying to broaden the scope of public health to include the banning and confiscation of all handguns, the restrictive licensing of owners of other firearms, and the eventual elimination of all guns from private ownership except for a small elite of wealthy collectors, hunters, and target shooters.

CDC spokesmen propagate the myth that most of the perpetrators of violence are ordinary citizens rather than criminals by trade. The fact is that the typical murderer has a prior criminal history of at least six years with four felony arrests before he commits murder, and 75 percent of all violent crimes are committed by six percent of hardened criminals and repeat offenders.

We don't have to look very far to observe the tragic loss of liberty in countries that have gone down the road of banning private gun ownership or using doctors to collect confidential data on their patients to serve a political agenda. Fortunately, Attorney General John Ashcroft has just reaffirmed the constitutional principle that the Second Amendment “protects the private ownership of firearms for lawful purposes”. — Phyllis Schlafly column 6-06-01 [End quoting]

This ought to wake us up to the games being played to erode our freedoms if nothing else has. No matter what is said or done now, you will never be able to trust your doctor again to keep any information he receives confidential. Meanwhile, note the little known fact mentioned above that tells us how rapidly the AMA is losing membership. Another sign of the times?

AMENDING U.S. CONSTITUTION TO PROHIBIT FLAG BURNING

Congressional Panel Favors
U.S. Flag Protection

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 6/21/01: [quoting]

A key congressional panel, undeterred by a series of Senate rejections in recent years, approved on Wednesday a proposed constitutional amendment that would let Congress forbid burning or otherwise desecrating the American flag.

On a 15-11 vote, the Republican-led House of Representatives Judiciary Committee sent the measure to the full House for a vote as early as next week before the chamber takes its Fourth of July recess.

“The American flag serves a unique role as the symbol of the ideals upon which America was founded,” Committee Chairman James Sensenbrenner, a Wisconsin Republican, said in pushing for flag protection.

For a constitutional amendment to become law, it must win the support of two-thirds of the House and Senate and then be ratified by 38 of the 50 states.

The amendment fell four votes short in the Senate last year after sailing through the House 305-124 in 1999.

It was the fourth time since 1989 that the Senate had rejected the amendment, which foes say would infringe on First Amendment guarantees of free speech.

The amendment was first introduced in response to a 1989 Supreme Court decision striking down a Texas law against flag desecration and a 1990 decision that ruled unconstitutional a flag protection law passed by Congress.

Gregory Nojeim, an associate director of the American Civil Liberties Union, denounced the Judiciary Committee's approval of the proposed constitutional amendment, which would give Congress the power to safeguard the flag.

“The Bill Of Rights was designed to protect the voices of the few from the intolerance of the majority,” Nojeim said. “Very little can justify its modification, least of all some imaginary epidemic of flag burning.”

The amendment was offered by Rep. Randy “Duke” Cunningham, a California Republican, and has 245 co-sponsors. [End quoting]

The crooks in high places have been trying for a long time, through a number of devious excuses, to get at our Constitution so that they can severely modify and otherwise remove some of our basic rights. It would be wise to pay very close attention to this seemingly innocent maneuver.

MOTHER WHO KILLED HER FIVE CHILDREN WAS ON COCKTAIL OF PSYCH DRUGS

From the INTERNET, By Jeff Franks, <<http://sightings.com>>, 6/21/01: [quoting]

Hi Jeff,

I have been so busy doing interviews on this Houston case that someone had to send me your post on it for me to know about it. I thought you should know that Haldol is not an antidepressant as the article on your site states. It is known as an anti-psychotic drug—something you need AFTER the antidepressants produce the psychotic break!

The drugs Andrea Yates was switched to just on Monday was Effexor and Remeron—both antidepressants. They may have been giving her the Haldol with the antidepressants, but it obviously could not overcome the strong effect of two drugs together producing psychosis.

I always wonder how many children must seal my testimony about the dangers of these drugs with their own blood before the world opens its eyes. I have found that 90% of those moms who do this are on these meds.

— Dr. Ann Blake Tracy

[Editor's note: Readers will remember Dr. Tracy as the author of the dynamite book PROZAC: Panacea Or Pandora? and our front-page feature interview in the July 2000 issue of this newspaper. She has indeed been very busy doing interviews about this tragic—yet growing common—Houston matter. She was the featured guest on Art Bell's late-night talk-radio program on Sunday night 6/24/01 and what she had to say about what happened in Houston, and how frequently it is occurring all over the country, was enough to truly shock an audience used to the unusual and unbelievable. What she shared most certainly exposed the unconscionable role that the medical profession and the pharmaceutical companies play in these cases.]

HOUSTON (Reuters)—The husband of a woman who confessed to drowning their five children said on Thursday he still loved her and blamed the tragedy on her severe case of postpartum depression.

Russell Yates, at times fighting back tears but for the most part remarkably composed, told reporters that what wife Andrea Yates did was “incomprehensible” because she was a “kind and gentle person” who loved their kids.

“I'm supportive of her because, on the one hand, I know she killed our children...but on the other I know that the woman here is not the woman who killed my children,” he said, pointing to a photograph of the family taken a few months ago.

“She had her psychotic side effects with her depression that led her to do this. She loved our kids and anybody that knew her knew that.”

“Andrea, if you see this, I love you,” said Yates, who spoke to reporters in the front yard of the one-story suburban home where the children were killed on Wednesday.

Andrea Yates, 36, was jailed without bond on a charge of capital murder, which under Texas law could bring her the death penalty. She was due to be arraigned on the charges on Friday.

She called police to their home near NASA's Johnson Space Center on Wednesday morning and told them she killed the children—four boys and a girl who ranged in age from 6 months to 7 years.

The four youngest—Luke, 2, Paul, 3, and John, 5, and 6-month-old daughter, Mary—were found in a bed, their still-wet bodies covered with a sheet. Seven-year-old Noah was in the bath tub where police believe Yates drowned the children.

NEWS RELEASE! Alternative Health Company Gains Government Licensing For Health Devices

British Columbia—SOTA Instruments, Inc. is pleased to announce that Health Canada has issued a Medical Device License for their Silver Pulser and Bio-Tuner. Licensing follows extensive use of both units by natural health practitioners and the public for research purposes. Licensing means medical doctors are now free to use SOTA's Silver Pulser and Bio-Tuner in their practice. As Class-II Medical Devices, both units are available without the need for a prescription.

"We are pleased to gain licensing approval for both our Silver Pulser and Bio-Tuner so quickly after the licensing of our Magnetic Pulser" states company president Russ Torlage.

SOTA Instruments, Inc. is a privately-owned Canadian-based company that specializes in the manufacture and design of leading-edge electronic products for the natural health market. The Silver Pulser and Bio-Tuner are licensed as devices for the following intended uses:

1. To provide symptomatic relief of acute and chronic intractable pain.
2. To increase micro-circulation.
3. May increase ATP (Adenosine Triphosphate) production. (ATP is produced in cells to provide the body with energy.)
4. May disable and/or neutralize electrically sensitive pathogens.

The use of micro-currents of electricity and TENS devices has gained increasingly favorable attention in recent years as non-invasive, non-toxic, healing modalities. SOTA's units are designed for ease of use as they are portable and priced affordably for the consumer. The Silver Pulser, Bio-Tuner and Magnetic Pulser come with complete operating instructions and are safe and simple to operate.

engineer, said his wife called him at work and told him he needed to come home.

"I said 'is anyone hurt?' and she said 'yes.' I said 'who?' and she said 'the children—all of them.' My heart just sank" he said. Yates raced home to find the police already there.

He said his wife of eight years suffered separate episodes of severe postpartum depression after having their fourth and fifth kids, and had tried to commit suicide two years ago. The depression caused her to become so withdrawn and incapacitated that his mother, Dora Yates, would come over to help care for the children.

Doctors used a cocktail of drugs to help Yates during both bouts of depression. She was currently taking medication that included Haldol, Yates said.

According to Baylor College of Medicine psychiatry professor Lauren Marangell, Haldol is usually prescribed for psychosis, a more severe illness than garden variety postpartum depression and one more likely to lead to violence.

When she was well, Andrea Yates homeschooled the children and lavished attention on them, Yates said.

For Valentine's Day, she made them heart-shaped booklets with coupons that were good for a hug or a game, he said.

The kids, he said, were normal, happy, and healthy. They loved games and sports, particularly

T-ball and basketball, which they played on a hoop in the driveway.

He said he would not support the death penalty for his wife because "she obviously wasn't herself" when she killed the children.

"She was a kind and gentle person," he said.

"I'm primarily concerned right now with just tending to my kids, making sure they get a good burial and are treated good," Yates said.

He said he wanted everyone to know that his family had been a strong one that was ripped apart only by a sinister illness that, in the end, knew no bounds.

"Just ask anybody that's seen us, seen us in the store or seen us in the restaurant...good family," he said, choking back tears.

Comment from Gayle Eversole <leaf lady@leaf lady.org> 6-22-1

This is an absolute outrage!

Haldol, a fluoride-based anti-psychotic drug is not an anti-depressant.

The fluoride in this may have further suppressed her thyroid and the hormonal imbalance caused by pregnancy.

Many women suffer from thyroid impairment as a side-effect of pregnancy. Low B complex adds to the incidence of postpartum depression.

It is a tragedy that the doctors treating Yates did not offer her nutritional support. It may have saved her and her children.

Her husband, in my opinion, has a good cause for a legal case. — Gayle Eversole [End quoting]

This appears to be yet another casualty of the pharmaceutical companies' quest for profits. But keep in mind that that they need the ready cooperation of the medical establishment to "push" their high-profit drugs on the trusting consumer. On Art Bell's show recently, Dr. Tracy said that Prozac alone amounted to a whopping 26% of that company's profits.

A doctor once put me on Valium for back pain, about 30 years ago, and I had only taken two when, during that time period, I made a phone call to a close friend, and later could not remember anything about the conversation. I'd never experienced anything like that before or since. The drugs they are using now are supposed to be far worse than Valium.

CUSTOMER SERVICE

MOVES OFFSHORE

HALFWAY AROUND THE WORLD

From The McAlvaney Intelligence Advisor, 6/21/01: [quoting]

An American calls a toll-free number to obtain customer service or to correct a problem. He is connected to Susan Sanders in the firm's telecommunications center. Susan handles the query, discussing the problem in her Midwestern accent, and leaves the customer satisfied.

Is everything well? No way!

In reality, "Susan Sanders" is 22-year-old C.R. Suman. She and thousands of other low-paid phone jockeys work out of Bangalore, India, answering calls for General Electric, British Airways, and other multinational corporations.

So how does Suman convince callers that she is as American as apple pie? Indians are coached in speaking with a neutral American accent so their claims of being based in "Chicago" go unquestioned. Suman and her co-workers have false biographies in case customers are in a chatty mood. In her case, "Susan" has a brother named Mark, and her "parents" are Bob and Ann. She even has a business degree from the University of Illinois.

"We watch a lot of Friends and Ally McBeal to learn the right phrases," Suman admits. "When people talk about their Bimmer, you have to know they mean a BMW. When they say 'No way, José' you have to know there is no José" said Nishara Anthony, another "American" operator in Bangalore.

Anthony goes by the pseudonym "Naomi Morrison". For answering phones and mastering American speech and pop culture, the Indians are paid $30 to $40 a week.

Moving these jobs overseas is bad enough, but the depth of the effort to deceive customers into believing that they are speaking with Americans is enough to make one's blood boil. The full story of India's "Chicago" call centers appeared in the March 21 New York Times.

It isn't just customer service operators who are sought by corporations. Indian computer programmers and software writers are enjoying boom times, as they toil for a fraction of U.S. wages. If work can be exported to the Third World for slave wages today, it's gone. This is with the full blessing of the U.S. government.

The big business/big government assault on American workers won't end anytime soon. If unemployment continues to rise and the flood of illegal aliens continues to cross our virtually ungarded borders, times will only get tougher for tens of millions of American citizens who earn less than $50,000 per year. [End quoting]

Remember that one of the main agenda items of those crooks in high places pushing the New World Order is the collapsing of the American economy enough so that the U.S. can be more readily merged with Canada and Mexico. The exporting of American jobs is just one step in this agenda goal. As we see ever increasing unemployment figures, and job cutbacks announced every week, the signs of America's productivity reaching an all-time low are surely there for the aware to see.

MISUSE OF SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS A NATIONAL CRISIS

From RUMOR MILL NEWS (RUMILLS), By Phyllis Schlafly, (<http://www.rumormillnews.com>), 6/20/00: [quoting]

Time to start over with Social Security numbers <<http://www.townhall.com/columnists/phyllisschlaflly/ps20010612.shtml>>

June 12, 2001

It isn't just Social Security benefits that Americans are worried about—it's the Social Security number itself. The widespread misuse of Social Security numbers is a growing political issue.

The inspector general of the Social Security Administration, John G. Huse Jr., testified on May 22 before a House Ways and Means subcommittee. His frank statement is a wake-up call to Americans who value their freedom from other people monitoring our daily activities and from criminals who steal our money, our credit, and even our identity.

Huse called misuse of Social Security numbers "a national crisis" and he pleaded that the time has come to put the Social Security number "back into its box". Since the government created the Social Security number and permitted it to assume such great power, he said, "it's the government's job to control it."

When Social Security was created in 1935, the Social Security number's sole purpose was to track the earnings of employed Americans so their wages would be properly credited, and we were promised it would never be used for anything else. Chalk that up to another promise broken by government; the Social Security number has become a de facto personal identifier.

The temptation to use Social Security numbers for other purposes was apparently irresistible. The Department of Defense uses them for armed forces personnel and draft registration, and the Internal Revenue Service requires them for income tax returns and for our bank deposits to make sure all our income is declared.

Social Security numbers are used by federal, state, and local governments for everything from food stamps to drivers' licenses to marriage licenses to water and sewer bills. Huse warns that this is "a convenience that we can no longer afford".

He thanked Congress for enactment of the Identity Theft and Assumption Deterrence Act of 1998, which enables the feds to prosecute those who misappropriate someone else's identity. It's important to punish identity theft, but Huse says it is more critical to prevent it.

The problem is the everyday and pervasive use of Social Security numbers by those other than the Social Security Administration. This includes not only government agencies, but schools, colleges, hospitals, banks, insurance companies, credit card companies, and merchants, even for such transactions as joining a health club or buying a refrigerator.

Subcommittee Chairman Clay Shaw remarked: "More and more people are being told their Social Security number is required for reasons that just don't make sense, like renting a video, making funeral arrangements, or even picking up Girl Scout cookies."

Huse called for legislation that limits the use of Social Security numbers to "purposes that benefit the holder of the Social Security number". It should not be used for the benefit of "the company that sells an appliance or the state that issues a driver's license".

Huse said that last year his office received 46,840 allegations of Social Security number misuse and another 43,456 of allegations of program fraud that includes Social Security number misuse. Identity thieves used to steal credit card numbers one by one from mailboxes and restaurant receipts. Now they steal wholesale on the Internet. A thief can buy someone's Social Security number on the Internet for $39.95, use it within minutes to get a credit card, then buy big-ticket items such as cars and jewelry.

Commercial online data brokers collect and sell personal information for legitimate purposes, and their customers include banks, insurance companies, journalists, and law enforcement agencies. The data come from public records or information provided by consumers on credit applications.

But when sold online, the brokers have no way of checking the identity or legitimacy of buyers. The majority of applications for credit are made over the phone with the Social Security number as the only identifier.

The Ways and Means Committee subcommittee heard sad cases of individuals who were victims of identity theft. One criminal got $36,000 worth of goods in a three-month period, impacting the victim's ability to refinance her home, get a line of credit at her bank, and get cellular phone service, not to speak of the countless hours spent in phone calls talking with creditors and police.

A restaurant busboy named Abraham Abdallah was able to penetrate the banking and brokerage accounts of several very wealthy and prominent Americans through the use of online providers and Internet-based databases. When arrested, he was on the verge of stealing millions of dollars.

The states are beginning to react to public resentment against governmental misuse of Social Security numbers. The Nevada state legislature recently passed a resolution calling on Congress to repeal the law that requires each state to record the Social Security number on all applications for a driver's license; and the Michigan secretary of state has filed suit to enjoin the enforcement of this law.

The best solution to the privacy crisis caused by the universal use of Social Security numbers by government and business comes from Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas. He proposes assigning every American a new Social Security number and banning the use of Social Security numbers as identifying tools. [End quoting]

You can be sure that, if such hearings are occurring wherein are being relayed such serious accounts of privacy invasion, then the actual situation is far worse and widespread. But don't overlook the underlying hidden agenda of tracking the activities of all Americans. We'll let our Secretary of State "slip" you that information below:

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER USED TO CAPTURE AMERICANS

POWELL BITES TONGUE ON FOX NEWS—TOO LATE

Colin Powell leaks real reason for SSN: MONITOR/TRACK/CAPTURE AMERICANS

[Colin Powell]—"Finding the Russian scientists may be a problem being that Russia does not have a Social Security System, as here in America, that allows us to monitor, track down, and capture an American citizen."

To: The American Public

Dear Folks: I was watching Fox News Sunday this morning, 06/17/01, being hosted in the first segment by Tony Snow. The lead-off guest was Colin Powell, the U.S. Secretary of State.

Mr. Powell gave an excellent recitation relevant to foreign affair matters. I am strongly motivated, and send this e-mail communication to you based on a statement made by Mr. Powell during his recitation. Mr. Powell, during the entire interview, was very confident, and spoke without hesitation throughout the entire interview, excluding for a one second period, after one specific statement made by him as he was talking about the Russian peoples.

When he realized the consequences of making this disclosure indirectly to the American public, he froze for a second, his eyes rolled back as he realized what he had said, and then he continued without further pause for the rest of the interview.

In my lifetime, I have never sent out to others a post relevant to a quote I heard while watching a news program. In this case, the significance of what was said in the flow of truth coming from Mr. Powell, is a statement that establishes the primary reality of intent per the politics and operative structure coming from government in this country. I had to immediately share what I had heard with others.

Mr. Powell was discussing Mr. Bush's trip to Europe, and was at a point in his recitation covering certain concerns regarding Russia, and Russia being requested to cooperate with the United States to track down lost nuclear materials and scientists who were unaccounted for after the break up of Russia, that now may be in the hands of, or in the case of the missing scientists, working for adversaries of the U.S.A.

The quote from Mr. Powell, regarding the matter of the Russian scientists that every American NEEDS to hear immediately, is as follows:

[Colin Powell]—"Finding the Russian scientists may be a problem being that Russia does not have a Social Security System, as here in America, that allows us to monitor, track down, and CAPTURE an American citizen."

EMPHASIS added to the word CAPTURE! Please pass this on to every one who you know. The significance of Mr. Powell's statement is profound, and essential to be heard by all in this country. I thank Mr. Powell for inadvertently being honest towards the underlying intent of the U.S. Government, reaffirmed by his admission. Yours Truly, Walter J. Burien, Jr. [of CAFR fame] [End quoting]

Remember that this is the time when The Truth is going to be revealed—and sometimes from the most unlikely sources!

[Editor's note: At first glance, the following item could simply have not been included with The News Desk, as being wrong information. But the more I (E.Y.) thought about this, the more important it became. Why? Because I, personally, "just happened" to see the same event and dialogue that Mr. Burien describes above. Believe me, you don't easily forget a slip like Colin Powell made! So, what do you suppose is the REAL message and purpose of the following? We can begin with calling it very clever disinformation, and go on from there to "damage control" and a "revisionist history" exercise, etc.]

POWELL QUOTE BY WALT BURIEN ON SOCIAL SECURITY SAID INACCURATE

From the INTERNET, <illusions@beyond-the-illusion.com>, 6/27/01: [quoting]

From: Tom

Dear Jeff Rense,

While I really appreciate your website and all the alternate news you get out, it is a disservice to your readers to post grossly inaccurate quotes, such as the alleged Colin Powell quote from Fox News Sunday (6/17/01) you have posted on your webpage as reported by Walter J. Burien.

The actual quote is this:

Tony Snow: "So we really don't know where these materials or even scientists are right now?"

Powell: "Well, no, we don't exactly have a social security system that captures every Russian scientist, but this is something that is of concern to us and should be of concern to Russia as well."

See the transcript for yourself <<http://www.foxnews.com/story/0,2933,27444,00.html>>

Powell's use of the words "we" and "capture" by themselves is very revealing, as it relates to the "capture" of a (14th Amendment) person's "STRAWMAN" by a GLOBAL "we" (corporate entity of one's flesh and blood self, represented by one's appellation IN ALL CAPITAL LETTERS as a "conspicuous term or clause" under the Uniform Commercial Code—see Black's Law Dictionary, 6th edition, for definitions of “strawman” and “conspicuous term or clause”).

I cannot understand why Mr. Burien would feel compelled to misrepresent what Colin Powell had to say.

Please be so kind as to correct this item.

Thank you very much. Best regards, Tom

[End quoting]

[Editor's note: Perhaps a “sanitized” version of Powell's remarks were what was later available for this person to consult on the Internet. After all, such “revisionist” history is standard practice. However, that's NOT what was originally said. Mr. Burien was accurate in his report, though if I (E.Y.) hadn't seen it myself, I might feel as the above writer does. It is so easy to fool most of the people, most of the time.]

POSTAL SERVICE HAS ITS EYE ON YOU

From the INTERNET, by John Berlau <jberlau@InsightMag.com> 6/11/01: [quoting]

Since 1997, the U.S. Postal Service has been conducting a customer-surveillance program called “Under the Eagle's Eye” and reporting innocent activity to federal law enforcement.

Remember “Know Your Customer”? Two years ago the federal government tried to require banks to profile every customer's “normal and expected transactions” and report the slightest deviation to the feds as a “suspicious activity”. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation withdrew the requirement in March 1999 after receiving 300,000 opposing comments and massive bipartisan opposition.

But while your bank teller may not have been snooping and snitching on your every financial move, your local post office has been (and is) watching you closely, Insight has learned. That is, if you have bought money orders, made wire transfers, or sought cash cards from a postal clerk.

Since 1997, in fact, the window clerk may very well have reported you to the government as a “suspicious” customer. It doesn't matter that you are not a drug dealer, terrorist, or other type of criminal, or that the transaction itself was perfectly legal. The guiding principle of the new postal program to combat money laundering, according to a U.S. Postal Service training video obtained by Insight, is: “It's better to report 10 legal transactions than to let one illegal transaction get by.”

Many privacy advocates see similarities in the post office's customer-surveillance program, called “Under the Eagle's Eye” to the “Know Your Customer” rules. In fact, in a postal-service training manual also obtained by Insight, postal clerks are admonished to “know your customers”. Both the manual and the training video give a broad definition of “suspicious” in instructing clerks when to fill out a “suspicious activity report” after a customer has made a purchase.

“The rule of thumb is, if it seems suspicious to you, then it is suspicious”, says the manual.

“As we said before, and will say again, it is better to report many legitimate transactions that seem suspicious than let one illegal one slip through.”

It is statements such as these that raise the ire of leading privacy advocates on both the left and right, most of whom didn't know about the program until asked by Insight to comment. For example, Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, who led the charge on Capitol Hill against the “Know Your Customer” rules, expressed both surprise and concern about “Under the Eagle's Eye”. He says the video's instructions to report transactions as suspicious are “the reverse of what the theory used to be: We were supposed to let guilty people go by if we were doing harm to innocent people” when the methods of trying to apprehend criminals violated the rights of ordinary citizens.

Paul says he may introduce legislation to stop “Under the Eagle's Eye”. The same sort of response came from another prominent critic of “Know Your Customer”, this time on the left, who was appalled by details of the training video. “The postal service is training its employees to invade their customers' privacy” Greg Nojeim, associate director of the American Civil Liberties Union Washington National Office, tells Insight. “This training will result in the reporting to the government of tens of thousands of innocent transactions that are none of the government's business. I had thought the postal service's eagle stood for freedom. Now I know it stands for ‘We're watching you!’”

But postal officials who run “Under the Eagle's Eye” say that flagging customers who do not follow “normal” patterns is essential if law enforcement is to catch criminals laundering money from illegal transactions. “The postal service has a responsibility to know what their legitimate customers are doing with their instruments” Al Gillum, a former postal inspector, who now is acting program manager, tells Insight. “If people are buying instruments outside of a norm that the entity itself has to establish, then that's where you start with suspicious analysis, suspicious reporting. It literally is based on knowing what our legitimate customers do, what activities they're involved in.”

Gillum's boss, Henry Gibson, the postal service's Bank Secrecy Act compliance officer, says the anti-money-laundering program started in 1997 already has helped catch some criminals. “We've received acknowledgment from our chief postal inspector that information from our system was very helpful in the actual catching of some potential bad guys” Gibson says. Gillum and Gibson are proud that the postal service received a letter of commendation from then-attorney general Janet Reno in 2000 for this program.

The database system the postal service developed with Information Builders, an information-technology consulting firm, received an award from Government Computer News in 2000 and was a finalist in the government/nonprofit category for the 2001 Computerworld Honors Program. An Information Builders press release touts the system as “a standard for Bank Secrecy Act compliance and anti-money-laundering controls”. Gibson and Gillum say the program resulted from new regulations created by the Clinton-era Treasury Department in 1997 to apply provisions of the Bank Secrecy Act to “money service businesses” that sell financial instruments such as stored-value cash cards, money orders and wire transfers, as well as banks.

Surprisingly, the postal service sells about one-third of all U.S. money orders, more than $27 billion last year. It also sells stored-value cards and some types of wire transfers. Although the regulations were not to take effect until 2002, Gillum says the postal service wanted to be “proactive” and “visionary”. Postal spokesmen emphasize strongly that programs take time to put in place and they are doing only what the law demands.

It also was the Bank Secrecy Act that opened the door for the “Know Your Customer” rules on banks, to which congressional leaders objected as a threat to privacy. Lawrence Lindsey, now head of the Bush administration's National Economic Council, frequently has pointed out that more than 100,000 reports are collected on innocent bank customers for every one conviction of money laundering. “That ratio of 99,999-to-1 is something we normally would not tolerate as a reasonable balance between privacy and the collection of guilty verdicts” Lindsey wrote in a chapter of the Competitive Enterprise Institute's book The Future Of Financial Privacy, published last year.

Critics of this snooping, both inside and outside the postal service, are howling mad that the agency's reputation for protecting the privacy of its customers is being compromised. “It sounds to me that they're going past the Treasury guidelines” says Rick Merritt, executive director of PostalWatch, a private watchdog group. The regulations, for example, do not give specific examples of suspicious activity, leaving that largely for the regulated companies to determine.

But the postal-service training video points to lots of “red flags” such as a customer counting money in the line. It warns that even customers whom clerks know often should be considered suspect if they frequently purchase money orders. The video, which Gibson says cost $90,000 to make, uses entertaining special effects to illustrate its points.

Employing the angel-and-devil technique often used in cartoons, the video presents two tiny characters in the imagination of a harried clerk. Regina Goodclerk, the angel, constantly urges the clerk to file suspicious-activity reports on customers. “Better safe than sorry,” she says. Sam Slick, the devil, wants to give customers the benefit of the doubt. Some of the examples given are red flags such as a sleazy-looking customer offering the postal clerk a bribe.

But the video also encourages reports to be filed on what appear to be perfectly legal money-order purchases. A Black male teacher and Little League coach whom the female clerk, also Black, has known for years walks into the post office wearing a crisp, pinstriped suit and purchases $2,800 in money orders, just under the $3,000 daily minimum for which the postal service requires customers to fill out a form. He frequently has been buying money orders during the last few days. "Gee, I know he seems like an okay guy," Regina Goodclerk tells the employee. "But buying so many money orders all of a sudden and just under the reporting limit, I'd rather be sure. He's a good guy, but—this is just too suspicious to let go by."

Gillum says this is part of the message that postal clerks can't be too careful because anyone could be a potential money launderer. "A Little League coach could be a deacon in the church, could be the most upstanding citizen in the community, but where is that person getting $2,800 every day?" Gillum asks. "Why would a baseball coach, a schoolteacher in town, buy [that many money orders]? Our customers don't have that kind of money. If he's a schoolteacher, if he's got a job on the side, he's going to have a bank account and going to write checks on it, so why does he want to buy money orders? That's the point."

Despite the fact that the Little League coach in the video was Black, Gillum insists that the postal service tells its employees not to target by race or appearance.

One thing that should set off alarms, the postal service says, is a customer objecting to filling out an 8105-A form that requests their date of birth, occupation, and driver's license or other government-issued ID for a purchase of money orders of $3,000 or more. If they cancel the purchase or request a smaller amount, the clerk automatically should fill out Form 8105-B, the "suspicious-activity" report.

"Whatever the reason, any customer who switches from a transaction that requires an 8105-A form to one that doesn't should earn himself or herself the honor of being described on a B form" the training manual says.

But the "suspicious" customers might just be concerned about privacy, says Solveig Singleton, a senior analyst at the Competitive Enterprise Institute. And a professional criminal likely would know that $3,000 was the reporting requirement before he walked into the post office. "I think there's a lot of reasons that people might not want to fill out such forms; they may simply think it's none of the post office's business" Singleton tells Insight.

"The presumption seems to be that, from the standpoint of the post office and the Bank Secrecy regulators, every citizen is a suspect." Both Singleton and Nojeim say "Under the Eagle's Eye" unfairly targets the poor, minorities, and immigrants—people outside of the traditional banking system.

"A large proportion of the reports will be immigrants sending money back home" Nojeim says. Singleton adds: "It lends itself to discrimination against people who are sort of marginally part of the ordinary banking system or who may not trust things like checks and credit cards."

There's also the question of what happens with the information once it's collected. Gillum says that innocent customers should feel secure because the information reported about "suspicious" customers is not automatically sent to the Treasury Department's Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) to be shared with law-enforcement agencies worldwide. Although he says FinCEN wants the postal service to send all reports along to it, the postal authorities only will send the clerks' reports if they fit "known parameters" for suspicious activity.

"We are very sensitive to the private citizenry and their rights" Gillum insists. "For what it's worth, we have every comfort level that, if we make a report, there are all kinds of reasons to believe that there is something going on there beyond just a legitimate purchase of money orders." But Gillum would not discuss any of the "parameters" the postal service uses to test for suspicious activity, saying that's a secret held among U.S. law-enforcement agencies.

And if a clerk's report isn't sent to the Treasury Department, it still lingers for some time in the postal service database. Gillum says that, by law, the postal service will not be able to destroy suspicious-activity reports for five years. Gillum says the postal service is very strict that the reports only can be seen by law-enforcement officials and not used for other purposes, such as marketing.

A spokeswoman for the consulting company Information Builders stated in an e-mail to Insight: "Information Builders personnel do not have access to this system."

Observers say problems with "Under the Eagle's Eye" underscore the contradiction that, despite the fact that the postal service advertises like a private business and largely is self-supporting, it still is a government agency with law-enforcement functions.

Gibson says his agency must set an example for private businesses on tracking money orders. "Being a government agency, we feel it's our responsibility that we should set the tone" he said. The Treasury Department "basically challenged us in the mid-nineties to step-up to the plate as a government entity" Gillum adds. In fact, Gillum thinks Treasury may mandate that the private sector follow some aspects of the postal service's program. He adds, however, that the postal service is not arguing for this to be imposed on its competitors. In the meantime, the private sector is getting ready to comply with the Treasury regulations before they go into effect next January.

But if 7-Eleven Inc., which through its franchises and company-owned stores is one of the largest sellers of money orders, is any guide, private vendors of money orders probably will not issue nearly as many suspicious-activity reports as the postal service. "Our philosophy is to follow what the regulations require, and if they don't require us to fill out an SAR [suspicious activity report], then we wouldn't necessarily do it" 7-Eleven spokeswoman Margaret Chabris tells Insight.

Asked specifically about customers who cancel or change a transaction when asked to fill out a form, Chabris said: "We are not required to fill out an SAR if that happens."

So why does the U.S. Postal Service? That's one of the major issues raised by critics such as PostalWatch's Merritt.

He says that lawmakers and the new postmaster general, Jack Potter, need to examine any undermining of customer trust by programs such as "Under the Eagle's Eye" before the postal service is allowed to go into new businesses such as providing e-mail addresses. "Let's hope that this is not a trend for the postal service, because I don't think the American people are quite ready to be fully under the eagle's eye" he says.

INTERSECTION CAMERAS DRAW ANGER AND HUGE REVENUES

By Joseph A. D'Agostino, 6/18/01, Human Events <http://www.worldnetdaily.com/news/article.asp?ARTICLE_ID=23264> [quoting]

House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, is crusading against the red-light cameras that have sprouted up at intersections around the country, saying that they violate constitutional principles and that localities have deliberately shortened yellow-light intervals in order to raise revenue.

Traffic will be safer, said Armey, when local governments increase yellow intervals and stop trying to trap motorists in petty red-light violations.

"We are responsible for protecting people's constitutional rights" Armey told Human Events. "We believe that this is an intrusion against people's constitutional rights."

"We have the state legislature in New Jersey that agrees with us" said Armey, "and we have the Supreme Court in Alaska that agrees with us. We ought to hold some hearings on this."

No committee has yet committed to holding hearings on Armey's proposal.

"There's been an evolution of the federal standards and recommendations that has moved us away from the time-honored and effective business of using the length of the yellow light to ensure safety at intersections" Armey said. "We believe that they have consciously done just the opposite of good yellow-light policy to increase the stream of revenue."

"They have not demonstrated any improvement in public well-being because of these cameras" Armey added.

The House Republican leader said he does not want to use federal regulations to micromanage states and localities in their use of cameras for issuing traffic citations. "I am against that on principle" he said.

Instead, Armeý opposes traffic cameras of any kind, period, as a matter of constitutional principle.

"I have taken the same position with regard to speeding cameras" he said. "The problem with electronic surveillance is that you are denied your right to face your accuser and you are assumed to be guilty until you have proved yourself to be innocent. In fact, you are assumed to be there. A police officer has immediate identification of who's driving the car."

Armeý warned that the United States could end up like England.

"I would say that I could leave my residence in London, travel all around town and make three or four stops, and there would be a record of everywhere I went. The surveillance there is that thorough" he said.

Said Armeý spokesman Richard Diamond: "The British government has proposed increasing the number of tickets issued by cameras from 550,000 to 10 million a year." At present, no American municipality is planning to use traffic cameras for anything other than red-light running and speeding.

A report prepared by Armeý's office says, "Today's formula for calculating yellow times yields yellow times that can in some cases be about 30 percent shorter than the older formula." Armeý's office collected traffic studies from around the country and found that when the yellow-light time increased, red-light running decreased. In Mesa, Arizona, for example, the number of vehicles entering an intersection on red dropped by 73 percent; in Georgia, by 75 percent; at sites in Virginia and Maryland, 77 percent or more, including two sites where researchers reported that the red-light running problem was "virtually eliminated".

But lengthening yellow times does not raise revenue.

Fifty cities in 10 states now use red-light cameras. In 18 months, San Diego's 19 cameras have raked in $30 million. West Hollywood, California, earns $4.9 million annually from its cameras. New York City's 15 cameras made $5.4 million in their first year.

San Diego's red-light camera ticketing program suffered a setback this month after the city discovered a glitch that meant some motorists may have been ticketed unjustly. After a lawsuit was filed in February, discovery turned up a "Potential Intersection Worksheet" prepared for the city when it was deciding where to install red-light cameras. Five of the potential sites were rejected because "long yellow, vio [violator] volume not there". Other noted reasons for rejections included "long yellow phase" and "timing clears out traffic".

A copy of an agreement between Mesa and Lockheed Martin, the company with which the city contracted to provide its red-light cameras, prohibited the city from lengthening yellow times at intersections with Lockheed cameras. The contract gave Lockheed a cut of every ticket issued by its cameras.

Last year, a red-light camera in Washington, D.C., was turned off after the local police department admitted that the intersection where it was installed was confusing, but not until after over $1 million was raised, most of which will not be refunded.

Shortening of yellow times has not happened around the country through coincidence, Armeý's report says. The Institute of Transportation Engineers (ITE) produces a traffic management handbook that is widely used by local governments. The 1985 handbook stated: "When the percent of vehicles that are last through the intersection which enter on red exceeds that which is locally acceptable (many agencies use a value of 1 to 3 percent), the yellow interval should be lengthened until the percentage conforms to local standards." By 1994, the "1 to 3 percent" recommendation was edited out, and a suggestion that yellow-light intervals might actually be "shortened" was inserted. Now the ITE handbook says: "When the percentage of vehicles that enter on a red indication exceeds that which is locally acceptable, the yellow change interval may be lengthened (or shortened) until the percentage conforms to local standards, or enforcement can be used instead."

In 1976, ITE found that the average intersection where traffic moved at approximately 35 mph required 4.64 seconds of time for traffic to clear the intersection once the signal changed from green to yellow. The 1999 ITE formula recommends 3.8 seconds of yellow-light time.

Diamond said that studies purporting to show that red-light cameras reduce accidents are flawed.

"They don't even track changes in yellow-light times to see if that is what causes reductions in accidents" he said.

The most comprehensive study produced on the effect of red-light cameras was done by the Australian Road Research Board, which concluded, in 1995, after ten years of monitoring intersections: "This study suggests that the installation of the RLC [red-light camera] at these sites did not provide any reduction in accidents, rather, there have been increases in rear-end and adjacent approaches accidents." [End quoting]

It's a particularly dangerous combination to mix the greed of politicians at the local municipality level with the New World Order gang's covert agenda item of ever more complete surveillance of the public. So long as people act like sheep instead of raising their voices in protest, this kind of activity will continue to increase until the noose is snug around all of our necks.

Moreover, keep in mind that Lockheed Martin is a major defense industry contractor, which means they develop and perfect many kinds of covert CIA/NSA and other spy industry equipment. So the next question is: When is a camera not just a camera?

Here's one more revealing item on this major deception:

INTERSECTION CAMERAS JUST SPEED TRAPS

Excerpted from THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 6/26/01: [quoting]

More than 50 cities across the country now use cameras at intersections to catch red-light runners. Even more communities are laying the groundwork to install these devices on their streets.

It makes you wonder why the devices seem to be so attractive. If you listen to local politicians, you'll hear of the significant safety benefit provided to the community, and you'll hear indignation at any suggestion that profit is the true motive. Newly uncovered documents from re-light camera programs in California and Arizona suggest otherwise.

The camera lobby has been hiding the truth about how intersections are being left deliberately mistimed, a dangerous condition, for the sake of profit.

And the public is being deceived.

Two attorneys representing 290 motorists in San Diego have taken on this system—and won.

Arthur F. Tait and Coleen Cusak forced the city to pull the plug on all 19 red-light cameras after they uncovered evidence that the camera hardware was being manipulated to entrap motorists.

Their lawsuit forced the private company that operates the cameras to release more than 5,000 pages of confidential documents about the program. These papers describe what the real motivating factor behind these cameras has been.

Safety was never the primary consideration. In fact, none of the devices was placed at any of San Diego's 10 most dangerous intersections. Instead, the documents tell us how the camera operators consciously sought out mistimed intersections as locations for new red-light cameras.

Yellow-signal time at intersections turns out to be directly related to red-light running. Simply put, when the yellow light is short, more people enter on red. Inadequate yellow time causes a condition where individuals approaching an intersection are unable either to come to a safe stop or proceed safely before the light turns red.

Though dangerous, this condition also turns out to be very profitable. Each time someone ends up in an intersection on red in San Diego, the city collects $271, and $70 of that fine is paid as bounty to the city's private contractor.

Combine hefty fines with mistimed signals, and you've found the formula for big money. A single camera brought the city $6.8 million in just 18 months.

WE HAVE MET THE ENEMY AND HE IS US!

Tim McVeigh And America's Soul

Timothy McVeigh is treated like an aberration—something outside us. Timothy McVeigh is only one symptom of a national disease we all have. That disease is that we have collectively forgotten that we are "sacred", that life is "sacred".

How ironic that, at a time when our government wants to spend more and more money on so-called "defense" and a star-wars system that will suck our precious resources away from protecting our environment and educating our children, we are about to execute a man who has inflicted more terror on us than anyone else—and he is an American, trained by our own military machine. We do not need to pour our money and consciousness into fearing distant enemies abroad, because the greatest enemy is right here—often within our own minds and hearts.

The greatest damage done to American society again and again is "self inflicted". 70% of illness is caused by unmanaged stress—or in other words, our body and mind attacking itself with worry and FEAR, as average people struggle to survive in an economy of exploding wealth. The 6 leading causes of death are stress related. Our rivers are poisoned by the drugs we pump in our own bodies to hide from our stress or treat the illness that stress causes, and the toxins we pump into our foods to raise crop yields so we can gorge on unhealthy amounts of food, and our children are poisoned with the violence, and cruel comedy that uses hurt and put-downs for laughs, pumped into their minds day after day through our un-imaginative entertainment media, that often advertises foods and drinks that further destroy their health.

The great chief Seattle (Seathl) of the Suwamish Indian Tribe wrote a letter to the United States President in 1854, saying that they would give up their precious land, because if they didn't the U.S. soldiers would come with guns and take it anyway. But, Chief Seathl cautioned: "Love the land as we have loved it. Care for it as we've cared for it. Hold in your mind the memory of the land as it was when you take it.... Continue to contaminate your bed, and you will one night suffocate in your own waste."

Our culture is poisoned from our lack of nurturing ourselves, our environment, or our children, while we pour our precious resources into building weapons to protect our land from foreign invasion, while our children are undereducated and suffer a lack of hope and vision as the U.S. imprisons more of its young than any nation on Earth except one (we spend $500 billion annually on crime). And now our government seeks to destroy more of our precious natural resources so that we can suck more of the Earth's bounty from her heart, at a time when the endless consumption of that bounty is strangling Earth's ability to create oxygen and cool itself.

Our lives are out of balance, but rather than facing this, we aim our fear outward, to external enemies in other countries, or we hang all of our dysfunction on the shoulders of a Tim McVeigh, thereby avoiding the discomfort of looking in our own hearts. Our enemy is in our hearts, it is forgetting that we and our children are sacred. Timothy McVeigh felt that the pre-school children in the building he destroyed were expendable collateral damage. BUT WE are not so different when, as a society, we believe that the poison we eat and drink, the children who lose hope, and the prisons (monster factories) we fill and overfill, and the precious Earth we consume (the U.S. consumes 25% of the Earth's resources with only 5% of the Earth's population)—is acceptable collateral damage so that we can continue to pour obscene billions into more and more weapons of mass destruction.

Our lives are out of balance, as we over-eat so much meat that our bodies bloat and our hearts thicken with the strain. Our enormous appetites require an obscene mistreatment of animals in what's called "factory farming". Chickens raised their entire miserable lives without ever feeling the warmth of sunlight or ever having room to stretch their wings, being tortured with lighting systems and arsenic to stimulate them to lay more eggs, because they lay more eggs when continually stressed. Chimpanzees, because they are most like us in the animal kingdom, are infected and tortured in horrid living conditions, crying their lives away in sadness and depression. All of our technology offers so much hope for creating a good and loving world—but we squander it.

We would do well to remember what Chief Seathl told our president in 1854: "Every part of this Earth is sacred to my people. Every shining pine needle, every sandy shore, every mist in the dark woods, every clearing, and every humming insect is holy in the memory and experience of my people."

Our culture has made fun of Indian culture in its movies and books and television. We have completely dishonored perhaps one of the most civilized cultures in the history of the world. It is time to listen, to reawaken, to find balance and harmony within our own lives and own minds. The enemy is not "out there", it is within each of us, and we can make peace right now by becoming sacred—reawakening to the sacredness of life.

Let Tim McVeigh's death, and the sad and unnecessary death of the Oklahoma bombing victims have more meaning than some visceral shallow satisfaction in seeing another casualty like McVeigh bite the dust. Let's let this sad national journey lead us to some real meaning in our lives. Let's see through this sadness to remember that we are sacred. Our country, our land, our children, all sacred. And from this realization a healing can spread across our land, and through the world. America can inspire the world toward more than endless armament. We have the power to shine a precious light that can lift the world to new meaning "if we can find that new meaning in ourselves".

These are words well worth pondering each time we look elsewhere to point the blame for what ails our society. The crooks in high places and their prostitutes who carry out much of the grunt work are powerless against the sheer numbers of we-the-people should we desire to focus our combined attention upon righting the wrongs. The next item is a good example of what can be done:

93% OF CANADIANS DEMAND THAT GENETICALLY ENGINEERED FOODS HAVE LABELS

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 6/8/01: [quoting]

Press Release from the Council of Canadians <<http://www.purefood.org>>

OTTAWA (CNW)—More than 80 groups have joined the push to get the federal government to listen to Canadians and implement mandatory labeling of genetically engineered (GE) foods. The unprecedented support comes as private member's bill C-287 enters second reading in the House.

If passed, Liberal MP Charles Caccia's bill would make food companies label their GE food. But there's concern the bill will die unless enough MPs vote in the fall to send the bill to committee and to a final vote in the House.

To build support for the bill, a letter is being circulated across Canada to encourage support for C-287. To date, more than 80 groups have signed and many of the groups are promising a summer of mobilization as MPs return to their ridings.

"All MPs, and Minister Rock in particular, should support this bill to make sure a much needed democratic debate takes place in Parliament" says Nadège Adam, Health Protection Campaigner for the Council of Canadians. "Few other initiatives have had a 93 percent public support rate for six years in a row."

"Canada's jacking up MPs' salaries because they say we're falling behind world standards" said Eric Darier of Greenpeace. "But 35 countries are adopting mandatory labeling, protecting more than a billion people. We're falling behind the world—way behind—and Canadians are demanding we keep up."

"Not only do Canadians want mandatory labeling, the world expects it" said Brewster Kneen of BC Biotechnology Circle. "From beer to canola and from Europe to Japan, our customers want GE foods labeled. How many customers do we have to lose before the government gets it?"

Caccia's bill is timely since the Royal Society of Canada's report, which contains 53 recommendations calling for the overhaul of the GE regulatory process, continues to be ignored by government officials since its release last February.

The Globe And Mail's Edward Greenspon has called this a "private member's bill worth supporting".

There remain many unanswered health and safety questions concerning genetically engineered or modified food products. Thus the minimum level of protection for the public is to identify these products and thereby give consumers a choice. Of course the industry is fighting this diligently because they already know how most people feel about genetically tampered foods. Remember that Monsanto is the world leader in this technology and the cafeteria at their own headquarters complex refused to use those products! Wonder what the scientists and other people who work there know that we don't?!

MICROSOFT TO ME: WE'RE TURNING OFF YOUR OFFICE (PROGRAM)

From the INTERNET, ZDNET homepage <zdnet.com>, 6/26/01: [quoting]

David Coursey, Executive Editor, AnchorDesk PC EXPO, NEW YORK—A funny thing happened on the way to PC Expo: Microsoft killed my copy of Office. Or at least that's what the error message said, threatening me with something called "Reduced Functionality Mode" if I didn't immediately insert my original Office disc and have my software reactivated.

"If you don't perform the reactivation steps, Microsoft Office will go into Reduced Functionality Mode. In that mode you will not be able to save modifications to documents, or create a new document, and additional functionality may be reduced" said the "help" screen attached to the error message. (The error itself could not be copied and pasted so I didn't save the exact language; I must say I was a little stunned.)

SO, HERE I AM, sitting in a jet at 34,000 feet someplace above God-only-knows-where, using my computer and minding my own business, when Microsoft threatens to essentially shut down my copy of Office. And at the very start of a week-long business trip, too.

Why did they do that? Here's what the help screen said: "Due to a significant change in your computer configuration from when Microsoft Office was installed and activated, some important information about your computer needs to be restored, and the product needs to be reactivated [reconnected to Microsoft so it can check your computer by their lackeys] to continue to function properly."

Hmm, the threatening message popped up while I was writing a column in one window and using Enfish OneSpace in another. I wonder if that had anything to do with it? But I'd installed Enfish weeks ago; funny the message should appear now. Or maybe it was the copy of Documents-To-Go I installed a few hours ago so I could load Word documents onto a Palm device.

FRANKLY, I HAVE NO IDEA WHAT I DID, if anything, to change the configuration of my computer. Nor should it be Microsoft's business if I did. As it stands, I am on an airplane, my original Office disk is 6 miles below and 2,200 miles behind me, and Microsoft has just told me that Office will die if I don't immediately reauthorize my copy.

What a way to start a business trip! As soon as I land, I will drop an e-mail to people I know in the Office group at Microsoft in Redmond and see what they have to say about this. I am sure they have some, to them, logical reason why this happened. Something I did that changed the configuration of my computer.

And it's not like they made good on the threat. I've rebooted and Office still seems to be working. But that's not the point. What I am wondering is this: Why would such a screen ever appear on the screen of someone using a legal copy of Microsoft Office?

We'll see what Microsoft has to say.

Have you ever seen this error message? I'd like to know. Talk back to me, below, or send me a note at <david@coursey.com>. [End quoting]

Microsoft is pushing us to the very limits to see how much control they can have over what we do with what have on our computers. They will back off if we quit going along with everything they are doing.

The decision just recently came out (on June 28, 2001) that the government will NOT break up Microsoft so that means it's up to us to put the pressure on them to make them more compatible with our ideas of good corporate behavior. Never forget how a lack of our money talks louder than any words to large corporations about how they should treat us.

HOMEOPATHIC METALS MAY CURE ALL MANNER OF AILMENTS

From the INTERNET, By Karen Norton <<http://sightings.com>>, 6/19/01: [quoting]

Before it emerged that Britain's Queen Elizabeth fortifies herself before speeches with a cup of arsenic and onions in water to prevent sneezing, many people may have been unaware of the heavy metal's medicinal benefits.

But arsenic, best known as a handy poison in tales of murder and sleuthing, is also one of the more commonly used remedies in homeopathy.

Homeopathy, seen either as a complement or alternative to orthodox medicine, uses metals from across the Periodic Table and a whole range of other substances from the plant and animal kingdoms. Its basic principle is that "like cures like"—if a substance produces certain symptoms in a healthy individual it can treat those same symptoms.

Homeopathic remedies, normally administered in the form of pills, are designed to kick-start the body's immune and defense systems and improve a patient's overall health.

The Roots Of Homeopathy

German scientist Samuel Hahnemann, the founder of modern homeopathy some 200 years ago, experimented with metals with a view to rendering safe those used in conventional medicine. At that time mercury was used to treat syphilis but, in its crude form, unfortunately killed the patient. Hahnemann discovered that the more diluted the amount of mercury administered the more effective it became in treating the disease.

As homeopathy developed, it grew to include arsenicum album (white arsenic) among some 30 polycrests—key remedies. Patients needing this remedy can have symptoms resembling those of arsenic poisoning. They might be anxious that someone is trying to poison them, or take money from them. They may be restless or suffer from nausea and vomiting.

“There is a correlation between what a substance produces in its crude state and what it cures in its homeopathic state” said Robert Lawrence, Technical and Training Manager at UK-based Helios Pharmacy.

Homeopaths treat the whole patient—on the mental, physical and emotional level. Orthodox medicine (allopathy) tends to base prescriptions on one or two specific symptoms and use drugs to block or prevent something from happening in the body rather than curing it.

“Homoeopathic amounts are too small to interfere with biochemical pathways” said Dr. Steven Kayne, Consultant Pharmacist at the Glasgow Homeopathic Hospital and Pharmaceutical Dean of the Faculty of Homeopathy.

Metals Not Toxic

Meanwhile, the overuse and inappropriate prescription of conventional medicine has meant that stronger and more toxic drugs are being used to combat super-bugs and viruses, which have become resistant to less powerful drugs.

“There is no toxicity (in homeopathic remedies) because there is usually very little and sometimes none of the original substance” Lawrence said.

In homeopathy the metal is ground down into a very fine particle state before being taken into a liquid carrier and diluted further still. Kayne noted molecules of the medicine can be found in low potencies below 12c (where one drop is diluted in 100 drops 12 times in a row), but none can be detected in those above 12c due to greater dilution.

With higher potencies Kayne said it could be assumed that there was no toxicity. With lower potencies he said: “Clinical evidence suggests there is not a problem, but theoretically there might be.”

But he pointed out that arsenicum was frequently prescribed in low potency 6c without any adverse side-effects other than the normal aggravations, which indicated a remedy was working. Indeed, the problem for many critics is that homeopathic medicines can be so diluted that there is nothing identifiable in the final dose except water.

But Lawrence said they still contained a certain essence or dynamic of the substance. “Logically it doesn’t make sense, but even modern nuclear physics doesn’t make sense” he contested. “It depends on the mental modeling you use.”

Other Metal Remedies

Metals are used quite widely in homeopathy, usually in the form of salts, but there is no common theme among them. With some metals, as with other substances, their so-called characteristics can manifest themselves in a patient, according to some homeopaths.

The “remedy picture” for aurum (gold), for example, can be for those prone to severe depression. The type may be quite acquisitive and powerful and need to be best at whatever they do (going for gold), but also have a low opinion of themselves.

Such patients might be trading in the stock market, Lawrence said, and the type to jump out of the window were share prices to plummet sharply. Aside from this, aurum can also be used for a whole range of symptoms, including mental exhaustion, digestive problems, and heart and vascular disorders.

But Lawrence added that it was by no means always the case that prescribing was so straightforward. “It would be nice to have a convenient schemata but it doesn’t always work that way.” Meanwhile, Kayne warned against the dangers of self-treatment and stressed that prescribing of remedies was too specialized and could only be done on an individual basis.

Working With Orthodox Medicine

Kayne said homeopathy and orthodox medicine can work in tandem and that this approach was adopted by most health professionals. The Homeopathic Hospital of Glasgow is run by the UK’s National Health Service and there are three such others in the country. Homeopathy has been part of the NHS since 1948.

Homeopathy’s increased popularity in recent years is in part due to a widespread and growing interest in all complementary or alternative therapies. Kayne said this had been partly fueled in the UK by the Patients’ Charter, whereby individuals have the right to say how they want to be treated, and also through the Internet. He said hits on health-care websites were second only to those for pornographic sites. [End quoting]

You can be sure that the old advice “If you can’t beat ’em, join ’em” is going to be the strategy employed as the church of conventional medicine loses more and more of their congregation to alternative healing modalities. We will all have to be vigilant about the attempts for takeover and corruption of alternative medical routes by the same crooks in high places who infest/infect conventional medicine. Meanwhile, there is much to learn about what REALLY aids in healing, such as homeopathy, which, as was said very well above, doesn’t make any more conventional sense than does a lot of modern physics! That only means we have a lot yet to learn about Truth.

OXYGEN USE CUTS POST-OP INFECTIONS BY HALF

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 6/27/01: [quoting]

By Nigel Hawkes, Health Editor, The Times,

London <<http://www.thetimes.co.uk>>

The risks of infections after operations could be halved by giving patients extra oxygen, research has shown.

Almost one in five patients having operations develops an infection at the site of the surgery—170,000 a year in the UK. Each of these patients needs an average of an extra seven to 12 days in hospital, at a cost to the NHS of up to £1,700. Patients who get infections are also more than seven times as likely to die.

The authors of the research, from Austria and Germany, who reported the results in the New England Journal Of Medicine, say that giving oxygen at higher rates during and for two hours after the operation reduced the frequency of infections by half.

The extra cost was about 37p a day and administering the oxygen carried no risk. [End quoting]

Oxygen chambers have been known for a long, long time to be very advantageous for healing, but of course the medical profession very seldom would mention them or use them. After all, there’s quite a bit of money to be made from those post-operative infections. Now they act like they stumbled onto a gold mine. Sounds like throwing us a bone.

Meanwhile the medical business mafia harasses or throws in prison or exterminates those who attempt to bring us true, cheap healing technologies. No big business wants to be undercut by cheap competition. And healing (the welfare of the patient) is becoming more and more purely incidental to that big business. Is it any wonder so many are turning to alternative medicine?!

THE FIRMAMENT, LEMURIA AND ATLANTIS

(Excerpts from the book: You Are Becoming A Galactic Human, by Virginia Essene and Sheldon Nidle. Information channeled from Washta, Teletron, and Mikah, by Sheldon Nidle.)

The term Firmament has been mentioned at different times throughout history, but a mysterious cloud surrounds the true nature of this concept. Find below one fascinating account of what the Firmament was, why it was important, and how it played an important role in our distant past.

Introduction

The Firmament was a layer of frozen water (ice) above the Earth’s surface. It was a huge crystalline shield in two sections, one situated at 15,000 to 18,000 feet, and the other at 35,000 to 38,000 feet above the Earth’s surface. It was like a clear lens. At certain times of the day, when light was reflected, it served as a mirror of the world below. Crystal temples all over the Earth held up the Firmament.

Who Made The Firmament?

The Firmament was originally constructed by the initial etheric civilization that came to Earth approximately 35 million years ago. This was done to protect planet Earth from the radiation of the Sun and other dangerous cosmic radiations that regularly come through the Solar System.

The Firmament was maintained, broken, and re-established many times as different civilizations and invasions came to Earth. Various floods have occurred throughout the geological history of this planet ever since the time of that initial etheric civilization.

The Absence Of Weather

When the Firmament existed it was under the direction of the Spiritual Hierarchy—and those who constructed the crystal temples in accordance with the Spiritual Hierarchy's wishes—so it could perform several functions for the atmosphere of the planet. First, it lowered the radiation and heat levels so that the climate of Earth, from North Pole to South Pole, was within five degrees of one another! Thus, the tropics were around the upper 70s (degrees Fahrenheit) and the polar regions were around the lower 70s. Large ice sheets did not exist across the north and south polar regions as they do today.

The second major difference in the atmosphere was that the winds and clouds did not exist. There were no clouds and every day was a sunny day! What further added to this fact was that the winds were minimal and were kept to a maximum of 5-7 miles per hour. Also, because there were no clouds, there were no rainstorms; so rain is something that is unique to your present era.

A Storehouse Of Prana

The complete Firmament atmosphere invigorated the mind and body since the radiation energy stored prana in the Firmament. Prana then drifted across the Firmament and maintained it almost as if it were a giant refrigerator. You might call it a refrigerator of prana or energy!

The body of any creature existing on your planet was invigorated by this energy. Additionally, the Firmament also effectively kept out heat and other radiation that caused deterioration of the body. Another side effect of the Firmament was that the stars were magnified so that the sky would be seen as through a huge telescope. Thus, the Firmament prevented a ravaged atmosphere in which there are great differences in climate, storms, and extremes of weather. After the Firmament's collapse, radiation eventually shrunk the physical size of humans and gradually limited the length of their life span. In fact, some biblical stories include long-lived beings. This is a result of the protection of the Firmament. Your present atmosphere does not protect life as the Firmament once did (and will do so again).

Conflict

As the civilizations of Lemuria and Atlantis matured, conflict developed between the two. As a last resort of the struggle for control, they decided to attack the crystal temples which held the Firmament in place. Initially, the strategy was to destroy the Firmament above the enemy. However, they underestimated the effect of the destabilization of the Firmament.

Attacks were made simultaneously on the crystal temples, and so disrupted the structure of the Firmament in the heavens. This caused the end of the Firmament, and the falling of millions of gallons of water from the sky. This is historically and biblically known as the Great Flood.

What was left behind was not only a period of roughly 40 days of rain, but a whole new world. The old histories of humanity had been virtually flooded away and all that was left were the oral stories and legends. [End quoting]

What do you think? Might this be true? Biblical accounts of a Firmament and Great Flood mesh well with the account above. Whatever caused such a water-based shielding Firmament to disintegrate would certainly cause the kinds of Earth-changing events described here and in the biblical accounts of the Great Flood. One of these days the long-hidden records of this planet will again be publicly available, no longer hidden by the elite controllers of this planet for them exclusively to see and utilize. A lot of missing pieces to the puzzle will fall into place at that time—and much history will be radically rewritten in Truth.

THE SAME WORDS, BUT VERY DIFFERENT MEANINGS

From the INTERNET, <<http://sightings.com>>, 6/19/01: [quoting]

An English professor wrote the words: "Woman without her man is nothing" on the blackboard and directed the students to punctuate it correctly.

The men wrote: "Woman, without her man, is nothing."

The women wrote: "Woman! Without her, man is nothing." [End quoting]

This is an excellent example of how easy it is for people to "adjust" history by different interpretations of ancient documents, the Bible, any writings, or even how easy it is to misunderstand a statement you hear.

TEAMWORK GONE WRONG

From POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, July 2001: [quoting]

It's a case of two rights making a particularly nasty wrong.

Researchers have found that two pesticides may act in concert to trigger Parkinson's disease. When scientists at the University of Rochester Medical Center injected mice twice weekly with the herbicide paraquat and the fungicide maneb, they created a deadly brew. Over a six-week period, the mice displayed impaired motor activity and brain damage typical of Parkinson's disease, a progressive and incurable neurological illness that afflicts one million Americans.

Alone, neither chemical typically enters the brain. Together, maneb may help paraquat cross the blood-brain barrier—a filter of sorts whereby the body only allows select molecules to enter. Previous studies have also found a higher incidence of Parkinson's disease in people who live in rural areas.

Both chemicals are sprayed on potatoes, tomatoes, lettuce, corn, and other crops. The EPA, however, does not test for compound interactions, raising questions about other chemicals that might team up to raise havoc in the body. "I don't think we just happened to pick the right two pesticides" says Deborah Cory-Slechta of the University of Rochester.

"This is probably just the tip of the iceberg." —Paul Thacker [End quoting]

This discovery leads to many more questions about all the chemicals used in modern agribusiness. The chemical combinations are nearly endless and, as the researcher above states, there are likely many other disastrous combinations. This is yet another very good reason to return modern chemically-driven agribusiness back to a more organically supported agriculture as we detailed back in the April 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM.

NEW EVIDENCE SHOWS FALSE MEMORIES CAN BE CREATED

"I tawt I taw a bunny wabbit" at Disneyland.

About one-third of the people who were exposed to a fake print advertisement that described a visit to Disneyland and how they met and shook hands with Bugs Bunny, later said they remembered or knew the event happened to them.

The scenario described in the ad never occurred because Bugs Bunny is a Warner Brothers cartoon character and wouldn't be featured in any Walt Disney Company property, according to University of Washington memory researchers Jacquie Pickrell and Elizabeth Loftus.

Pickrell will make two presentations on the topic at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Society (APS) on Sunday (June 17) in Toronto and at a satellite session of the Society for Applied Research in Memory and Cognition in Kingston, Ontario, on Wednesday.

"The frightening thing about this study is that it suggests how easily a false memory can be created" said Pickrell, UW psychology doctoral student.

"It's not only people who go to a therapist who might implant a false memory, or those who witness an accident and whose memory can be distorted who can have a false memory. Memory is very vulnerable and malleable. People are not always aware of the choices they make. This study shows the power of subtle association changes on memory."

The research is a follow-up to an unpublished study by Loftus, a UW psychology professor who is being honored by the APS this week with its William James Fellow Award for psychological research; Kathryn Braun, a visiting scholar at the Harvard Business School; and Rhiannon Ellis, a former UW undergraduate who is now a doctoral student at the University of Pittsburgh. In the original study, 16 percent of the people exposed to a Disneyland ad featuring Bugs Bunny later thought they had seen and met the cartoon rabbit.

In the new research, Pickrell and Loftus divided 120 subjects into four groups. The subjects were told they were going to evaluate advertising copy, fill out several questionnaires, and answer questions about a trip to Disneyland.

The first group read a generic Disneyland ad that mentioned no cartoon characters. The second group read the same copy and was exposed to a 4-foot-tall cardboard figure of Bugs Bunny that was casually placed in the interview room. No mention was made of Bugs Bunny. The third, or Bugs group, read the fake Disneyland ad featuring Bugs Bunny. The fourth or double-exposure group read the fake ad and also saw the cardboard rabbit.

This time 30 percent of the people in the Bugs group later said they remembered or knew they had met Bugs Bunny when they visited Disneyland and 40 percent of the people in the double exposure group reported the same thing.

"Remember" means the people actually recall meeting and shaking hands with Bugs" explained Pickrell. "Knowing" is they have no real memory, but are sure that it happened, just as they have no memory of having their umbilical cord being cut when they were born but know it happened.

"Creating a false memory is a process. Someone saying, 'I know it could have happened', is taking the first step of actually creating a memory. If you clearly believe you walked up to Bugs Bunny, you have a memory."

In addition, Pickrell said there is the issue of the consequence of false memories or the ripple effects. People in the experiment who were exposed to the false advertising were more likely to relate Bugs Bunny to other things at Disneyland not suggested in the ad, such as seeing Bugs and Mickey Mouse together or seeing Bugs in the Main Street Electrical Parade.

"We are interested in how people create their autobiographical references, or memory. Through this process they might be altering their own memories" she said. "Nostalgic advertising works in a similar manner. Hallmark, McDonald's, and Disney have very effective nostalgic advertising that can change people's buying habits. You may not have had a great experience the last time you visited Disneyland or McDonald's, but the ads may inadvertently be creating the impression that they had a wonderful time and leaving viewers with that memory. If ads can get people to believe they had an experience they never had, that is pretty powerful.

"The bottom line of our study is that the phony ad is making the difference. Just casually reading a Bugs Bunny cartoon or some other incidental exposure doesn't mean you believe you met Bugs. The ad does."

For more information, contact Pickrell at <jpick@u.washington.edu> or 206-543-8059, or Loftus at 206-543-7184. Both will be attending the American Psychological Society meeting in Toronto. [End quoting]

This is a very revealing study that provides great insight concerning the actual, widespread levels of mind control that are used every day on the public. If this research goes much further down the road it is on, and continues to be talked about in a public forum, the principal investigators will have their laboratory visited by government types who strongly suggest they shift the work into the "top secret" category—or else. The crooks in high places do not want any of their private tricks of the trade revealed because they lose effectiveness then.

FDA SEARCHES FOR SOURCE OF PHONEY DRUGS

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 6/5/01: [quoting]

The Food and Drug Administration is investigating four cases in which counterfeit prescription drugs made their way to pharmacy shelves, and in some cases, were given to patients.

No one is known to have been seriously injured, although some patients have had adverse reactions. But FDA officials say they are worried about the four cases and have made the investigation a high priority.

"This little spate of cases is highly unusual" William K. Hubbard, a senior associate commissioner at the FDA, said. In the past decade, he said, there have been only a handful of similar instances.

The recent cases involve three injectable drugs: Serostim, a growth hormone sold by Serono and used by AIDS patients; Nutropin, a growth hormone sold by Genentech; and Neupogen, a cancer drug sold by Amgen. All three drugs are expensive, which could be why the counterfeiters selected them. A 12-week course of Serostim, for instance, costs $21,000.

The counterfeiters might have been able to find an easy market for their drugs since Serostim and Nutropin are sought after by people who believe the drugs will help them lose weight, build muscle, and smooth wrinkles. Some websites promote the drugs for such uses, and, in some cases, offer to sell them without a prescription.

Counterfeiters are drawn to prescription drugs, in part, because their small size makes them easy to smuggle.

FDA officials and the drug companies have sent letters to pharmacies, doctors, and distributors all over the country to warn them about the counterfeit drugs.

Last month, FDA officials reported three more cases of counterfeit drugs, this time involving Neupogen, Nutropin, and a second fake batch of Serostim. Genentech, which makes Nutropin, said pharmacies in Florida, California, and Indiana had found fake copies of the drug on their shelves.

FDA officials say they cannot discuss many aspects of the recent cases because of the ongoing investigation. And it is not clear whether the counterfeit drugs were produced in the United States or came from overseas.

But either way, the drugs appear to be coming through networks that operate largely beyond the reach of regulators.

Congress has recently become concerned about whether inspectors at the FDA and the U.S. Customs Service have enough resources to stop illicit medicine from entering.

The irony is that at least some of these phony drugs are probably saving lives because the patients may not be getting the poisons that are the real drugs. I'd venture to propose that if all "drugs" were actually some harmless substance, but the users thought they were for real, the cure rate would rise. Of course all people don't respond to placebos, but many do.

A HORSE IN BALANCE WEARS A CROWN OF LIGHT

A story honoring en-Light-ened riding masters who developed Guidelines to bring: discipline, beauty, grace, and balance in the movements of a horse, from a girl who desired to be a better rider. She became the first equestrian American woman in Olympic history. This is her own life story; how their Guidelines produced oneness with her horses, also the realization of Creator-God, the Balancing Fulcrum, from riding the Figure 8. The en-Light-ened equestrian masters were Fritz Stecken and Ludwig Von Zeiner, Head Rider of The Spanish Riding School.

NEW QUEST FOR TRUTH ABOUT DEATH OF CONGRESSMAN NICK
BEGICH AND HOUSE MAJORITY LEADER HALE BOGGS

From the INTERNET, "Earthpulse.com"
<njb3@earthpulse.com>, 6/20/01: [quoting]

Dear SPECTRUM:

We would very much appreciate your help in bringing to light the truth about the disappearance of my father, on October 16, 1972. We are asking our friends to contact the following Committee and legislators to reopen the investigation of the disappearance of the plane because of the information reported in Roll Call magazine as released by the FBI under Freedom Of Information Act request.

As mentioned, the story will be airing on the History Channel on a show called History's Mysteries at 8:00 PM Eastern and Pacific time June 26, 2001 [and likely repeated for a number of weeks after that]. I want to thank you in advance for your help in discovering the truth about this event. Please pass this message on to your friends and the media.

Please also contact: The U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Government Reform, Dan Burton (IN), Chairman & Henry A. Waxman (CA), Ranking Democrat.

The Capitol Switchboard will connect you with their offices at 202-224-3121.

Thank you for your continued support and best wishes.

Dr. Nick Begich, Jr., P.O. Box 201393 Anchorage, AK 99520; email: <drnick@earthpulse.com>; and website: <www.earthpulse.com> [End quoting]

Let's hope that Nick can finally discover the truth about his father's and Hale Boggs' highly probable murders. Someone out there in readerland knows what happened. Now is the time for Truth to out in ALL areas. Please help in any way you can.

Longtime readers of this newspaper are very familiar with Nick Jr. for his outstanding work over the past decade concerning alerting the public about the diabolical HAARP system up in Alaska (and elsewhere). Our latest interview with Nick was the front-page feature for our May 2001 issue.

COMPACT TIRE FACTORY

From POPULAR MECHANICS magazine, July 2001 [quoting]

Italian tire manufacturer Pirelli will begin producing tires in remarkably small and efficient plants—about the size of three tractor-trailers parked side by side.

These compact new factories are called MIRS, for Modular Integrated Robotized System plants. And they're fast, allowing Pirelli to produce a tire every 3 minutes and switch production from one tire size to another in 20 minutes, a feat that now takes over 6 hours.

The system reduces the 14 steps of traditional tire manufacturing down to three. This means the time required to go from raw materials to finished products can be reduced from six days down to an incredible 72 minutes. Pirelli expects quality to increase by 100 percent and overall product cost to fall by 25 percent.

The first plant is now operating in Milan, Italy. In the future, automakers may install MIRS plants inside their factories. [End quoting]

In 1949 I had an organic chemistry teacher tell me that the tire companies could make tires which would outlast the life of a car, but for obvious economic reasons the public would never see such tires.

Considering all the problems lately with tires flying apart and causing serious vehicular tragedies, let's hope these new fast-tire factories don't compound the problem and simply produce the same junk faster!

OFFICIALS BLAME FEDERAL ENERGY
REGULATORY COMMISSION (FERC) FOR STATE ENERGY SHORTAGE

Excerpted from THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 6/18/01: [quoting]

"On the day that Sen. James Jeffords, I-VT, quit the Republican party and gave control of the Senate to Democrats, El Paso Energy Company dropped its price for delivering 1,000 cubic feet of natural gas from Texas to California from $6.33 to 23 cents" Sherman said. "I don't think that's a coincidence." [End quoting]

That means the price had been almost 30 times higher than it dropped to—and you can be sure they were still making a fat profit at 23 cents! Does anyone still think there isn't a huge scam attached to the energy crisis in California? Go back and read again the February 2001 front-page feature of this newspaper for many details about fraud and greed that only now are coming out in small fragments on the evening news programs. Among other tricks of the trade, only now are we hearing about power companies taking some of their generating capacity off line in order to artificially drive-up the prices.

And our new Republican oil-czar president was leading the charge. Perhaps Senator Jeffords had finally had enough and wished to distance himself from such a criminal element.

COURT: POLICE NEED WARRANT TO USE HEAT SENSOR

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 6/10/01: [quoting]

In an important declaration of the constitutional limits on new privacy-threatening technology, the Supreme Court ruled Monday that the use by police of a thermal imaging device to detect patterns of heat coming from a private home is a search that requires a warrant.

The court said further that the warrant requirement would apply not only to the relatively crude device at issue in the case, but also to any "more sophisticated systems that are already in use or in development" and that allow the police to gain knowledge that, in the past, would have been impossible without physically entering the home.

"We must take the long view, from the original meaning of the Fourth Amendment forward" justice Antony Scalia wrote for a 5-4 majority that cut across the court's usual ideological division. Scalia said that to take any other approach "would leave the homeowner at the mercy of advancing technology—including imaging technology that could discern all human activity in the home".

The decision overturned a ruling by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco—often regarded as the most liberal of the federal appeals courts—which held in 1999 that the warrantless use of a device that revealed patterns of heat suggestive of an indoor marijuana-growing operation did not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable searches.

In a dissenting opinion Monday, Justice John Paul Stevens—who in turn is usually described as the court's most liberal justice—said the 9th Circuit was correct and that the police activity in the case "did not invade any constitutionally protected interest in privacy". He said that for the court Monday to make a constitutional rule about future technology was "unnecessary, unwise, and inconsistent with the Fourth Amendment".

Those who joined Scalia in the majority were Justices David H. Souter, Clarence Thomas, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, and Stephen G. Breyer, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist joined the dissent, as did Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony M. Kennedy.

The case, Kyllo v. United States, No. 99-8508, was a federal drug prosecution that began in 1992, when two federal agents trained a device called Agema Thermovision 210 on a home in Florence, Oregon, where, on the basis of tips and utility bills, they believed marijuana was being grown under high-intensity lamps. While the imager cannot see through walls, it can detect hot spots, and in this case disclosed that part of the roof and a side wall were warmer than the rest of the building and the neighboring houses. The agents used that information to get a warrant to enter and search the home, where they found more than 100 marijuana plants growing under halide lights. [End quoting]

The problem of ever more sophisticated invasive technologies is not a case such as the above, which gives you the impression that your privacy rights have been upheld. The problem is that even more sophisticated technologies are used routinely on we-the-people with no regard for the laws of privacy by those above-the-law agencies employing such snooping devices.

INTEL ANNOUNCES FASTEST TRANSISTOR

Intel Corporation said Saturday it has created the world's fastest silicon transistors, tiny switches that turn on and off nearly 1,000 times more quickly than those that power today's microprocessors.

The new technology, which would not be incorporated into processors until 2007, will allow computers to run about 25 times faster than the top-of-the-line Pentium 4, said Gerald Marcyk, Intel's director of components research.

Such powerful processors are expected to play a key role in the growth of speech recognition and language translation applications—as well as programs that now require a supercomputer to run. [End quoting]

Isn't it interesting that, despite the usually fast (12-18 month) turnaround time in the semiconductor industry, this supposed new technology won't be available until way out there in 2007. You don't suppose this could have been a bit of an exaggeration they hope everyone will forget in awhile—but “coincidentally” timed RIGHT NOW to help Intel stay afloat as the rest of the technology sector stock market continues to slide?

METAL OF HONOR

From POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, July 2001: [quoting]

Between 1950 and 1980, scientists screened thousands of metallic compounds for superconductivity, the ability to carry electric current without resistance. But they overlooked at least one: magnesium diboride.

Earlier this year, Professor Jun Akimitsu of Aomaya Gakuin University in Japan announced that magnesium diboride has a critical temperature (the temperature below which a material exhibits superconductivity) of 39°K (Kelvin), almost twice as high as that of any other known metallic superconductor. The discovery generated excitement among physicists worldwide and was the topic of more than 80 papers at the March meeting of the American Physical Society.

“Superconductor researchers once believed that 30°K was the maximum possible critical temperature” says Martin Maley of the Los Alamos National Laboratory. One reason for all the excitement is the simplicity of magnesium diboride and other metallic materials. Although some ceramic compounds, known as high-temperature superconductors, exhibit superconductivity at temperatures approaching 100°K, they are complex materials whose crystals require the precise arrangement of four or more elements. Magnesium diboride, on the other hand, is a simple compound of two inexpensive elements in an easily characterized crystal.

Many labs have now fabricated magnesium diboride wires and films by exposing boron fibers to magnesium vapor. The usefulness of magnesium diboride as a superconductor remains to be determined, but its discovery has pointed researchers in a new direction. “Job satisfaction among superconductor researchers is at an all-time high” says Paul Canfield of Iowa State University. — Steve Miller [End quoting]

This is a good example of how wrong science can be about matters they're so sure of. Whenever you see it stated by modern-trained scientists that something is impossible, and then 80-some scientists jump on the bandwagon to write papers on the subject, like a pack of hounds chasing a rabbit, remember the bumblebee that science has long said couldn't possibly fly.

USE YOUR TIME WISELY

If you had a bank that credited $86,400 to your account each morning, never carried over the balance from day to day, allowed you to keep no cash in your account at the end of 24 hours, canceled out whatever part of that amount you failed to use, what would you do?

Try to spend every cent, of course! Well, everyone does have such a bank, and its name is TIME. Every morning it credits you with 86,400 seconds.

The next morning at the same hour it rules as lost whatever of this you failed to invest to good purpose. It carries over no balance and allows no overdrafts.

If you don't use the day's deposit, the loss is yours. There is no going back, no drawing against tomorrow.

How do you spend your daily surplus? Best wishes for an enormous return on your investment today. [End quoting]

WHAT DOES LOVE MEAN?

From the INTERNET, <para-discuss@tje.net>, 6/22/01: [quoting]

A group of professional people posed this question to a group of 4-to-8-year-olds: “What does love mean?” The answers they got were broader and deeper than anyone could have imagined.

LOVE IS: “When my grandmother got arthritis, she couldn't bend over and paint her toenails anymore. So my grandfather does it for her all the time, even when his hands got arthritis too. That's love.” — Rebecca, age 8

“When someone loves you, the way they say your name is different. You know that your name is safe in their mouth.”

— Billy, age 4

“Love is when you go out to eat and give somebody most of your french fries without making them give you any of theirs.”

— Chrissy, age 6

“Love is what makes you smile when you're tired.”

— Terri, age 4

“Love is when my mommy makes coffee for my daddy and she takes a sip before giving it to him, to make sure the taste is OK.”

— Danny, age 7

“Love is when you kiss all the time. Then when you get tired of kissing, you still want to be together and you talk more. My mommy and Daddy are like that. They look gross when they kiss.”

— Emily, age 8

“Love is what's in the room with you at Christmas if you stop opening presents and listen.”

— Bobby, age 5

“If you want to learn to love better, you should start with a friend who you hate.”

— Nikka, age 6

"When you tell someone something bad about yourself and you're scared they won't love you anymore. But then you get surprised because not only do they still love you, they love you even more."
— Matthew, age 7

"There are two kinds of love. Our love. God's love. But God makes both kinds of them."
— Jenny, age 4

"Love is when you tell a guy you like his shirt, then he wears it every day."
— Noelle, age 7

"Love is like a little old woman and a little old man who are still friends even after they know each other so well."
— Tommy, age 6

"During my piano recital, I was on a stage and scared. I looked at all the people watching me and saw my daddy waving and smiling. He was the only one doing that. I wasn't scared anymore."
— Cindy, age 8

"Love is when mommy gives daddy the best piece of chicken."
— Elaine, age 5

"Love is when mommy sees daddy smelly and sweaty and still says he is handsomer than Robert Redford."
— Chris, age 8

"Love is when your puppy licks your face even after you left him alone all day."
— MaryAnn, age 4

"Love cards like Valentine's cards say stuff on them that we'd like to say ourselves, but we wouldn't be caught dead saying."
— Mike, age 8

If you judge people, you have no time to love them. — Mother Teresa [End quoting]

A NEW WORLD THAT MAY ALREADY BE HERE

From the INTERNET,
<AABCC@yahoo.com>, 6/21/01: [quoting]

In Brooklyn, New York, Chush is a school that caters to learning-disabled children. Some children remain in Chush for their entire school career, while others can be mainstreamed into conventional schools. At a Chush fund-raising dinner, the father of a Chush child delivered a speech that would never be forgotten by all who attended.

After extolling the school and its dedicated staff, he cried out: "Where is the perfection in my son, Shay? Everything God does is done with perfection. But my child cannot understand things as other children do. My child cannot remember facts and figures as other children do. Where is God's perfection?"

The audience was shocked by the question, pained by the father's anguish, and stilled by the piercing query.

"I believe," the father answered, "that when God brings a child like this into the world, the perfection that He seeks is in the way people react to this child." He then told the following story about his son, Shay:

One afternoon, Shay and his father walked past a park where some boys Shay knew were playing baseball. Shay asked, "Do you think they will let me play?" Shay's father knew that his son was not at all athletic and that most boys would not want him on their team. But Shay's father understood that if his son was chosen to play it would give him a comfortable sense of belonging. Shay's father approached one of the boys in the field and asked if Shay could play. The boy looked around for guidance from his teammates. Getting none, he took matters into his own hands and said "We are losing by six runs and the game is in the eighth inning. I guess he can be on our team and we'll try to put him up to bat in the ninth inning."

Shay's father was ecstatic as Shay smiled broadly. Shay was told to put on a glove and go out to play short center field. In the bottom of the eighth inning, Shay's team scored a few runs but was still behind by three. In the bottom of the ninth inning, Shay's team scored again, and now with two outs and the bases loaded, with the potential winning run on base, Shay was scheduled to be up.

Would the team actually let Shay bat at this juncture and give away their chance to win the game?

Surprisingly, Shay was given the bat. Everyone knew that it was all but impossible because Shay didn't even know how to hold the bat properly, let alone hit with it. However, as Shay stepped up to the plate, the pitcher moved a few steps to lob the ball in softly so Shay should at least be able to make contact. The first pitch came and Shay swung clumsily and missed.

One of Shay's teammates came up to Shay and together they held the bat and faced the pitcher waiting for the next pitch. The pitcher again took a few steps forward to toss the ball softly toward Shay. As the pitch came in, Shay and his teammate swung at the ball and together they hit a slow ground ball to the pitcher. The pitcher picked up the soft grounder and could easily have thrown the ball to the first baseman. Shay would have been out and that would have ended the game.

Instead, the pitcher took the ball and threw it on a high arc to right field, far beyond reach of the first baseman. Everyone started yelling: "Shay, run to first. Run to first". Never in his life had Shay run to first. He scampered down the baseline, wide-eyed and startled.

By the time he reached first base, the right fielder had the ball. He could have thrown the ball to the second baseman who would tag out Shay, who was still running. But the right fielder understood what the pitcher's intentions were, so threw the ball high and far over the third baseman's head.

Everyone yelled "Run to second, run to second." Shay ran towards second base as the runners ahead of him deliriously circled the bases towards home. As Shay reached second base, the opposing short stop ran to him, turned him in the direction of third base and shouted "Run to third."

As Shay rounded third, the boys from both teams ran behind him screaming "Shay run home." Shay ran home, stepped on home plate and all 18 boys lifted him on their shoulders and made him the hero, as he had just hit a grand slam and won the game for his team. "That day" said the father softly, with tears now rolling down his face, "those 18 boys reached their level of God's perfection."

Funny how this is so true! Funny how simple it is for people to trash different ways of living and believing and then wonder why the world is going to hell. Funny how people can send a thousand "jokes" through e-mail and they spread like wildfire, but when one starts sending messages regarding life choices, people think twice about sharing. Funny how the lewd, crude, vulgar, and obscene pass freely through cyberspace, but public discussion of morality is too often suppressed in school and the workplace. Funny how when you go to forward this message (if you choose to forward it), you will not send it to many on your address list because you're not sure what they believe, or what they will think of you for sending it to them. Funny how we can be more worried about what other people think of us than what we think of ourselves.

The paradox of our time in history is that we have taller buildings, but shorter tempers; wider freeways, but narrower viewpoints; we spend more, but have less; we buy more, but enjoy it less. We have bigger houses and smaller families; more conveniences, but less time; we have more degrees, but less sense; more knowledge, but less judgment; more experts, but more problems; more medicine, but less wellness.

We have multiplied our possessions, but reduced our values. We talk too much, love too seldom, and hate too often. We've learned how to make a living, but not a life; we've added years to life, not life to years. We've been all the way to the Moon and back, but have trouble crossing the street to meet the new neighbor.

We've conquered outer space, but not inner space; we've cleaned up the air, but polluted the soul; we've split the atom, but not our prejudice. We have higher incomes, but lower morals; we've become long on quantity, but short on quality.

These are the times of tall men, and short character; steep profits, and shallow relationships. These are the times of world peace, but domestic warfare; more leisure, but less fun; more kinds of food, but less nutrition. These are days of two incomes, but more divorce; of fancier houses, but broken homes.

It is a time when there is much in the show window and nothing in the stockroom; a time when technology can bring this letter to you, and a time when you can choose either to make a difference or just hit delete. [End quoting]

It has sometimes been said that the level of a society's COMPASSION is the critical key to forward progress—whether the society advances and expands to the next level of cultural expression, or sends itself back to the Stone Age to start all over again.

Control Thru The Jesuit Order

infamous May 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM—the issue that is known far and wide as the “Black Pope” paper.

Eric is also the author of the blockbuster book VATICAN ASSASSINS, an incredibly well researched historical manuscript which shows the reader, in astonishing detail, where the TRUE diabolical power and control of this planet resides—at least that controlling layer which is in the physical dimension.

VATICAN ASSASSINS likewise acquaints the reader with a number of priceless old documents and historical manuscripts that “certain ones” have done their very best to remove from almost all of the world’s library shelves. Most of these documents are so rare that just getting these back into public access and circulation is a great service to all students of history thirsty for The Truth.

There has been so much interest in what Eric has to say that we decided to revisit a number of issues and ask him to answer some dangling questions. After all, the kind of connections which Eric makes are an entire level deeper than what we are used to hearing in the “conspiracy theory” arena. Moreover, we have noted, with some degree of surprise and “unveiling” over the past year or so, just who all have come forward to attack Eric’s work—groundlessly and hysterically (but never to his face). These ones know who they are and have, by their unprofessional and irrational actions, convincingly revealed just WHO they REALLY work for, while pretending to be presenters of Truth!

While it was my intent to focus the majority of the conversation on the present day, there were some unresolved issues from the past that likewise required clarification. On June 18, 2001, I had an opportunity to sit down with Eric Phelps, face-to-face, and prevail upon him to answer a few key questions. Let’s see what he has to say.

Martin: Our last interview—the “Black Pope” issue of The SPECTRUM—went around the world a few times. It’s also been on the Internet for quite some time. The manuscript of VATICAN ASSASSINS has been distributed, but still no book. What’s happening with the book? Why is it taking so long to come out in book form?

Phelps: The reason why it has taken a year to finalize the book is because there were several historical mistakes that were corrected by some of the readers of the manuscripts, the first and second manuscripts.

There was a Japanese individual named Toichi [Ryu] who corrected me on some of the Japanese history regarding the Emperors and the Shogans, for which I thanked him and made the necessary changes.

There were a few other similar changes that I had to make with regard to dates, places, and some times; just a polishing-up of the manuscript, so that it’s ready now.

We had one individual who was a Jesuit for 10 years. He got out of the Jesuit Order. He read the manuscript. He greatly approved of it. And he sent us a list of corrections, which we incorporated into the manuscript. So, there have been many people who have added their polishing touches to it, for which I am thankful.

[Editor’s note: Wisdom Books & Press (877) 280-2866 is accepting advance orders for VATICAN ASSASSINS, the 700-page book, which should be completed by the second or third week in July. The cost for this huge volume is only $34.95, which includes a gift CD-ROM containing 13 rare books mostly “missing” from the world’s library shelves.]

Martin: I would like to concentrate this conversation largely on the present day. But, before we get to the present, I would ask you to, once and for all, clarify something for our readers who may be still confused about The Protocols Of The Learned Elders Of Zion.

There have been many sources and many recitings of The Protocols. They’ve been called a fraud. They’ve been called a forgery, which means that there was a document that preceded it that it had to be based on. Everyone seems to point to the Jews, or the Khazars, as the authors of The Protocols, and yet your research indicates otherwise.

Who, in your opinion, authored The Protocols Of The Learned Elders Of Zion?

Phelps: Cardinal Bea was the confessor of Pope Pius XII (Hitler’s Pope), a very powerful Jesuit and Cardinal within the Vatican. According to Alberto Rivera, when speaking with Cardinal Bea, Cardinal Bea said to him that The Protocols were written by Jews loyal to the Pope.

I do not believe Jews wrote The Protocols. I do not believe Alberto Rivera was told the whole story, because he did not have a “need to know”. Withholding information has always been standard procedure for the Jesuits.

I believe men who were loyal to the Pope wrote The Protocols, and the men who were loyal to the Pope who wrote The Protocols were the Jesuits, according to Leo Lehmann—the ex-Irish Catholic priest who became converted to Christ and set-up the mission there in New York City, Converted Catholics For Christ. He said that the Jesuits wrote The Protocols, and that this is no new attempt of deception, based on their document that they wrote concerning their attack on the Jansenists, which was called The Secrets Of The Elders Of Bourg-Fontaine.

So, the Jesuits wrote The Protocols like they wrote The Secrets Of The Elders Of Bourg-Fontaine, and the language of The Protocols is identical to The Secret Meeting At Cheiri [1825].

However, I have a quotation from a very brilliant and Godly, born-again, Bible-believing, Irish Roman Catholic priest I referred to a moment ago. He wrote a book entitled Behind The Dictators, first written in 1942, and there were two editions after that. I have the 1945 edition. Dr. Leo Lehmann says that the Jesuits wrote The Protocols. But before I get into that, I would just like to read to you who Dr. L. H. Lehmann was.

“He was born in Dublin, Ireland, and received his primary education there from the nuns and christian brothers. He began his study for the priesthood at Mungret College, Limerick, and at All Hallows College, Dublin. In 1918, he went to finish his theological studies at the University of Propaganda Fide in Rome, where he was ordained a priest in 1921. He later studied at New York University from which he received the degree of M.A.

“After four years as a priest in Cape Town, South Africa, Dr. Lehmann was recalled to Rome to continue negotiations at the Vatican courts concerning a legal case in which he had been engaged, while a student in Rome, on behalf of many American bishops and priests against the Jesuits. He later returned to South Africa, but was transferred to the United States in 1927 and appointed pastor in Gainesville, the university city of Florida. Dr. Lehmann is now director of Christ’s Mission in New York City and Editor-In-Chief of The Converted Catholic magazine.”

So, here is a born-again, Bible-believing man who had been an Irish priest, who had run-ins with the Jesuits, who knew EXACTLY what they were all about. When you’re involved in litigation within the Vatican, you know the law. And you know the history of who you are opposing.

Here is what he had to say about the origin of The Protocols. This is found in his book, Behind The Dictators, on page 15:

“Although first published in Russia in 1903, The Protocols Of [The Learned Elders Of] Zion had their origin in France and date from the Dreyfus Affair, of which the Jesuits were the chief instigators. They were planned also first to take effect in France, by the overthrow of the 'Judaic-Masonic' government of the French Republic. But the discovery of the gigantic fraud of Leo Taxil, who had been openly supported by the Jesuits, the concluding of the Franco-Russian alliance, along with the Vatican's difficulties with the French government at that time, made it more opportune to have them appear first in Russia.

"These Protocols of supposedly Jewish leaders are not the first documents of their kind fabricated by the Jesuits.

"For over a hundred years before these Protocols appeared, the Jesuits had continued to make use of a similar fraud called The Secrets Of The Elders Of Bourg-Fontaine against Jansenism—an anti-Jesuit French Catholic movement among the secular clergy."

Phelps: I might also add that the Jansenists were what we would call, really, Catholic Calvinists. They believed in the sovereignty of God. They believed in justification by faith. They believed in many Biblical doctrines, and therefore the Jesuits hated them and later got the Pope to issue a Bull against them.

The Jesuits so hated the Jansenists, of which Blaise Pascal was one, that they concocted this document, The Secrets Of The Elders Of Bourg-Fontaine, against them.

Martin: What year was this?

Phelps: This was in the 1600s, I believe, in France. It may have been the late 1600s, because Blaise Pascal wrote his Provincial Letters in the later 1600s.

later the barometer, the hydraulic press, and the syringe. Until 1654 he spent his time between mathematics (remember Pascal's triangle and other intriguing mathematical and geometric discoveries?) and the social round in Paris, but a mystical experience that year led him to join his sister, who was a member of the Jansenist convent at Port-Royal, where he defended Jansenism against the Jesuits in Lettres Provinciales, 1656-7.]

Now, I'll go back to my reading:

"The analogy between the two forgeries is perfect—the secret assemblage in the forest of Bourg-Fontaine; the plan of the 'conspirators' to destroy the Papacy and establish religious tolerance among all nations; the alleged plot against Throne and Altar, and the setting up of a world-government in opposition to the Catholic Church. There is the same dramatization of the negative pole of the historic evolution of the world, in order to bring out, by contrast, the positive Christian [Catholic] pole, around which all conservative forces—the monarchy, the aristocracy, the army, the clergy—must gather to save the world from Satan's onslaught."

Phelps: Is this not identical to The Protocols? Except in The Protocols, it's Communism. Both documents want a world government, under someone other than the Pope. So, it betrays the Jesuit hand throughout, in The Protocols, based upon The Secrets Of The Elders Of Bourg-Fontaine; and furthermore, after this document, The Secrets Of the Elders of Bourge-Fontaine, the next major document that we have is Leone's The Jesuit Conspiracy—The Secret Plan Of The Order, which was published in 1848.

In this document, Jesuit Leone was 19 years old and a novitiate in Cheiri, Italy, where he, when he was snooping around in a back room, became trapped when Jesuit General Roothaan and his provincials came in another room and he listened to this conversation between the General and his provincials—in the mid-1830s, around 1834—and while he was hiding, he was taking notes.

They betray that the Jesuit General was intent upon setting-up a World Government by controlling the Roman Catholic hierarchy, the Pope, all the monarchies, and thus all the governments of the world. And that is in Leone's great work, The Jesuit Conspiracy, published in 1848.

It was published in several languages. It went all throughout Europe, which contributed to the people rising-up against the power of the Jesuits in 1848, with the Second French Revolution. But that revolution was controlled, the leadership of it was controlled, and the end result was more power for the Jesuit Order in Europe.

Martin: You mention that The Protocols were an outgrowth of the Dreyfus Affair [1890s]. And prior to that we have the Council of Trent [twenty-five sessions of the Council of Trent from 1545-1563]. Can you put this in perspective?

Phelps: Ok. The Jesuits were busy creating Jewish hatred in Germany and in France in the late 1800s. There was a man referred to in Ridpath's Universal History Of the World—I only found this here—he called his work "the solution to the Jewish question". Hitler came along, later, and had the FINAL solution to the Jewish question. So, they were fomenting anti-Jewish hatred in Germany, and they were fomenting anti-Jewish hatred in France.

Martin: Who are they?

The Indigo Children

The New Kids Have Arrived

by Lee Carroll & Jan Tober

(Featured interview in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

The "Indigo Child" is a boy or girl who displays a new and unusual set of psychological attributes, revealing a pattern of behavior generally undocumented before. This pattern has singularly unique factors that call for parents and teachers to change their treatment and upbringing of these kids to assist them in achieving balance and harmony in their lives, and to help them avoid frustration.

In this groundbreaking book, international authors and lecturers Lee Carroll and Jan Tober answer many of the often-puzzling questions surrounding Indigo Children, such as:

- Can we really be seeing human evolution in kids today?
- Are these kids smarter than we were at their age?
- How come a lot of our children today seem to be "system busters"?
- Why are so many of our brightest kids being diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)?
- Are there proven, working alternatives to Ritalin?

Throughout this work, Carroll and Tober bring together some very fine minds (doctors, educators, psychologists, and more) who shed light on the Indigo Child phenomenon. These children are truly special, representing a great percentage of all the kids being born today on a worldwide basis. They come in "knowing" who they are—so they must be recognized, appreciated for their exceptional qualities, and guided with love and care.

This book is a must for the parents of unusually bright and active children!

Al Bielek on CD-ROM

What you get on this CD-ROM is the most in-depth compilation of interviews with survivors of the Philadelphia Experiment and Montauk Project to date on one computer CD.

The information on this CD comes from the memories of those who were interviewed. Because these projects are so secretive, gaining hard evidence is nearly impossible. However, that doesn't mean the projects never happened.

This information is for those who want to pursue and know the truth. Sometimes, finding the truth becomes elusive. There are many out there who do not want you to know the truth about these projects. Use your own judgment as you hear the words of these survivors.

As you follow this story, use this information as the beginning resource to hopefully, get you on the right track.

The five people featured on this CD all testify that they worked with Al at the Montauk Project, and some even remember him as Ed Cameron during the Philadelphia Experiment.

Children Of The Matrix

How an interdimensional race has controlled the world for thousands of years—and still does!

We are born into a world controlled by unseen forces that have plagued and manipulated humanity for thousands of years. No, this is no script from a Hollywood movie. It is happening to you NOW.

You may look around and think that what you see is "real". But in truth you are living in an illusion—an illusion designed to keep you in a mental, emotional, and spiritual prison cell.

David Icke exposes these forces and their methods of human control and he reveals a fantastic web of global manipulation, orchestrated by forces beyond this physical realm.

He exposes the hidden bloodlines, through which other-dimensional entities live and operate unseen among us; and he shows how the bloodlines of the royal, political, and economic rulers of today are the same as those who ruled as the kings and queens of ancient times.

Icke takes the story on from his highly acclaimed And The Truth Shall Set You Free and The Biggest Secret, and he lifts still further the veil of secrecy that has maintained humanity in manipulated ignorance for so long.

The truth is not only out there.

Much of it is right here.

The Biggest Secret

by David Icke

The blockbuster of all blockbusters! With stunning information never before released on the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales.

David Icke's most powerful and explosive book to date includes the astonishing background to the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales. Every man, woman, and child on the planet is affected by the stunning information that Icke exposes. He reveals in documented detail how the same interconnecting bloodlines have controlled the planet for thousands of years. How they created all the major religions and suppressed the spiritual and esoteric knowledge that will set humanity free from its mental and emotional prisons. It includes a devastating exposé of the true origins of Christianity and the other major religions, and documents suppressed science, which explains why the world is facing a time of incredible change and transformation. The Biggest Secret also exposes the true and astonishing background to the British Royal Family and, through enormous research and unique contacts, Icke reveals how and why Diana, Princess of Wales, was murdered in Paris in 1997. This includes information from a close confidant of Diana for nine years, which has never before been made public.

The Biggest Secret is a unique book and is quite rightly dubbed: "The book that will change the world." No one who reads it will ever be the same again.

Phelps: The Jesuits. The Jesuits were fomenting this in both countries because, at this time, the Jesuits had been expelled from Germany in 1872, and they had been expelled from France in 1880. So now they're going to go after the Jews through their agents in these two countries.

In France, they started the Dreyfus Affair, and that was in the 1890s. The Dreyfus Affair had several purposes. It was to create anti-Semitism—anti-Jewish hatred in France.

I hate to use the word anti-Semitism. There are many Semites other than Jews. And it was also calculated to create war with Germany, because Captain Dreyfus was accused of treason in handing secrets over to the German government. It was all a frame.

He was completely framed. He was sent to Devil's Island for 10 years, and suffered the horrible tortures of Devil's Island for that period of time. And then, later, when he was brought back, he was vindicated and found "not guilty", and the Jesuits were blamed for having done this. So this became universally known in France, which ultimately caused the Jesuits to be expelled, again, in 1901.

The Dreyfus Affair is a major European conspiracy with the Jesuit hand, against the Jews, attempting to foment a war between France and Germany. Because, remember, the French hated the Germans as a result of the trouncing that they got in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870. And they wanted vengeance for that.

So, we play on the people's vengeance, create this issue between Germany and France, we use the Jews to do it so we can get some anti-Jewish fervor going, which ultimately manifests itself in 1942 with the Vichy government in France, when they help the Nazis round-up all the Jews in France and send them to Auschwitz.

And it's at that time, in 1942, in the Petain, that the Jesuits were formally readmitted into France. That's the significance of the Dreyfus Affair.

Martin: And what is the significance of the Council of Trent in relation to all of these?

Phelps: The Council of Trent puts heretics—which us Bible-believers are, all Protestants and all Jews—puts all of us under more than 100 curses because of what we believe:

We believe in justification by faith.

"Accursed be all who believe in justification by faith."

We believe that Baptism is simply an outward sign of salvation, and that it is not necessary for salvation.

"Accursed be all those who believe that."

We believe that, when we eat of the Lord's supper, the bread and the wine are NOT the literal body and blood of Christ, as the Council of Trent teaches, therefore we are accursed because we do not believe in transubstantiation.

And we also believe that man has a right to his own judgment. He has a right to read the Bible and make his own decisions as to what it means; that the Bible should be in the language of the people, because this the foundation of freedom of conscience, freedom of speech, and freedom of the press.

All of these things in the 4th session of the Council of Trent are c o n d e m n e d , anybody who believes in: freedom of speech, and freedom of conscience, and freedom of the press.

So, those maxims of the Council of Trent are brought into The Protocols when The Protocols condemn freedom of conscience; they condemn freedom of the press; they condemn national governments and national sovereignty.

You see, Bible-believers, we believe in national sovereignty.

We do not believe in World Government.

We believe America should be governed by Americans.

We believe Japan should be governed by Japanese, etc.

We do not believe, we do not want, a European Union.

We do not want a combination of governments under Centralized Government.

We believe in national sovereignties, which is the reason why the South seceded and left the United States, because they wanted to set-up their own national sovereignty; it was a Protestant maxim upon which they acted.

Ok, so Trent effects The Protocols. Trent effects The Secrets Of The Elders Of Bourge-Fontaine. Trent effects The Secret Plan, written by Leone in 1848. And hence, now we have the doctrines of Communism effecting Marx and his Communist Manifesto, because Marx was tutored in the British Museum BY JESUITS.

Martin: Who was behind the Council of Trent, The Secret Plan, etc. Who were the men behind these, historically?

Phelps: Well, Diego Laynez went on to be the Jesuit General after Loyola; Laynez was the second Jesuit General. He was the MASTER-MIND of the Council of Trent. Laynez was a Jesuit by allegiance, and a Jew by race. This is very important. And it's the result of Laynez being a Jew, when this was brought to light in 1593, that the Order passed a statute that NO

Born at Ingolstadt, Germany, in the heart of Roman Catholic Bavaria, from which originated the Order's Thirty Years' War (1618-1648), Weishaupt was educated by the Jesuits. In 1775 he became a professor of the Vatican's murderous Canon Law, the evil Council of Trent. Since the Pope's Bull of Suppression was not enforced in Lutheran Germany, the Order flourished, as Weishaupt established the Illuminati in 1776 and joined the Grand Orient Masonic Lodge in 1777. He united the magnificent financial empire of the Masonic Jewish House of Rothschild with the opulence of the international and secret, anti-Jewish race, Gentile Society of Jesus.

Founder of the Illuminati, 1776

JEW COULD EVER BE IN THE JESUIT ORDER AGAIN. This is VERY important. This is why Weishaupt was not a Jew. It was against the constitutions of the Order for a Jew to be in the Order.

Martin: And what relation does Weishaupt have to all of this?

Phelps: Weishaupt was the promoter of the Illuminati, with the House of Rothschild, for the punishment of the Catholic monarchs of Europe, and the Pope, for suppressing the Jesuit Order.

So, Weishaupt did not act alone. Weishaupt was under the supervision, at least initially, of Jesuit General Ricci, who died in 1775 in Italy. Weishaupt was under orders.

Martin: Who is Jesuit General Roothaan?

Phelps: Jesuit General Roothaan was the General of the Society from the 1830s to the mid-1850s. Jesuit General Roothaan was the one who oversaw The Secret Plan At Chieri, of which Leone overheard and then wrote about.

Martin: So this is KEY to what we are talking about?

Phelps: Extremely key.

Martin: And who is Peter Beckx?

Phelps: Peter Beckx was the Jesuit General in the late 1800s and early 1900s. He was the one who gave the order and oversaw the sinking of the Titanic.

Martin: Let's talk about that now. Why have you drawn the historical conclusion that the Jesuits sank the Titanic?

Phelps: Because they benefited. And they were present, on site, on the ship, prior to it's sinking. When we have a powerful organization that is working together, such as the Jesuit Order, and the power that they had prior to their suppression, and that they had never changed, and they are still working toward a World Government under the Pope, we look for the Jesuit Order in these national crises that arise—and in this issue, the Titanic.

We must ask the question: Even though we can't place where they are at the moment, did the Jesuit Order benefit from this? And the answer is: Yes, they did.

They benefited because it paved the way for the establishment of the Federal Reserve Bank, which they own and control, by proxy, through the Knights of Malta, with their various trusts and so on. They never own anything outright; they always own it through a trusted third party.

How do we know that the Jesuits control the Federal Reserve Bank? Because the Federal Reserve Bank was used to finance the second "Thirty Years War"—from 1914 to 1945—in which everything that transpired fell out for the benefit of the Vatican, everything.

Then, of course, when we discover that the most powerful man in Ireland, the Jesuit Provincial Francis M. Browne, was on the Titanic taking pictures of all those who would be going down. And then, right before it departs Queenstown, Ireland, to set out for the North Sea, "the lucky priest departed off the ship" in the words of Martin Sheen, who narrated Secrets Of The Titanic.

It was more than luck; it was planned that way. Martin Sheen has been to the Jesuit Novitiate at St. Jacques, in Warnersville, Pennsylvania. Martin Sheen is a bosom buddy of the Jesuits.

The men who went down were wealthy Jews who were resisting the establishment of a centralized bank in America, particularly John Jacob Astor, who was a personal friend of Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis. And Brandeis greatly resisted the establishment of the central bank.

Martin: Astor, Guggenheim, and Straus were three Jewish men who went down with the Titanic. Why do you focus so much of your attention on Astor?

Phelps: Astor was the wealthiest Jew in the world, some say the wealthiest man in the world. But he was, most definitely, the wealthiest Jew. He did not have more money than the Pope. But he was the wealthiest man in the world and he was using his wealth NOT in accord with the Jesuit Order.

Now, later, his son, John Jacob Astor IV, became part of the money trust, which can be found on the Internet; and so the Jesuits had access, now, to the Astor fortune. They control it now. But, at that time, they got rid of Astor because they wanted his fortune, and they wanted to end his resistance to the establishment of a national bank. And they do this pursuant to The Secret Instructions, that they will take the fortunes of widows and other people who resist them.

And that is what they did in Eugene Sue's The Wandering Jew. That story revolves around a French Protestant family, the Renneponsts, and the Jesuits killing-off every member of the Rennepont family, so that they can have the fortune when it would be opened up at a certain day, at a certain time in Paris. And the man who held the fortune in trust was a Jew. So, that's why they got rid of Astor.

Martin: What was that quote from the movie JFK about the Titanic?

Phelps: I believe Oliver Stone was overseen by the Jesuits, who control Hollywood. And, therefore, a lot of the lines were authored by Jesuits.

One of the lines authored by the Jesuits was when Garrison was sitting at the table and he said: "People, we've got to start thinking differently. We've got to start thinking like the CIA. White is black, and black is white."

That is DIRECTLY from Ignatius Loyola's Spiritual Exercises. [Ignatius Loyola was the founder of the Jesuit Order in 1540.] When he tells the people that they believe the hierarchical Catholic Church and believe white is black and black is white, if the hierarchy says so. That's right out of the Spiritual Exercises.

Well then, when one of the associates, Bill, of Garrison's staff, is approached by an FBI agent, and the FBI agent is trying to win him over to their side, that FBI agent says: "There's going to be millions of people who are going to die. Besides, you've got to get away from Garrison. He's going down with the Titanic."

That is a clue, right there, that the same men who were behind the Kennedy assassination, attempting to frustrate Garrison's investigation, were the same men who sunk the Titanic.

Martin: I'm looking at the front-page headline from a little-known rag-sheet, and the current headline that I'm reading says: "Khazarian Zionists Are The Anti-Christ." Now, what can you explain to our readers about who might be behind such a headline, and what is the AGENDA of such a headline?

Colonel John Jacob Astor, 1912

Astor was a Jewish Freemason and the richest man in the world other than the Roman Papal Caesar in the Vatican Palace.

Secrets Of The Titanic, (National Geographic, 1986) Video, 60 minutes.

[Editor's note: Some of you readers who may be familiar with the publication should know that Rick is referring to the June 13, 2001 issue of the CONTACT newspaper.]

Phelps: We know that the Jesuits, in their agendas, hate the Jews.

And you add: "Eric, you say that the Jesuits set up Zionist Israel."

The Jesuits control the Masonic Jewish Zionists who control Zionist Israel. They HATE the Jewish race. And when I speak of Jews, I'm not speaking of Judaism. I'm not speaking of their evil religion, that openly and notoriously rejects Jesus as the Messiah; even Josephus realized Jesus was the Messiah.

I'm talking about the RACE. And when I'm speaking of the Jewish race, I'm speaking of the descendants of Jacob, through his 12 sons, and their physical descendants. That's what I mean when I speak of the Jews.

Many, many Orthodoxes today believe there is no such thing as the Jewish race. They are in error about that, because in Romans IX, X, & XI, it speaks specifically about the Jewish race, that Christ was a Jew; that Christ spoke in John, Chapter IV, we know whom we worship for salvation is of the Jews.

So, he identified himself as a Jew. The Apostle Paul identified himself as a Hebrew of Hebrews, an Israelite, etc. So the terms Jew, Israelite, and Hebrew are all synonymous terms; they are the physical, racial descendants of Jacob. And, therefore, the Abraham covenant and promises apply to them, and they have not been fulfilled to this day. They are in the great diaspora—they are in the great dispersion.

And so, Satan, not wanting them to inherit these promises, has set-out to destroy the Jewish race any way he possibly can. And his greatest tool in the destruction of the Jewish

Jesuit "Father" Francis M. Browne, 1912
Provincial of the Irish Province of The Society of Jesus

Secrets Of The Titanic, (National Geographic, 1986) Video, 60 minutes.

race is the Jesuit Order.

Martin: Are you saying that this headline that I just read to you has an agenda behind it?

Phelps: Absolutely.

Martin: And what is that agenda?

Phelps: The agenda is to create world-wide anti-Jewish fury, in every nation of the world, so as to drive all the Jews back to Israel for their final annihilation when the Jesuits bring in the armies of the Earth and when the anti-Christ, the risen Pope, brings in the armies of the Earth in his last, mad attempt to destroy all of the Jews, so that they cannot inherent the promises given to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Martin: If there is an intelligence community behind this publication, it's easy enough to draw the conclusion, from what you're saying, that the Jesuits, who control the intelligence community, would be specifically behind this agenda to foment hate and agitation against the Jewish race.

Phelps: Absolutely. Especially the American Jews, because there are more American Jews, here in this country, than there are in Israel. And one of their agendas in the next 10-20 years is to create anti-Jewish fury, and to drive the American Jews back to Israel, killing millions of them, as well, here, because they're planning to bring their Roman Catholic Fascist dictator to power—just like they did with Hitler in Germany; just like they did with Stalin in Russia; just like they did with Franco in Spain; just like they did with Mussolini in Italy. They have the same exact agenda here. They're going to do it through the Republican, "New Right" party, of which George Bush is now the head.

Martin: At one point, you made a comment privately concerning the Right-Wing militia movement possibly being influenced with another agenda. Can you talk about that?

I'll just say up-front that this is going to strike at the heart of many people's belief system. And some may have difficulty with what you say.

Phelps: The Right-Wing militia groups—the posse comitatus, etc., Ku Klux Klan, the Minutemen, they all have one thing in common: they all hate the Jews. That puts up a flag for me. And if they all hate the Jews, that tells me that they have been imbibed, or indoctrinated, with hatred for the Jews. They all hate the Jews; and as an aside, so do the Black Moslems [Muslims]. Louis Farrakhan openly hands-out The Protocols Of The Learned Elders Of Zion and blames all our problems, and all the Black man's problems, on the Jews.

So, the Right-Wing posse comitatus groups are all controlled by the Jesuits because they are all anti-Jew, and THEY HAVE NOTHING TO SAY ABOUT THE JESUIT ORDER. NOTHING!

Martin: Wouldn't you say that most of the groups just don't have a clue about the Jesuit Order?

Phelps: Not their leadership. A lot of these groups have Catholics in them. There's not a Catholic around who doesn't know the power of the Jesuit Order, in their educational power, and the power of government.

We have Drinin in Congress; we have McLaughlin who was writing speeches for Nixon for $35,000 a year. We have Jesuits all throughout the government. There's not any intelligent Roman Catholic who's involved in these Right-Wing Movements who doesn't know the power of the Jesuits.

THEY DON'T WANT TO TALK ABOUT THEM. JUST LIKE THE PRESS WON'T TALK ABOUT THEM.

So, this Timothy McVeigh thing—is that what we're leading to?

Martin: Well, no, but go ahead.

Phelps: This Timothy McVeigh thing—here's another Irish Roman Catholic sacrificed, just like Kennedy, for the sake of attempting to create a national backlash or agitation against the Right-Wing Movement people, because a lot of the Right-Wing Movement people are true patriots who want their liberty; they want to maintain their guns; they want freedom to educate their children as they wish; they're decent people, but they are not aware that the leadership is controlled by the Vatican.

So, the Jesuits in control of Clinton fomented the Oklahoma City bombing to justify going after these Right-Wing, conservative, many of them Bible-believing, people in this movement, for their round-up and extermination. But it didn't quite work.

So, they imploded the building. They got rid of Timothy McVeigh. That whole execution could have been stayed with one phone call from the Archbishop of New York to the Bishop of Oklahoma City, and he wouldn't do it.

That was the purpose of the Oklahoma City bombing, the creation of anti-Right-Wing feeling. And the people at the top, controlling the Right-Wing organizations, will betray their own people, just exactly as the White Russians were betrayed during the Communist Revolution from 1917-1922.

Their own leadership will betray them—just as Hitler betrayed his armies to the East, cut-off supplies, would not allow them to take Moscow, froze them in the snows of Russia; just as Napoleon betrayed his armies in the East, abandoned 250,000 men; that's exactly what's going to be done to our Right-Wing patriotic people who are the only bulwark against tyranny in this country today.

Martin: We're almost to the present day. But, before we get to the present day, let's stop for a minute, once again, and talk about JFK's assassination. I'm going to mention a few names, and then let's talk about the Jesuit influence behind that assassination and the reasons why.

John McCone, head of the CIA; Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York; Henry Luce; Carthe DeLouche; and E. Howard Hunt. Why are these names important? What are their relationships? And WHY would you point the finger at someone like the Archbishop of New York, Cardinal Spellman, of all people, to place the responsibility for the JFK assassination directly at the Vatican? How can you justify that?

Phelps: We know we're looking at a conspiracy, so we ask the question, again: Who benefits? Who benefited from the death of JFK? Well, we know, according to the works of the great Fletcher Prouty, JFK was going to end the Vietnam War in 1965. We also know that JFK was going to end the reign of the CIA, and all of their military, covert operations were going to be handed-over to the Army Chiefs of Staff. Therefore, the CIA benefited, and those who wanted the Vietnam War benefited.

Cardinal Spellman, Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem, Knight of Malta and Press Lord Henry Luce, 1960

President Diem, backed by the controlled Press of Henry Luce, was Spellman's Crusader during the Vietnam War, while his brother was the Cardinal's Grand Inquisitor, the Chief of the Secret Police. Diem, Jesuit-trained in an American Catholic University, was a fascist and greatly persecuted the Buddhists for which he was ultimately murdered. Spellman sought to continue the Black Pope's crusade; Kennedy attempted to end it. Three weeks after Diem's death, President Kennedy was assassinated and the Vietnam War raged for over ten years. Spellman, calling American troops "the soldiers of Christ" (the Pope), killed over two million "heretics". The Jesuits' Federal Reserve Bank extended $220 billion in credit created out of "thin air" to the U.S. Congress. The Papal Caesar's CIA/KGB Intelligence Community was perfected, and the Italian Roman Catholic Mafia Dons got their massive drug trade, further destroying our Protestant civilization and government. In this picture alone we see the POWER and the motive to kill President John F. Kennedy.

Luce And His Empire, W. A. Swanberg (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1972).

We now must ask the question: Who wanted the Vietnam War? Well, we know that many factions did, but we see, openly and in our face, Cardinal Spellman wanted the Vietnam War. Cardinal Spellman's man in Vietnam was Diem. Diem was a fascist Roman Catholic, persecuting the Buddhists. And his brother was head of the Secret Police. So, Diem was Cardinal Spellman's man in Vietnam. Diem was assassinated because Kennedy withdrew the CIA representative out of Saigon.

The other thing is, Cardinal Spellman, throughout the Vietnam War, would travel over there at the war-front and he'd call the soldiers the "soldiers of Christ", according to Avro Manhattan, in his great work Vietnam: Why Did We Go? So, Cardinal Spellman wanted the Vietnam War, and if Cardinal Spellman wanted the Vietnam War, the Pope wanted the Vietnam War, and if the Pope wanted the Vietnam War, the Black Pope wanted the Vietnam War, the Jesuit General.

Martin: Who was?

Phelps: Jean Baptiste Janssens. He died in 1964. From 1964 to 1983 or so, it was Pedro Arrupe.

Martin: So you're saying that Janssens had an agenda.

Phelps: Jean Baptist Janssens had an agenda, and that agenda was to annihilate as many Buddhists as possible, because the Buddhists have always been the enemies of the Jesuits. When the Jesuits took Japan in 1873, what did they do? They outlawed, they made it so that the government of Japan would not support the Buddhist religion anymore. Buddhism has ceased to be the state religion. So they've always been the enemy of the Buddhists.

The other thing about the Vietnam War is that it created a $220 billion dollar debt for the American people, and that debt was incurred by the Congress, who borrowed that money from the Jesuits' Federal Reserve Bank.

So the Jesuits made big money. They killed lots of "heretics". They preserved the CIA.

Because, remember: the CIA was initially founded and set-up by one particular man, Reinhard Gehlen, who was a Nazi General, who was Hitler's most sinister General. And so, he incorporated all of the Nazi intelligence apparatus into the CIA in the West. It was also incorporated into the KGB in the East. They were called "Freedom Fighters"; they were really working for the KGB, these SS, Nazi men. If the Jesuit General controlled the KGB, he controls the CIA.

Kennedy was getting in the way. Kennedy also did not want the voucher system for public schools, of which George Bush is a great promoter. The Vatican wants the American taxpayer to pay for Catholic schools because, remember, Roman Catholicism, left to itself, without government support, crumbles. It has nothing to offer. There is no freedom of speech, no freedom of press.

THE CATHOLIC PEOPLE DON'T OWN ONE SQUARE FOOT OF CHURCH PROPERTY. THEY DON'T OWN ONE BRICK OF THEIR CHURCHES. IT'S ALL OWNED BY THE HEIRARCHY.

They are simply to obey their hierarchy, and in America that's not good enough. Catholic people don't want that in America. Catholic people, for the most part, enjoy freedom of press, and freedom of speech, and freedom to make a profit; all of those things the Vatican does not want. A case in point is all of South America and Central America.

Martin: Well, why do you think—other than the fact that there have been 100-200 people killed who knew anything about the JFK assassination—why do you think it's never come out?

Phelps: Because the American branch of the Knights of Malta, of which McCone was a member, Henry Luce was a member, William F. Buckley was a member, Lee Iacocca was a member, Cartha DeLoach of the FBI was a member, etc. They control the press! And they controlled CBS, at that time, with a man named Frank Shakespeare, who was a Knight of Malta. The Knights control ABC, CBS, and NBC, and Time/Life; that's why Time/Life attempted to destroy the Zapruder film.

I might also add, throughout the publication of "The Black Pope" interview we did back in May 2000, and my first two manuscripts since that time, there has not been one Roman Catholic who has emailed me, or attempted to contact me in any way, denying that Cardinal Spellman did this; not one. But we have several clandestine Jesuits who are in complete agreement, and who admit that this is exactly what was done.

Martin: Let me ask you about Opus Dei. We've been accused of hiding Opus Dei in the background as being the real power behind the Vatican, and therefore, the power over the Jesuits. Have we conspired to withhold the mention of Opus Dei in our discussions?

Phelps: No. Opus Dei is a subordinate organization to the Pope, who is in control of the Knights of Malta, and therefore there are Knights of Malta in Opus Dei.

The Jesuits control Opus Dei through the hierarchy of the Pope and through the Knights of Malta. Opus Dei is composed of prominent Roman Catholic businessmen and politicians who have given themselves over to "God's work"—that's what Opus Dei means—for

Jean-Baptiste Janssens
Twenty-Seventh Superior General of the Society of Jesus
1946 - 1964

This Black Pope, during the Cold War waged against the world's "heretics" and "liberals" pursuant to the evil Council of Trent, controlled the CIA in the West and the KGB in the East. He gave the order to execute President Kennedy for attempting to end the Papal Caesar's Cold War, including the war in Vietnam, before the Inquisition's International Intelligence Community had been completed and perfected.

The Saturday Evening Post, "The Pope's Commandos", Ernest O. Hauser, January 17, 1959.

making the Pope the Universal Monarch of the world, ruling the world from Solomon's rebuilt temple in Jerusalem.

An example of this is the former head of the FBI, Louis Freeh, was a member of Opus Dei.

And so, we now understand the Waco incident, where those White Protestants were killed; it was the work of the Opus Dei. And we also have to remember that the sharpshooter, one of them there, was a Japanese Roman Catholic, Lon Horiuchi.

But Opus Dei is determined to create a World Government under the Pope. Opus Dei was created in the 20th Century, whereas the Knights of Malta were created in the 11th Century, and the Jesuits were created in the 16th Century, in 1540, with Ignatius Loyola.

So, the super-secret society of the Jesuit Order, in control of the Knights of Malta, were in existence nearly 500 years before Opus Dei. Opus Dei, like the Knights of Columbus, is a subordinate organization to the Jesuit Order.

Martin: Ok, now that we have some of these things put temporarily to rest—until the book comes out!—let's talk about the present day.

There are a few things happening that everyone needs to be aware of and concerned about. I'll just mention a few countries, and then we can begin: Israel, Cuba, China, North Africa, and Japan. What's happening with our relationship with these countries? How are we going to be sucked-in to a conflict? And what are the ramifications going to be? Lines in the sand are being drawn, alliances are being created between powerful nations, and why should we be concerned about that?

That's a big question.

Phelps: That's a big question. I'll try to deal with a piece at a time, if I may.

I'm going to start with the 14th Amendment American Empire that was established in 1868 after the Jesuit Order destroyed the Federal Republic or the Confederate Republic of sovereign nation states that Washington established in 1789.

The Jesuits have used the 14th Amendment American Empire to restore the temporal power of the Pope over all nations around the world for the last 100 years. And that's why they have garrisoned American troops throughout the world. That's why they have laid upon us an iniquitous and sinful federal income tax, with which they finance these crusades around the world.

So, their American Empire has served them well in the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope around the world, especially over Orthodox Russia, Buddhist China, Buddhist Japan, South and Central America through the CIA; this is the purpose for the British and America Empires. They used the British Empire in the 19th Century to do this, and they used the American Empire in the 20th Century to do this. So they take the most powerful Protestant empires, and the wealthiest, harness their governments, and use such for their own purposes.

Alright, now that America has been used for its purpose, it is time to destroy it. And we must remember that America is the haven for the Jews of the world, which the Jesuits have accursed; it is the haven for Bible-believing Protestants, called "heretics", who the Jesuits have accursed; and it is the haven for peoples of many, many different races who simply want to have some liberty in life, which are called "liberals", which the Jesuits have accursed.

The United States is a refugee nation, made up of many, many nationalities now. We are no longer a White, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant nation, as we were. We are composed of a host of different nationalities, with a host of religious beliefs, and thus this nation has been fragmented and agitated and is a disconcerted mess, with no real national purpose anymore.

The Jesuits have fired-up the Negro agitation of the Civil Rights Movement. They continue to fire that up with Hollywood, with such movies as Roots, etc.

They don't tell the whole story of Malcolm X. He was an agitator to begin with. When he came back from Mecca, he changed his story and denounced the Nation of Islam, along with the Ku Klux Klan, stating that "they both had the same paymasters". And he was absolutely right. They have agitated and broken apart this country, so we have no more national purpose.

The next thing that they've done, they've disarmed us. They've closed-down over 100 military bases. We have no domestic defense. The foreigners, the Mexicans come across the borders by the thousands, and the major corporations hire them, and they do their work for them, which is all illegal. It should be punished by law. But we have no punishment by law in this country anymore.

So we have the reign of crime. We have all of these illegal immigrants. We have the destruction of the White race. When this nation ceases to be White, it will cease to be great, because there is not a nation in the world that's a nation of color that can compete on the international scale of business and trade and commerce; they can't do it.

A nation that was once White, but is now a nation of color, is Cuba. Cuba used to be a prosperous, beautiful place, but now, with all the amalgamation and inter-racial marriage, it's 95% Black; it's under a Roman Catholic, Jesuit-trained Dictator named Fidel Castro; and it is a miserable place to live. And that is EXACTLY what this country is going to be like if it continues on the track it is now on.

The Jesuits have determined to destroy this American Empire that they have used for the last 100 years. So what they are doing now is, they are going to break apart the Empire.

And how are they doing this? Well, one of the things they've done is they've created this issue where an American submarine hit this Japanese fishing boat, killing all the Japanese on the boat, I believe, and the skipper was court-martialed. But nonetheless, it was a deliberate act of murder, because with that kind of technology on a submarine, you just don't hit a boat. And you just don't have some civilian driving the submarine either. That's ridiculous. So they are creating agitations with nations like Japan, with this incident.

They're creating deliberate agitation with nations like China, with the bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade. They're creating agitations with China, Japan, which will ultimately result in Japan and China uniting. With the military power of China, with the economic power of Japan—when already Hong Kong has been given to China, which now, because of that financial might, China is able to take control of the Panama Canal; they control the canal locks through Hutchen Wimpoo, a Chinese corporation. They are now building the largest shipping dock in the world in the Bahamas, owned by the Red Chinese. The Red Chinese now have the Long Beach Naval Station, which is now Cosco.

So they are in a position now to be able to establish a beach-head when they invade.

The thing is: Does China have the fleet to do it? No, China doesn't have the fleet right now to do it, but Russia does. Russia has the largest merchant marine fleet in the world. And we are very much deceived into thinking that China and Russia are enemies. They are not enemies; they work together. They are controlled by the same Jesuit Order. The Jesuits run Peking; they also run Moscow. They run the dictator of China and they run the dictator of Russia. It doesn't matter who he is. It doesn't matter what their names are. The Jesuits control them, and if they resist them, they're out! Just like in the United States.

So, they're breaking apart the American Empire. They're creating a huge coalition of Oriental nations for our invasion.

Now, let's talk about Africa. There are 700,000, as I understand it, Chinese troops in Somalia. Chuck Colson, one of the conspirators in the Kennedy assassination and the Watergate cover-up, is now the false Bible-believer, the false Protestant. He's working for the Jesuits because the head of his prison fellowship is a Roman Catholic.

Colson now is being used to try to get an American military force into the Sudan to save these Black Christians, who in fact are Black Roman Catholics. If that is accomplished, if that is done, we are now going to have a large military force in the Sudan, and there's a large military force in Somalia. What do you think it would take for those two military forces to clash?

And if those military forces clash, we will have an escalation in Africa, which I believe is what the Jesuits want. Because, if that happens, there can be a surgical strike into Jerusalem for the blowing-up of the Dome of the Rock. The Moslems, the Muftis, have known that was the intent of the Zionists for years, the blowing of the Dome of the Rock, so that Solomon's Temple can be rebuilt. And you can find this information in Pierre van Paassen's great work, written in 1939, called Days Of Our Years. So, with this coalition with the 14th Amendment American forces against the Chinese forces in Africa, this could happen.

Now, what would happen as a result of the destruction of the Dome of the Rock? Well, the Moslems regard the Dome of the Rock as the third most important holy place in their religion. They would call for a Jihad against "The Great Satan", the United States. And with a Jihad, a Holy War, against the United States, they would then go across Africa to West Africa. There will probably be a coalition of ships ready at that time, to be ferried across the Atlantic Ocean into Cuba.

And Cuba will be the landing base, the staging base for the invasion of the Protestant American South, the last real Protestant bastion of liberty in the world.

Remember: according to the Koran, it is no murder to kill a Christian; in fact, it is a virtuous act.

So, here we'd have all of these Moslem troopers, millions of Moslem troopers will be landing in Miami, landing in New Orleans, landing in the South of the United States, coupled with a Cuban military force, coupled with, probably, also a Chinese military force coming from the West Coast, and coming up through the Panama Canal to unite with them in the attack of the American South. With the blood bath that will ensue, this whole coalition of nations: China, Russia, Cuba, the Arabs, they will carry out the destruction and annihilation of this North American population, WHICH INCLUDES CANADA; it definitely includes Canada.

It is for this reason, because the government is controlled by the Jesuits, the government of the United States is seeking our total disarmament and the abolition of all gun ownership. This is why the Jesuit Conference, for years, has been anti-gun-ownership, meaning handguns, rifles, and shotguns.

So, to have the American people completely disarmed, our military cut way down, we have no Navy any more, really, to speak of; we have no Army—it's a totally demoralized Army, with this forced integration; and we have Black supremacy in the Army.

I was there, in Germany, for 3 years. I watched it with my own eyes. So, we have a demoralized American Army that doesn't know what to fight.

Martin: Let me just jump-in here to say that Bush is beefing-up the military, reversing what was done previously by Clinton. How can you say we have a weak Army when we're about to spend billions beefing up our defenses? Is this just a show?

Phelps: That's just a show. Because the Jesuits who controlled Clinton are the same Jesuits who control Bush. And remember, we were already scaling-down with Carter and Reagan and Ford.

And so, this whole idea of re-armament, it might be for some super-system of preventing missiles from coming in, an anti-ballistic missile system, but that's ridiculous, because we know there is no such thing as universal nuclear war. We have no evidence that incoming nukes can detonate a specific target.

We don't know EXACTLY what transpired at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, but they have contorted that into the hoax of thermo-nuclear war, which I do not believe can happen. Bruce Cathie doesn't believe it can happen; William Cooper doesn't believe it can happen; and other physicists don't believe it can happen. Other physicists don't believe it's possible, which now limits us to a standing army of men who know how to fight, which we do not have. We don't have it anymore.

So, with all of these hordes of invaders coming in, and a disarmed population, it would be a piece of cake. Remember that Spain was invaded by 4 million Moslem troopers. They landed in the Canary Islands, and from the Canary Islands they then invaded Spain, and they were led by a Roman Catholic Archbishop who was backing Franco! This is in the 1930s.

If they did it in the '30s, won't they do it now? And if they used Moslems to kill Orthodox Serbians just recently, in the 1990s, wouldn't they use Moslems to kill Protestant Americans? If they used Moslems to kill Roman Catholic Spanish, wouldn't they do the same thing here? Sure they would. So that's what is happening in the United States.

Martin: What just happened in Europe with Bush going over there and theoretically being given a hard time by the European community? What do you see happening in Europe right now?

Phelps: Well, not believing the press is our first maxim of reading.

Remember, a unified Europe is a Vatican brainchild. That all originated with the Jesuits in the Vatican for the reuniting of the Holy Roman Empire, which our friend Leo Lehmann said is exactly what the Jesuits wanted in 1942—a reunited Holy Roman Empire with a Catholic Germany at it's core.

Martin: And you base all of your conclusions just on this one person?

Phelps: No, no, no, no—this is a certain topic, and he adds to the color we're given.

Martin: I know that, but I asked the question that way because not all of our readers will be aware of the extent of the bibliography supporting the contentions of your research in VATICAN ASSASSINS.

Phelps: Ok. The Jesuits want a unified Europe. The Bible-believers of England are greatly resisting it, but the Jesuit-controlled Tony Blair will, ultimately, bring England into that Union. And Bush is helping to co-ordinate that, because the Federal Reserve Bank, the largest bank in the world, is one of the greatest contributors, or players, in international trading.

Martin: Are you saying that Alan Greenspan is a pawn of the Jesuit Order?

Phelps: Absolutely. Alan Greenspan is a Masonic Jewish Zionist and a pawn of the Jesuit Order. And the Jesuits are very careful to have visible Jews at the head of the Federal Reserve System so they can blame all the evils of the Federal Reserve Bank on the Jews.

We're never told, for example, that the head, right now, of the most powerful Federal Reserve Bank—because there are 12 of them—in New York is a man named McDonough. He's an Irish Roman Catholic. He's a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. He's a friend, a bosom-buddy of O'Hare, who is the President and Jesuit of the 4th Vow of Fordham University.

Why are we not told that about the Federal Reserve Bank? It's always Jews, Jews, Jews. Jews are just pawns. They've always been the bankers for the Pope. The Masonic Jewish bankers are the bankers for the Pope. And before the Rothschilds, it was the Fuggers.

Martin: Who are the College of Cardinals who choose the Pope?

Phelps: The College of Cardinals is REALLY the Roman Senate. The Pope is really the Caesar. And so this military Caesar is elected by Roman Senators, as to who will be their leader for World Government under the 7th Roman Caesar, who's yet to come. And so, the ones who do the electing are the Cardinals.

Martin: Now, those who see the current Pope see a very frail man. Has he served well? Is that why he's been allowed to stay on so long?

Phelps: He's done very well. He's served the Jesuit Order perfectly. This supposed rift between him and Arrupe, and suppressing the Jesuits with their Liberation Theology in Central America, is all for public consumption. That Pope is completely emasculated with regard to the power of the Jesuit Order.

The Jesuit Order has proven its power with the Napoleonic Wars, the killing of Pope Pius VI, the imprisoning of Pius VII, the restoration by Pius VII.

THE JESUIT ORDER IS OMNIPOTENT WHEN IT COMES TO THE PAPACY, AND THEY ARE THE ONES IN POWER.

Just like Hitler fashioned his Third Reich around the Papacy, the Secret Police or the SS were modeled after the Jesuits, and the Jesuits ARE the Secret Police of the Vatican Empire. They keep things in order. Without the Jesuit Order, the Vatican and the Papacy and the hierarchy would fall apart.

Martin: Who issued the Papal Bull suppressing the Jesuit Order?

Phelps: Pope Clement XIV.

Martin: Let's talk about that.

Phelps: Pope Clement XIV was a Franciscan. His name was Ganganelli. He was elected Pope due to the influence of the Bourbon monarchs—the Bourbon King of Spain, the Bourbon King of France, and the Braganzas of Portugal. Those insisted that a Pope would be brought to power who would suppress the Jesuit Order, because the Jesuits were busy making billions in South America, and never gave a dime to the Portuguese King and the Spanish King.

Martin: How were they making money in South America?

Phelps: They were making money in South America with their Reductions.

Martin: What are Reductions?

Phelps: Reductions are like communes; they're like a Kibbutz in Israel or a commune in Russia.

Martin: And what years are we talking about.

Phelps: We're talking between 1600-1750, roughly 150 years of these Reductions, where these Garani Indians were putting hides and tallow and clocks and the Paraguay herb and many, many commodities into international shipping and trade—which the Jesuits shipped all around the world with their "Black Ships", and had HUGE commercial profits with which they started banks in Europe and then funded wars. And one of the projects that they funded were the Napoleonic Wars.

Martin: This Pope, Ganganelli, suppressed the Jesuits with a Papal Bull?

Phelps: That's right. Dominus Ac Redemptor. That was the Bull. That is its formal name.

Martin: What is a Bull?

Phelps: A Bull is a legal document that the Pope speaks within his most powerful method of speaking. It's sealed with "the seal of the fishman". A "brief" does not have that seal. A brief is a less powerful document; it can be overruled with a Bull.

Martin: So, this Pope, in 1773, issued the Bull eliminating the Jesuit Order forever?

Phelps: Forever! After a 4-year investigation of all their intrigues, of all their power, of all their wealth, of all their buildings, everything, after a 4-year investigation they were abolished by Clement XIV. And, remember, Clement XIII was about to do the same thing when, the night before, he was poisoned.

So, Clement XIV was brought to power then and, after a 4-year investigation, he suppresses them. And when he did so, he said: "This suppression will be my death."

Martin: And it was.

Phelps: And it was—14 months later, he died. He was poisoned by the Jesuits with a poison called Aquetta.

It's a slow poison that caused his intestines to have terrible, terrible pain. And when he was embalmed, the intestines exploded and they could not have an open-casket for viewing this Pope. The flesh fell off of his fingers; his fingernails turned black; his skin turned black; all his hair fell out; so they decided they could not have an open display of the Pope in his garb. So they had a closed casket.

Martin: So, this Papal Bull, which was a PERMANENT dismantling of the Jesuit Order, was later overruled?

Phelps: Right.

Martin: Now, how can a permanent disbanding of the Order be overruled at all?

Phelps: The Jesuits came out and said this was not a Bull. Even though, according to Thompson in his Footprints Of The Jesuits, and according to the Cusack's The Black Pope, even though they said it was a Bull, and Thompson said it was in the Library of the Bulls in Rome, even though it's a Bull, the Jesuits came out and said it was a brief. And, therefore, Pope Pius VII, upon their restoration, he instituted a Bull restoring the Jesuits, which "overruled the brief". That's what they teach.

BUT THE FACT IS, THEIR SUPPRESSION

WAS A BULL, AND THEIR [contrived] RESTORATION WAS A BULL.

Martin: Ok, we're jumping all over the place here, but we're just going to go with the flow. How did the Jesuits, in England, issue their instructions to the Queen? Where is their seat of power in England, specifically?

Phelps: I believe their seat of power in England is Stonyhurst University. An English Lord, Thomas Well, gives Stoneyhurst to the Jesuits in, I believe, 1795—about the time of the French Revolution and just before the Napoleonic Wars.

Stonyhurst became their seat, their fortress from which they would control England. And they were brought into England and helped at that by King George III. King George was the bosom-buddy of the Jesuits. And the English monarchs have been their bosom-buddy ever since. King George reigned for quite a few years; I believe he reigned for nearly 40 years. And Victoria enjoyed the very same thing; she ruled from 1837-1901.

So, through the rule of George and Victoria, they completely controlled England through Stonyhurst. Today they run England through the Royal Institute for International Affairs. And the Cardinal, who they rule through, is the Archbishop of Westminster.

So, they have the Archbishop of Westminster in England, and they have the Archbishop of New York in the United States. They rule England through Stonyhurst. They rule the United States through Georgetown and Fordham. They rule England through the Royal Institute for International Affairs. They rule the United States through the Council on Foreign Relations.

It's an identical system in both countries because it is an Empire. It is a Vatican Empire. That's how they rule.

In Russia, they rule Moscow through the Patriarch of the Armenian Church. So, the Patriarch is like the Archbishop in London and New York. And it's the Patriarch, there in Moscow, who oversees the KGB and the inquisition there, called the gulag. Agagianian was the Patriarch who was appointed a Cardinal by Pope Pius XII, the very same year, 1946, that Cardinal Spellman was made Cardinal for the American Empire.

Martin: How does the Mafia figure into all of this?

Phelps: The Mafia is run by Italian Roman Catholics, Sicilians primarily. And the Mafia takes care of all organized crime. They took care of the booze, before it was legalized. They took care of prostitution, the drug running, gun running, all the crime is organized by the Vatican, through the Mafia families—the five Mafia families of New York.

It's interesting that the Mafia Commission out of New York is in the same location, and not far from, the Archbishop of New York. So the Archbishop is very close to his mob bosses.

Spellman used his mob bosses in the invasion of Sicily, using Lucky Luciano, called Operation Underworld. Here's Spellman working with Lucky Luciano for a "successful Naval invasion" of Sicily, for which reason he is influential and causes the release of Lucky Luciano in 1946 to go back to Italy. So we have the relationship of Cardinal Spellman and the mob. And if Cardinal Spellman had that power, every Cardinal afterward has the same power. They don't lose any power.

Now, one of the most obvious connections between the Archbishop of New York and the mob is Frank Sinatra. Frank Sinatra was a good bosom friend with Gambino. Gambino was murdered with a vaccination, with a flu shot. They wanted him out of the way, so they murdered him with a flu shot. Frank Sinatra was also a Knight of Malta, who is subject, then, to the Archbishop of New York. So, you have the Archbishop controlling the Knights of Malta. Frank Sinatra is one of them, and Frank Sinatra is a good friend of a mafia don.

Martin: Let's talk about Princess Diana. Do you think the Jesuits were behind her take-out?

Phelps: Absolutely, because the Jesuits control the British Secret Service.

Martin: Let's talk about Princess Diana. Why was she a threat to the Jesuits?

Phelps: She was a threat in that if she had married a Moslem, Dodi Fayed, that would have overturned the Throne of England, because she still had rights through her children. Because her sons would one day occupy the British throne, and if she is alive with a Moslem Prince as a husband, we have a problem in England. Because everybody knows that the Queen Mother, really, has a lot of control over the King. And there would have been an Islamic, Arab influence on the Queen, who would influence her son, who would be King, who is now Prince.

Martin: So you think that the powers that be, within the Jesuit Order, knew that she was pregnant with Dodi's child?

Phelps: I believe so; and that's why they got rid of her—absolutely. And they sent a message to all the other British nobility by saying: "If you do this, we're going to do the same thing to you." Furthermore, they buried her in the cemetery, on the Windsor property, where only dogs are buried. She's buried with dogs.

Martin: What kind of symbolism is that?

Phelps: Because she was a "Moslem dog" in their eyes.

Martin: In the recent June, 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM, we shared an article from Sherman Skolnick in which he not only mentions the Jesuits, but he talks about the incredible financial influence, and power, and control in California and elsewhere by the Japanese Mafia, called the Yakuza. Is there any relationship between the Yakuza and the Jesuits?

Phelps: Absolutely. The Jesuits control the Yakuza. To understand this, we have to go back in the history of Japan. Japan had, wonderfully and righteously, expelled the Jesuits from their Empire around 1619, give or take a few years. The Jesuits were forbidden to ever enter Japan!

The Japanese, then, kicked-out the Portuguese; they kicked-out the Spanish. The only ones who could ever trade with Japan were the Dutch, the Protestant Dutch. Well, when the Jesuits were beginning to get control of our country, they got control of Polk. And Polk was responsible for the sending of Commodore Perry to Japan.

Martin: What year?

Phelps: 1853-1854. He then opens up Japan to international trade. So now "foreigners" can enter into Japan. Foreigners then began an agitation and a revolution in Japan. The reigning Emperor of Japan, who was a young man about 35, wanted to get rid of the Jesuits and these foreign powers, so he was assassinated.

According to Ryu Ohta, my friend in Japan, the Japanese had been taught that he was killed by Sassoon House—the Jews. But the Emperor was really killed by the Jesuits, because the son of this Emperor later went on to rule Japan from 1873 to 1912, and this Emperor was the grandfather to Hirohito.

This Emperor was a young boy at the time he came to power. He ruled for all those years. The Jesuits during that time dis-established the Buddhists as a state religion, and made tremendous inroads in power in Japan, controlling the Dynasty, because they were going to use Japan to foment a war with the United States for the purpose of eliminating as much Buddhism as they could from the Far East, and weakening the American Protestants, and many other purposes, such as killing off Protestant missionaries in the Far East—whereas the Japanese Army never persecuted the Catholic missionaries. And this is according to the Jesuits' own magazine America, written and published in 1943 or 1944.

This is where the Jesuits got their power over the Emperor, and thus the Yakuza. So now, the Jesuits have that power, they maintain that power. They maintained power over Hirohito. And thus, they have power over the Yakuza today, in Japan and California.

Martin: There was a book written many years ago called Tai Pan. Now, would a Tai Pan, symbolically, be the equivalent of the Black Pope?

Phelps: Sure. It's a Secret Society. It's a Japanese Secret Society that really rules.

Martin: Theoretically they would rule independently.

Phelps: They rule together with the Monarch.

Martin: Which would be the real Black Pope?

Phelps: The Black Pope. Remember, the Black Pope is in control of the Monarch of Japan.

Martin: We need to explain to our readers that the Jesuit Order is NOT a religious order, it is a MILITARY ORDER.

Phelps: It is a military order. When they dawn religious garb to get into a country to talk about Christ and God and so forth, they really want to capture the power and wealth of every country, to submit every country to the temporal, Earthly, political power of the Pope.

Martin: I don't want to get too far off-subject here, but would you say "As with the Jews, so with the Yakuza"?

Phelps: Correct. As with the Masonic Jewish Zionists, so with the Masonic Yakuza. They're all Masonic. Masonry unites all religions into one.

Martin: And behind the scenes the Jesuits are pulling the strings?

Phelps: Pulling the strings because they wrote all of the Masonic rites.

Martin: For our Masonic scholars out there, on what do you base that?

Phelps: We know that, according to several citations I reference in the book VATICAN ASSASSINS, the Jesuits wrote the first 25 degrees of the Scottish Rite Freemasonry, from the College of Clermont, which was changed to the College of Louis LeGrand, in Paris, France.

Martin: What year?

Phelps: 1754. That is a fact. The Jesuits wrote those rites.

Martin: Do you have any names behind that?

Phelps: Oh, I believe Chevalier Ramsey was, Chevalier de Bonneville was one. Remember the Bonneville automobile, and Pontiac? Those were Jesuits. And we have Adam Weishaupt, who was a Jesuit, who was a Mason. And it was the Rothschild Luciferians. So we have many dovetails of the Jesuits being Freemasons.

And we know, according to our hero Alberto Rivera, that Pedro Arrupe was a Mason, and Pedro Arrupe was a Jesuit General. Pedro Arrupe was a Mason AND in the Communist Party of Spain when he was a Jesuit General.

So, we also know that the Jesuits were involved in the writing of the last 8 degrees of Scottish Rite Freemasonry, with Fredrick the Great in Prussia, while Fredrick protected the Jesuits and gave them the ability to live in his country, while they were being suppressed by the Pope.

Martin: Let's circle back around to the Yakuza. According to Skolnick, the Yakuza own many, many businesses in this country, many, many banks are owned and controlled in California and elsewhere by the Yakuza. Now, are you saying that's just a front?

Phelps: They're just a front, like any other Mafia, like the Italian Mafia, which is the foremost Mafia in organized crime.

Martin: Which J. Edgar Hoover said "Didn't exist."!

Phelps: Which he said didn't exist. It's all baloney. It is just a front. They hold the property, they hold the money for the Vatican.

Martin: So the Yakuza would be the 3rd trusted party that we talked about?

Phelps: That's right, they're the 3rd trusted party. And I tend to also believe that there is some kind of hand involved in the murder of Bruce Lee with this. Bruce Lee was not going along with the Catholic Church.

Martin: And he was giving away secrets.

Phelps: He was giving away martial arts secrets, and so on, and he was not going along with the Vatican. Remember, he had a rift with Hollywood, and most of his films were made in Hong Kong.

Martin: And his son was also killed not long ago.

Phelps: His son was then killed on a movie-making set also. So his son knew something. And evidently, just like Jackie Kennedy, Linda Lee doesn't open her mouth. So there are two murders here that the Secret Societies are involved in.

Martin: You don't talk too much about Bobby Kennedy. Has your research uncovered any names behind Bobby Kennedy's assassination?

Phelps: Well, we know that Officer Thane Eugene Cesar really pulled the trigger, shot him in the back of the head with a twenty-two. And Officer Cesar was an employee for Lockheed Corporation. The Jesuits, according to Avro Manhattan, control Lockheed.

So, just as Lee Iacocca dispatches his security chief to drive the bullet-ridden limousine of Kennedy from Washington to Cincinnati to get repaired, even so, some Knight of Malta in charge of Lockheed Corporation, I don't know who it was, dispatches Officer Cesar to be a guard of Robert F. Kennedy—who then, in turn, shoots and kills him. And Sirhan was a scapegoat, just like Oswald was a scapegoat.

Martin: What do you have to say about Earl Warren?

Phelps: Earl Warren was in the hands of the Jesuits when he was the governor of California. Earl Warren was one of the sinister individuals behind that evil and terrible Japanese concentration camp system. That was his brainchild. He was behind the anti-Jap agitation in World War II.

The Japanese are decent, law-abiding, peaceful people, for the most part. They had all their farms taken from them. They were in control of all of the produce, and they had it all stolen from them by Roman Catholic, Knight of Malta-controlled corporations—just as was done to the American Indian. They went into their burial grounds and stole all their gold, and used their missions to send it back to Rome.

So, Earl Warren was a part of this. He was a good boy, so they named him and put him on the Supreme Court. He was the Chief Justice.

He was a 33rd-degree Freemason involved in the Kennedy assassination, forced amalgamation, forced race-mixing with the Supreme Court decision in 1966, forced integration with the Brown vs. The Board Of Education in 1954.

Martin: I'm going to ask you now a very important question, one that will be on the minds of many people: Why should our readers not feel that you are merely substituting the word JESUITS for JEWS in terms of fomenting hatred and animosity toward Jesuit people? Why is that not so?

Phelps: Well, first of all, there's a tremendous difference between the Jesuit Order and the Jewish race.

We don't know exactly who the Jewish race is. I sure don't know. I think only God knows who it is. But it's a civilization of people who are engaged in commerce and trade, and they have cultures, they have communities.

Jesuits are an army. They're soldiers. They're under oath. When you become professed of the 4th Degree, they give you The Secret Instructions.

According to another gentleman, he says there's a degree beyond the 4th Degree, where it's absolute Luciferianism. This is according to Jim Arrabito, who died mysteriously in a plane crash in Alaska on September 2, 1990. Jim Arrabito was one of the chief guys in the Seventh Day Adventists, and he was a master of Jesuit history. You can get his videos, Secrets Of The Jesuits, from L.L.M. Productions.

But anyway, the difference between the Jews

Editor's note: For those of you who may wonder if the matter of "missing" or "unavailable" library books is still a problem today, read the following narrative by Eric excerpted from the CD-ROM that comes with the new book version of VATICAN ASSASSINS. Some things never change!

M. F. Cusack, the Nun of Kenmare, 1896, wrote The Black Pope. This volume, quietly removed from nearly every library in the world, contains the most important single description of the inner workings and long-range goals of the Society of Jesus ever published. Written by a Bible-believing converted Roman Catholic nun, the brilliant and penetrating Miss Cusack wrote from England and was one of the literary pillars against the Jesuit-controlled pontiff and papacy of the Nineteenth Century.

I found The Black Pope downstairs in the Philip Schaff Library of the Reformed Lancaster Theological Seminary in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. It was neither in the card catalog nor in the computer; but, while searching the bookshelves, the Lord caused my eyes to fall upon it. Being made aware of its importance through the widow of our hero, Alberto Rivera (who had been given a copy by Jesuit General Pedro Arrupe), I read it and returned it to the library. I then informed the clerk to consign the volume to the archives and recommended that it never be allowed to be checked out again, for fear of its theft. Smugly, he asked me if I would steal it.

Meanwhile, I approached the head librarian, Mr. Berg, and asked to make a copy using the copier in house. He refused, stating that the book was in no condition to be copied. I informed him that I intended to reprint it, that it was the greatest exposé of the Jesuit General ever written, and that I would give the library newly republished volumes. Still, he refused. Upset, I sought to speak with the Seminary President, Mr. Schmiechen, informing him of my offer, but to no avail. Later, I requested one of the librarians to ask Mr. Berg if I could ever see the book again. I received my most shocking answer a few weeks later. When I came back to the library, intending to copy one other book for the CD (Behind The Dictators by Leo Lehmann), I was handed the following Memo by a somewhat embarrassed and kindly woman tending the reference desk. My library privileges were revoked and I may never peruse those treasures downstairs ever again. Hating defeat, I sought to speak with the President one more time; but again, he was out of town. Little did these pro-Jesuit bigots know that I had secretly copied The Black Pope and give it to you now, my beloved friends. The Memo has been reproduced below for your observation.

Revocation of Library Privileges

With the endorsement of President Peter Schmiechen and Dean Anabel Proffitt, I am revoking all library privileges. This action is precipitated upon your use of the library and its resources for a purpose which perpetuates suspicion, hatred, and mistrust which is inconsistent with the mission of the Seminary and the library. This action can be taken because we are a private institution which can restrict who may or may not use the library, its collections, and its equipment. Notice to that effect has been posted on each entrance door above the handles.

and the Jesuits is strictly—one is a people, and one is an Order determined to subvert all nations to the jurisdiction of the Pope.

And, in light of the documents that I provide with the book version of VATICAN ASSASSINS—I have over 4,000 pages on CD-ROM, with four distinct different histories showing the history of the Order—that's exactly what they were doing then, and that's exactly what they're doing now.

Martin: So what's different about what YOU'RE saying? Rather than just being another wild conspiracy theory, it's your position that you've really proven that this is a fact, and not fantasy?

Phelps: Other men have proven the fact. I just reiterate what they've said.

If you read The Black Pope, by Cusack, she says the very same thing. She was a nun, a converted nun to Christ in 1896.

Martin: And why is she so important?

Phelps: Because she was a nun intimately involved with priests, and especially Jesuits, prior to her conversion to Christ. She would know; she was on the inside.

Martin: Why is that book so important?

Phelps: Because it has been suppressed and stolen out of every library in the world! There is only one in existence that I know of, that's publicly accessible, and that is in the British Museum.

It's also accessible on the CD-ROM included with the book VATICAN ASSASSINS, for those of your readers who would like it. But, other than that, it's a suppressed document. Griesinger, Thompson, Cusack, Nicolini—those are the four major histories of the Jesuit Order, and all four are on the CD-ROM [along with a number of other rare and otherwise "missing" research documents].

Martin: So you're saying that the time-lines that you put forth, and the conclusions that you draw, are really based on historical experts over the last two centuries? This is not just YOUR position?

Phelps: Absolutely. I'm standing on the shoulders of giants, as a little cricket. These people are brilliant and Godly. Nicolini, an Italian Roman Catholic, converted to Christ, involved in the Italian Revolution of 1848, had to flee for his life, was in exile in England, and there he wrote his great History Of The Jesuits, warning England that if the Jesuits sought to destroy England under Elizabeth, they would surely do the same thing under Victoria.

Martin: And they have.

Phelps: And they have. We have the great Theodor Griesinger, who was the great German who wrote The Jesuits as a history told by the German people—823 pages of meticulous documentation of all their doings in all the countries. And he was the one, I learned, who said the Jesuits could very well be planning a second Thirty-Years War, another Thirty-Years War. And he wrote that, the second edition was in 1873.

[Editor's note: And remember that the second bloody and diabolical "Thirty-Years War" did indeed happen, between 1914 and 1945, as Eric mentioned earlier in this interview in conjunction with financing it through the setting up of the Federal Reserve Bank fraud.]

So, these learned people have made quite clear and quite evident the purpose and power of the Jesuit Order.

We haven't had anybody in the 20th Century write an extensive history of what they've accomplished from 1900-2000. I would hope that somebody who knows these histories, who knows grammar and spelling and is able to write nice prose (unlike myself) would be able to do this, and write a real modern history of this. Ridpath came close to it, but he ended his work in the mid-1850s, with his Ridpath's Universal History [Of The World]. We have not had a significant historian do this modern work for us.

Martin: And why is that?

Phelps: Because these Jesuits have all these colleges and universities bought and paid for! And these universities won't get grants if they start to expose the Jesuit Order.

Now, with all these "hate crime" laws, anything truthfully said about the Jesuit Order will generate attempts to contort it into some kind of a hate crime, which is NOT what we're doing. We are merely telling the truth.

Martin: What is your solution to the Jesuit problem in America? What would you like to see, ultimately, happen in this country?

Phelps: In this country, what I would like to see happen is exactly what happened in England in the 16th Century, when several Jesuits left the Order. They were intelligent, powerful Jesuits, involved in the conspiracy to overthrow England.

They told the powers-that-be about what they were supposed to do, and as a result, the government of England expelled the Jesuits from their dominions, because they were regarded as traitors and conspirators in the overthrow of legitimate government—of self-rule, of nationalism; a country should be ruled by its own people.

The solution here would be the expulsion of the Jesuit Order, that they would be outlawed and banned.

There would be period of grace where certain Jesuits could come forward, tell what they know. But why would the Jesuits want to do that when this government is controlled by the Council on Foreign Relations, which is controlled by the Jesuits? The government is controlled by the Jesuits through the mob and high-level Freemasonry.

Martin: Proposing the expulsion of the Jesuits, the difference between that and racial persecution, such as with the Jews, yours is based on treason, which is a lawful conclusion based on your research concerning what their true aims and objectives are—namely, the overthrow of this government.

Phelps: The usurping of this government, the controlling of this government for their own purposes. And then using this government, with a coalition of other governments they control, for the annihilation of the "heretic" and "liberal" population of this country, pursuant to the Council of Trent, that every Pope swears upon his coronation to uphold.

Martin: Thank you so much for taking this time to clarify these many points about the Jesuit Order. Our readers will really appreciate this as you offer much food for both thought AND action!

...and the truth shall set you free

David Icke exposes the real story behind global events which shape the future of human existence and the world we leave our children. Fearlessly, he lifts the veil on an astonishing web of interconnected manipulation to reveal that the same few people, secret societies, and organizations control the daily direction of our lives. They engineer the wars, violent revolutions, terrorist outrages, and political assassinations; they control the world market in hard drugs and the media indoctrination machine. Every global negative event of the 20th Century, and earlier, can be traced back to the same Global Elite, and some of the names involved are very well known. Never before has this web, its personnel, and methods been revealed in such a detailed and devastating fashion.

If you don't want your view of life to be transformed, then steer clear of this book.

Icke reveals the esoteric background to the global conspiracy and offers an inspiring spiritual solution in which every man, woman, and child on planet Earth breaks free from the daily programming—the "coup d'état on the human mind"—and takes back their infinite power to think for themselves and decide their own destiny. His words are designed to inspire all of us to be who we really are, to fling open the door of the mental prison we build for ourselves, and to walk into the light of freedom.

Stresses And Pressures Are Catalysts For Growth

7/4/01 SOLTEC

Good evening, my friend. It is I, Ceres Anthonious "Toniose" Soltec, come in the One Light of Creator Source. Be at peace.

There are great geophysical pressures building within and around your planetary orb. Some of you more observant skywatchers may even notice a greater presence of our "lenticular cloud"-cloaked ships stabilizing areas prone to geological instabilities, such as along earthquake faults. Mother Earth is dealing as well as can be expected with the physical stresses that are resulting from many factors, both man-made and naturally occurring phenomena.

These same pressures, we observe, are impacting a great many of you ones who are sensitive to (but "out of sync" with) the upward frequency shifts that are occurring. Many are experiencing heightened levels of anxiety, restlessness, disrupted sleep patterns, and often very erratic mood swings wherein you are left questioning the need to continue the "struggle" of life.

Dear friends, these pressures (regardless of the cause) are a fact of your experience. You each can and will cope, in your own way, with the shifting environment in which you now find yourselves. We, of the Lighted Realms, offer the following in response to the many petitions we are receiving from you ones for clarity and understanding.

Simply stated: YOUR WORLD IS SPEEDING UP!

As this speed-up continues, so too will your need to adapt to the increasing frequencies. These increases will cause discomfort for those of you (this includes the ones who scribe these messages) who hold on to past low-frequency emotional baggage.

Again and again we have been explaining to you ones the coming (and now present) problems that would arise from holding onto the "traumas" of yesteryear. This is the time of the Great Cleansing. It is a purification as if by fire. The negative (low-frequency) vibrational attachments will be "burned" from within you by the present and forthcoming high-frequency energies bathing your planetary environment.

This is in no way a punishment, but rather a VERY NATURAL aspect of a planet's evolutionary path.

Is your life seemingly "falling apart"?

Do you feel at the end of your wits?

Does life seem to be getting quite a bit more overwhelming?

For many of you the answer to the above questions is: yes. For others of you, you may be wondering what in the world I am speaking about.

For the latter, I suggest that you take comfort in knowing that you have instinctively (intuitively) been keeping the clutter of low-frequency emotional energy to a minimum. To those of you who answered "yes" to the above, please know that the cleansing from higher-intensity and higher-frequency energy will continue, and the resulting inner stress will serve as a catalyst that will enable you to focus on, and confront, the accumulated emotional "garbage" and see it for what it truly is.

Many of you have been, figuratively speaking, swimming in a pool with a heavy lead belt on (symbolic of all your accumulated negative emotional "baggage"). This was not a big challenge to deal with when the pool was only a couple of feet deep. But slowly the level has been rising, and you can no longer touch bottom without your head going under water for a few moments. And still you have held on to your lead anchor-belt as if it were a "prized" possession.

The level is still rising, and many of you are now finding yourselves bobbing up and down farther and farther each time. When you're down, the pressure is greater each time, as the bottom seems to be getting farther and farther down. And yet you still tightly hold on to that heavy lead belt that is literally the only thing keeping you from buoyantly floating to the surface and riding the upper crest.

Eventually the pressures will cause you ones to examine the "demons" that encourage your desire to hold onto these things that weigh upon the heart. For some, this point will come only after what will seem to be an inhumane struggle, when a point of shear exhaustion and overwhelm is achieved. Only then will come the surrender of the past pains, anxiety, grief, and sorrows—when there is finally recognized no use in "holding-on" any longer.

By contrast, for some others, words such as these will serve as sufficient catalyst to prompt the self-introspection that allows for the release of the majority of the low-frequency anchors that are causing so much emotional pain and other difficulties.

One only needs to notice that the children coming into the physical experience at this time still innately desire to play, explore, and find newness, in order for one to see that they are not nearly as impacted by the frequency shifts as are the older generations. Why? Because, for the most part they have not yet acquired the "lead weights" of sorrow, grief, or trauma binding them to a vibrational signature associated with a low-vibration environment that is much "slower" in all aspects.

The older one's age, the greater the effects can be. Many of the senior citizens in your society have become quite dependent on prescription "medication" as a means for dealing with physical ailments that can be traced back to these very same low-frequency experiences of emotional "baggage".

The loss of loved ones to physical death becomes a "great tragedy" for those who do not understand that death of the physical apparatus is NOT the end of existence for the entity who was using the apparatus. There is no need for great sorrow, though grief is a natural expression for the loss of the more deliberately focused companionship of physical participation. YOU WILL SEE YOUR LOVED ONES AGAIN—and again, and again, and again, on and on, over and over.

The cycles of life are ENDLESS. You ones have been together through countless life experiences, and will continue to do so as the group ties of love, admiration, and camaraderie will naturally bind you, one to another.

Those who are experiencing the greatest difficulties are those of you who tend to be more sensitive to the subtle energies. The ones who tend to be more intuitive in their thinking and reasoning, and who tend to follow the "gut" impulses, also tend to be the ones who deeply feel the "sharpness" of another's anger or the sorrow of another's despair. You ones tend to empathically take on the problems and burdens of another in an attempt to understand (walk in another's shoes) and thus offer compassion and heartfelt understanding to those in need who cross your path. You ones tend to want to carry the "weight of the world" on your shoulders in an attempt to alleviate the suffering of others.

This is fine and well, if it be your choice. However, let us (we of the Lighted Realms) offer to you a bit of caution: It is good and well to offer a helping hand to another in their time of need. But to continue to carry another's load will only serve to STUNT the other's growth as well as your own.

There is wisdom in showing another, by example, how to cultivate a field and plant seeds that lead to a nice crop of life-sustaining food. It is not so wise to do so for them over and over, again and again, to the point they may even come to expect you to lift the food to their mouth and wipe the crumbs from their chin. At what point do you allow the student to fly solo and take responsibility for self?

Allowing others to bear the full repercussions of their choices and decisions is truly the whole purpose of the physical environment in the first place. To coddle and protect another beyond the point of maturity only serves to hinder their much desired growth.

We, of the Higher (non-physical) Realms, offer to you ones great compassion, and yet we do so from the non-physical perspective so as to not interfere with your growth. In order to FULLY utilize the Potential Energy we offer to you ones, you will have to discipline yourselves to learn to interpret the various vibrational energy signals (communications) we offer in response to your many petitions for assistance.

Remember, please, that God will work WITH you, but He will not do it FOR you. Any other way and the learning opportunity will fail. Many of you, perhaps operating from seeming overwhelm or desperation, propose ultimatums to God and your Guides, such as: "If you do ----, then I'll believe and then know you are for real." Or: "If you want me to help, then show me a big sign."

Maybe for the first couple of times this will illicit a "favorable" response, but as ones continue to challenge and throw out ultimatums, there comes a point where the individual is doing nothing more than playing a mind game with themselves, and the childish behavior will garner no serious responses of the kind anticipated by the challenger.

Please note that you each have AMPLE examples of God working in your lives to reflect back upon. Beyond a certain point there is acceptance or there is not, and to continue to play games and dance the same dance, over and over again, becomes counterproductive.

Learn to reach out to God and to His many angelic Helpers by focusing your desire, asking for assistance, and then begin TAKING ACTION. This is the critical step wherein many of you "drop the ball" and expect God to simply do it FOR you. Or you "take action" that—if you are honest with yourself—is actually a form of running away from whatever the challenge or responsibility is you should be facing.

Taking APPROPRIATE action in the physical serves to solidify and reaffirm your desire. The physical energy exerted serves to clarify your intent, and thus open a larger channel through which Creative Inspiration may flow. The greater the clarity (which includes honesty) of your desire, the greater the flow of energy.

When your desire is to know and understand the reasons for the pressures in your life, and what is truly at the cause that seems to keep you in a repetitious circular "rut" of merely existing rather than feeling as though you are joyously living, then you have indeed focused your desire on a truly worthy endeavor.

So, what ACTION can you take to solidify this desire and begin to allow for the myriads of Angels to bring forth their assistance? You could begin by setting aside some time every day to write down what exactly you think it is that causes you to remain in the "rut". Or, you could confide in another, whom you trust, and speak aloud the same concerns. (Hint: You are each there to help one another grow.) Has it not been said that two heads are better than one?

Well, there are infinite variations on the two examples above. There are various ones in Internet "chat rooms" around the world who confide in complete strangers because they intuitively know that people in general are good and well meaning. This does not mean that they blindly accept the advice of such "strangers", but please never underestimate the creative pathways your Guides may use to get a message through to you.

Returning to our original theme of this message, let me add that the physical pressures and stresses associated with this time of planetary cleansing NEED NOT be experienced as some negative "punishment" that must be endured. At any time you can release the "baggage" of the past and thus more effectively and deliberately focus your attention on the present moment. Great numbers of the masses are reaching the point of realizing that "something" has got to give way, else a volatile mess will surely ensue.

I WILL say that the majority of the souls

now experiencing have a great capacity for change, and are quite resilient in their ability to deal with the environmental stresses now present. A way WILL be shown to those who honestly petition for assistance and who are willing to make an effort toward helping themselves. For those who simply refuse to accept the changes now taking place, they will, through their own ignorance and stubbornness, create unnecessary hardship and suffering for themselves.

Judge not another or their choices, for they choose what is perfect for them so as to create the perfect learning environment for themselves. What works for one individual may not work at all for another. You are each on a journey of self discovery. And when you realize that YOU create ALL of your own "problems", then the answers and soul-utions become quite evident. "Problems" only occur when ignorance is allowed to persist. Knowledge and understanding (en-Light-enment) is the key to obliterating ignorance (darkness).

I am Ceres Anthonious "Toniose" Soltec, come in service to The One Light—Creator God. May these words spark within you the realization that YOU hold the keys that release you from the shackles that hold you back and keep you from recognizing the true God-Force Potential within. Finding the keys requires self-discipline, patience, AND persistence. No one can just hand you those keys. We of the Lighted Realms will assist you in your search—but only when YOU take the appropriate initiative and follow-through action.

Blessings and peace to you ALL. Salu!

WISDOM OF THE RAYS: The Masters Teach

Do you enjoy the spiritual messages shared here in The SPECTRUM? If so then you won't want to miss these two volumes packed full of earlier shared messages.

"Our Elder Brothers from the Higher Realms of Creation are attempting to communicate with ALL of us at this time. Why? Take a look around you. The old ways of doing things aren't working.

Our planet is entering a time of massive, turbulent change and renewal. To put it bluntly: we NEED help! And that's where these books come into the picture. Yes, eventually 'the Phoenix will arise from the ashes' after this Great Cleansing process, but the ride could be quite a bumpy one, especially for those ill-prepared for what is to happen." — From the back cover of Volume I

"Let us begin with WHO you are. You, the non-physical YOU, are an infinite thought projection of the One who created you (God!). You are the product of His desire. You are, in effect, Desire manifest in uniqueness of purpose." — Esu "Jesus" Sananda (Vol. II)

Dr. Len Horowitz On AIDS In Africa: “Utilitarian Global Genocide”

Editor's note: Though the occasion prompting the request is deeply tragic in terms of human suffering and death, we were honored a few months ago to be asked by African Zulu Shaman and Elder, Credo Mutwa, to be the vehicle to convey his plea to the Global Elite, titled Stop The Genocide In Africa! in our May 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM. (Longtime readers will remember Credo Mutwa's astonishing experiences of an inter-dimensional nature that had been the front-page feature interview of our October 1999 issue.) We received many communications of appreciation for publishing Credo's powerful, heartfelt message, as well as requests for reprinting from other conscientious information sources wanting to help spread his plea far and wide.

Also into this arena—actually starting some months ago—enters Dr. Leonard Horowitz. He is no stranger to longtime readers of this publication, both for his impeccable scholarship in getting to the bottom of well-hidden medical matters, and for his courage to speak out about what he knows.

Dr. Horowitz just got back from an invited trip to Africa wherein he presented the following potent address to the presidential governments of several African countries. The address is followed by some important background information that includes the letters he wrote last October which “got the ball rolling” on this daring project.

Where better than in Africa to expose and publicize the AIDS mechanism engineered by the diabolical elite controllers as part of their plan for Africa's depopulation of native peoples in conjunction with their global goal to eliminate most of us—the “useless eaters” of society?

Dr. Len's new book has also just been released—to further give heartburn to those crooks in high places working desperately to keep The Truth hidden. We are herein providing some just-received advance information about this new release.

So, with Credo Mutwa's heartfelt plea circulating about in conjunction with Dr. Len's hard-hitting recent scientific lectures in Africa—what do we see on the controlled media news programs starting around June 22? Why, we are informed that “The First United Nations Conference On AIDS” was all-of-a-sudden getting underway at UN headquarters in New York! Imagine that. What a “coincidence”.

Of course the well-controlled print and broadcast media's “politically correct” version of what was being discussed at this unusual gathering was typically superficial. Notice also that such media outlets as CNN News TOLD you what the participants were talking about (while showing you pictures of speakers without audio), rather than allowing you to hear the participants' actual remarks for yourself.

However, the discerning observer can be sure that THAT MANY African-nation presidents and health ministers and other representatives did not travel all the way to New York to talk in vague generalities! Not while their peoples are suffering from extreme malnutrition and poverty, as well as dying of AIDS in large-and-growing numbers, while rampant and widespread internal corruption throughout most governmental layers makes getting anything constructive accomplished almost impossible.

Though you can be sure this First United Nations' AIDS Conference was convened largely for appearance value, RECOGNIZE ALSO that, as a major public relations response to counter Credo Mutwa and Dr. Len Horowitz, it reveals how scared the elite controllers are becoming as The Truth is getting to be much more difficult to hide from awakening and caring people everywhere.

In other words, the heat is on; let's turn it up some more!

Hepatitis B Vaccine And The Origin Of HIV/AIDS: Perspectives On A Possible Vaccine-Induced Pandemic

(Transcript of oral presentation made by Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz, D.M.D., M.A., M.P.H., May 29, 2001, Libreville, Gabon, Africa.)

Honorable First Lady and esteemed program officials, it is indeed an honor for me to be among an American delegation invited by the First Lady to present some recent perspectives from the United States concerning HIV/AIDS.

I am the author of the American best-selling book Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola—Nature, Accident Or Intentional? that examines AIDS as a possible vaccine-induced pandemic. I will be reporting today from my current publication in the May 2001 issue of the peer-reviewed scientific journal Medical Hypotheses, published in England, reprints of which are being prepared for distribution tomorrow.

I presented this thesis initially at the XI International Conference on AIDS in Vancouver in 1996, beginning with data that showed that approximately 65% of Black Americans believe that HIV/AIDS may be genocide. Genocide is defined as the mass killing of people for economic, political, and/or ideological reasons.

In the October 2000 issue of the esteemed American Journal Of Public Health, Dr. Stephen Kunitz, considered among America's most prominent medical sociologists, concluded much like Africa's most esteemed medical sociologist and psychiatrist, Dr. Adeoye Lambo (Dean of the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Ibadan, Nigeria), that where capitalism, colonialism, and “WASP (White Anglo-Saxon Protestant)-directed globalism” goes, the expected and consistently observed outcome is the mass killing of native populations.

My thesis raises this spectre concerning HIV/AIDS following the administration of experimental hepatitis-B (HB) vaccines given to gay men in New York City and Blacks in Central Africa in 1974 and early 1975.

Could what I am about to present represent genocide?

Might it be standard Machiavellian theory in practice?

That is, creating the problem to profit from the solution; in this case from pharmaceutical sales while reducing undesired populations?

Might the same instigators be suppressing lower cost, lower risk, and highly effective alternative therapies?

This is certainly a most heretical, politically challenging, ethically and morally disconcerting possibility. Yet, based on the evidence I will summarize here, it is a theory whose time has come for close examination—a theory I conclude should, if not must, be conducted by an independent scientific and ethics committee charged by the United Nations to discern the truth.

To summarize my findings, [first slide] you are now looking at the United States Government contract under which numerous AIDS-like and Ebola-like viruses were bioengineered using crude and tedious laboratory methods, by Litton Bionetics researchers, during the late 1960s and early 1970s. As you can see, Dr. Robert Gallo, Project Officer for the National Cancer Institute (NCI), oversaw this contract which, as documented, began on February 12, 1962.

On the next slide, reprinted from the United States Congressional Record, Litton Bionetics is listed as the sixth leading biological weapons contractor for the U.S. Army in 1969.

The next slide is reprinted from the journal Nature, December 5, 1970, wherein you can see Dr. Gallo from the NCI as lead author, with co-investigators from Litton Bionetics, reporting on their studies of RNA-dependent DNA polymerase (more commonly known as “reverse transcriptase”) in human acute leukemic cells.

As you may recall, Dr. Gallo was the 1984 alleged discover of HIV. It was later determined that he did not discover it alone, but with Luc Montagnier from France. Dr. Gallo was then credited with the co-discovery of the AIDS virus.

Yet, the problem is, this unique enzyme that is central to the function of HIV/AIDS, and critical to leukemia virus activity as well, was being investigated before 1970. This is approximately fifteen years prior to Dr. Gallo’s alleged discovery of HIV, and almost nine years before he is credited for discovering the first leukemia virus (HTLV-I).

The next graphic depicts the viral recombinations that were routinely carried out under Dr. Gallo’s direction at that time. As the examples show here, monkey viruses—especially SV-40 in the presence of SIVs, simian foamy retroviruses, SFRs, and others—were recombined with feline leukemia virus RNA and chicken leukemia virus RNA, which caused wasting, immuno-suppression, and death.

It is well known that feline leukemia in cats reflects similar pathogenicity and symptomatology as HIV in humans. Additionally, as shown, cross species leaps, contrary to popular belief, were not easily or spontaneously induced. To get these new man-made viruses (called “mutant hybrids”) to jump species into man, the viruses were cultured in human white blood cells in some studies, and human fetal tissue cells in other studies.

The next slide presents another U.S. Government document—a NCI monograph of 1974 showing a map of the world. Over New York you see a square, with a similar one appearing over Central Africa, apparently Uganda. Also, stars appear over northwest Uganda, southeast Uganda, and Bethesda, Maryland. According to the legend, the stars represent “Herpes Virus Research”. Included here is the Epstein-Barr virus and cytomegalovirus from monkeys, linked today to certain cancers and chronic fatigue. The square, the legend tells, depicts liver cancer virus and vaccine research—that is, HB virus and vaccine studies ongoing by 1974 in the two regions initially struck by HIV/AIDS.

To briefly summarize—and you may wish to more critically review this in the Medical Hypotheses publication—between 1974 and early 1975, 200,000 human doses of HB vaccine, representing four sub-types or strains of that virus, were administered to gay men in NYC, Blacks in Central Africa, and mentally retarded children from the Willowbrook State School on Staten Island in New York.

That vaccine was prepared by initially growing the HB virus in contaminated chimpanzees and Rhesus monkeys shipped from Africa to New York by Litton Bionetics.

Dr. Maurice Hilleman, considered the world’s leading vaccine developer, admitted during a 1986 interview (that never aired, the tape of which I recovered from the audio archives of the National Library of Medicine), that he imported the AIDS virus into North America in contaminated monkeys destined for vaccine research and development at the Merck Pharmaceutical Company.

He described how he brought the non-human primates into New York from Africa and got them off the planes. Recovered contracts show that Litton Bionetics’ monkey colonies, as the NCI monograph depicts, were in southeast Uganda and in northwest Uganda. Litton affiliated there, at that time, with the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) that conducted numerous cancer virus and vaccine studies on native populations.

The early HB vaccines were prepared in these contaminated chimpanzees. The viruses were grown in the chimps, and then extracted along with a variety of simian virus contaminants (including SV-40, SIVs, and SFRs) during the vaccine manufacturing process. The viruses were then injected into the Willowbrook children, gay men, and Black Africans.

Of course, many of these people died during this part of the investigation. The survivors, who had developed (HB) antibodies, then contributed their blood. The final vaccine was prepared from this blood by separating the whole cells from the serum. It was from this pooled serum that four different sub-types of the 1974-75 HB vaccine were prepared and administered. The 200,000 doses were reportedly tested on these same populations.

This, according to all the scientific evidence, best explains the triggering of the AIDS pandemic on two far-removed continents, in two demographically distinct populations, during the late 1970s.

You may have heard that AIDS viruses predating this period have been discovered. This is not the truth. Although HIV gene fragments, representing portions of perhaps ancient viruses, have reportedly been discovered, HIVs demonstrating the complete viral genome only reflect this period of AIDS pandemic origin.

I will close by quoting directly from my article in Medical Hypotheses:

“Not easily embraced by individuals, organizations, institutions, and/or government agencies biased by special interests, the dire implications of neglecting this hypothesis, and its further investigation, are unfathomable. Such actions strain the ethical fabric of science, our moral obligations as world citizens, and may be contributing to an irreversible attack against humanity.

“On the other hand, the AIDS crisis may serve an ideologically justified function concerning burgeoning ethnic populations in a period of globalistic transition. In effect, it provides a revenue-generating control-mechanism for ‘national security’ interests and the organizations, institutions, and industries aligned with what amounts to utilitarian global genocide.”

Thank you.

NEWS RELEASE: October 19, 2000

AIDS/Ebola Author Defends Embattled African Presidents:
Reports Outbreaks May Be “Man-Made” And CIA-Linked

Sandpoint, Idaho—Two African presidents, defending against the political and biological damage caused by AIDS and a new Ebola outbreak, may find relief by giving their nation’s health ministers a reading assignment. So advises the author of a bestselling book on the two most feared viruses this doctor calls “man-made”.

In letters to both Kenya’s president, Daniel Arap Moi, and South African president, Thabo Mbeki, Dr. Leonard Horowitz, a public health authority and author of the bestselling book Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola, Nature, Accident Or Intentional?, the viruses most people consider an act of Nature were, rather, instigated by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). The agency now oversees all AIDS science in America and tracks it overseas. Diplomatic sources say both leaders are poised to heed the doctor’s counsel.

In recent months, President Thabo Mbeki has come under venomous attacks for his heretical suggestions that AIDS may be genocide, or at least racially linked. Scientists, most biased by pharmaceutical contracts, lambasted him for his criticism of AZT at the International Conference On AIDS, hosted by the president earlier this year.

More recently, his fight with political opponent Tony Leon, South Africa’s Democratic Party leader, reached an international platform when Reuters News Service described the row

Emerging Viruses - AIDS & Ebola

This is the first in-depth exploration into the origins of HIV and Ebola. Claims that these "emerging viruses" naturally evolved and then jumped species from ape to man seem grossly unfounded in light of the compelling evidence assembled in this extraordinary text. Alternatively, the possibility that these bizarre germs were laboratory creations, accidentally or intentionally transmitted via tainted hepatitis and smallpox vaccines in the U.S. and Africa—as numerous authorities have alleged—is investigated herein.

This book reviews the numerous viral vaccine studies conducted simultaneously in New York City and Central West Africa by a narrow network of virologists working for major military-medical contractors under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and the World Health Organization (WHO). Included is Dr. Robert Gallo, the notorious "discoverer" of the AIDS virus. The text presents bizarre and horrifying facts about the biological weapons race of the 1960s and early 1970s when these researchers developed countless immune-system-ravaging viruses, and experimented with an assortment of antidote vaccines allegedly for "defense" and cancer prevention.

between the economist-trained Black leader Mbeki, and the White lawyer Leon. "Difficult as it might be," Mbeki scolded the lawyer in an open letter, "the least you might try to do is to fight against the tendency to hold in contempt those whom White South Africa has held in and treated with contempt for many centuries."

Days later, in Kenya, on October 14, President Arap Moi was alerted by his health ministers that all traffic from neighboring Uganda was being checked for signs and symptoms of Ebola, a hemorrhagic fever virus that kills 90% of those infected within three weeks.

HIV, the virus scientific consensus holds is linked to AIDS, and Ebola, related to HIV only insofar as its effect on the immune system, were both likely bioengineered by military contractors during a top-secret biological weapons program conducted by the CIA, according to Dr. Horowitz's findings.

"I've reprinted the U.S. Government contracts under which numerous AIDS-like and Ebola-like viruses were bioengineered by the Army's sixth top biological weapons contractor. At the time [the late 1960s to mid-1970s] such viruses were hybridized from other germs using crude laboratory methods compared to today's sophisticated biotechnology" the doctor said.

The "bioweapons" strayed from their production labs in contaminated vaccines, according to the Harvard graduate's thesis, which is scheduled to be published in the esteemed scientific journal Medical Hypotheses early next year. "That publication should send a clear message to skeptics in science, as well as international leaders, that President Mbeki's concerns are well founded in fact," Dr. Horowitz said.

President Mbeki has called claims that AIDS originated in Africa and Haiti "insulting". They "powerfully reinforce dangerous, firmly entrenched prejudices," he said.

In a published letter, the African National Congress leader condemned the organized effort to "blame HIV/AIDS on Africans even at the time the US was the epicenter of reported deaths from AIDS.... To me, as an African, it is both interesting and disturbing that the signatories of the so-called Durban Declaration return to the thesis about the alleged original transmission of HIV from African animals to humans, given what science has said about AIDS in the last two decades."

In Dr. Horowitz's letters to the presidents he wrote of the "extensive" scientific evidence supporting a political cause of AIDS as well as Ebola. "The Ugandan shipment of contaminated monkeys that arrived in Europe's top vaccine production labs was administered by...the Army's sixth top biological weapons developer during the late 1960s." He evidenced two leading experts who met to discuss the mysterious origin of Ebola's closest ancestor, the Marburg virus. One was Dr. Rudolph Siebert of the Hygiene Institute of the Philipps University in Marburg, and the other was Dr. Seymour Kalter from the Southwest Foundation's primate lab and the National Cancer Institute's leading diagnostician of viruses that were believed to be "emerging" iatrogenically from labs.

"Siebert," Dr. Horowitz explained, "reported in 1972 that the Marburg virus shared the closest similarity to a family of viruses known as Rhabdovirus simian. These included the culprits responsible for rabies. Dr. Kalter reported the Marburg virus was 'man-made'."

Concerning the issues of racism that President Mbeki raised, Dr. Horowitz concurred. His letter stated: "it is likely no coincidence" that the pharmaceutical company and cancer research agency most closely linked to these "man-made" viruses, and suspected vaccines, "are among the world's leading depopulation funding sources. Viewed as population controllers might, the AIDS pandemic, heavily affecting ethnic populations, is suspiciously utilitarian if not provably Malthusian."

The doctor suggested two options for the embattled African leaders:

"(1) do nothing and have the ongoing biological devastation continue unchallenged and unabated; or (2) seriously consider, with input from your health ministers and scientific advisors, the evidence I advance, ascertain whether or not my findings are valid, and if so, take a stand for...people around the world by openly articulating truths that have been heretofore suppressed. This second choice must include, as President Mbeki has ordered, a reevaluation of all theories of origin, treatment options, and preventive practices concerning HIV/AIDS and Ebola. Should you follow this second path, you will likely learn, as I have, that those who delivered these plagues have also actively suppressed highly effective, low risk, cost-saving alternatives to pharmaceutical 'cocktails'."

The doctor concluded his message to President Arap Moi, drawing optimistically on Bible scripture. "It is my sincere hope that, as time passes and more loving 'watchmen' herald lifesaving and blood-sparing truths, what currently stands as history's grossest example of man's inhumanity towards man, will become the greatest impetus for planetary repentance and lasting world peace."

LETTER TO SOUTH AFRICAN PRESIDENT
THABO M. MBEKI
FROM DR. LEONARD G. HOROWITZ

October 17, 2000

The Honorable President Thabo M. Mbeki
Office of the President
Private Bag X1000
PRETORIA, SOUTH AFRICA 0001

Dear President Mbeki:

Colleagues from around the world have sent me newspaper clippings concerning the abuse you have received from Democratic Party leader Tony Leon "over the cause and treatment of AIDS". As the author of the American bestseller Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola, Nature, Accident Or Intentional?, a copy of which, I understand, you have received from Dr. Alim Muhammed when you visited Washington, D.C. earlier this year, I offer you my support. To bolster your position concerning the likely man-made origin of HIV/AIDS, and the pandemic's pharmaceutical company-linked underpinnings, I offer you, your allies, and critics, the following analysis.

Before I begin, however, I want to thank you for your honorable and courageous statements insofar as bringing world attention to that grave likelihood that HIV evolved iatrogenically, and/or through racist (i.e., genocidal) intent. The U.S. Government documents that I reprinted in my text forcefully support your statements, regardless of how farfetched such theories may seem to uninformed or misinformed audiences.

These critical "Special Virus Cancer Program" documents, that must be brought to world attention, include the National Institute of Health contracts numbered NIH-71-2025 and NIH-71-

DEATH IN THE AIR: Globalism, Terrorism & Toxic Warfare

Hard Cover Book: $29.95 (+S/H)

Striking at the heart of a cryptocracy responsible for the latest forms of bioterrorism, psychotronic warfare, and Malthusian eco-genocide, the revelations and wisdom contained in this book offer more than a reality check. They give humanity, you and your loved ones, a final, last minute, choice for survival.

Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz is a graduate of Harvard School of Public Health who has published more than two-dozen books, 120 scientific and lay articles, and numerous audio and videotaped educational programs. He has been a frequent guest on nationally syndicated radio and television news and talk shows representing every major network. Most recently, Dr. Horowitz's work detailing the man-made origins of the AIDS and Ebola viruses prompted two documentaries, one by the internationally acclaimed BBC. He lives with his wife and three children in Sandpoint, Idaho.

2059, to Litton Bionetics and the Merck pharmaceutical company. U.S. Congressional Records show both of these companies were linked, during the 1960s and early 1970s, to each other as well as to biological weapons programs administered by the CIA and U.S. military contractors under National Security Agency oversight. Bionetics employed the world's leading primate cancer virus investigating team. The viruses they manufactured en masse at that time, using comparatively crude, by today's standards, laboratory methods, included viruses that were functionally and descriptively identical to HIV. The evidence for this seemingly outrageous claim is astonishingly certain.

Despite the largely false and misleading arguments that the gene sequences of Bionetics's bioengineered retroviruses differed substantially from HIV-1 and HIV-2, an argument that Dr. Robert Gallo gave me which is echoed by leading AIDS researchers today, it is clear a virtual "smoking gun" exists with these contracts that show the unique immune-suppression/leukemia/lymphoma/sarcoma cancer complex, arguably non-existent on planet Earth prior to the first cases of HIV/AIDS seen around 1978, was precisely

(Featured interview in the October 1999 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

David Icke has produced two amazing videos with the Zulu "sanusi" or shaman, Credo Mutwa, who reveals astonishing information which, until now, was only available to the highest initiates of the African shaman tradition.

Credo says, "The world must know this—and know it now."

He reveals how a shapeshifting reptilian race (the "Chitauli" to Africans) has controlled humanity for thousands of years and how their bloodlines are in the positions of royal, political, and economic power today.

Credo Mutwa supports all the themes outlined in The Biggest Secret and adds his own unique knowledge and experience of traveling Africa for nearly 80 years.

These videos will re-write the UFO/extraterrestrial story in a way that will blow your mind. UFO researchers have ignored Africa and therefore ignored one of the greatest sources of knowledge on the planet.

While people still argue over Roswell and the extraterrestrial beings apparently found there, African tribes-people have been interacting with these ET "gods" for thousands of years, sometimes eating them, as Credo Mutwa did on one occasion with unforgettable consequences.

Credo has not only seen dead "greys" many times, he has seen them examined behind their "grey" exterior and he knows exactly what they really look like—and it is nothing like we think!

"This is the most amazing man it has ever been my honor to meet—a genius—and the importance of these videos is simply beyond words."

—David Icke

After making these videos, Credo was visited by two people from Cape Town who offered him 50,000 rand, and a house anywhere in South Africa he would like to name, if he would agree to never speak to David Icke again and never have anything to do with him. Credo's reply can be imagined!

what Dr. Gallo, leading the Bionetics team for the National Cancer Institute, spent most of his time and money researching, developing, and testing during the late 1960s and early 1970s. This was precisely timed for the first simultaneous HIV/AIDS outbreaks on two far removed continents in two demographically distinct, and unique, populations.

More telling is the fact that Litton's lab affiliated with the International Agency for Research in Cancer (IARC) located in Northwest Uganda. From here, Hepatitis-B vaccine trials were conducted on Africans as the Merck pharmaceutical company was testing another strain of this vaccine on homosexual men in New York, and yet another strain on Willowbrook State School mentally retarded children on Staten Island.

These three study groups, and few others, were chosen because they were alleged to be at higher risk for Hepatitis-B infections. Merck also used Litton supplied, and apparently contaminated, African monkeys and chimpanzees. Litton's primate colonies were in Southeast Uganda.

The HIV/AIDS link to chimps is best explained by Merck's use of these Litton-supplied non-human primates to help develop four sub-strains of their 1974-1975 Hepatitis-B vaccine given, once again, primarily to gay men in New York City and Blacks in Central Africa. Few tell, or want to acknowledge, that Litton's shipments of approximately 500 monkeys to European vaccine production labs in 1967 initiated the first Marburg virus (mother of Ebola) outbreak in Germany and Yugoslavia.

That these vaccine-related studies likely triggered AIDS is further implied by Merck's leading vaccine expert, Dr. Maurice Hilleman, President Clinton's 1998 Sabin Gold Medal of Honor awardee. Dr. Hilleman went on record, during a 1986 interview, that he brought the AIDS virus into North America in contaminated monkeys destined for vaccine research and testing at Merck. This admission alone deserves a US Congressional, United Nations, if not World Court, inquiry.

Thus, your concerns, President Mbeki, are rational, well studied, and entirely caring, while Mr. Leon's statements reflect gross ignorance furthering injustice.

Regarding the issues of racism that you have rightly associated with HIV/AIDS, space and time does not permit me to detail here the genocidal theory of HIV/AIDS. As you likely know, I dealt with this extensively in my Emerging Viruses text, and also in a forthcoming scientific article in the esteemed journal of Medical Hypotheses. Suffice it to say it is likely no coincidence that the Merck pharmaceutical company, along with the IARC-linked Rockefeller Foundation, are among the world's leading depopulation funding sources. Viewed as population controllers might, the AIDS pandemic, heavily affecting ethnic populations, is suspiciously utilitarian if not provably Malthusian.

Sincerely and respectfully yours,

Leonard G. Horowitz, D.M.D., M.A., M.P.H.

LETTER TO KENYAN PRESIDENT
DANIEL T. ARAP MOI
FROM DR. LEONARD G. HOROWITZ

October 18, 2000

His Excellency Daniel T. Arap Moi,
President of Kenya
Office of the President
Nairobi, Kenya
FAX 011-2542250264

Dear President Arap Moi:

The news regarding the mysterious reemergence of the deadly Ebola virus in Uganda and Kenya grieves me greatly as I know it does you. As disturbing as this new outbreak is, I am sorry to say it might have been predicted, and even prevented, given adequate attention to the documentation I published in a book you currently posses, but to my knowledge, may have not yet read, Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola, Nature, Accident Or Intentional?

Since I know you are a very Godly man, and a Spiritually inspired leader who wishes the best for the people of Kenya, I trust you will receive this information with an open heart and mind in an effort to avert further bloodshed and loss of life. I believe, as is rational, that without getting to the root cause of these mysterious outbreaks through a critical review of the existing scientific literature, and related US Government documents that I have compiled, such epidemics are likely to continue and/or reemerge. Alternatively, I believe you, and other articulate and courageous African leaders like South African President Thabo Mbeki, can take a successful stand for truth, identify the root cause of these problems, and ultimately extinguish the threat, saving the lives of millions of people.

The documents I implore you to assign your health ministers and nation's infectious disease specialists to critically review strongly suggest a socio-economic-political origin of Ebola as well as AIDS, in keeping with statements made by the World Health Organization's AIDS czar, Dr. Jonathan Mann, prior to his untimely demise on Flight 111.

Regarding AIDS, the attached copy of a letter I recently sent to President Mbeki will review the evidence I have accumulated concerning the man-made nature of this pandemic, and those who profit by it.

Regarding Ebola, as detailed in Emerging Viruses, the Paul Ehrlich Institute in Frankfurt/Main, Germany, (named for the early pioneer of immunology, infectious disease transmission, and drug therapy) was among the first vaccine research and development facilities to receive a shipment of contaminated monkeys associated with the first outbreak of the Marburg virus, the mother of Ebola, in 1967. As detailed in my letter to President Mbeki, Litton Bionetics's history and affiliations to the Merck pharmaceutical company and other US biological weapons contractors that worked for the CIA at that time, is highly unsettling, if not frankly incriminating.

Relatedly, Stanford University's Dr. Paul Ehrlich, the author of The Population Bomb, is considered the grand patriarch of population control and a leading voice for depopulating areas of Africa, while another likely descendant of the immunology pioneer, Dr. S. Paul Ehrlich, Jr., became Surgeon General of the US in 1976, just prior to the first large Ebola outbreak in Zaire and the Sudan, when he was called upon to defend the US Army's open-air biological weapons tests on unwitting American civilians and military personnel.

Ebola, you may know, is recognized as among the most ideal biological warfare agents discussed by David Baltimore in Biological And Toxin Weapons Today (Oxford University Press, 1986). Baltimore, currently the President of the California Institute of Technology, is recognized as among the world's leading experts in the field of molecular biology, recombinant virology, and biowarfare. Additional incriminating evidence linking Dr. Baltimore to a 1969 military requisition for AIDS and Ebola-like viruses is also provided in my book. (See pp. 508-509 and 421.)

The Ugandan shipment of contaminated monkeys that arrived in Europe's top vaccine production labs was administered by Litton Bionetics, the Army's sixth top biological weapons developer during the late 1960s.

According to two experts discussing the mysterious Marburg virus outbreak of 1967, Dr. Rudolph Siebert of the Hygiene Institute of the Philipps University in Marburg, and Dr. Seymour Kalter from the Southwest Foundation's primate lab and the National Cancer Institute's leading diagnostician of viruses that were believed to be "emerging" iatrogenically from labs, the Marburg virus was "man-made".

Siebert reported in 1972 that the Marburg virus shared the closest similarity to a family of viruses known as Rhabdovirus simian. These included the culprits responsible for rabies.

During my Emerging Viruses investigation, I also learned that Litton Bionetics' Director, John Landon, beginning July 1965, preceding the first Marburg virus outbreak two years later, began experimenting with Rhabdovirus simian. He reported to the NCI, in 1971, that nine of the original 18 monkeys he had injected had either "died" or were "transferred". Monkeys that had survived the infection had obviously developed immunity and antibodies required for vaccine production. Thus, they were apparently "transferred" to Europe's premier vaccine production labs wherein the Marburg outbreaks occurred.

On March 19, 1975, during a cancer virus research and safety symposium, Dr. Kalter, obviously frustrated by some of his colleagues, and the scientific impropriety of avoiding the truth about the mother of Ebola, testified: "I believe simian hemorrhagic fever is important. It appears to be a man-made disease."

Present was Dr. Alfred Hellman, a leading Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) official, and the chairman of the NCI's section on Biohazards Control and Containment. Following Dr. Kalter's stunning but accurate diagnosis of the "man-made" origin of Marburg/Ebola, Hellman, at the helm of the conference's steering committee, felt compelled to redirect discussion to less troubled waters.

Dr. Hellman, Special Virus Cancer Program Reports revealed, was among the world's leading experts in airborne viruses, as Ebola is believed to be. With his links to the AEC, as well as his work at the U.S. Navy Biomedical Research Lab (NBRL) that included biological warfare research and developments, his intimate links to the CIA and their top-secret bioweapons program called Project: MKNAOMI can be surmised.

As discussed and documented in Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola, Hellman served as the executive project officer for the NCI in their effort to test the "Aerosol Properties of Potentially Oncogenic Viruses" with the Navy. Hellman oversaw the NBRL studies in which viruses were spread through the air in an effort to study "virus-host interaction considering both the hazard to humans and animals and the potential for cross contamination."

These studies, similar to what had been conducted on the USS Coral Sea and the USS F. D. Bailey in 1950, were apparently a follow-up to the studies conducted by the Special Operations Division of the Army in cooperation with the Navy and the CIA. This time, in 1971, instead of exposing unwitting military personnel to aerosols containing relatively mild, Serratia marcescens and Bacillus globigii bacteria, humans and animals were exposed to carcinogenic viruses. In these reports, Hellman and his colleagues wisely chose to keep the identity of their human and animal test subjects classified.

All of these studies, biological developments, and testing programs, conducted under the guise of "cancer research", "disease prevention", "vaccine development", and/or military "defense" were, in fact, according to the U.S. Congressional Record, often part of the CIA's Project: MKULTRA that included population control (including depopulation), as well as propaganda dissemination for mass shaping of public opinion.

However circumstantial this evidence may seem, the fact that the key players, as described above and elsewhere in my publications, were all administratively and/or financially linked to CIA-sponsored population-management activities, and thus, by association, to Rockefeller-linked population controllers, deserves serious investigation and reconciliation.

In summary, David Baltimore played a leading role in the Rockefeller-linked National Academy of Sciences/National Research Council in 1969 when his unique expertise was apparently called upon to advise DoD officials and Congressional appropriations committee persons of the feasibility of developing viruses that were descriptively and functionally identical to HIV and Ebola. NCI Special Virus Cancer Program (SVCP) reports showed mutant viruses were developed for which their only conceivable use might be for population control, much like that being accomplished by HIV/AIDS.

The clearest examples of this on the summary list of lethal mutant biologicals under investigation at that time by Bionetics, in association with other military contractors, was the airborne recombinants of "acute lymphocytic leukemia" and "influenza" and "Para influenza" viruses. (See page 452 of my book and related SVCP documentation.)

In other words, spreading leukemia like a common flu would better suit a depopulation objective than it would either cancer research or biological warfare objectives. After all, leukemia kills too slowly for use in traditional biological warfare applications. Not so, however, for "non-lethal" applications for gross, insidious, and lucrative population reduction.

Additionally incriminating is the fact that these appropriations hearings and investigative efforts occurred immediately following Henry Kissinger's request for clarification by the Secretary of Defense, Melvin Laird, concerning America's biological weapons capabilities, at a time when Kissinger, as National Security Advisor, was formulating depopulation policies, particularly targeting Third World nations, and advancing "urgent" new population policy recommendations for implementation by the United Nations, USAID, and the World Bank.

Moreover, given Kissinger's foreign policy objectives for central Africa at that time, including massive depopulation, ordering the CIA to release deadly biologicals in the area is not unrealistic.

The Rockefeller protégé had, after all: (1) instigated the Zaire/Angola war by initially dispatching CIA agent-provocateurs into the area to foment unrest; (2) arranged for payments and "soft loans" to President Mobutu of Zaire who, for an additional $250 million, leased approximately 30,000 square miles of Eastern Zaire (home to approximately 760,000 African villagers) to Atomic Energy Commission-linked ex-Nazi personnel including V-2 missile project officers Dr. Kurt H. Debus, who directed Cape Canaveral's space program until 1975, Richard Gompertz, a specialist on V-2 engines who later directed NASA's Chrysler space division, and Lutz Thilo Kayser, also known as "Dadieu's young man" in reference to Armin Dadieu, his mentor and prominent SS officer who reported to the infamous Nazi commander and art thief, Hermann Goering, on their special program for storing uranium; (3) directed the exfiltration of Nazi scientists from Germany to the United States, like those mentioned above, as well as Erich Traub, Hitler's top biological weapons developer and world-class cancer virologist, during the CIA's top secret Project: Paperclip. Dr. Traub, like Dr. Hellman, affiliated with the NBRL; (4) planned and effected the deployment of nuclear weapons around the world to serve Rockefeller's economic and "national security" interests. In this vein, the association of AEC officials, including Dr. Hellman, to the top-secret testing of immune suppressive and carcinogenic aerosolized biologicals, Kissinger's selected alternatives to costly nuclear weapons, is additionally disturbing, if not incriminating; and (5) served as a leading consultant on the Board of Advisors of the Merck Pharmaceutical Company, the firm that developed the 1974-75 Hepatitis-B vaccine given to gay men in New York City and Blacks in Central Africa that most likely triggered the international AIDS pandemic. Merck's president and Kissinger's corporate affiliate, George W. Merck, was America's biological weapons industry director from World War II until the early 1970s, when the suspected AIDS-linked vaccines, and Ebola-like hemorrhagic fever viruses, were being pilot tested.

Given the horrific implications of all of the above, President Arap Moi, I submit to you as a humble "watchman" described in Ezekiel 3:17-3:21, two general options present for your consideration: (1) do nothing and have the ongoing biological devastation continue unchallenged and unabated, or (2) seriously consider, with input from your health ministers and scientific advisors, the evidence I advance, ascertain whether or not my findings are valid, and if so, take a stand for Kenyans and people around the world by openly articulating truths that have been heretofore suppressed.

This second choice must include, as President Mbeki has ordered, a reevaluation of all theories of origin, treatment options, and preventive practices concerning HIV/AIDS and Ebola.

Should you follow this second path, you will likely learn, as I have, that those who delivered these plagues have also actively suppressed highly effective, low risk, cost-saving alternatives to pharmaceutical "cocktails".

There is a reason the Bible teaches that those who brought on God's judgment and the great plagues in the End Times practiced "sorcery" derived from "pharmacopoeia". It is my sincere hope that, as time passes, and more loving "watchmen" herald life-saving and blood-sparing truths, what currently stands as history's grossest example of man's inhumanity towards man, will become the greatest impetus for planetary repentance and lasting world peace. Holding this vision, I would be pleased by your fellowship and invitation to be a shepherd on this path.

Yours in the Spirit of health and hope,
Leonard G. Horowitz, D.M.D., M.A., M.P.H.

NEWS RELEASE: October 20, 2000

Harvard Grad Says
Vaccine Study Triggered AIDS

Presentation Planned For Boston Public Health Association Meeting In November

Boston—The author of a bestselling book that alleges AIDS was triggered by contaminated vaccines will present his findings at the upcoming American Public Health Association meeting in Boston. The thesis, advanced by Harvard graduate Dr. Leonard Horowitz in an upcoming issue of the scientific journal of Medical Hypotheses, is the subject of a forthcoming BBC special planned for early 2001. The works herald compelling new evidence that the AIDS pandemic was initiated by early Hepatitis-B (HB) vaccine trials conducted on gay men in New York City and villagers in Central Africa during the early-to-mid 1970s. This controversial theory lends credence to widespread suspicions among minority populations as to why the disease disproportionately affects Blacks.

Based on an independent three-year study into the origin of HIV that explains the chimpanzee connection to human AIDS, Dr. Horowitz determined that risky pilot HB vaccine trials were initiated by the New York University Medical Center and continued by the Merck pharmaceutical company until 1975. Collaborating with Merck, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), and the National Institutes for Allergies and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), the government's top AIDS science agency, produced four lots of HB vaccine containing 200,000 human doses.

The four lots, believed to be contaminated with HIV gene sequences, were prepared by passing live HB viruses, grown in contaminated African chimpanzees, to polio vaccine recipients previously exposed to monkey cancer viruses suspected of playing a role in initiating AIDS. The final preparations were injected into gay men in New York City and Blacks in Central Africa by 1975.

According to several investigators, this may best explain how and why there was a sudden simultaneous outbreak of at least four major HIV strains, on two far removed continents, in two demographically distinct populations, in the late 1970s, corresponding to the only complete virus discoveries. These disclosures come at a time of heightened concern regarding the risks posed by HIV/AIDS to U.S. national security and international finance.

On April 29, 2000, the CIA issued a report

declaring that global HIV/AIDS was a U.S. "national security threat" prompting President Clinton to place all of AIDS science, and the agencies conducting it, under CIA oversight. Immediate calls for the arrest of HIV/AIDS "dissident scientists" were made by officials representing consensus interests. Dr. Mark Wainberg, for instance, affiliated with McGill University in Montreal, and the president of the International AIDS Society, called for the immediate incarceration of "scientific dissidents" who proposed alternative explanations of AIDS, its origin, and treatment.

These actions closely followed the highly publicized decision of South African President Thabo Mbeki to include the testimonies of "dissident" scientists in a review of HIV/AIDS. Synchronously, President Clinton approved the National Intelligence Council's (NIC) CIA-sponsored formal declaration of AIDS as a "national security threat".

No stranger to controversy, or U.S. public health officials, Dr. Horowitz has been a regular critic of health scientists biased by economics and pharmaceutical interests. His bestseller, Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola, Nature, Accident or Intentional?, for which he received the 1999 "Author of the Year Award" from the World Natural Health Organization, has gained increasing respect from members of Congress and the medical and scientific communities.

In 1984, when scientists first questioned the possible HB vaccine link to the AIDS epidemic, CDC and Merck pharmaceutical officials omitted investigating homosexuals in New York City, the men known to be the primary and earliest test subjects for the suspected vaccine. Instead, they focused only on Denver and San Francisco populations that had not been immunized using the earliest, most implicated, vaccine lots.

"No wonder your 'expert' CDC authors remained 'anonymous' on this Morbidity & Mortality Weekly Report" Dr. Horowitz chided Dr. David Satcher, Surgeon General of the United States, when he still directed the CDC. "I too would feel ashamed to affix my name to such bogus 'science'."

"It's essential that we understand the cause of AIDS and its prevention," President Clinton told Ugandan leaders on August 26, 2000. To this Dr. Horowitz responded: "Considering the likelihood that HIV/AIDS was vaccine induced, without considering this possible cause, our prevention efforts will remain shortsighted and consistently ineffective unless, that is, your desire is global depopulation."

Powerful Positive Forces At Work In Our Lives

7/3/01 HATONN

Good evening, my scribe. It is I, Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come in the One Light of Father/Mother Source—Creator God. Be still and allow for the message to flow freely.

Dear ones, Great Positive Forces are at work within your lives every day. You need not even be consciously aware of the presence of these Forces in order to reap the benefits they offer. These Forces are often referred to as "Spirit Guides", "Angels", "Jesus", "God Force", "Great Spirit"—just to name a few. These Forces offer great compassion and love to all ones, regardless of past or present deeds.

There is NOTHING you ones can do that you cannot be forgiven. Forgiveness comes from within, just as the infinite Life-Force Energy of Love comes from within. Forgiveness comes when YOU ALLOW for it to be a part of your experience.

Those who hold to guilt and shame with an "undying" passion will block the flow of forgiveness of self, and thus create an inner pressure that is both unnatural and unneeded.

Many who do this sort of self punishment do so out of a desire not to forget some one or some thing, though they will profess the reason for the self punishment to be a "tribute to" or "in honor of" the memory or the idea that causes them guilt or shame.

Ones in the physical schoolroom will always make perceived mistakes. These "mistakes", once recognized, will serve as a catalyst for new awareness of self, and eventually serve as markers along the journey of life from which you will be able to measure and perceive growth and change.

Allow for the fact that, for there to be growth, ones must move from their current place of self limitation (due to erroneous beliefs and misperceptions) to recognition and acceptance of the awareness that they are in error. When ones believe that they have achieved the pinnacle of Truth, and therefore there is no need for further exploration and self discovery, these ones have succumbed to the vast overwhelm of their own ignorance.

This is not an insult, for there is truly an infinite journey ahead for each of you. The journey becomes infinite as there is a boundless expansion of awareness achieved every moment as the Infinite Whole of the collective experiences of all ones, everywhere throughout Creation, generates and regenerates newness, and thus greater awareness of Self—The One Light—from which all ones come forth.

To hold rigid to current beliefs and awareness will only serve to prolong the searching that nags at you from within. This nagging is the innate desire instilled in all ones (and expressed in the First Law of The Creation, which you honor in the masthead of The SPECTRUM) to: “Go forth and seek greater knowledge, understanding, and thus awareness.”

You each are explorers who are seeking to understand what exactly is your place in the overall “Divine Plan”. The inner thrust that you may be trying to ignore or suppress through distraction will never leave you, and it will cause you to eventually take actions that will increase your awareness of self and others to a point where you will eventually recognize the DIRECT inner connection to Creator God (the One who created you).

This realization (understanding), when FELT, will cause you ones to begin on an inward journey of exploration. One where you seriously explore the much more subtle emotional sensations and feelings (vibrational signals) that are constantly being offered to you as “markers”, “sign posts”, and sometimes “SCREAMING SIRENS” along the way.

Where do these vibrational signals come from? This leads us full circle. From the Great Positive Forces (Guides, Angels, and God(s)) you ones believe in and trust. The physical game of life is well orchestrated from many vibrational realms (dimensions). All participants have their own unique challenges along the way, and you each play a role that greatly impacts MANY ones across ALL vibrational ranges.

We of the Lighted Realms are diligent in our efforts to maximize the growth potential of all ones. This will, in many instances, mean we stand back and patiently await the call for assistance. We will honor your choices and, if you choose a path of ignorance and confusion, then we will honor this as well. We only go where we are welcome. Thus we remind you ones to go within and ask for assistance on a regular basis. The call will be answered!

Learn to recognize the help that is offered to you. With a little conscious effort, you will begin to appreciate the Powerful Positive Forces working in your life. Please also be very diligent in your efforts of challenging any and all “thoughts” that come to you. Call upon the Light (or Creator God, Jesus, your favorite Angel, or any ideal to which you hold as the Perfection of Goodness) and clarify all thoughts and ideas that may come to you in moments of intuition or meditation.

There are dark forces working to keep all ones in a state of pliable ignorance. These ones will try to emulate the Lighted ones in an effort to gain your trust and confidence. Then, when the time is right, they will not only pull the “rug” out from under your feet, but they will attempt to wrap you within a cloud of confusion wherein you will wonder what happened. Remember: 99% truth and 1% lie can cause great amounts of chaos—especially when the 1% is timed with great precision and accuracy.

All ones seeking the path that helps awaken people are confronted by these dark ones who wish to keep the masses in a state of ignorance. The greater the effectiveness of the Lightworker, the greater the attack. This is in large part the reason for the great destruction of ancient libraries and such. For the truth was written and archived for the world to see, and yet the “great” men of the past were exalted to the state of “hero” for having destroyed knowledge and truth.

Not much has changed in modern times—with the exception of the accelerated rate at which truth and knowledge are distorted and, in essence, destroyed. The mass media networks work diligently to filter and mold the current history of events as they unfold, so as to maintain the desired mental and emotional state of distraction. Remember: if the truth sets you free, then the lie must be the slavemaster’s favorite tool!

This is an ongoing effort by dark energies and forces who struggle with their own inner state of disconnect, and who derive great pleasure in exerting their influence and control over others. By controlling the emotional state of the masses, these entities effectively keep the masses in a low-frequency state of confusion, doubt, despair, etc., that makes them much more manageable.

Many of the children finishing high school, and even college, are feeling a little confused, as if they are “missing” something big. They have been taught to work hard and buy toys (cars, houses, and gadgets) and pay their dues (taxes) to the government that takes care of them. Rarely is one taught to explore their inner Creative Potential. If they have been, it is often only because a parent or other adult mentor has taken the initiative to coach the child.

Exercising your creativity is a very wonderful way to “tune-in” to the more subtle vibrational signals constantly being offered to you. Creative new ideas will cause you to go beyond your current repetitions of habitual living. New ideas acted upon, even in the smallest of ways, will cause the idea to grow and evolve. Newness and relief from the murky mist of ignorance and repetition are what the young adults of the world are craving. And yet they are usually in a frenzied state of “treadmill” activity trying desperately to “do the right thing” and be “normal”.

The current societal structure is built on a foundation of illusion and perceptual assumptions that man is little more than an animal who simply needs to be entertained in order to be quieted to a state of complacency. When you have a society that will spend hundreds of millions of dollars to make a “box-office hit” motion picture and a society that will spend billions of dollars to go and view same, when all the while there are places around the world where children are starving to death or being consumed by great disease, you have a world where the “Great Illusion Master” (anti-Christ) reigns supreme.

In essence, those who are buying into the illusion are slowly and methodically braiding the rope from which they and their children and grandchildren will be hung—all the while thinking that they are “fitting in” and being “normal”.

Dear ones, it is not our wish to always look toward what is “wrong” within your physical schoolroom. In fact, it is for these very reasons that many of you came forth at this time. You chose to enter into the third-dimensional experience to add positive energy and creativity to the world in which you now find yourself. Many of you simply are in need of reminding.

Your current environment is perfect for you to have the opportunity to go within and tap the infinite Creative Potential, and thus find a way to show to the world that there are other options and choices. But don’t become discouraged if what you have to offer frequently falls on deaf ears.

We, of the higher vibrational realms, witness that a good many of the Lightworkers have become “trapped” in the very illusion they intended to help others free themselves from. Such is the “risk” ones assume when they take on such challenges in the lower vibrational ranges of the third-dimensional physical planes.

Many ones, though “trapped” by their current misperceptions, are by no means “counted out”. These ones are the “sleeping giants” whom we are constantly efforting to get through to. Some will have the so-called “near-death experience” and come back a “changed” person, while others will have equally impacting experiences that will “trigger” within them an awakening that, in turn, will cause a great shift in awareness, and thus open them to a greater understanding of who they are and why they are experiencing at this time.

The Lightworkers of the Higher Realms know well the methods of those who feverishly try to enslave the minds of the masses. Likewise, these twisted dark souls know that we will not interfere with the free-will choices of another, and therefore the game continues.

Our methods are tried and true. We know that, with great patience and persistence on our part, all ones will eventually awaken from the illusion to the Greater Reality. When that time comes, the game is over (on your planet), and the dark ones go elsewhere for the satiation of their lust for low-level emotional energy.

Please realize that you have chosen to incarnate into this world at this time so that you can have a more direct impact upon the current evolutionary state of your world. By incarnating you establish a more direct route to affecting the Positive Energy flowing into your world. Learn to reach within and bring this Positive Energy (Light) through into the physical in a deliberate and effective manner.

Be not afraid to take actions that will stand as an example to others of what they are capable of achieving and creating if they just remember to keep centered around the Highest Ideal of Goodness—Creator God. Learn to become a beacon and example for others to follow. You are never too old, nor too young, to start. Elders can inspire others; the youth can stand as a symbol of hope, and thus inspire the elders. In the end, they are one in the same as the infinite progression of life unfolds.

I am Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come in the Light of Creator God—The One Light. May you each find, within self, your conscious connections to the Great Positive Force that is forever reaching out to inspire you to the next level of awareness.

Much Love, Blessings, and Peace to you ALL! Salu.

More Revelations About Peculiar Idaho Standoff

Editor's note: The following information provides several new revelations to add to the astonishing compilation article titled "Idaho Standoff: Exposing A Peculiar Land-Grab Scam" in last month's SPECTRUM.

On the surface, the actual events (some of which made national news, though in a greatly sanitized rendition) SEEMED to be "simply" that of a greedy plot to acquire the McGuckin family's Idaho homestead in a commercially desirable location. However, deeper currents and clues, evident in last month's outlay and again below, suggest that perhaps much more could be going on here, possibly having to do with land acquisitions for secret underground facilities in the area that may have connections to the events behind last year's rash of late-summer "lightning induced" wildfires in that same general region (which have started up AGAIN this year—ALREADY!).

Some very confident (or very stupid) pawns feel that they are above the common law and can get away with a surprising array of illegal and immoral actions. Other clues suggest that some serious, covert mind-control techniques are being effectively employed to "direct" the events still unfolding.

Though powerful and well hidden, whatever is behind this matter hints at being much more sophisticated than a crass real estate scam—though such a money-making "carrot" would certainly be plenty of incentive to satisfy the usual temptations enjoyed by political professionals who then "ask no questions" concerning what's "not their business" to know about further up the ladder of command and intrigue.

Edgar Steele And His Uphill Battle To Do The Right Thing

From the Sierra Times (www.sierratimes.com)

for 6/13/01:

Edgar J. Steele appeared at the "shelter" hearing for the McGuckin children held this morning and made two motions, the second of which was a formal request to be granted leave to withdraw from the representation of JoAnn McGuckin and her children due to his client's refusal to cooperate with him.

Mrs. McGuckin then clearly pronounced her desire that Mr. Steele not continue in any capacity on her behalf or that of her children, thereby obviating the need for the Court to rule on Mr. Steele's second motion. Because the proceedings were under seal, inquiries concerning Mr. Steele's first motion should be directed to the Court.

Steele filed with the Court an affidavit signed by "Jane Doe" (true name disclosed only to the Court due to interests of the children, since Jane Doe will likely provide the temporary foster home for the children) which stated, in part: "I first spoke with JoAnn after her arrest by phone the night of June 1, 2001, and she confirmed that she has asked Mr. Steele to help her out and represent her legal interests of a civil nature, and those of her children."

Steele also filed with the Court a lengthy affidavit of his own which stated, in part: "She stated that she wanted me to appear at any hearing and ensure that her kids didn't get railroaded. She wanted me to defend her interests in keeping her family together and being reunited with her kids. She also asked me to look into the land title forfeiture and see if there was any way to undo that. Then, to make it official, I said 'Then you want me to represent you for all civil issues related to your pending criminal charges, including the land transfers and your children?' 'Yes' was her response. 'You want me to represent your children with regard to any and all custody issues?' Again, Mrs. McGuckin said 'Yes'. I told her I would do so and there would be no charge...."

This should finally put to rest the false allegation circulated by Mr. Robinson, Mr. Powell and the Sheriff's Office that Edgar Steele had never been retained by Mrs. McGuckin.

Steele said: "You know, it is singularly curious that this is the only point upon which these three parties have been able to agree in this matter." Steele also pointed to the fact that he has been the most vocal critic of both Mr. Robinson, for pressing a groundless case and trying the case in the press with false statements, and Mr. Powell, for not diligently pursuing Mrs. McGuckin's interests such as getting her released from jail under acceptable terms and securing at least supervised visitation with her own children, who she has not seen since the day she was arrested.

Steele said that Mrs. McGuckin's "about face" concerning his involvement in this case was as complete as it was without any apparent base in Steele's not having been diligent on behalf of Mrs. McGuckin. "I have no idea why she turned on me. She is extremely fragile mentally and highly susceptible to suggestion and the influences of others, as told me repeatedly of late by (Jane Doe)." Steele absolutely ruled out the possibility that he had subjected Mrs. McGuckin to any undue influence: "What did I have to gain? I was offering to gift her with legal work and a value well in excess of $100,000, after all."

Steele's has also been the lone legal-related voice to protest the seizure and sale of the McGuckin family home, though he stated that he had no evidence of any connection between his outspokenness in that regard and the apparent unified attempt to marginalize, then eliminate, him from the case.

Steele noted that what should be the single most important matter in this entire affair—that of putting this family back together and giving them the space to heal—seems to have been given short shrift. Steele turned over the results of his efforts in this area to the recently-appointed co-counsel for JoAnn McGuckin's interests, Sara Seaborg, for continued handling.

Nor has anybody other than Steele's office, and thus-far anonymous benefactor, done any work or investigation in the pursuit of undoing the egregious tax seizure and sale of the McGuckin family home. This development also closes that file, though Steele indicated a willingness to share the results of his work in that regard, which he characterized as "extremely promising", with any subsequent counsel that Mrs. McGuckin might secure to carry on her family's interests in the Garfield Bay property, now owned by a Mr. And Mrs. Korengut of New Jersey.

His withdrawal also forecloses the possibility of Steele's firm at this time making an anticipated constitutional challenge to the Idaho State law which provides that the proceeds of the sale of the property realized from a tax sale in excess of back taxes go to the government rather than the dispossessed owners of the property.

Steele has boldly pronounced that: "This law is a clear violation of the Constitutional prohibitions against denial of due process and unreasonable seizures." "Regrettably," said Steele, "more people will have to be impoverished by their own government before another attorney eventually comes into possession of a case with which he or she is willing to go up and get the law reversed, as my firm stood ready to do in this case."

Steele noted that donations from every state in the country were pouring in to the trust fund he established to, first pay JoAnn McGuckin's bail, then provide for the family's needs. "We went a little over $14,000 on Saturday and every day sees the post office box stuffed again." Steele absolutely ruled out the possibility of turning the money over to the appointed counsel, Bryce Powell, for handling, saying that he would likely give over handling of the trust fund to a local bank, with the strict provision that Powell never be allowed to touch it, since Powell had previously tried to get Steele to pay over some of that money to Powell, to supplement his own county stipend for handling the case.

Steele stated that, previously, he had been "ready to post $10,000 cash to bail out Mrs. McGuckin just two days after she was arrested" and was frustrated that the bail was never reduced to that amount. Instead, the court merely granted her a release on her own recognizance, but saddled with terms to which she could not consent, such as agreeing not to see her own children, who had lost their father just two days prior to her arrest.

"I'm a father," said Steele, "and that is a term I would never agree to, not in a million years. She might as well be held under an order which denies the possibility of posting of bail, for all the good the current court order does her."

Steele was especially critical of the local press, which seemed to fully cooperate with the Robinson/Powell/Jarvin "triumvirate" in attempting to paint him as an interloper with ulterior motives. "Absolutely" said Steele. "I admit it. My hidden agenda was seeing that this family get a fair shake from the system for a change. Is it any wonder that the system lashed out at me?"

"Just goes to show you," Steele said of his departure from the case, "even when it comes to your own neighbors, sometimes no good deed goes unpunished."

Something Rotten In The Idaho Dirt

From RUMOR MILL NEWS (RUMILLS), (<http://www.rumormillnews.com>), 6/19/00:

SOMETHING ROTTEN IN THE IDAHO DIRT by Kathy McMahon <<http://www.psyopnews.com>>

Growing McGuckin petition at <<http://www.petitionpetition.com/cgi/petition.cgi?id=1891h>>

Last week on PsyOpNews, we reported "smelling a rat" in the cheap tax-sale of the McGuckin "siege kids" home in Bonner County, Idaho. That smell is turning into a stench.

Closer examination reveals a Bonner County that looks like a judicial and administrative "Wild West"—more reminiscent of the late 1890s than the 21st century.

This week, Don Harkins, the redoubtable editor of the local investigative Idaho Observer, reminds us that police deputy Bill Tyson, who lured JoAnn McGuckin from her six children, only to arrest her, is alleged to have shot and then framed a local man, Rex Prewitt, in 1999, and is facing a civil suit in the matter later this year.

Perjury

Only weeks before the recent arrest of JoAnn McGuckin, in April 2001, Lucy Prewitt—wife of the now-imprisoned man, told Bonner county Commissioners that deputy Bill Tilson had "committed perjury repeatedly" in reports, interviews, and court testimony. She said that Tilson and police partner Bill Skinner told "different stories to other officers, their superiors, the Review Board, and in court".

"They seem to have a difficult time keeping their invented stories straight. They framed my husband after shooting him unarmed. They can't remember which lies they've told before."

The officers have maintained their account of events was true, but Mrs. Prewitt called for an investigation into what Harkin says "appears to be a conspiracy to throw an innocent man into prison as a cover for the wrongful shooting".

Professional Misconduct

Meanwhile, as JoAnn languishes in Bonner County Jail, her lawyer, Bryce Powell, has agreed to delay the hearing of her case while negotiations continue with Prosecutor Phil Robinson.

Unfortunately for JoAnn, that tactic may leave her devoid of the media spotlight that could be her best protection.

In her April statement to Bonner County Commissioners, Lucy Prewitt, whose husband was also prosecuted by Phil Robinson, said that he had "committed perjury in court and lied to the attorney general's office" in the handling of her husband's case.

Back in 1994 the Idaho State Bar gave Phil Robinson a public reprimand for his professional misconduct under: "Idaho Rule of Professional Conduct 8.4(c), conduct involving dishonesty, deceit, or misrepresentation in written statements made to the court."

Phil Robinson might have had a credible opponent in Edgar Steele, the man who offered to represent JoAnn McGuckin—then withdrew following difficulties with client communications, and a media outcry over his previous defense of a member of a right-wing group. Local public defender Bryce Powell replaced Steele.

Don Harkins, the Idaho Observer editor, is very concerned at her continued detention for refusal to agree to abide by child welfare decisions on visitation with her own children.

"We suspect that JoAnn is being drugged. We also believe that she is becoming inappropriately attached to her public defender—lulled into feeling as if he is performing in her best interests when we can tell from the outside that he is not. By the time she is released from custody, she will be county putty” Harkins wrote in a recent email received by <PsyOpNews.com>

Another Mother's Police Troubles

Harkins, whose anti-corruption crusade has some supporters fearing for his life, also recalls that another local mother—Doris Ann Parkison, whom he describes as “a dedicated wife and mother of four who owned an upholstery business”, was found guilty April 27, 2001, of possessing methamphetamine that nobody but police have ever seen.

Fearing that a court-mandated drug test would be illegally tampered with, Doris fled, but was captured along with her husband in Washington State, where she is awaiting extradition to Idaho for contempt of court.

The Parkisons were owners of 60 acres of forest near Hope. Harkins reports that: “Their property is adjacent to land that seems to be important to powerful forces.”

Parkison and her husband had been researching some of the “curious” relationships among those in the power structure in Bonner county, says Harkin, who accepts their claim that they had already experienced several months of mostly psychological harassment before the arrest incident.

Idaho Dirt

Joann McGuckin has about as much chance of a fair deal in all this as a Black in 1990s Los Angeles.

There is old dirt in Idaho. But it is unlike the dirt they wash off Idaho potatoes. This old dirt won't wash off at all. We need to protect JoAnn McGuckin and her children from these people.

McGuckin Released! National Standoff Mother's Charges Reduced

From the Sierra Times (www.sierratimes.com) for 6/29/00:

A judge on Thursday freed the woman whose six children held off sheriff's officers for five days, reducing the child neglect charge against her to a misdemeanor.

The unconditional release allows JoAnn McGuckin the right to see her children without supervision, but she still faces a custody battle with the state, which has placed them in a foster home. A custody hearing was set for Friday.

McGuckin had refused another judge's earlier offer to leave jail on condition that visits with her children be supervised. The children visited McGuckin in jail only once.

As McGuckin left jail, she said she would spend the night in a motel.

“It's one step in the right direction” she told reporters. “We'll see where we go from here. I'm almost bewildered. I've been in jail so long it feels like home.”

The misdemeanor charge carries a maximum sentence of six months in jail and a $3,000 fine. McGuckin pleaded innocent Thursday to the reduced charge.

First District Court Magistrate Judge Debra Heise ruled there was insufficient evidence to support the felony neglect charge.

“I find the state failed to sustain its burden that the conditions were likely to cause death or great bodily injury” the judge said. “The state has proven that their health may have been in danger.”

Heise had ordered the hearing to determine if criminal charges should be filed.

McGuckin was arrested May 29, prompting a standoff between the children, ages 8 to 16, and authorities at their ramshackle home.

The ruling came after the judge heard testimony from her eldest, 19-year-old Erina McGuckin, who left home last year to join the Navy. She complained to authorities about the living conditions at their home.

She said her family lived in an unsanitary, squalid house without running water since 1977, with little or no heat and intermittent electricity.

On Wednesday she had said the family ate bread that had been gnawed by rodents and had to remove animal feces from their food as it was cooking.

But a conflicting account was given Thursday by Kathryn McGuckin, 16, who said the family had been under extreme stress for several years because both parents were sick.

She said that had caused some of the housecleaning, laundry, and other chores to remain undone for periods of time.

The children's father, Michael McGuckin, died of multiple sclerosis in May.

“We could not deal with the stress of the house, being on shift all night long with Dad, haul water, prepare food for the kids, and our education, and keep up the house to the world standards of what all homes should be” Kathryn McGuckin said.

Comment: Idaho's Property Theft Laws

by Don Harkins

The McGuckin story has illuminated several of the mechanisms whereby agencies of the government are emboldened through civic complacency to violate due process and civil rights to imprison people and seize custody of their property and their minor children. The McGuckin story also shined a spotlight on what may prove to be the biggest racket in the state: As per Title 63, Chapter 10, Section 1015 of Idaho Code, proceeds from the sale of real property, “shall be paid into the county treasury by the tax collector.”

The McGuckin family could have redeemed their 40 acres of beautiful north Idaho property, with ¼ mile of private lake frontage, which has a value estimated to be between $350,000 and $500,000 had they been able to pay a year's taxes—about $1,500. However, because the county commissioners refused to “forgive” the property taxes, which they have the power to do, and refused to accept a payment from neighbors who took up a collection to redeem the McGuckin property, it was sold at auction for $53,000. The total tax owed the county, less costs associated with the sale, was about $8,100.

The excess monies, rather than being returned to the family, was deposited with the county treasury where it was “apportioned among the several state and county funds and taxing districts, as provided for the apportionment of property taxes”.

The law is different when a person is behind on their personal property taxes. According to IC 63-11-7: “All excess over the property taxes and costs of the proceedings of any sale must be returned to the owner of the property or deposited in the county treasury to be refunded by order of the county commissioners.”

In other words, if the county decides to seize personal property to pay a tax debt, it must return to the indebted citizen all monies over the due amount; if the county seizes your real property to pay a tax debt, it must keep all monies generated from the sale. The way the law reads, real property may be foreclosed upon for back taxes, seized for nonpayment, and sold at auction to the highest bidder.

When the new owner, who in this case purchased the property for pennies on its real dollar value, pays the full amount of the sale to the county, which currently holds title, the back taxes are paid and the excess funds are deposited into the county treasury where they are apportioned among the various state and county agencies.

"We are going to challenge the law" commented Bonner County Board of Commissioners Chairman Tom Suttmeier at a public meeting June 5. Suttmeier stated that he thought the law was unfair and that had the family been allowed to keep the excess, it would have at least been able to afford to purchase a trailer house to park on a different piece of property.

It would appear that the legislature passed into law a powerful incentive for county governments to foreclose upon private property by giving them the authority to keep all the "profit" realized from such sales for government activities.

McGuckin Case Prompts Review Of Tax Law Recently "Recodified" Tax Law Authorizes, Encourages Counties To "Steal" Real Property

by Don Harkins

It appears that tax reformation bill H783 sponsors and supporters, such as the Idaho Association of Counties, were well aware of the implications of the provision that became 63-1015 in Idaho tax code, but most of the legislators were not.

Both houses voted unanimously to pass the bill, oblivious to the serious consequences to property owners. Had the full assembly of legislators and the public, whose conscience they represent, understood that the new tax code would give counties ungodly incentive to take people's property in tax foreclosure, as a tremendous revenue generating scheme, this provision of the law would likely have been stricken.

It is my belief, after reviewing the bill's legislative history, that the provision that allows funds in excess of taxes owed be deposited with the county treasurer to be apportioned among various state and county coffers, was intentionally not discussed or debated. Why? Because the bill's special interest proponents, namely the Idaho Association of Counties, knew the public would have been outraged to learn that the state would realize huge profits from the misfortune of Idaho property owners who fall on hard times.

Both the houses of the 1996 Idaho legislature unanimously passed H783 which completely revamped the state's tax law and gave birth to section 1015 of the law which states that all proceeds from the sale of real property (land) that had been foreclosed upon for nonpayment of taxes "shall be paid into the county treasury by the tax collector".

Bill supporters, including the Idaho Association of Counties and bill sponsor Rep. JoAn Wood (R-Rigby), claimed that: "The purpose of this bill is to recodify Title 63...to simplify and modernize administration of the property tax system, clarify language, and organize the property tax statutes in a more logical manner."

The bill's statement of purpose is explained under the heading "fiscal note" that: "There would be no impact on the general fund and no increase in taxes to taxpayers. There would be an economic benefit and potential cost savings to the counties by improving the efficiency of property tax administration."

The high-profile McGuckin incident showed that the law is a boon to county coffers at the expense of citizens whose property is sold at public auction to satisfy a delinquent property tax debt. In the McGuckin case, 40 acres of pristine property with ¼ mile of lake frontage with an estimated market value of $350,000 to $500,000 was sold for $53,000 to developers for approximately $8,000 in back taxes.

Prior to the passage of H783, proceeds from the sale in excess of the tax debt would have been returned to the family. However, current state tax law demands that excess proceeds are to be deposited in the county treasury "to be apportioned among the several state and county funds and taxing districts". Section 1015 of the current tax law provides tremendous incentive to county officials to foreclose on private real property.

State Mental Health Code Behind McGuckin Persecution? County Prosecutorial Process Resembles 16-24 More Than 18-15

by Don Harkins

JoAnn McGuckin was arrested the afternoon of May 29 on the basis of a criminal complaint filed by Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson at 9:30 a.m. that same day. Robinson alleged felony injury to children, a violation of Idaho Code 18-1501(1).

The process that led to McGuckin's arrest and the subsequent searching of her home appears to be in flagrant violation of numerous state guidelines that dictate due process in a criminal prosecution. Though Robinson claimed that McGuckin was in violation of IC 1501(1), his process more closely resembles one that could be used to enforce IC 16-2411 and 16-2419. Those statutes are found in Title 16 of Idaho Code: Children's Mental Health Services.

It would appear that Robinson told the court that he was proceeding under IC 18-1501(1) so that the public would not discover that he had invoked the awesome police powers of the state as authorized by Title 16 of Idaho Code. Where's the warrants?

Though the criminal complaint was filed by Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson, and his "witness" testimony at the probable cause hearing convinced Magistrate Judge Debra Heise to find probable cause for a search warrant and arrest warrant for JoAnn McGuckin May 29, 2001, it appears that actual arrest and search warrants were never issued.

McGuckin, 46, was arrested for felony injury to children, and her Garfield Bay home thoroughly searched by county officials who hoped to find enough evidence to justify their actions which led to her arrest and the infamous five-day standoff between her children and city, county, and state police.

Robinson claims that he delivered the warrants to police at the McGuckin property the afternoon of May 29. Though warrants are considered public documents, no member of the media has been able to obtain the warrants in this matter. Bonner County Sheriff Phil Jarvis has told the media that he will neither confirm or deny the existence of either the arrest warrant or the search warrant. What about Rule 7?

According to Rule 7 of the Idaho Rules of Criminal Procedure: "All felony offenses shall be prosecuted by indictment or information." Robinson did not seek an indictment to prosecute McGuckin. He merely filed a complaint with the court at 9:30 a.m. May 29, 2001, wherein he infers that he is a witness to the crime of felonious Injury to Children.

Rule 7 also states: "The information shall be signed by the prosecuting attorney."

The complaint is signed by the complainant "Philip Robinson", apparently in his private capacity. Rule 7 does not provide for the prosecutor to witness and prosecute a felony. The complaint was defective because it was not signed by the prosecutor.

According to Rule 7, Robinson cannot be both witness and prosecutor. Aside from the apparent violations of due process described above, it turns out that many of the charges made by Robinson on the complaint and during the probable cause hearing have either been found to be false, grossly exaggerated, or so subjective it would be impossible to establish McGuckin's criminal intent.

A Look At Title 16's Chapter 24

Chapter 24 of Title 16 has 34 sections which deal with children's mental health. This chapter became law after passage of HB320 in 1998. The Idaho Observer published TUFF President and IO Legislative Analyst Bill Denman's analyses of the bill while it was being discussed in the legislature in June, 1997, and after it was passed into law in the July, 1998 edition. In both the 1997 and 1998 articles, Denman predicted that the law would provide government employees with tremendous latitude to justify the involuntary removal of children from homes based upon subjective statements commonly referred to as hearsay.

[Editor's note: And, of course, this same procedure is occurring all over the United States under the permission of similar laws. Thus you can be sure the whole perverted agenda is instigated and coordinated from much higher up the "crooked" ladder of command than any one county or state level.]

Section 2411 appears to be a description of how police ultimately achieved physical custody of the children five days after the apparently warrantless arrest of their mother. Section 2411(1) states: "A peace officer may take a child into protective custody and immediately transport the child to a treatment facility for emergency mental health evaluation in the absence of a court order if and only if the officer determines that an emergency situation exists as defined in this chapter, and the officer has probable cause to believe, based on personal observation and investigation, representation of the child's parents, or the recommendation of a mental health professional that the child is suffering from serious emotional disturbance as a result of which he is likely to cause harm to himself or others or is manifestly unable to preserve his health or safety with the supports and assistance available to him and that immediate detention and treatment is necessary to prevent harm to the child or others."

Section 2419 of Title 16 describes how, once "public funds" are used to involuntarily commit a child to mental healthcare services, the state assumes physical custody of the child: "The department of health and welfare shall acquire physical custody of the child and the right to determine the disposition and placement of the child whenever the placement requires the expenditure of public funds" the law reads.

Had McGuckin been told that the county had ordered her children be committed for mental health services, and had she volunteered to take them in herself, she could have retained physical custody of the children, according to the law. However, since she had been removed from the property, apparently after being arrested, the state had to come in, at public expense, and deliver the children to a (mental?) healthcare facility, Bonner General Hospital. Officials did admit that, while the children were in state custody at Bonner General, they underwent physical exams and at least cursory psychological testing.

We can see why the county would want the public to believe that McGuckin was properly arrested for a felony and that her children were then taken into the protective custody of the state under the authority of the Idaho criminal code: It did not want the public to realize that, under Chapter 24 of Title 16, police with probable cause to believe a child or children are in danger, must immediately capture the child and take him to a MENTAL healthcare facility for treatment.

For the county to admit that it used provisions in Chapter 24 to arrest McGuckin and assume physical custody of her children without due process as demanded in criminal procedure would have been too obvious a display of the unfettered powers of the police state.

Northern Idaho Senators Clyde Boatright, Shawn Keough, and Gordon Crowe voted to pass the Children's Mental Health Act into law; northern Idaho representatives Charles Cuddy, Hilde Kellogg, June Judd, and Wayne Meyer also voted to give the state the power to destroy families without due process.

A County's Helping Hand

by Don Harkins

Bonner County Commission Chairman Tom Suttmeier told 15 witnesses at the board's weekly public meeting June 5 that it "appears to me" that the "County did everything in its power" to help the McGuckin family hang onto its property.

[Editor's note: What a whopper, even for a politician!]

Suttmeier made his comments after reviewing the county's file on the foreclosure, seizure, and ultimate disposal of the McGuckin property at public auction. It would appear that in order for Suttmeier to believe the county had "gone the extra mile" for the McGuckins, he had to ignore comments from a former [and why is that?] county commissioner.

Former Bonner County Commissioner Bud Mueller, who was out of town at the time of the incident, said that he was outvoted by the other commissioners who would not "forgive" the family's tax debt, though they had the authority to do so last year. According to Mueller, the county has routinely "forgiven" past due property taxes for Schweitzer Mountain Ski Resort, Bonner County Mall, and other personal and commercial properties.

The Bonner County Commissioner's office claims that it does not compile a list of taxes it has forgiven, but the issue of forgiving a tax is handled publicly at the weekly meetings if a person wanted to go over the minutes of each meeting and locate the specific cases. The Commissioner's office also stated that, though news that a property has been relieved of its tax burden is public, documentation submitted by the applicant to prove hardship worthy of tax relief is not available to the public.

Mueller also said that, prior to the property being sold at auction, the McGuckins' neighbors took up a collection and offered to save the family's 40 acres from foreclosure by paying a year's worth of back taxes. Mueller said that the county refused to accept the payment as being "too late".

According to state law, the property owner has the right to redeem his property if taxes are paid-up within three years of it being deeded to the county or sold to a qualified buyer-whichever comes first. It would appear that the county not only failed to forgive the taxes when it could have done so under the family's obviously impoverished circumstances, it refused to accept a timely payment that would have delayed any further action against the property for another year.

Don Harkins of the Idaho Observer told Suttmeier that it appeared the county proceeded against McGuckin's property as if she was competent enough to understand that tax delinquency notices must be responded to in a timely manner, but that the county moved against her children as if she were mentally disturbed. "Which is it?" Harkins asked. The commissioners had no answer.

Fallen Angels

And The Origins Of Evil

Did rebel angels take on human bodies to fulfill their lust for the "daughters of men"?

Did these fallen angels teach men to build weapons of war?

That is the premise of the Book of Enoch, a text cherished by the Essenes, early Jews, and Christians, but later condemned by both rabbis and Church fathers. The book was denounced, banned, and "lost" for over a thousand years—until in 1773 a Scottish explorer discovered three copies in Ethiopia.

Elizabeth Clare Prophet examines the controversy surrounding this book and sheds new light on Enoch's forbidden mysteries. She demonstrates that Jesus and the apostles studied the Book of Enoch, and tells why Church fathers suppressed its teaching that angels could incarnate in human bodies.

Contains Richard Laurence's translation of the Book of Enoch, all the other Enoch texts (including the Book of the Secrets of Enoch), and biblical parallels.

The Secrets Of Timothy McVeigh

(6/15/01)

Shackled and hand-cuffed to major financial forces, the moguls of the monopoly press believe the secrets of Timothy McVeigh ended when he ended. And the stooges, masquerading as our leaders, governing nowadays without our consent, are inclined to believe that as well.

What they did not realize is that some of their supposed confidential conversations were not that hush-hush, were overheard and noted, even apparently taped. What did they know and not tell us? Information confirmed to them as correct but kept from the common people?

1. That the American secret political police had McVeigh under video and audio scrutiny from at least thirty days prior to the multiple bombings on April 19, 1995, of the Alfred P. Murrah Building.

2. McVeigh was surveilled in Kansas and Oklahoma in the company of two Middle-Eastern types, partly disguised. As known to the FBI, the American CIA, and other espionage agencies, foreign and domestic, his two handlers accompanied him in a late-model four-wheel-drive pick-up truck.

3. As these agencies corroborated, McVeigh's supervisors were actually Iraqi military officers, from intelligence units, quietly brought into the United States at the end of the brief Persian Gulf War, 1991. They were part of more than four thousand of the same, supposed defectors, arranged by then President George Herbert Walker Bush.

The Elder Bush, many do not know, for the decade of the 1980s, was the PRIVATE business partner of Saddam Hussein, the Iraqi strongman. Together, they shared billions and billions of dollars of kickbacks and "protection" funds, from the weak oil sheikdoms of the Persian Gulf.

A little known Chicago federal lawsuit was brought, in October 1990, during the lead-up to the shooting war, to keep concealed the related bank records showing the clandestine partnership. The case involved the records of the Chicago unit of Italy's largest bank, owned in part by the Vatican, Banca Nazionale del Lavoro (BNL). The Federal Reserve Board wanted the House Banking Committee Chairman to agree never to use the records because he refused to sign a secrecy oath.

As the only journalist attending the court hearing, I interviewed some of the participants in the back of the courtroom. I asked and received identical answers three times, to be certain of the crucial data. They confirmed the Bush-Saddam relationship and the monstrous kickbacks from the sheikdoms.

Only one publication, a populist newspaper, The Spotlight, penetrated the nationwide censorship and ran my exclusive story, August 19, 1991. The case was entitled People of the State of Illinois ex rel Willis C. Harris, Bank Commissioner vs. the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the House Banking Committee, No. 90 C 6863, in the U.S. District Court, and later heard in the U.S. Court of Appeals, 7th Circuit, Chicago.

The three-judge federal appeals court panel was dominated by the infamous Chief Judge Richard A. Posner. (Visit our website for our story "Chief Crook Enters Microsoft Case".) Posner and his virtual shadow, federal appeals Judge Frank H. Easterbrook, although on the bench, continue to represent reportedly the billion dollar stock portfolio of the oil-soaked Rockefeller's University of Chicago, were they used to be law professors. (The two judges have reportedly failed to disclose the relationship in their mandatory annual Federal Financial Disclosure Report.)

As part of the cover-up, Chief Judge Posner ordered the Bush/Saddam/BNL case removed from the courthouse. Later, Posner and his shadow Easterbrook, as a reprisal for my reporting the case on my TV show, unconstitutionally ordered me and a TV program associate of mine, Joseph Andeuccetti, barred from all the federal courtrooms in the 7th Circuit, Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin. (The U.S. Supreme Court refused a remedy to this blatant First Amendment violation.)

4. Of the more than four thousand Iraqi military officers brought into the U.S. by then President Bush, more than five hundred reside with their families in Lincoln, Nebraska, and two thousand with their families reside in Oklahoma City and right nearby.

5. As actual cronies, although little known or understood, the Elder Bush, and later as President, William Rockefeller Clinton, arranged for these supposed defectors to have housing, to be usefully employed, and to have other financial and related provisions, for the Iraqis and their families. Jointly, the Elder Bush and Clinton were in a position to know full well that some of these military officers were double-agents, trained in dirty bloody tricks.

Little-known, the Elder Bush has reportedly been a major stockholder of a French firm, American LaFarge, which reportedly makes the ingredients for poison gas, supplied to Saddam Hussein. The Iraqi strongman, during the Iraq-Iran War, 1980 to 1988, used the poison gas against hordes of very young Iranian soldiers, as well as against Saddam's own domestic dissidents, the Kurds. A director of American LaFarge has been Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Both the Elder Bush and Clinton knew, as Presidents, what the American common people generally do NOT know about the end of the Persian Gulf War. Namely, tens of thousands of Iraqi soldiers, mostly conscripts, were proceeding under a white flag of surrender when they were shot from behind, on the ground and from the air, as the U.S. military had been ordered. Some estimate as many as 150 thousand young Iraqis were thus the victims of these war crimes. Many, still alive, were pushed by U.S. military bulldozers—Nazi-style—into mass graves in the desert. Under strict censorship, the U.S. pressfakers were not permitted to publish or air pictures of bodies, only miles and miles of blown-up military trucks, tanks, and other Iraqi military equipment.

In the Islamic world, were the Oklahoma secrets known, they might correctly feel the Iraqis got justifiable revenge in causing, so far, the worst terrorist attack on U.S. soil. Used were domestic dissident patsies and surrogates for Iraq which has been interwoven with the business affairs of the Bush family and Bill and Hillary Clinton, and Richard Cheney.

6. As confirmed as to contents, by the FBI/CIA/intelligence agencies surveillance of Timothy McVeigh in the company of his Iraqi military officer handlers, McVeigh and his handlers carried around several suitcases. Some of them contained highly effective C-4 explosives. One suitcase contained a lower level sub-atomic device, known as "Red Mercury". The suitcase nuke had been developed by the Soviets and made available to their client-state, Iraq. The shearing off of the steel pillars of the Murrah Building was NOT done by a fertilizer truck-bomb from in front of the building. Rather, by devices in the parking section of the basement.

As reported by a researcher:

"Jane Graham, a sixty-year-old Federal Housing Services employee, was on the ninth floor of the Murrah Building when she saw, heard, and felt the rolling tremor of the building, accompanied by a slow, rumbling explosion.

About 6-to-8 seconds later, she was struck by a much more powerful and sudden explosion that lifted the floors of the building straight up. About 3 hours after the explosions took place she saw and later obtained video recordings of the federals pouring wet concrete into the 25 foot crater in the basement of the Murrah Building.

Even though she demanded to testify before the Grand Jury she was not allowed to do so. Nor was she allowed to testify at all concerning any of the proceedings surrounding the Oklahoma City massacre. Many other witnesses report similar experiences. Most witnesses are too fearful to speak out."

This was sent to us by e-mail on 6/8/01 from Reinhold Sommerstedt (wealthassure@earthlink.net).

And as for the quick pouring of concrete in the building basement—remember that the building was an entryway into the supersecret underground tunnel system. There had to be a quick "burying" or sealing-off of that fact, as well as creating an insulation layer for the building-leveling blast that the government knew it was going to execute as soon as possible to hide any other clues from noseey, honest investigators.]

Independent persons, with radiation gauges, called Geiger Counters, tried to measure the radiation after the explosions, but were not permitted to get that close. In the past, I have been heckled for my exclusive stories that nuclear-type radiation residue, from tritium, was found and secretly measured by government operatives in the bomb site. Luckily or otherwise, what was discovered were leftovers of tritium. Unlike plutonium, tritium does not have a hundred-year or more "half-life", the period during which it can still greatly harm. Some contend the half-life of tritium is as little as thirty days.

Critical of the fertilizer truck-bomb theory, author David Hoffman in his book (The Oklahoma City Bombing And The Politics Of Terror, Feral House, original 1998 edition, page 14) did state:

"An article in The Nashville Tennessean insists Saddam Hussein has been developing 220 pounds of lithium-6 a year. Lithium-6 can be converted to tritium, an essential ingredient in thermonuclear reactions."

And in a footnote:

"'Iraq Also Worked On Hydrogen Bomb', Associated Press, quoted in The Nashville Tennessean, 10/9/91, as quoted in Charles T. Harrison, 'Hell In A Hand Basket, The Threat Of Portable Nuclear Weapons', Military Review, May, 1993."

7. Before and after the apparent death of Timothy McVeigh, several persons, apparently family members of network newsmen, and some reporters themselves, discussed some items mentioned here, with retired network reporters, Establishment journalists, retired FBI officials, news network bosses, and such.

Apparently they did not know they were being overheard and, in some instances, taped. The conversations corroborate that the top honchos of the news networks in America knew about the FBI/CIA surveillance of McVeigh PRIOR TO THE BOMBINGS and were aware of the FBI/CIA audio/video taped surveillance. BUT the data was censored at the highest level of the U.S. Government and the monopoly press. Further, the discussions showed that the FBI/CIA have closed-circuit video showing an Iraqi military officer supervising the one purporting to be McVeigh near the bomb site.

8. In his heavily documented and detailed book, author David Hoffman raises questions that there may have been others posing as "Timothy McVeigh" and that "McVeigh" was under mind control. That is, that the bombings may have been orchestrated or allowed to happen as an espionage event. Several persons claiming to be "Timothy McVeigh" all staged apparent events, many miles apart, that someone would remember. All the while the person doing something very odd emphatically proclaims "My name is Timothy McVeigh".

For many years suppressed in the U.S. and not allowed to be sold in bookstores, there had been a best-seller in various languages in Europe. In English called Farewell America, it was written by operatives of the French CIA under the pen-name "James Hepburn". They penetrated the plot against President John F. Kennedy but, because of complex reasons, too many to list here, they did not see fit to warn him. The book shows how the American CIA used several persons, not all of them actually looking that much like Lee Harvey Oswald, staged odd events and commotions to bring attention to themselves, and then loudly and emphatically proclaimed "My name is Lee Harvey Oswald".

9. Sarcastic sorts even raise the question: Was the REAL "Timothy McVeigh" put to death? Or, for that matter, was ANYONE put to death in the death room at Terre Haute Prison on June 11, 2001? They say: If "McVeigh" were given a sedative to put him to sleep, and slumber, then how was it that, at the end, HIS EYES WERE OPEN?

10. This item requires a little background. Little-known outside the news industry, the major radio news outlets, linked to the networks like in New York, have available several different news "menus" from the network. They are shown the menus just before the top of the hour so the local outlet news director can select.

Sometimes they are ORDERED not to use certain items for their part of the nation. For a long time, during the night, California radio outlets of news networks would use Menu One items—the best, sometimes revealing news items. Chicago radio stations, on the other hand, would use only "softballs"—Menu Five or further down than that.

Funny thing: that has been recently reversed. For example, CBS Radio News during the night was putting on real hot stuff about political assassinations and such. Why? The reporters were worried that their daytime bosses would go along with a merger with a foreign firm, endangering the older reporters' pension rights and such. Thus Menu One was blackmail against the editors, against the would-be merger partner.

On the day "McVeigh" reportedly was snuffed, June 11, 2001, cbsnews.com on their website put the following sly statement:

"Media witnesses described McVeigh as having a nearly shaved head, LOOKING OLDER and thinner than in previous encounters with the public." (Emphasis added)

Did CBS want to raise questions with sharp-eyed sorts that maybe the REAL McVeigh was not the one in the prison death room? Sort of Menu One blackmail? (A division of CBS has supplied equipment and trained personnel to the American CIA and the Pentagon for military and espionage games planning and such.)

11. In a previous story, I raised some of the questions and answers of WHY. Such as: the Elder Bush and his secret business partnership with Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein. Such as: Richard Cheney, a major stockholder of oil patch machinery supplier Halliburton, and recent CEO of the firm, secretly is supplying, through Halliburton foreign units, oil machinery and other items, in violation of national security and violation of the embargo. Such as: White House occupant and "resident" George W. Bush covering up the Oklahoma bombings to protect his father. Such as: Bush family crony, Clinton, having perpetuated the cover-up for various reasons.

So, some in key places somehow thought a lot of the above was hush-hush and not known to more independent sorts. Now they know better. More coming. Stay tuned.

The Chandra Levy Affair

(6/22/01)

Some stories remain incomplete. Sometimes for months. Sometimes for years. In the beginning, they may sound like notes of a conspiracy theory.

BUT, notice, our principal activity for more than four decades, as a research and investigation group devoted to the public interest, has been fingering corrupt judges and probing political murders. We are NOT conspiracy theorists. A crooked judge does not get sent to jail, as we have caused again and again, by pie-in-the-sky mere philosophy.

Pursuing matters accomplishes much.

Otherwise reliable sources (known to us for decades but never identified to preserve their position and safety) have urged us to pursue the following details. The story is obviously incomplete. To get the public to think differently than the oil-soaked, spy-riddled monopoly press, we offer the following notes.

YOU be the judge for this moment.

1. Some background: We were the first and probably among the very few to point out that Monica Lewinsky was reportedly positioned from an early age to be a "Mata Hari" type, to use sex to infiltrate the Clinton White House. From all the known facts, we were convinced and remain convinced, she was reportedly a creature of renegade units of Israeli intelligence, the Mossad. Apparently the acting deputy chief for North America for the Mossad was Rahm Emanuel, on and off for some six years Clinton White House Senior Advisor.

If you understand “spook” work, black bag operatives, and such, you can comprehend our assertion that Rahm was both a Clinton loyalist and a contributor to his scandals by way of manipulating him, all at the same time.

2. Monica’s father was originally from Central America. He was ostensibly a “sleeper agent” for the Mossad. That is, an intelligence asset pressed into service when and as needed. (Monica’s father, like Chandra Levy’s father, is an oncologist, tumor, and cancer specialist.)

3. Many have forgotten that Monica was later sent by Clinton to hold a key position in the Pentagon, as assistant to the Press Chief. She traveled on occasion with one or more of the top Pentagon officials. She admits one such official got her pregnant and she required an abortion.

Her purpose, as we understood it, was to infiltrate close to the top U.S. military, including the Chiefs of Staff. Her task? To try to sniff out reportedly the names and details of the small circle of flag officers, Admirals and Generals, plotting, as authorized by the Military Code, to arrest their Commander-in-Chief Clinton for treason.

If Clinton were to have them arrested for mutiny—if they survived and were not assassinated—they intended to defend themselves with documented charges, for example, of Clinton’s treason with the head of the Red Chinese Secret Police. (Visit our extensive website series on “The Red Chinese Secret Police IN THE UNITED STATES”).

As we have incorporated details in past exclusive stories, there have been some 24 of these flag officers. Ten have been assassinated, including Admiral Jeremy Boorda, Chief of Naval Operations, and General David McCloud, head of the Alaska Military District. Of those who survived, they took up residence, out-of-uniform, in a Paris suburb, protected by the French CIA. So far as we can determine, we are the only ones, through our exclusive stories, to write about this subject of these very brave top military officers. Some three times during the Clinton White House they quietly returned to the U.S. Someday, no doubt a book will come out about this chapter in American history. Assisting these flag officers was former Director of Central Intelligence, William Colby, himself assassinated in 1996 while made falsely to seem to be a boat accident.

4. After leaving the Clinton White House, Rahm Emanuel became a managing director of an alleged “investment banker”, Wasserstein Perella. Their reputed specialty? Apparently laundering funds of the Red Chinese Secret Police through the Chicago markets. (Details in various of our website stories.)

Are the following apparent events a mere coincidence, a similarity, or what?

5. Chandra Ann Levy, as she became active, was about the same age as Monica Lewinsky. And some surmise that Levy was reportedly a creation of renegade units of the Mossad, but not authorized as such by the State of Israel government.

6. Like Monica, the reputed purpose of Chandra was to infiltrate. To use her womanly wiles to find out things. She reportedly had a boyfriend in the FBI. She became an intern in THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF PRISONS, the winter and spring leading up to the date set originally, May 16, 2001, for the execution of Timothy McVeigh, described by the pressfakers as “the lone bomber”. Cynics called him “Lee Harvey McVeigh”, drawing an example of the alleged “lone assassin” of President John F. Kennedy.

7. Ms. Levy became friendly with Gary Condit, Democratic Congressman from her home district in California. He is from California’s 18th Congressional District.

Plainly, Condit was reportedly in a position to know highly classified data about McVeigh and the intelligence agencies. With topmost security clearance, Congressman Condit is a member of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

This is the type of data Denver trial judge Richard Matsch refused to require the U.S. Government to turn over to McVeigh’s chief defense counsel, Stephen Jones. For McVeigh, prior to the 1997 murder trial, Jones filed an extraordinary Petition in the next higher tribunal, U.S. Court of Appeals, 10th Circuit, Denver, McVeigh versus judge Matsch, to try to compel judge Matsch to require the data to be turned over to Jones. The federal appeals judges likewise refused. Judge Matsch and the higher court judges could easily be intimidated by the American CIA, reminding the judges about how, several years prior, judge Matsch’s daughter, Elizabeth, was apparently murdered.

Judge Matsch was the one who covered up the billions of dollars of purported embezzlement done by Neil Bush, son of the Elder Bush. The rip-off was done of and through a Denver savings and loan, Silverado. (Visit our website series “Greenspan Aids And Bribes Bush” with documents attached of secret Federal Reserve wire transfers authorized by Greenspan for laundering billions of dollars, such as for Neil Bush and others of the Bush Family.)

Judge Matsch saved Neil Bush from prison. The Judge’s daughter was apparently murdered in 1992, before the Elder Bush left the White House.

8. Some contend that Chandra Levy was also friendly with key Republicans. Including reportedly a circle of White House types that include White House RESIDENT and OCCUPANT George W. Bush’s strategy chief, officially listed as White House Senior Advisor, Karl Rove. Just as some began pursuing details reportedly of this circle, others started an apparent diversion of Karl Rove on a stock situation involving a conflict of interest.

9. Notice the time-line.

“Ms. Levy, a graduate student at the University of Southern California, spent the winter and early spring here AS AN INTERN WITH THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF PRISONS. DURING THAT TIME, a friend introduced her to Mr. Condit, who represents Modesto, Ms. Levy’s home town.

“Her WASHINGTON INTERNSHIP ended on April 23. ON THE EVENING OF APRIL 30, she turned in her membership at a local health club, and the authorities say THAT WAS THE LAST TIME SHE WAS SEEN IN PUBLIC. ON MAY 6, her frantic parents, unable to reach her, REPORTED HER MISSING.” (New York Times for June 22, 2001; emphasis added.)

May 6, 2001, was ten days prior to the original date set for McVeigh’s execution. From their unit Los Angeles Times, the Chicago Tribune ran the following story, Thursday, May 10, 2001: “Washington—Federal law enforcement officials revealed Thursday that they had found some 3,000 pages of FBI materials that had been mislaid in the Oklahoma City bombing case, and defense attorneys for Timothy J. McVeigh immediately said they hope to win a stay of his execution scheduled in just five days.”

As the New York Times stated in referring to Ms. Levy’s parents meeting with the District of Columbia’s police chief: “The Levys, wearing yellow ribbons, looked dazed and tired as they met with reporters in the sweltering summer sun, both before and after their session with the chief. They said little, leaving most of the talking to THEIR LAWYER, BILLY MARTIN, former federal prosecutor WHO REPRESENTED MARCIA LEWIS, MOTHER OF MONICA S. LEWINSKY, during the inquiry into Ms. Lewinsky’s relationship with President Bill Clinton.” (New York Times, 6/22/01; emphasis added.)

Some find it helpful, if not convenient, though not necessarily crucial, that Condit is originally from Tulsa, Oklahoma.

So, did Chandra Ann Levy know too much about the real background of the Timothy McVeigh matter? Through her FBI boyfriend, through her internship with the Federal Bureau of Prisons, and through her friendship with a Congressman, a member of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, and having topmost security clearance? Did she run for her life? Was she caused to “disappear”? Persuaded to leave the U.S.? Or just snuffed-out?

Former intelligence operatives contend all this is important and urge further investigation. Are they right? The story is obviously incomplete, but we believe it is an important start. (Visit our prior website stories to understand the motives of Clinton/Bush family to cover-up anything linked to the Oklahoma City bombings.) More coming. Stay tuned. △

Always do right; this will gratify some people and astonish the rest.

INTELLIGENCE AGENT'S SHOCKING REPORT FLYING SAUCERS COME FROM INSIDE EARTH!

- Aliens have established underground bases around the planet.
- Ancient tunnel system has existed on Earth since time of Atlantis.
- Entrance ways can be found in many major cities.
- Some government & military officials have taken the side of aliens.

The UFO enigma is more complex than generally believed. Though it is commonly thought that space ships are arriving here from other solar systems, there is now evidence that several groups of ETs have established bases beneath our very feet.

Here are bizarre stories about underground bases at Mt. Shasta, California; Brown Mountain, North Carolina; Dulce, New Mexico; Groom Lake, Nevada; Superstition Mountain Range, Arizona; South and North Poles; as well as in the mountains of the Andes, and the jungles of Brazil.

Here also are the first-hand reports of those individuals who have been abducted by aliens, and who have survived genetic experiments at some locations. These are the facts that everyone should be informed of—regardless of how disturbing the truth may turn out to be!

SUBTERRANEAN WORLDS INSIDE EARTH

Is the Earth hollow? Is our planet honeycombed with caverns inhabited by a mysterious race? Are there civilizations of super beings living beneath the surface of the Earth? Are the residents of this subsurface world friendly, or do they have our domination in mind? Here are strange and unexplainable legions of the "Wee People" the Dero, and long-haired Atlantean giants as encountered by cave explorers and miners trapped far beneath the Earth.

The Smokey God And Other Inner Earth Mysteries

Half of the book consists of a reprint of the classic SMOKY GODS written by a Swedish fisherman who claims he found his way inside the Earth and had an amazing encounter with a race of super-wise giants who have lived inside the Earth since ancient times. Book also contains evidence that at least some UFOs may come from inside planet and are piloted by a race of super-beings who have survived, unknown to the surface world. Includes interview with an inner Earth inhabitant from a city beneath Mt Shasta.

“There is no such thing as a miracle which violates Natural Law. There are only occurrences which violate our limited knowledge of Natural Law.”

— St. Augustine

“Moving beyond what we've been able to prove through science, our theory is that the heart links us to a higher intelligence through an intuitive domain where spirit and humanness merge. This intuitive domain is something much larger than the perceptual capability of the human race has yet been able to grasp. But we can develop that perceptual capacity as we learn to do what sages and philosophers have asked us to do for ages: listen to and follow the wisdom of the heart.”

— Howard Martin, The HeartMath Solution

“I know in my heart it's true.” You've heard that said many times.

But have you ever considered that the heart has the ability to deliver messages throughout the entire body? Have you ever considered that the heart has the capacity to think for itself? Far-out? Impossible? As it turns out, scientific experiments over the last several decades are confirming all of these things—and much more! And the research organization called the Institute of HeartMath is at the very center of this cutting-edge discovery effort.

The Ticking Time-Bomb For A Better World

As the month of August began, the always entertaining news broadcasts slipped out a little tidbit that was supposed to have the opposite spin from what effect it actually did have on many people. They said that recent statistics show nearly 1,000,000 of the 50 million school-age children are being home-schooled these days.

That's a lot of children who are developing much stronger mental abilities than are their school-system counterparts. Some of you may have noticed, for example, that routinely the top performers in national spelling contests are from home-schooled environments.

Critics have been quick to point out that social interaction and development are lacking for home-schooled children. And, as well, most home-schooling teachers (often Moms) aren't "qualified" to deal with the wide array of subject matter required for a solid educational foundation. Sound like sour grapes?

Well, some of our most demanding universities have taken the "risk" of admitting home-schooled students and watching closely what happens. What they're finding is that the home-schooled students are more independent and motivated and creative, and more likely to pass up the beer party down the hall for the guest lecture on UFOs going on that same evening in the physics department auditorium.

This is not to say that these home-schooled students are socially stand-offish. Rather, they have a keener sense of values and a desire for more mature interactions than their counterparts from the school systems who tend to worry too much about peer-group pressures, and thus more commonly exhibit an exploitable herd mentality.

My reason for bringing up this subject has a lot more to do with our front-page story, in concert with Hatonn's and Soltec's messages herein, than it has to do with the merits of home-schooling itself. After all, it's not that the school systems couldn't accomplish the same goal; it's just that the actual (though largely hidden) goal of the school systems is to foster easy control of the populace rather than independent thinking.

Those million or so home-schooled children and young adults are dangerous ticking "time-bombs" from the point of view of the so-called "elite" who effort to keep the public sheeple corralled under numbing mind-control. These children ask questions. They go digging with determination for their own answers. They usually don't take anything at face value since they see through the phoney façade of so much of our modern world's contrived antics.

And that's a serious enough problem to worry the control freaks, whose challenge is compounded by all the bright and fiercely independent "Indigo Children" (remember our March 2000 front-page story?) pouring into the world at this time. They're "system busters". No wonder the controllers are trying so diligently to ram Prozac, Ritalin, and other nasty psychotropic drugs down the throats of these youngsters every day while they're a captive audience in the school systems.

But—what happens when all of these young people start to really tap into their formidable heart-energy abilities? Now the controllers have a very serious problem!

Think about how large the numbers get when you add-up the combined Creative Energy contributions from a bunch of home-schooled and "Indigo" children, plus so many others "young at heart" who are awakening to their innate God-Force powers that result from an alignment of "heart" and "head" energies. Wouldn't you say that's a ticking time-bomb from the point of view of those dark ones who have worked so long and hard to make planet Earth their personal kingdom of slavery?!

There is good reason we have featured Gregg Braden in the June 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM, and then followed-up that foundation with the HeartMath project this month. The crooks in high places have gone to great lengths, through many avenues of mind control, to gradually deteriorate our use of heart energy. They know quite well the power of the common man, should he awaken!

If I may get technical for a minute, it's not that the heart energy, by itself, is as powerful as some believe. We need heart AND head. For an analogy, consider your left and right stereo speakers. When either one is off, you have a flat-sounding presentation, possibly missing half of the total audio information from the recording source. But turn that dead speaker back on, so left and right channels are working in concert—and pow! All of a sudden there is created the awesome three-dimensional "stereophonic" sound stage.

The same is true (though on a much more magnificent scale) when the heart energy is reawakened that has been systematically "turned down" (or off) by the continual mind-control programming orchestrated by the crooks in high places. You need only compare television programs or movies today with those from back just as far as the early 1960s to observe the heart-numbing agenda of the dark controllers in full effect these days.

It's when the heart energy is turned back on, and works in concert with a strong head energy, that the sparks really begin to fly! As a large enough number of us begin operating again in full "stereophonic" mode, there can be no sinister overpowering of the good that can be manifested in this physical dimension!

The SPECTRUM is a catalyst for that awesome transformation. It persists, against great odds, as a vehicle for Truth that has the power to awaken many a "sleeping giant" among ones who care enough to work toward a better world. Thank you who are helping us to financially stay afloat and thus serve Truth.

THE TRUTH ABOUT UFOs: ARE YOU READY FOR THE REVOLUTION?!?

From the INTERNET, <illusions@beyond-the-illusion.com>, 8/7/01: [quoting]

By Grant Cameron, <http://www.ecologynews.com>

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:13)

"This is where I felt I had to go, and we'll see what happens." — Lara Johnstone

"Are you ready for the revolution?" Says Lara Johnstone, a California woman who began a Hunger Strike for Disclosure on July 28th.

Just over 25 years ago, American forces left Vietnam for the last time. Part of the reason for the withdrawal was the advancing North Vietnamese forces advancing on the South Vietnamese capitol. The main reason for the withdrawal, however, was that the American people had turned on the idea of the war, and wanted it ended. Demonstrations in the streets of America, and acts of civil disobedience, had made the idea of continuing the war intolerable.

In a country that believes it is "Government of the people, by the people" it now appears that some people have begun to rise up on the UFO issue. These people believe that, like the Vietnam War, it is not a strong scientific or logical argument that will turn the tide. They believe that, like Vietnam, the issue is political in nature, and political pressure is the main weapon for turning the tide.

One such woman who has taken a stand on the UFO issue is a 35-year-old woman from Oakland, California.

The story began on July 22, 2001, when Dr. Steven Greer arrived in San Francisco to make a presentation of his traveling Disclosure Project (www.disclosureproject.org). The event was held at the huge Masonic Auditorium. Among the 2,000 people in the audience was a woman by the name of Lara Johnstone.

Lara was a bit skeptical of the whole extraterrestrial thing. She had no background in Ufology. She had never had a sighting. A friend sent her an e-mail about the local Disclosure Event. Lara visited the Disclosure website on the Internet. After reading the objective, she decided to attend. "I never before really believed", Lara wrote to President George Bush, "in 'verifiable evidence' of extraterrestrial visits."

The Disclosure event turned out to be a "reality check" for Laura. During the event the two hour Disclosure Testimony Tape was shown. This tape, produced by the Disclosure Project, was highlights of over 100 hours of testimony that had been collected from interviews with dozens of U.S. Government, industrial, and military witnesses to UFO and extraterrestrial events and secret "black-ops" projects.

Following the presentation of the video-tape there was a presentation by Disclosure director Dr. Steven M. Greer and local San Francisco Project witnesses Carol Rosin (spokesperson for Dr. Werner Von Braun) and Daniel Sheehan (legal counsel for the Disclosure Project). The Disclosure Testimony video was a collection of testimony clips from military and government people talking about the reality of the UFO situation. It was made up of two hours of the 100+ hours of testimony with key witnesses that the Disclosure Project had on file.

The testimony that Lara witnessed that evening was more than she could take. She purchased the Disclosure book that Greer was selling at the event, which gave testimony from yet more witnesses telling the true story of what had happened regarding UFOs since 1947. Lara decided action was necessary.

She chose a form of protest that she was familiar with—a hunger strike. In late 2000 Lara had used this protest method successfully against the state of California. In an e-mail to Charles Huffer, Lara described her first hunger strike protest:

"I went on a hunger strike against the CA Department of Corrections and Gov. Gray Davis. After 25 days, they bowed, admitted—in writing—what I had alleged, and what they had 'said', but not in writing.

"Before the press conference, the department head of all of CA's prisons came up to me and went ballistic. He started screaming: 'Who do you think you are?' and 'How dare you!' and on and on. He did not like being called-up by the South African media, asked to answer very difficult questions regarding how he runs his prisons!"

Following the Disclosure event, Lara quickly researched the UFO subject in preparation for sending a letter to President Bush on the subject. As a part of this effort, she contacted Charles Huffer, an Arkansas UFO researcher, who on July 28, 2000, had the opportunity to question President-elect Bush while he was on the campaign trail for President.

During this encounter, Huffer asked Bush: "Half the public believes that UFOs are real. Would you finally tell us what the hell is going on?" Bush replied: "Sure I will."

A few minutes later Huffer ran into Bush again and the president-elect stated: "It will be the first thing that he will do." He pointed at Dick Cheney, who was just walking up. "He'll get right on it."

Lara used the Huffer encounter with Bush to time the beginning of her hunger strike. The hunger strike would begin exactly one year to the day Bush promised he would work to tell the people about UFOs. She wrote that in her July 26, 2001 letter of protest to President Bush:

"One year later, on July 28, 2001, you are now the President and I again ask you: 'Are you willing to finally tell the American people and the whole world the truth about unidentified flying objects?' Hundreds of high-level U.S. government officials are standing courageous and willing to tell the truth, which can change our world. Will you give them the opportunity? Can we begin healing our world? Can we end this endeavor of greed, corruption, fear, and destruction? Can we find a way to take a stand, step by step? If we continue this way, we'll only end up where we are going. It doesn't have to be this way. We have a choice."

As a South African, Lara Johnstone also addressed her letter of protest to President Thabo Mbeki of South Africa, as well as President George Bush. She outlined her request:

"President Bush and President Mbeki, I am writing to share with you and all the other leaders around the world my extreme concern. My concern is so great that I have decided to go on a hunger strike, starting July 28, 2001, to death if need be, in order to express my humble request.

"My request is that the U.S. and other governments:

"1. Hold open, comprehensive, secrecy-free hearings to take military/agency witness testimony on events and evidence relating to an extraterrestrial presence on and around Earth.

"2. To hold open hearings on advanced energy and propulsion systems, relating to extraterrestrial phenomena that, when publicly released, will provide solutions to global environmental challenges.

"3. To enact legislation which will ban all space-based weapons, and to enact and implement international treaties and legal standards prohibiting the weaponization of space.

"4. To enact comprehensive legislation to research, develop and explore space peacefully and cooperatively with all cultures on Earth and in space."

In an interview with Lara Johnstone, I asked her about her plans for the hunger strike. She stated: "I'm on my way to D.C. I was going to do a bus trip across the country. I am hoping to be in Washington by the 28th of August, which would make the hunger strike at one month, but I'm flexible on that. I have this feeling that I must not plan too much—that things are going to work right. Things are going to happen, and I should just be open and trusting.

It started on the 28th of July, to August 28th will be a month, and then interestingly enough the 28th of September will be two months and that is the start of the anti-globalization demonstrations.

Lara has received the expected reactions from people to her hunger strike. Some have said that she is "totally nuts". One person told her: "You don't want to just take on the whole world—now you want to save the aliens too."

To this Lara responded: "I said it's not about that. It's about all of us knowing what's going on. Are we just here to buy, buy, buy, being little consumers, or are we here for a bigger purpose? To grow and to love. For me it's about the truth. With the secrecy, we're spreading more fear, and more fear, and it's separation."

Lara is preparing a website where people can access the letters she has sent out, and stay updated on what responses she has received. She is preparing a letter for all members of Congress, and is sending out letters to names she received of people inside the UFO community who might be able to help her.

Robert H. Williams, a man who lost his job at Clinton Community College in Rochester, New York for his UFO beliefs, has been kind enough to help Lara in her time of need. On his personal website, Robert is hosting a section with copies of all the initial correspondence between Lara and Charles Huffer, and the letter to the President. To view this material go to Mr. Williams' home page <<http://members.tripod.com/rhw007>> and then to the section on "WHO".

As President George Bush vacations on his Texas ranch, Lara is in the process of writing her second letter to him. There has been no word from the White House, and no major support or backing by the UFO community. Then again, it is still early in the hunger strike, Day 10 as this is being written.

Lara is still confident. As Lara says: "We'll see what happens." Lara is available for questions or offers of support at 510-823-8109.

Most older readers will probably remember how Mahatma Gandhi caused Britain to give India her independence with his hunger strikes and non-violent protests. Hopefully someone who caused the California government to bow to her rightful prison demands can pull this one off also—and will, with our support and backing.

Dr. Steven Greer was the first-hour guest, again, on Art Bell's late-night talk-radio program on the evening of August 1. He had quite a few interesting update items about the progress of his Disclosure project to share with Art's listeners. One of the most powerful statements came from a candid conversation with an "unnamed" member of Congress, who said to Dr. Greer in the course of their private discussion something like: "You know, of course, this country and the entire world is run by a small group of powerful people behind the scenes; we're only window dressing."

While this is not news to most SPECTRUM readers, it was a shocking revelation to many of Art's listeners who, like Art, have trouble believing such could be the case. Dr. Greer has amassed a large-and-growing number of professionals, some retired from places like NASA, who are sick and tired of the secrets and lies and other shenanigans that have been pushed upon the American public. They wish to clear their consciences through telling their astonishing truths about the long-hidden subject of UFOs. Be sure to visit Dr. Greer's website for much good information, as well as the opportunity to participate in this grassroots revolution for Truth!

GRAY DAVIS HIDING CONDIT ON CATALINA ISLAND

From the INTERNET,
<AABCC@yahoogroups.com>, 8/8/01:
[quoting]

With Carl Limbacher and NewsMax.com Staff, for the story behind the story.

Embattled Congressman Gary Condit has been discovered hiding out at taxpayer's expense in luxurious digs on California's Catalina Island—accommodations secured by his close political ally, Gov. Gray Davis, New York's WABC Radio reported Tuesday morning.

"Gray Davis has given him a favor" revealed WABC's John Batchelor in an exclusive report to the Curtis & Kuby Show.

"The state of California, through the University of Southern California, owns an inn. On Catalina Island...[chewing gum magnate] William Wrigley, Jr. and his wife Aida built a vast home on a place they called Mt. Aida; it was named for her. It's now a bed and breakfast and a conference center owned by U.S.C. and the Santa Catalina Island Conservancy. Well, that's where Condit is."

Condit retreated to his home state over the weekend, reportedly to spend private time with his grown children.

The California getaway was supposed to be an effort to repair the damage done to Condit's family over the last two months, when the investigation into the disappearance of his girlfriend, Chandra Levy, exposed a secret life that, according to some reports, featured up to 27 different women.

Batchelor did not say whether Condit's wife Carolyn was with him on Catalina.

Gov. Davis, who turned to the then-popular Congressman Condit in 1998 to help launch his gubernatorial career, returned the favor by putting Condit's grown children, Chad and Cadee, on his staff.

In February 2000, Davis also hired Ms. Levy, who interned in his legal affairs office before accepting a Washington, D.C. internship with the Federal Bureau of Prisons. It's not clear whether Rep. Condit, who was a frequent visitor to Davis' office in Sacramento, was romantically involved with Levy at the time, though his one-time driver, bodyguard Vince Flammini, has raised that possibility in interviews.

The WABC report is the first evidence that Gov. Davis has taken an active role in helping Condit survive the political maelstrom that threatens to sink his career.

"Gray Davis controls the [Wrigley] place" Batchelor said. "Condit is staying there so Gray Davis can say: 'The congressman needs privacy. He's there with his two grown children, who are on my staff. He's there with his press aides.'"

While on his taxpayer-funded getaway, Condit is staying in a room now known as "The Grand Suite" which rents for $625 per night, has a bedroom, full bath, and harbor views.

"Your tax dollars are going to hide Gary Condit from the truth," Batchelor observed. [End quoting]

If the California taxpayers get a whiff of this (should any of the California press be daring enough to carry this story), Condit might as well start circulating his resumé quickly since his constituents have made it clear they've had enough.

And while we're on the subject of taxpayers getting fed-up with the brazen thievery of their elected politicians, here's something that should make your blood boil with a desire for change:

SENATORS, CONGRESSMEN, AND SOCIAL SECURITY

From the INTERNET, 8/8/01: [quoting]

Our Senators/Congressmen do not pay into Social Security, and therefore they do not collect from it. Social Security benefits were not suitable for them. They felt they should have a special plan. Many years ago they voted-in their benefit plan. In more recent years, no Congressperson has felt the need to change it. After all, it is a great plan.

For all practical purposes, their plan works like this: When they retire, no matter how long they have been in office, they continue to draw their same pay until they die, except it may be increased from time to time by the cost-of-living adjustments.

For example, former Senator Bill Bradley (New Jersey) and his wife may be expected to draw $7,900,000 over an average life span, with Mrs. Bradley drawing $275,000 during the last year of her life. Their cost for this excellent plan is 0, nada, zilch. This little perk they voted-in for themselves is free to them. You and I pick up the tab for this plan.

Our Tax Dollars At Work!

With Social Security, which you and I pay into every payday for our own retirement, with an equal amount matched by our employer, we can expect to get an average of $1,000 per month.

Or, we would have to collect our benefits for 68 years and 1 month to equal the Bradleys' benefits. Imagine, for a moment, that you could structure a retirement plan so desirable, a retirement plan that worked so well, that Railroad Employees, Postal Workers, and others who were not in the plan would clamor to be included. This is how good Social Security could be, if only one small change was made.

That change would be to jerk the Golden Fleece Retirement Plan out from under the Senators/Congressmen. Put them into the Social Security plan with the rest of us. WATCH HOW FAST THEY FIX IT!

If enough people receive this, maybe a seed will be planted, and maybe good changes will evolve.

Don't forget: Our girl, Hillary Rodham Clinton, thanks to the infinite wisdom of New York State voters, now comes under this Congressional Retirement Plan. Talking about the Clintons, it's common knowledge that, in order for her to establish NYS residency, they purchased a million dollar+ house in upscale Chappaqua, NY. Makes sense. Now they are entitled to Secret Service protection for life. Still makes sense.

Here is where it becomes interesting: A residency had to be built in order to house the Secret Service agents. The Clintons now charge the Secret Service rent for the use of said residence, and that rent is just about equal to their mortgage payment—meaning that we, the taxpayers, are paying the Clintons' mortgage and it's all perfectly legal.

You gotta luv it! Is everybody happy?

How many people can YOU share this with? [End quoting]

As was pointed out so well above, how long do you think it would take to fix Social Security if we demanded our elected politicians be put in the same plan as the rest of us?! What are we waiting for?

DOJ and the U.S. Congress Officially Commit to Send IRS Tax and Legal Experts to Appear on Capitol Hill. Public Hearing to be Conducted by Rep. Roscoe Bartlett and Rep. Henry Hyde to Answer Citizens' Challenges of IRS Jurisdiction and Illegal Enforcement of U.S. Tax Law.

Washington D.C.—We The People Foundation For Constitutional Education, Inc. announce that the Department of Justice and the U.S. Congress have committed, in writing, to appear with IRS representatives in a recorded, public meeting to officially answer to charges challenging the legal jurisdiction of the IRS and the enforcement of U.S. income tax laws against U.S. citizens.

Department of Justice U.S. Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant and Congressman Roscoe Bartlett (MD) signed the written agreement Friday that commits the government to send their top tax and legal experts to a two-day September hearing to be conducted on Capitol Hill. These actions are in response to a proper petition for redress of grievances brought by Robert Schulz, Chairman of the Foundation. Schulz ended his 3-week hunger fast mid-afternoon today after having secured official commitment from representatives of the U.S. Government that his formal petition will be answered.

Schulz has been in Washington since July 4th on a hunger fast until death, if needed, to force the government to respond to his legal Remonstrance, a petition for redress of grievances. These grievances include challenges of IRS jurisdiction, routine and gross violations of due process by the IRS, the refusal of the IRS to cite the specific law that requires employers or employees to withhold taxes and the fraudulent ratification of the 16th (Income Tax) Amendment.

DOJ's Bryant is quoted: "The American people are entitled to answers. It is in our nation's interest that we participate and answer these questions."

While largely ignored by the media and other government officials, Rep. Bartlett has stood alone on the Hill (until recently) in public defense of Schulz's absolute Constitutional right to petition for redress and be answered by the government. On Tuesday, Bartlett initiated a formal Congressional Inquiry to the IRS demanding official government responses for Schulz.

Today, DOJ's Dan Bryant agreed to Rep. Bartlett's requirements that the "congressional briefing-like hearings" be conducted in public and be recorded and broadcast live. The meetings will have appropriate procedural controls and security. It is expected Rep. Henry Hyde (IL), former Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, will gavel the sessions.

Schulz was "elated that government officials have finally responded as they are required by both the 1st Amendment to the Constitution and their oaths of office."

The agreement, penned on Congressional letterhead, was signed at the Department of Justice headquarters. Bryant assured both Rep. Bartlett and Schulz there is "virtually no chance of being overridden on this matter". Bartlett promised Schulz: "I assure you. The IRS will be there at those meetings".

Schulz continued: "I have met with these gentlemen face-to-face and have looked in their eyes. I am satisfied they are men of honor [???? Believe it when you see it!]. We have cemented our agreement with a handshake. The fast ends today. After decades of obfuscation, avoidance, creative restructuring, and "simplification" of the 9,500-page tax code, the truth is about to be revealed. The Sovereign Citizens have exercised their right to petition.

It is no coincidence that President Bush revealed in this week's New York Times that the government has begun to publicly discuss alternative tax systems, including disposal of the entire tax code. The Internet and talk radio have facilitated detailed research, documentation, and discussion of these charges across the nation.

If our income tax system is publicly confirmed to be without force of law upon the people, and is truly as “voluntary” as the IRS so often advertises, it is highly likely that the government may move quickly to implement a replacement tax such as a national sales tax. THE PEOPLE MUST REMAIN VIGILANT THAT ONE ILLEGAL TAX IS NOT REPLACED BY ANOTHER [emphasis mine].

The taxing powers granted to the federal government by our Constitution are explicit, limited, and must be complied with. Since 1787, the mechanism for an orderly and peaceful transition to a legal tax system has resided in Article 1, Section 9 of the U.S. Constitution. This is a states’ rights issue.

The day that our government has shunned has arrived. The sovereign citizens have formally demanded and exercised their rights. We The People have been heard.” TO LEARN MORE VISIT <www.givemeliberty.org>. [End quoting]

Keeping attention and other pressures on this matter is the only way to force some honesty into a flourishingly corrupt enterprise. With that in mind, pay close attention to the following:

This is my first posting to this group. I have watched the entire Bob Schulz fast and these postings with fascination. I would like to make some observations if I may. First let me say that the concession that Bob achieved is remarkable, but I would like to offer the following cautions: Those in power both in the government and the real powers behind the government are not—repeat NOT—fools. In my opinion there are multitudes of things that could occur before the September 18th and 19th deadline.

For one, those powers I previously mentioned have been responsible for many suspicious disappearances and deaths over the years. I am not trying to be an alarmist and truly hope nothing like this occurs, but let’s be real and realize exactly what those forces are and acknowledge that those forces are aligned against the patriot and tax-honesty movements. They are merciless and vicious beyond comprehension.

What would such an occurrence do to these hearings, especially if something like this occurred just before the hearing? Oh, there would be bruhaha, but nothing of note more than that.

Remember JFK, MLK, RFK, TWA Flight 800, etc. Look at the string of suspicious deaths trailing our recent former president! And what is to prevent a sudden (manufactured) crisis from interfering with the scheduled start of this hearing, and its postponement as a result.

And what is to prevent those government agencies from sending in their “representatives” with pat answers such as “I’m not sure; I’ll get back to you with a written response” or some such other response?

Be real, folks. If any of you have spent any time at all watching our government at work, you have seen this kind of non-committal answering repeatedly. There are any number of scenarios that anyone with an imagination can come up with that could interfere. Hopefully these hearings will indeed occur.

There are, however, some things that can be done to capitalize on this wholly unexpected development. For one, everyone should be hounding C-SPAN, CBS (and Dan Blather), NBC, ABC, CNN, FOX and all other major media outlets such as the New York Times, USA Today, Wall Street Journal (after all, it is a tax issue), and of course your hometown newspaper.

Threaten to cancel your subscription if they do not honestly cover this story. Stand outside their offices and hand out flyers demanding they cover this story. Threaten to boycott their advertisers, and call those local advertisers and demand they put pressure on these media outlets. Email them. Call them. Fax them. Contact all your elected representatives at both the local, state, and federal level, and let them know you are watching how they handle this, and tell them you want action—now—Or You Will Fire Them Next Election Day! Make flyers and put them up at your local community college, colleges, and universities. Encourage the college communities to TAKE ACTION NOW. Include the names, addresses, phone and fax numbers, and email addresses of elected representatives on those flyers.

Encourage those college students to call home, email their friends etc. THEY HAVE VOICES. Put flyers up or hand them out at elderly housing and senior centers. Encourage them to get involved. They have time and energy to contribute, AND THEY HAVE VOICES. Make lists of all the web address URLs of Tax Honesty sites and circulate them. Put them on those flyers. Write letters to the editor. Email letters to on-line news outlets, alternative news outlets, and ask that they publicize Bob and his accomplishment and ask that they cover the story. Join other yahoo groups (and non-yahoo groups too!) and make postings such as this one.

There is less than two months to capitalize on this development. Perhaps the only chance that this opportunity has of progressing to a meaningful result is if there is enough focus drawn to it. The more interest and light that is shed on this moment, the greater the chance of some meaningful change and the less likely those evil forces will make a rash move. THE ONE THING THEY ABSOLUTELY DO NOT LIKE IS ATTENTION.

Those elected representatives who have whored themselves are still cognizant of the power of a media spotlight and its effect on their cushy jobs. (Ask Gary Condit.) Make no mistake, this struggle is not over by a long shot.

And now a message from our sponsor: Speaking of shots—perhaps the only thing that has kept these evil ones from seizing control is that, for the time being anyway, we still have some Second Amendments rights. Otherwise they would stamp out this movement like they were stepping on gnats; do it in a heartbeat and not look back. With all the guns that are in private ownership, they have to tread carefully.

Now make no mistake about this: They do control the police, national guard, and the military, but they really do not want to interrupt commerce (their first and only love—you know, the reaping of the dollar) on a national scale unless they absolutely have to.

And now, back to tonight’s main story: As you spread the word, encourage new supporters to join an email group such as this one. Or develop a list of names and phone numbers so you can stay in contact with them (not everyone has a computer, you know). Put the spotlight on them. Keep it bright and hot. Write. Write. Write. Call. Call. Call. Fax. Fax. Fax. Email like crazy. Make posters. Talk. Talk. Talk. MOBILIZE.

Excerpts From The Declaration Of Independence

“That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.”

“But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security.”

The above is very wise advice, both in terms of the likely extreme opposition to TRUE change for the good, and in terms of what is the most effective action plan to force some honesty into an otherwise diabolical arena.

NEW STUDY ON ADVERSE EFFECTS OF FLUORIDE

Fluoride has a long history of implications in facilitating negative behavior problems due to its effects on the brain. The above is “simply” one more legitimate nail in the coffin. No wonder the pushers of this poison consider it essential to their scheme of mass mind-control and related social engineering issues.

BIZARRE ENERGY-PULSE BLAST IN HARTSVILLE, TENNESSEE FRIES EQUIPMENT & BIRDS

We here at The SPECTRUM want to thank ever-watchful researcher Calvin Burgin for first bringing the following story to our attention on July 10. It was too late to include in last month's SPECTRUM, but the facts of the matter remain just as bizarre and serious now that the dust has settled a bit. You readers who listen to Art Bell's late-night talk-radio program heard several detailed interviews with the manager and technical director of the radio station most affected by whatever happened nearby. The following is from the www.1090wjkm.com Internet website: [quoting]

At about 10:45 AM Friday [July 6, 2001], radio station WJKM and CMR (Country Music Radio), with studios in Hartsville, Tennessee was knocked off the air by a very powerful strange energy blast! There was a crystal clear blue sky, no clouds or rain. It was not lightning!

1. All the radio station's [telephone and fax] lines were knocked out.

2. Several power transformers were blown out several blocks away from the studios (smoke seen billowing out of one).

3. All phone lines at the newspaper (The Hartsville Vidette), the local farm co-op, and all other phones in this small radius were knocked out!

4. Radio station transmitter lost all MOSFETS and the output tuning network.

5. All computers at WJKM lost motherboards, network cards, etc.

6. ISDN was knocked out.

7. Most all the equipment like Zephyr Codec and EAS were all knocked out.

THERE WAS NOT A CLOUD IN THE SKY! This was not lightning!

In the back of the radio station were DEAD, FRIED BIRDS! Their wings, tails, and feet severely burned. Station secretary Jennifer and sales manager Steve found a small bird still alive hopping around with its wings and tail feathers burned off. Many of the birds were still alive but badly burned.

These are smaller birds. The wingspan is not large enough for them to get fried from getting [shorting] across a power line to ground. This was not just one bird.

Steve (sales manager) told me he heard a loud electrical “overload” sound; then the power went out. He told me he has never heard anything like this ever in his life. There was no blown transformer near the radio station. The closest burned transformer was at least three city blocks from the building.

The editor of The Vidette said she was sitting with her back to the window. She heard a loud, roaring sound like an overload, and something came through the window, and a flash of light went through the entire building. The Vidette is next door to the radio station.

The power company, Tri-County Electric, and Bell South seem to be at a loss to explain the situation.

This is not the first time WJKM has had strange power-surge problems. It has been difficult to keep computers up and running at the Hartsville studios and transmitter site.

We have called the local power company and complained to no avail. They seem to be as puzzled by the problem as we are. They have placed monitoring equipment on the lines and have seen nothing unusual.

Yet, in this outage, the editor of The Vidette told me she keeps all the computers in the building unplugged. The newspaper publishes once a week, so they only plug the computers into power once a week. Friday the editor's calculator was plugged into the wall outlet and it was destroyed by the surge.

These surges are not just coming into the power lines. They are also entering the radio station through phone lines and the antenna system. This is evident in blown telephone equipment. Sometimes the equipment is not destroyed, but the program settings are scrambled or wiped out.

We have surge protectors plugged into surge protectors. We keep MOV's by the boxfulls.

We have been at a loss to make a determination as to the cause of these surges. The only clue as to what the cause may be has been suggested by our listeners.

Many of the callers to the radio station seem to think that there is some sort of activity at the old Hartsville nuclear power plant site. My first trip to the site left me a bit cold as the place looks like an abandoned ghost town. With heaps of things lying around, it looks like a good set for a futuristic movie.

The nuclear power plant is a site that cost the general public millions of dollars that was supposedly never finished. The construction of the plant came to an abrupt halt some years back, leaving the community devastated.

TVA (Federal Government) [Tennessee Valley Authority] will tell you it is being used as a storage area only. Yet I have calls at the radio station from listeners who claim to hear strange humming sounds coming from the location. Listeners have seen strange objects overhead. Listeners have claimed to see triangular-shaped craft overhead. Silent black helicopters at all hours of the night. Huge military C-130s heading in as if to land, or leaving the area, nose up, as if they have just taken off.

There are no visible places for a C-130 to land or take off. We have searched the area as well as we could.

Listeners from the area have called talking about a strange humming sound. Comments like: “You can feel it” and “It makes the hair stand up on your neck” are common.

We also hear that you can't locate the source of the humming; it seems to be coming from everywhere. This has been mentioned only by people who live near the nuclear power plant site.

A rural, elderly listener called my morning show extremely upset. He told us he had lost several beagle puppies in the area. A friend of his told him that he thought that he had seen the pups in the area near the cooling tower. He reported to us in a phone call that he had driven his truck to the area. He thought he was hearing the beagles out in the wooded area, so he climbed over the fence and started calling to them.

He told us he was greeted with an overhead helicopter and a ground force of about 30 people. They allegedly escorted him off the property in a very rough and crude manner. He said they were some kind of police, some in plain clothes. He told us they were rude and threatening.

A listener who is a tech that lives on a hill near the area has had fluorescent bulbs light in his hand on various spots on his property. He discovered this by accident but has witnesses to the phenomenon. He works with surveillance cameras, thermal imaging, and a lot of high-tech stuff. He tells us there is operational radar being used at the nuclear site at different times.

A Hartsville resident whose ex-husband worked at the site tells us that there is a reactor there. We have had several reports of this from different folks in the community. She tells us that her husband was told: "Don't eat the fish from the river, or eat any deer shot in the area."

Our local heating and air conditioning contractor tells about how he sees large, shiney new 18-wheel tankers go and come from the nuclear site at 3 in the morning.

A gentleman who is a relative to an owner of a local grocery establishment claims to have seen a Bigfoot near the nuclear plant.

It is also interesting that, according to listeners who have called in, there has apparently been an increase in what they are calling fibromyalgia. This is a disease name appointed to the unexplainable severe and disabling pain throughout the entire body over recent years, as well as an increase in headaches mimicking migraines that are not actual migraines.

At night the entire area has a strange chemical smell to it, somewhat pungent like ozone and chemicals. The radio station transmitter and Hartsville studio is located in the middle of Hartsville City Park, about 5 miles from the nuclear cooling tower.

We are in no way accusing the TVA or the nuclear power plant of causing this problem. We are just reporting what listeners and residents of the community have reported to us.

One thing that we do find strange is this: in the beginning we would go on the air and joke about the nuclear power plant. We did this because of the TVA's vague promise to turn a good portion of the land back to the community for development. This was always talked about, but nothing ever happened.

We placed several calls to TVA. No one ever responded.

When we would get on the air and start airing some of these reports, it was always promptly followed by a press release or a public meeting about the donation of the land back to the county. We were told not to talk about it, that the TVA would get upset.

Whenever we would stop talking about it, then it seemed that you would hear nothing about the land development. We have been off the subject for a good time now. Their latest announcement is to develop the land in partnership with the local power company for an industrial power park.

They say this won't happen now for 4 years. They now claim they must do a 4-year environmental study. What do they need to study? Was there not a study done in order to build a nuclear facility? What else needs to be studied for a commercial business site?

For you, the listener, thank you for putting up with our outage. We are making repairs as fast as we can. As for the cause, we have no idea what this is all about.

We are concerned about the charred and fried birds, however. These birds were found on our property, in areas where there are no powerlines!

The power company said the birds got into a power transformer. What transformer? Our 10 KVA pole peg behind the radio station? How would all these birds do that? After being in or near the transformer, how did they all get to different locations around the 5 acres of land where there are no power lines? If the birds were sitting on an electrical wire and were hit by a surge, their legs would have been burned off! These birds have legs. It's their wings and feathers that are burned, singed, or missing! It appears to us these birds were cooked in flight! But by what?

Update: Wednesday, July 18, 2001

At about 4:00 am this morning, Hartsville Tennessee lost power again due to a surge/outage. This time over much of Trousdale County. WJKM and CMR's Internet broadcast was brought to a screeching halt once again. We were not able to establish broadcasting until about 10:00 am this morning. There were no injured or dead birds, but we did have some computer failure.

We placed a call to Tri County Electric and the TVA, but have not heard anything back from them so far as to the cause or nature of the outage. About two weeks ago we had a 4 am outage/surge. The local power company came out and removed a shortwave radio antenna that WJKM was using for ham radio communications in case of an emergency. We can't seem to make much progress in all this so—the good news is—WJKM will shortly begin broadcasting full time from a new location. We will be moving our main studio facilities to the beautiful and gracious Cedarvine Manor.

WJKM's studio and computer equipment must be relocated to protect the station from repeated outages and loss of equipment.

Cedarvine Manor is a beautiful old southern mansion and barn that was used as a hospital in the Civil War.

It has been renovated into a bed & breakfast and event facility and is a great refuge for our studio equipment and computers. Much moving, wiring, and rebuilding will have to take place to complete our project, but it will be well worth the effort.

Cedarvine Manor is also a great place for a radio show. We will begin live again in the mornings from Cedarvine Manor on WJKM/CMR and the Internet. We will be doing talk in the morning that relates to country lifestyles. This includes phenomena! We are convinced that there is a need for this type of morning show programming due to the number of folks who have responded to our situation by e-mail and phone calls.

Thanks to Art Bell, Linda Howe, Whitley Strieber, and all our e-mail friends. By doing what they have done, many people are now aware of the situation. We are not as likely to be targeted as some folks that have wound up in situations like ours.

Thanks for hanging in with us!

On Tuesday evening, July 17, 2001, Art Bell spent the first hour of his late-night talk-radio program interviewing Ted Randall of WJKM about many of the interesting and bizarre details of this case. Go to Art Bell's Internet website (www.artbell.com) to replay that interview, as well as the interview Art conducted the next evening with Linda Howe on further unusual clues of this puzzle.

The other tidbit of interesting information was an unusual earthquake in Tennessee shortly after the Friday (7/6/01) "electrical surge" that knocked out the radio station. That is, a M2.6 quake occurred at 10:05 pm on 7/7/01 at a location 4 miles southeast of Franklin, Tennessee. Coincidence?

Many other details and photographs are at the WJKM Internet website noted at the top of this article. The most troubling photos are of the birds, whose wing feathers have literally been fried, some in mid-flight, and the birds just dropped to the ground. We're not dealing with sane people here—who would do such "mad scientist" secret experimentation despite such dire consequences.

In our March 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM we introduced you to Anna Detweiler in a much enjoyed article titled "Anna Detweiler: Seeing Truth Beyond The Shadows". Here are some recent visions from Anna, beginning with Hartsville, Tennessee.

ANNA DETWEILER INSIGHTS

Hartsville, Tennessee Problems

From Anna, 7/20/01: [quoting]

Greetings to you my friends,

I have been "looking" at the area of Hartsville, Tennessee over long and hard since they had that episode of losing their power and radio station. There is definitely something very interesting going on there. This energy that is doing the messing up of all the computers and electronics is originating from the ground.

This is not a scalar energy originating in space. There is an arc of energy running all the way from Hartsville to Blytheville, Arkansas and, lo and behold, when I looked it up on the map, I found an Air Force base there!

[Editor's note: Besides the very unusual earthquake in Tennessee noted several paragraphs above, on 8/4/01 there was another unusual quake—and guess what—this time the location was slightly north of Lofton, ARKANSAS! Coincidence again?]

This arc of energy is arcing thousands of feet high in the air, and it is my guess that, according to variables like wind direction, weather conditions, maybe even solar and magnetospheric disturbances, this energy is caught by the power lines and telephone lines which, in turn, zaps out the electronics.

Believe me, if this energy was directed right at the power lines, it would melt them in a heartbeat! It is of the blue and white spectrum and is of extremely high intensity.

I can see the building it is coming from, but if anyone might have a picture of the Hartsville power plant, I'd appreciate seeing it. There is an identical building that is receiving it in or close to Blytheville, Arkansas. It actually looks like this energy is powering the AFB. Is this a new type of energy that is being created?

If you all have any ideas and or explanations to this, let me know. I'll keep on watching; maybe I'll get it figured out eventually. Now lets see if my computer gets some "funny" ideas again! Love and peace, Anna [End quoting]

If anybody wants to answer this, send it to me (alo@tminet.com) and I'll forward it.

Meteorite Showers?

From Anna, 7/25/01: [quoting]

Hello and a good morning to you all,

The supposed meteor shower intrigued me so much I've done some "looking" at that area in that time. As usual, very interesting details can be seen when I do that. There was only one object that came in through the atmosphere and it was a SHUTTLE!

It appears as if the Shuttle was already out of control before it ever came through the atmosphere. Also, I'm thinking it may have been a Shuttle from a different country, because of the language the crew were speaking. After they got through our atmosphere, there were missiles there to greet them in a very unflattering way!

These missiles seemed to come in from the west, I'd guess out of N. D. by the direction they came from. There was a whole slew of these things shot toward the Shuttle, so there was really no way it could have survived. If you find any info on this story, I'd sure appreciate seeing it. But I suspect it will be a very hushed-up thing.

Got to go, Love and peace, Anna
[End quoting]

More Meteorites?

From Anna, 7/26/01: [quoting]

Hi, I saw this morning that a ball of fire came down over Saladasburg, PA yesterday. I believe this one may have been a satellite.

We are at WAR in space, so watch your heads! I expect retaliation from the Russians at any time, i.e. downed jets or something of the kind.

I believe it was the Russian crew who went down in that Shuttle, but it may have been either theirs or our Shuttle.

Let me tell you what keeps coming through my mind. I keep seeing the Russian crew being forced into our Shuttle, and the Shuttle being undocked from the space station and set free to go wherever it would.

Because it was our Shuttle, Houston could track it, and when it was seen that it was coming in, it was used for a missile target! This is not something that I have seen in great detail, but for some strange reason this information seems to be coming to me. Take this with a grain of salt, because it is only something that's in my mind.

Just thought this might interest you too.

Love and Peace, Anna [End quoting]

Electromagnetic Wall

From Anna, 8/4/01: [quoting]

Greetings to you my friends, May the Balance of the One be with us all!

I think the Elite Tricksters are going to try and play a game with that hurricane again. There has been a wall erected stretching from quite a ways south of Brownsville, TX to about Austin. I'm not sure what they have in mind to do with it, but can imagine it has something to do with Barry. I'll have to watch it awhile before I'll know what they are using it for.

Love and peace, Anna [End quoting]

You have to make up your own minds whether what Anna relates is logical to you or not. But I venture to say you don't find explanations like hers to be very common.

Those of you who remember the superb work of a similar nature that Dr. Peter Beter offered until he was taken out about twenty years ago will surely note great similarities—especially the theme that what's really going on is very different from what we are told and actually is often of a military/war nature such as Anna discerns.

ENERGY ADVISERS FIRED

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 7/29/01: [quoting]

Five state energy consultants were fired for conflicts of interest because they helped California buy power from a company in which they owned stock, officials said.

The consultants owned shares of Calpine Corp., a San Jose-based power generator that has been awarded about $13 billion in state contracts to supply electricity for up to 20 years.

The state bought more than $14 million worth of electricity from Calpine in the first quarter of this year, records showed.

The Davis administration hired more than 50 consultants and advisers this year as it struggled to deal with the state's electricity crunch.

On July 18, the administration told consultants buying energy for the state to sell their stock holdings in energy companies immediately or quit their jobs.

Under pressure from Secretary of State Bill Jones, a Republican who hopes to challenge Democrat Davis for re-election next year, the administration has moved to obtain statements of economic interest from most of the energy consultants.

Last week, Jones called for a federal Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of stock purchases by state energy consultants. [End quoting]

Remember, if it's going on in California, it's probably going on your area, too.

Latest Privacy Nightmare: Money That Tracks You

It isn't every day that you learn how to promote the Constitution and trash it in one easy congressional hearing. But that's exactly what happened this week.

A House Subcommittee on Financial Services divided its session Tuesday between praising an idea by young students to print parts of the Constitution on U.S. currency, and an anti-privacy proposal to rig that same currency with a device that would allow others to keep track of who has had it and for how long.

What's more, the irony seemed to go over the heads of everyone who participated.

"In just one hearing, they showed us how to educate on the Constitution and how to ignore it" a startled J. Bradley Jansen, deputy director of the Center for Technology Policy at the Free Congress Foundation, told <NewsMax.com>.

Every politician knows the public relations value of the "dog and pony show" that puts future voters on display so as to figuratively pat them on their heads for being good citizens.

Chairman Michael G. Oxley (R-OH) gavelled the House committee session to order by proclaiming that counterfeiting is done often by organized crime or violent drug gangs.

After greeting the students who were to testify, he welcomed Director Thomas A. Ferguson of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. He would soon discuss the ongoing testing of "innovative security features, outside the current traditions of U.S. currency design, for possible application to future generations of currency".

Outrageous Federal Intrusiveness

Jansen fears that the ideas circulating among crime fighters will venture "outside the current traditions" of the protections of the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution. "You don't go following people's money habits to find where they get the currency, where they spend it, and how long they keep it. That is the equivalent of burning the house down just to kill a few bugs."

It would have been interesting to learn if the young students from Liberty Middle School and Patrick Henry High School in Ashland, Va., attending that hearing had been taught the Bill Of Rights and the meaning of the Fourth Amendment. One assumes that if they want parts of the Constitution printed on our currency, they probably have. If they sat through the entire hearing and witnessed the contradictions, they must have been confused.

Article Four reads: "The right of people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

As the Center for Technology Policy sees it, the so-called "Mew" chip inserted in currency to trace the habits of citizens is a high-tech violation of that amendment. Pure and simple.

"It is important that the adoption of new technologies to thwart counterfeiting and to increase security are not used as government surveillance programs" Jansen said.

The Mew chip is small enough that it could easily be implanted in money for security purposes. Bureaucrats at home and abroad "have expressed interest in expanding their power in ways that could easily trample over our liberties" he added.

Marvin Goodfriend, a senior Federal Reserve official in Richmond, Va., proposed one such plan several years ago.

Stealing Your Money With "Hoarding Tax"

This proposal would have imposed a tracking device on currency that would automatically reduce its value through a "carry tax" on hoarding.

It would hit you at your bank's cashier window. If you go there to make a cash deposit, the Mew chip would determine whether you had held onto the cash for a period that someone else determined is "too long". Thus, you could walk up to the window, make a $120 deposit, and get back a receipt for only $105.

Goodfriend's idea sparked such backlash that it was dropped.

Keynesian economists at one time flirted with the idea. Supposedly, their purpose was to boost the economy with greater cash circulation in the event lower interest rates failed to boost the economy.

Does that ring a bell? What is Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan doing right now? Driving interest rates down, down, down and the economy remains sluggish.

"That's scary" said Jansen.

Just wanted to let everyone know who hasn't already heard, the four major credit bureaus in the U.S. will be allowed, starting July 1, to release your credit info, mailing addresses, phone numbers, etc., to anyone who requests it.

If you would like to "opt out" of this release of info, you can call 1-888-567-8688.

It only takes a couple of minutes to do, and you can take care of anyone else in the household while making only one call. You'll just need to know their social security number. Be sure to listen closely as the first opt out is only for two years; make sure you wait until they prompt you to press "3" on your keypad to opt out for good. Happy dialing!

Pass this info on to everyone you know. We need to protect ourselves and each other. [End quoting]

This is worth a try, but how can you TRULY protect yourself from the "leaking out" of your personal information when it is so readily available on so many computer databases? How would you ever know the route by which some marketing business got your information? The guidelines of moral decency and common courtesy go quickly out the window these days in order to simply make a buck!

a leading computer security expert has warned.

Alex Shipp, senior anti-virus technologist with the widely respected British firm MessageLabs, said the global computer networks upon which the Internet is based could be brought to a halt by the sheer volume of infected material circulating in cyberspace.

Mr. Shipp also claimed that traditional desktop-based protection methods could no longer cope with the onslaught of new, rapidly propagating email-borne infections.

This public intervention from a senior frontline expert will increase concern about the significant rise in virus activity in recent months, and the growing technical sophistication of the people writing them.

Last week, US authorities issued dire warnings to computer users to protect their machines against the Code Red virus. The predictions of Internet meltdown, however, failed to materialise.

Email-borne viruses account for more than 90% of outbreaks. Consultants Price-Waterhouse-Coopers say viruses could cost businesses more than $1.3 trillion (£907bn) by the end of next year.

In the last fortnight, one email virus, SirCam, has risen from obscurity to become the most common, most sophisticated and most resilient virus in history. It is rampaging across millions of computers.

The number of emails infected by a virus being picked up by MessageLabs has risen above the one in 400 mark. When the company launched three years ago, the rate was about one in 1,500. Mr. Shipp blamed home users and small businesses: "All the emails we are stopping are from people using domestic Internet providers like Hotmail and Freeserve. These are people who do not have the expertise to realise that their anti-virus protection is either non-existent or badly needs updating.

"They just can't keep up with the amount of stuff that is coming at them now."

But Ross Anderson, reader in security engineering at Cambridge university, said the blame for the growth in viruses should be aimed not at users, but at software companies who had failed to build adequate protection into their products. [End quoting]

This has become a massive problem. I've had six viruses on my computer in the last ten days. I didn't bother checking often, until recently, because I seldom used to have a virus.

You can assume at least some of these viruses are experiments being conducted by the crooks in high places in order to have ready whatever is necessary to at least temporarily stop Internet traffic when so desired. (Remember the day JFK was assassinated and all the telephone lines in the greater Washington, DC area "just happened" to go dead for awhile?!) After all, the Internet is becoming a big nuisance to those who otherwise control what we are allowed to know about. "They" need to have a way to incapacitate the usually resilient Internet, should the "need" arise.

MOB TRIAL MAY SET COMPUTER PRIVACY

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 7/29/01: [quoting]

WASHINGTON—By bugging a keyboard or using special software, FBI agents can remotely capture a computer user's every keystroke. With a black box, they can intercept email from miles away. In a van parked outside, they secretly can re-create the pictures on a computer screen from its electromagnetic energy. The legal limits for these new investigative tools will get a test Monday when a federal court in New Jersey examines a mob case in which agents, without a wiretap order, recorded a suspect's computer keystrokes. Privacy experts are watching the case of Nicodemo S. Scarfo, Jr. with great interest because it could bring major changes to investigative tactics in the online age. [End quoting]

What do you think can REALLY be done as far as computer surveillance technology? And even if the court were to rule against such invasive tactics, do you REALLY think they are not now in constant use at levels "above" such laws? We have covered Project Echelon many times in the pages of The SPECTRUM and that alone is a superduper satellite system utilized for some time now by "Big Brother" for monitoring ALL modes of electronic communication devices—including computers.

SPOTLIGHT NEWSPAPER HAS CLOSED ITS DOORS

From the INTERNET, 7/01: [quoting]

Liberty Lobby Goes Under, Ends Spotlight Publication

Liberty Lobby has closed its doors, and its weekly newspaper, the Spotlight, has published its last edition after a federal bankruptcy judge last week dismissed the group's latest claim for Chapter 11 protection. The most recent ruling by U.S. bankruptcy Judge S. Martin Teel, Jr. puts an end to a complicated eight-year battle between Liberty Lobby founder, Willis A. Carto, and his former associates at the California-based Institute for Historical Review (IHR).

IHR sued and won a multimillion-dollar judgment on claims that Mr. Carto illegally diverted funds from the Institute's Texas parent company, the Legion for the Survival of Freedom.

Mr. Carto, a resident of Escondido, California, founded the Washington-based Liberty Lobby in 1955. The nonprofit outfit and its publication, the Spotlight, funded by outside donations and subscriptions, claimed to be America's key defender of patriotism and a hub for grassroots conservative activism. But they also have been criticized as a fertile breeding ground for the views of anti-government extremists, conspiracists, and racists.

Yesterday, as about 25 employees gathered personal belongings and wrapped up last-minute business at the Liberty Lobby offices, located at 300 Independence Ave., a spokesman defended Mr. Carto and vowed to fight on. "Nobody is really that sad, but everybody is mad," said spokesman William Francis. "While Liberty Lobby may be dissolved, nobody has given up here.

We know that we did nothing wrong as an institution. Everybody has complete faith in Mr. Carto and how he administered the funds." While offering few specifics, Mr. Francis hinted that a new incarnation of the Spotlight was already in the works. "They may come in and shut us down, but the staff are fully committed to make new efforts to get something going. Over the last several days, we've had hundreds of phone calls to the office, pledges of hundreds of thousands of dollars to set up a new newspaper," he said. "We have a citizens' army behind us."

Mark Weber, director of IHR, said the ruling may signal the end of Liberty Lobby, but he predicts Mr. Carto will endure with some other venture. "This is a welcome culmination of an exhausting, costly, bitter legal and public relations dispute," said Mr. Weber, who has been assailed in the pages of the Spotlight as a "rat", "weasel", "toilet bowl", "cockroach" and "devil".

Mr. Francis yesterday reiterated his claims that IHR plans to sell one of the Liberty Lobby's final assets, its subscriber mailing list, to such watchdog organizations as the Southern Poverty Law Center and the Anti-Defamation League, which have been critical of both feuding groups. "It's a lie" Mr. Weber said of those claims.

Liberty Lobby once sued the Wall Street Journal for having called the organization "anti-Semitic". But Judge Robert Bork dismissed the suit in 1984, declaring: "If anti-Semitism has a core, factual meaning, it was demonstrated here." Mr. Carto, a 74-year-old native of Fort Wayne, Indiana, has been called "the most influential anti-Semite in the United States".

About 90,000 people are paid subscribers to the Spotlight, which in 1981 had an estimated readership of more than 300,000. The weekly's "favorite political targets included the Rockefellers, the Rothschilds, Henry Kissinger, the Council on Foreign Relations, and the 'Zionist entity' in Palestine" according to author Dennis King. Mr. Carto played a key role in co-founding IHR in 1978. The Anti-Defamation League has called IHR "the world's single most important outlet for Holocaust-denial propaganda".

Mr. Carto was ousted by IHR's board of directors in September 1993 after the staff complained, among other things, of Mr. Carto's interference in editorial decisions for the Journal Of Historical Review, an IHR publication. [End quoting]

It's sad to see them lose this round, but the odds are good that they will return in another form. They sure gave a lot of information that the normal print and broadcast media outlets wouldn't print.

"MAGNIFICENT POPULIST" GETS LAST LAUGH

Joseph Ellis, the professor whose book accusing Thomas Jefferson of fathering a slave child was completely discredited by historians, has been caught in a mountain of lies, which he was forced to acknowledge. For years, Ellis regaled students at Mount Holyoke with stories of his combat heroics as a paratrooper in Vietnam.

Then he told of turning against the war and leading protests at home. He described how bravely he marched in Mississippi during the civil rights protests of the 1960s. He talked of scoring the winning touchdown on his high school football team. He boasted of helping David Halberstam with his 1972 best-seller The Best And Brightest. None of this is true, Ellis has been forced to admit. As a schoolboy, though, he was on the football field—in the marching band. [End quoting]

From the INTERNET, 7/24/01: [quoting]

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE <<http://www.boydgraves.com/press/072201.html>>

CONTACTS: Dr. Boyd E. Graves 330-744-5955 <ed@boydgraves.com>

WFMJ-NBC 330-744-8611 <<http://www.wfmj.com>>

N.O.A.H.—Zygote Media 800-257-9387 joel@boydgraves.com

International human rights activist Dr. Boyd E. Graves presented the 1971 U.S. Special Virus Flowchart on national television during an interview with veteran talk-show host Carl Bryant on the Dynamics In Black weekly television program today. Dr. Graves is the discoverer of the secret 30-year-old Research Logic Flow Chart which coordinates 15 years and 20,000 secret virus development experiments.

The program's "research logic" details the creation and mass production of a new hybrid human retrovirus which depletes the human immune system. Dr. Graves says the secret virus program, which officially concluded in 1978, mass-produced 60,000 liters of new viruses, and is responsible for today's global HIV/AIDS crisis. The evidence he presents are the actual NIH/NCI government contracts for the secretly taxpayer-funded biochemical weapons program, U.S. Special Virus Cancer Program (1962-1978). The second part of Dr. Graves' U.S. Special Virus Flowchart interview airs next Sunday.

"They have allowed pieces of the program to come out. In 1972 all concentration was to the Tuskegee Experiment, as if it was an isolated incident," says Dr. Graves. Now we know they were testing AIDS on Icelandic sheep in 1932 and 1933; they are not disjointed experiments. They have been studying African sexual issues for the entire 20th century."

Dr. Graves v. The President of the United States of America, U.S. Supreme Court Case No. 00-9587, demanding an immediate review of the U.S. Special Virus Flowchart and the secret experiments the Flowchart coordinates, was denied without comment June 4, 2001. The Flowchart has been reviewed and authenticated by medical doctors and scientists around the world since its 1999 discovery.

Dr. Graves has demanded an immediate program review from top government officials and the scientists still living who were involved in the Special Virus program, including AIDS "co-discoverer" Dr. Robert C. Gallo. During a February telephone interview, Dr. Gallo acknowledged his role as Special Virus Project Officer and his experiments which inoculated African Green Monkeys in 1971 inside the special virus program. Dr. Gallo could not explain the Multiply Spliced VISNA virus found inside AIDS to Dr. Graves.

Additionally, Dr. Gallo stated he had been previously unaware of the U.S. Special Virus Program's 1971 Flowchart. Now Gallo has been briefed on the 1971 Special Virus Flowchart and his specific contracts NIH71-2025 U.S. Special Virus Cancer Program 1971 Progress Report #8, Pages 104 & 105, with the direct allegations which resulted.

Dr. Graves' initial court interrogatories have established many new facts about the program. NCI Deputy Director and former U.S. Special Virus Cancer Program Manager, Dr. Alan Rabson, agreed that the U.S. Special Virus Program had the technology to make AIDS, but could not confirm that it "actually did". Dr. Alan Rabson disclosed the primary architects of the U.S. Special Virus Flowchart to Dr. Graves, stating they are now deceased.

Dr. Graves leadership and activism has convinced some in Congress to review the program. Dr. Graves continues to educate Congress, reproducing the policies, laws, and their secret U.S. Special Virus progress reports using all revenues from book and video sales.

Congress persons are being educated on the secret program he, Dr. Graves, helped uncover. Last week Congressman James Traficant (OH) came out in support of the peoples' demands for program review. "The Congressman has agreed to ask for an investigation by the GAO or the Congressional Committee on Investigations" said Trafficant's Regional Director, Anthony Traficanti. "The information presented by Dr. Graves is very shocking and very revealing. Our government is supposed to be sensitive to the people's concerns and the flowchart was very revealing to me" said Traficanti.

Dr. Graves has provided the flowchart free online for the reading public on his www.boydgraves.com website since February of 2001, with volumes of additional primary-source research materials available for purchase or donation to the peoples' grassroots movement toward immediate review.

"It's interesting that the first cases of AIDS were discovered in 1981, and now it appears that the research reveals that it's existence goes back over 20 years. But since we have the Tuskegee Experiment, it may not be a coincidence" said Trafficant's office.

Since 1999 Dr. Graves has presented the secret U.S. Special Virus Cancer Program Research Logic Flowchart to the President of the United States, the United Nations, the Pentagon, the U.S. Surgeon General's office, the United States' Supreme Court, and U.S. Special Virus Program contracted scientists and HIV/AIDS "co-discoverers" Dr. Robert C. Gallo and Dr. Luc Montangier, as well as Special Virus scientists Dr. Peter Duesberg, Dr. Alan Rabson, Dr. Mathilde Krhim, and Dr. Garth Nicolson.

The U.S. Special Virus Flowchart and many shocking documents are now available in his new book STATE ORIGIN: The Evidence Of The Laboratory Birth Of AIDS (N.O.A.H.-Zygote Media Networks, 2001; ISBN #0-9707735-1-X).

The second part of Mr. Bryant's nationally syndicated show, Dynamics In Black, will air Sunday August 5, 2001 at 6:00 on WFMJ-

KEEP KIDS SAFE;
KEEP THEM AT HOME!

Many Are Wrongly Dumped In Failing Foster Care

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 7/19/01: [quoting]

By Richard Wexler

The 16-month-old girl had bruises on her arms and legs. Some of her hair had been pulled out. She was filthy. She was dehydrated. She had a fever. She had an ear infection.

The little girl was the victim of just three days of the best efforts of her county to "protect" her.

She was trapped in an institution that was chronically overcrowded and understaffed. Every few years there was another scandal: Children were overmedicated to keep them under control; children were physically and sexually abused. The death of an infant was covered up. Staff members pleaded no contest to dealing drugs.

The time was 1985. The place was MacLaren Children's Center.

Sixteen years later, it seems very little has changed. The minimum age for children forced to endure MacLaren apparently has increased, but a lawsuit alleges that children at MacLaren are routinely "bullied, threatened, and manhandled" in an environment that is "chaotic, violent, and dangerous".

The cycle of exposé, promises made, promises broken, and more exposés has never ended because no one has faced up to the root of the problem: As long as too many children are taken needlessly from their parents in the first place, Los Angeles County will always think it "needs" dumping grounds like MacLaren.

In 1990, when I wrote a book about the child welfare system, Wounded Innocents, I began it with the story of the little girl at MacLaren because there was still another dimension to that tragedy: There had been no need to take the child from her family in the first place.

She was taken because her older brother had been hit in the face with a tennis ball, leaving a black eye. Although "believe the children" was the mantra at the time, no one would believe the boy when he said he wasn't abused. And no one would talk to his friends, who saw what really happened.

So both children were whisked away for days.

Other children never come back.

Remember Gilbreanea Wallace? She was the 2-year-old taken away from her grandmother in 1999, only to be beaten to death in foster care. Less well known is why she was taken. Gilbreanea's grandmother was not accused of beating the child. She was not a drug addict.

Gilbreanea was taken because the pipes burst in their rented house, making it a health hazard. The authorities apparently offered no help for the child and her grandmother to find a new place to live. But they did offer $5,000 for Gilbreanea's funeral.

This kind of wrongful removal is not unusual. Contrary to the common stereotype, most parents who lose their children to foster care are neither brutally abusive nor hopelessly addicted.

Far more common are cases in which a family's poverty has been confused with child "neglect".

Other cases fall on a broad continuum between the extremes, the parents neither all victim nor all villain.

What these cases have in common is the fact that there are a wide variety of proven programs that can keep these children in their own homes, and do it with a far better track record for safety than foster care or institutions.

But such programs are smeared when the label "family preservation" is slapped onto any decision to leave any child in any home under any circumstances, when something goes wrong.

It's been a very effective smear campaign.

As a result, the dominant approach to child welfare in much of America can be boiled down to a single sentence: Take the child and run.

Foster homes fill with children who don't really need to be there. That creates a so-called shortage of foster parents, so children are dumped in places like MacLaren.

Get the children who don't need to be in foster care back home, and there'll be plenty of room in good foster homes for children in real danger—without resorting to MacLaren.

Unfortunately, some want to go in the opposite direction and institutionalize more children.

These new "orphanages", it is said, will somehow be different from MacLaren. Yes, there are a few model institutions, luxury orphan resorts, complete with endowments that seem to rival the gross domestic product of Third World nations. There also are model jails. But they are called models precisely because they are exceptions. And all the scientifically sound literature shows that even the good institutions do emotional harm.

The toll wrought by places like MacLaren is incalculable.

In contrast, the few places that are moving away from both foster homes and institutions by emphasizing safe, proven programs to keep families together are reducing their foster care populations and keeping children safer.

To cite just one example, thanks to a lawsuit that led to a landmark consent decree, Alabama is rebuilding its entire child welfare system to emphasize keeping families together.

Twenty-one counties have completed the rebuilding process. In those counties, the foster care population is down by 33 percent, and an independent, court-appointed monitor has found that children are safer now than they were before the changes.

The consent decree also calls for drastically reducing the use of short-term "shelters".

In Alabama they've learned what Los Angeles has yet to figure out: The only way to fix foster care is to have less of it. And the only way to fix MacLaren is to shut it down.

Richard Wexler is executive director of the National Coalition for Child Protection Reform. [End quoting]

How can anyone who knows anything about government-run institutions trust their or anyone else's children in such care? Wouldn't this be one of the best places for child abusers to be working, as has been proven so many times AFTER the damage is done and comes to light later on?

Sure there are going to be ones mistreated at home, and even killed, but generally speaking they are still safer than in government care. Check out for yourselves who are operating these child welfare offices and courts and how they treat the parents and children.

MICROSOFT'S CORPORATE SHENANIGANS AND GREED STOP POOR KIDS FROM HAVING CONTINUED ACCESS TO DISCARDED COMPUTERS

From the INTERNET, 7/01: [quoting]

The embittered battle between Microsoft and PCs for Kids continues, with the charity outraged over the software giant's so-called "gesture of goodwill".

Microsoft has released a statement saying it will provide 150 packs of Windows 95 and 10 refurbished computers worth a total of AU$65,000 (U.S.$32,500) as a "gesture of goodwill" to Australian charity organisations—the Rotary Club of Geelong and the Geelong YMCA.

"As the founder of PCs for Kids, I am ashamed at this half-hearted offer by Microsoft" PCs for Kids owner Colin Bayes said.

Bayes, angered by the software giant's decision said: "Microsoft has offered us zilch, zero. As far as they're concerned, we're going to fold."

Microsoft's corporate affairs manager, Julie Inman, told ZDNet that under-privileged kids in East Timor will receive the technology donation via the Rotary International project, "in association with PCs for Kids".

A spokesperson for the Rotary Club of Geelong, however, expressed concern for the charity's future saying the software giant's technology donation "does not help PCs for Kids at all".

PCs for Kids provides the Rotary Club of Geelong with recycled computers for its own charitable work.

Rotary says while the Microsoft donation will help the Club in the short term, it does nothing to support PCs for Kids' long term charitable work.

"Really the work is done by PCs for Kids. If Microsoft wanted to benefit them, they would've been better to give it to them."

"If in the long term their aim is to shut him down, they might achieve it" the spokesperson said.

Requesting 2,300 licenses, PCs for Kids have been embroiled in a battle with Microsoft over the installation of obsolete Operating Systems on recycled computers, which it donates to underprivileged kids.

The charity and Microsoft met early last week to discuss a way for the operation to continue its work without infringing on copyright laws.

"Given concern about PCs for Kids, we are doing everything to expedite the application process and are hoping to ensure continued support" a Microsoft statement said.

PCs for Kids application for 2,300 copies of Microsoft's software valued at over AU$400,000 (U.S.$200,000) was knocked back. Inman says: "We weren't able to help them out in this particular instance; it's quite an extraordinary ask given that we try to reach a broad range of charities."

Bayes says Microsoft's "kind" gesture to donate software to disadvantaged children in East Timor does not solve the copyright issue and has left hundreds of kids on the charity's waiting list without assistance.

PCs for Kids has received international acclaim over its fight for the right to donate computers to needy kids.

According to Bayes, United Kingdom Prime Minister Tony Blair has even sent the charity a letter outlining his support for its efforts in bridging the digital divide. [End quoting]

What's wrong with this picture? If you buy a book, record, video tape, cassette tape, etc., you can give it to anybody you want. Don't you think it's about time we rid ourselves of this corporate gouging that dictates you can't even legally give away your obsolete software to kids for charitable causes? It's only going to get worse if we don't stop these shenanigans.

MILITARY CORRUPTION: SQUALENE CONFIRMED IN ANTHRAX VACCINE AFTER NUMEROUS PENTAGON DENIALS

From the INTERNET, 9/25/00: [quoting]

Representative Jack Metcalf of the State of Washington revealed in a report Thursday that the FDA found squalene in the anthrax vaccine being forced upon the U.S. military under pain of court martial and/or dishonorable discharge.

The FDA confirmed the presence of squalene in the anthrax vaccine by using a more sensitive test than one used by the Pentagon. Squalene is NOT an FDA-approved substance and its consequences on health are unknown. As a vaccine booster ingredient, it is thought to increase immunity, but its use has been denied time and again by the Pentagon. Congressman Metcalf again called on the Pentagon to immediately HALT the anthrax vaccine program until the squalene source is identified and its health consequences studied.

The revelation on squalene more clearly establishes that the Pentagon may be conducting "medical experiments" on service members. Other Congressional hearings have already established that the Pentagon conducted de facto experiments because it avoided organization-level FDA review before changing the way the vaccine is used and administered.

The exodus of hundreds of military members, including many officers and skilled pilots, over the vaccine demonstrates the gravity of this issue as it relates to Pentagon "integrity" and the overall national defense capability. Young people thinking of joining the military may decline a tour or career when faced with such questionable and risky employment treatment. The recruiting impacts of this issue are highlighted by House and Senate Armed Services Committee testimony that the military may need up to 50,000 more members to meet current global obligations.

More information on the anthrax vaccine policy will be made available at the Service Member Support rally in Philadelphia this Saturday, September 30 [2000] at noon, the Widener Building, One South Penn Square.

The "NO ABUSE" organization was established out of concern that the Department of Defense (DOD) mandatory anthrax vaccine policy represents another episode in a legacy of questionable and often harmful medical practices. Many service member relatives, as well as military, medical, legal, and policy experts assisted the House Government Reform Oversight and other Congressional Committees as they investigated the anthrax vaccine in nearly a dozen hearings during the past 18 months. These citizens determined a formal organization was necessary to address the anthrax vaccine, the planned DOD Joint Vaccine Acquisition Program (JVAP), and other related military health matters on a long-term proactive basis.

The NO ABUSE (a non-profit organization) address is: P. O. Box 70186, Washington, D.C. 20024-0186; Redmond H. Handy, President. [End quoting]

This is almost a year late as far as breaking news goes, but was not widely publicized in the conventional print and broadcast media outlets—as usual. Military personnel have enough problems maintaining morale these days without the additional weight of trying to deal with how their employer is out to do them in with an injection. Unfortunately, history has long revealed that the military brass seem to have no moral problem experimenting on the rank-and-file soldier. So now we find out that all the concerns were more than justified. What will be next?

ALGAE-AID

From WIRED magazine, August 2001: [quoting]

"Band-Aids are for boo-boos." So says Sergio Finkielsztejn, president of Marine Polymer Technologies. "The RDH is all about trauma."

Finkielsztejn is referring to his company's 4-by-4-inch Rapid Deployment Hemostat, a bandage that stops bleeding in seconds. The RDH is supercharged with a polysaccharide produced by unicellular algae, or diatom, cultured in sealed bioreactors in the firm's Danvers, Massachusetts, labs.

The polysaccharide attracts platelets and red blood cells and accelerates clotting. Bleed time is cut by two-thirds. Currently, only cardiac and kidney dialysis patients and hemophiliacs use the algal bandages, but Finkielsztejn wants to extend its reach into uncontrolled trauma settings such as battlefields and mountain-bike trails, where injuries are common and help is far away. Marine Polymer is negotiating with the Feds to market a soldier-friendly RDH kit, and is developing the Prodein Patch for sports enthusiasts. Sounds great, but starting at $30 a pop, don't look for it on supermarket shelves. — Charles Graeber [End quoting]

Certainly a good idea for a bleeding emergency. But, at $30 apiece, what do you suppose the profit mark-up is over actual production costs?

HIGH-TECH SPEED TRAP?

Satellite Tracks Rental Car Drivers

Excerpted from THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 7/1/01: [quoting]

James Turner learned an expensive lesson in the perils of speeding last fall, but not from the highway patrol. Instead, Acme Rent-a-Car in New Haven charged Turner a total of $450 for speeding during a business trip.

When Turner, a theater manager in New Haven, rented a van one Saturday last October, he signed a rental agreement with Acme that included a warning that read: "Vehicles driven in excess of posted speed limit will be charged $150 per occurrence. All our vehicles are GPS-equipped." Global positioning system equipment can determine a vehicle's location at any time.

Turner, who had previously rented from Acme, did not notice the warning. When he returned home to New Haven, he discovered that the rental agency had deducted $150 from his checking account three times during his trip.

It turned out that Acme had recently installed GPS devices manufactured by AirIQ of Toronto in its fleet. But it did not provide Turner with location information and driving directions as some other automotive GPS devices do. Instead, the AirIQ system was used to pinpoint where and when Turner traveled at what Acme contends were "speeds in excess of 90 miles per hour" said Max Brunswick, the lawyer for Acme. The incident was first reported in The New Haven Advocate, a weekly newspaper. [End quoting]

DOCTORS OR GUNS?

From the INTERNET, <AABCC@yahoo.com>, 8/4/01: [quoting]

This is a reply to an article recently in the News Desk about physicians killing many more people than guns while performing their occupation.

In a message dated 8/2/01, <CrazyLibertarian@aol.com> writes:

Excellent, but as a doctor (actually, physician; doctor is the degree while physician is the pursuit), I wonder whether it's the licensing laws and FDA that have actually killed more people. — Roderick T. Beaman

Thank you, Doc! I actually intended this as humor. If I were to "rant", it would not be about guys like you, who've paid their dues, but about the state's intrusion into medicine. Is it just me, or can't everyone see what the "vote buyers" in DC are planning with the "Patient's Bill Of Rights"?

Here's a hint: around 1978, Medicare legislation was enacted and budgeted for $4.5 billion the first year; after much study of demographics, actuarial data, etc., a 15-year projection was made, with a budget plan of $8 billion for 1992. This sort of makes sense—an 80% increase over 15 years.

Human nature, and the fact that if something was "free" its demand might change, was never factored in by these rocket scientists. (Or was it?) Actual medicare expense in 1992 was over $118 billion, and now we're quibbling about giving more than that away each year to a relatively small part of our population just in pharmaceuticals, "legal" drugs. (Phylis, a retired RN working in our office part-time, doesn't carry a purse; she carries a large shopping bag, and it is chock full of whatever you may want—Paxil, Librium, Ritalin, Valium, gliptazine, avopro, water pills, Cylert, her favorite, etc. She knows how the system works; her drugs cost her nothing. You know more such stories than I, and I know many.)

And don't get me started on the FDA—perhaps nothing more than whores to those they are charged with monitoring.

Sorry, this is getting lengthy. Two last points: (I would love your comments, for sure!)

1. Why is it that "every" (actually 3 of 4) doctors who I have seen with my heart condition is foreign educated and named "Patel" or "Chandrarum"? When I ask them why so many Hindus choose a field in cardiovascular medicine, rather than proctology, radiology, etc., the answer is the same. In an accent that Peter Sellers would die for, they say: "The heart is the heart of things." Ted Bachellor would roll over in his grave.

2. Check the website of Dr. Day. She had a choice—burn it, poison it, cut it, or take things into her own hands. Like you, she has paid her dues, and chose the latter. The Tumor Endured by Dr. Lorraine Day (actually, the tumor is not the point, but from there you can get to her other pages.) Take care. U.S. CONSUMER GROUP TARGETS "MISLEADING" FOOD LABELS

From the INTERNET, <http://www.rense.com>, 7/27/01: [quoting]

Americans' efforts to eat healthier diets are being thwarted by misleading and hard-to-read labels on packaged foods, according to a national consumer group.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest announced Thursday that it is once again petitioning the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to step up its enforcement of food labeling laws in an attempt to make ingredient lists easier to read and more shopper-friendly.

"(Packages) are designed intentionally to keep people from understanding those labels" said Michael F. Jacobson, the group's executive director. "They're trying to attract us with the words that we want."

Jacobson showed reporters dozens of grocery store products that boast fruit, vegetables or whole grains on their packages. He raised one package of Aunt Jemima blueberry pancake mix that depicts several large, ripe blueberries on the front.

"Funny, there are no blueberries in this product at all" said Jacobson, who noted that the simulated blueberries are actually made from sugar, soybean oil, salt, and other ingredients. "Mother Nature did not make blueberries like that," he said.

Consumer advocates say that the average consumer spends only 7 seconds choosing each item in the grocery store, making them easy targets for misleading packages.

The center is renewing a 1995 petition asking the FDA to force manufacturers to enhance the readability of their ingredient labels. "Many labels now are printed in all capital letters and in cramped typeface that makes them hard to decipher," Jacobson said.

The group is also urging the agency to require that food packages display the percentages of their major ingredients as required in the European Union and in many Asian countries.

"The FDA already has the authority to do it," said Rep. Frank Pallone, a New Jersey Democrat.

Food manufacturers responded in a statement that their current packaging standards enable consumers to make quick and informed choices about their products.

"We believe consumers are concerned about the overall nutrition of the product. The current nutrition facts box and ingredient label conveys this important information in a way that consumers feel is easy to understand," said Lisa Katic, the director of scientific and nutrition policy for the Grocery Manufacturers of America.

Rep. Nita Lowey (D-NY) said that many food packages are “deceitful” and called on manufacturers to “clean up their acts”. Lowey announced that she would soon introduce legislation designed to require manufacturers to clearly identify potentially dangerous allergens in their products. [End quoting]

You know the ingredients must be pretty bad in many products if the manufacturers are so resistant to honesty. Besides pressuring politicians to enact legislation, directly pressuring the manufacturers (that you know they’re up to no good or why the dishonesty attitude?) can likewise be an effective persuasion. The deceit only works when the public is ignorant of what is REALLY going on, otherwise it backfires on the manufacturer.

Those of you who see Consumer Reports magazine are treated to a full color page (“Selling It” on the inside of the back cover) of such outlandish deceptions every month. By exposing the deceit in such a publicly embarrassing way, that page does more to cause manufacturers to think twice about duping the public than all the legislation in the world could achieve.

JULY SNOWSTORM STUNS SAUDI ARABIA

From the INTERNET, <para-discuss@tje.net>, 7/24/01: [quoting]

RIYADH, SAUDI ARABIA—It was a snowy July day in Saudi Arabia. Really.

An unexpected snowstorm on Monday trapped thousands of people at a mountain park near the border of Yemen.

During the blazing July sun, it’s common for Saudis and visiting foreigners to visit a national park in the mountains to try to beat the heat.

This time, several centimetres of snow cooled them off a little more than they are used to.

The unusual weather drove people into a panic, injuring 75 picnickers.

Saudi civil defence teams in helicopters and mountain jeeps were called in to rescue them.

NIKOLA TESLA COMMEMORATIVE PLAQUE UNVEILED AT THE HOTEL NEW YORKER, IN MANHATTAN, NEW YORK CITY

Tomorrow, 7/10/01, 7PM, Nikola Tesla commemorative plaque to be unveiled: <<http://www.teslasociety.com/pressrelease.htm>>

New York, June 16, 2001

Nikola Tesla commemorative plaque to be unveiled at the Hotel New Yorker, in Manhattan, New York City. The ceremony for the unveiling of the Nikola Tesla plaque will be held at the Hotel New Yorker, in the presence of many dignitaries. The Hotel New Yorker is located at the corner of 8th Avenue and 34th Street, in Manhattan. The ceremony will take place on July 10, 2001 at 7 p.m.

July 10 is Nikola Tesla’s birthday, which is celebrated as an official day in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Nevada, and many other States in the United States. July 10 is Nikola Tesla Day.

Nikola Tesla is “the genius who lit the world”—whose discoveries in the field of alternating polyphase-current electricity advanced the United States and the rest of the world into the modern industrial era.

Nikola Tesla had 700 patents in the USA and Europe. Tesla’s discoveries include the Tesla coil, fluorescent light, wireless transmission of electrical energy, remote control so important in cosmic exploration, discovery of cosmic radio waves, and use of ionosphere for scientific purposes. Nikola Tesla was a New Yorker, who lived and worked in New York City almost 60 years, and died at the Hotel New Yorker on January 7, 1943.

Such a small, very belated token acknowledgement to a man of such great genius. He gave the world so much in the way of technologies which would free all peoples from drudgery and pollution and economic hardship. But those dark ones who control the world from behind the scenes recognized these contributions as great threats to their power base and made sure only those gifts from Tesla they could control were made available to us. One day soon the truth will be made known about this great humanitarian scientist and personal friend of great humanitarian author Mark Twain. There is yet much to be revealed at the proper time!

HOUSE VOTES TO RESTRICT MEXICAN TRUCKS IN U.S.

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 6/21/01: [quoting]

By Alan Fram

In a surprising setback for President George W. Bush and his plans to further open trade with Mexico, the House voted Tuesday to block the Transportation Department from issuing permits that would let Mexican trucks operate throughout the United States.

By a 285-143 roll call, the House approved a provision by Rep. Martin Sabo, D-MN, that would scuttle the administration’s plans to begin allowing thousands of Mexican trucks to begin shipping goods to and from any point in the United States beginning next January. The increased truck traffic was to occur under the North American Free Trade Agreement, which was enacted in 1993.

The battle continued the fight between unions and business that has marked Congress’ easing of trade barriers in recent years.

Mexican trucks currently are restricted to commercial zones stretching north of the U.S. border into California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. [End quoting]

It looks like we won another—at least partial—victory against the elite controllers’ plan to homogenize the US with Canada and Mexico. Let’s keep on the lookout that they don’t try to pass this dubious law in the middle of the night sometime. If the crooks in high places have anything going for them, it’s persistence and cunning.

For Everyone,

When you have money (cash, check, or whatever form), hold it between your palms and mentally “bless” it.

Money is a concrete form of Divine energy, and when you bless it, you free it from its past. It can never again be used for any evil purpose.

You will find that money will come to you to be blessed. A bit of redemption work here.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORY: BENVENISTE VINDICATED

From NEXUS magazine, July-August 2001: [quoting:]

About homoeopathy, Professor Madeleine Ennis of Queen’s University, Belfast, is, like most scientists, deeply sceptical. That a medicinal compound diluted out of existence should still exert a therapeutic effect is an affront to conventional biochemistry and pharmacology, based as they are on direct and palpable molecular events. The same goes for a possible explanation of how homoeopathy works: that water somehow retains a “memory” of things once dissolved in it.

This last notion, famously promoted by French biologist Dr. Jacques Benveniste, resulted in his excommunication from the scientific mainstream. More than a decade later, Professor Ennis jumped at the chance to join a large pan-European research team, hoping finally to lay the Benveniste “heresy” to rest. But she was in for a shock, for the team’s latest results controversially suggest that Benveniste may have been right all along.

A consortium of four independent research labs in France, Italy, Belgium and Holland, led by Professor M. Roberfroid at Belgium’s Catholic University of Louvain, used a refinement of Benveniste’s original experiment that examined another aspect of basophil activation.

The team knew that activation of basophil degranulation by algae leads to powerful mediators being released, including large amounts of histamine, which sets up a negative-feedback cycle that curbs its own release. So the planned experiment involved comparing inhibition of basophil algae-induced degranulation with “ghost” dilutions of histamine against control solutions of pure water.

The result, soon to be published in Inflammation Research, was the same: histamine solutions, both at pharmacological concentrations and diluted out of existence, led to statistically significant inhibition of basophile activation by algae, confirming previous work in this area.

Jacques Benveniste is unimpressed. “They’ve arrived at precisely where we started 12 years ago!” he said.

(Source: By Lionel Milgrom, Guardian, 15 March 2001, <www.guardian.co.uk>) [End quoting]

The important point of the above is not that these scientists have confirmed what has been known (if not easy to explain) for a long time about homeopathic medicine. The truly important accomplishment here is that these groups of scientists were honest enough to report their results, even though such results fly in the face of conventional thinking. If science could find the nerve to do this in general, then there would be great advances in our understanding of Nature. As it is now, however, money (and perhaps a threat on your life) rules what is acceptable science and what must be hidden or suppressed according to the selfish wishes of the world controllers.

FIRST PLASTIC SUPERCONDUCTOR

From POPULAR MECHANICS magazine, June 2001: [quoting]

The world’s first plastic superconductor has been fabricated by Bell Labs in Murray Hill, N.J.

Scientists began by depositing a solution of polythiophene on thin films. This caused the molecules to stack up against each other like uncooked spaghetti, says a lab spokesman. Then, instead of adding impurities to change the electrical characteristics of the plastic, the chemists altered the molecular structure of the polymer by removing electrons. When cooled to minus 455° F, it loses all resistance. The next step is to raise the temperature at which the plastic becomes a superconductor.

“With the method we used, many organic materials may potentially be made superconducting” says research chemist Zhenan Bao. [End quoting]

I still want you to know what is being published about all of the so-called new technology products—even if such are probably quite “old” as far as where our super-secret scientific laboratories have progressed to.

SPRINKLING HARD DISKS FOR MEGA-DENSITY

From POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, August 2001: [quoting]

Conventional computer wisdom held that hard disk drives would soon hit an impassable storage limit. Of course, something usually comes along to disprove conventional wisdom. This time it’s “pixie dust” from IBM.

Technically known as antiferromagnetically coupled media (AFC), the new hard drive design involves sprinkling a layer of ruthenium (a precious metal similar to platinum) only a few atoms thick on magnetic disks to help hard drives achieve previously unheard-of storage densities—as much as five times current hard disk capacities.

Until now, the problem with increasing the capacity of hard drives was that when the magnetized grains on the surface of a disk were made smaller, the chances of losing bits of information became higher. However, with ruthenium, the material IBM calls “pixie dust”, the grains are tall and thin and thus can be packed more closely together without a loss of stability.

Pixie dust hard drives aren’t just laboratory magic, either. The first models are already available in the form of IBM’s AFC Travelstar disk drives, which pack 25.7 gigabits of data per square inch (versus 20 gigabits on conventional drives). Without increasing the cost, IBM hopes to rapidly increase densities to the point where we should see 400-gigabyte drives in desktop computers, 200GB drives in notebooks, and matchbook-sized 6GB drives within a few years. — Daniel F. Carney

[End quoting]

This discovery will certainly benefit the worlds of laptop computers and the miniature “smart” electronic products that are continuously being introduced. The moral of the story, of course, is that as soon as someone says there is a line beyond which you can’t go—someone else proves that pronouncement wrong!

CONVERTIBLE GOO

From WIRED magazine, August 2001: [quoting]

This black goo breaks the laws of physics on demand: Just add magnets and the magnetorheological (MR) material turns from a free-flowing liquid into a solid. Conceived in 1949 at the National Bureau of Standards, the substance is finally being put to full commercial use. General Motors will incorporate it into shock absorbers on the upcoming Cadillac Imaj. Ford plans to make computer-controlled clutch mechanisms, seat belt tensioners, and shock absorbers that change their viscosity on command to absorb kinetic energy and minimize damage caused by car crashes and adverse road conditions.

Embedded in the substance are micrometer-sized iron particles coated in a polymer. When magnetic force is applied, the north pole in one iron particle attracts the south pole in another, forming a line. The stronger the field, the stronger and more solid the bond, up to the saturation point.

“The advantage of magneto-rheological shock absorbers” says John Ginder, a scientist at Ford’s Research Lab in Dearborn, Michigan, “is that they can be controlled in real time, so that they can become more or less rigid depending on the road conditions.” If Ford gets its way, the car of the future will be made entirely of MR material. Press the Reset button after that fender bender, and speed away unscathed. — Niall McKay [End quoting]

One wonders if this material is particularly reliable when used over and over again, such as in a shock absorber, or if there is going to be generated a big-money business in replacement parts!

HIGH-VOLTAGE CONNECTIVITY

From WIRED magazine, August 2001: [quoting]

POWER-LINE TECHNOLOGY—Hype, or soon-to-be reality?

With communication via power-line technology, it’s hard to tell. Simply plugging your computer into an electrical outlet for Net connectivity has so far been as likely as pigs sprouting wings. This is especially true in the States, where power-line technology (PLT) issues are more complicated than in Europe (which has greater housing densities, more conducive voltage levels, and fewer issues with transformers). But two American companies have spent much of the summer quietly conducting tests with utility clients in the East and Midwest, and plan to roll out services next year.

New York-based Ambient—which will partner with Cisco and Bechtel on future projects—is working with the utility Consolidated Edison of New York to expand its testing to several hundred homes by early 2002. ConEd wants to use PLT to sell additional services to clients, says George Jee, the utility’s director of planning. The revenue from tacked-on features could bring in $300 million a year for ConEd if only 5 percent of its 3.3 million customers sign up for $150 in monthly services, which could include Net connectivity, video-on-demand, concierge offerings, smart appliances, and IP telephony.

Meanwhile, Powerline Technologies in Reston, Virginia, is trying out its system with two utilities in the East and one in the Midwest. Earlier this year, the company finished initial PLT tests in suburban Atlanta, where a handful of households accessed the Net through a specially designed modem that can hit speeds greater than 1.5 Mbps.

As utilities nervously eye electricity shortages, they can't confidently say they'll be able to supply power, let alone Net connections. Yet, some analysts see PLT as the coming killer app—if, of course, it lives up to its promise.

"While everyone is focused on the stars, or at least on a satellite, the solution is right in front of us" says Morgan Stanley senior adviser Judith B. Warrick. "I'm seeing the light at the end of the tunnel with power-line communications. By year-end, we should see products shipped and announcements of last-mile testing coming out of beta."

— Frank Jossi [End quoting]

What a predicament for the power companies whose greed has led to the unpredictability of blackouts right now. If they want to offer Internet services also, then they'll have to shape-up or risk losing the new Internet customer base to more reliable Internet services. They couldn't have painted themselves into a more responsible corner—at least from the point of view of we customers!

THE HARBINGER

From the INTERNET, 7/28/01: [quoting]
By Bill Walker

It wasn't Noon yet, but the temperature was already approaching ninety-five degrees on the morning I started my flight training at Fort Wolters. It was warm for May, even for Texas, and since the base was intended to be a training ground for Vietnam, the heat just made the experience all the more authentic. We knew that the lucky few who made it through the grueling nine-month warrant officer flight-training course would soon be off to a destination even hotter than Texas.

As nearly two hundred of us stood at attention, we were flushed with excitement. On this day, we would finally begin the "hands on" portion of flight school. We had been through nine tough weeks of basic training in Louisiana and four weeks of continuous harassment from our tactical officers while we began the ground school portion of our classes. The purpose of the harassment, we knew, was to shake out anyone from the program who couldn't handle the pressure of intimidation and confusion. The ability to remain focused during combat is critical to survival.

That morning, however, no amount of

The Missing Diary Of Admiral Richard E. Byrd

"I must write this diary in secrecy and obscurity. It concerns my arctic flight of the nineteenth day of February in the year of nineteen hundred and forty-seven.

"There comes a time when the rationality of men must fade into insignificance, and one must accept the inevitability of the Truth! I am not at liberty to disclose the following documentation at this writing, perhaps it shall never see the light of public scrutiny, but I must do my Duty and record here for all to read one day in a world which hopefully the greed and exploitation of certain of mankind can no longer suppress that which is Truth."

—Admiral Richard E. Byrd (from the Introduction)

Children Of The Matrix

How an interdimensional race has controlled the world for thousands of years—and still does!

We are born into a world controlled by unseen forces that have plagued and manipulated humanity for thousands of years. No, this is no script from a Hollywood movie. It is happening to you NOW.

You may look around and think that what you see is "real". But in truth you are living in an illusion—an illusion designed to keep you in a mental, emotional, and spiritual prison cell.

David Icke exposes these forces and their methods of human control and he reveals a fantastic web of global manipulation, orchestrated by forces beyond this physical realm.

He exposes the hidden bloodlines, through which other-dimensional entities live and operate unseen among us; and he shows how the bloodlines of the royal, political, and economic rulers of today are the same as those who ruled as the kings and queens of ancient times.

Icke takes the story on from his highly acclaimed And The Truth Shall Set You Free and The Biggest Secret, and he lifts still further the veil of secrecy that has maintained humanity in manipulated ignorance for so long.

The truth is not only out there.
Much of it is right here.

harassment could have taken away from the excitement of climbing into the cockpit of the TH-55 training helicopter to actually begin learning to fly. Although it was common knowledge that only a portion of those who began flight school would actually end up with wings, each of us was convinced that we would soon fly "above the best".

Lunch, and our tactical officers, were all that stood between us and our first flight. We knew from experience that the tac officers could be brutal, so we wondered, uneasily, what they would throw at us during this portion of our training.

As we stood rigidly facing the tac officer, waiting for instructions, a tiny robin hopped out in front of our formation. It seemed confused and a little frightened. Suddenly, its mother flew a low swoop across the lawn, as if encouraging her youngster to take to the air. Despite our efforts to remain focused on the men in command in front of us, everyone's eyes followed the birds. Even our officers turned to watch, mesmerized by the scene.

Over and over, the tiny bird ran as fast as its little legs could move, taking off after its mom. But despite its best efforts, gravity kept it tethered to the Earth. Again and again, the little ball of feathers raced across the grass, flapping its wings, only to hop up on a stone at the end of its long run.

Completely ignoring the crowd of staring bystanders, the mother robin swooped down after her baby's attempts to fly, cajoling and chiding it. "Like this" she seemed to be saying. "Try again."

All two hundred of us watched breathlessly, silently praying for the little bird to succeed. Each time it flapped and hopped its way across the lawn in front of us, we'd groan at its failure.

Finally, after we had stood at attention for what seemed like hours just watching, those tiny wings took hold of the air, and the baby bird became airborne for a few feet. You could almost see the little bird swell with pride.

Then, on one last run across the front of our formation, the gray piece of fluff rose into the air. Two hundred would-be warrant officers burst into wild cheers. We watched, ecstatic, as the little bird followed its mother to the horizon. Our tac officers turned back to us, smiling. What could they add? It had been the ultimate flight lesson. [End quoting]

Even hardened Air Force officers' hearts can be softened by watching one of God's beautiful creations teaching it's offspring in a most appropriate procedure and at a most appropriate time. How could anyone ever think such events as these are coincidences?

CALLER-ID AMAZING STORY

From the INTERNET, "Mary" <msnell@txk.net>, 7/23/01: [quoting]

The pastor's church is called Almighty God Tabernacle. On a Saturday night several weeks ago, this pastor was working late, and decided to call his wife before he left for home. It was about 10:00 PM, but his wife didn't answer the phone. The pastor let it ring many times. He thought it was odd that she didn't answer, but decided to wrap up a few things and try again in a few minutes.

When he tried again, she answered right away. He asked her why she hadn't answered before, and she said that it hadn't rung at their house. They brushed it off as a fluke and went on their merry ways.

The following Monday, the pastor received a call at the church office, which was the phone that he'd used that Saturday night. The man who he spoke with wanted to know why he'd called on Saturday night. The pastor couldn't figure out what the guy was talking about. Then the guy said: "It rang and rang, but I didn't answer." The pastor remembered the mishap and apologized for disturbing him, explaining that he'd intended to call his wife.

The man said: "That's OK. Let me tell you my story. You see, I was planning to commit suicide on Saturday night, but before I did, I prayed: 'God, if you're there, and you don't want me to do this, give me a sign now.' At that point my phone started to ring. I looked at the caller ID, and it said 'Almighty God'. I was afraid to answer!" [End quoting]

We've all heard the statement: "God works in mysterious ways." Yet it always fascinates me to come across this type of story. I have had similar situations happen to me over the years, as I bet you have too. Let's always try to remain open to the little miracles which cross our path when we least expect them. △

EVIL AGENDA OF THE SECRET GOVERNMENT
 BY TIM SWARTZ
 Exposes Project "Paper Clip" and the underground UFO bases of Hitler's elite scientific corps. Elements of the CIA and the Secret Government have imitated real alien abductions to convince the public of interplanetary invasion so New World Order gang can rule the Earth unchallenged. THE CONTROLLERS: THE HIDDEN RULERS OF EARTH IDENTIFIED
 BY COMMANDER X
 We are the property of an alien intelligence! "Our" planet is a cosmic laboratory and we are but guinea pigs to those who have kept us prisoners on Earth. Humankind continues to wage all-out battle with those who have kept us as their slaves since the beginning of time. They are:
 • The Soulless Ones • The Greys
 • The Elders • The Counterfeit Race
 • The Illuminati
 They have, says the author (who is of military intelligence) kept us in human bondage by:
 • Controlling our minds • Planting imperfect thoughts in our heads • Kidnapping humans • Impregnating women • Causing global warfare and ethnic hatred • Creating a false economic system, and • Assassinating and "replacing" our most trusted spiritual leaders, rulers, and elected officials.

DEATH IN THE AIR: Globalism, Terrorism & Toxic Warfare

This book explains how and why:

- We have evolved from the nuclear age into a "Technotronic Era" with "psychotronic warfare" for optimal population control.
- Non-lethal warfare is being effectively used to produce sociopolitical and economic outcomes consistent with global genocide.
- The world's wealthiest policy-makers have recommended, and are working toward, eliminating half the world's population.
- Accepted methods of disease prevention, such as pesticide sprayings, can only be scientifically rationalized as costly and deadly contributions to non-lethal warfare and population reduction.
- Chemtrail sprayings that obscure blue skies are not normal, but reflect a conspiracy of silence and military attacks on the health and welfare of people around the world.

Subtle Winds Of Change Stirring Within Us All

8/4/01 HATONN

Good evening, my scribe. Be still. I am Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come in the One Light of Creator Source. Be at peace, my friend.

There are great energy shifts impacting you ones that are unavoidable. These shifts are coming from many directions as if there is some sort of “vortex” summoning forth a great need that must be fulfilled. In essence, this would be an accurate model if it were not for the fact that the vortex simply does not exist in the classic definition of same.

The guiding factor is not some external phenomenon “out there” somewhere efforting to suck you into it. But rather, an inner phenomenon within the “mass consciousness” (which draws upon the vast infinite and collective experiences of all souls) that perceives tell-tale markers and thus senses (in this case, in a foreboding manner) a need for preparation. This inner sense of expectation—whether perceived consciously or not—is what molds the unfolding physical experience. Therefore the vortex-like phenomenon is created.

This is very much like the subtle reactionary effect that works in one’s subconscious wherein panic, nervousness, and anxiety are produced in response to some environmental stimulus—such as a sound, odor, or a combination of events—that triggers the memory of a past event of great trauma. For example, when you hear the crackling sound of a fire blazing in a fireplace, you may feel a sense of anxiety even though you may not consciously remember the time as a small child when you were hurriedly awakened in the middle of the night and carried from your burning house.

In much this same manner, many ones are feeling that “something” is up, and on a very subtle level there is created an energy vibration within the individual that, in and of itself, would not be significant enough to precipitate a physical phenomenon. However, when this same subtle vibration (disturbance) is collectively being felt by BILLIONS of experiencing souls, the subtle disturbance becomes cumulatively quite powerful, and massive subtle energy (or “etheric” energy) shifts are not only possible, but likely—which in turn precipitate phenomena in the physical.

As a unique “spark” of Creator Source, you each are co-Creators with INFINITE potential to flow creative energies. The majority of those experiencing in the physical at this time simply lack the discipline and clarity of thought to recognize this basic truth for themselves.

When the mind is easily distracted and in a constant state of shifting from one random thought to the next, there is very little alignment between the heart (emotional energy) and the head (analytical thought energy). This is the primary reason that the majority miss the fact that they are a co-Creator with unlimited potential to focus and flow this infinite Life-Force energy.

The collective heart emanations (electromagnetic vibrations) of all experiencing individuals is summed together and the resulting call for energy is answered perfectly from moment to moment. Those who have mastered control over their mind and heart have the ability to quite literally warp space and time within their localized area of attention, and thus give the appearance of “supernatural” abilities.

These abilities are not supernatural, but rather, quite natural as you progress in your understanding of the whole reason for the physical experience in the first place. You are each there efforting to learn to discipline yourself so as to become a RESPONSIBLE co-Creator, and thus expand your ability to contribute to the infinite quest for greater awareness, and thus newness and growth.

As has been stated many times prior, the journey is infinite. This implies that there is no beginning relative to any time reference you can quantify, nor is there an end. Newness or uniqueness of experience is the greatest joy, for it holds insights that will garner the reward of greater awareness, which then serves as the catalyst for the next new idea and experience.

Returning to the great energy shifts that are impacting you ones: look around you. Do you notice things happening that don’t quite seem “right”? Do you notice events happening more and more which defy mere coincidence?

Just recently there was announced not one, but three separate occasions where an athlete has died as a result of “heat stroke” within a two-day period. These were young men in their physical “prime”. Why?

Hint: Has anyone noticed the unusual weather all around your globe? Not only is it growing more unpredictable, but the extremes are becoming more extreme. The same forces influencing your planet’s weather are likewise influencing YOU through your energy field.

These are the EFFECTS of the energy shifts of which I speak. The “push” of this energy and the resulting effects could be attributed to any number of factors, both naturally occurring and man-made. However, the absolute CAUSE is a result of the mass consciousness desire for change that will bring forth inner understanding of that “little something” that so many ones feel they are “missing out on” in life.

That so-called “little something” is actually quite important, for it is no less than the CONSCIOUS recognition of the true nature and purpose of the physical experience! This includes the recognition that you each are indeed co-Creators and that there is a great inner desire to accept PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY for that gift and ability, and to use it in a balanced manner.

This desire that is (and has been) awakening within the collective awareness is generating situations all over the world that will eventually culminate in that which is necessary to bring forth the awareness of the answers that you ones are collectively seeking.

Will these events be good or bad, positive or negative?

The answer to that question will depend entirely upon your current level of awareness and understanding. If a father loses his son to an illness, and due to his “tragedy” goes on to find a cure for that same illness that saves millions of lives (maybe including YOUR son or daughter), then was the experience a tragedy, or perhaps an effective catalyst for positive growth?

When ones can keep in mind an appreciation of the broader perspective with respect to the physical experience, they will recognize that there is not death of an entity. Yes, the physical apparatus that you use to focus consciousness through may very well cease to function over time, but that is truly insignificant with respect to the overall journey of the soul.

Many of you have incarnated billions upon billions of times for various reasons. Some of your incarnations may have lasted only a couple of minutes, as you may have chosen a brief interaction so that a loved one would have the necessary catalyst in their experience to move from a “stuck” position—perhaps like the father-and-son example above.

Look not upon change in a negative way. ALL experience has positive value when viewed from the larger, infinite perspective of the soul. It is only from a lingering doubt concerning the existence of one’s own soul that fear of bodily death grabs a foothold.

The energies that are now in the “ethers”, and beginning to precipitate phenomena in the physical, are perfectly suited for the collective reality of those of you experiencing at this time. There are no mistakes, and each will experience what they need the most in order to come into conscious recognition of the next step that they need to take in their own journey. No two experiencing ones will walk the EXACT same path, though you may very well travel segments of your journey in both large and small groups.

For those who continually postulate the questions “What can I do to prepare for what is coming?” or “What is my role/purpose in this life?” I say to you: Learn to go within and discern for yourself that the answers to your questions lie within. Learn to recognize your own inner connection to the ALL THAT IS—Creator Source. Within this inner awareness one can find the answer to any question that you deliberately FOCUS and HOLD your attention upon. There are no exceptions, and your greatest challenges to overcome will be the “chatter” of your own mind and the erroneous beliefs you hold onto as “gospel” truth.

Never stop asking questions. Never stop seeking answers. You each have much to learn and much to teach. Sometimes your teacher will only be a fraction of a step ahead of you, and many times you will find that your teacher is the very one you are trying to help. Learn to be humble and aware that, in as much as you know and understand right now, there will ALWAYS be room for growth—and you can learn a great many things from the layman, the scholar, and everyone in between.

Learn to allow yourself to play from time to time as the children so often do. Learn to allow time to do the things you enjoy. Taking life too seriously can be just as debilitating as not taking it seriously enough. There is always a balance point to be achieved.

This is most often symbolized as the Yin and the Yang, the opposing forces. You ones live in a bipolar, electromagnetic pulse-wave universe, where BALANCE of energies is the key to unlocking every mystery. When you balance the heart energy (emotional, Yin) with the head energy (analytical, Yang), your life will smooth out, and you will be much better able to perceive what path is correct for you at any given point in time. When these energies are perfectly balanced you have the state of Love, Joy, and for some, Nirvana.

I am Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come in the Light (perfectly balanced electromagnetic pulse-wave emanations) of Creator God’s infinite spectral expression. May you each find within these words the message that most deeply resonates within your being, and take notice of what your inner, feeling voice is telling you.

Blessings and Peace to you ALL! Salu. △

The Reptilian Agenda Parts I & II

(Featured interview in the October 1999 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

David Icke has produced two amazing videos with the Zulu “sanusi” or shaman, Credo Mutwa, who reveals astonishing information which, until now, was only available to the highest initiates of the African shaman tradition.

Credo says, “The world must know this—and know it now.”

He reveals how a shapeshifting reptilian race (the “Chitauli” to Africans) has controlled humanity for thousands of years and how their bloodlines are in the positions of royal, political, and economic power today.

Credo Mutwa supports all the themes outlined in The Biggest Secret and adds his own unique knowledge and experience of traveling Africa for nearly 80 years.

These videos will re-write the UFO/extraterrestrial story in a way that will blow your mind. UFO researchers have ignored Africa and therefore ignored one of the greatest sources of knowledge on the planet.

While people still argue over Roswell and the extraterrestrial beings apparently found there, African tribes-people have been interacting with these ET “gods” for thousands of years, sometimes eating them, as Credo Mutwa did on one occasion with unforgettable consequences.

Credo has not only seen dead “greys” many times, he has seen them examined behind their “grey” exterior and he knows exactly what they really look like—and it is nothing like we think!

“This is the most amazing man it has ever been my honor to meet—a genius—and the importance of these videos is simply beyond words.”

—David Icke

After making these videos, Credo was visited by two people from Cape Town who offered him 50,000 rand, and a house anywhere in South Africa he would like to name, if he would agree to never speak to David Icke again and never have anything to do with him. Credo's reply can be imagined!

Something's Up In The Banking & Monetary World

Editor's note: We here at The SPECTRUM have been, on a regular basis, sharing bits of information with you readers about some of the curious shenanigans going on in the world of money. Most recently we covered one aspect of this situation at length back in the April 2001 SPECTRUM in an article titled "England 'Bombs' Gold Prices"—which expanded on a theme from several items in the News Desk about "gold jitters" from a month earlier.

The following excerpted items are all courtesy of the always interesting Rumor Mill News (www.rumormillnews.com). While we have no way of verifying the validity of this information, and any mentioned dates can—and usually do—change depending on the tug-of-war going on behind the scenes, the "rumors" presented herein are potentially of such great importance that we are compelled to share them with you.

The money world is, of course, a major arena for exercising control over large numbers of people. It would appear that some kind of a major struggle is in progress in this arena between the forces of good and evil. Perhaps the chess pieces are truly in place to finally topple the longtime stranglehold of the diabolical Federal Reserve. Time will tell about that. Keep your eyes and ears open for clues—even from the controlled print and broadcast media—as things unfold.

8/10/01 NEWS DESK SPECIAL REPORT

Date: Friday July 27, 2001, 2:16 a.m.

Subject: Something's Up In The Banking And Monetary World

From Rayelan, Publisher, Rumor Mill News:
This is long, but it is VERY important!

Over the weekend, I "ran" into one of my sources. I find this funny, because I haven't seen or heard from them in months. I am sure they knew I was moving over the weekend; I announced it on the webpage and in an email. He contacted me at a time when all of my computers were packed and I could not get online.

The jist of the conversation rambled from the major corporations' control of food, to water rights, to the flouridation of California's water at the order of Governor Davis, to gold, with many other "smaller" topics sandwiched in between.

During the conversation, which could have been monitored by anyone, I kept thinking to myself: "I know he is telling me something very important. Which piece of the puzzle does he want me to focus on?"

In the next few days, I received several messages from another researcher. I was too exhausted to call back, so he finally emailed me.

"What's going on at the U.S. Treasury?" he asked.

Suddenly some of the bits and pieces of the conversation I had with my Source began to make sense.

I emailed back: "Do you think the Federal Reserve is getting ready to be replaced with Treasury banks?"

He replied: "People are dumping dollars and buying gold. No one is reporting it. The Treasury Department and Secretary O'Neill are going to be left holding the bag and taking the blame for the demise of the Fed. Bush and O'Neill are charting different paths. It seems O'Neill is dancing to someone else's tune. What's going on?"

Then I received the following from another source who has been following the huge "metal trusts" in Europe: "We have UNprecedented activity [suggesting] that...the monetary and banking changes [are] VERY VERY soon."

He added: "We need to SUPPORT the men and women who are implementing the new banking systems around the world. Whatever you can do to send out info telling people that the GOOD PATRIOTS are the ones behind everything, will help a lot.

"By the way, there are several of our people who have played double-agent roles:

"Top guy at Fed (who wrote Ph.D. thesis on the ideal banking and monetary system which is having precious metals-backed currency etc.),

"Top lady in HIGH justice, past high military folks, and many others. They will probably be prominent in bringing forth these changes and we need to support them with our prayers and in other ways.

"They have done what was necessary to BE IN POSITIONS of POWER to get this huge shift done when the time came.

"Also, most of the riff-raff of our government is being cleaned out in one fell sweep! YOU will LOVE this!"

Over the years, I have had numerous conversations with this fellow and with several others who are also involved in various "metal trusts". I have known of the plan to "break the back of the FED" since 1991. I knew that the plan involved the "metal trusts".

I have also known that the "Plan" involved creating United States Treasury Banks to replace the Fed.

When I was in Austria, in 1994, I was told that when the Euro goes "online", backed by GOLD, the dollar will plummet, the Federal Reserve will be bankrupted, and the American people will get out from under the yoke of oppressive taxation which feeds the FED via the IRS.

I was told to expect three things to happen all at once:

1. The dollar will plummet and gold will rise;
2. The Federal Reserve will be bankrupted and be dissolved. (It is doubtful if the American people will be told that the Fed is bankrupt. Such news would create panic in the streets. More than likely, one night we will go to sleep with Federal Reserve banks, and the next morning we will wake up with United States Treasury Banks.)
3. The income tax will be replaced by a national sales tax.

While I have many different pieces of the puzzle, and while I know how dangerous it has been for the "double agents" who have "lived" within the "belly of the beast" for many years, I still have not been able to put ALL the pieces together.

I would appreciate the help of our financially astute readers and agents. If you think you have a piece of the puzzle, please post it as a reply (if you are an RMNews Agent), or email it to: <EDITOR_RMNEWS@yahoo.com>. I will be following up my initial information with a few phone calls, and hopefully by tomorrow afternoon I will have MORE pieces of this puzzle.

In the meantime, check out <<http://www.nesara.com>>. This website shows the way for us to lift off the oppressive yoke of the International Bankers and take back control of our money and our nation.

Tonight I received email from Bill Murphy, Chairman of GATA (Gold Anti-Trust Action committee). These are some excerpts:

"GATA has come up with the goods on what the 'strong dollar' policy is all about. A significant part of that strategy was the manipulation of the gold market. GATA has them nailed and they are panicking because they know once we prove our case that they will be liable to the most monstrous lawsuits in history."

"Russia is getting ready for the dollar to crash. Preparedness measures have moved from the realm of published warnings, to concrete actions, such as the Central Bank's decision to put the gold chervonets coin into circulation."

"Robert Hormats, the vice chairman of Goldman Sachs, said Thursday he believes the dollar is overvalued against the euro, and the White House would like the dollar to depreciate but is uncertain how to do this without triggering a sharp, disruptive move in the currency markets."

"Does any mainstream Wall Street groupie believe that ex-Goldman Sachs CEO Rubin, who organized the biggest market (gold) FRAUD in history, is a stand up guy about what he said in Congress that the US should continue his strong dollar policy, while two of the most visible Goldman Sachs officials are going out of there way at the same time to TALK THE DOLLAR DOWN?

“All of this, while the GATA camp pushes on to expose the truth about how these ‘elitists’ have frauded the gold world for MANY years.

“Goldman Sachs is panicking because they know GATA is winning the day and we have the goods on them.

“Congress is still being bombarded by GATA supporters asking Greenspan and O’Neill to answer our queries truthfully.”

“The Gold Cartel is in a bit of a panic as a result of the activities of the GATA army. Greenspan, Mattingly, and now ALL OF A SUDDEN those good ole boys, Goldman Sachs, seem unnerved!

“Keep the faith out there, gold bulls. GATA’s ‘Enveloping Horn’ tactics have The Gold Cartel confused and bewildered. They cannot believe a ragtag army like all of us is socking it to them.”

Subject: Gold, Treasury Bills, Notes, and Bonds

The Plan involved substituting counterfeit “bearer bonds” for the 10% reserve that ALL banks are supposed to have. This means that if our banks are ever audited fully, the audit will show that they have NO assets at all!

To implement The Plan, it was necessary to change the banking laws. This was done under Reagan. I was told by men who were involved in The Plan, that they would have done anything and everything necessary to see that Reagan was elected, including making a deal with Iran. They saw the Reagan presidency as their last chance to put their Plan on line.

When I was told this, I was also told that the families who are behind the New World Order had planned to put their world government online in 1984. Because of the opposition that the Reagan Administration created, the NWO was NOT able to come to power at that time.

In 1984, I had NEVER heard nor even IMAGINED a cabal as evil as the NWO. I doubt that less than 1% of the readers of Rumor Mill had ever heard or imagined a NWO in 1984. I will admit that there were a few members of groups like the John Birchers who were way ahead of the rest of us on this one, but these people are few and far between, and in 1984, NO ONE listened to them.

In a little over 16 years, America and many people in the world have awakened!

[Dr. Peter] Beter wrote this years ago, and it seems to agree with what you are saying:

Reagan Era

United States Intelligence operatives first picked up hints that something big was in the works early last fall. As the information developed, the decision was made to move the New York Assay Office gold to West Point; and earlier this month on January 11 the dreaded Russian economic coup began to take place. What took place that day was a secret financial transaction in Geneva, Switzerland—the first of many which cannot be reversed! A deal was struck which will progressively give the Russian government a decisive economic edge over the United States. It will give the Soviet Union devastating leverage over the United States Treasury Department in particular, and thus over the economic fate of this country in general!

When the series of transactions which began this month have been completed, it will give the Kremlin effective control over America’s economic structure. The Russians will be in a position to use this unique power in any way they choose. They can use it to disrupt the economic maneuvers of the great and powerful forces here, if desired. They can also use it to destroy the investments and assets of every person having a bank account or fund denominated in dollars, or they can threaten America’s rulers with economic blackmail if America’s secret war preparations are not stopped. Once the transactions now underway are completed, those capabilities will be in Russia’s hands!

The transaction of January 11 was a huge gold sale by Russia to certain other interests. First, Russia had placed billions of dollars worth of gold in escrow under control of three Geneva banks.

Then the buyers of the gold paid for it in billions of dollars worth of United States Treasury securities. That is, title to these Treasury instruments of liability was transferred to the Soviet Union. The sale is to be only the first of many because the gold buyers control vast quantities of Treasury securities—that is, billions of dollars worth of Treasury Bills, Notes, and Bonds.

These securities bear interest and mature at specified dates. At the maturity date the holder has the right to turn them in and receive full payment of the principal from the Treasury Department, but usually that does not happen. Most big holders of Treasury securities roll them over at the maturity date—that is, the holder exchanges the old note or bond for a new one and continues collecting interest.

But now billions upon billions of dollars worth of these United States Treasury securities are beginning to move into the hands of the Russian government; and once they hold a large enough hoard of these Treasury instruments, the Russians can choose not to roll them over. They can present them to the Treasury Department and say: “Pay up.”

Subject: U.S. Gold Buying Activities

Dear Alec,

After reading your Rumor Mill message, I would like to offer the following small bit of news.

One of my gold buyers purchases solely on behalf of the U.S. Treasury, mainly for large lots of 6000 metric tons plus, and has a rolling credit line of half a trillion—that is, $500 billion US dollars.

He is supported by a fleet of aircraft to collect the gold immediately after purchase and an “army” of U.S. security personnel to coordinate collection.

He has been buying gold worldwide for several years, hence the gradual build-up of U.S. Fed reserves of gold, for the purpose you expressed in your email. — Harry Lucy

Subject: There Appears To Be More Going On

From Rayelan:

Evidently there is more going on than I know. I was told by one of my sources that Alan Greenspan is going to make a “blockbuster” announcement early this week.

I was told that most people wouldn’t understand what he was talking about—but it appears as if he has to tell us the Federal Reserve Banking System is in bad shape and the system will have to change. I am hoping that what he means is the Federal Reserve Banks are bankrupt, like the thrift in Chicago, and the United States will have to go back to U.S. Treasury banks!

These Treasury Banks will be backed by gold, and since the United States doesn’t HAVE any gold, they will HAVE to buy it. The huge metal trusts I have been talking about for years now is where the United States will go to buy the gold. These trusts are controlled by American Patriots. These are the same trusts that many of you have invested in over the years. If I am right about what is about to happen, it looks as if some people, who have trusted for years now, will finally see their patience and prayers pay off. Not just for them, but for the entire world!

However, the war is not over until the truce has been signed, and until Greenspan cries uncle. Anything is possible—especially WAR! Keep your prayers focused on this country and our Constitution. If the United States survives, the rest of the world will also. But if the U.S. is brought down, then the rest of the world can look forward to the re-emergence of communism under a new name. You and I know this “reincarnation” as the New World Order. Only THE NWO knows what they will rename themselves once they have control.

I have predicted they will hide behind a New World Religion. This is why it is important to keep your eyes focused on Jerusalem right now. Jerusalem was chosen as the FIRST WORLD CITY back in 1948. It will become the home of the three western religions! If the plan that was set in motion at that time is still on the front burner, then before the NWO cries uncle and slithers into their underground bunkers for another 100 or so years, they will try their trump card—THE MESSIAH IN THE SKY!

Project Blue Beam—holographic projections of the Messiah, aliens, Princess Diana as the goddess, alien invasion, wars, pestilence. Don’t think the NWO will give up easily! Unless the good guys have some kind of SUPER THREAT, that even the NWO can’t counter, I predict that the change from the Federal Reserve to the U.S. Treasury Banks will NOT go smoothly!

Those who understand the Fed, the IRS, and gold—please keep focused on these three things. I really feel the demise of the Federal Reserve is the reason the Gary Condit scandal is keeping our attention focused elsewhere!

Also, please remember that some of the good guys and gals—true American Patriots—have had to rub elbows with the bad guys for years now. They have had to infiltrate and pretend to be one of them. Please remember that sometimes the good guys have had to wear the BLACK HATS! (p.s. Someone is saying that Greenspan is one of the good guys! Don’t be fooled!)

Subject: More Rumors About Federal Reserve Being Broke

From Rayelan, Publisher, Rumor Mill News:

Yes, the country may be teetering on the brink of depression. Yes, there are those who say that Martial Law is just about to be imposed. Yes, we may be on the verge of war!

But I also believe that we are on the verge of seeing the end of the IRS, the end of the Federal Reserve, and the end of the New World Order’s plan for a One World government this decade!

Why do I feel this way? It is because I continue to hear—from my sources—that the huge “metal trusts” that have been gathering money for over 20 years are just about to be broken and the money dispersed! The people who own these “metal trusts” are Patriots who believe in personal sovereignty and freedom. They joined together in these “metal trusts” in order to “break the back” of the Federal Reserve Bankers and the Eco-Slave State they want to create.

I received word tonight that the change in the banks is just about to take place. Again I ask you to pull up the Internet website <<http://www.nesara.com>> and take a look. While this is NOT the final version, it will give you an idea of what is being proposed.

In November of 1998, I told you that Hillary was going to run for Senator from New York. I received dozens of emails telling me that I was crazy. Rumor Mill News was the FIRST news source anywhere to alert people that Hillary was going to run for the Senate. And we didn’t say the Senate from Arkansas—we said NEW YORK!

The same source that gave me the information about Hillary told me about the change in the banks.

I should add a word of caution: These are dangerous times for the shadow men and women who are trying to create a better world for all of us. The enemy knows their every move, even before they do. Constant roadblocks and death threats face them at every turn. Prayer can help these men and women right now. Send your prayers of protection, courage, faith, and strength to the men and women who are working behind the scenes to restore the freedom and liberty that all of us cherish. Pray like you have never prayed before! BECAUSE NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL GOOD MEN AND WOMEN TO COME TO THE AID OF THEIR COUNTRY!

Could bioelectric technologies investigated during the Cold War provide the most advanced form of killing, enslaving, and coercing billions of unsuspecting people worldwide? More frightening: could infectious agents, including the “mad cow disease” protein “prion” crystal, have been engineered to effect a new insidious level of bio-spiritual warfare?

Emerging Viruses - AIDS & Ebola

Audio Tapes
3 hours:
$19.95 (+S/H)

This is the first in-depth exploration into the origins of HIV and Ebola. Claims that these “emerging viruses” naturally evolved and then jumped species from ape to man seem grossly unfounded in light of the compelling evidence assembled in this extraordinary text. Alternatively, the possibility that these bizarre germs were laboratory creations, accidentally or intentionally transmitted via tainted hepatitis and smallpox vaccines in the U.S. and Africa—as numerous authorities have alleged—is investigated herein.

This book reviews the numerous viral vaccine studies conducted simultaneously in New York City and Central West Africa by a narrow network of virologists working for major military-medical contractors under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and the World Health Organization (WHO). Included is Dr. Robert Gallo, the notorious “discoverer” of the AIDS virus. The text presents bizarre and horrifying facts about the biological weapons race of the 1960s and early 1970s when these researchers developed countless immune-system-ravaging viruses, and experimented with an assortment of antidote vaccines allegedly for “defense” and cancer prevention.

Actively Seeking An Inner State Of Peace

8/10/01 SOLTEC

Good evening, my friend. It is I, Ceres Anthonious "Toniose" Soltec, come in the Radiant One Light of Creator Source. Be still and be at peace.

Finding PEACE within can be quite a challenge in and of itself for you ones experiencing there in the physical at this time. However, to find and truly experience peace within will greatly assist you along your personal journey of self-discovery and healing.

When one truly experiences the inner state of peace within, there will naturally come a greater awareness of one's personal condition and surroundings. Most Eastern philosophies teach meditation as a means to achieve a sense of true inner peace. And though there are many avenues that lead in this general direction, few people actually take the time to actively seek a state of inner peace.

Much like when one tries to reason with someone who is very upset, the first thing that is often offered is the suggestion to "calm down" or "relax". Ones instinctively know that a calm state is much more productive and "reasonable" than a highly charged reactionary one.

What many fail to realize is that they tend to walk around, day to day, in a mild form of agitation or anxiousness—while they continually set deadlines and schedules for themselves that must be "strictly" adhered to, no matter what the cost. Many will sacrifice sleep, and sometimes even nourishment, as they continually push themselves as a matter of routine or habit rather than true necessity.

For most, this mild, chronic, low-level state of agitation (stress) is the primary cause for the body's deterioration. The "immune system" is a term used to describe the body's ability to fight-off infection and disease. This system does not exist as a distinct organ like the heart or lungs; rather, it is a "whole-istic" measurement of the body's general state of coordination and alignment of the non-physical energies as they interact with the physical counterparts.

Often, due to mental and emotional stress, one's non-physical energies become greatly distorted or blocked. When this happens, the coordination of all the body's systems is affected. Often stress will cause digestive problems. The digestive problems (poor absorption of energy and building materials) then will lead to a general state of fatigue, and greatly affect the body's ability to repair and rebuild itself.

This, in turn, will lead to a "compromised" immune system. Often the "prescription" from a holistic health practitioner will be to get some rest, and make changes in your living habits so as to avoid any unnecessary stress. Perhaps a better recommendation would be to take the general suggestion of rest (which is pointing in the right direction, but is still somewhat vague) and add to it the suggestion to ACTIVELY seek an inner state of peace.

Inner peace is when all troubles and worries of the physical world are set aside. All material concerns are put "on hold". And, there is an inner calm—a sense of connectedness, belonging, and knowing that there is Perfect Reason for all that is. In this "spiritually aware" state of inner peace, a broader perspective is achieved. From the broader perspective comes greater understanding, and thus more balanced soul-utions to the challenges of the physical experience.

Remember, please, that the entire physical experience is a byproduct (or subset) of the non-physical realms. Some refer to the non-physical realms as higher-dimensional states. This is fine; there are many descriptions of the dynamics that make up the entirety of Creation.

The cause for ALL that exists in the physical lies in the non-physical world which, relative to your physical environment, would be viewed as layers of electromagnetic-like energies. The only reason the body functions in the first place is due to its ability to interface with these non-physical energies. The soul-you, experiencing in your domain through the physical vehicle, does so through the various energy centers (chakras) of the body. When an energy center is constricted or blocked, there results a diminished state of awareness in areas related to that energy center.

For example, one who experiences great "heartache" and emotional trauma will often, due to the overwhelm of negative energy oscillations, shut down or restrict the heart energy center. This will often lead to deteriorated functioning of the heart itself, as well as deteriorated overall physical health, due to certain frequencies of etheric energies not being allowed to be absorbed and channeled through the heart and on into the blood stream. This, again, leads to a whole-body effect of deterioration and weakness.

Often, when an energy center has been restricted or closed down, the other centers will adjust their functioning to some degree, to compensate for the disruption. Again, this can cause general distortions in one's ability to interface with and through the body. Slowly the body begins to adapt to the modified energy signatures, and stabilization of the various systems is achieved, if often in a compromised mode.

This mode of operation will lead to all sorts of physical complications, such as obesity. I mention obesity, in general, due to the fact that this seems to be the most commonly associated condition with those who are "prone" to health problems, and it is the most outwardly noticeable sign of a body that is not functioning properly.

Obesity is often caused by a blockage in one's solar plexus energy center, usually due to emotional hurts inducing one to shut down "gut" feelings. That's one kind of problem. Another is how, as ones get older, their metabolism is said to slow down. But what is the true CAUSE of this slow-down? Most often it is due to the chronic and excessive use of mental energy through worry and "stress".

These emotional wounds and other forms of "stress" often result in constriction of the lower energy centers, and thus operation of the digestive and eliminating organs becomes greatly compromised. This condition will most often cause ones to over eat, as they will not FEEL the actual state of their stomach until it is quite over full. Also it will often lead to ones ignoring the TRUE cravings of the body's "regenerative system" (another name for the illusive "immune system") which coordinates the body's many needs for repair. Rather, the cravings (often in the form of addictions to certain foods and drinks) will follow impulsive reactions to the stresses held in the gut.

ALWAYS, the true cause for physical malfunctions can be traced back to various degrees of misalignment, constriction, or blockages of the non-physical energies which "run" the body. So what does this have to do with finding an inner sense of peace?

To find, recognize, achieve, and acknowledge a TRUE inner sense of peace, ones will have had to work through many of these misalignments, constrictions, and blockages that keep the physical and non-physical out of balance. TRUE PEACE IS THE NATURAL STATE OF A BALANCED INDIVIDUAL.

Those who oscillate their energies erratically tend to be the angry individuals "out to 'get back at' the world". Those who tend to move very little energy tend to be the passive persons with a low degree of general awareness and desire. Those who have learned to balance (and thus more fully utilize) their energies are often viewed as charismatic, charming, likeable, productive, and happy, with a strong sense of self worth, inner value, and awareness of their surroundings.

On a broader scope, your great Mother Earth is herself actively seeking the same state of inner balance and peace as are you, in response to the many energies (both good and bad) impacting you both at this time. The difference is that she is much more consciously aware of her connection to All That Is than are you, and thus she has a more profound conscious sense of her purpose and destiny.

Actively seeking an inner state of peace will take you on a journey of self discovery, cleansing, healing, and most importantly, an inner awareness of your inner connectedness through and to Creator Source to All Life, everywhere. From this point of Awareness, all answers will be revealed. Certainty of who you are, why you are where you are, and where you are heading will be realized, and the physical experience will become quite enjoyable and positive as you look forward to the wonders in each new day with the vigor of the child who is exploring an amusement park for the first time.

I am Ceres Anthonious "Toniose" Soltec, along with MANY a Lighted friend from the non-physical realms who recognize the great desire you ones have for true inner peace and a greater awareness of self. We come in Light and Service to The One Light—Creator Source.

Seek and you shall find. Remember that the answers will often come in a form you least expect, so be quick to challenge old, dogmatic beliefs and see if they are truly serving your best interests.

Blessings and Peace to you ALL! Salu. △

THE SMOKEY GOD AND OTHER INNER EARTH MYSTERIES

BY TIM BECKLEY

Half of the book consists of a reprint of the classic SMOKY GODS written by a Swedish fisherman who claims he found his way inside the Earth and had an amazing encounter with a race of super-wise giants who have lived inside the Earth since ancient times. Book also contains evidence that at least some UFOs may come from inside Earth and are piloted by a race of super-beings who have survived, largely unknown to the surface world. Includes interview with an inner Earth inhabitant from a city beneath Mt Shasta.

INTELLIGENCE AGENT'S SHOCKING REPORT FLYING SAUCERS COME FROM INSIDE EARTH!

- Aliens have established underground bases around the planet.
- Entrance ways can be found in many major cities.
- Ancient tunnel system has existed since time of Atlantis.
- Some government & military officials have taken the side of aliens.

The UFO enigma is more complex than generally believed. Though it is commonly thought that space ships are arriving here from other solar systems, there is now evidence that several groups of ETs have established bases beneath our very feet.

Here are bizarre stories about underground bases at Mt. Shasta, California; Brown Mountain, North Carolina; Dulce, New Mexico; Groom Lake, Nevada;

Superstition Mountain Range, Arizona; South and North Poles; as well as in the mountains of the Andes, and the jungles of Brazil.

Here also are the first-hand reports of those individuals who have been abducted by aliens, and who have survived genetic experiments at some locations. These are the facts that everyone should be informed of—regardless of how disturbing the truth may turn out to be!

Your Heart Has A Mind Of Its Own!

Pop, self-help formulas are a dime a dozen. The book racks are filled to overflowing with recipes for change. But how many of these self-help techniques really work? How many of these books are really worth the investment in money and time and effort? How many of them seem to be saying the same things, but often in such vague terms as to seem remote or obscure for any practical applications?

Gregg Braden made the provocative comment (in my front-page feature interview for our June 2001 issue) that: "HeartMath is recognized as, probably, some of the pioneers in exploring heart-based technologies, relating human emotions to our physical world."

I made a mental note at the time to follow-up on his comment about the HeartMath organization "just in case" there was something substantive going on there that might be of interest to SPECTRUM readers. Wow, is there ever!

At HeartMath, they are, in point of fact, delivering some truly astonishing findings in very practical ways to help the awakening seekers of Truth in a variety of complex environments.

When consulting the Institute of HeartMath's <http://www.heartmath.org> website, here is a portion of what they have to say:

"At the Institute of HeartMath (IHM) Research Center, we are exploring the physiological mechanisms by which the heart communicates with the brain, thereby influencing information processing, perceptions, performance, emotions, behaviors, and health. We are asking questions such as: Why do people experience the feeling or sensation of love and other positive emotional states in the area of the heart, and what are the physiological ramifications of these emotions? How do anxiety, stress, and different emotional states affect the autonomic nervous system, the hormonal and immune systems, the heart and brain?

"Over the years we have experimented with different psychological and physiological measures, but it was consistently heart-rate variability, or heart rhythms, that stood out as the most dynamic and reflective of inner emotional states and stress. It became clear that negative emotions lead to increased disorder in the heart's rhythms and in the autonomic nervous system, thereby adversely affecting the rest of the body. In contrast, positive emotions create increased harmony and coherence in heart rhythms and improve balance in the nervous system.

"Most intriguing are the dramatic positive changes that occur when people use techniques that increase coherence in the heart's rhythmic patterns. These include shifts in perception and the ability to reduce stress and anxiety, while improving learning and performance.

"The answers to many of our original questions now provide a scientific basis to explain how and why the heart affects mental clarity, creativity, emotional balance, learning, performance, and personal effectiveness."

"The real voyage of discovery lies not in seeking new lands, but in seeing with new eyes."

— Marcel Post

In the March-April 1999 issue of the eclectic Utne Reader, Eric Utne had this to say about the book The HeartMath Solution, authored by Doc Childre and Howard Martin:

"Researchers at the Institute of HeartMath in Boulder Creek, California, propose in The HeartMath Solution that the heart has its own brain and nervous system, and acts as a kind of internal gyroscope to help maintain balance between our brain's left and right hemispheres. Most importantly, they conclude that the heart and its electromagnetic field are sources of intuition, intimacy, and creativity. We've got a hunch that doctors, psychologists, business leaders, and others will come to see the heart as not just an eight-ounce bundle of throbbing muscle, but also a source of untapped intelligence for human development and global cooperation."

Excerpting from a revealing article What Is Heart Intelligence? by James Barrett (www.heartbeat2000.com), we read:

"New research has discovered an independent wisdom inherent to the heart that is not governed by other systems of the body. The heart has neural cells similar to those found in the brain, pointing to an innate logic to the heart. The heart is autogenic; it does not require a signal from the brain to beat. The impulse to contract originates in the heart muscle itself, in a small bit of specialized tissue called the sinoauricular node, embedded in the wall of the right auricle. This is not dependent on ANY external stimulus, and no other part of the body controls this function. You can be brain-dead and your heart can still maintain the cells. When the heart stops beating, the body begins to crumble.

"In the past it was thought that the brain was the central organizer for the body. Today, we know that the heart is the key rhythm regular. The heart receives and translates information from the other physical systems, as well as from a non-local component, and broadcasts info-energy back to every cell, including the DNA matrix. The heart's primary job is to maintain balance in the body. It does this with every beat, 60 to 100 times per minute. Within each beat is a symphony of frequencies that trigger responses from the other systems. The result is what you experience physically and emotionally.

"Heart Intelligence is at the core of many recent books by some of the most prestigious doctors and researchers in the medical community. The heart's amazing properties and influences over other bodily systems places it properly at the core of health research and makes the inevitable connection between science and spirituality. Heart Intelligence is a phrase used to describe numerous attributes of the electrical and magnetic energy waves radiating from the heart that influence functions and systems, including the brain.

"When the waves of these energy fields are 'Phi coherent' or in-phase with Phi relationships, specific beneficial results occur within the mind and body. Some of those results include:

- The reduction or neutralization of the stress chemicals adrenaline and cortisol.

- The immune system increases efficiency. The aging process slows. The reasoning mind is opened to a broader base of information. A sense of well-being occurs and the body's natural healing process is enhanced.

- When the waves of these energy fields are 'Phi coherent' they are associated with emotional states that are generally perceived as open, receptive, or loving.

"Patanjali, one of the great Hindu yogis, defined ecstasy as smriti, which means memory. At the heart of full memory lies a natural wisdom that is inherent to the heart, and is your connection to natural love, which is at the heart of your soul identity. This natural love that resides within your heart is to be nurtured and expanded until it fills your being. This is the process of full memory to unfold in your awareness. The notion of the sacred heart, one as light as a feather, remains central to the experience of union.

"Heart Intelligence from my perspective is the informational connection to 'higher-self' wisdom. It is the informational connected aspect of the self that not only remembers omnipresent intelligence awareness, but also remains connected to this state beyond the illusion of separateness. Heart wisdom is the aware watching aspect of 'self' that is non-local. This non-local aspect of self may be represented by the soul, that nature or essence that acts as a guiding force anchored in love. This energetic connection is held at the core of each cell within the DNA, and at the core of each atom or electron. For the physical body, its held within the zero-point of that energy field, which is located in the heart center.

"I believe the skill for developing a strong connection with the warmth of Heart Intelligence is developed through a truthful alignment of intention, words, and behavior with the emotional state called compassion. I define compassion as an exalted form of empathy."

Sara Paddison, in Hidden Power Of The Heart, put this powerful concept thusly:

"As you continue to send out love, the energy returns to you in a regenerating spiral. As love accumulates, it keeps your system in balance and harmony. Love is the tool, and more love is the end product."

Again, back a few months in our June 2001 front-page interview, Gregg Braden emphasized the importance of love in the following historical context: "And what the Essene texts say to us, in very, very, clear terms, is that although our souls may have come from many different places, with many different backgrounds, many different lifetimes, in a variety of histories, that we've come together on this Earth for one reason above all other reasons. And they say that we've come here to love, number one, and to find a love in this world greater than the love of all the angels of all of the Heavens."

In an article Turning Knowledge Into Wisdom Through Heart Intelligence, written by Bruce Cryer, we are given the following perspective:

"People spend years learning, gathering, and assimilating countless facts and integrating them into an internal knowledge framework. But knowledge by itself is often not enough when dealing with the complexities of modern society, especially the human issues. The information age requires a new type of intelligence to sort through, filter, and effectively process enormous amount of incoming information with minimal strain on the operator (people). Learning to develop 'heart intelligence' gives you the insight necessary to access the essential value of any piece of information from a wider perspective."

"Without heart intelligence, we operate from an overtaxed mind and are quickly overwhelmed. We respond only to the loudest and most persistent information, or in the extreme, we may defensively shut down and not really assimilate much information at all."

"An important aspect of heart intelligence is what we call intuitive intelligence, the type of intelligence that is characterized by its speed, accuracy, and simplicity. As knowledge is gained, and you achieve competence, you can use intuition to search through knowledge at lightning speed, bypassing a more linear, logical search process. Intuition allows people to leap beyond known possibilities and find unique new solutions to otherwise daunting challenges, becoming wiser in the process. This is what takes us from knowledge to wisdom."

Doc Childre and Howard Martin, in their book The HeartMath Solution, lay out the following solution to a challenge we all face every day:

"Resentment, anger, frustration, worry, disappointment—negative emotional states, justified or not, take a toll on your heart, brain, and body. Don't let justified emotions rob your health and well-being...."

"So if we can't express it or repress it, what do we do when we feel angry? The answer is to recognize the anger, but choose to respond to the situation differently. Easier said than done, right? Can we actually imagine trying to strong-arm your anger into another, more amicable feeling? It would never work."

Determination alone won't work. It takes a new intelligence to understand and manage our emotions. By getting your head and heart into coherence, and allowing the heart's intelligence to work for you, you can have a realistic chance of transforming your anger in a healthy way."

One of the powerful and useful individual tools that HeartMath has developed to assist in this type of emotion management is a unique hardware/software system known as Freeze-Framer. Here is what the HeartMath people have to say about this product:

"With every beat of the heart, intricate messages are being sent to the entire body that affect our emotions, mental and physical health. Science has discovered that we can positively influence our heart rhythms, bringing more peace and balance to the mind and body. A unique interactive hardware/software system called the Freeze-Framer, Emotional Management Enhancer, teaches you simple, fast-acting HeartMath techniques like Freeze-Frame and Heart Lock-In, to quickly minimize mental and emotional stress, fatigue, and overwhelm, and bring your heart rhythms into balance."

"Currently some of the most revolutionary research on the heart is coming out of the Institute of HeartMath (IHM) in Boulder Creek, California. In the book The HeartMath Solution, co-author and Institute of HeartMath founder, Doc Childre takes a provocative, in-depth look at the heart and it's alliance with the mind, body, and spirit. Doc and co-author Howard Martin depict fascinating facts on how every beat of our heart is packed with information that is affecting every aspect of our being."

"[From The HeartMath Solution:] 'When we consciously choose a core heart feeling over a negative feeling, we effectively intercept the physiological stress response that drains and damages our systems and allow the body's natural regenerative capacities to work for us. Instead of being taxed and depleted, our mental and emotional systems are renewed. As a consequence, they are better able to ward off future 'energy eaters' like stress, anxiety, and anger before they take hold.'"

HeartMath techniques are used by hospitals, major corporations, U.S. military, police forces, schools, sports professionals, and psychologists to help personnel increase performance and mental clarity, energy levels and alertness, and improve their physical health.

"The HeartMath Solution discusses the critical link between the heart and emotions. IHM studies explain how the heart responds to emotional and mental reactions. As we experience emotional reactions like anger, frustration, anxiety and insecurity, heart rhythms become incoherent or more jagged, which interfere with the communication between the heart and brain. These emotions create a chain reaction in the body—blood vessels constrict, blood pressure rises, and the immune system is weakened. This kind of a consistent imbalance can put a strain on the heart and other organs, and eventually lead to serious health problems."

"When we experience heart-felt emotions like love, care, appreciation, and compassion, the heart produces coherent or smooth rhythms that enhance communication between the heart and brain. Positive heart qualities produce harmonious rhythms that are considered to be indicators of cardiovascular efficiency and nervous system balance. They've also been shown to produce beneficial effects that include enhanced immunity and hormonal balance."

"The Freeze-Framer Emotional Management Enhancer is a computer program designed to help individuals learn how to consciously shift into an ideal balance where body, mind, and emotions are synchronized, or entrained, for maximum performance. A state-of-the-art finger pulse sensor feeds your heart rhythms into your PC, where you watch your health and inner balance improve. Three fun, interactive games, plus sophisticated and accurate graphs, motivate you to improve emotional management skills."

"The Freeze-Framer is easy to install and use, both at home and in the work environment. The data recorded in each session can be saved for later review. Applied daily, the Freeze-Framer reinforces your inner poise and balance, and helps you stay in control of your health. For more information on The Freeze-Framer, go to www.freezeframer.com or call 800-372-3100."

“The heart of a fool is in his mouth, but the mouth of the wise man is in his heart.”

— Benjamin Franklin

Taking a much more detailed look at this compelling subject of heart communication and heart intelligence, let's turn now to an interview with Joseph Chilton Pearce, brilliant author of such famous books as The Crack In The Cosmic Egg, Evolution's End, and many others. This interview appeared in the 1999 (Vol. 5 #1) edition of Journal Of Family Life, and was recently sent to me by email. Here is a portion of what he had to say about the subject of recent awesome discoveries concerning the human heart:

“The idea that we can think with our hearts is no longer just a metaphor, but is, in fact, a very real phenomenon. We now know this because the combined research of two or three fields is proving that the heart is the major center of intelligence in human beings.

“Molecular biologists have discovered that the heart is the body's most important endocrine gland. In response to our experience of the world, it produces and releases a major hormone, ANF—which stands for Atrial Natriotic Factor—that profoundly affects every operation in the limbic structure, or what we refer to as the “emotional brain”. This includes the hippocampal area where memory and learning take place, and also the control centers for the entire hormonal system.

“And neurocardiologists have found that 60-65% of the cells of the heart are actually neural cells, not muscle cells as was previously believed. They are identical to the neural cells in the brain, operating through the same connecting links called ganglia, with the same axonal and dendritic connections that take place in the brain, as well as through the very same kinds of neurotransmitters found in the brain.

“Quite literally, in other words, there is a ‘brain’ in the heart, whose ganglia are linked to every major organ in the body, to the entire muscle spindle system that uniquely enables humans to express their emotions. About half of the heart's neural cells are involved in translating information sent to it from all over the body so that it can keep the body working as one harmonious whole. And the other half make up a very large, unmediated neural connection with the emotional brain in our head, and carry on a twenty-four-hour-a-day dialogue between the heart and the brain that we are not even aware of.

“The heart responds to messages sent to it from the emotional brain, which has been busy monitoring the interior environment of dynamic states such as the emotions and the auto-immune system, guiding behavior, and contributing to our sense of personal identity. The emotional brain makes a qualitative evaluation of our experience of this world and sends that information instant-by-instant down to the heart. In return, the heart exhorts the brain to make the appropriate response. Of course all of this is on a non-verbal level.

“In other words, the responses that the heart makes affect the entire human system. Meanwhile, biophysicists have discovered that the heart is also a very powerful electromagnetic generator. It creates an electromagnetic field that encompasses the body and extends out anywhere from eight to twelve feet away from it. It is so powerful that you can take an electrocardiogram reading from as far as three feet away from the body. The field the heart produces is holographic, meaning that you can read it from any point on the body and from any point within the field. No matter how microscopic the sample is, you can receive the information of the entire field.

“The intriguing thing is how profoundly this electromagnetic field affects the brain. All indications are that it furnishes the whole radio-wave spectrum from which the brain draws its material to create our internal experience of the world.

“Perhaps most importantly, we now know that the radio spectrum of the heart is profoundly affected by our emotional response to our world. Our emotional response changes the heart's electromagnetic spectrum, which is what the brain feeds on. Ultimately, everything in our lives hinges on our emotional response to specific events.”

“Heart transplantation is not simply a question of replacing an organ that no longer functions. The heart is often seen as a source of love, emotions, and focus of personality traits.”

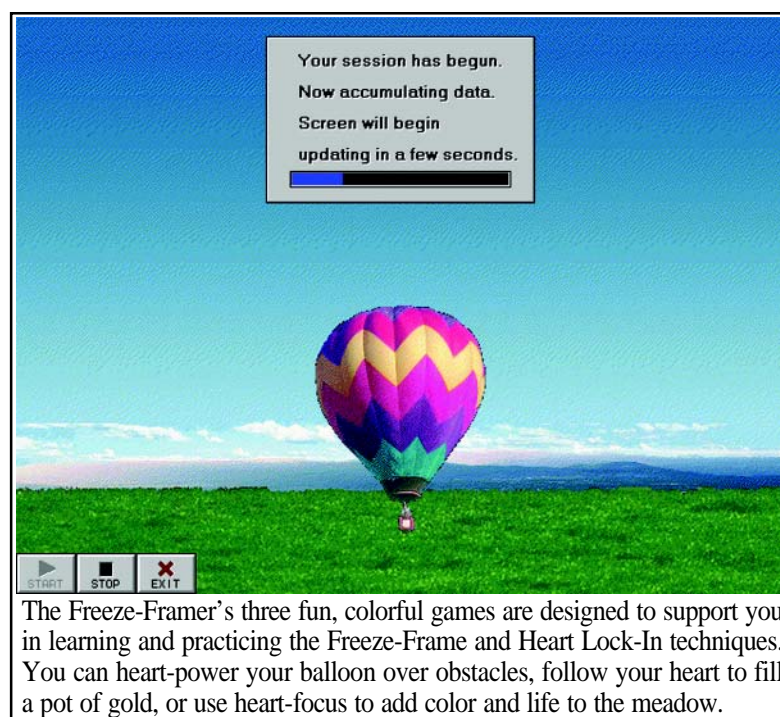

—Dr. Benjamin Bunzel,
Department of Surgery, Union Hospital, Vienna.

The heart has been a subject which has been on the minds of every great writer throughout history. Looking up several seemingly unrelated historical references from the Dictionary Of Symbols, by Jean Chevalier and Alain Gheerbrant, we get a sense of the range of perspectives on this complex subject. Here are some of intriguing citations:

- The Ni-Ching states that the heart is king and this is corroborated by the Ismaili dictum that “the task of the heart is to rule”.

- Lu-tzu taught that the heart was the lord of the breath, and this may be explained simply by the similarity between the rhythm of the cardiac and respiratory cycles.

- The Su-wen comments that the heart “lifts itself up to the principle of light”. The light of the spirit, the light of intellectual intuition, enlightenment, shines forth in “the cavern of the heart”. The Sufis call the organ of these perceptions the “Eye of the Heart”.

- Every individual's most ardent desire is that expressed by the blessing of Paheri of El-Kab: “May you pass through eternity in peace of heart, and in the grace of the God that is within you.” Thus the heart within us is the symbol of the presence of the Godhead and of our awareness of that presence.

- Although in the West we have made the heart the seat of the feelings, all traditional civilizations, in contrast, place within it intellect and intuition.

Surely there is much food for thought in the above excerpts. And then we have the following intriguing quotes attributed to Pascal in 1670: “The heart has its reasons which reason does not know.” And: “Great thoughts come from the heart.”

Furthermore, see if any of these expressions sound familiar to you:

He has a heart of stone.

He is wise in heart.

Her heart's at play.

Be still my heart.

My heart awakens.

To love with one's whole heart.

Speak from your heart.

That person has a loving heart.

The heart knows.

The heart does not deny what it has seen.

Oh, my aching heart.

He has a broken heart.

The words pierced his heart.

His heart has a conscience.

He has an idle heart.

There's a sadness in his heart.

She must be heart sick.

A woman stole his heart.

He wears his heart on his sleeve.

The heart rejoices.

Isn't it fascinating how the heart is always at the CENTER of these key expressions, which are so common in our day-to-day speech?

There are so many experiences which simply may not be explained by traditional modes of Western thinking. The area of heart transplantation is one such subject.

Let me relate a few experiences which might normally fall in the range of the “paranormal” but which have been well-documented over the years since heart transplant operations began: (The following stories may be found at the <http://www.geocities.com/heartland/park/5847/heartcode/patients.htm> website.)

[Quoting:]

A psychiatrist told this story while in Houston, Texas in front of an international groups of psychologists, psychiatrists, and social workers:

An 8-year-old girl received a heart from a 10-year-old murder victim. The 8-year-old had horrible dreams of a man who had murdered her donor. The police were called. She gave descriptions of the time, weapon, place, clothes, and what the little girl he killed had said to him. Everything she said was true. The police, from a physical description, found the murderer and confirmed all that the little girl had stated.

* * *

A forty-one-year-old male received a heart of a nineteen-year-old girl who was killed when a car was struck by a train. He feels a new raw energy, surging with power. He has dreams of a huge truck and/or driving a steam engine. His wife comments that he is like a 19-year-old kid again. He is sure that his donor was driving a big truck that hit a bigger truck.

* * *

A thirty-six-year-old female heart-lung recipient received heart and lung from a twenty-year-old girl who was killed while running across the street to show her fiance a picture of her new wedding dress. She dreams of the girl who was killed. She was young, pretty, and very happy. She has a new happiness and a strange kind of excitement and joy that cannot be fully explained. Her sister remarks: “She is so much happier now. She smiles and laughs more; she’s always been a downer. She is lucky to have gotten a warm heart.”

* * *

A fifty-two-year-old male heart recipient got the heart from a seventeen-year-old boy killed by a hit-and-run driver. He loved quiet, classical music prior to the transplantation. Now he loves to put on earphones and play loud rock n’ roll music. “I love my wife, but I keep fantasizing about teenage girls” he says. He continues that his daughter says he seems like he’s sixteen again. The daughter says: “He is a little embarrassing because of the music. Mom says that he is going through his second childhood.”

[End quoting]

I’ve taken the time to share these few stories because there is mention of this phenomenon later on in my interview. Perhaps these stories will help to shed some light on the subject, or at least give you some real examples to think about.

With all of the above as background, let’s now turn our attention to the present day. On June 22, 2001, I had the great pleasure of speaking with Howard Martin of the Institute of HeartMath. The range of issues we discussed went far beyond what I had ever hoped to cover for this feature story. Let’s move directly into the discussion about this fascinating subject.

Rick: I’d like to just jump right into the heart of the matter, because I will precede this interview with a foundation on this subject so that people will understand what we’re talking about. I want to use our time wisely here. Obviously you know more about this subject than I do, so if, in my questioning, you feel we need to cover a certain aspect of it that I’m unaware of, please just let me know and we’ll proceed.

Let’s start with The HeartMath Solution and the concept of entering “the zone”, with something called Freeze-Frame. What, exactly, is Freeze-Frame?

Howard Martin: Freeze-Frame is a technique. It’s basically a one-minute technique that brings about alignment between the heart and the head, the heart and the brain. That synchronization takes place through the nervous system, and as that happens we enter a very high-performance state where the nervous system is working at a highly entrained and synchronized level—information coming from brain down to heart, information going from heart back to brain, all of that, communication pathways working at a high level of efficiency.

And, as a result of that, things like hormonal balance, immune system response, come into alignment with that. And the ultimate benefit is that we think more clearly. We have greater ability to manage our emotions, and we actually feel better, physically. And the technique is something that’s easy to learn, easy to do, and once people master that technique, they’re quite capable of shifting into that state in the moment, in the midst of daily activity—on demand, so to speak.

Rick: You’ve been with HeartMath for a long time, 30 years, something like that. Is that right?

Howard Martin: That’s right.

Rick: And you’re a co-founder of HeartMath?

Howard Martin: Actually, no. Doc Childre is the founder. There were other people working with Doc along the way.

Rick: How did you get connected with him?

Howard Martin: I met him through friends, a long time ago, back in North Carolina, where we came from. Then we became friends, and during the years stayed that way. And over a 30-year period, Doc was developing a system that people could use to manage stress, to reach another state of high-performance, and ultimately achieve greater levels of fulfillment.

He started that work many, many years ago. I just remained friends with him all those years, and then, in 1991, when he officially founded his non-profit called The Institute of HeartMath, I was offered a job at that time to formalize his work and put it into a system that could be shared with others, all around the world.

Rick: Apparently this is really taking off. It seems to be everywhere. I keep coming across it in my work as a journalist.

Howard Martin: We’ve been out-there for 10 years now, so the accumulative effect of that is working in our favor. It takes a while to reach that critical mass to where a lot of people hear about it. And, as you know, being a journalist, people usually have to hear things several times before it makes an impression.

We’ve been in the media an awful lot over these last 10 years; lots of different articles and things, in major national television shows and all of that. In some ways I would have expected HeartMath to be more well known than it is, but then acknowledging and recognizing the amount of information people are exposed to today, and how little of it I probably retain as well [laughter], I have to accept the fact that it just takes a long time for it to get to the point where people can remember something that they’ve read, heard on television, or whatever. And I think that’s where we are today. It’s just been a good 10-year run, with a lot of positive press, and now it’s starting to pay off.

Rick: Let’s talk about going from Freeze-Frame—I have four things here: Freeze-Frame, The Zone, Heart Lock-In, and Cut-Through.

Howard Martin: They’re all techniques. The way you need to look at it is, the HeartMath system that Doc created, really, is made up of three different types of information or kinds of information. You have conceptual information, some very interesting, forward-thinking, advanced concepts.

Then you have the practical tools and techniques, which are your “how-to” methods. I mean, the concepts are great, but we've always been really focused on applications and benefits, so the techniques allow for the translation of the concepts into something that people can apply in their daily lives.

And then, lastly, the whole thing is underpinned with scientific research, both biomedical and social science research.

That's the three types of information that make it up. So the four things that you brought up as subject matters are all, basically, just techniques, part of the "how-to" that we offer.

Rick: Which, for our readers, would probably be the aspect that they would be most interested in? Say they find themselves caught in a traffic jam in downtown Los Angeles, how to enter "the zone", with the Freeze-Frame technique would be very useful if you're starting to lose it in traffic. [Laughter] Or in a high pressure business situation, or in court; I can imagine just about any high-stress situation, this would be extremely useful.

HOWARD MARTIN

Howard Martin: That's true. Well, one of the things that's different about what we do, to a certain degree, I think, is that there are a lot of relaxation techniques out there, all kinds of stuff—all kinds of breathing techniques, and positive and mental affirmation techniques, and all those different things, and they're all good and they're all effective. But what we've found is that the most important aspect of making that shift from stress and distortion and chaos, to a place where you have that mental clarity and poise, is really in the emotions.

Unless there is an emotional shift, nothing really happens. Emotions have to shift before you reach completion.

You can think that you don't feel stress until your emotions actually give you permission to believe it, then you don't really feel that way. And so we emphasize, really, the power of positive emotion—as much, or more so, than relaxation.

Relaxing is good, and we all need to do more of it, but if you relax and you don't make an emotional shift, you can still be in a negative emotional state, and just be more relaxed about it. So the emotions go from, let's say, anger and frustration, down to resignation and boredom or withdrawal. In other words, there's less emotional amplitude there, but what's really taking place is that you're just transferring it from a more volatile emotion to one that's still draining people; it just drains at a more subtle level.

So what we teach people how to do is to really use the power of their own physiology to help shift the emotional state, to shift from these negative, draining emotional states to ones that are regenerative—regenerative emotional states. To me, that's the key. The feeling has to shift before we make the big change.

Rick: Well, that's the $10,000 situation that you just mentioned, shifting that emotion up. I realize there are a series of techniques here. Do you have any suggestions for our readers as to how to bring about an emotional shift in a crisis?

Howard Martin: Why don't we talk about it in a broad-brush stroke, for a minute. It's interesting, an unexpected ally emerges in developing a greater ability to shift emotion, and that's the power of the heart.

And for a long time we've thought of the heart, from a scientific perspective, as being simply a cardiovascular organ that only receives information from the brain, and then pumps blood.

And yet, if we look back in history, we find that the heart has been talked about a different way for a long time. And it's been revered through all of recorded history as a part of our overall intelligence, in a certain way; a part of human-kind that has governance over the mind and emotions, and in some cases, even things like morality.

And when we started getting involved in modern, 21st Century research here, we found that, not only in our work, but others as well, the heart is a lot more than a blood pump, and that it does send information to the brain; that it influences how the brain functions. And, in fact, the brain function is critically dependent upon signals it receives from the heart. And it sends these signals back through the nervous system, through a neurological communication.

The heart actually has its own nervous system that lives within the heart itself. It's studied through a field called neurocardiology. And that nervous system is complex enough that they, actually, generically refer to it as "the brain in the heart". And that nervous system sends a lot of information from the heart back to the brain.

The heart sends information to the brain through the blood-pressure wave, which is generated when the heart beats. Electrical activity in the brain and the cells are synchronized with that changing heart rhythm. And the heart produces hormones. It produces a hormone that actually reduces the release of stress hormones.

And lastly, it produces a very powerful electromagnetic field that permeates every single cell in our bodies, and is strong enough, in fact, that it goes beyond the skin and can be measured up to 8 to 10 feet outside of the body. We're not talking about an aura, or a subtle energy or anything like that; we're talking about a very measurable, electromagnetic energy.

Rick: I'm seeing something here from Gary Swartz, Ph.D. [Co-director of the University of Arizona's Human Energy Systems Laboratory in Tucson, and pioneer in a new field called energy cardiology.] The quote that I have here is: "The heart's magnetic field is 5,000 times greater than that of the brain."

Howard Martin: That's correct.

Rick: That's an amazing statistic.

Howard Martin: It is. This is, by far, as you can see, the strongest source of bio-electricity in the body. The brain is actually the second strongest source.

So you have the heart producing this amazing amount of electromagnetic energy, and what's interesting, when you analyze the content of that electrical energy, the frequencies that make it up, that content or those frequencies change relative to how we are perceiving.

If we're perceiving strong negative emotions, like frustration or anger, it produces what's called an incoherent spectrum. If we're experiencing perceptions that are producing thoughts and feelings that are associated with things like care, love, appreciation, compassion, all of those things, it produces a very different signature; it produces what researchers actually call a coherent spectrum.

So, this output coming from the heart is actually shifting and changing, relative to our mental and emotional state. And we're broadcasting it, from the heart, much like radio waves, out into space, 24-hours a day.

Rick: I noticed in the book the chart for frustration. The incoherent pattern is so jagged, almost like broken glass, whereas the smooth flowing chart of compassion and love is just very balanced, and very relaxed. [See chart next page.]

Howard Martin: That's right. And that's looking at the subtle beat-to-beat changes in heart rhythm, which is a scientific discipline called heart-rate variability analysis. And those rhythms are actually like a pulsating Morse code that goes down the entire body. And the jagged ones that you see in the frustration graph actually cascade all the way up into the brain and produce a condition in the brain called cortical inhibition, which means the higher perceptual centers in the brain become less active.

Conversely, the one you see which is smooth and ordered and a balanced looking pattern produces the opposite effect, it produces what's called cortical facilitation, which means the higher perceptual centers in the brain become more active and alive. So we can see the bigger picture when we're producing that kind of heart rhythm.

What our techniques do, to go back to the original question—I'm not trying to divert too much; we've been around the block here since you asked me that question [laughter]—is that learning how to manage the heart rhythms, learning how to shift that nervous system communication and energetic communication that the heart produces, has an influence on the brain and, in turn, on how we experience emotion.

Changing Heart Rhythms

So the interesting ally in managing emotion is the heart. Managing emotion with just the mind alone is a difficult process. When you engage the power of the heart, and use it to influence how the brain functions, then what happens is we have a greater ability to generate positive emotion, on demand. And that's the key—being able to generate it yourself, on demand, when you're right in the middle of a frustrating situation and you find a way to calm yourself; you know that you want to shift, but you don't know how.

You focus on the heart. You practice a technique like Cut-Thru or Freeze-Frame, or if you have time, you do a longer process, which is the Heart Lock-In technique. And the result of that is, you will find that you shift emotion, you begin to feel different about that situation. And when you do, that's when the mental and emotional, and especially physiological benefits start to emerge. Big changes happen when you shift emotion.

Rick: Unless they're extremely aware of their heart through yoga or other techniques, many people just wait until they have a heart attack, and THEN they get in touch with this and they realize how on-track you guys are, and seek development techniques for preventing a second heart attack. But, I would imagine, this field would be very big with people who have had strokes and that kind of thing, who have been out of touch with the language of their heart.

Howard Martin: That's true. Sometimes it does take a crisis before people begin to look at things differently.

Of course, as you know, there are millions of people who are more proactive than that, who are involved in all kinds of self-improvement processes—preventatives, in a way, to the physical consequences they may face later. But sometimes it takes a wake-up call, where there's a that begins to bring about balance in the system and, ultimately, begins to come up with creative solutions to the problem.

But until people dig a little deeper, they stay in the "mind loop"—you know: chaos, confusion, anxiety, fear, all that stuff, and often the problem just gets worse, until they finally slow it all down and they say: "Wait a minute. I've got to dig deeper within myself to figure this thing out." And when they do, I think that's when the heart and the brain begin to synchronize; then creative solutions begin to emerge.

Rick: How are your techniques being used within the corporate world?

Howard Martin: They're used in a variety of ways. I just got back yesterday. I was in Canada working for a big, billion-dollar company up there. And we're seeing, first of all, that one of the basic ways that they are used is in stress management. Stress management is not necessarily a high priority in corporate training, but what a lot of companies come to realize is that until we do something about the stress level, we can't really move forward. And so it goes, just like you said, they reach a crisis point and then they want it. And so, stress management is one way that we apply it.

The overall way in which we really apply it is performance enhancement. We make smarter people. We do that in companies. We engineer smarter employees. And those applications can range from anything from leadership skills, to customer service reps, to creativity and innovation in, say, engineering groups or product development groups. We see big changes in how employees feel about their jobs, and the level of stress that they're experiencing, the physical side-effects of all that stress. We see improvements in all those areas.

And then, from a business perspective, down to the bottom line, we see things like lowering turnover rates. The turnover rates drop often rather dramatically, once we've been in there and have had a chance to do some interventions, heart attack, or maybe it's a relationship crisis, or losing a job, those kinds of things.

And then, when the stress level reaches a certain point, the mind can't figure it out; it begins to understand that it has to go deeper, it has to go someplace else to reach a solution. Most of the times people will take that walk in the woods, that drive off into the night in the car, and they begin to experience an aspect of what I call "heart intelligence"—an intuitive, high-speed source of wisdom and understanding and some training in the companies.

All that finally translates into dollars, into savings—health savings and productivity increases, savings on not having to replace employees, and all that; and that's how the translation really makes it into the corporate world. They see that a very cost-effective way to generate more profit is to use HeartMath training.

Rick: Are there any major "think-tanks" in this country that have used the HeartMath techniques to improve brain-storming?

Howard Martin: I don't know of any think-tanks, so to speak. We haven't done any specific work there in the think-tank area.

Rick: If you're talking about improving performance in the corporate world, I would imagine the same thing would apply in a highly mental environment outside the corporate world.

Howard Martin: What I've found in the corporations is that the creativity, innovation piece of what they do is becoming more and more talked about. Companies now make statements about it being the essential thing that they have to have for continued growth, to meet the demands of competition and the new economy and all of that, and yet specific training on a large-scale basis seems to be moving slowly, in that area. So you might get brought into a small team.

I recently did a creativity and innovation training program for Sony, with a group of people down there. But what we look for, just from a business perspective, in terms of our accounts, we look for "scalable roll-outs", which means we can come in, run a pilot, produce the data. If the data is positive, it puts us in a position to where the company then wants to train not dozens of employees, but hundreds, and sometimes thousands of employees.

Rick: How do you go about measuring?

Howard Martin: We use a psychometric measuring tool, which means it's a self-survey, looking at a variety of parameters.

They take this test before we ever talk, before we ever train them in anything, and it asks them questions about how they've been feeling over the last 30 days, in relationship to how calm they've been, and energetic they've been, how angry they've been, how unhappy they've been—all those kinds of things; their body aches, their exhaustion levels, their relaxation levels, all that stuff.

And then we ask them questions, as well, about whether they feel appreciated or not; whether they feel forgiving of others; whether they worry about other people's problems; whether they're logical in their decisions; whether they're listening carefully; whether they like their job; all these things are questions on the 80-question survey.

They answer the survey; then we do the training probe. And then we come back 6 weeks later—not necessarily physically—but we send information back 6 weeks later, the same survey, and they take it again. And then we analyze the data and compare it.

That's how we come up with the end result of understanding what kinds of shifts there were, or weren't, in that particular group of people that we trained.

Sometimes, we test for physical things. It depends on what the client wants, and all of that. The other testing that we do is in the area of blood pressure, very often, and looking at blood pressure with employees. We just got back some blood pressure study information from a company that we worked with, a high-tech company—I can't mention their name—and they had major shifts in blood pressure that would be equivalent to those people losing 30 pounds of weight.

Rick: That's incredible.

Howard Martin: Incredible data. And it's coming from behavioral change; we're teaching how to change behavior, how to manage the stress, how to operate from a new position of mental clarity; and most importantly, how to make a shift in the emotional state.

When they do that with a little bit of consistency, then it translates down and we can actually see it in the biology. When a company looks at that kind of data, they say: "Look at this. We've got 25% of our people, or whatever it is, who have high blood pressure, who are at risk of heart attack, who are going to cost us a lot of money in terms of health-care benefits, yet this training program is going to knock that down significantly." And so, they can translate that right into dollars.

I'm looking at a document now; I received some other interesting data when I got back yesterday. This is from a large hospital we're working with in Chicago. And, basically, what they're saying is, after our training program, the turnover rate went from 28% to 19.5%, which is an $800,000 annual savings. Of the 4% who received HeartMath tools and training, the turnover rate in that group is now 4%.

Another interesting statistic in here is that improvements in customer satisfaction went from 73% to 94% in that hospital. And they're ranked number one in employee satisfaction, based on something called the Spurdudo & Associates national database of over 300 healthcare organizations, and they're ranked now number one. And they're attributing some of this to the work that we did.

Certainly there are other interventions and things as well, but they're giving us a lot of credit for this. A quote from their Chief Operating Officer says: "HeartMath has given us the tools to make the difference between required courtesy and genuine care."

This is serious data, because what this gives us now—in the business world this is called "level-4" data, which means you're now able to track and attach something to an actual cost savings, or an actual measurable number that can be tracked in terms of financial change in an organization. And that's very powerful in terms of presenting it to other companies.

Rick: I have a simple sentence from your book, which is a loaded sentence, and we've already talked about it a bit, but maybe we can talk about this further: "The heart's beat literally delivers messages to the entire body."

Now, you talked about the brain and the heart, and such things as "I know in my heart it's true" and "the heart has the capacity to think for itself". There was something else I noticed in your book, and that was that Dr. Benjamin Bunzel at the Vienna University Hospital, in 1992 conducted a study linking heart transplants to actual personality changes? This is cutting edge.

Howard Martin: There are a lot of documented studies and incidents of people who have received heart transplants who then go through a personality change to where they, temporarily, take on the personality characteristics of the donor. It doesn't happen in a high percentage of cases, but it does happen with regularity.

What's interesting about this is, we know when someone has a heart transplant that the nerves that run from the brain down to the heart cannot be surgically reconnected. It's

New discoveries about the heart are changing the traditional scientific views that it is just a pump—indeed it is much more!

- Patterns of neurological information transmitted from the heart to the brain profoundly influence higher brain processes that affect our perceptions, emotions, behavior, and performance.
- The heart starts to beat in the fetus before the brain has developed.
- The source of the heartbeat is within the heart itself. It can beat on its own without any connection to the brain.
- The heart has its own intrinsic nervous system with over 40,000 neurons, referred to by neuroscientists as "the brain in the heart".
- The heart generates 40-60 times more electrical amplitude than the brain.
- The heart's electromagnetic field can be measured as far as 8 feet from the body and the signal generated by the heart can be detected in the brainwaves of another person when they are touching or near each other.
- The heart works without interruption for often 70 to 90+ years, without care or cleaning, without repair or replacement.
- The heart beats 100,000 times a day, approximately 40 million times a year.
- During an average lifetime, the human heart will beat more than 2.5 billion times.
- The heart pumps approximately 2 gallons of blood per minute, 100 gallons per hour, 2,400 gallons per day.
- Your body has about 5.6 liters (6 quarts) of blood. This 5.6 liters of blood circulates through the body three times every minute. In one day, the blood travels a total of 19,000 km (12,000 miles)—that's four times the distance across the U.S. from coast to coast.
- The heart's vascular system is about 60,000 miles in length, over 2 times the circumference of the Earth.
- The heart secretes hormones that affect the adrenal glands, kidneys, circulatory system, and the brain. One of these is Oxytocin, the bonding hormone.
- Hold out your hand and make a fist. If you're a kid, your heart is about the same size as your fist, and if you're an adult, it's about the same size as two fists.
- Give a tennis ball a good, hard squeeze. You're using about the same amount of force your heart uses to pump blood out to the body. Even at rest, the muscles of the heart work hard—twice as hard as the leg muscles of a person sprinting.
- Feel your pulse by placing two fingers at pulse points on your neck or wrists. The pulse you feel is blood stopping and starting as it moves through your arteries. As a kid, your resting pulse might range from 90 to 120 beats per minute. As an adult, your pulse rate slows to an average of 72 beats per minute.
- The aorta, the largest artery in the body, is almost the diameter of a garden hose. Capillaries, on the other hand, are so small that it takes ten of them to equal the thickness of a human hair.
- The heart pumps about 1 million barrels of blood during an average lifetime—that's enough to fill more than 3 supertankers.

too sensitive an operation; they can't do it. So there is no nervous system input going from heart back to brain. And yet something is taking place. We don't know, for sure, what, but we think that the communication coming from heart back to brain is taking place either through, or a combination of, the hormonal input the heart has, and from that electromagnetic field.

Rick: Have you done any studies with inherent DNA intelligence within the heart itself?

Howard Martin: We haven't, yet. That's a very interesting area to explore. What we've found is that the heart does have the ability to learn, and to remember, and some of the neurons that are found in the heart are actually the same kind that are located in the brain, that are responsible for memory; they're called "local circuit neurons". And so, the heart seems to be imprinting memory from our life experience; somehow that memory is being transferred to recipients of heart transplants—but again, not in all cases.

What's interesting is that the personality characteristics, generally, do not last for a long time, which would indicate, logically, that the heart is now relearning, is taking on the personality characteristics of the recipient, based upon the recipient's life experiences.

Rick: Very interesting!

Howard Martin: So that's kind-of "Star Trek" stuff there. The bottom-line is that when we get heart and head working together, we're going to have the ability to perform at higher levels; we're going to think more clearly, and again, we're going to have a greater ability to manifest and actualize positive emotions. It just requires heart/brain synchronization for that to happen; without that, it's just more difficult—it's not impossible, it's just more difficult.

Rick: Does your organization focus at this point, this far downstream, more on the business community aspect, application aspect, or are you still focused in the area of pure scientific research?

Howard Martin: No, we're very much involved in application. We've been doing seminars and training programs for years, just about since we started. We do face-to-face presentations, now, through our training programs and keynote speeches to about 20,000-25,000 people a year, on three different continents. So we're very much about presenting it and getting it out there.

The science plays an important role because it gives it sort-of an underpinning and a foundation. It gives it an empirical nature, which is partly why the name of our organization is HeartMath. You can have a lot of philosophical understanding about the heart, but then you finally get empirical with it; in our Western society and in our modern world, it takes on new understanding and new meaning.

So we utilize science as a way to verify and provide the empirical understanding that's necessary to believe in new things. And then we take it beyond the science, into experience, and that's where it really comes alive.

Rick: Have you found that there are any other cultures, other than the United States, that happen to be more open to what you do and what you are about?

Howard Martin: Some of the Eastern cultures seem to be a bit more open. We found that some of the Asian cultures have a more natural receptivity to an understanding of the heart as more than a blood pump; but they still have their stress, and they still have their issues.

What it all comes down to is, it's still people reaching that understanding. Every culture has it's own challenges with whatever new information comes in.

One of the main ways we're bridging it, everywhere we go, is really through the Freeze-Framer technology, the hardware/software system, that allows an individual, on their own personal computer, to track changes in their heart rhythms. And it shows those changes in real time. It then analyses those heart rhythms and tells the user how synchronized, or how coherent, they are. And there's games you can play, and all kinds of things, with a screen response to changes in the heart rhythm.

Power Up From The Heart Tips from HeartMath LLC

Below are suggestions from HeartMath for connecting with the power of the heart. Following these suggestions with sincerity will help you to recognize the difference between head perspectives and the heart's perspectives on challenging issues. For more detailed information on HeartMath's scientifically proven techniques, refer to The HeartMath Solution by Doc Childre and Howard Martin (HarperSanFrancisco, 1999). The techniques are quick and easy to learn and apply.

- Take the significance out: When emotions are engaged in a problem, it can add too much emphasis to the problem, triggering feelings of confusion. Learning to take the significance out can help you get the objectivity you need to get a clear perspective on the problem. One way to do this is to imagine, for a moment, it is someone else's problem. Step back, look at it objectively; what advice would you give to them? Then apply it to yourself.
- If you're starting to fume with frustration or anger, shift your attention to the feeling of appreciation. Appreciate someone or something in your life that means a lot to you. Taking a moment to engage the heart and focus on something you appreciate helps you to realign with a more coherent heart state. From here you are much more inclined to see things clearer and make better choices on how to handle a situation.
- Remember what is important to you. Focus on your heart and ponder or reflect on what your deeper core values are. What is your aim? Each of us can find qualities in ourselves, in lives, or in others that we admire. Focus on these qualities—follow your heart and stay on track with the things that generate good feelings about ourselves and our choices.

These suggestions are for building heart power and awareness. They're derived from the research and practices of the HeartMath® system.

Fallen Angels

And The Origins Of Evil

Did rebel angels take on human bodies to fulfill their lust for the "daughters of men"?

Did these fallen angels teach men to build weapons of war?

That is the premise of the Book of Enoch, a text cherished by the Essenes, early Jews, and Christians, but later condemned by both rabbis and Church fathers. The book was denounced, banned, and "lost" for over a thousand years—until in 1773 a Scottish explorer discovered three copies in Ethiopia.

Elizabeth Clare Prophet examines the controversy surrounding this book and sheds new light on Enoch's forbidden mysteries. She demonstrates that Jesus and the apostles studied the Book of Enoch, and tells why Church fathers suppressed its teaching that angels could incarnate in human bodies.

Contains Richard Laurence's translation of the Book of Enoch, all the other Enoch texts (including the Book of the Secrets of Enoch), and biblical parallels.

And what this does, it allows us, now, to just demonstrate, very easily, in real time, all these changes. When I do my public presentations, I bring someone up from the audience and have them sit down. I have all the computer stuff running through a projector, so it's on a big screen in front of the whole audience.

I sit them down in a chair, have them put their finger in the sensor, and I show them how these are a person's heart rhythms in a normal mode. Then I start messing around with them a little. I'll say things like: "I'd like to have a little entertainment today; would you mind singing the National Anthem?" or something like that, and then immediately—

Rick: Stress. [Laughter]

Howard Martin: —we get jagged and irregular heart rhythms. If that doesn't work, I get them to do something like count backwards from 200, in increments of 13. You know, something that pushes up your stress level.

Rick: [Laughter]

Howard Martin: Then I'll say: "Stop! Now, what I want you to do is to focus right in the area of the heart. I want you to breathe there, hold your attention there for 10 seconds. And now I want you to make an effort to remember or recall something that really makes you feel good inside, that makes your heart come alive. It can be a person; it can be a place; it can be a time; it can be something that you achieved or accomplished that made you feel good; any of those things. Activate that feeling. Don't just visualize it, feel it."

And they start to do that, and immediately the pattern shifts to that smooth and ordered pattern, like you saw in the graph.

And so, what's happening then is that you SEE how quickly our physiology responds to any thought and feeling we have. I'm demonstrating it, not just from static graphs, but in real time from the stage.

And this is a consumer item. People can buy these things. We've been selling thousands of these software/hardware systems. Individuals are using it to monitor their own personal growth processes, whether it's HeartMath or something else. A lot of mental health professionals are using it with patients. Doctors are now using it—not necessarily the totally traditional doctors—but alternative health physicians of all kinds are using it.

Now we're seeing it translate over into sports, where sports professionals—two major sports teams, now, purchased the Freeze-Framers, an NFL team and a major-league baseball team. And now, celebrities and the Hollywood crowd are into it now.

Rick: That follows.

The Biggest Secret

by David Icke

The blockbuster of all blockbusters! With stunning information never before released on the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales.

David Icke's most powerful and explosive book to date includes the astonishing background to the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales. Every man, woman, and child on the planet is affected by the stunning information that Icke exposes. He reveals in documented detail how the same interconnecting bloodlines have controlled the planet for thousands of years. How they created all the major religions and suppressed the spiritual and esoteric knowledge that will set humanity free from its mental and emotional prisons. It includes a devastating exposé of the true origins of Christianity and the other major religions, and documents suppressed science, which explains why the world is facing a time of incredible change and transformation. The Biggest Secret also exposes the true and astonishing background to the British Royal Family and, through enormous research and unique contacts, Icke reveals how and why Diana, Princess of Wales, was murdered in Paris in 1997. This includes information from a close confidant of Diana for nine years, which has never before been made public.

The Biggest Secret is a unique book and is quite rightly dubbed: "The book that will change the world." No one who reads it will ever be the same again.

The Indigo Children

The New Kids Have Arrived

by Lee Carroll & Jan Tober

(Featured interview in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

The "Indigo Child" is a boy or girl who displays a new and unusual set of psychological attributes, revealing a pattern of behavior generally undocumented before. This pattern has singularly unique factors that call for parents and teachers to change their treatment and upbringing of these kids to assist them in achieving balance and harmony in their lives, and to help them avoid frustration.

In this groundbreaking book, international authors and lecturers Lee Carroll and Jan Tober answer many of the often-puzzling questions surrounding Indigo Children, such as:

- Can we really be seeing human evolution in kids today?
- Are these kids smarter than we were at their age?
- How come a lot of our children today seem to be "system busters"?
- Why are so many of our brightest kids being diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)?
- Are there proven, working alternatives to Ritalin?

Throughout this work, Carroll and Tober bring together some very fine minds (doctors, educators, psychologists, and more) who shed light on the Indigo Child phenomenon. These children are truly special, representing a great percentage of all the kids being born today on a worldwide basis. They come in "knowing" who they are—so they must be recognized, appreciated for their exceptional qualities, and guided with love and care.

This book is a must for the parents of unusually bright and active children!

Howard Martin: Because they're looking for ways to balance themselves emotionally, so they can maintain that personal magnetism.

When we live in emotional turmoil, we absorb a lot of that. That emotional drain is what finally ages us. So now what's happening with our corporate clients is, we're working with them to build this into every program we do, and it's part of the materials that we give to the employee.

So, now we're involved with negotiations with major oil companies around the world to put thousands and thousands of Freeze-Framers in the company. The product is called the Freeze-Framer. So thousands and thousands of these Freeze-Framers are getting ready to go into these corporations around the world, because they're finding: "Hey, this is something the employees can do themselves; they can do this right at their desk; it's a simple technology; it's easy to use; it gives them some real-time feedback on what's going on in their system. And it's going to save us a lot of money because they're going to be able to hit that 'zone' state more quickly. And they're going to perform better. And as a result of that, they will also see changes in their health." And so, the whole package is right there for them.

So that's made a big difference in our work, to have something that people can do in real time.

Rick: This is really the next "quantum leap" beyond biofeedback. Biofeedback took it to a certain point, but that, again, was all mental, and it didn't really strike at the heart of the matter, which are the emotions going on within the person. You can enter an alpha state, but unless the emotions are being shifted within every cell of the body, all you have is a calm mental state. What you are doing is really a step beyond what biofeedback was all about, to my way of thinking.

Howard Martin: That's a very astute observation. We respect biofeedback and we honor it, and we never like to see HeartMath positioned as a competitor or a "better than", but what we're doing is, now we're getting some feedback from the body, but we're getting feedback that's EVEN MORE CENTRAL to everything that goes on in the body.

Last weekend I was on the other side of the microphone. I was doing some interviews for some psychologists who were up here at our place for a training program, who are using the Freeze-Framer. One of the questions I asked was: "What's different about this from biofeedback?"

And one of the main answers that I got back was: "The patient likes it better." They feel something differently when they go into the state of heart coherence. And they feel THAT more than when they go to the alpha state of biofeedback. And so, they're more attracted to it, and they're "getting it" faster, they tell me; they're getting well faster. It's not as cumbersome. They don't have to have a lot of wires hanging off their head, etc., and they said for some of the patients who were dealing with emotional challenges, the biofeedback stuff is too complicated for them and too intimidating.

Rick: Just intuitively, I would think that the retention would be better, too.

Howard Martin: Well, they're saying that to me. This is feedback coming back from them, but you're onto it. It's a new form of biofeedback that's looking at a different set of parameters, but parameters, in my opinion, that are more central to the overall mental and physical health of a person than just the brainwaves. That's what we have. So it is the next step in biofeedback.

And, by the way, biofeedback people now are all into heart-rate variability. And other companies are coming out with heart-rate variability monitoring devices, and all kinds of stuff, and so that's the next step that the formal biofeedback community is taking. They're going in that direction as we speak.

Rick: You've been in this a long time now. Where do you see this going? What's the next step, for you?

Howard Martin: We've always been in this for the long haul. We want to make a sustainable difference in society. And we've always approached this from the perspective that we didn't want to be the "latest, greatest, newest hot thing" out of California, and just got boxed-in, early. We've always held back a little bit, and moved it out slowly with care and with intention.

The ultimate goals? Again, we want to have a sustainable impact on how society functions—how people think, how people feel, how they treat each other. So we've always figured that the best way to do that is to work through the organizations that have that kind of influence—such as corporations, healthcare, finance, education—all these different areas that have influence on society.

So I think the future for us is that we're seeing this grow and grow and grow. We're dealing at higher and higher levels within major institutions and organizations that can do something, and can influence other people, or who do have the ability and resources to do that.

Ultimately, I think, within the next 10 years, we're going to see a revolution in how we approach business, how we approach education, all those different things that I mentioned earlier. And I think HeartMath can play a part in all of that. There are certainly a lot of pieces to something like that, but I think we can play a central part of a major transformational shift in how the world functions. I know that's a wide and big goal, but again, with a 30-year investment in this, and taking it step by step, seeing it grow, and feeling the momentum that's happening with us, I just have no reason to believe that we can't do it.

Rick: I would think that the HeartMath solution would just be so well suited to work with clinical psychologists, sociologists, people in the helping professions—not only the medical professions, but the psychological professions. I would just think it's hand-in-glove.

Howard Martin: We've attracted a lot of people from those fields, and again, there's many, many segments and aspects to the mental health professional field. I think there's a huge number of different committees and departments on the American Psychological Association.

Rick: Right, right.

Howard Martin: There are a lot of different schools of thought, a lot of different disciplines, a lot of different things. There's a movement now in psychology towards what is called "positive psychology". You might even find this humorous, in the premise behind it, because for many people, it's common sense. But in the psychological community, because of the way they've been trained, because of the resources, and it fits a new approach, what they're saying, in essence, is that getting a patient or someone who's dealing with an emotional challenge, getting them to experience a positive emotion gets them to a place of wellness more quickly than regressive therapy.

In regressive therapy they need to understand the problem, and maybe look at it and see it. But the re-experience of the negative emotion, obviously, begins to reimprint, to some degree, the problem.

Rick: Sure.

Howard Martin: And if they can bypass that, without it being repressing to the client, and get them to, instead, experience a positive emotion, they're finding that begins to reprogram the emotional circuitry.

Rick: I've heard that from people involved in the mind-control field—deprogramming people who have been the subjects of mind control—the same type of thing. You don't need to traumatize the person by reliving childhood trauma, or early traumatic memories, because there is a re-imprinting, as you say. Instead, taking it from the present, from a more positive aspect, you're able to get further, faster.

Howard Martin: That's right. But I'll tell you what. People will fight tooth-and-nail for their right to experience negative emotion. It's an area, in my public presentations, that I approach very delicately, because the questions that I immediately get are: "Are you saying that I shouldn't experience negative emotions?" Or: "Are you talking about something that's going to put me in a position where I'm being asked to repress my emotions?"

And I have to be very careful in my language around that, and explain that: "No, emotion is all important, and we have emotions for a variety of reasons; but people have taken the liberty of taking negative emotions to an extreme."

They use that as a way to get the emotion out, and all of that, but look at the detriment that they do, in the process, to themselves, and to the others who are around them. We must get to the place, in our evolutionary process, to where we can find a way to transform negative emotional energy—and not have to express it, or act it out in angry and destructive ways. In the future, that's where we're going as a species. We will begin to overcome, to lose the need to experience negative emotion.

I'm not saying that's going to happen today, or within the next 10 years. But that's where we're going. We're going to a place where we will not need the negative emotional states as much.

Then I use analogies and other examples, where I'll say: "Emotion is like having a palate of colors. Every emotion represents a color, or a shade of color, and you can paint the picture of your life like you want to. So we all have choice. If we want to paint our pictures in grays and blacks and dark browns and all that, then we can do that. But there are a lot more colors to choose from. And so, it becomes a matter of your own choice.

So, no, I'm not trying to take away anyone's right to experience strong negative emotions, and I'm not talking about repressing emotions; I'm talking about an evolutionary step to where we will learn to transform emotions into positive emotions. And when we do, they're so much more rewarding, pleasurable, fun, and healthy, that we naturally don't want to experience the negative emotions anymore.

But you have to give somebody the ability to experience the positive emotions, otherwise the negative emotions are still appealing, because feeling negative emotions is still better than feeling nothing at all.

Rick: And I would imagine, for many people, the familiarity of negative emotions has become something that they don't want to let go of, even though a state of joy is so much more desirable in terms of overall health. But it may be foreign to people.

Howard Martin: It is. Unfortunately, in our society today, many people cannot feel positive emotions. I see it all the time. I know that may sound unusual. It may sound unusual to some of your readers, but people tell me: "I don't know how to feel good." Or: "I don't know how to feel a positive emotion."

And for many people, feeling a positive emotion is kind of like just not feeling as bad as you usually do.

That's sad, but it's not the way we were meant to live.

Rick: What do you tell people? I'm sure you're approached by people like that all the time.

Howard Martin: Well, I tell them everybody has the ability inside themselves to experience positive emotional states. So, in the Freeze-Frame technique, getting them to recall a positive, fun time or feeling in their life is designed to begin to prime that pump.

And then they'll tell me: "I can't feel anything. I can't think about anything positive in my life."

So, the first step I'll take with them is to say:

"Is there anything in your life, right now, that you can possibly appreciate? Because sometimes, no matter how bad it is, there's something that you can appreciate."

And most often, they'll find a little something to appreciate, and I'll work from there. Get them to appreciate something, anything. It can be something small in their life—you know, just anything they can. And I begin to show them that it's in there. I begin to work them into a state of seeing in a larger context.

If that doesn't work, what I may do is say: "What would have to change in your life for you to feel good?"

And they may say: "Well, I'd have to have more money." Or: "I'd have to be through my illness." Or: "My relationship would have to come back together." Or whatever their issue is.

Then I say to them: "Well, go ahead, right now, and assume that's happened. How would you feel if it did?" And a lot of times they'll start laughing. Or there will be a ray of hope there.

So I get them to assume the attitude of positive emotion, even if they can't totally feel it—just getting them to assume the attitude of it. So there are different ways you work with people to get them to a point where they can begin to feel a little something positive inside themselves.

And when they do, it's just like starting a fire. It just takes a little spark. Once that little spark is lit, then they can move more quickly into experiencing something that feels a lot better to them.

You just have to be compassionate and caring and patient with people when you work with them like that. And a lot of times I'm not working one-on-one; most times I'm not. Most times I'm working from a large audience perspective, and I have to do it a different way than other therapists and counselors and psychologists, all around the world, who do this on a daily basis, because it isn't easy.

You need to do good work to get them to experience stuff like that. I just see the pain, a lot of times, in people. I see a lot of people who are breaking through, too. So it's not all a dour picture for me of what's going on in the world.

Rick: I would imagine there are a lot of "aha" moments in your audiences because—just listening to you—I can imagine that when you're out there, you are, in effect, teaching many people who simply have never been taught these things. So they may understand what you are saying, intellectually, but they may not have ever lived it. So often, just having it explained by someone who really comprehends what's going on can make all the difference in the world toward taking that next step, if that makes sense.

Howard Martin: You're right. One of the things that Doc has told me over the years is: "Do the best you can. Go out there and speak from your heart, and speak clearly, and lay out what you need to lay out, and there will be little things that you say that will seem relatively insignificant to you, but in your audience, there will be something said, if you do it well, that will inspire them."

Rick: I'm sure that's true.

Howard Martin: Just little pieces of something I may say that are positive for someone, individually, and helps them. I just go for that. I just go out there and do what I do and have fun. Hopefully, somebody is hearing something from it. And I think they are.

Rick: What do you think our readers should be aware of generally? What would you like to leave them with?

Howard Martin: We're in an interesting place in history. We're at a dimensional shift and awareness.

You can see that reflected through the chaos and confusion—and yet the opportunity, and the new things coming into view all the time—so it's like a dualistic view of the world right now.

I think we're in an era of unprecedented challenge, as well as unprecedented opportunity. And as people begin to create an alignment within themselves that become more coherent, internally, and do what they can, it's a self-empowered effort that's needed now, to make the shifts that they can make, and take it a step at a time. And be sincere about it, and go for it with a little more zeal, and a little more hope.

Then fulfillment, new fulfillment, like they never experienced before, is quite possible. I see this happening all the time to people. I see people breaking through into new things and overcoming challenges that have been around for years.

So, it's just an exciting time for people. Learning to operate more from your own heart is one of the keys for that. You can learn to "ride the waves of change" with a lot more poise and grace in these times, and it can really be a fun ride, even amidst the chaos and confusion.

So the message I have is a very hopeful message. People are really coming into some new things. It's a very exciting time to be alive in the world.

Just don't identify with all of the problems so much. Try to reduce the significance of the problems, and focus on more of the opportunities that are there.

It isn't just thinking "happy thoughts" or positive mental attitude; it's about really finding that positive feeling inside and going with that, shifting the emotional state. And as people do that, change happens VERY quickly. Very positive change can happen very quickly. And by that I mean change beyond the logical and linear, change that can occur in ways that are quite exciting and quite unexpected.

As people do that, they'll start coming into a whole new understanding of who they are and what this game of life is all about. It's a fun ride when they do!

Rick: That's a perfect place to end. Thank you so much for taking the time to talk with me and sharing this wonderful message with our readers.

Unlocking The Secret Of Heaven Through The Science Of Man

Editor's note: You will remember Gregg Braden from our June 2001 front-page feature article, which led to this month's front-page feature carrying on the same "heart" theme. So many of you enjoyed Gregg's message that we are pleased to share the following update.

7/19/01 GREGG BRADEN

In the mid-twentieth century, Max Planck, the Nobel Prize-winning father of quantum theory, made a statement that shook the foundation of physics in his time. During a speech in Florence, Italy, Planck stated: "There is no matter as such! All matter originates and exists only by virtue of a force. We must assume behind this force the existence of a conscious and intelligent Mind. This Mind is the matrix of all matter."

With these words, Max Planck paved the way for the next question: What "Mind" creates "the matrix of all matter"? Recent studies indicate that Dr. Planck's words may provide the elusive "missing link", unifying science and religion, while setting the course of physics in the twenty-first century.

A "UNIFIED" FORCE

The oldest records of humankind suggest that Creation "speaks" to us each day through the language of a reflected universe, where the events of our daily lives are the product of relationships that begin in the unseen realms of Creation. The same texts remind us that we may use this language to "see the unseen, hear that which cannot be heard" and speak with Creation through "the unspoken word". Recent advances in quantum physics now support precisely such understandings, providing the keys to translate our forgotten language, giving new meaning to each career, every relationship, and the "unexplained" events of our lives.

Quantum science has identified four forces of Nature that enable us to change our bodies, our world, and even the cosmos in ways that were thought impossible only a few short years ago. Applying our knowledge of the strong nuclear, weak nuclear, electromagnetic, and gravitational forces to modern technology has given us the god-like power to modify our climate, generate powerful fields to "see" through our planet, create new forms of life, and copy existing ones as cloned replicas.

Ironically, the knowledge that holds the promise of life, is the very technology with the power to bring an end to life as we know it. For the first time in human history, our knowledge carries consequences that are global as well as permanent.

Although Creation has revealed many of her secrets, one great mystery remains: science has yet to discover the one principle that combines Nature's forces to explain the events of our world. Physicists suspect that yet an additional force, a fifth force, remains undetected, uniting Nature through a form of energy that weaves its way into each moment of our lives. Furthermore, recent studies suggest that each person is directly linked to this force, allowing us to tap into its power and apply it to the conditions of our personal and global lives.

A NEWLY DISCOVERED FORM OF ENERGY: THE EVIDENCE

Three groundbreaking experiments in the late 1990s unveil dramatic and undeniable evidence of a newly discovered form of energy, a matrix, linking each member of our global family, Creation, and the events of our lives in unexpected and empowering ways. Relegated to technical journals, and receiving little attention from mainstream media, these experiments, reported by leading research institutions of our day, shake the foundation of our predominant worldview, scientifically documenting that:

- 1. We communicate with our world through a previously unrecognized form of energy that operates outside the bounds of measured time and space.
- 2. Our DNA directly influences our physical world through this form of energy.
- 3. We influence our physical DNA through a non-physical, non-local form of energy that is directly linked to human emotion.

A growing body of evidence suggests that the events of our visible world—the failed relationships, broken agreements, disease, and conflict of our past, as well as the joy, peace, and healing of the present, stem from relationships that begin with the "matrix of all matter". Through the non-local energy associated with human emotion, and broadcast through human DNA, we create conditions in the realms where such events originate.

Physicists suspect that it is in the higher dimensions of new creation theories—the quantum "heavens" referred to in ancient traditions—that the four known forces of Nature merge into a newly recognized force, the elusive Unified Field, that weaves its way through each moment of our lives.

Ancient scholars invite us one step further, describing how these forces converge within our bodies, creating the blueprints of peace, cooperation, and healing relationships that become the reality of our lives. Is there any evidence that such a powerful "technology" does, in fact, live within each of us?

NEW EVIDENCE OF QUANTUM PROCESSES IN THE SHROUD OF TURIN

In 1898 the mysterious 14' 3" long by 3' 5" wide linen sheet, known as the Shroud of Turin, was photographically documented for the first time. Already the source of tremendous controversy, the focus of the cloth is the faint and life-like image of a crucified man that appears to be "burned" into the fibers of the cloth.

Matching the biblical descriptions of the crucifixion of Christ, the validity of the Shroud has been in question since it appeared in Western Europe in 1353, far from its suspected origins in the Holy Lands over 300 years earlier. To the surprise of the photographer, as well as the scientific community of the day, these early pictures led to the discovery that the details on the cloth appeared to be a "negative" image, becoming "positive" only when the light values were reversed through the process of photography. Since the time of the first photographs, improved techniques of imaging and new discoveries in quantum physics have offered fresh insight into the man in the Shroud and the source of his image.

In 1988, a private study was commissioned to investigate the Shroud. It was hoped that, at last, this investigation would bring an end to the speculation of the relic's origins and questions of its authenticity. Making worldwide headlines, the 1988 study concluded that:

- there was no human blood on the cloth;
- the Shroud dates to between 1260 and 1390 CE;
- the Shroud should not be considered the burial cloth of Jesus.

Serious questions regarding the methods, protocol, and conclusions drawn from this study have since developed. While the 1988 study remains cloaked in controversy, it was not the first of its kind, nor was it the most extensive.

Ten years earlier, in 1978, an unprecedented effort to unlock the mystery of the Shroud began, as 40 scientists initiated a study that would last for 5 years. Representing the most sophisticated laboratories of the time, including Los Alamos National Laboratories, Sandia Laboratories, and the Jet Propulsion Laboratories (JPL), the investigators were given rare access to the Shroud following the public display of that year, working in shifts around the clock for five continuous days to gather their data. Completed in 1983, the Shroud of Turin Research Project's (STURP's) findings were disclosed through specialized scientific committees and technical journals, receiving very little attention from mainstream media and the general public.

Among the team's findings, the STRUP report revealed that:

- "There is no significant trace of paint, ink, dye, pigment, or stain on the cloth."
- "The image is NOT the product of an artist." (1981 Preliminary Report)
- "The blood is, in fact, real blood." (Dr. John Heller)
- "It is clear that there has been a direct contact of the Shroud with the body. However, while this type of contact might explain some features of the torso, it is totally incapable of explaining the image. There are no chemical or physical methods known which can account for the totality of the image."

While we may never know precisely whose image is emblazoned upon the ancient linen, one fact remains clear: the man in the Shroud experienced a process that traditional twentieth-century science has failed to explain. Recent findings in quantum physics and subtle-energy research, however, offer fresh insight into the original findings of the Shroud research team, and bring new meaning of the Shroud into our lives.

New translations of the ancient Essenes, scribes of the Dead Sea Scrolls during what many believe to be the time of the Shroud's origins, suggest that each human is a "convergence point"—a place where the four expressions of Nature may be fused into a single, empowering force that links us directly with the events of our lives.

Now we must ask ourselves the question: Did the man in the Shroud leave us the clues to such a force? New evidence, such as the experiments described in this article, now suggest that this may be precisely the case.

LOST WISDOM

The findings of the Shroud researchers, coupled with the release of studies linking the human body to the four forces of Creation, support the tenets from some of our most ancient traditions, suggesting that we play a significant role in the events of our lives and the world around us—a role that we are just beginning to understand. How could such key understandings be "missing" from the world view traditionally offered by modern science?

The loss of such important concepts is now attributed to the two interruptions in the knowledge chain, and the loss of over 530,000 documents that have historically linked our modern world to ancient wisdom. From such unlikely sources as these timeworn manuscripts, ancient scholars suggest that our everyday world is the mirror of events playing out beyond our perception. In the words of their day, they left precise instructions to such realms. It is this "inner technology" that allows us to create blueprints of the peace, cooperation, and healing relationships that become the reality of our world.

Quantum science supports such possibilities, suggesting that it is in the ten dimensions of the String and Super String Theories, realms now linked to human emotion, that the forces of Nature are unified into a single, directive power. Perhaps it is in the higher dimensions of the heavens that science and spirit are unified as well, bringing lasting healing to our bodies, peace to our world, and the answers to the oldest questions of our existence.

Could the great mystery of science, and the great secret of ancient spiritual traditions, be one and the same? Gregg Braden explores this, and equally compelling questions, through his multimedia journey bridging science and miracles as the lost language of our reflected universe.

Footnote: Through his investigation of the Shroud, Braden was given access to 63 of the more than 10,000 images that documented the 1978 Shroud of Turin Research Project, as well as some of the most intriguing of the findings. Among this collection are rare images of the x-ray, ultraviolet, and infrared thermography studies, providing greater detail into the processes experienced by the man in the Shroud than possible from routine examination.

Additional portions of the study detail blood analysis, state-of-the-art 3-D imaging, and a report from the Deputy Coroner and Forensic Pathologist of Los Angeles County regarding the condition of the body in the Shroud and the probable source of injuries. Braden has been granted permission to share these images in an educational, non-religious, and non-denominational setting. His 2001 programs offer a summary of the 1978 study, subsequent findings, and a context within which the Shroud of Turin may be viewed in our lives.

Best-selling author and guide to sacred sites throughout the world, Gregg Braden has been a featured guest for international conferences and media specials bridging ancient wisdom and modern science. A former earth scientist and senior aerospace computer systems designer (Phillips Petroleum, Martin Marietta Aerospace, Cisco Systems), Braden is now considered a leading authority on the spiritual philosophy of the ancient Essenes and many indigenous traditions throughout the world. His journeys into the remote mountain villages, monasteries, and temples of times past, coupled with his background in the hard sciences, uniquely qualify him to bring the benefit of long-lost traditions to the forefront of our lives today.

From the dawn of quantum physics, scientists have attempted to demonstrate the capacity of our beliefs to define our world. Braden accomplishes the same task through a language that is easy to understand, while bringing relevance to each moment of our lives. His inspiring sense of optimism is based in what he recognizes as the inner technologies of a wisdom lost to the West for over two millennia. Captivating audiences of all ages, Braden empowers our lives with a life-affirming message of hope, through his remarkable synthesis of science and spirituality. New Chief Of Secret Political Police

(7/08/01)

A unit of America's secret political police has a new Chief Terrorist. Robert Swan Mueller III is the perfect choice to head the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

When you realize what THEY and HE have been into, calling him the new head of a sinister entity will be an acceptable description.

A few items from memory:

1. In the late 1920s and '30s, the FBI was in the forefront of subverting Freedom of the Press—when it came to the new medium, radio. The Bureau, under dictator J. Edgar Hoover, saw to it that no one critical of the government or harboring dissident views ever was allowed to have a broadcast license. (This fact somehow does not find its way into books and articles critical of the FBI, yet is known as an established fact by old-timers in the broadcast field. Chicago's WCFL, call letters for Chicago Federation of Labor, always was a joke. It was never allowed to be pro-labor or to speak out forcefully in favor of unions and the working person.)

2. To attempt to beat down the formation of labor unions as an opposition to corporate greed, the FBI used provocateurs to bomb certain offices and warehouses and such, using the monopoly press to falsely blame it on labor violence and union organizers. The FBI had, as their adjunct, the "Red Squads", falsely labeling all dissidents as "Reds". (See, for example, Protectors Of Privilege: Red Squads And Police Repression In America, by Frank Donner, University of California Press, 1990.)

3. Through movie-making fakers, the FBI was given the false image of grabbing bank robbers—such as in the 1930s. Years later, a retired key agent of the Bureau, with nineteen years of direct experience and knowledge, dared relate to me the Bureau's sordid past:

- That FBI boss Hoover, in important instances, took bribes from certain bank robbers, who were then given a pass.

- That the FBI Chief connived with big-time criminals who owned race tracks and were whiskey manufacturers. To feed his ego, they allowed him to corruptly win at horse racing, his favorite pastime.

- One booze baron, Rosenstiel, actually set up a crooked foundation named for J. Edgar Hoover.

- The FBI denied there was a mafia in America. Simple reason: the criminal cartel used blackmail against Hoover; they had undercover pictures of Hoover's homosexual activities. (Plenty of details in Official And Confidential: The Secret Life Of J. Edgar Hoover, by Anthony Summers, Putnam, N.Y., 1993.)

4. The offices of the Bureau in the southern states were well aware of the Ku Klux Klan and lynchings of Blacks, and bombings of Jewish businesses, and outrages against some Catholics. An FBI undercover operative, Gary Rowe, was given immunity and not punished for murdering a civil rights activist, Viola Liuzzo, in the turmoil in Alabama. The FBI, in fact, gave Rowe a reward. (See, for example, J. Edgar Hoover: The Man And The Secrets, Curt Gentry, W.W. Norton, 1991.)

The Bureau, through their COINTEL Program, sought to snuff out the Anti-Viet Nam War Movement of the 1960s and early 1970s. The FBI played a key role in "Operation Garden Plot", that is, to put peaceniks in the cemetery by various bloody dirty tricks—plainly, murder. ("The 1960s And COINTELPRO: In Defense Of Paranoia", NameBase Newslite, No. 10, July-September, 1995.)

5. The Bureau played a key role in covering up airplane sabotage—such as in the Watergate plane crash in Chicago, one month after Nixon was re-elected President, in 1972. Twelve Watergate figures died in the crash, such as Dorothy Hunt, wife of the Watergate burglar, E. Howard Hunt. Together they had blackmailed two million dollars out of the Nixon White House. They had documents of Nixon's role in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The details of the aircrash, supported by 1300 pages of suppressed government documents, were in a book written by me and stopped in the press cycle by the Rockefellers, major owners at the time of United Air Lines. (Alas! There are no copies of my book The Secret History Of Airplane Sabotage, from 1973, available. I hope to update it someday and post it, at least in part, on my website.)

6. Books by assassination researchers document the dirty, bloody role of the FBI in covering up the high-level plot to assassinate President Kennedy. (See, for example, a huge, heavily-documented book, Act Of Treason, by Mark North, Carroll & Graf, N.Y., 1991, detailing the role of J. Edgar Hoover.) A former FBI official, later Mayor of Memphis, Tennessee, covered up the role of the FBI in the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. (See Orders To Kill, by William F. Pepper, Carroll & Graf, N.Y., 1995.)

As part of this pattern of cover-up and bloodshed is Robert Swan Mueller III.

Mueller was a key official in the Criminal Division of the Justice Department during the administration of George Herbert Walker Bush. Mueller supervised the supposed investigation of the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, which crashed over Lockerbie, Scotland, in December of 1988, about six weeks after the Elder Bush was elected President.

A group of eight, or as many as fifty, CIA covert operatives were onboard Flight 103. Disgruntled, they were returning from a failed mission to attempt to rescue some American hostages in the Middle East. They blamed the failure on the treasonous acts of the Elder Bush as Vice President. As we showed in exclusive stories, in the 1980s, Bush was the secret PRIVATE business partner of Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein.

Together, they, like mafioso, shook down for billions of dollars of "protection" money, the weak, oil-soaked sheikdoms of the Persian Gulf. The secret partnership details were part of the bank records sought to be suppressed by way of an unpublicized federal court suit in Chicago. I was the only reporter attending the hearing. Only one sizeable publication in America dared run my exclusive details, based on interviewing the court participants in the back of the courtroom. A populist newspaper, SPOTLIGHT, ran the detailed story on August 19, 1991.

Contrary to CIA regulations, forbidding their people to fly as a group on one airplane, this group of covert units stayed together for what they thought would be their mutual security. At least eight of them were scheduled to finger the Elder Bush for treason in the hostage rescue intentional screw-ups, at secretly arranged hearings set before Congress for early in 1989.

Such as: the Elder Bush was a sizeable owner of American LaFarge, the U.S. unit of a French firm, reportedly supplying the ingredients to Saddam Hussein for the making of poison gas to be used against the Iranians in the Iran-Iraq War, 1980 to 1988, and also against Iraq's own Kurdish dissidents. A director of the firm was a little-known Little Rock attorney, Hillary Rodham Clinton. She and her husband, William Rockefeller Clinton, were already part of a scheme to be played out in 1992, to install Clinton as President while shadow-boxing against his CIA mentor, the Elder Bush.

Only one newspaper in North America ran a series after the crash, outlining some of the secret arrangements of the units of the American CIA who were snuffed out by the crash. That was in Canada, the Toronto Star. Prior thereto, by phone hook-up, I did radio shows in Toronto with a relative of the publisher who went on the air under a pen-name.

Some were puzzled how FBI agents showed up at the Lockerbie, Scotland crash site in some instances quicker than local authorities.

As stated in an award-winning film documentary about Pan Am Flight 103: "Very strange people were at work very early on. Within a matter of three hours there were American accents heard in the town. Over that night there were large numbers, by which I mean 20, 25, 30 people arrived." This was reported by British journalist David Ben-Aryeah, in the documentary by producer Allan Francovitch, The Maltese Double Cross. Francovitch was later murdered as he was working on related documentaries.

As a member of a local rescue team recalled: "We arrived within two hours (of the crash). We found Americans already there."

As an author of a book (The Medusa File by Craig Roberts, an investigator and former law-enforcement official) pointed out: "...as odd as the fact that Lockerbie is over 350 miles from London, which is the nearest point an American FBI agent might be. To reach Lockerbie that night from London, even if traveling by air, would have taken far more than one hour considering the sequence of events that would have had to occur.

"Assuming timely notification, an American agent in London would have had to have been tracked down, considering the late hour, notified to pack-up for an investigation, rush to Heathrow, board a waiting airplane, fly immediately to the nearest airport that could land a jet transport, obtain ground transportation from there to Lockerbie, then locate the command center. An effort that would require four to six hours at the minimum."

From the details, there evidently was PRIOR KNOWLEDGE by the American FBI and the Justice Department. And who was in charge of all this? Reportedly Justice Department, Criminal Division honcho, Robert S. Mueller III. Mueller is quoted as saying in a public statement: "We have no evidence to implicate another country (other than Libya) in this disaster." (From The Oklahoma City Bombing And The Politics Of Terror, by David M. Hoffman, Feral House, Venice, California, original edition, 1998, page 326 footnote.)

By his doings, reportedly in the U.S. and Scotland, Mueller falsely shifted the whole blame to Libya and a stop-over in Malta by some Libyans. (Hence the title of the late Francovitch's film documentary The Maltese Double Cross.) By so doing, Mueller shifted the focus away from the prior treasonous activities in the Middle East of the Elder Bush, with the assistance of his sons, Jeb and George W.

The Elder Bush, as President, rewarded Mueller for his treachery on behalf of the Bush Family. Mueller "was named to head the criminal division in 1990, under President George Bush. Dick Thornburgh, then attorney general, says he relied on Mr. Mueller for some of the department's most DELICATE TASKS. Before the invasion of Panama in 1989, for instance, Mr. Bush called Thornburgh in and asked if the drug trafficking case against the Panamanian ruler, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, was solid. Mr. Thornburgh says he relied on Mr. Mueller's assurances that the case would stand up; it did. Among the other investigations that Mr. Mueller supervised at the criminal division was the BOMBING OF PAN AM 103, which had crashed over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988." This is quoted from the New York Times, July 6, 2001, in a story about Mueller by Neil A. Lewis. (Emphasis added.)

Shortly after being inaugurated as President, the Elder Bush launched the invasion of Panama in 1989, to kidnap Panama strongman Noriega to shut him up about being lured into private dope trafficking deals with the Elder Bush and sons Jeb, George W., and Neil. Playing a key role in silencing Noriega was Justice Department Criminal Division honcho Robert S. Mueller III.

Mueller reportedly arranged to terrorize Florida federal judges to lay the groundwork for them absolutely following orders to censor any mention of the Bush family being implicated in the dope trafficking into which Noriega says he was either inveigled or was entirely innocent of, with Noriega as an Elder Bush-arranged CIA operative. Bush had helped Noriega's rise to power by Bush arranging to murder Noriega's predecessor. (The Elder Bush paved the way for Saddam Hussein to the top in Iraq in similar fashion, by arranging to assassinate Saddam's predecessor.)

One of the most outspoken critics of the Justice Department and the FBI, on the federal bench in America, was Florida U.S. District Judge Alcee L. Hastings, one of only a very few Black federal judges in the South. The FBI, as a reprisal, framed Judge Hastings on bogus bribery charges. To scare other Florida federal judges that they have to march to the orders of the Bush family, the Hastings matter was quickly referred to the House Judiciary Committee, which voted articles of impeachment.

In the impeachment trial in the Senate, contrary to the rules, only a handful of Senators attended or were interested in any way in Judge Hastings plea that he is innocent and was framed by the FBI. The monopoly press, to show him in a bad light, played up a picture of him bending down to get past a barricade blocking the entrance to the Senate as he was on the way to the Senate trial. (Hey, I thought the whole U.S. Senate, not just a couple of them, have to sit as judges in an impeachment trial.) Leave it up to the pressfakers to get a picture of someone they want to demonize, such as prominently showing a pimple on his

Al Bielek on CD-ROM

What you get on this CD-ROM is the most in-depth compilation of interviews with survivors of the Philadelphia Experiment and Montauk Project to date on one computer CD.

The information on this CD comes from the memories of those who were interviewed. Because these projects are so secretive, gaining hard evidence is nearly impossible. However, that doesn't mean the projects never happened.

This information is for those who want to pursue and know the truth. Sometimes, finding the truth becomes elusive. There are many out there who do not want you to know the truth about these projects. Use your own judgment as you hear the words of these survivors.

As you follow this story, use this information as the beginning resource to hopefully, get you on the right track.

The five people featured on this CD all testify that they worked with Al at the Montauk Project, and some even remember him as Ed Cameron during the Philadelphia Experiment.

face. On the other hand, the Rockefellers are always shown smiling and in a good image.

The voters of Florida, however, did not buy the FBI frame-up done with the apparent connivance of Criminal Division honcho Mueller. Thereafter, defrocked Judge Hastings was elected (and numerous times re-elected) as a Democratic Congressman from Florida's 23rd Congressional District. (Another one of the few Black federal judges in the South, one from New Orleans, was likewise pickled by the FBI and removed from the bench. An Hispanic federal judge in California, after hearing evidence in his court of the treachery of the FBI, pronounced them as the American Gestapo. Within a few months thereafter, as a reprisal, they attempted to send him to jail on bogus federal criminal charges. In that instance, the judge beat back the FBI/Justice Department frame-up orchestrated by Criminal Division honcho Robert S. Mueller III.

BUT, evidently the federal judge hearing the criminal charges against kidnapped General Noriega got the message. The judge blatantly and arbitrarily ruled that no mention in the court will be allowed of how the Elder Bush and his sons inveigled Noriega, as a CIA operative, into business with them, through the infamous spy-money laundry, Bank of Credit and Commerce International, BCCI.

Noriega's lawyers were forbidden to defend him with his role with the Elder Bush and Bush sons, details tending to show Noriega was innocent of the criminal charges. Few in the monopoly press mentioned a fact pertinent to people of the Third World. Noriega, as the head of Panama, was the ONLY person of color to head up a country in the Western Hemisphere.

Mueller, as a top honcho of the Criminal Division, was instrumental in suppressing and/or destroying evidence and scaring off and covering up about witnesses to protect the Bush family from being exposed in their treasonous role laundering assassination funds and funds of sworn enemies of the U.S., through the Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

U.S. Senator John Kerry (D-MA) headed a subcommittee investigating dope and weapons smuggling and terrorist activities. In a heavily censored and watered-down version of the facts, even the big-time newsfaker, the New York Times, in a story referring to Kerry and Robert S. Mueller III, said: "...John Kerry, who was already in his second term as a senator from Massachusetts when the two clashed in 1991 over whether the criminal division, which Mr. Mueller then led, had been aggressive enough in investigating the BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL, a rogue operation that had ties to drug gangs and gunrunning." This is quoted from the New York Times for July 6, 2001, in a story by Neil A. Lewis. (Emphasis added.)

Please note: Senator Kerry is no sweet angel. He is an expert reputed blackmailer and cover-up artist. He is married to the widow of the late U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania, John Heinz, heir to the ketchup and canned beans fortune. Heinz died in a sabotaged plane crash in 1991, just as he was planning to expose U.S. government complicity in several domestic and foreign political assassinations.

As to the infamous BCCI, Senator Kerry himself had a conflict of interest in that he headed a group of U.S. Senators who accepted campaign funds from the worldwide spy-money laundry-murder machine, BCCI. Kerry's subcommittee refused to delve into the highly pertinent Chicago branch office of BCCI and their Chicago twin, a branch of Italy's largest bank, owned in part by the Vatican, Banca Nazionale Del Lavoro, BNL. (Suppressed BNL records as to the secret private partnership of the Elder Bush and Saddam Hussein were the subject of my exclusive story in SPOTLIGHT, August 19, 1991, referred to earlier.)

George W. Bush, the tainted OCCUPANT and RESIDENT of the White House, chose Mueller to head the FBI. Mueller has repeatedly demonstrated to the satisfaction of the criminally inclined, treasonous Bush family, that Mueller obediently follows Bush family orders to whitewash their criminality and treason. The established FBI pattern of covering up political assassinations, falsely blaming bombings on domestic dissidents, and such, will no doubt continue with America's new GESTAPO CHIEF, Robert Swan Mueller III.

Stay tuned.

The Late Grand Dragon Of The Washington Post

(7/23/01)

His fortune was ostensibly based on fraud. And his daughter ended up running the major espionage propaganda trumpet in the U.S. Capitol.

By 1912, it was evident that America was needed in Europe's upcoming and expected World War One. Basically, European-based ruling families foisted upon the American people a PRIVATE central bank, calling it by the misleading term of the FEDERAL RESERVE, as if it were a U.S. Government entity. The purpose was to suck huge money out of the growing, industrial U.S. to finance Europe's periodic killing fields, which were not part of any national purpose of the United States.

Re-elected President in 1916 as an alleged "peace" candidate, Woodrow Wilson, a professorial stooge for Wall Street, just a few weeks after being inaugurated in 1917, shoved American doughboys into Europe's own bloodbath. War music such as "Over There", was used to mold and pump up American opinion to favor WAR IN EUROPE. To help finance Europe's War, the U.S. sold, throughout America, as if it were "patriotic", war certificates called Liberty Bonds. A key figure in the sales was a Wall Street pirate, Eugene Meyer.

Meyer was later apparently rightly accused but never criminally prosecuted for having reportedly embezzled tens of millions of dollars from the Liberty Bond issues under his supervision. Cynics often note how big-time criminals are rewarded instead of jailed. Meyer became a Governor of the Federal Reserve, a ruling-class device to instigate wars and depressions for high-level profits.

Meyer went on, in the early 1930s, to organize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, a highly corrupt entity used to rescue certain failing banks (who secretly rewarded certain RFC insiders with bank stock) while ignoring other failing banks who did not pay off insiders. (A case in point was the Continental Bank of Chicago, now merged with Bank of America, owned principally by the Rothschilds, the Jesuits, and more recently, the Japanese mafia, the Yazuka. Continental almost went under in 1931.)

Meyer also went on to become the first President of the World Bank, accused by some as a trick for exploiting non-industrialized nations.

So, with his reputed massive funds embezzled from the Liberty Bond issues, Meyer found it easy, in the depths of the Great Depression in 1933, to buy the Washington Post at a bankruptcy sale. Likewise in the Depression, Meyer's daughter, Katharine, was trained at Rockefeller's University of Chicago. In the 1930s, key figures at the Teutonic-structured university and its

The staggering story of human sacrifice and satanic ritual, involving the most famous people in the world.

Arizona Wilder, formerly Jennifer Greene, was mind-programmed from birth to become one of the three most important female conductors of Satanic rituals on the planet. Her programmer was Josef Mengele, the notorious "Angel of Death" in the Nazi concentration camps. When he died in the late 1980s, her programming began to break down.

In this video interview with David Icke, she describes human sacrifice rituals at Glamis Castle and Balmoral, in which the Queen, the Queen Mother, and other members of the Royal Family sacrificed children in Satanic ceremonies.

She talks of the same experiences with Henry Kissinger, George Bush, Bill Clinton, members of the Rockefeller and Rothschild families, and a host of the most famous names in the United States and the United Kingdom.

Your view of the world will never be the same when you hear the revelations of Arizona Wilder and consider their relevance to your daily life.

adjoining hospitals were pro-Hitler (as to the hospitals, I have personal knowledge). While other Chicagoans, including unpaid or unemployed teachers, ate out of garbage cans, the students at the pro-Nazi University came and went as if nothing important economic was happening.

Meyer, purportedly a Jew, married to a Lutheran, acted more like the German Jews who favored the Nazis. As to Katharine and her siblings: "The children were brought up in the traditions of St. John's Episcopal Church in Washington, the church of presidents, where the Meyers—Mr. Meyer was Jewish, his wife Lutheran—had their own pew." (New York Times, July 18, 2001)

Meyer came out of the so-called "investment bankers" and bond houses of Wall St. Those high-up in those firms retain their Jewish surnames, but have not been followers of Judaism for several generations, having been converted to other religions. The public is seldom reminded of this. (See the book The New Crowd: The Changing Of The Jewish Guard On Wall Street, by Judith Ramsey Ehrlich, Barry J. Rehfeld, Little Brown & Co., 1989.)

Katharine married Philip J. Graham, a lawyer, who went on to run his father-in-law's business, the Washington Post. In 1963, a few months before the political assassination of President John F. Kennedy, Philip Graham either committed suicide or was murdered. Various explanations of his demise leave much to be considered. (Was there ever an adequate explanation by the Washington Post how Washington, D.C. had their entire phone system shut down during the JFK murder?) By 1963, already a long-time adjunct and front of the American CIA, the Washington Post, like the rest of the monopoly press, trumpeted the "lone assassin" explanation quickly planted by the espionage agencies.

In 1972, Katharine Graham, as boss-lady of the Post, did at least two noteworthy acts: [1] Under her control, the Post covered up the poison murder of the sinister dictator of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover; and [2] under her control and on behalf of the American CIA, the Post was the originator of most, if not virtually all, of the stories about the alleged break-in at the Watergate Hotel, owned at the time by the Pope. The Post ran no stories pointing out, as some European authors have, that the whole event was set-up by double-agents, like James McCord, long-time CIA official in charge of their physical security, to finger Nixon. Most every sizeable press, TV, and radio outlet merely repeated what the Post printed about "Watergate".

Mrs. Graham was in a position to know full well that Bob Woodward, with virtually no journalism background, had been a courier to the White House for the CIA and others in the espionage community, including the military. Some authors contend, naming names, that some thirty admirals and generals planted the Watergate details on Woodward, an intelligence operative from a young age. It was the military way of getting rid of Richard M. Nixon, accused by them of treason in Viet Nam, without blowing out his brains in an open car like JFK. (See Silent Coup: The Removal Of The President, by Len Colodny, Robert Gettlin, St. Martin's Press, Inc., 1991.)

Hence, some contend that Bob Woodward, and his Watergate book and articles, have been a mammoth fraud blindly repeated as valid by the liars and whores of the press.

Bob Woodward was the son of Du Page County Chief Judge Alfred Woodward. (Du Page is the county adjoining Cook County, site of Chicago.) It was strange to find out that Alfred Woodward had a long history of espionage, being an operative of BOTH Army and Naval Intelligence (supposedly that does not happen).

In 1973, Chief Judge Woodward had assigned to himself one of the most important but unpublicized cases in America. It involved a huge money laundry masquerading as a financial empire/insurance company—the "Equity Funding" scandal.

The Chief Judge put himself in charge of hundreds of millions of dollars of monies and assets of this swindle machine. Among the creditors were teachers' pension funds from around the nation. Also creditors into millions of dollars was Chief Watergate investigator Leon Jaworski and Nixon White House aide Bob Erlichman and his family. Ahead of most all of the other creditors, Chief Judge Woodward arbitrarily and corruptly paid out mostly in full to Jaworski and Erlichman. Teachers and other pension funds received almost nothing by Chief Judge Woodward's lawless orders.

Court records, by law, are in the custody and control of the Chief Clerk of the Court. Despite that, Chief Judge Woodward kept the Equity Funding files in his office, locked up in one of his file cabinets. He denied access to these "public records".

One day in 1973, I showed up in his office demanding that I be permitted access to the court files he kept concealed there. I informed the Chief Judge I was going to sue him for unlawfully concealing public court records.

He threatened to have me arrested for "contempt of court" inside his office. He realized, however, that that would cause publicity of the very cases he was trying to keep secret. As a result of the stand-off, I obtained copies of the rare and revealing files. They support my contention that the Equity Funding mess was one of several secret methods of laundering funds by the Nixon White House for their dirty tricks against dissidents and peaceniks.

In later years, members of our group brought a federal court lawsuit against judge Woodward and several other Du Page County judges. They were charged with, outside of court, engaging in satanic rituals in part linked reportedly to a hospital owned and operated by the judges. As shown in federal court, the judges directed their rituals to misuse and brutalize small children, the parents of whom were among those accusing judge Woodward and the judges as defendants in the federal suit.

As a signal to insiders, on a key meeting date, one of the satanic ritual judges would put a purple flower on their judicial bench, according to the federal court pleadings. A Chicago federal judge, contending he had no time to consider such matters, refused to consider the facts and put the case arbitrarily out of court.

Following the notoriety of the "Watergate Affair", Katharine Graham repeatedly sent Bob Woodward to the Chicago area for press conferences. And I came to each one as a reporter. When Woodward showed up, he pointed to me and shouted: "The press conference will not proceed until that man in the wheelchair is removed." There was no basis to force my removal. I had not even said hello to anyone. I was permitted to remain, however, when I told the security police I would sue for false arrest if they removed me, without any basis in law or fact, upon the orders of Bob Woodward as sent by Katharine Graham.

Bob Woodward evidently was fearful I would raise a question about the Watergate/Equity Funding mess, and about his father the Chief Judge. Bob Woodward suspected that I knew about the details that later showed up in the book "Silent Coup". At the press conferences, I was specifically forbidden to ask any questions.

in 1972, there was a plane crash near Chicago's Midway Airport. Twelve Watergate figures died in the sabotaged crash, including Mrs. E. Howard Hunt, wife of the purported Watergate burglar. She was carrying two million dollars in her luggage, which she placed on a separate first-class seat next to her. This was Nixon White House "hush money" given to her by her husband reportedly blackmailing Nixon with documents showing Tricky Dick had been implicated in the murder of President Kennedy.

The FBI had 150 of their agents already waiting near the airport for the plane to arrive. They apparently were going to arrest her for blackmailing Nixon. The plane pancaked short of the airport. In violation of law, the FBI cordoned off the crash site, forbidding local fire, police, and hospital ambulances from approaching the smoldering United Air Lines plane.

In the months after the crash, based on our private investigations, I did radio talk-shows all over the U.S. (I decided to withhold, until months later, that we had "liberated" the entire National Transportation Safety Board file showing sabotage—some 1300 documents and photographs.)

Reportedly on behalf of the American CIA, her bosses, Katharine Graham sent to Chicago, to interview me, her supposed crackerjack reporter, Ronald Kessler. After an interview of only a few minutes, he said he wanted to be driven back to O'Hare Airport to return to Washington. Kessler wrote a two-part front-page series in the Post condemning and heckling me. (How could he know my position if he only spent a few minutes interviewing me?) Well-wishers, however, from all over North America called me, stating: "Sherman, you must really have something for the Post to have you on the front page twice, heckling you for your investigations of the Watergate plane crash."

Ronald Kessler, in various books he has written, claims to be a CIA expert. Here are some of his books: Escape From The CIA, Pocket Books, N.Y., 1991; Inside The CIA, Pocket Books, N.Y., 1992; Inside The White House, Pocket Books, N.Y., 1995; Moscow Station, Scribners, N.Y., 1989; Spy Vs. Spy, Scribners, N.Y., 1988; The Spy In The Russian Club, Scribners, N.Y., 1990.

The original edition of a book pointing out Katharine Graham and the Washington Post's connections to the American CIA was suppressed: Katharine The Great: Katharine Graham And Her Washington Post Empire, by Deborah Davis, hardcover, 1991, Institute of Media Analysis, Inc.

The Washington Post, like others in the monopoly press, have several reporters who specialize in whitewashing espionage agency matters. Their specialty often is showing up late at night to interview an eyewitness in political assassination events. One such Washington Post reporter showed up after midnight to interview such a witness. An hour after the reporter left, the eyewitness was found murdered.

Are some such reporters "pilot fish" for assassins? Why does this happen again and again over the years? A few examples: Nuclear whistleblower Karen Silkwood was on the way to meeting a mass media reporter. She was planning to show documents of misuse of dangerous plutonium at the plant where she was working. She was murdered on the way to the reporter. In the Clinton era, an eyewitness uncovered secret incriminating documents he remembered accidentally leaving in a car that ended up in the junk yard. Shortly after a monopoly press reporter interviewed him, he was murdered.

In the many decades Katharine Graham headed the Washington Post, no one seemed ever able to ask her about any of the foregoing. It is quite proper to call her THE LATE GRAND DRAGON OF THE WASHINGTON POST, adding: AND THE AMERICAN CIA.

Cynics find it interesting that, accidentally or otherwise, Katharine Graham fell on a sidewalk and broke her head. To some, an appropriate way to croak for someone as sinister as she was. Stay tuned.

The Secret History Of Airplane Sabotage: Part One

(8/6/01)

In November 1972, Richard M. Nixon was re-elected President. One month later, on behalf of the Nixon White House, America's secret political police, the American Gestapo—the FBI and the American CIA—arranged to sabotage a commercial airplane headed for Chicago. On board were twelve Watergate figures, including Dorothy Hunt, wife of the Watergate burglar, E. Howard Hunt. They had reportedly blackmailed two million dollars out of Nixon threatening, among other things, to publicize documents they had showing that Tricky Dick, along with top officials of the FBI and the CIA, had planned and carried out the political assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

We received a mysterious phone call: "You should look into the crash near Midway Airport. They murdered Mrs. Hunt and the others." From various circumstances we determined that the call came from an official in Midway Airport Tower, Chicago. We started our own investigation.

In 1973 I wrote a book The Secret History

Of Airplane Sabotage. So far as I could find out, there never was an authoritative book on the subject up to that time. And even now, I know of no other such book. A sizeable book publisher undertook to publish my work. The book, however, was stopped in the print cycle and no copies became available. The book was suppressed by the Rockefellers, at the time the major owners of UAL, Inc., the parent firm of United Air Lines, with the United Air Lines crash near Midway airport being a major section of the book.

I am posting, starting as Part One, excerpts from the book. In some instances, it has been updated and slightly revised to show details uncovered after 1973.

The Watergate Plane Crash

1. THE PEOPLE. Upwards of twelve persons, connected in one way or another with Watergate, boarded United Air Lines Flight 553 on the afternoon of December 8, 1972. They had something in common.

That week there had been a gas pipeline lobbyists meeting as part of the American Bar Association meeting in Washington, D.C. It was conducted by Roger Moreau. His secretary was Nancy Parker. Among those attending were Ralph Blodgett and James W. Krueger, both attorneys for the Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha, Nebraska. Associated with them were Lon Bayer, attorney for Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co.; Wilbur Erickson, president, Federal Land Bank in Omaha.

This was a belligerent group determined to blow the lid off the Watergate case. Reason: Former U.S. Attorney General, John Mitchell, and his friends running the Justice Department were putting the spear into Northern Natural Gas. Some officials of that firm and its subsidiaries were indicted on federal criminal charges September 7, 1972, in Omaha, Chicago, and Hammond, Indiana. Charge: Bribery of local officials in Northwest Indiana to let the gas pipeline go through. (Chicago Daily News, 9/8/72)

To blackmail their way out of these charges, the Omaha firm had uncovered documents showing that Mitchell, while U.S. Attorney General in 1969, dropped anti-trust charges against a competitor of Northern Natural Gas—El Paso Gas Co. The dropping of the charges against El Paso was worth $300 million. A spokesman for Mitchell belatedly claimed, in March, 1973, that Mitchell had “disqualified” himself in 1969, because Mitchell’s law partner represented El Paso. The Justice Department, under Mitchell, dropped the charges. Period.

About the same time, Mitchell, through a law partner as nominee, got a stock interest in El Paso. Gas and oil interests, such as El Paso, Gulf Resources, and others contributed heavily to Nixon’s spy fund, supervised by Mitchell.

(Earlier, I had spoken out about the apparent bribery of Mitchell as Attorney General by El Paso which caused him to proceed to prosecute, on my charges, Chicago Federal Appeals Judge Otto Kerner, Jr., for bribery. This was the highest-level, sitting federal judge sent to jail for bribery in U.S. history.)

Pipeline official Krueger was carrying the Mitchell-El Paso documents on the plane. He had told his wife that he had in his possession irreplaceable papers of a sensitive nature. For months after the crash, his widow demanded, to no avail, that United Air Lines turn over to her his briefcase. It later came out in the pipeline trial, in Hammond, that Blodgett had been browbeating federal officials to drop the criminal charges just prior to the crash. (Chicago Tribune, 5/18/73) (Our investigation uncovered that most of the local officials, who were to be government witnesses against the pipeline, were murdered just prior to trial. In all, this included some five Northwest Indiana officials.)

Dorothy Hunt, Watergate pay-off woman, who offered executive clemency directly on behalf of Nixon to some of the Watergate defendants, was seeking to leave the U.S. with over $2 million in cash and negotiables that she had gotten from CREEP, Committee to Re-Elect the President. (She was so concerned about these valuables, she purchased a separate first class seat next to her on the plane for this luggage.) She and her husband, E. Howard Hunt, the Watergate conspirator, were a “CIA couple”—two agents “married” and living together.

Early in December, 1972, both were threatening to blow the lid off the White House if: (a) he wasn’t freed of the criminal charges; (b) Nixon didn’t pay heavy to suppress the documents they had, showing he was implicated in the planning and carrying out, by the FBI and the CIA, of the political murder of President Kennedy; and (c) Dorothy and Howard Hunt didn’t both get several million dollars. Some of these details are in the Memo of Watergate double-agent, James McCord, a CIA official in charge of the Agency’s physical security; details were before the Senator Ervin Committee. (New York Times, 5/9/73)

Hunt claimed, according to McCord, to have the data necessary to impeach Nixon. McCord said matters were coming to a head early in December, 1972. Mrs. Hunt was unhappy with her job of going all over the country to bribe defendants and witnesses in the bugging case. She wanted out.

Mrs. Hunt was on the way to arrange to take her money out of the country, possibly Costa Rica, to link up with international swindler Robert Vesco, who was there at the time, through Harold C. Carlstead, whose wife was Mrs. Hunt’s cousin. Carlstead reportedly did accounting and tax work for mobster-owned businesses in the Chicago area. He operated two Holiday Inn motels in Chicago’s south suburbs—at 174th and Torrence, Lansing, Illinois, and at 171st and Halsted, Harvey, Illinois.

Carlstead’s motel on Torrence was reportedly a favorite hangout for gangsters and dope traffickers, such as apparently “Cool” Freddie Smith, Grover Barnes, and the late Chicago mobster Sam DeStefano (who aided the American CIA in bloody tricks and was snuffed out to silence him), to name a few. Mrs. Hunt had: (a) $10,000 in untraceable cash; (b) $40,000 in so-called “Barker” bills, traceable to Watergate spy Bernard Barker; and (c) upwards of $2 million in American Express money orders, travelers checks, and postal money orders. (As shown by testimony before the National Transportation Safety Board, re-opened Watergate plane crash hearings, June 13-14, 1973. Hearings re-opened as a result of my lawsuit claiming sabotage covered up by the N.T.S.B.) Carlstead issued a fake “cover” story that had (only) $10,000 with Mrs. Hunt—a story swallowed up by the Establishment Press.

Mrs. Hunt got on Flight 553 with Michele Clark, CBS Network newswoman, going to do an exclusive story on Watergate. Mrs. Hunt, Mitchell, Nixon—the story could have destroyed Nixon at the time. Ms. Clark had lots of insight into the bugging and cover-up through her boyfriend, a CIA operative.

revelations of Watergate, Ms. Clark tried to pick the brains of Chicago Congressman George Collins, regarding the bugging of the Democratic headquarters. Ms. Clark was sitting with Congressman Collins on the plane. (Testimony 6/14/73 of Congressman Collins’ public relations director.)

After the crash, Michele Clark’s employer, CBS Network News, ordered and demanded that the body be cremated by the southside Chicago mortician handling the matter—possibly to cover up foul play. Later, the mortician was murdered in his business establishment, an unsolved crime. (We interviewed close confidants of her family, who informed us of the details about how CBS applied tremendous pressure and offered large sums for silence on the crash details and having her body cremated contrary to her family’s wishes.)

Also on the plane were four or more people who knew about a labor union that had given a large “donation” to CREEP to head-off a criminal indictment of a Chicago labor union hoodlum (at the time of my book, 1973, actively investigated by us).

For many years, like clockwork, one Chicagoan went to Washington, D.C. on Monday and came back Friday afternoon on Flight 553 or its equivalent—Lawrence T. O’Connor, Apt. 5-C, 999 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Illinois. On Friday, December 8, 1972, he received a call from someone he knows in the White House telling him not to take Flight 553 but to go instead to a special meeting.

My long-time friend, political activist Dick Gregory, informed me that there had been strenuous efforts to steer him that same afternoon onto United Air Lines Flight 553. Luckily, he had changed his mind.

Also getting on Flight 553 was a reputed "hit-man", pursuing Mrs. Hunt and others, and going under the "cover" of being a top narcotics official with DALE (Drug Abuse Law Enforcement). He used the name Harold R. Metcalf. He is an unusual "narc"; he worked directly for Nixon.

Metcalf told the pilot he was packing a gun, and so Metcalf was assigned seat B-17, near the stewardesses' jump seats and also near the food galley and the rear door of the plane. After the crash, he walked out of the cracked open fuselage of the pancaked plane wearing a jumpsuit.

A former Military Intelligence investigator, who used his credentials to get into the crash site, identified the person posing as "Harold Metcalf" as an overseas CIA parachute spy (investigator's testimony at re-opened N.T.S.B. hearings, 6/14/73). Also see Metcalf's statement about being a "narc" and his gun on the plane (N.T.S.B. Docket SA-435, Exhibit 6-B, p.17, surviving passenger statements).

Metcalf evidently supervised certain foul play, possibly cyanide, directed at certain passengers, but he didn't know of the overall sabotage plan. One of our staff investigators confronted Metcalf about a week after the crash:

(a) Metcalf, supposedly a government narcotics bigshot, knows nothings about dope.

(b) In response to our question "Did you know the plane was sabotaged?" he blurted out half a sentence: "It was not supposed to...." Turning purple, he then left the room.

Evidently, he was a double cut-out, an espionage term for an operative to be himself eliminated by someone else. His survival was an oversight (N.T.S.B. testimony, 6/13-14/73).

More details from the suppressed book in further parts of this story. Stay tuned.

The Secret History Of Airplane Sabotage: Part Two

We called it the Watergate Plane Crash. As our private investigation continued, the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) set public hearings for February, 1973. Conducted in a large meeting hall in one of the very large motels near O'Hare Airport, Chicago, they started with the witness list. After some of the witnesses testified, we were able to interview some of them in the hallway.

One witness was a former four-motor military bomber pilot with loads of aircraft and air-tower experience. Retired from the military, he worked for a firm that supplied materials for the paving of parking lots. By a strange coincidence (or on purpose?) someone at his firm told him to measure the parking lot starting at 2 p.m., Friday afternoon, December 8, 1972, which turned out to be right under the in-coming flight path of United Air Lines Flight 553. He observed some things which fit in with our probe that it was sabotage.

With his help and that of others, including witnesses, we compiled a list of details showing what the NTSB panel were carefully evading from going into. I went home and began quickly putting together a lawsuit against the Safety Board for covering up airplane sabotage.

We filed the lawsuit in Cook County Circuit Court and arranged with the County Sheriff to have one of his deputies accompany us as we together went to the NTSB hearings in session. I had prepared over a hundred copies of the lawsuit, all suitably stamped with the Clerk's Office markings, just like the original filed copy. The deputy sheriff had a copy of the lawsuit, together with a summons commanding the NTSB officials to appear in court.

As we arrived, the Safety Board panel was already proceeding with testimony. "How do you want me to do this?" the deputy sheriff whispered to me.

I instructed him: "Go right up to the stage on which the Safety Board panel of five is sitting. Do not wait for a recess. Serve the papers, as provided by law, on the woman in the middle, the Chairperson."

That is what he did. As he approached her with the court papers, she asked him: "What is this?"

He politely answered: "It is for you, ma'am." The minute the Safety panel boss looked at the court papers, she was alarmed. She abruptly recessed the hearing.

Most of those in the large meeting room spilled out into the hallway. There we handed out copies of the lawsuit to whosoever seemed interested. The Safety Board's general counsel came up to me: "I have to have a private talk with you, away from this crowd, Mr. Skolnick."

We went down the hall to be alone. "How much do you want?" he barked at me. "If it is within reason, we'll take care of it today. It'll be cheaper than litigating this. You have to sign an agreement not to further divulge any of this."

I must have had an angry look on my face when I responded: "Hey, where did you get the idea that my charges of sabotage are a shake-down?" And I began hollaring: "Listen, you mouthpiece, your job is to show up in court to answer our charges. I AM NOT FOR SALE. Go back to the panel and tell them. SKOLNICK IS NOT FOR SALE! You're not going to buy me like some crooked judge."

Thereafter another lawyer sat down and talked to me in the motel restaurant: "Mr. Skolnick, I represent the families of those who died in that crash. We have pending claims against United Air Lines. Your assertions of air sabotage tend to let United Air Lines off the hook. Please, for the sake of these families, drop your lawsuit. You are undermining our multi-million-dollar claims, and that is not fair."

I responded: "Are you saying I should also be part of this cover up? Our motto is 'Let the truth be told, though the Heavens crumble.' Do you realize that United Air Lines is part of covering up the sabotage of one of their own planes? One of Nixon's closest pals is the head of United Air Lines. The cover up included Mrs. E. Howard Hunt's documents showing Nixon was part of an FBI/CIA plot to assassinate President John F. Kennedy. You want me to shut up about all that? No way. I am sorry."

The lawyer took a narrow view as if he did not understand any of that. As if he were suddenly stupid. "I do not want to know anything about all that. I simply want to push our claims against United Air Lines. Can we somehow make it up to you?" he said. Miffed, I replied: "Hey, hey, don't start offering me a piece of your deal in return for my silence."

In Chicago my discussions about air sabotage and the Watergate Plane Crash caused some student groups to invite me to speak at their college or university. As a result, persons showed up at such meetings who later spoke to me privately.

"Here. Look at my credentials. I drive an ambulance for one of the hospitals. On the afternoon of the crash, I was sent to the crash zone. Hey, but get this. They did not allow me to approach the burning airplane. I was on a mission of mercy and these strange types stopped me. There were about 150 to 200 of them. They refused to show me their credentials."

That is what one eyewitness told me. He continued: "Friends of mine in the fire and police departments told me they also were not allowed to approach the airplane. These apparent federal types were there on location ahead of both the fire and police."

After the crash, we made public statements that 200 FBI and Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) operatives, refusing to show their credentials, had taken over the crash zone, coincident with the crash or even shortly BEFORE. We were called "liars".

Then, on June 13, 1973, Chairman John Reed, of the National Transportation Safety Board, told the House Government Activities Subcommittee that he sent a letter to the FBI, that:

(a) Never in living memory had the FBI acted as in the Flight 553 crash. Reed said 50 FBI agents came into the crash zone shortly after the crash.

(b) One FBI agent proceeded into Midway Control Tower and took over the tape relating to Flight 553, without asking permission.

(c) Before the NTSB investigation could do so, the FBI conducted 26 interviews, including of surviving flight attendants. The FBI interviews were completed within 20 hours of the crash.

For 6 months, they claimed we were "liars" when we said 200 FBI and DIA agents were in the crash site, coincident with the crash. Thereafter, the FBI admitted that 50 were there.

How is that possible? The Chicago Fire and Police Department people responded in a couple of minutes. The FBI and DIA headquarters is downtown Chicago. Even if they immediately, after the crash, took a helicopter, they could not have arrived, as they somehow did, AHEAD OF THE FIRE AND POLICE.

We took up this angle with a member of Congress who quizzed the FBI about this. Back came a letter that the FBI had apparently been surveilling the plane and had jurisdiction because of what they termed federal statutes relating to "Air Piracy". This was in a letter signed by the Acting Director of the FBI. (This was about a year after Director J. Edgar Hoover had been poison-murdered in his home, May, 1972, just as the Watergate matter was about to occur.)

The FBI has jurisdiction because of AIR PIRACY? Did someone on the plane radio the FBI that someone else on that plane was either trying to steal Mrs. Hunt's two million dollars of "hush money", in negotiables, she and her husband got from the Nixon White House? Was someone trying to steal her baggage, enroute to Chicago, containing documents proving Nixon was part of an FBI/CIA plot to assassinate President Kennedy?

Mrs. Hunt, worried about her valuables, bought a separate first class seat right near her on which she piled her luggage. So AIR PIRACY was one way the FBI had of trying to explain away why upwards of 150 of their agents were already waiting at or near Midway Airport that afternoon, for the in-coming flight with the Watergate 12.

From various sources we found out that the FBI and the DIA were under Nixon White House "national security" orders to arrest Mrs. Hunt and others on the plane for being part of a plot to blackmail Nixon. That is how and why the FBI/DIA was already there ahead of the local authorities.

A Chicago Fire Department official we interviewed told us: "Nobody explained to us how and why the FBI was able to keep us out of the crash site. The plane had pancaked on top of one or more residences and was smoldering."

In an interview, a supervisory official of the Chicago Police Department informed us: "I was told to assemble my men in Marquette Park, which is several blocks away from where the plane crashed. We were forbidden by our brass from approaching the crash site. The higher ups said it was upon orders of the FBI and the DIA and the White House. Someone mumbled something to me about 'national security'."

Saturday, the day after the crash, parts of the airplane fuselage were quickly buried in a city dump. An official of the City Department told us: "The orders came from the top. Someone of authority did not want parts of Flight 553 to be examined at all. We came with heavy equipment, a special select crew pledged to silence, and buried deep parts of the plane in a city dump. I am in trouble if you ever use my name."

A few months after the crash, at a United Air Lines company meeting, one of their stewardesses got up and began loudly complaining the company bosses were covering up sabotage in the Flight 553 crash near Midway Airport. She was quickly hooted down. Security people shoved her out of the meeting. Later, she was fired.

So the air sabotage cover-up pieces were, one by one, falling into place. On December 9, 1972, one day after the crash, Nixon White House aide Egil (Bud) Krogh, Jr., also involved in the Ellsberg burglary caper, was appointed Undersecretary of Transportation, supervising the National Transportation Safety Board and The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), the two agencies supposedly going to "investigate" the crash of Flight 553.

On December 19, 1972, White House deputy assistant to Nixon, and secretary to the Cabinet, Alexander P. Butterfield, was appointed as the new head of the FAA. Butterfield, an air officer for 20 years, was also CIA aviation liaison. (See, for example, Jack Anderson's column, Chicago Daily News, for 5/8/73.)

During the Senate Watergate Committee hearings, summer of 1973, Butterfield, as a witness, suddenly blurted out that Nixon had everything occurring in or near the Oval Office taped. These tapes, which Nixon originally refused to disclose, became the subject of a U.S. Supreme Court decision against Nixon, as well as part of the Nixon impeachment matters resulting in his resignation, August, 1974.

Dwight L. Chapin, Nixon's appointment secretary, became, five weeks after the crash, a top executive of United Air Lines. Chapin reportedly had no prior business experience. At the original NTSB crash hearings in February, 1973, he reportedly threatened media people with reprisals if they mentioned sabotage—reprisals such as using Clay Whitehead, Nixon's communications czar, to seek the break-up of the networks on anti-trust charges.

Remember: in the 1970s the Rockefellers were the largest stockholder of UAL, Inc., parent of United Air Lines. Further, in the 1970s, the Rockefellers owned all three major news networks—CBS, NBC, and ABC. To an extent, even now, the Rockefellers still have a heavy presence in the ownership of the major networks.

Even before the crash, Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's personal attorney, was the lawyer for United Air Lines and Marriot Corporation which, at the time, had an airplane in-flight food catering service.

So, if I was right about Flight 553 and United Air Lines, at the time the largest air carrier in the U.S., they could have lost their certificate to fly.

The Rockefellers orchestrated the media against our investigation. This was long before the era of the Internet, long before TV on the web through video streaming, long before more open-minded radio talk shows, and many years before public-access cable-TV used by some, like us, to get around the press whores. (Our one-hour weekly public-access cable-TV show, Broadsides, cablecast within Chicago, reaches some 400,000 viewers each week, on a public-access cable-TV system that is the largest in the U.S. Portions of our show, on video streaming, are on our website.)

The latest technology and changes like that, for the moment, help the underdogs tell the awful truth. Such as about a forbidden subject like "The Secret History of Airplane Sabotage".

More parts of this coming. Stay tuned.

INVISIBILITY & LEVITATION: A How To Guide To Personal Performance

BY COMMANDER X

Methods utilized by occultists, military, and martial artists to perfect the art of levitation and invisibility. Throughout history only a "super" few have learned to accomplish such seemingly impossible tasks. Were the blocks of the pyramids levitated into place? This is the only how-to book on a very strange topic.

TIME TRAVEL: A HOW-TO INSIDERS GUIDE

Visit the past and future with safe and proven methods. We have long been taught that time travel is impossible and the work of science fiction, but during the past several decades secret agencies with the U.S. military have successfully been crossing the barriers of space and time. Here is the shattering evidence that we are being visited by "time surfers" from the future, and that we too can journey forward and backwards in time.

About The Author: Commander X is formerly of military intelligence, having worked on several classified projects. Tim Swartz is Emmy award-winning journalist.

PHILADELPHIA EXPERIMENT CHRONICLES

BY COMMANDER X

Explores the strange case of Al Bielek (only known survivor of the Philadelphia Experiment) and the mysterious death of famed astronomer Dr. M. K. Jessup, who first broke the news about the disappearance of the warship and its subsequent teleportation into another dimension. Also looks at time travel, alternative energy, anti-gravity theories. Highly classified govt/military projects exposed.

THE PHILADELPHIA EXPERIMENT & OTHER UFO CONSPIRACIES

BY BRAD STEIGER

In 1943 the Navy accomplished the teleportation of a warship from Philadelphia to Norfolk by successfully applying Einstein's Unified Field Theory. The experiment also caused the crew and officers of the ship to become invisible, during which time they were launched into a time-space warp. One survivor tells his amazing experience. THE DULCE WARS: Underground Alien Bases & The Battle For Planet Earth

Is an alien "Fifth Column" already active on Earth preparing total conquest via implantations and mind control? In the corner of a small town in America's Southwest something very strange is going on. Did U.S. military forces perish recently in hand-to-hand combat with a group of hostile "greys" who subsequently seized control of one of our top-secret underground bases? OTHER VOICES

BY GEORGE HUNT WILLIAMSON & TIMOTHY GREEN BECKLEY

The author was one of the original witnesses at the meeting between contactee George Adamski and Orthon from the planet Venus. Williamson claims that he also underwent contacts with aliens and even received transmissions over his radio from friendly extraterrestrials. Others have claimed the same. Senator Barry Goldwater reportedly heard mysterious signals on his ham radio and our own astronauts have reportedly picked up messages not transmitted from Earth.

Other Voices is essentially a reprint of a book entitled The Saucers Speak, by George Hunt Williamson and Alfred Bailey. Originally published in the 1950s. Much of what the authors prophesy has indeed come to pass, and the warning the aliens send about nuclear war and environmental doom is still as urgent as it ever was when first published.

A Visit With Mark Twain

Some of you may know that the great writer and humorist Mark Twain (Samuel Langhorne Clemens, 1835-1910) was a friend of the great electrical genius Nikola Tesla. When in New York City, Twain often enjoyed late-night hours in Tesla's laboratory as the sparks crackled and flew across the room, and as lightbulbs flickered and glowed eerily under seemingly magical conditions.

Some of you also know that Tesla has often "haunted" me, especially in the days when I was more directly involved with forefront science. He was not the only one, but his assistance brought a level of clarity and success to my scientific work that mightily irritated some of my detractors while delighting coworkers who enjoyed solving mysteries.

Tesla has definitely been a Guiding Light with certain subjects we have shared in The SPECTRUM—like the Free Energy article in this issue. His passion for justice is matched by a strong desire to restore to we-the-people wonderful technologies that have been outright stolen by those who would be kings over us.

What most of you probably don't know (except for those who work with me closely) is that Mark Twain also "haunts" this newspaper. You may catch his Guiding Hand in some clever turn of a phrase in an Editor's Note, or in the headline that seems to sparkle with a special wink of humor or sharp satire.

He is deeply pleased to be a part of this enterprise and gently reminds me—if I get tangled in details, and lose sight of the forest for the trees—of the potent role The SPECTRUM plays in the Great Awakening underway on planet Earth at this time.

I have often said there is a Guiding Hand (a lot of them!) that puts together each month's paper and gives each issue a "personality" of its own. You may notice that this issue of The SPECTRUM has—all of a sudden—been steered down a curious road, heavy with spiritual messages that, each in their own way, hint that some major event(s) is (are) rapidly approaching the stage of manifestation on planet Earth.

Your guess is as good as ours about what's around the corner. But remember to keep your sense of humor, which keeps your frequency up and thus makes you better able to stay on top of the action—whatever it is.

On that theme, Mr. Twain has asked that I share with you a bit of a narrative from what was, according to the Chicago Tribune: "Ninety of the best minutes of entertainment television has ever offered." Television history was made on March 6, 1967 when an audience of over 30 million viewers tuned-in to watch the broadcast of Hal Holbrook's landmark, one-man show Mark Twain Tonight.

I remember it well, watching on our old black-and-white television. I audio-taped this electrifying event; there were no VCRs back then. That tape was my only record of this remarkable performance for many years. Now you can purchase the full-color video tape from video catalogs, or directly from: KULTUR, 195 Highway 36, West Long Branch, NJ 07764; phone: 732-229-2343; or at the www.kulturvideo.com Internet website.

Hal Holbrook's recreation was absolutely spellbinding. Mark Twain most surely overshadowed him during the performance, which was a recreation of a "lecture" setting that Twain often conducted. Maybe even Tesla had a hand in the "experiment" Twain describes. Let's listen-in for a bit:

Man thinks he is the Creator's pet. Now, you may wonder why.

Why, because of his intellect. Man is a reasoning animal. Such is the claim, though I do think that's open to dispute.

Well, I've been studying this reasoning animal for years now, and I find the results humiliating.

Well, for example, I experimented with a cat and a dog, taught them to be friends, then I put them in a cage. I introduced a rabbit; in an hour they were friends. Then I added a fox, a goose, a squirrel, some doves, a kangaroo, and finally a monkey. They lived together in peace.

Well, next I caught an Irish Catholic and put him in a cage. And as soon as he seemed tame, I added a Presbyterian. And then a Turk from Constantinople, a Methodist from the wilds of Arkansas, a Buddhist from China, and, finally, a Salvation Army Colonel.

Why, when I came back, there wasn't a specimen left alive! These reasoning animals had disagreed on a theological detail—and carried the matter to a Higher Court.

Because, you see, man is also the religious animal. He's the only one that's got the true religion—several of 'em! He loves his neighbor as himself, and cuts his throat if his theology isn't straight.

Why, he's made a graveyard of the globe in trying his honest best to smoooooth his brother's path to happiness and heaven.

The other animals have no religion, ya know. Gonna be left out. I wonder why? Seems questionable taste.

Man is the only Patriot. He sets himself up high in his own country, under his own flag, and sneers at the other nations. Keeps uniformed assassins on hand, at heavy expense, to grab snatches of other people's countries and keep them from grabbing snatches of his—with the result that there's not an acre of ground on the globe that's in possession of its rightful owner!

And in the intervals between campaigns, he washes the blood from his hands, and works for the brotherhood of man—with his mouth.

Man is the only animal that deals in the atrocity of war. He's the only one that, for sordid wages, goes forth in cold blood to exterminate his own kind. He has a motto for this: "Our country, right or wrong!" Any man who fails to shout it is a traitor!

Say—who is the country? Is it the government? In a republic, the government is merely a servant, a temporary one. Its function is to obey orders, not originate them.

Only when the republic's life is in danger should a man uphold his government when it's wrong. Otherwise the nation has sold its honor for a phrase.

And if that phrase needs help, he gets another one: "Even though the war be wrong, we are in it! We must fight it out; we cannot retire without dishonor."

Why, not even a burglar could've said that better! Man is the only animal that blushes—or needs to.

Well, you just have to remember that man was made at the end of the week's work—when God was tired.

Thanks for your gracious words of support and for the financial help that keeps us alive.

U.S. MARINES TO BE IN GROUND ATTACK OF IRAQ?

Excerpted from the INTERNET, <<http://www.rense.com>>, 9/1/01: [quoting]

From DEBKA Intelligence Files
<WorldNetDaily.com>:

U.S. Iraq attack to involve ground troops. White House plans multi-pronged offensive against Hussein.

An imminent U.S. attack against Iraq will not be limited to air strikes and missile barrages, but involve ground forces, according to sources quoted by the <www.debka.com/DEBKA-Net-Weekly> intelligence service.

U.S. Marines who trained in desert warfare last month were flown to the region this week, according to the report. The Marines were trained in air landings of men, armor, and artillery, and in combined ground and air operations. They were told in no uncertain terms they could be called upon to move against Iraqi army forces in eastern Jordan and western Iraq.

Signs in Riyadh, Kuwait, Jerusalem, and Cairo point to an imminent U.S. operation. U.S. and Israeli spy satellites and planes flying over central and western Iraq last week found Scud B-1 and Scud C missile launchers deployed at two Iraqi air bases, H-3 in the west and al-Baghdadi in the center of the country, the intelligence service reports. According to the photos, Iraq has also moved to these bases, where Iraqi armored brigades have been deployed since July, batteries of upgraded SA-6 anti-aircraft missiles of the type used to shoot down a U.S. drone this week. These improved surface-to-air missiles can hit targets flying above 23,000 feet. U.S. and Israeli reconnaissance data also revealed an increase over the past 10 days in the number of Iraqi military personnel stationed near Syrian armored headquarters in northern Syria since the end of July.

Nonetheless, Washington has yet to make a final decision, and the operation could be postponed for several days, Debka reports.

[End quoting]

The Israeli/U.S. axis has been trying to get a war started in the Middle East all summer, while giving the impression/illusion of ongoing peace negotiations. When the facts of the matter are understood, nobody would blame Iraq for preparing themselves to defend against the insanity being instigated through Israel. Again lately the incidents of violence have been escalating to a critical level. It remains to be observed if "unseen forces" continue quietly to put out the fires as quickly as Israel works to reignite same. It is a most delicate and dangerous time brewing in the Middle East.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY SHERIFF'S DEPUTY MAY HAVE BEEN SHOT BY A FELLOW LAWMAN

From RUMOR MILL NEWS (RUMILLS),
<<http://www.rumormillnews.com>>, 9/3/01:
[quoting]

Confusion In Warrant Shooting

Confusion among officers involved in an armed standoff may have led to the shooting not only of the suspect, but of a fellow lawman, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

An investigation into Friday's shootout with James Allen Beck has raised the question of whether Beck fired the bullet that killed Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Hagop "Jake" Kuredjian or whether the officer mistakenly was hit by a fellow law enforcement officer.

"I am quite sure that is something we're going to look into, because it's not clear he was shot by Beck" sheriff's Sgt. Paul Patterson told the Associated Press in an interview Sunday.

The standoff began Friday morning when federal officers and sheriff's officials tried to serve a search warrant at Beck's home in an upscale section of this city 22 miles north of Los Angeles.

Autopsy results Saturday showed Kuredjian died of a single gunshot wound to the head. He had been struck while crouching behind an SUV parked on the street four houses down from Beck, the Times reported.

Beck, a convicted felon, was alleged to have impersonated a U.S. marshal and be building a weapons cache. As authorities approached, Beck began shooting at officers from the U.S. Marshal's office and U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms.

Kuredjian arrived a few minutes after the shooting started and was hit almost immediately while trying to provide gunfire as cover to fellow deputies pinned down in the fusillade, the Times reported.

The exchange of gunfire startled neighbors, especially those who saw officers firing at the wrong house. [!!!!]

"I hollered out the window: 'You're shooting at the wrong house!'" said one neighbor, who spoke to the Times on condition of anonymity. "They must have heard us or something, because I could hear one of the deputies say: 'Is it the house with the Explorer?' And another guy says, 'No, the one next to it.'" Homes on either side of Beck's house were riddled with bullet holes, including one where a couple and their 30-hour-old newborn cowered.

"Three bullets came through the (front) window, the master closets, and into the master bathroom" said Phil Lombardi, the baby's father. He described how he, his wife, and baby took cover in a second-floor bathroom.

"It was very traumatic. My wife wasn't coping with it. I was trying to comfort her with the newborn child" he said.

The total number of rounds fired was unclear and authorities would not give an estimate.

"It was a very extensive gun battle. We have to wait to see what was collected at the scene" sheriff's Sgt. Patterson said.

The three-hour exchange ended after tear-gas projectiles were shot into Beck's house and a fire erupted. Flames quickly engulfed the home, burning it to the ground. But authorities were still unclear how the fire began.

"It's probably going to be a little more difficult, because of the extent of the fire" Patterson said. "They'll have to sift through evidence to determine how the fire was actually started." Investigators discovered a body believed to be Beck's. But the coroner's office said an autopsy would not be conducted until Tuesday, at the earliest.

An AK-47 and AR-15, a shotgun, a .380-caliber semiautomatic pistol, handguns, and ammunition were collected from the ashes.

[End quoting]

This—to me—looks like another typical alphabet-soup-agency terrorist act and cover-up. How could this deputy be where he was and be shot and killed by Beck? In the Randy Weaver case, an officer was supposedly shot by one of the agents on purpose—true? Why were so many well-armed agents brought to the house? How did the house catch on fire and burn down so quickly? Why was the house bull-dozed so quickly? Why were the officers firing at the neighbors' houses? Why didn't they know for sure which house Beck was in? Why were they shooting at no particular target—just a house with someone in it?

As is typical in this type of assault—SO MANY UNANSWERED QUESTIONS—AND PROBABLY NEVER WILL BE.

Now, for a little insight into this suspicious matter that you probably won't be seeing in the press anytime soon, how about the following item:

What You Didn't Know About The California "Sniper"

Posted By: Anonymous (You know why)
Date: 8/31/01 14:05

I don't know if this will eventually come out or not, but the truth is that the suspect James Beck is a former DEA agent who several years ago was arrested by the ATF for possession of machine guns. Funny thing was, the guy was properly licensed. Unfortunately, he had several pre and post samples of each gun (like 25 MP5s, 30 UZIs, etc). In any case, he was arrested, charged, and tried.

First trial: hung jury. Second trial: hung jury. The feds decided to try a 3rd time, so he filed a lawsuit for malicious prosecution AND WON. Guess what, they tried him a 3rd time anyway. Result: another hung jury.

Is it possible that the ATF was gunning for this guy? Probably. The ATF spin doctors are already hard at work calling this guy a "sniper". The fact of the matter is that, when an arrest warrant is executed, it's not standard practice to have the ATF as backup. They wanted to burn this guy out and use the fire as an excuse for the "destroyed evidence". THIS WAS A GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED RETALIATORY ASSASSINATION. He didn't start the fire; the tear gas did. Those are the facts.

[End quoting]

Assuming the above information by "Anonymous" is true and correct, it certainly fills-in a lot of the questions concerning this extremely suspicious raid. Stay tuned.

NEW HAGUE RULING WILL RESTRICT INTERNET FREEDOM

From NEXUS magazine, September-October 2001: [quoting]

In June this year, the Hague Conference on Private International Law met on a new treaty to set the rules for jurisdiction for nearly all commercial and civil litigation.

This proposed new treaty imposes a bold set of rules that will profoundly change the Internet by extending the reach of every country's intellectual property laws. With a blanket of overlapping jurisdictional claims, it exposes every website publisher to liabilities for libel, defamation, and other speech offences from virtually any country, and strip Internet service providers of protections from litigation over the content they carry.

If adopted, it will reduce Internet freedom, shrink the public domain, and diminish national sovereignty. And practically no one knows anything about the treaty.

The Hague Conference on Private International Law is a little-known organisation that held its first meeting in 1893, but did not have permanent status until 1951.

Source: Consumer Project On Technology, June 2001, <www.cptech.org> [End quoting]

China just recently put tight restrictions on their Internet and I read that the U.S. is working to get around this wall; they want to know what's going on there.

But of course the other side of the coin is that the elite controllers have been working to find a "legal" way to restrict present Internet freedoms enjoyed by we-the-people. As a communication tool, the Internet has allowed much more information to flow, quickly, than those in control would like us to know about.

"THEY MADE ME FEEL LIKE A CRIMINAL!"

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.surfingtheapocalypse.com>>, 8/9/01: [quoting]

He was just having lunch in Ybor City when a surveillance camera captured his image. Weeks later, the police show up.

"They made me feel like a criminal!"

An image from Ybor City's cameras was reprinted in a national magazine. An Oklahoma woman phoned Tampa police and said the man was wanted. They sought out Rob Milliron. Yes, that's him in the image. But no, he's never been to Oklahoma. And no, he's not wanted.

Rob Milliron has never married. He has never had kids, never been to Oklahoma.

Yet three Tampa [a city which has public face-matching spy-cameras on the streets] police officers went to Milliron's construction job site Monday and asked him whether he was wanted in Oklahoma for child neglect.

It seems that his face wound up on a surveillance camera in Ybor City. News cameras captured that image. A woman in Tulsa saw his picture in U.S. News & World Report and called Tampa police.

She said the man in the photo was her ex-husband and was wanted on felony child-neglect charges.

Turns out they had the wrong man. But the experience has turned Milliron into a vocal critic of the controversial surveillance system.

"From that picture, I was identified as a wanted person" said Milliron, 32, whose only previous brush with the law involved a marijuana possession charge when he was 19.

The surveillance system uses software called Face-It and is linked to 36 cameras throughout the Centro Ybor entertainment complex and along East Seventh Avenue. Images taken from the cameras are compared with a data base that includes wanted felons and sexual offenders.

If the image is a match, officers are dispatched to question the person. But in this case it wasn't the system that flagged Milliron, but simply a woman who saw his picture with a news story.

The plainclothes detective, accompanied by two uniformed officers, had a copy of the magazine, folded open to the page with Milliron's photo.

After producing identification, answering the detective's questions, and enduring curious stares and inquiries from his construction co-workers, a mortified Milliron went home.

"He was absolutely horrified" said Cheryl Toole, 32, Milliron's girlfriend of nine years.

He said: "I was surrounded by the police today" Toole recalled. "We were worried they'd come to our home in the middle of the night."

Equally upsetting, Milliron said, was the fact that beneath his photo in the magazine, a headline read: "You Can't Hide Those Lying Eyes In Tampa."

"It made me out to be a criminal" he said.

Tampa police detective Bill Todd, who took the call from the Tulsa woman and interviewed Milliron, said Milliron did not seem upset.

"He was laughing about it" said Todd, who spearheaded the software project that captured Milliron's image.

Milliron's photograph was captured in June while he was on a lunch break in Ybor City.

He didn't know it at the time, but the Police Department used his photo to demonstrate the system to local news media.

The software costs $30,000, but is on loan for a year by its owner, Visionics Corp. of New Jersey, while the department decides whether to purchase it.

Milliron's photo ran in the St. Petersburg Times June 30. A caption under the photo read: "The man in this image was not identified as wanted."

The Times later sold the photo to U.S. News & World Report.

The software system has sparked controversy nationwide. Protesters say the "spy cameras" intrude on citizens' privacy. Mayor Dick Greco, however, has said the system is no more intrusive than the cameras found in banks and shopping malls [but—this software puts you in a police lineup without your knowledge].

Milliron, who says he plans to retain an attorney, hopes the software system will be removed.

"I don't think it's right" he said. "They made me feel like a criminal." [End quoting]

Slowly and quietly Big Brother is watching our every move ever more closely. It is getting to be more imperative for the nervous elite controllers to keep an eye on the uppity citizenry at all times.

Yet there remains tremendous power in the numbers of a united citizenry which the elite controllers are likewise nervous we will awaken to understand. A recent, serious example is the following item:

PEACEFUL CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE IN KLAMATH BASIN WATER CRISIS

Water Fighters Keep The Battle Going
Civil Disobedience In Klamath Falls Is Non-Violent

By Liz Bowen

KLAMATH FALLS—Courage to stand for freedom was exhibited here on August 29, 2001. One-by-one American citizens climbed the newly constructed wooden ladder, positioned over the chainlink gate, and stepped into no-man's land.

At first the air was hushed as if with reverence. It gave strength to solidify and unite—to come together as one. Soon more and more became anxious to stand on the liberty-proving ground. Hymns like Onward Christian Soldier and Amazing Grace were sung, then patriotic songs filled the air, and finally the national anthem brought tears to a self-respecting people.

It was a step towards liberating all people from the yoke of federal bureaucracy.

Make no mistake, each individual knew they were crossing the no-trespassing line and defying the United States federal government.

After an hour of informative speeches and offered options, the 300 individuals knew they were taking a stand against tyranny. Each was ready to be arrested if need be. The immediate issue was, what would the federal officials and local police department do? Although Klamath County Sheriff Tim Evinger had not arrested any previous trespassers and stoutly stated he believed the local residents had been sorely mistreated by the federal agencies, trust in his protection was being questioned.

Although law enforcement officers were abundant and in plain view, including a police vehicle with officer observing from the opposite dry hillside, none moved to stop the intruders from breaching the barb-wire and chainlink fence.

The fence is the boundary between Klamath Falls city property and what the Bureau of Reclamation (BoR) claims is its land.

The headgates were protected by Bureau of Land Management (BLM) Rangers, and so were not broken into, which would have been a fifth time since the BoR stopped 90 percent of irrigation water to 1400 farmers in April.

The farms are the 1906 Reclamation Klamath Project. So water did not flow into the "A" canal from the full-to-the-brim Upper Klamath Lake on August 29. The lake is a natural lake, 75,000 acres large.

The farmers and many of the 70,000 residents in the Klamath Basin believe they have been betrayed by their federal government.

Many hold deeds of water rights. The water is the Oregon State's water, yet federal agencies are claiming they hold the supreme power. They are keeping water levels high for three species of fish that have been questionably listed with the Endangered Species Act. Unfortunately, there is also a natural drought striking the area.

Before the breaching of the fence, Barbara Martin, a local realtor, explained how and why the no-man's land and the headgate area was actually now owned by the irrigators. Irrigation districts had long since paid for the cost of the canal system project, and under a U.S. Code should have been considered the irrigators.

"They are the trespassers" accused Martin of the BLM Rangers and BoR officials. Some of the frustration at a federally-made drought to 230,000 acres of farmland and wildlife refuges was vented peacefully. It may be considered a small victory, but it was a victory. The federal officers kept their guns in their holsters and empty hands in plain sight. Farmers, grandparents, business people, and church goers chose to push the civil disobedience envelope a little farther.

At the narrow cement bridge above the headgates of "A" canal, the four BLM Rangers stood shoulder-to-shoulder and would not move nor speak.

The protesters handed papers to the Rangers that claimed they were the true owners of the headgates. They demanded their water.

Several individuals told the Rangers that they were the trespassers. One woman asked them if they had any compassion for the families without water. She said she considered them equal to the Nazi Gestapo.

Pat Thompson took down each Ranger's name and officer number.

Thompson had attended the liberty party at the risk of losing her job. She had been told that if she was arrested, she would be fired.

"I'm an American, first" she told the Pioneer Press.

"A lot of good people shed blood for this U.S. Constitution" said Ronald Powers of Klamath Falls. His family moved to the area in 1857. He believes the U.S. Constitution is being trampled upon by the Endangered Species Act that puts fish above people. The BLM Rangers remained silent, but one did produce a key to the lock holding the huge chain around the boundary gate. When the gate was opened, the protesters removed it from its hinges, symbolically stating that it would not be closed again.

The patriot protesters had gained the 100 feet between the canal and the chainlink. The Freedom Headgate Encampment began moving its headquarters from the other side of the fence.

Earlier, during the hour of speeches, two men had addressed the crowd of 500. They had been asked to attend by Martin. Both had served as sheriffs and had stood up to federal officials. Both had handcuffed federal officials. Martin hoped that they could offer information to Sheriff Evinger, who had found himself knee-deep in a very sticky situation.

Rob Heard from Red Bluff spoke after Martin. While he was sheriff of Tehama County, he had been able to work well with federal officials, but told the Pioneer Press later that he had "Memorandums of Understanding" that gave him supreme law enforcement power. When IRS and ATR agents entered his county to do business without first approaching Sheriff Heard, they were arrested.

Heard told the crowd that they must stand behind their sheriff; and that Evinger had been questioning if they would stand behind him.

Then Richard Mack spoke. Mack was sheriff in Graham County, Arizona. In 1994, he challenged the Brady Bill. The lawsuit went to the Supreme Court and he won against the Clinton administration and Attorney General Janet Reno.

Mack told the group that the U.S. Constitution is a great document and should be used as the supreme law of the land. In the U.S. Constitution, he said that the sheriff of a county is the highest law enforcement official because he is elected by his people.

"We took a very hard hand" with the federal agencies, said Heard. "We made arrests on IRS agents. We ran the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) out of the county. Heard also told the audience that Sheriff Evinger was "worried about bodies that will be there with him" if and when he confronts the Rangers.

There was a faction in the crowd that wanted the Rangers arrested by the sheriff. Evinger was not at the 4 PM meeting. He was called, by cell phone, and did not answer.

But after his constituents had breached the boundary gate, he arrived along with several other police vehicles.

He walked through the gate and was heralded a hero's welcome.

"Tim for governor" was shouted, as he was forgiven for not arriving for the speech and decision-making meeting earlier.

He reiterated that his job is to "keep the peace". It was not his job to decide how to take back the headgates.

Public safety is his top concern, even over enforcing laws, he said.

"Thank you for coming" and "God bless you" was told to Evinger as one after another crowded around him to shake his hand.

Their sheriff had shown up to support them.

He responded with "Thank you for keeping this peaceful."

The protesters safe-guarded themselves and kept the few who would have liked to push the civil disobedience a bit further in check. One tense moment was when an older man, a World War II veteran, hobbled over the board barricade with his cane. He growled and complained to the Rangers that it was the people's water and they were dastardly in keeping it from the farmers.

Dinner of hotdogs, steak, and beans was moved inside the headgate chainlink fence, and soon everyone, except the Rangers, were socializing.

Later Heard told the Pioneer Press that he was proud of the freedom-lovers that day.

"They kept their dignity" he said of their peaceful protest.

Mack too was impressed with the positive action of the protesters.

"It was beautiful, touching, as one by one they climbed the fence to freedom" said Mack. "There were no more fence-sitting."

Sheriff Evinger told his people that he will need a court order from a judge before he can demand that the federal Rangers leave.

He told the group and the media that was present that he believed the federal government has not followed the law correctly when it shut off the water to his community. Sheriff Evinger said that he wanted to make sure that the law was followed correctly in getting the problem fixed.

The real question is: did other citizens throughout the United States recognize the significance of these 300 individuals who chose to exercise their liberty in a dry, arid, dust-filled basin way out west?

When matters such as these are handled with wisdom and intelligence, miracles can occur as people UNITE and TAP that Energy of a common cause pursued in a peaceful manner. Obviously the fight is not over yet for these farmers, but the last thing the feds want is for public attention to be drawn to the farmers' cause. Too bad. The Truth is being spread far and wide. The end result will be the sharing of knowledge that helps other communities deal successfully with similar federal shenanigans.

WHAT HAPPENED TO MARS' MOONS?

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.citiesoflight.net/kadjina.html>> August 2001: [quoting]

Lady Kadjina Speaks, August 19, 2001

This was "received" from Light Beings.

Wayne: Can you tell us the nature of Mars' moon, Phobos? Is it hollow; is it a station for other civilizations?

The basic answer here is "yes". There are many hollow moons and planets and several of them have been totally refurbished. In other words, we have recycled them. Tetros, for example, is a dead Earth that has been refurbished. This is a most difficult concept for you who are humans to even begin to comprehend. When on the inside of Tetros, there are beaches, and you look up at the sky and you see a Sun and you see stars at night, yet you are living on the inside of Tetros and not on the surface.

In this concept, we refer you to Vera Stanley Adler and her concept of macrocosm (which is "out there" in the universe of time and space) versus the microcosm, wherein her consciousness became miniscule and she went inside her body and sat down upon a rock and looked up at the Sun, which in reality was one of her internal organs. She found inside her body mighty devas of her different organs and chakra systems.

You have within your physical body a Sun, Moon, stars and planets in direct proportion to those same suns, moons, and stars of the outer world, the cosmos.

So yes, Phobos is hollow, and yes, it is being used by essentially etheric beings. Now, keep in mind that there is hollow space inside planet Earth that is inhabited by civilizations that are etheric in nature. Those humans with etheric vision can see them and, through astral projection, interact with them. At times, third-dimensional humans penetrate underground areas, but only to certain levels. And those humans with 3rd-dimensional consciousness do not connect with 4th-dimensional beings. At times they might get a glimpse out of the corner of their eye of a 4th-dimensional being in much the same way that some of you sense a presence in the room with you that is a disincarnate being.

Wayne: On August 20, there are reports from amateur astronomers that the moons of Mars, Phobos and Deimos, have apparently vanished <http://www.yowusa.com/Archive/August2001/Phobos_and_Deimos_Have_Vanished/phobos_and_deimos_have_vanished.htm>. Can you tell us what is going on with these moons at the present time? And a reader wants to know where are Phobos & Deimos? Why did a part on the Mars' Orbiter happen to break just now? Why can't we get any recent pictures of Mars?

Well, as we've said before, there are dead planets hollowed out on the inside, that we've recycled them. And as we've said before, Phobos is one. And as Tetros is propelled as a spacecraft, so are these others that you are mentioning here.

And as for the Mars Orbiter breaking, it is another way of "full undisclosure". As we continuously say, we intend to do overrides. The game-playing is to stop; the time for full government accountability to the peoples of the world has come. No longer will the Galactic Federation put up with monkey business. The governments of the world have said to the peoples of the world: "We have agreed to full disclosure." And we of the Galactic Federation are the project underwriters. We intend to see to it that they keep their agreements. And so when they say that their Mars Orbiter has broken and is incapable of taking photographs, we take the newly found Phobos and move it. But it's not gone. It will reappear in a totally different astronomical configuration, totally out of any type of orbit.

These hollowed crafts are propelled. They can go pretty much where we want them to go. Tetros at one point in time was the object behind Hale-Bopp and is now gone from view pretty much; so is Phobos. But both will reappear. You now are aware of us; you know that we exist; you know that the Sun Cruisers exist; you know that Mother Ships exist; and more than half of the peoples of the developed countries of the world know these things as well. And they consider their governments that are being so secretive to be silly.

[End quoting]

I have yet to see on the Internet where any professional astronomers will admit that these two moons are "missing", but amateurs have been trying to get them to admit that such has occurred.

Is this source of information credible? Time will tell. It is nonetheless provocative food for thought and notably consistent with the messages from Hatonn and Sananda in this issue of The SPECTRUM. They suggest strongly that time is short for governmental continuation of the game-playing of what was referred to above as "full UN-disclosure" of the truth about extraterrestrials to the public. Whether through the medium of crop circles or otherwise, this is the time of the Great Awakening, and so The

PRICE OF GAS NEAR $2 REFINERY WOES BLAMED

From the INTERNET, <http://www.freep.com/news/metro/gas28_20010828.htm>, by Jennifer Dixon, Free Press, 8/28/01: [quoting]

Hitting the road for the Labor Day weekend keeps getting more expensive for Michigan travelers, with average gas prices at $1.72 a gallon, up nearly 14 cents from last week and 22.8 cents higher than a year ago.

An oil industry expert blames two recent refinery disruptions for helping tighten supplies across the Midwest and pushing the cost of a gallon of gasoline toward $2.

Based on a survey of 300 stations, AAA Michigan said Monday that the average price for a gallon of unleaded self-serve gas was $1.72, up 13.7 cents from last week and 34.2 cents higher than three weeks ago. In metro Detroit, the average price was $1.65, an increase of 12.7 cents from a week ago.

Brian Hopps, vice president of supply and trading at Atlas Oil Co. in Taylor, said prices could go up by another dime today or Wednesday as the Midwest market adjusts to a disruption last week at a Conoco Inc. refinery in Ponca City, Oklahoma.

Prices in the Midwest were already climbing because of an August 14 explosion that closed a Citgo Petroleum Corporation refinery near Chicago that produced about 100,000 barrels of gas a day.

A Conoco refinery spokesman in Ponca City declined to say whether the 10-minute "minor upset" in one of the refinery's units had affected production.

Recent tensions in the Middle East and tropical storms that have the potential to threaten oil producing areas and refineries are also adding to the overall increase in gas costs, Hopps said.

"I don't even want to guess where gasoline prices could go if we had another major supply disruption in the Midwest anytime soon" Hopps said.

AAA Michigan spokesman Jim Rink said the refining industry is stretched thin and "any disruption or shutdown has big consequences throughout the supply chain. That's why you're seeing this kind of volatility—when prices jump 10 cents at a time or more, every week."

Such disruptions couldn't come at a worse time, when demand for gas is expected to be high over the Labor Day weekend.

[End quoting]

Many people are catching-on to this tactic by the "poor" big-oil companies to garner even higher profits. The excuses are always the same and the increases always “just happen” to occur when the demand is predictably high, like over a long holiday weekend.

The real question is how long people are going to put up with such blatant manipulation for pure greed. If everyone made a determined effort to conserve gasoline for a few weeks, the resulting glut would throw the oil industry into a panic tailspin. Moreover, perhaps a few independent investigators will even be moved to take a closer look at these refinery “accidents” that are blamed for the increases. When such unprejudiced snooping was conducted in California (remember, the same excuses were given for a large part of the so-called power crisis), it was discovered that the power plant “accidents” responsible for “necessary” shutdowns were very well engineered and timed events. What a surprise.

And speaking of predictable surprises:

ETHANOL GUZZLES ENERGY SAYS NEW STUDY

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.rense.com>>, 8/15/01: [quoting]

By Farhad Manjoo <<http://www.Wired.com>>

During the past several months, as lawmakers and energy experts have warned of a looming energy crisis, one alternative to gasoline that has been considered is ethanol, an alcohol fuel produced from corn.

But a new study by David Pimentel, a professor of ecology at Cornell University, threatens to nip some of the ethanol excitement in the kernel.

Pimentel’s report, to be published in the 2001 edition of the Encyclopedia For Physical Sciences And Technology in September, says that producing ethanol is more trouble than it’s worth: 131,000 British Thermal Units (BTUs) of energy are required to produce one gallon of ethanol, but a gallon will only give you about 77,000 BTUs of fuel energy.

In other words, producing ethanol results in a net loss of energy! [End quoting]

Is this a surprise to any of you who see the Larger Picture? As long as the big oil companies can maneuver themselves into positions to profit from this “alternative” fuel, do you think they would ever be the ones to tell you the truth? This is just another decoy to keep we-the-people distracted from genuine alternative power sources—some of which just might, horror of horrors, happen to be Free Energy! Be sure to see the great overview article on this subject elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM.

UNCLE SAM WANTS TO SEE YOUR GENES

From POPULAR MECHANICS magazine, September 2001: [quoting]

As part of a national health exam, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta is compiling a massive genetic database of Americans.

Mobile, state-of-the-art medical centers—equipped to test all facets of health from cardiovascular to dental—are currently traveling the country.

In addition to conducting medical exams and interviews of about 5000 randomly selected people, the mobile centers are gathering DNA.

The CDC says that the anonymous exams will provide a national sample for future genetic testing and help set future health policies. In the past, researchers had to wait years for similar data. The project will also provide annual snapshots of the nation’s health.

[End quoting]

And if you believe that propaganda, we have a bridge for sale cheap. Considering the vast array of secret governmental genetic research and engineering going on, we can only guess at the true motivations behind the noble façade stated by the CDC.

CONGRESS FIGHTS OVER CLINTON HEALTH ID NUMBER

Excerpted from the INTERNET, <Newsmax.com>, 6/16/01: [quoting]

Eight years after then-President Bill Clinton’s failed plan for putting the federal government in charge of healthcare, the foes of the ill-fated idea are trying to roll back a major feature of the Clinton plan that made it into the federal code—a health care identifying number to be assigned to all Americans.

The number was crucial to the Clinton plan of centralizing all individual healthcare information in a collective government database. In 1996, Congress helped that cause along through a provision in the Health Insurance Portability And Accountability Act concerning patient privacy protections.

The law requires that unique health identifiers be assigned to every individual, healthcare provider, employer, and health plan to make electronic transactions easier.

Though Congress has since denied funding for the part of the project dealing with individual identifiers, what worries Rep. Ron Paul (R-TX) and his allies is that the requirement is still on the books, so to speak.

“We think it’s an invasion of privacy, and we think it’s a number that’s going to be abused like the Social Security number has been” said Paul’s spokesman, Jeff Deist.

That’s why Paul recently introduced a bill that would repeal parts of HIPAA calling for identifying numbers. It would also prevent federal tax dollars from being used to construct or maintain a federal healthcare database.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey (R-TX) recently said he would support an effort to repeal the provision this year. “I’m very worried about this” he said, “and we’ll continue to work on that.”

“But one of the things I’ve learned the hard way is, don’t predict what will be in the bill” Armey cautioned.

Paul fears that future Congresses may not be successful in staving off such a national ID system, so he wants to act now.

“We’re just trying to act proactively, before that happens, prohibit it” said Deist.

“It’s been proposed by folks in both the Senate and the House in the past—‘Let’s have a health ID number for everybody so that we can track and fight disease’” he said. “We don’t accept that explanation.”

In fact, Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) is getting ready to introduce a bill that would do just that. [End quoting]

Considering the possible implications of the immediate previous item of this News Desk, and the fact that courageous researchers like Dr. Len Horowitz have shown beyond a doubt our government’s secret agenda to shower upon the public all kinds of purposely engineered, population reducing medical atrocities, Ron Paul’s position—especially the revealing clues he gives us that are accented in bold type—are very wise indeed.

And as if that isn’t enough to contend with, how about the following item:

MANDATORY AIDS VACCINE

From the INTERNET, “Ingri Cassel” <vaclib@coldreams.com>, 8/6/01: [quoting]

Dear Members and Friends,

The following press release is urgent. If we do not speak up NOW, our government will force you and me to participate in their AIDS vaccine studies! Your right to abstain from this unscientific and soon to be forced medical experimentation is at stake.

The VacLib Letter, Summer 2001, was sent out on August 2. If you have not received one, please let me know. — Ingri

By Cliff Kincaid, director of the Committee to Protect Medical Freedom.

The United Nations, which just had a big conference on AIDS, has a plan to infect the American people with the AIDS virus through what they call an “AIDS vaccine”. They say this will stop the epidemic and “protect” us. They first want to use these AIDS shots on children and our military personnel. No one will be spared if their plan goes through. One AIDS vaccine could be on the market soon.

Back in the 1970s, the government used a Swine Flu vaccine on millions of people, only to find out later that it was causing health problems and even death. The program was cancelled—but only after 50 million people got their shots.

We can’t take a chance on an AIDS vaccine. Millions could be infected before they realize they made a mistake. [That’s either a very kind or a very naive way to describe the hidden agenda—as a “mistake”!]

The Committee to Protect Medical Freedom <www.protectmedicalfreedom.com> has uncovered evidence that newborn babies are being given AIDS shots in federal experiments underway RIGHT NOW. The committee released a 25,000-word report examining the role of the U.N., the U.S. Government, and billionaire Bill Gates in pushing the AIDS vaccine. [How better to “pay your dues” and get the feds to quit harassing your corporate conquests!] This report is available on the committee’s website.

With few exceptions, our media won’t tell you the awful truth. They tell us that the recent U.N. conference on AIDS was designed to spend more money on poor victims of the disease in far away places such as Africa. But buried in the official U.N. declaration was that they want to “accelerate” the development of AIDS vaccines and “facilitate rapid access” to them around the world, including HERE in the United States. That means the U.N. will pressure our government—the Centers for Disease Control—to require that everybody take an AIDS shot.

So if you thought AIDS didn’t affect you or your loved ones, please think again. If AIDS doesn’t kill you, this AIDS vaccine will. The AIDS vaccine gives people a form of the virus that causes AIDS on the assumption that we won’t develop the entire deadly disease.

Experts and scientists at the Committee to Protect Medical Freedom conference on June 20 said this is just too risky and dangerous. The conference included Barbara Loe Fisher of the National Vaccine Information Center, Dr. Howard Urnovitz, and attorney Walter Kyle, who explained how contaminated polio vaccines may have led to cancers and AIDS in humans. A 2-and-1/2 hour tape of the event is available for $34.95 (shipping & handling included) by calling 1-800-787-5246.

We need to encourage Congress to hold hearings into the HIV/AIDS vaccine project. Please contact: 202-225-5074. Ask for Beth Clay of the House Committee on Government Reform. Ask that Congressman Dan Burton conduct hearings into the HIV/AIDS vaccine project. Call: 202-224-4721. Ask for John Bonsell. Ask that Senator James Inhofe, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Readiness and Management Support, conduct hearings into plans by the U.S. Military HIV Research Program to use an AIDS vaccine on the troops. Call: 202-225-2132. Ask for Dr. William Duncan. Ask that Congressman Ernest Istook seek hearings into the HIV/AIDS vaccine project.

We must draw the line against the U.N. on the matter of a mandatory AIDS vaccine. We can avoid AIDS if we just live a normal lifestyle. But we may not be able to avoid their AIDS vaccine!

Ingri Cassel, President, Vaccination Liberation, Idaho Chapter, P.O. Box 1444, Coeur d’Alene, ID 83816 (208) 255-2307/ 765-8421 <vaclib@coldreams.com>.

“The Right to Know, The Freedom to Abstain” <www.vaclib.org>. [End quoting]

Considering the worrisome pattern of the last three news items above, how serious do YOU think is the sneaky agenda of the crooks in high places to advance their population reduction agenda of we “useless eaters”? Go back and reread Congressman Ron Paul’s clues (in bold type) in the previous news item for a good picture of the fight that the few honest leaders are contending with on our behalf.

Here’s another one to trap both parents and children:

NY MAYOR GIULIANI: NO HEPATITIS-B VACCINE, NO SCHOOL

Excerpted from the INTERNET, <http://www.rense.com>, 8/29/01: [quoting]

Mayor Giuliani is urging parents of 100,000 seventh-graders to make sure their kids get Hepatitis-B vaccination shots before heading back to school next week—or risk getting kicked out of class.

“Students who are not vaccinated against Hepatitis-B won’t be allowed to attend school” Giuliani said in a public-service announcement.

A 1998 federal law requires all children to be immunized for Hepatitis-B before entering kindergarten.

City Health Department spokeswoman Sandra Mullin said the officials are playing “catch up” with vaccinating older children who haven’t been vaccinated.

Giuliani and health officials stressed that the series of Hepatitis-B shots—given over a four-to six-month period—is covered by health insurance.

Vaccination requirements have been a source of controversy from a small number of parents who refuse to have their kids immunized for religious or medical reasons. Some [very wise] parents fear that the vaccines are more dangerous than the diseases.

[End quoting]

Well, those wise parents are correct—and for more diabolical reasons than some of them even suspect! We presented good advice from Dr. Len Horowitz, on how to go about avoiding these nasty vaccinations ON RELIGIOUS GROUNDS, in an article titled “Vaccination: An UnGodly Practice” back in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.

And speaking of Dr. Horowitz, how about the following two items:

WILDFIRES LIKELY LINKED TO ENERGY INDUSTRY PLOT

From RUMOR MILL NEWS (RUMILLS),

Wildfires Likely Linked to Energy Industry Plot, Reports Esteemed Health Scientist

NEWS RELEASE: No. 36-DIA/15

Date Mailed: August 22, 2001

For Immediate Release

Contact: Elaine Zacky 208/265-2575; 800/336-9266.

Reports Esteemed Health Scientist: Incriminating Photos Evidence Need For Official Investigations

Sandpoint, ID—As smoke and flames from several Western wildfires draw nearer to his home, award winning health science writer, Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz, is marshalling a grassroots “firefight”. He is e-mailing photographs evidencing possible white-collar arsons, to America’s leading legislators, media sources, and activist groups.

The incriminating photos raise the spectre of an apparent U.S. Department of Energy (DoE) and Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) plot to help energy industrialists raise electrical rates, and gain political support for new nuclear power plant constructions, by setting off “dry lightning” using advanced electromagnetic technologies.

One such lightning generator is believed to be based in northern Idaho, around which wildfires have been clustered for the past two record-breaking seasons. In an effort to stop the swell of blazes believed to be more often generated by greedy conspirators than natural lightning strikes, Dr. Horowitz—a Harvard trained public health investigator and bestselling author of several books in the government cover-up genre—is calling for congressional and independent investigators to study new evidence linking much of the current and past year’s forest fires to nearby military and DoE operations that evidence ties to atomic energy industrialists and the AEC.

The telling photographs, posted on his publisher’s website at <<http://www.tetrahedron.org>>, include ones taken in Arco, a southern Idaho town adjacent to the DoE-managed National Engineering & Environmental Laboratory (INEEL)—a major nuclear depository, testing facility, and nuclear submarine training center. Arco, coincidentally the name of the petroleum company principally controlled, until recently, by the British oligarchy, proudly promotes itself as “the first city in the world lighted by atomic power”.

Additional photos were taken in northern Idaho, from Lake Pend Oreille, home to the U.S. Navy’s satellite-controlled “CutThroat” submarine, and the estate of Mr. Klaus Groenke, a leading German-American real estate and banking industrialist with high level diplomatic connections, including a trustee post at the American Academy in Berlin, joining Dr. Henry Kissinger, the diplomatic outpost’s honorary chairman and cofounder.

Mr. Groenke’s estate boasts a series of triangulated satellite dishes, extensive antennae arrays, and curious metal “art”. Included here is a huge weather vane with three pivoting lightning strikes, or inverted “Ss” identical to the symbols used by the Nazi SS during their reign of terror. Curiously, INEEL’s logo shows the same symbols decoded with the alphanumeric common to the British Secret Service (MI-6) to denote “666”.

The coding method, and the Groenke estate itself, is described by Dr. Horowitz and neighbors as seemingly “out of a James Bond, Ian Flemming, novel”. Across the yard stands a more prominent red metal sculpture that electromagnetic engineering expert, Al Bielek, previously with the government’s top-secret Montauk Project, says satisfies the triangulated pyramidal design of a “delta-T” energy transmitter.

Suspiciously, all of these structures lie midway on a mapped axis between the Navy base and a suspected lightning generator encased in aluminum. National Forest Service (NFS) officials dismiss this building on “Lunch Peak” as a “fire-watch station”. It has, however, been reported by several area residents to be curiously associated with bizarre lightning events and stupefied animal behavior.

“The Lunch Peak/Navy station axis bisects a triangle made by three microwave ‘Electronic Sites’ according to NFS maps” Dr. Horowitz explained. “These intriguing elements provide electromagnetic frequency generating capabilities consistent with a long history of Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) experiments in weather modification, earthquake production, and lightning generation.”

Extensive background on these programs is detailed in Dr. Horowitz’s book, Death In The Air: Globalism, Terrorism, And Toxic Warfare (Tetrahedron Publishing Group, 2001; 1-888-508-4787). [End quoting]

Longtime readers know that we have been presenting an ongoing array of information on this matter, showing evidence of a wide variety of high-tech shenanigans going on in this area, including the front-page feature “‘Dr. Jekyll’ Or ‘Mr. Hyde’: Which Is FEMA? Bizarre Wildfires Expose Sinister Agenda” last year at this time, in the September 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.

There is no doubt about the sinister, engineered nature of what is going on. The only REAL question is: “Why?” Several possible answers have presented themselves, including what Dr. Horowitz has uncovered above. Another longtime speculation is the following:

FIRES BEING USED TO RUN PEOPLE OFF LAND?

Excerpted from RUMOR MILL NEWS (RUMILLS), <<http://www.rumormillnews.com>>, 8/17/01: [quoting]

A Little Story About Fires: Someone Playing With Matches?

500,000 Acres Blazing Out West!

Some of you may, or may not have read my last statement about fires being used to run people off their land and make them dependent on government RELOCATION and all the attendant controls.

KNOW THAT “THEY” ARE DETERMINED TO HERD THE SHEEPLE INTO THE CORRALS known as “cities”, in order to keep them under the BEAST CAMERAS with FACE RECOGNITION SOFTWARE which, by the way, are NOW BEING USED in selected schools around the nation, AS WE PALAVER (rhymes with CADAVER), where the KASH is being removed from the schools and the children are being FORCED by the BEAST of REVELATION, to pay for their lunch by stepping in front of the BEAST and SAYING THEIR NAME. That is just SO “NEAT”, AIN’T IT? Pray for those babies STILL in the PUBLIC SCHOOLS! — James for Jesus

As an addendum to the New York Times article below, I want to interject a story about the (in May, I believe) fires in North-Central Florida.

A friend living there related this to me about the recent 50,000 acre fire: He lives on the EAST side of the Suwannee River, about 13 miles in nearly a STRAIGHT east-west line from the 50,000-acre fire site. During the time this fire was burning on the WEST side of the WIDE Suwannee River, ANOTHER fire BROKE OUT on the EAST side of the Suwannee River, approximately 13(!) miles STRAIGHT SOUTH of said friend’s house. It was fairly bad, but nothing compared to the 50,000-acre deal. Over the radio in the area, friend said that vague/brief mention was made by forestry investigators to the effect that it looked like the BIG BOY 50,000-acre fire MIGHT have been “set”, and the smaller large one on the WEST SIDE of the river almost totally ignored, as to where it came from.

I pulled up an area forestry map on the Internet, and it didn’t take long to discern that sparks from the BIG BOY FIRE certainly WOULD NOT HAVE jumped a gap of several miles between where the fire was and the WEST BANK, PLUS the 1/4-mile width of the river, and THEN travel South about 13 miles below the southern point of the BIG FIRE. Said friend further stated that the brief mention of inference of arson was done away with in subsequent broadcasts which were keeping the public “briefed” on the status of the fires.

The New York Times Company, August 17, 2001: Fire Officials Call For Air Reinforcements Across West, By Judith Berck Leavenworth, Washington, Aug. 16—With more than half a million acres ablaze across the West, fire management officials began calling in reinforcements today from the military....

[End quoting]

The sinister, engineered agenda behind these fires would not be so plausible if it weren’t for the first-hand accounts of those in the affected areas describing lightning (and other electrical phenomena) that is so bizarre it resembles nothing any locals have ever seen before. Moreover, said electrical activity is often seen nearby the kinds of secret facilities as was previously mentioned by Dr. Horowitz.

hours writing content, finding or creating graphics, cursing at tables, juggling lists and learning HTML and possibly even CSS, Java, DHTML, and countless other things.

My website is uniquely mine. It is a product of my imagination, my sweat, my brain, and my frustration. I have spent many sleepless nights and countless long days adding just the perfect content to communicate exactly what I wanted to say.

Now Microsoft has come along with a "brilliant" idea. They want to piggyback their own selected content on top of that work. The idea is to have their products (such as Internet Explorer and the Office suite) scan web pages and documents for key words and phrases known to Microsoft. Any of these that are found will be underlined with a special purple "squiggle" to show that they are "smart tags".

Anyone viewing the page could then click on the smart tag and be transported to a Microsoft website for more information. For example, you could write a web page about the Grand Canyon, and the phrase "Grand Canyon" could be underlined, allowing your visitors to check out the <Expedia.Com> page about how to book travel to the area.

Why does Microsoft want to do this? It's really very simple—to make an incredible amount of money. Look at it this way: Microsoft suddenly would have at their disposal every single document viewed with a new Microsoft product as a potential advertisement. Wow. That's power. No, this is an understatement of incredible magnitude. This is more than power—this is the harnessing of everyone's creative energy into a huge global advertising tool. It totally staggers the imagination.

You could be looking at a newspaper site, reading an article about train travel, and click on numerous links to Microsoft sites (and presumably third party sites which paid Microsoft for the privilege) selling train-related products and services. If you read a classified ad on that same newspaper site selling an automobile, the word "Cadillac" could be underlined with a smart tag linking to a Cadillac dealer.

Content (the tags) are added dynamically to web pages by the browser without the permission of the person who created the pages (the webmaster or author). While strictly speaking this might not violate copyright laws (but it might be considered vandalism), it sure is rude. In fact, most people would consider it highly unethical. [But, as was pointed out in the earlier News Desk item on vaccinations, Bill Gates will get away with such unethical behavior so long as he "does his part" to support the New World Order's agenda—which he does through supporting large-scale vaccination programs.]

As an example, suppose you bought a book through a book club. Before it was shipped to you, someone opened the book and examined every single page, adding comments here and there about how you could purchase this or get more information about that.

You would be livid if you were the publisher of the book, and you'd almost certainly return it if you were the customer. [End quoting]

This is a nightmare, scam, and highway robbery if they don't pay you for the privilege—which they certainly wouldn't—for the rights to deface/modify and "tag" your web page. Taggers are arrested when defacing property all the time by your neighborhood cops. There is no basic difference—except Microsoft stands to reap a fortune.

There is one sure way to solve this arrogance, and that is to refuse to give them your money—the only thing that really speaks to Bill Gates.

And while we're on the subject of Microsoft's unethical shenanigans, how about this one:

MICROSOFT WON'T SUPPORT PLUG-INS

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, for 8/24/01: [quoting]

Microsoft has quietly disclosed that the latest versions of its Internet Explorer browser will not support Netscape-style plug-ins—the software bridges that extend the capabilities of a browser, letting a user play audio or video clips, for example.

The move means many websites that use popular programs like Apple's QuickTime won't work right with Windows unless developers change the code to meet Microsoft's requirements.

Microsoft said it made the decision a few weeks ago for "security and technical reasons" but critics called it the latest example of the software giant promoting its own technology to the exclusion of others.

The main program to be affected is Apple's QuickTime. [End quoting]

This is, once again, Microsoft's usual, unethical tactic to squeeze out the competition. Guess whose products you'll need to use to make your audio and video capabilities work?

impulsive violence, allergies, asthma, diabetes, Crohn's disease, intestinal disorders (all conditions rare before mass vaccination), are just some of the vaccine-associated disorders. But what to do about these damaged children? Aren't autism and related conditions permanent?

I always thought so until I met one woman who is very active in the anti-vaccination movement. "My child was severely, profoundly autistic due to a DPT shot" she told me. "We were told he was permanently brain-damaged. Today no one believes me; he's a normal, healthy child."

I was stunned. "What did you do?" I asked.

"I left no stone unturned. I eventually contacted the New England School of Homeopathy and Dr. Paul Herscu, an educator, speaker, and writer. At our consultation he said he wanted to videotape our son. I said, 'No way; I don't want his horrible condition recorded.' But Dr. Herscu insisted. I'm so glad he did, because today no one believes he was ever autistic."

"He used homeopathy?"

"Yes, classical homeopathy, and also cranial osteopathy. We also did some color therapy for his vision."

This was a revelation to me. I called Dr. Herscu: "I've seen about 400 adults and children with autism, and I think maybe 3 or 4 did not respond favorably" he told me. He also helps those suffering from other forms of vaccine damage.

When I speak at seminars, I'm often asked about what to do for vaccine-damaged children. In addition to chiropractic care (including cranial work), I recommend classical homeopathy, craniosacral therapy, and/or cranial osteopathy, and nutritional work.

We see too many damaged children, and no potential source of healing should be ignored.

The New England School of Homeopathy is at <www.nesh.com>. Dr. Herscu can be reached at 860-763-1225. The cranial osteopath my friend used is Dr. Mary Banyo, 212-765-6474. Both Herscu and Banyo may know someone in your area (or it may be worthwhile to have your patient travel to them). A craniosacral practitioner can be located at <www.upledger.com>. A classical homeopath in my area is Peter Prociuk, MD, at 610-701-5702, who also works with autistic children. <http://www.whale.to/vaccine/damage.html>

Dr. Herscu is excellent. For other excellent classical homeopaths see the list I maintain <http://www.nccn.net/~wwwithin/STEVELIST.htm> Aim for the ones in bold.

MORE MADNESS: TOXIC VACCINE ORDERED USED ON BABIES

From the INTERNET, <http://www.rense.com>, 8/6/01: [quoting]

By Rosie Waterhouse, The Sunday Times, London

The Department of Health has told doctors they must use stocks of a mercury-based vaccine for infants, even though it is being phased out for safety reasons.

The department is supplying the brand with mercury despite fears that it could be a cause of autism and other disorders. The decision flies in the face of European guidelines, which warn that it would be prudent to avoid such vaccines for children.

Two years ago medicine regulators in America and Europe recommended the mercury-containing preservative thiomersal should be phased out of vaccines “within the shortest possible time frame”.

This followed an announcement by the United States Federal Drugs Administration

(FDA) that accumulated mercury in vaccines given to babies under six months in America exceeded safety limits set by the Environmental Protection Agency.

In a related US study, researchers from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found a “statistically significant” association between thiomersal in vaccines and children with problems such as attention deficit disorder and language learning delays.

In June last year the European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products (EMA) said: “For vaccination in infants and toddlers, as a precautionary measure it would be prudent to promote the general use of vaccines without thiomersal and other mercurial preservatives. Moreover, the use of the available thiomersal-free vaccines should be recommended for vaccination of newborns.”

Mercury-free vaccines are available to the Department of Health but last month all GPs and clinics, which inoculate more than 600,000 babies a year, were told all orders for the combined diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (DTP) and Hib vaccine (which [supposedly] protects against a form of meningitis) would be met with a product containing thiomersal, which is almost 50% mercury. This was “in order to make good use of the current and future stocks available”.

The previous policy was to supply a DTP Hib vaccine, Infanrix Hib, which does not contain mercury.

The decision will outrage parents already concerned that vaccines may damage their children. “It beggars belief” said Isabella Thomas, from Brighton, whose son Michael is autistic. “To replace a vaccine which contains no mercury, which must be safer, with one which contains a toxic substance, to use up stocks, is disgraceful and irresponsible.”

Celia Forrest, from north London, who has an autistic son, is to write in protest to Tony Blair, Alan Milburn, the health secretary, and David Hinchliffe, chairman of the Commons health committee, demanding an inquiry. “The time has now come for the politicians to investigate this scandal” she said.

When asked why it was not promoting the mercury-free vaccine Infanrix, the health department said: “The joint committee on vaccination and immunisation has decided Infanrix is not as effective as the other.”

A more effective mercury-free vaccine than Infanrix was now being developed and would be made available on the NHS once it came on the UK market, it said. GPs could request a mercury-free vaccine now “for specific patients on clinical grounds. We would stress the recommendation [from the EMA] was as a precautionary measure.”

<http://www.sunday-times.co.uk/news/pages/sti/2001/08/05/stinwenws02001.html>? [End quoting]

I hope by now our readers know how generally risky are ALL vaccinations. And it’s not simply a matter of lack of knowledge or incompetence about the manufacture of “safe” vaccinations. Rather, it is a matter of purposeful, calculated disbursement of “poisonous” materials as part of the much more subtle New World Order depopulation agenda.

STEM CELL THERAPY REPAIRS A HEART

From the INTERNET, <http://www.brojon.com/index.html>, 8/25/01: [quoting]

By Hannah Cleaver and David Derbyshire

Doctors have patched-up a patient’s failing heart using stem cells taken from his bone marrow, it was disclosed yesterday.

In the first operation of its kind, bone marrow stem cells were removed from a 46-year-old man’s pelvis and injected into arteries near his heart. The cells should have developed into the constituents of blood. Instead, they migrated to areas damaged by a heart attack and turned into healthy muscle cells which began to beat.

The operation highlights the potential for adult stem cells as a treatment for many problems, including heart disease, kidney failure, or Parkinson’s disease. But it will also be seized upon by pro-life campaigners who object to plans to use stem cells taken from embryos as a source of tissue for transplant.

Professor Bodo Eckehard Strauer carried out the treatment at the Dusseldorf University Cardiac Clinic where he is director. He said: “Ten weeks after the transplantation, the size of the damage has reduced by nearly a third and the capacity of the heart itself has clearly improved.

“Stem cell therapy could be more successful than all other previous treatments put together. Even patients with the most seriously damaged hearts can be treated with their own stem cells instead of waiting and hoping on a transplant.”

Gaynor Dewsnap, spokeswoman for the British Heart Foundation, said the development was exciting. “If this is proved to have worked and can be repeated, then this would be excellent news for heart patients, particularly as it avoids the ethical issues which some people have worries about.

“The cells used would have the same DNA as the rest of the body, leading to no risk of rejection. It seems very promising.”

Stem cells are the body’s master cells. They have the ability to turn into a wide variety of other cell types.

Those found in embryos, which are at the centre of an ethical row between scientists and pro-lifers, are the most flexible and easiest to culture. But more specialised stem cells are also found in adults. Last month a team of British researchers showed for the first time that bone marrow stem cells were capable of turning into kidney cells.

The German heart operation was carried out four days after the unnamed man suffered a serious heart attack. He lost a quarter of his heart muscle after the organ was starved of oxygen. The team took stem cells from his pelvis—an abundant source of bone marrow—and injected them into his coronary arteries.

Professor Strauer said further tests were needed to confirm the success of the procedure. He has treated six patients, aged between 38 and 67, with their own stem cells since March and said that after a short period they showed similar improvement.

Last month doctors attempted another form of stem cell therapy by injecting cells directly into the heart tissue. “Our results should show that it is possible to do this work without the ethically controversial embryonic stem cells” said Prof Strauer. [End quoting]

Notice that this amazing research was not performed in the United States—nor did you hear about it on the evening news. There is lots of money to be made from heart attack victims and the AMA/FDA gestapo stand ready to “protect” you from such advances as reported here. Imagine the possibilities if matters as serious as heart attacks can be reversed in such an elegant manner.

Makes you wonder what all the fuss over embryonic stem cells is REALLY about.

WATER & SEA SALT FORMULA FOR ASTHMA, ETC.

From the INTERNET, David Rodgers <video5@superaje.com>, 8/7/01: [quoting]

The book is Your Body's Many Cries For Water, by Dr. Batmanghelidj.

Since reading the book I have found out a few more things about the water/sea salt combination he recommends.

Please, please pass this on to your friends and lists, and post on the boards. If not for yourself, do it for the children.

Little children and adults are suffocating from asthma, and yes, dying. Asthma is dehydration of the body, and the lungs close-up because the body doesn't want to lose more water. Doctor's give asthmatics “puffers” with cortisone in them which makes it worse.

A naturopathic doctor I personally know told me cortisone is a “killer drug”. Asthma has been cured with the water cure in almost all cases. I cannot believe it is children's “karma” to be victims of the greed and insensitivity of the drug companies and the lack of knowledge by doctors and parents when water could save them from a horrible, agonizing, slow death.

If you have seen someone have an asthma attack, you will understand. Not just asthma, but many other diseases are caused by dehydration, and others worsened. Any real sick person is put on a saline solution I.V. when they go in the hospital because the doctors know they are dehydrated. Water and salt at $350 a bottle for the I.V. Think about that one!

The book is Your Body's Many Cries for Water Dr. Batmanghelidj.

You don't need to purchase the book; all the information required is at the website free and also below.

“Please consult your physician before making any changes. I suggest you make sure your doctor understands the effects of dehydration on the human body as most are improperly educated through no fault of their own.” — from the <Watercure2.com> website

Here's the formula to make it even easier:

Divide body weight (in pounds) in half.

This equals the number of ounces of filtered or spring water needed daily. (NOT tap water) So a 200 lb. person requires 100 ounces a day.

For each soda, coffee, tea, or alcoholic beverage (diuretics dehydrate the body), drink one more ten-ounce glass of water.

Fruit juices should be well diluted.

Drink a glass of water 1/2 hr. before eating so that digestive juices are not taking water from the body. If you can't do that, drink a glass a few minutes before eating. Wait an hour or so after eating to drink more water.

Drink two glasses in the morning and two at night before bedtime.

You will get to know when you want more water than suggested in the above formula, as you will get in touch with your thirst.

Next add some Sea Salt—NOT refined salt, as it has aluminum powder or other chemicals in it. For each quart of water (four 8-oz. glasses) you consume, have 1/4 teaspoon of sea salt on food or in the water or you can just put it on your tongue.

Due to Dr. B's discovery about the necessity of salt, in combination with drinking the correct amount of water, the medical profession is slowly understanding about the correct amount of salt [and proper kind]. He promotes the cure in interviews and writes letters to medical boards, agencies, etc.

IMPORTANT: With kidney disease or congestive heart failure, this must be done under a doctor's supervision.

For anyone starting the water/salt “cure” it is suggested to start out slowly with smaller amounts of water and salt and work up to the full amount. Dr. B suggests starting out with just the water for the first few days and then adding the salt.

There are many, many testimonials at the site for many diseases from A to Z. Also explanations of the importance of salt and how it works in the body.

See the www.watercure2.com website.

Many doctors don't know about the water cure and the public does NOT know. The medicine/drug companies push their products by advertising even when they know they don't help, and in many cases worsen the disease. Please join me and many others in spreading the good news about the water/sea salt cure for many diseases. And if you are not ill, it just makes you feel better, with more energy, weight loss, and much, much more. I have been doing it for two months. I have lost weight without dieting and never have felt better in my life physically and emotionally. [End quoting]

Dr. B's book has been enthusiastically circulating around among many health-conscious seekers of alternative medicine for almost a decade now, since the first edition came out in 1992. However, when Dr. B was a guest on Art Bell's late-night talk-radio program about six months ago—reaching Art's 25 MILLION listeners on over 500 radio stations—there resulted a new explosive wave of interest among those who were not previously tuned-in to Dr. B's research and simple, common-sense advice.

Dr. B presents quite a dilemma to the AMA/FDA gestapo working for the big drug companies: (1) because there's nothing to go after since water and salt can hardly be “regulated” like they're trying to do with herbs and vitamins, and (2) the level of successes and other “cures” is so overwhelming that the sheer weight of the evidence in favor of Dr. B's advice makes it hard to argue he's wrong and you should stay away from his “dangerous” potion.

One medical professional relayed to a friend of Dr. B that he couldn't possibly publicly endorse Dr. B's book (though he privately recommends it to many of his patients) because he's afraid of the repercussions from the medical establishment were he to do so.

This is how/why the crooks in high places so literally get away with many forms of murder—because good people do nothing out of fear.

Children return to classrooms this fall amidst an increasingly pitched battle over Ritalin and other drugs used to treat millions with behavioral and emotional problems in school.

Some of Ritalin's competitors are breaking with 30-year-old international marketing restrictions to advertise directly to parents, selling the idea that drugs may be the answer to their children's problems in school. At the same time, state legislatures are moving to prevent schools from recommending or requiring that parents put their children on medication.

Last month, Minnesota became the first state to bar schools and child protection agencies from telling parents they must put their children on drugs to treat disorders like attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). In October, Connecticut will go a step further when a new law takes effect prohibiting any school staff member from discussing drug treatments with a parent to assure that such talk comes only from doctors. Similar bills have been introduced in Arizona, New Jersey, New York, Utah, and Wisconsin.

The legislative push is a reaction to what its advocates call overprescription of the drugs. They say an excessive reliance on Ritalin and several competing drugs is driving parents away from traditional forms of discipline and has created a growing, illegal traffic in what are potent and dangerous speed-like stimulants.

Last year, doctors wrote almost 20 million MONTHLY prescriptions for the stimulants, according to IMS Health, a health care information company. Most of those prescriptions were written for children, especially boys. The drugs had sales last year of $758 million, 13 percent more than in 1999. The political concern comes as producers of the drugs have begun an advertising campaign that is unparalleled in spending and technique.

In the back-to-school section of this month's Ladies' Home Journal, tucked among the ads for Life cereal, bologna, and Jell-O pudding, are three full-page advertisements for the ADHD treatments.

The ads evoke a sense of Rockwellian calm. Children chat happily next to a school bus. A child's hand gently touches the hand of an adult.

In one, for the new drug Metadate CD, an approving mother embraces her beaming son as the drug itself is named and promoted.

This is a first. Metadate CD, like Ritalin, Adderall, and similar drugs, are what are known as Schedule II controlled substances, the most addictive substances that are still legal. (Schedule I drugs like heroin and LSD are illegal.)

In keeping with a 1971 international treaty, such controlled substances have never been marketed directly to consumers, only to doctors. There is, however, no federal law to prevent drug companies from doing it. Yet the new magazine advertisement by Celltech Pharmaceuticals, the British maker of Metadate CD, states: "Introducing Metadate capsules. One dose covers his ADHD for the whole school day."

Terry Woodworth, deputy director of the Office of Diversion Control of the Drug Enforcement Administration, said: "We have had a 30-year agreement with the pharmaceutical industry not to advertise controlled substances.

"Celltech has stepped up and beyond everyone else" Mr. Woodworth said, "by advertising a drug with a high potential for abuse." He said the campaign could have "diplomatic repercussions" and that Celltech had been recently asked to stop.

Ian R. Garland, chief operating officer of Celltech, would not comment on discussions with drug enforcement officials but said that the advertisements had been reviewed by regulators at the Food and Drug Administration and comply with federal regulations. Celltech also said the ads were aimed at parents whose children had already received a diagnosis of ADHD. The FDA said the drugs could be advertised as long as their dangers are described in the ads.

McNeil Consumer Healthcare, which makes a drug called Concerta, and Shire Pharmaceuticals, a British company that makes Adderall, are also advertising directly to consumers, but they are not naming their products. Instead, parents are urged to call a toll-free number to request that brochures be sent to them. That information mentions the drugs by brand name as one treatment option.

Mr. Woodworth of the Drug Enforcement Administration said such ads—McNeil is running 60-second commercials on cable television networks like the Discovery Channel and A&E—still violate the spirit of the international protocols. Officials of both companies say they are not promoting a brand and are not breaking any law. [End quoting]

It is great to see that concerned people are waking up to the REAL power they have in numbers and putting a stop to this "legal drug pushing" while such as the FDA just looks the other way.

At the level of the Larger Picture, the New World Order gang is very afraid of the powerful old souls coming into this planet at this time of the Great Awakening. The crooks are doing everything they can to thwart these youngsters before they reach an age where they start to be a danger to them through being a strong force for good.

U.S. JUDGES STAGE COMPUTER COUP MONITORING SOFTWARE DISCONNECTED IN DEFIANCE OF FEDERAL ADMINISTRATORS

Excerpted from THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, by Neil A. Lewis, 8/8/01: [quoting]

A group of federal employees, who believed that the monitoring of their office computers was a major violation of their privacy, recently staged an insurrection, disabling the software used to check on them and suggesting that the monitoring was illegal and unethical.

This was not just a random bunch of bureaucrats, but a group of federal judges who are still engaged in a dispute with the office in Washington that administers the judicial branch and that had installed the software to detect downloading of music, streaming video, and pornography.

It is a conflict that reflects the anxiety of workers at all levels at a time when technology allows any employer to examine each keystroke made on an office computer. In this case, the concern over the loss of privacy comes from the very individuals—federal judges—who will shape the rules of the new information era.

The insurrection took root this spring in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which is based in San Francisco and is the largest of the nation's 12 regional circuits, covering nine Western states and two territories. The Judicial Conference of the United States, the ultimate governing body of the courts, is set to meet on September 11 to resolve the matter.

What goes around, comes around. And in this case the irony is sweet as Big Brother here chose the "wrong" group of mid-level crooks to keep an eye on! Wonder what bearing this will have on the shaping of so-called privacy rules as they apply to the business workplace?!

A HORSE IN BALANCE WEARS A CROWN OF LIGHT

A story honoring en-Light-ened riding masters who developed Guidelines to bring: discipline, beauty, grace, and balance in the movements of a horse, from a girl who desired to be a better rider. She became the first equestrian American woman in Olympic history. This is her own life story; how their Guidelines produced oneness with her horses, also the realization of Creator-God, the Balancing Fulcrum, from riding the Figure 8. The en-Light-ened equestrian masters were Fritz Stecken and Ludwig Von Zeiner, Head Rider of The Spanish Riding School.

LIFE STAYS INTERESTING FOR DAVID ICKE

From the INTERNET, David Icke <icke_e-magazine@yahoo.com>, 8/16/01: [quoting]

Hi All: At noon Central Time today, David Icke's servers [computer equipment for his website and e-magazine] were physically removed from their host location with no prior notice by the remover and/or authorization by David Icke or the webmaster to do so.

What we have been able to ascertain is that they are on their way to Germany. Whether or not they have, in fact, been stolen has not been concretely determined. But it does look that way.

We have contracted for new servers and expect to be up and running by tomorrow night. We apologize for any inconvenience.

Bear with us, we'll solve the challenges from this last curve ball that's been thrown as well. A little downtime, a lot of money, and we'll be back up shortly.

We do thank you—and we definitely appreciate you, Laurence & Jocelyn Savage [End quoting]

They were unable—because of earlier sabotage—to get out their (I think) June magazine, and now, again, the August magazine. He must be doing something very right for the crooks in high places to expend so much effort trying to stop him. Our front-page feature interview for this issue is with David, who is bringing ever more important pieces of the puzzle into focus, which in turn empowers more and more common people to action. Definitely NOT a direction in which the crooks want to see people moving.

THE TAX REBATE SCAM

From the INTERNET, by Jim Rarey <jimrarey@provide.net>, 6/20/01: [quoting]

Millions of Americans, from July through September, will be receiving checks from Uncle Sam. Millions more will not.

The Congress, in what it considered a masterful public relations coup, passed a reduction in the lowest income tax rate from 15% to 10%, effective in the middle of this year. This created a huge problem for tax returns to be filed by April 15th of 2002 for 2001 income. It would have been too complicated to split the year's income into two parts to apply two different tax rates on the 2001 return.

Besides, the politicians wanted to get some money back to the voters before they had to file their tax returns next year. They claimed it would help rejuvenate the economy (assuming we would spend it all rather than paying off bills).

So the Congress and IRS came up with a "formula" to give us an "advance" payment of the effect of the lower minimum rate before we file in 2002. The formula assumed that each taxpayer would make exactly the same amount of taxable income in 2001 as he or she did in the year 2000.

They then applied the difference between the old and new rates (5%) to half of our 2000 income. But that's not the amount of the advance payment. They put a cap on the amounts, $300 for a single taxpayer and $600 for couples filing jointly. Does that cap make a difference? You bet it does!

For taxpayers with taxable income at the exact amount before the higher (year 2000) rate of 28% kicks in, the calculated difference would be, for single taxpayers, $656 (more than twice the amount allowed by the $300 cap). For married couples (filing jointly) the calculated amount would have been $484 dollars more than the $600 cap.

The level at which the 28% rate kicks in (in 2000) was $26,250 for singles and $43,850 for married couples. Notice that the level for married couples is not twice the amount for singles. That's the so-called "marriage penalty" that Congress says it will fix later.

Will taxpayers make up that difference when they file their 2001 return next year? Not on your life! To make sure the only relief the taxpayers get is the advance payment (it is not a rebate or refund as most of the media call it) the old (15%) rate will be included in the tax tables to apply to all of the 2001 taxable income.

Taxpayers will not get the full effect of the tax rate reduction until the withholding rates are adjusted for income earned in 2002. But don't get too used to that. The lower tax rate is not permanent. It expires before the year 2010. Of course Congress will make many changes between now and then.

Don't forget to write a letter of appreciation to your Senators and Representatives, and don't pay off any bills; spend it.

Even Houdini would have admired the nerve behind the sleight-of-hand trick of this so-called rebate to we poor taxpayers. It will surely backfire because so many are awakening to the lies and deceit. And as the economy continues to deflate, an angry public will not look kindly upon legislators who "threw them a crumb" rather than doing something substantial to deal with the economy.

"IT" INVENTOR HIRES LOBBYIST TO WORK STATE GOVERNMENTS ACROSS U.S.

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.rense.com>>, 8/27/01: [quoting]

Dean Kamen, the New Hampshire inventor whose mysterious "Ginger" project still draws worldwide speculation, has hired a Massachusetts State House aide to lobby state governments across the country.

Since January, when word leaked that Kamen had secured a $250,000 book deal to tell the story of a secret, world-changing invention, his every move has been scrutinized for some clues to the project, which is also referred to as "IT".

Kamen has been largely silent on his new invention, and much of the same mystery surrounds the job of his new lobbyist. Matthew Dailida, currently the chief of staff to House Minority Leader Francis Marini (R-Hanson), said next week he would leave his job to work for a Kamen company known as ACROS, LLC.

"I will be working with a host of new products they have coming forward, and obviously Ginger is at the top of that list" said Dailida, who did not offer further details about either the project or what kind of lobbying he would be doing.

As word of Dailida's new job filtered out to his State House colleagues, it has added to speculation that Kamen is inching closer to going public with Ginger. It has also brought a new question: Why would this reclusive inventor want state lobbyists?

Kamen has filed for patents on technology that would allow him to build a motorized, self-balancing scooter, as well as refinements to an engine, known as a Stirling engine, that in theory could produce power more efficiently. He has also reserved a number of suggestively named website names, including <mystirlingscooter.com> and, under the ACROS name, <flywheels.com>.

If Ginger does turn out to be an improved scooter, it would place Kamen in what is becoming fiercely fought legal territory. Just last week, New Bedford voted to ban motorized scooters from its streets because, some say, they were becoming a nuisance. But scooters are not governed by the same restrictions that cover cars.

"The magic words here are 'motor vehicle'", said Massachusetts Secretary of State William F. Galvin. Every state, he explained, is free to decide whether a vehicle is considered a motor vehicle, and to impose the same kind of requirements—licenses, insurance, registration, inspections—that apply to cars.

Such regulations could severely limit the market for new scooters.

Since January, Kamen has divulged very little about his new project. He has also said he couldn't reveal more details for business reasons and that the media coverage of Ginger had blown the project out of proportion. A spokesman for Kamen declined to provide any more details about the hiring of Dailida, the extent of Kamen's state lobbying effort, or Ginger.

Specialists in state government said that new technologies could invoke a wide range of state laws that could help or hurt a company. States can impose special taxes, set some environmental or safety standards, and even ban the use of certain products.

Dailida, 31, is not registered as a lobbyist in Massachusetts, a step he is legally obligated to take before lobbying here, according to Galvin. Other states impose similar requirements.

Dailida said he was called by a recruiter who had noticed his resume on <monster.com>, the job-hunting website. He said that he planned on doing a lot of traveling, and was excited to be a part of the celebrated company. His new employer, he added, had encouraged him to contain his enthusiasm.

"I've been trying to keep it as low key as possible" said Dailida. [End quoting]

The mystery surrounding this subject refuses to go away. Interested readers may recall the article "Dean Kamen: Gifted Inventor And Man Of Mystery" in the February 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM.

SERIOUS DOUBTS OVER CARBON-DATING ACCURACY

From NEXUS magazine, September-October 2001: [quoting:]

British and American scientists have found that radiocarbon dating, used to give a rough guide to the age of an object, can be wrong by thousands of years.

It means that humans may have been on Earth for a lot longer than previously thought, and that accepted versions of early history could need a radical rethink.

Experts have known for years that carbon dating is inexact but, until researchers from Bristol and Harvard completed their study, no one knew by how much.

The scientists calculated the age of ancient limestone formations in caves using carbon dating. The results were checked using a newer, more accurate method known as uranium dating.

They found that the carbon dates were wrong by thousands of years and that the further back in time they went, the more out of date they were.

The reason is that carbon dating measures radioactive carbon, and there may have been much more of it in the distant past than previously thought.

(Source: BBC News Online, 29 June 2001) [End quoting]

I read many years ago about this, but it wasn't proven so conclusively at that time. This creates a serious problem for the crooks in high places who have worked so diligently to snow us with deceptions, rather than facts, about our TRUE planetary history. Once carbon dating has been shown to be inaccurate, the door is thrown open for rethinking much of our history. Again, this is the time of the Great Awakening.

PRESIDENT BUSH EXPOSED AS A POST TURTLE

From the INTERNET, <para-discuss@tje.net>, 8/22/01: [quoting]

While suturing a laceration on the hand of a 90-year-old man, the doctor asked his patient how he thought George W. Bush was doing as President.

The old man said: "Ya know, Bush is a post turtle." Not knowing what the old man meant, the doctor asked him what a "post turtle" was.

He said: "Did you ever drive down a country road and come across a fence post with a turtle balanced on top? You know he didn't get there by himself; he doesn't belong there; he can't get anything done while he's up there; and you just want to help the poor thing down. That's a post turtle." [End quoting]

Enough said!

BIG FUTURE SEEN FOR 3-D TELEVISION SYSTEM

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, by Evan Pondel, 8/4/01: [quoting]

The curtain may be closing on those red-and-blue lenses moviegoers don to see their favorite creatures in three-dimensional splendor.

Dynamic Digital Depth Inc., a Santa Monica-based company, has developed a 3-D TV that can be viewed without glasses.

Though the company has been around since 1993, Warren Littlefield, a former president of NBC Entertainment, recently joined Dynamic's board of directors in an effort to license the 3-D technology.

"Warren's comprehensive knowledge of network television will be of great benefit to DDD" said Chris Yewdall, president and chief executive officer of DDD.

The Federal Communications Commission approved the 3-D TV for public use; however, it's not available in stores.

Michelle LaPaglia, a spokeswoman for the company, said a major studio has already purchased a 3-D TV.

The price tag: $5,000 for a 15-inch TV and $20,000 for a 50-inch TV.

"But the price tag should decrease by the time we're buying them at home" LaPaglia said.

DDD's 3-D technology employs three different areas—content, delivery, and display.

LaPaglia said the TV actually converts the two-dimensional qualities of a regular TV into a 3-D experience.

"We code the 3-D data into the 2-D signal...and it looks like you're looking through a window" LaPaglia said.

DDD is working with a German company that manufactures a screen with an optical filter to enhance the 3-D effect.

"When I first saw DDD's technologies, I knew I was seeing the future" Littlefield said. "From personal experience, I know there's a healthy consumer interest in 3-D...and this technology has the potential to transform the viewer's experience in the same way color transformed black-and-white."

While 3-D TV's success isn't proven, LaPaglia said consumers can expect to see the technology at work in airports and shopping malls later this year.

"And it's our technologies that are patented that are really the core as to why 3-D TV will be a success" she said. [End quoting]

This is the simplest way I've ever heard or read about to produce 3-D TV. One wonders if it is being assisted from "behind the scenes" to lure more people to their idiot boxes with a new, mesmerizing technology. Furthermore, due to the high degree of signal processing involved in converting a 2-D image into 3-D, one wonders, suspiciously, if "subliminal programming" might be inserted to control the public mind in some way. The more sophisticated the technology, the more ways there are to cover your tracks of manipulation.

NLP will link disparate groups on the web. Imagine a worldwide chat, translated into your native tongue in real time. MIT and Microsoft already have software applications that control the cursor with a user's head movement, motion-controlled videoconferencing, and NLP applications that allow verbal dialog with machines.

"There are infinite ways to express thoughts" says Bill Dolan, manager of Microsoft Research's Natural Language Processing Group. "We want to map that to a finite range of actions a machine might take."

SOME WISE THOUGHTS ON AGING

From the INTERNET, <para-discuss@tje.net>, 8/4/01: [quoting]

Getting older is a strange thing. It is viewed in so many different ways by so many different people. My children are in a hurry to grow up. They can't wait to be older so they can do more and have more responsibility.

I have to remind them, time and again, to enjoy being the age they are right now. I know many adults, on the other hand, who want more than anything to be younger again. They are scared to death of being old and are doing everything they possibly can to stay young, look young, and act young.

I am glad to say that I have finally given up any desire to be younger than I am right now. When I look in the mirror and see my thinning, graying hair and my many laugh lines, it only makes me laugh and smile more. What better evidence could there be that I have lived a good life so far, than a face full of wrinkles caused by a million smiles?

I greatly enjoy the age I am at right now and look forward to even greater enjoyment as I continue to learn and grow in love and joy in the years ahead. I only wish that I had known, as a younger man, what I know today. I would have enjoyed my younger years so much more if I had.

Don't be afraid of aging, then. Embrace it. Enjoy it. Take pleasure in it.

Yes, our bodies get older and weaker as the years pass, but our spirits don't have to. No matter how old your body is, if your spirit is full of love and joy, then you are young. Aging isn't decay. It is learning, growing, and becoming better with each passing day. It is moving forward to ever greater love, joy, peace, and happiness in your life. Remember, God gave us this wonderful journey we call life and it isn't over until your last day here. May you revel in all of your life and celebrate all of your days. [End quoting]

The secret in the wisdom of the above is simply that such an attitude of appreciation and acceptance of the very gift of life—in all its steps—is the REAL secret of staying young. Want to age quickly? Then become preoccupied by, and worry about, aging!

SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD

From the INTERNET, <para-discuss@tje.net>, 8/26 /01: [quoting]

A group of Geography students were asked to list what they considered to be the Seven Wonders of the World. Though there was some disagreement, the following got the most votes:

2. Taj Mahal
3. Grand Canyon
4. Panama Canal
5. Empire State Building
6. St. Peter's Basilica
7. China's Great Wall

While gathering the votes, the teacher noticed one student, a quiet girl, hadn't turned in her paper. So, she asked the girl if she was having trouble with her list.

The quiet girl replied: "Yes, a little. I couldn't quite make up my mind because there were so many."

The teacher said: "Well, tell us what you have, and maybe we can help."

The girl hesitated, then read: "I think the Seven Wonders of the World are—

David Icke Exposes What Elite Fear Most

his clear explanation of the elite's tried-and-true tactic of "problem, reaction, solution". First, they create the problem; then, they wait for a reaction demanding a solution; and lastly, they come forward to offer a (their) solution. All this is very well thought out and has been largely unsuspected by the masses. But things are beginning to change.

A "slight" problem is developing. The substance at the base of the elite's "pyramid of power" is eroding. And those FEW controllers at the top of the pyramid are finding, increasingly, that they are on shaky ground as more and more of the world's population begins to wake-up to these manipulators and their long-standing agenda of control through deception.

On August 1, 2001, I conducted a great several-hour telephone interview from California with David Icke in England. We covered a lot of new ground, including his new book Children Of The Matrix: How An Inter-Dimensional Race Has Controlled The World For Thousands Of Years—And Still Does which takes up the puzzle of intrigue where The Biggest Secret left off.

David had cut-back a bit on his hectic travel and lecturing schedule to recharge his batteries at his home, back in England. He sounded well-rested and in top form, and as gracious and humorous as always. David has been a longtime friend and supporter of The SPECTRUM in many behind-the-scenes ways that have truly aided both our survival and our visibility.

Let's now jump right into the conversation. After some introductory chit-chat, I turn to what's new with David:

Martin: Let's get to the subject at hand, which is Children Of The Matrix, your current world travels, etc. The last time we spoke for publication was a long time ago. You had just made contact with Credo Mutwa; you had just done the video and come out with your book The Biggest Secret. And we've come "a long way, baby" since then. You've been around the world a couple of times, I imagine.

Icke: Yes, I continue traveling, but I've been spending a lot of time in England as well, because I needed to smell the roses a bit. I've had my head down for about 10-11 years, traveling and researching and writing and all this stuff. There comes a point where you just need a breather. You have to take stock and look at where you've come, and where you are, and where you want to go—and just do ordinary things for awhile. And that's what I've been doing.

I've still been working and putting stuff on the website most days. But I'm much more taking stock and thinking where I want to go. I'm almost at the end of that. I'm starting to travel again, in September-October. I've got a big tour of Australia coming up, and a lot of ideas being put together on how to more effectively communicate this stuff—especially now with the awakening to the effects of Globalization.

What a lot of us have been talking about for all these years—where the Left in politics, if you like, has pretty much discovered it, now, at one level—and that is that Globalization, which they see as about 200 corporations controlling, basically, the system, and creating horrendous exploitation of Third World peoples, they've started to realize the correlation between this Globalization Agenda, that's unfolding so fast, and its effect on Third World peoples, and people in general.

People are far more open now to the sort of stuff we've been talking about all these years. What they've not seen, yet, is the NEXT level, which is really important to get across, which is that the 200-odd corporations, if you go high enough, are, in effect, ONE CORPORATION. And that's the area that these protestors of Globalization need to appreciate, that this situation is one in which all these different corporations, and governments, and banks, and whatever, are acting in a way that is leading in the SAME direction.

This is NOT a coincidence. This is NOT a group of unconnected people who have just, by coincidence, decided on the same action. This is a coordinated agenda which is unfolding before our eyes.

I think, also, certainly a lot of stuff that I've put on my website recently has related to how the violence at Globalization Summits, at Global Summits, is actually orchestrated and carried out BY THE VERY AUTHORITIES who are condemning the violence!

And there are increasing numbers of examples of this. For instance the way, recently, journalists, mainstream journalists were observing an anti-Globalization march and meeting in Barcelona (Spain). They watched while the speeches were going on, and the people were standing there listening, perfectly peacefully. And they were ringed by police in the old helmets, with the batons and stuff, and suddenly the police lines opened, and through walked a group of people, dressed in black-black gear, with weapons and stuff, sticks, and what-have-you. The police lines opened, these people walked through, walked to the edge of the peaceful protestors, and started knocking the hell out of each other, at which point the police used this to justify going into the crowd and knocking the hell out of them because they said that fighting had broken-out.

These journalists then watched the people, who had appeared from nowhere to start this violence, walk back through the police lines and get into police vans! This is actually what is going on. And I think that those, if you like, on the Left in politics, have now begun to understand ONE LEVEL, and it is only one level of the Global Agenda.

They have, through their own experience, realized that all is not as they thought it was. And, in fact, there are forces at work which are, in a very cold, calculating way, creating the situation of violence in which the real issues are obscured and the whole level of debate is focused on what are perceived as violent anarchists who just want chaos. And so, that's what is going on.

So we have a great opportunity now to grasp this awakening to the consequences of Globalization, and to inform people about the NEXT LEVEL, which most of the protestors have not yet seen, which is that we're not looking at a series of unconnected organizations and people acting in the same way, by accident. They're actually doing it in a very calculated way, and there's one force working through all of them.

Martin: In speaking with Nick Begich a number of months ago, a large part of that interview had to do with so-called "non-lethal" weapons technology and the deployment of them in these various Globalization protests, such as the Seattle protests several years ago. Now they are developing technology such as what the Marines developed this year, which is a microwave device that will disperse crowds through the heating of skin to 130 degrees. And so, we're also seeing, in addition to this kind of orchestrated protest and orchestrated chaos, in a sense, we're seeing the use of new technology to prevent legitimate protest. In place of legitimate protest we are having what amounts to paid agitators creating an atmosphere whereby the public will almost demand more "control" of the situation—hence, more technology, and it's a snake biting its tail.

Icke: It's our old friend "problem, reaction, solution". It's the most effective form of mass mind-manipulation, and behavior-manipulation, and reaction-manipulation in the history of the human race.

They've announced—today, actually—in Britain that they want to introduce the use of "stun guns" for British police, so they will be able to paralyze people with the stun guns. Ironically, they're partly justifying it by the fact that a number of people, recently, in Britain have been shot dead by police for being armed, when they weren't actually armed, and for doing things that they weren't actually doing.

This whole technology agenda is moving on. Again, they've just announced in Britain that they want to microchip the whole of the British Army in the next few years. What researchers have been talking about, and has been being dismissed for all these years, is now in our face.

And this is a wonderful, wonderful window of opportunity because, as I've written years ago in my books, whenever something that remains secret and hidden is close to becoming physical reality in society, i.e., this New World Order agenda, there is a window of time when it breaks the surface where people can actually see it.

And that is the window of time when people can not only hear the so-called theory, they can actually see the unfolding proof on their news bulletins every day. We are massively into that period now, and we have a crucial 2-3 years to make a REAL DIFFERENCE here, as people become more and more open to the "apparently fantastic" being "patently obvious".

For instance, I wrote in And The Truth Shall Set You Free—the 4th edition was written in 1994—we were going to have a "Free Trade Area" for the whole of the Americas, which would be moved and transformed, as in Europe, into the American Union—America's version of the European Union. And, of course, it's a few months ago in Quebec, the Summit of the Americas, George Bush attending, they announced that this All Americas Free Trade Area was going to happen. And they've just announced in Africa that the co-ordinating body between African countries is changing its name to The African Union.

We are moving so fast with this now. I think that one of the reasons that these guys are so keen to move this agenda forward as quickly as possible is, they know the veil is lifting and this window of opportunity, when what's hidden becomes more and more obvious, is a very, very dangerous time for them. Thus, they can no longer just dismiss what researchers like me and others say, because the proof of it is now being announced in Parliaments and at Summits around the world.

So this is a wonderful opportunity, and we have to grasp it. And this is why my time of smelling the roses is rapidly coming to an end now. I've taken a breather, and now I'm going to start going for it, again, because this is a CRUCIAL 2-3 years.

Martin: I was thinking about that as well. Very often, here, we think about "pulling back" a bit to smell the roses, and then we think: "Well, we're at a critical time." There isn't time to do that, although we would all love to do it. And there is always the danger that, once you do that, you never really get back in the swing of things, or get back in the fold. So, I'm glad to hear that you're now getting ready to gear-up again and get back to it.

Icke: Yeah. I think, also, part of me just taking a breather these last 2-3 months, it's not really been a breather because I've been working on this every day, it's just that the traveling hasn't been anything as intense as it has been for me for 10 years. It's also a time to ponder on how you can most effectively use your energy and use your time, because if you don't use it effectively, you can basically run around like a cat with its tail on fire, and expend all this energy and all this time, and actually not be as effective as you could be.

So, personally, I'm going to be very focused, from now on, on using the time most effectively, and using the energy most effectively, so that I can achieve more, while actually expending less. I think it's very important we do that.

Martin: In this last issue of our paper, we did a follow-up interview with Eric Phelps, who has written the book on the Vatican called VATICAN ASSASSINS, and the control by the Jesuits behind the scenes. And, in fact, he maintains the Jesuits control England.

I'm going to read to you two key paragraphs from this interview, and you tell me if your research has confirmed what he says. He says, quoting from the July 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM:

"Through the rule of George and Victoria, they [Jesuits] completely controlled England through Stonyhurst. Today they run England through the Royal Institute of International Affairs. And the Cardinal, who they rule through, is the Archbishop of Westminster.

"Today, they have the Archbishop of Westminster in England, and they have the Archbishop of New York in the United States. They rule England through Stonyhurst. They rule the United States through Georgetown and Fordham. They rule England through the Royal Institute of International Affairs. They rule the United States through the Council on Foreign Relations."

Do you think that's true?

Icke: The Jesuits are, very much, a mask on the face. I am very reluctant to say it's the anybody, because the Illuminati—which is the word I use, or the term I use, for the "network"—operates through endless masks, and the Jesuits are most certainly one of them, and a very important one.

You know, again and again you'll find key people who come up in research were Jesuits, or went to Jesuit universities, or what-have-you. So, yes, they are very, very, important.

But I wouldn't say, myself, that the Jesuits, as an organization, rule this or rule that, or that the Freemasons rule this or rule that. These are "masks on the face", and the face will use the most appropriate mask, and the most effective mask, in any given circumstances.

It's like a lot of people, who have now discovered the Bilderberg group, talk about the Bilderberg group being "the conspiracy", being "IT", when the Bilderberg group is not even one of the most important masks of "IT". The Bilderberg group is merely an outer-level operation that co-ordinates between apparently unconnected politicians, countries, etc. It's a very small deal, compared with the INNER secret groups, high up the pyramid of control.

I would say, for sure, that the Jesuit Secret Society operation is far more fundamental within the network than is the Bilderberg group. These Bilderberg groups: Council on Foreign Relations, Royal Institute of International Affairs, Trilateral Commission, etc., are merely "go-fer organizations" which carry out a policy that is decided way, way, above them in the network.

So, yeah, I would say the Jesuits are very, very important—not "the Jesuits", but the Jesuit organization through which they operate. But I wouldn't go so far as to say that the Jesuits rule this, or rule that, or rule the other because, in the end, the Jesuits are just a cog in a much bigger machine.

Martin: That's the real question that I want to get to, and that's why I wanted to steer you in this direction, because what we're talking about here, ultimately, is that the Jesuits are also pawns in the Global Agenda—and with your research involving the Reptilians, and the Reptilian Agenda, and the so-called "Dark Force", if you want to term it that, or the "Evil Agenda"—they are being manipulated behind the scenes by higher dark forces, as well.

So now, what has your research shown with regard to who is pulling these strings? Is it the Reptilians, or—?

Icke: Anyone who's been guided, not by preconceived ideas or belief-systems but by the information that comes their way, knows that the further you walk this path of uncovering this stuff, the bigger the path gets, the bigger the picture gets. I've tried to emphasize this through my books.

When I wrote And The Truth Shall Set You Free, that focused on the political and economic manipulation, and the Agenda, and the way it works today, and the way its pretty much worked for the last 200 years, and lots and lots of names of the people involved. But that was ONE LEVEL of "IT". And you keep walking, and you keep walking, and then you find another level of "IT". And another level of "IT" definitely involves Reptilian entities; but then, you know, it's not "the Reptilians". I'm not talking here about another "IT". I'm talking about another LEVEL of "IT".

You see, the next question is:

Who controls the Reptilians? Because, in the end, everything that manifests as an entity is just consciousness, emanating some kind of physical form. The more that I walk the journey, the bigger the picture gets, and therefore, where it all ENDS, and what's ULTIMATELY BEHIND IT, is massively open to question.

What is very clear to me is that the real force behind the manipulation of this world is NOT PHYSICAL, it's not at the physical level. What we call the Illuminati is not, again, "IT". It is a vehicle for "IT", whatever that ultimately is. You know, this three-dimensional world, as we call it, is actually manipulated by other-dimensional forces.

One of the things to really emphasize is that we don't actually live in a world. We live in a frequency range. That's the way it is. We live in the frequency range that our physical senses—and it's a very, very small one—can access.

One of the things that I mention in Children Of The Matrix is the work of physicists, including a friend of mine, an Italian physicist, who points out in her books that, of the known matter, mass to

Children Of The Matrix

How an interdimensional race has controlled the world for thousands of years—and still does!

We are born into a world controlled by unseen forces that have plagued and manipulated humanity for thousands of years. No, this is not script from a Hollywood movie. It is happening to you NOW.

You may look around and think that what you see is “real”. But in truth you are living in an illusion—an illusion designed to keep you in a mental, emotional, and spiritual prison cell.

David Icke exposes these forces and their methods of human control and he reveals a fantastic web of global manipulation, orchestrated by forces beyond this physical realm.

He exposes the hidden bloodlines, through which other-dimensional entities live and operate unseen among us; and he shows how the bloodlines of the royal, political, and economic rulers of today are the same as those who ruled as the kings and queens of ancient times.

Icke takes the story on from his highly acclaimed And The Truth Shall Set You Free and The Biggest Secret, and he lifts still further the veil of secrecy that has maintained humanity in manipulated ignorance for so long.

*The truth is not only out there.
Much of it is right here.*

exist in this universe, the physical senses of the human entity can only perceive a maximum of 10 percent.

So, even according to conventional science, 90 percent of what exists in the physical universe, we can't actually see and perceive with our physical senses. When you look, first of all, at the amazing genetic diversity of life on Earth, within this less than 10 percent, what the hell diversity exists within the 90 percent that we can't perceive?

manipulate us. And Credo Mutwa even confirms this from his own shamanistic experience over 70, nearly 80 years in Africa, as well as what I have come across in circles in the West.

The Biggest Secret by David Icke

The blockbuster of all blockbusters! With stunning information never before released on the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales.

David Icke's most powerful and explosive book to date includes the astonishing background to the murder of Diana, Princess of Wales. Every man, woman, and child on the planet is affected by the stunning information that Icke exposes. He reveals in documented detail how the same interconnecting bloodlines have controlled the planet for thousands of years. How they created all the major religions and suppressed the spiritual and esoteric knowledge that will set humanity free from its mental and emotional prisons. It includes a devastating exposé of the true origins of Christianity and the other major religions, and documents suppressed science, which explains why the world is facing a time of incredible change and transformation. The Biggest Secret also exposes the true and astonishing background to the British Royal Family and, through enormous research and unique contacts, Icke reveals how and why Diana, Princess of Wales, was murdered in Paris in 1997. This includes information from a close confidant of Diana for nine years, which has never before been made public.

The Biggest Secret is a unique book and is quite rightly dubbed: “The book that will change the world.” No one who reads it will ever be the same again.

We are living in a very narrow band of frequency that our physical senses can perceive. And the forces, including, I would say, at least most of the Reptilian forces that are manipulating this frequency range, this planet, this world, are actually operating outside this frequency range.

In terms of the Reptilians, right on the edge are the Reptilians that I am identifying, because the Reptilians are just a genetic form. There will be positive expressions of it and negative expressions of it, and some in the middle, as with any genetic form; it's just consciousness. They operate, it seems to me, on the very edge of our physical senses, and vibrational sympathy, the vibrational compatibility, than they can with much of the mainstream of human bodies.

And so—and again, this is not theory—I've talked to many, many, people around the world who have insider knowledge on this. The situation seems to be, in this three-dimensional world, you create bloodlines—and they were created a very long time ago. They may still be being added to—very, very, likely—in terms of their DNA, vibrationally compatible with your energy, your consciousness, your upper-dimensional level. You then make sure that those bloodlines end-up in the positions of power: as royalty, as presidents, as prime ministers, as banking leaders, as media owners, etc., because you know that you can possess those particular bloodlines far more easily than any other.

And then you have the other aspect of this, which is that when they put these bloodlines through the Secret Society rituals, and the Satanic rituals, they're actually creating a vibrational environment in which these other-dimensional entities can possess these particular bloodlines.

So if you were of a certain bloodline, and you have a certain background and what-have-you, then you will be “invited” into the Secret Society network. You'd be invited to come into some of these Satanic cults and networks because they know, then, once they've got you in there, they can possess your body and, basically, take over your thinking and emotional processes.

And then, when it comes to the KEY families that turn-up in the positions of power over the centuries, under different names, of the so-called key Illuminati bloodlines—some people say there are 13 at the peak—they are actually being literally bred, and KNOWINGLY, to become vehicles for these other-dimensional entities.

The key area that I've become most interested in at this time, in terms of their role in dimensional manipulation, is the way it seems that their obsession with bloodlines, with genetics, has to do with the fact that certain genetic bloodlines are more vibrationally compatible with this other-dimensional, what appears to be, at that level—and I emphasize, at THAT level—a Reptilian expression. And therefore, these other-dimensional Reptilian entities can “possess” these particular bloodlines far more easily because of the

And when we hear ancient terms, which are still used today, like “selling your soul to the devil”, in symbolic terms that's exactly what they do. They make pacts in these Satanic rituals allowing these other-dimensional malevolent entities to possess their body. I mean, talk to any former Satanist, and they'll tell you all about this. Anywhere you go in the world it's the same system. They actually allow their bodies to be possessed, in return for material power and wealth and stuff in this world, on the understanding that the real “governor” is the entity who is possessing the body, not the person who's being possessed. And they, literally, sell themselves to give their bodies away to these entities.

I mean, in real, full-blown Satanism, as anyone will tell you, the POWER of Satanism, and the level you are in that Satanic hierarchy, relates to the power of the so-called demonic entities who you've allowed to possess you and work through you.

And the amazing, staggering choice, it seems to me after 11 years of this research, is that the people who run the world today—the top of the banking system, the presidents and prime ministers and all these people—they are not just involved in Satanic ritual and stuff, they are, literally, their bodies are possessed by these malevolent, demonic, other-dimensional entities.

It's at THAT level of their being that the real mental control is coming from. And, in this way, you will have them making decisions and doing things that have horrendous, staggering, horrific consequences for their fellow men and women and children. But they have no feeling, no emotional consequences for themselves of what they've made other people suffer.

At least a large, large number of these entities who do possess these particular bloodlines, and therefore control the people who appear to be human and in positions of power, they seem to take a Reptilian form. And so, you have the ancient and endless modern accounts of people being, apparently human beings, transformed into a Reptilian form, and then go back again.

Again and again, these "shape-shifting" experiences that people observe are with people in significant positions of influence and power.

What seems to happen is: the bloodlines are first created, so there is a hybrid DNA vibrational compatibility which allows these particular bodies to be most easily possessed and controlled by these other-dimensional entities. And that means that if you can manipulate these particular possessed and

...and the truth shall set you free

David Icke exposes the real story behind global events which shape the future of human existence and the world we leave our children. Fearlessly, he lifts the veil on an astonishing web of interconnected manipulation to reveal that the same few people, secret societies, and organizations control the daily direction of our lives. They engineer the wars, violent revolutions, terrorist outrages, and political assassinations; they control the world market in hard drugs and the media indoctrination machine. Every global negative event of the 20th Century, and earlier, can be traced back to the same Global Elite, and some of the names involved are very well known. Never before has this web, its personnel, and methods been revealed in such a detailed and devastating fashion.

If you don't want your view of life to be transformed, then steer clear of this book.

Icke reveals the esoteric background to the global conspiracy and offers an inspiring spiritual solution in which every man, woman, and child on planet Earth breaks free from the daily programming—the "coup d'état on the human mind"—and takes back their infinite power to think for themselves and decide their own destiny. His words are designed to inspire all of us to be who we really are, to fling open the door of the mental prison we build for ourselves, and to walk into the light of freedom.

The Reptilian Agenda Parts I & II

(Featured interview in the October 1999 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

David Icke has produced two amazing videos with the Zulu "sanusi" or shaman, Credo Mutwa, who reveals astonishing information which, until now, was only available to the highest initiates of the African shaman tradition.

Credo says, "The world must know this—and know it now."

He reveals how a shapeshifting reptilian race (the "Chitauli" to Africans) has controlled humanity for thousands of years and how their bloodlines are in the positions of royal, political, and economic power today.

Credo Mutwa supports all the themes outlined in The Biggest Secret and adds his own unique knowledge and experience of traveling Africa for nearly 80 years.

These videos will re-write the UFO/extraterrestrial story in a way that will blow your mind. UFO researchers have ignored Africa and therefore ignored one of the greatest sources of knowledge on the planet.

While people still argue over Roswell and the extraterrestrial beings apparently found there, African tribes-people have been interacting with these ET "gods" for thousands of years, sometimes eating them, as Credo Mutwa did on one occasion with unforgettable consequences.

Credo has not only seen dead "greys" many times, he has seen them examined behind their "grey" exterior and he knows exactly what they really look like—and it is nothing like we think!

"This is the most amazing man it has ever been my honor to meet—a genius—and the importance of these videos is simply beyond words."

—David Icke

After making these videos, Credo was visited by two people from Cape Town who offered him 50,000 rand, and a house anywhere in South Africa he would like to name, if he would agree to never speak to David Icke again and never have anything to do with him. Credo's reply can be imagined!

Revelations of a Mother Goddess

An Interview by David Icke

The staggering story of human sacrifice and satanic ritual, involving the most famous people in the world.

Arizona Wilder, formerly Jennifer Greene, was mind-programmed from birth to become one of the three most important female conductors of Satanic rituals on the planet. Her programmer was Josef Mengele, the notorious "Angel of Death" in the Nazi concentration camps. When he died in the late 1980s, her programming began to break down.

In this video interview with David Icke, she describes human sacrifice rituals at Glamis Castle and Balmoral, in which the Queen, the Queen Mother, and other members of the Royal Family sacrificed children in Satanic ceremonies.

She talks of the same experiences with Henry Kissinger, George Bush, Bill Clinton, members of the Rockefeller and Rothschild families, and a host of the most famous names in the United States and the United Kingdom.

Your view of the world will never be the same when you hear the revelations of Arizona Wilder and consider their relevance to your daily life.

See and hear David Icke at the top of his form as he presents six-and-a-half hours of incredible information before a sellout audience of 1200 at the Vogue Theatre in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.

You will laugh, you may even cry, and you will be on the edge of your seat as the fantastic story of true human history, and WHO really controls the world today, unfolds in Icke's unique style, aided by video footage and hundreds of illustrations.

This is the presentation that the Illuminati (the forces of global control) tried so hard to stop—media interviews were cancelled; immigration officials turned up at the theatre to question his right to speak; pressure was applied on the venue to cancel the event itself; and pies were even thrown at David at a book signing by a rent-a-mob who ludicrously and outrageously sought to dub him a "racist".

But nothing could silence him or break his spirit—and here you will see the result. David Icke shows that if you do not concede to fear, anything is possible!

possessible bloodlines into positions of power, then what you are actually doing is putting these other-dimensional entities into those positions of power.

And this is why the same bloodline which, if you go back far enough, you'll find endless accounts in the ancient world of the interbreeding between "the gods" and "humanity" creating hybrid bloodlines, and the hybrid bloodlines were placed into the positions of ruling, royal power in the ancient world—in Babylon, in Sumer, in Egypt, etc.—and much further, if you look, around the planet.

And when you follow these bloodlines forward from the ancient world, they became the aristocracy of Europe, and the royal families of Europe, who, if you do the genealogy, become the presidents, and the prime ministers, and the business leaders, and the bankers, and the media owners of the modern world.

This is why they're obsessed with genetics, and obsessed with interbreeding with each other, and obsessed with holding a certain DNA combination. It's because of this ability to possess, and therefore control, this dimension from another.

Martin: Have you encountered, in your research, any current state of conflict between these malevolent other-dimensional entities, vying for position among themselves?

Icke: Oh, this is the biggest Achilles' heel they have. You cannot switch-on and switch-off a state of malevolence, and a state of desiring power and control over others. The Illuminati were described brilliantly to me by a researcher a long, long time ago as like "a gang of bank robbers who all agree on the job, but argue about how the spoils are being shared out".

Martin: [Laughter]

Icke: [Laughter] One of the things, I think, that has confused a lot of researchers and led them off the path is, they have seen certain secret societies and groups, like the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, which became the Knights of Malta, and the Knights Templar, apparently at various times in conflict with each other. And they have, therefore, perceived that these were different sides in conflict with each other—where, in fact, many, if not most, of the wars between royal bloodlines and various countries, in the past, have actually been wars between the same bloodlines for the right to be at the top of their greasy pole.

They have not been wars and conflicts between secret societies and royal families who were on different sides of the conflict to span different things. They've actually been wars and conflicts and struggles between Secret Societies and royal families who want to be "top dog" within the bloodlines. And I think this has confused a lot of researchers, and they've seen these as two different sides, rather than different masks on the same side trying to be "top dog" of the time.

There is absolutely no contradiction between people like the Rockefellers and the Rothschilds and other different families and groupings and secret societies being less than bosom buddies, and seeking to have power and greater influence than each other, and the fact that they, in the end, represent ONE AGENDA.

So, yes, absolutely, there are many divisions and "fault lines" within the Illuminati and its various masks. But in the end, when push comes to shove, they all have a massive vested interest in not rocking the boat so much that the boat sinks.

Martin: Have you come across recently, or in the past, any information about what's happening in Antarctica, and possibly either involving underground bases with the Nazis, or other entities?

Icke: No, not recently, but obviously I've come across these stories in the past. And I mentioned in Children Of The Matrix the stories that have circulated about underground bases in Antarctica, relating to the Nazis and, also, relating to what appears to be a battle of eons between this Reptilian force or this Reptilian grouping (whatever it is), and the so-called blond-haired, blue-eyed Nordics.

I think that this particular conflict, and the different factions of both sides who have joined together for their mutual benefit, and interbred to create hybrid bloodlines between them—understanding exactly what's gone on and is going on between these two groupings will get us much closer to understanding what's been happening on the planet these past few thousand years.

That's why I have a Reptilian eye and a blond-haired, blue-eyed eye, if you like, on the front of Children Of The Matrix, because this genetic combination has—and I don't fully understand it, or the implications of it, yet, by any means—but it is certainly a fundamental part of understanding what the hell is going on, and has gone on.

And I mention things in Children Of The Matrix, stories that relate to both these blond-haired, blue-eyed Nordics and the Reptilians being related to Antarctica in the ancient past, because the question comes: What WAS Antarctica before the ice came? And I'm more and more convinced that the ice has not been around for anything like as long as people think, in the form that it is today.

So, what was Antarctica before? I think it is a very important, relevant place to be focusing on.

Martin: You were talking about Globalization, and recently I was seeing on the news Tony Blair and George Bush being very close. What's happening with Tony Blair and George Bush?

Icke: I identified Tony Blair a long time ago as an Illuminati puppet who would be brought through to be the Prime Minister of Britain, and that one of his main roles during his period in office would be to take the United Kingdom into the Euro single currency, the European Union single currency, and get rid of the Pound Sterling. And we're moving that way, faster all the time.

Tony Blair is a leader of the Labor Party, which is supposed to represent the interests of the poor people. That's what the Labor Party was actually set-up for, at least the official story is that, in the early part of the 20th century. But what Tony Blair is, is the most right-wing Prime Minister, and the most unscrupulous and untrustworthy—and that's saying something—certainly in my lifetime, since I've been following politics in Britain. This man is a real, knowing puppet of the Illuminati, carrying out their agenda.

It's very interesting, just to look at some of the background, at how this guy came to power. The key newspapers in Britain, that have the biggest circulation, are owned by Rupert Murdoch. There's the Sun newspaper, the Sunday newspaper, the News Of The World, and the Times newspaper—again, owned by Rupert Murdoch.

So, who Rupert Murdoch's papers support is very important in influencing, at least public opinion, in how they vote at general elections.

Now, since Murdoch started owning newspapers in Britain, he has always supported the Conservative Party. He was behind Margaret Thatcher, who was brought to power by the Illuminati, just as Reagan was, at the same time, to bring the same horrific economic policies, which were known in America as Reaganomics, and known in Britain as Thatcherism. They were the same economic policy, and they were both brought to power at the same time, because that was the policy that they wanted to unfold in the 1980s.

And then, the Murdoch newspapers continued to support the people who followed Margaret Thatcher, Prime Ministers, and leaders of the Conservative Party. Very suddenly, a guy called John Smith, who was the then leader of the Labor Party, died of an apparent heart attack. Before his blood had cooled, there was an absolute onslaught in British newspapers, not least in Murdoch's newspapers, saying that the only person who could lead the Labor Party out of the then doldrums it was in was this young man, Tony Blair. And suddenly, Tony Blair was everywhere. This created a momentum in which Tony Blair was voted, overwhelmingly, to lead the Labor Party by Labor Party members because they thought they were swept-up in this idea: "Blair is the man who can turn us around and make us a government again."

From the time that Blair became leader, for the first time in the history of Murdoch's newspapers in Britain, he switched his support from the Conservative Party to Tony Blair and the Labor Party. And this has continued ever since.

And so, Tony Blair is very much a PUPPET Prime Minister of the Illuminati, and HE KNOWS IT! He is definitely at the level that he knows it.

And every day now, when you turn on British news bulletins or pick up a newspaper, you see the Illuminati agenda unfolding in this country, in terms of Big Brother technology, Big Brother legislation taking away freedoms.

He [Tony Blair] is a massive supporter of Globalization, which of course involves taking away jobs in Western developed countries and parceling them out to Third World countries, where you pay the workers out there an absolute pittance to produce your goods for next to nothing, in horrific circumstances. And then, you bring those goods into the developed countries, and you sell them for an absolute fortune.

There was a program on British television recently which identified some staggering statistics. Like, for instance, Tiger Woods, the American golfer, is paid more per year to promote Nike products than almost the entire work force of Indonesia is paid to make those Nike products. And, for every pair of trainers that sells for a hundred pounds in Britain, or a hundred fifty or sixty dollars in America, of the hundred pounds that they are sold for, the Indonesian worker who made them gets 40 pence. You know, these people are earning about 72 pence per day, about a dollar a day, which is nothing like a living wage, and they're living in absolute poverty and grotesque, disease-ridden shanty towns. And Tony Blair is pushing and pushing this agenda, and saying it's the only way to bring prosperity to Third World poor countries. And he KNOWS it's not.

Then you've got George Bush, and he's been brought through in just the same way, to be President of America at the same time. Just as Reagan and Thatcher were brought together to present a united front to the United Policy, so were Clinton and Blair, who were extremely close and never contradicted each other. And now you have Bush and Blair, extremely close and never contradicting each other. There is a very simple reason for this, and that's because BOTH OF THEM ARE CONTROLLED BY THE SAME PEOPLE!

This Blair/Bush axis, currently, is pushing on so much of this Illuminati agenda, because when Britain says "Yes" and "We're going to do this" and America says the same, then there's very little that people can do to stop this policy from unfolding at a political level.

Martin: What do you see happening right now with the European Union? Are there any strongholds? Are there any people saying that they want to remain independent, and not be part of this Globalization agenda? Or is everybody sort of banding together to all jump on the One World bandwagon?

Icke: What you have in the European Union is a classic situation that has spanned the ages. And that is, the vast majority of people in Europe do NOT want a single currency; they do NOT want to be dictated to, in terms of their laws and what they can and cannot do, by bureaucrats—not even elected people, but bureaucrats in Brussels.

But the people who end up in the positions of governmental power and bureaucratic power in the different countries of Europe, they support doing the things that people don't want to happen. So, you know that people are against it, overwhelmingly, and the Euro [currency] is being imposed upon them. Bureaucratic legislation, out of Brussels, is being IMPOSED UPON THEM!

It's the classic structure, because of the way the Illuminati have structured society. It means that it doesn't matter what the majority of the people want in the bottom two-thirds of the pyramid because they're not making the decisions that decide what's going to happen. They're just having a vote every 4 or 5 years, to vote for a different mask on the same face to be the government for the next 4 or 5 years. And once those governments are elected—and, as you can see with Bush or Clinton, it doesn't matter which party, because the same agenda unfolds anyway—then the people who have been "elected" then have the power to decide if that country takes the Euro, if that country is dictated to by legislation. Now how much more power and national sovereignty is handed-over to the bureaucrats in Brussels?

You have this classic pyramid situation in which the tiny few at the top, who run the governments of the countries of Europe, are pushing this agenda on, while the vast majority of people are aghast at what it means for them.

Martin: We've been talking for years about the veil lifting, and about people waking-up, and about the planet shifting and changing frequency. I guess the question that always comes to my mind is, when these structures are so firmly in place, at a global level, at a governmental level, by the Global Controllers, the Global Elite, what difference does it make if the veil is lifted and people wake-up? If they are not able to overcome the military might and the technological capability of those in positions of power, what difference does it make?

Icke: Yeah, I can understand the question, and it can be a very discouraging point. But there are two things that need to happen. And we're starting to move on now, as the Globalization protests are showing, along the road of the first part of it.

Stage One is for people to know that there IS a problem going on, that there IS an agenda going on. No one is going to do anything to challenge an agenda they don't know exists! So what we, first of all, need to do—and we are making progress, no doubt about that. Is it enough, or no? Would we like more? Of course! But progress is being made in people realizing that there is a major situation to look at here, and that the world is rapidly going in a direction that is not good for people.

So, identifying the fact that there is a problem, and who's behind it, and the way that we're manipulated, is absolutely vital before anything else can happen.

The Second Stage is: What can we do about it? If, as is the case, you have a literal handful of people at the top of these pyramids, and indeed, the global pyramid, which encompasses all the others, dictating to, literally, 6 billion, then you have a situation in which the tail is symbolically wagging the dog.

We need to, in this Second Stage I'm talking about, realize where the REAL power is, and realize, also, that we must not go into this with the mentality of: "We have to fight the Illuminati. We have to fight these people who are doing these things."

And this is where the Christian Patriot Movement in America needs to sit down, take a deep breath, and start thinking a bit more clearly about it's own attitudes. Because if people think they are going to fight this, first of all, it's going to be like trying to stop an elephant with a pop gun, and it will also give the elephant—the Illuminati—the excuse to come in and blow you away.

And secondly, it's a very true thing, it's a great truth, that what you fight, you become. If we're going to approach this whole thing with "we must fight"—holding anger and all these other emotions that manifest in conflict—then we are just going to become another mask on the same face. We're going to become what we claim to be fighting and opposing.

The way forward is NOT in anger and violence or any of these emotions; it's in stopping cooperating with the system. The system only exists because we cooperate with it. The banking system only exists because we go on borrowing money that doesn't exist, and paying interest on it. The system only exists because we go on paying that interest.

If someone comes out of Downing Street or the White House and says: "We've had a discussion and we've come to the conclusion that this is what we're going to do. This is what's going to happen in this country, and this is what people are going to have to conform to." That power to impose that only exists if the people say: "Oh, well, ok then, we better do it because the President says it, and it's gone through Congress, and it's the law."

People say: "You must respect the law." For me, you must only respect laws that respect people. And if we're going to have a situation whereby we have this sequence, politicians who are not accountable to the people, a handful of them decide that they are going to bring in certain laws that take away basic freedoms, and the people then say: "Well, we better accept it because you can't break the law. You must respect the law." Then we might as well all go away and forget about it, because nothing is going to change.

We've got to get beyond this mind-set of "acting within the law" and start saying: "Well, hold on a minute. Let's look at the law first."

Right. The law says you must not murder. Ok, fine, got that, agree with that, because that's standing for someone's freedom not to be bloody murdered. But there are other laws that take away fundamental freedoms, just for the sake of control of the people, and those laws do not respect the people, so the people shouldn't respect them.

The banking system does not respect people, it actually creates grotesque suffering for people; therefore we, as a people, should say: "We're not having anything to do with that!"

Now, if a handful of people stopped paying interest on money to banks, then those people can be sorted-out and isolated. But if, en-masse, people stopped paying interest to banks, and started firing letters in saying: "I will pay this interest when you prove to me that I've actually borrowed physical money", then the whole system starts to collapse. And it collapses because we are, at last, stopping, or bringing to an end, our conditioned co-operation with a system that's only there to control and exploit us.

For instance, we could start asking questions about where things that we buy in shops are made, and under what circumstances, and then stop buying those products if we object. THE POWER IS WITH THE PEOPLE!

Where does the money come from to keep these corporations going? It comes from people paying taxation and buying their products. We have the choice not to!

This process of CEASING TO COOPERATE with a system of control is absolutely fundamental to bringing it down. I'll give you a very simple example. Like I said earlier, George Bush comes out of the White House and says: "I've decided that this legislation is going through and this is what's going to happen."

What if the people, or enough of them, were informed enough to say: "We're not doing that!" Where's the power? George Bush and those guys only have power because we give it to them.

There was an example back in the '80s now, which I was involved in, whereby Margaret Thatcher brought in something called the Poll Tax, which was a grotesquely unfair tax, in the sense that poor people were paying more than rich people in many, many cases. If people had acquiesced and said: "Oh, well, it's the law, so we better just do it", we'd still have it.

Instead, it was so grotesquely unfair that enough people rebelled to say: "We're not paying it!" And vast numbers of people in Britain, including myself, refused to pay it. As a result, the Poll Tax was dropped because the governance can only govern—and the Illuminati can only impose their will—when people play a fundamental part IN THEIR OWN IMPRISONMENT by accepting this crap.

There are two things we need to do. And I think Stage Two needs to really operate with much greater emphasis, now.

First of all, we need to inform people of what we've uncovered in terms of how the manipulation works—who's behind it and to what end.

And secondly, point out that this edifice of power is an absolute house of cards, and it's only up there, it's only standing, because WE'RE holding it up. And once we stop being the "prison bars" of our own prison, then we'll see what has been true all along—that the Illuminati have no power whatsoever, except that which we hand to them every day.

Martin: I think Gandhi was probably the first example of non-violent non-cooperation. The principles that he put into effect are as relevant today, or more so, as they were then. [Note: Satyagraha ("the force of truth") was the term Mohandis K. Gandhi derived from Hindi for his version of "active non-violence" to distinguish it from the misnomer use of "passive resistance". — R.M.]

Icke: Yeah, absolutely. And the point being that there is a reason why, there are many reasons why, but one of the reasons why these guys are putting the agent provocateurs into these protests at global summits, creating the violence which then ends up on the TV screens, IS BECAUSE THESE GUYS KNOW THE POWER OF PEACEFUL PROTEST AND NON-COOPERATION. IT IS THE ULTIMATE POWER. PEACE IS THE ULTIMATE POWER!

If it's done with a determination that: "Peaceful we may be, but we're not stepping back, and we're not going to concede ourselves to fear. We're going to stand here for as long as it takes, and we're going to not co-operate for as long as it takes." That is the ultimate power to bring this down!

And that's the area we've got to start looking at, and stop stockpiling bloody weapons, thinking we're going to go to war with these people. It's nonsense. It's suicide, for a start. And it hands all the propaganda cards to the Illuminati.

I mean, what are they doing at these global protests? They're actually creating a situation in which they can present themselves as the "voice of reason", the "voice of democracy", and the "voice of freedom", against these anarchists who just want chaos in society. And the reason they're creating, artificially, this violence, is because they're terrified of the real power of peaceful protest.

But we need to go a stage further than just peacefully protesting. We need to stop cooperating with these people and with the system they've created for us.

Martin: Here in America, many of us would consider that, if we are, in fact, imprisoned in these cells of choices that we've made over the years—you know, there are property taxes, and regular taxes, and our society is structured in a certain way—if I don't cooperate, what does that mean in very real terms? Does that mean I don't go to my job? Does that mean I stop driving a car? Do I withdraw to the mountains and buy a gun? Some people become very overwhelmed at the thought of the implications of what that would mean in terms of taking responsibility for change.

Icke: First of all, people need to become informed. If you start doing this without being informed, then you can create real problems for yourself.

And also, I'm not sitting here saying that you can bring the system down with half a dozen people refusing to pay taxes, or refusing to pay their interest to the bank.

This has to be a MASS protest. It has to be a MASS action.

And that's why Stage Two can only really start to manifest when Stage One—i.e., informing people what the hell is going on—has actually reached a certain critical-mass point. This is why getting the information out there, of the problem, is absolutely crucial to starting to generate enough people in awareness to do something about it.

And we've come so far along this road of self-imprisonment and conditioning that I'm the last person in the world who says we're going to turn-around and go in another direction without real challenges. We're not. And we need to understand that.

There are no easy solutions in terms of, say, tomorrow you wake up and everything's fine. It's not going to be like that. But there are people who are aware, and they are out there doing it—they just won't get in the mainstream media—but they ARE the front of the snowplow of Stage Two.

There are people in Canada who are taking on the Canada Revenue Service and having tremendous success, often, in exposing the fact that the legislation is simply not there to force people to pay income tax. It's never been passed. And there are people who are actually going to court and tying these guys in knots.

By GETTING INFORMED about the law, and GETTING INFORMED about language and what words really mean, they are the front of the snowplow—who are having to duck, so they take some to go out there and start to push Stage Two into operation. And when people see that it is possible to take the system on and win, and expose it, then you're going to bring more and more people behind you.

What ever changed in the world without a few people, at first, having the guts to be the first to do it?

But people are not going to start not cooperating with the system unless they're first informed of the consequences of going on as we are. And like I said earlier, we're in this window of time where we're beginning to see on the news every day the consequences of sitting on our hands and keeping our heads down.

It's going to be a rough ride the next 2 or 3 years, but they're CRUCIAL years! They're crucial years when we have the opportunity to take the foundations out of this pyramid before the warfare and ethnic hatred • Creating a false economic system, and • Assassinating and "replacing" our most trusted spiritual leaders, rulers, and elected officials.

THE CONTROLLERS: THE HIDDEN RULERS OF EARTH IDENTIFIED BY COMMANDER X

We are the property of an alien intelligence! "Our" planet is a cosmic laboratory and we are but guinea pigs to those who have kept us prisoners on Earth. Humankind continues to wage all-out battle with those who have kept us as their slaves since the beginning of time. They are:

- The Soulless Ones
- The Greys
- The Elders
- The Counterfeit Race
- The Illuminati

They have, says the author (who is of military intelligence) kept us in human bondage by: • Controlling our minds • Planting imperfect thoughts in our heads • Kidnapping humans • Impregnating women • Causing global cement and the concrete solidify.

And this whole structure that they're aiming towards, this Global Fascist State, which is unfolding by the minute, before that really solidifies into a situation of complete control, we have an opportunity of 2 or 3 years here now to undermine its foundation so that it cannot manifest as it's been planned to. That is, literally, people at the bottom of the pyramid who are holding the top up there, the capstone of the pyramid, the Illuminati, is only there because we're holding it up. It's 2 or 3 years in which we can just walk away and let the capstone fall. And that is through non-violent, peaceful, non-cooperation.

The way that we can expose the people in a very simple way to what's going on, and actually to just show the power of non-violent protest, doesn't have to be intent. You can actually use many different techniques to do it.

One of the things I've had in my mind for a long time, and I think it would be extremely effective. Again, a large, large number of people have got to do it.

But if you want to expose the banking system and the Federal Reserve for what it is, which is a scam that's lending fresh air and charging people interest on it, including the government, then you can conduct public meetings around America and get a handful of people to come and listen to you, and you'll get a few more people informed.

But if you had a mass, and I mean a MASS, coordinated campaign in which people bombarded the Federal Reserve address with empty jam jars, or empty containers, and dumped loads of them on the steps, then you suddenly have a situation where the Central Bank, privately owned, of America is bombarded with empty containers.

Now I KNOW—as someone who has been in the news media earlier in my life—THAT'S A STORY! That's a story.

So, once you've got the story, you can then explain what the hell it's about. It's a protest about the fact that we are borrowing the contents of these empty containers, and paying interest on it, and that's what the national debt is. And that's what business debt is. And that's what personal debt is. If we just sat down and coordinated a protest, some of them funny, and just lost our reverence and loosened-up a bit, we could actually expose this whole scam in so many different ways. When you hear that the Federal Reserve has been bombarded with empty containers and empty jam jars full of fresh air, what's going on? You've got people's attention. What are they doing this for? What's it all about?

Well, it's because that's what you're borrowing, mate. We're just paying the national debt back. There are so many things we can do which do not involved violence, but are far more effective than stockpiling weapons.

Martin: There is a danger, I think, in this country, and probably in Europe too—there is a tendency here to organize, form an organization, have meetings, and do those things. And yet, whenever you organize, that's when there is infiltration and undermining by different factions, and other agendas come into play. So people have to be careful in their actions, in their wish to generate change. Very often there is a tendency to have an over-zeal that is, then, if it is a non-informed action, in the outward world, it comes across as being either flaky or very poorly directed. And there is a danger of getting either arrested or harassed.

For example, you mentioned the American Patriot Community. There's a real emphasis on the Second Amendment with a lot of Christian Patriots in this country, and they're very big on their guns and stockpiling, just like you said. And it's a real mistake to think that, with a pop-gun, you're going to defend yourself against the kind of technology that is available to the secret government types.

So I think it's really important—I agree with you 100%—to one, be informed; and two, if you take action, have it be a thoughtful action, one that really can make a difference, either by generating an interest in the media because it's so unique or funny, like you said.

I think people have gotten very stifled in their ability to protest or create attention on issues. I know in the '60s and '70s, there was some really creative stuff happening.

Icke: That's what we need. We need CREATIVE protest that highlights an issue in a way that grabs public attention. It's a truism that you can only inform people when you have their attention. And getting public attention is the key, and then you can inform them.

For me the big question to keep asking, both when we are thinking “what can we do to most effectively expose this and inform people?” and also the same when we are being told a certain version of events by government or media. The key question is: WHO BENEFITS? What we have to sit down and ask ourselves is: Who benefits from me doing this action? And who benefits from me believing what the media or the government is telling me?

And I think if the Christian Patriots—you know, I'm NOT knocking them, they've been extremely important in communicating the basic scam of the Global Agenda throughout America. And without them—I don't share their religion and all that stuff, but who cares? They have a right to it, as long as they leave me to my thoughts and lifestyle, also. But without them, America would be far less informed about this Global Agenda than they currently are, so I'm NOT knocking them! But what I'm saying is, if they sat down and thought about stockpiling weapons and that kind of resistance, and asked themselves the question: “Who benefits from me doing this?”, if they calmly looked at that, they would find that who benefits is actually the government because, for instance, what justified Waco? It didn't REALLY justify it, but what did they try to use to justify the Waco genocide there? The fact that they were stockpiling weapons!

We have to be street-wise here, and the key word is WISE, rather than reactive, and start to ask: “Who benefits from what I am doing?” And if the peaceful route was taken, the peaceful, non-cooperation route was taken, then you are giving far fewer, if any, propaganda cards or other excuses to those who you are seeking to expose.

Like I've said, they aren't putting agent provocateurs into these Global Summit protests for nothing! They're doing it because they know the power of peaceful protest. And, again, who benefits? And who benefits from sending empty jam jars and containers with little notes in them, saying: “Paying back the national debt!”?

Who benefits are those who wish to expose the lunatic, extraordinarily bizarre nature of what debt and what banking is, and what the national debt is!

Martin: You know, as you move from Robots' Rebellion, through several books to your Biggest Secret, and now Children Of The Matrix, do you think you reach a point where you have uncovered it all? Or do you find that you just focus in different areas?

Icke: Now, what I've done—Children Of The Matrix is 500 pages, Biggest Secret is 500 pages, And The Truth Shall Set You Free is 500 pages, and I've hardly scratched the surface, basically. Because the picture gets bigger the more I travel the journey.

And it goes, more and more, off planet.

And you start to realize what we're living in is just an illusion.

The reason I called the book Children Of The Matrix is because the basic themes of that movie, The Matrix, are absolutely the way things are. We are creating an illusion. And the world that we see and perceive is illusion, created by our own minds.

And if you, therefore, have this knowledge, as the Illuminati do, you can manipulate the minds of the masses to create the world, the illusion, that you want them to create, because it suits your agenda.

And what we're looking at here, in the end, is not moving from an illusion to the “real world”—because there is no real world in this frequency range we're operating within. It's “just” an illusion. We're looking at the choice between creating an illusion which is a prison, or an illusion which is a paradise. But either way, both are based on illusions because this world is just the creation of our own minds.

And this is the area that I'm moving into now. My next book will be moving very much into this area of the spiritual—the fundamental spiritual dimension behind how we can change this reality.

The Reptilians and the Bilderberg group, the Council on Foreign Relations, they're just merely aspects of the illusion. At the end of everything, this whole world is just a figment of our imagination.

And our current imagination is one of: “I can't” or “I must not” or “I'm not in control of my own destiny; I must look to others to tell me what to think because others know best” and “I am just an ordinary man in the street, so what can I do?”

That is the present figment of our imagination of ourselves, and therefore it has collectively manifested as what we call “the world”.

So, what we need to do—because we have thought this prison into existence, our internal prisons have collectively become the selective prison we call “planet Earth”—we need to understand—and this is more important than any exposure of Bilderberg groups or anything—that WE HAVE CREATED the world that we perceive! It is the figment of our collective imagination. And what we need to do is not fight it, or shake it, or bomb it out of existence; we need to think it, feel it out of existence, and replace it with a better reality.

And that’s the foundation of how we switch a prison to a paradise.

We think one out of existence because it’s no longer our reality of ourselves, and therefore, collectively, the world. And we think into existence another reality, a reality of peace, of love, of respect for another’s right to be different.

And when we think that, and create that, through our own transformation of our imagination of ourselves, then the Illuminati and the Reptilian entities, whatever form they may take, will be thought out of existence because they will no longer be necessary. They will no longer have a part to play in the new reality that we can create.

I’ve gone through these books, going on about the conspiracy and how it works and stuff like that, but what I’m moving into, very rapidly now, is the most important part of it all, which is the NATURE OF REALITY, the nature of the world we’ve created.

So, we can think the prison out of existence, and put the paradise into existence.

When I’m talking about sending jam jars, all that stuff, to the Federal Reserve, and all these kinds of non-violent, non-cooperation things that I’m talking about, they are interims. They are steps on the journey to the REAL point of power and change—which is when we realize that this is a great illusion, and therefore, WE’RE IN CONTROL of the illusion. We can turn it from what we don’t like into what we do like, by changing what we project, and therefore manifest, in this world.

And by doing these protests, by not cooperating, by seeing the effect of people, together, ceasing to cooperate with the system, that’s part of the process of understanding where the TRUE power is. And it’s not with George Bush. And it’s not with Congress. And it’s not with Reptilian entities. IT’S WITH US! The real power is thinking them out of existence, thinking this prison out of existence, and thinking a new world into existence.

This world is just a manifestation of human consciousness. If we all thought and projected an energy and a consciousness of love for each other, and respect for each other, LIKE NOW, THIS MINUTE, this world would transform this minute, absolutely transform. It would not be the same place 60 seconds from now that it is now. This is the key. This is the foundation.

And this is when we reach this critical mass of consciousness awakening—and we’re moving there, not as fast as we want, but we’re moving there. Then we will see this world change. And we will see the structure of power and control fall with a speed that would beg a belief from the perspective that we have at the moment.

Martin: Well, I think, David, you just answered my question from earlier, which was: “What difference does it make if the veil lifts?”

And the difference is the dichotomy between power, money, control, and lust for the physical versus love, compassion, kindness to others, service to others, in this holographic world. Ultimately what we’re talking about, when that veil lifts, is separating the wheat from the chaff, symbolically or literally, so that people enter, literally, a state of love-consciousness, and kindness to one another, and compassion for one another—and the world of violence and service to self simply falls away, ultimately.

Icke: Absolutely. And like I say, we think the prison out of existence, and we feel it out of existence, and we love it out of existence.

You know, this is why the Illuminati and these other-dimensional entities have spent, literally, thousands and thousands of years, up to the present moment—not that time exists, really, but in our linear-time vision of reality—dividing and ruling us, putting us in fear, putting us in conflict with each other, and killing us; that we’re not in control of our lives, that God is, or some religious entity is, or some scientific accident is.

This is all part of conditioning us out of the TRUE understanding of the power and the magnificence of who we are.

We are people who create this world by our thoughts, second by second. We change the thoughts, we change the world. This is the area that I’m going into now; and this is, for me, the absolute foundation of how this world is going to change.

Martin: I think another important aspect of what we’re talking about has to do with the society in which we live—in this country as well as Europe and other places—is very focused on noise and chaos and distraction, and particularly to the senses, especially to the audio canal. In order to arrive at this state that we’re talking about, one needs QUIET. You have to hear yourself think in order to arrive at this place.

So, I think, one thing the Global Controllers have been aware of is the power in quiet. And they have created, in part, noise and chaos in our world to disallow this “peace” from taking place.

Icke: I’ve been saying for years that people talk about air pollution and water pollution. NOISE pollution is, actually, just about the most crucial element of pollution that you can have. In Britain, now, which is a very, obviously, small and highly populated country, it’s very, very difficult to find silence. And so what we have to do is to learn to find silence amidst the noise. And we need to find peace within the chaos.

You know, to a large extent, people think that to find peace, and find solitude, and to find quiet, you have to go and find some vast piece of land in wilderness land, where there’s nothing going on, and it’s quiet, and it’s peaceful. And that’s lovely, and it’s beautiful. But you know, we live in the world as it is, so somehow we have to find solitude and quiet and peace while all hell is breaking loose around us. And that’s absolutely critical for us to do.

People can talk to me sometimes; I mean, some people think I’m quite ignorant—what we call ignorant, in England, which is kind-of anti-social, I suppose—and non-communicative with people. But people who know me realize that I’m not responding to people who are talking to me because I’m not hearing them. I can go into another space, amidst noise and the everyday world, and not be part of it. In fact, it worries me, sometimes. [Laughter]

Martin: [Laughter]

Icke: Get hit by a bloody truck or something, and not hear it coming.

So, we can do that. But you’re absolutely right. I couldn’t agree more. With the noise pollution, and also the pressure of life, of surviving another day, of paying the rent another month, is all part of the process of keeping our heads down and keeping our focus on survival, and not lifting our heads and actually saying: “Oh, my God, so THAT’S what’s going on!”

And this is why, in America, a lifestyle that used to be paid for by one job, now takes two or three.

That document that came to light, Silent Weapons For Quiet Wars, talked about how to keep the masses in line, and how to manipulate them. I remember one line in it: “Keep them busy, busy, busy, back on the farm with the other animals.” And that’s absolutely what they’re doing and seeking to do, and seeking to push on.

And noise pollution, I couldn’t agree more, is absolutely part of the process of keeping us focused IN THIS WORLD, and AT THIS LEVEL of our consciousness, in this tiny frequency range we call the physical world, instead of having that inner quiet where we can access much higher levels of ourselves which can SEE THROUGH the illusion.

Martin: In your research and in your travels, have you come across any researchers or any scientists who seem to have their finger on the pulse of the holographic universe?

Icke: I’m reading a lot of books at the moment, and have in the last few months, about this very subject. And there is an excellent one called The Holographic Universe, in which an author pulls together a tremendous amount of scientific experimentation and background, which makes it very, very clear that this “reality” is just a hologram. Once you realize that the body is a hologram, and everything is a hologram, suddenly so many mysteries start to fall from your eyes.

But I’ve come across a lady called Giuliana Conforto, who’s an Italian physicist. Funny thing, I came across a book called Man’s Cosmic Game, and she's got a follow-up book, as well. And I read it. It's just tremendous, because here is a mainstream, if you like, scientist, who is explaining all these esoteric concepts, using scientific experimentation and knowledge that never gets into the main scientific journals, but has, in fact, been shown to exist. Like I say, she says that we actually perceive around 10 percent, or less, of the mass matter in the universe that is known to exist; never mind that there are other dimensions, and stuff, of reality. And she's excellent.

And what happened was, having read her book, which I—I don't know where I got it from, now—suddenly got an email, one day, just after I finished it, from her, out of nowhere, from Italy saying: "I've read your books and I think we should communicate." [Laughter] You know? I'm very impressed with her.

Her book has been taking what we've been talking about for years, about the vibrational change, the awakening, and what-have-you, and she's explaining it all in scientific terms, but scientific terms that people who have been through physicist training can understand.

This is a really, really vital part of this whole awakening, and the unfolding of knowledge, is that people across the disciplines, including open-minded scientists, and open-minded doctors, etc., who start also to explain these things in their own terms. Because in the end, over the centuries, religion and science have been—the so-called "spiritual" and "scientific"—have actually been at different polarities, and disconnected from each other. It's like having astrology and astronomy disconnected from each other. They're actually different aspects of the same discipline. If you take something that is unified, like the connection between astrology and astronomy, and you divide it and push it to different polarities, then you are dividing information and knowledge. You're isolating one part of it, while emphasizing another, and therefore, you completely mislead people about the true nature of reality.

It's the same with spirituality and science. Spirituality and true open-minded science are THE SAME THING. The open-minded science, the true scientific seeker, rather than the perpetrator of the official lie, is merely explaining how spirituality, the power of the mind, vibrations, etc., can manifest physically, and can manifest in scientific terms.

What they've done is divide religion—which overwhelmingly is not spiritual, although they call it that—and science—which is not open-minded, but perpetuating a very, very small fraction of possibility, and distorting it at the same time.

So we have religion on one side, and science on the other. What we're now beginning to see is the spirituality without religion, and true, open-minded science, speaking the same truth in different ways. And that's what I find extremely encouraging.

Martin: There is an article that we'll be running, probably before this interview appears, and it's written by Gregg Braden. He quotes Max

Planck, Nobel Prize-winning father of the quantum theory, and he made the statement, when he accepted the Nobel Prize—which he says shook the foundation of physics at the time—and his statement was: "There is no matter as such! All matter originates and exists only by virtue of a force. We must assume behind this force the existence of a conscious and intelligent Mind. This Mind is the matrix of all matter."

Icke: Absolutely. That is precisely the way that I see the world. I quote, often, because I think it's so brilliant, a guy called Bill Hicks, the American comedian, who died in 1994, who said, as part of a joke, but he was a very profound and thinking man: "Matter is merely energy condensed to a slower vibration. We're all one consciousness, experiencing itself subjectively. There's no such thing as death. Life is just a dream. And we are the imagination of ourselves." And understanding that we're the imagination of ourselves, and therefore, this world is a "collective imagination of ourselves", is to understand the way we have to go to turn the prison to a paradise.

If you look and observe people—and in the end, it applies to all people, including me—you will find that we live in different mental, emotional prisons of guilt, of fear, of frustration, of all these emotions, of resentment. And, therefore, if you have 6 billion people who are living in their own internal prisons, their own individual prisons, then collectively they can do no other than to manifest a collective prison, a collective version of that.

And so, as I said in Children Of The Matrix, if this Reptilian force and this Illuminati did not exist, we would HAVE TO INVENT THEM, because they are part of expressing the outer prison that is the collective version of the individual prisons.

So, setting ourselves free from all of those things that imprison us as individuals, is to set the world free of the collective prison, of which each of us is part.

Working on ourselves is also working on the world—because we are the world, and the world is us.

Martin: Thus we're talking, essentially, about rewriting the program that forms "the matrix".

Icke: Yes. See, one of the things that surprised me, as I've talked about these very bizarre—from a conditioned point of view—very bizarre concepts of Reptilian shape-shifters and Illuminati and all that stuff, is how many people have accepted it, or been open to it. And it is because we all know, at some deeper level, what's going on in the world. We came into this world knowing what was going on. But we get conditioned at this conscious level of ourselves by what we have experienced, through the eyes and the ears, from the moment we were born. And it's not that we have to FIND enlightenment. We are enlightened! What we have to do is remove the barriers, which are the conditioning, we threw-up between ourselves and enlightenment. And, again, for me the Illuminati has had to work so hard, and continues to have to work so hard, to keep us in these mental and emotional prisons, because our TRUE state is one of enlightenment.

And I use the analogy of a bowl floating on the top of a tank of water. That bowl floating on the top is our natural state. What the Illuminati have had to do is to get hold of the bowl and push it down to the bottom of the tank. But they know that, to keep it there, they have to keep holding on to it.

And so, symbolically, they've had to bombard us from every angle, to suppress our true state of enlightened consciousness. They've done it through religion; they've done it through fear; they've done it through food additives; they do it through vaccinations; they do it through manipulation through the media. This whole, vast array of assaults on our true state of consciousness has been necessary to condition us into this state of amnesia, in terms of who we really are.

And once we can break the conditioning, we will open, all of us, to be flooded into this conscious level by our true state of being.

What happens when you take a bowl and you push it to the bottom of the tank, and suddenly you let go. The bowl rises to the top of the tank, it's true state, in a split second.

And this is the situation that we're in, I feel, that what we're trying to do is to communicate information that will break the conditioning, that will break the "spell" on our conscious level, and we can then break the amnesia and start to remember what we already know.

This is the power of telling people things—bizarre as they may be to the conditioned level—that are actually true, or at least have some truth in them. Because that truth eats away at the conditioning, because, on a level not that deep, people know that this is true, and so it stimulates something.

You know, after 11-12 years of this journey, this conscious journey of trying to uncover this stuff and communicate it, I've seen so many examples of people who have heard something, that at the first hearing seems bizarre. But as I

BY TIM SWARTZ

Exposes Project "Paper Clip" and the underground UFO bases of Hitler's elite scientific corps. Elements of the CIA and the Secret Government have imitated real alien abductions to convince the public of interplanetary invasion so New World Order gang can rule the Earth unchallenged.

Project Paperclip was the secret plan that took Nazi scientists and psychiatrists out of Germany and into the upper echelons of the U.S. governmental, scientific, and academic realms.

keep saying to people, you can't unhear something. And they've come back later and they've said: "That started a process, and I now see what you're saying—as bizarre as it is. I know there's something in it." It's because we're trying to get through this conditioning and talk to the REAL enlightened consciousness behind it.

The Illuminati are trying to continue to condition people, and others are trying to challenge that conditioning—and that, for want of a phrase, is the "battlefield" on which this whole situation is being played out.

Conditioned or not conditioned, that is the question!

Martin: For sure! Other than quiet, trying to create quiet time in your life to get in touch with these things, other than that, one useful tool that I've heard from those who have been the victims of mind control, and I'm sure that it's true, one technique that is useful to help unravel the program is writing on a daily basis, if only personal journal-keeping or personal note-taking. Very often, just putting something on paper can help free the mind.

Icke: Yeah. My own feeling is that there are 6 billion aspects of infinite consciousness on this—well, not even aspects of it—in the end, we are that consciousness. A droplet of water is the ocean, if it's connected to all the other droplets. But we have different expression, we emphasize different expressions of this one, infinite consciousness, and therefore, there are 6 billion unique expressions of consciousness in physical form on this planet. And, therefore, what will benefit one may not benefit another.

And so, in the end, put it this way: the most important aspect of change, for me anyway, is INTENT. Once you put out the energy of intent, that energy will draw to you what you need to achieve that intent.

Martin: Absolutely.

Icke: And that's why most people fall down, because what we need to achieve our intents is not always what we would like to do in the moment, where we would like to be, or who we would like to be with. But it's what's necessary.

And when life gets a bit tough when you put out an intent "I want to do this; I want to do that", there are a lot of people who give up at that point and think "I don't want to do it that badly." But once you put out the energy of intent, you draw to you what you need to achieve it.

And then the challenge is: Am I going to do what's necessary and flow with it, or am I going to say "No, thank you very much"?

And so, if people just sat down and put out the intent: "I want to be the full magnitude of who I can be. I want to manifest the genius that I really am. I am to reconnect, multi-dimensionally, with all the levels of who I am. I want to erase the conditioning of this lifetime, and probably previous lifetimes, too, which has put me in a position of not expressing the power and potential that I could." If people genuinely put out that intent, I absolutely promise them that the circumstances, and the people, will come into their universe, into their lives, that will be necessary to achieve that intent. And they will find the things that will most benefit them in their individual awakening. That's the key thing—intent.

People say that you have "karma", as it's called, for your actions. I don't think that. I don't accept that. I think you have "karma" for the intent behind your actions. I could be very nice to you because there's something that I want to get. I have an ulterior motive. Therefore, my action would be very pleasant toward you, but my intent would be not pleasant. It would be manipulating and malevolent. I would face the karma, not from my action, which would be very nice towards you, I would face it for my intent behind that action.

If we can get the intent right, then I think everything comes right.

And if people would just put out the right intent, and then flow with the experiences that come their way as a result of it, then the awakening and the breaking of the conditioning would be very much quicker than it would otherwise, I think.

Martin: I think you just hit the nail on the head with intent. And I think in order for many people to be aware of what their intent is, first they need to quiet themselves and get in touch with what their intent is. Because most people live in a state of chaos and noise, and again, arriving at that "quiet place", to then arrive at a clarity where intent can then blossom. Intent is the key, and I couldn't agree with you more.

Do you have any closing thoughts for our readers? Things to think about in this, what may be, a chaotic time in the next few years?

Icke: I think chaos is in the eye of the beholder, really. We are going to go into a period of chaos, but what is chaos? Chaos is often confused with transition. When something is breaking down which needs to break down—this system has to break down—then there will be a period of apparent chaos. But what it will be is not so much chaotic as things unfolding as they need to, because this system has to come down before something better can replace it, otherwise the system itself will stifle and suppress anything that seeks to replace it.

So, I think we should not get too focused on chaos as necessarily a bad thing. I'd also—at the end of the day, what we see as chaos at this conscious level of our being, can be extremely coordinated and non-chaotic at higher levels of our being. I mean, I've had periods of my life—and I'm sure there will be some more to come—which have appeared to be extremely chaotic and unexplainable. And yet, with the gift of hindsight, I can look back, and if, in truth, we can all look back and look at chaotic periods that we thought "This is ridiculous; this is terrible", we can look back and say "Well, hold on. I can see why that was necessary, and what it led to. In fact, it wasn't chaotic, as I thought, it was actually leading somewhere with great clarity." But only with hindsight can we see that.

And so, I think a lot of the chaos that will come, as the system breaks down, will be perceived as chaotic from my level, from this level, but from a higher level will be magnificently coordinated to help us awaken and replace the prison with a paradise. And I think it's coming.

Will it come in my lifetime? I don't know.

But will it be much closer in my lifetime? Yes, I'm absolutely sure of that.

I'm very optimistic about the future. I'm challenged in that opinion sometimes, when I turn on the news and see the Illuminati agenda unfolding before our very eyes, minute by minute.

If this Infinite Mind we call Creation is so lacking in its own power to manifest, that it can be dominated by a handful of very misguided people and other-dimensional entities, that they can run this planet indefinitely as they wish, then there is something seriously wrong with this Infinite Mind!

And, of course, I don't think that.

I think that what we're looking at is a period, now, when just as the Illuminati appear to be moving toward their ultimate goal of a Global Fascist State, is the same period in which, perhaps, that ambition, that agenda will collapse before our eyes!

Martin: That's a great thought to end with. Thank you so much, David, for taking the time to share these powerful ideas with our readers.

Healing Codes VIDEO Set (4-hours)

Could bioelectric technologies investigated during the Cold War provide the most advanced form of killing, enslaving, and coercing billions of unsuspecting people worldwide? More frightening: could infectious agents, including the "mad cow disease" protein "prion" crystal, have been engineered to effect a new insidious level of bio-spiritual warfare?

Dr. Len Horowitz investigates 2000 years of religious and political persecution and the latest technologies being used to enslave, coerce, and even kill billions of unsuspecting people.

This work returns the most precious spiritual knowledge, power, and "healing codes" to humanity. It offers new hope for the loving masses to survive the worldwide plagues, famines, and weather changes that are now at hand. In perfect time for these cataclysmic events, Healing Codes presents an urgent, monumental, and inspired work that will be hailed for generations to come.

Clean-Out Those “Closets” To Make Way For The New!

Editor’s note: Those who have a calling to receive messages from the Higher Realms for PUBLIC sharing are often under relentless attack by the adversarial dark energies—for obvious reasons. Moreover, ALL Lightworkers are under some degree of attack at this time as the dark forces struggle to maintain some foothold of control amidst the Great Awakening and the Great Cleansing well underway.

One of our longtime, finest public-message receivers has been under a “dark cloud” of heavy attack for many, many months now. That’s the bad news. The good news is that this very shy and humble “little dynamo” has just recently managed to overcome the tricksters, crawl out of the hole, and resume a most important calling greatly appreciated by many of you among our longtime readers.

As a personal aside, I (E.Y.) am especially honored by the TIMING of this particular triumph in a struggle we all can sympathize with and frequently have to endure as part of our testing on schoolroom Earth. That is, I regarded the following writing as the most wonderful surprise gift this talented receiver could have presented to me, exactly on my 50th birthday—yes, on the same date, August 17, as the anniversary of the Harmonic Convergence, when you could say the Great Awakening began in 1987. I was elated about the personal triumph it represented for this receiver, and even more delighted because of the potential a message such as this so obviously carries as a help and a healing (Master Hilarion’s department) to so many of you struggling with the very same issues at this turbulent time.

(The story gets even more astonishing because the birthday surprise actually DOUBLED—with an August 17 writing, elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM, from yet another longtime public receiver who had similarly been under heavy attack and “just not hearing” for a very long time. We are ALL the thankful beneficiaries of these two great souls coming back “online” and you can be SURE this is a clue to the timing of some interesting events that must be just around the corner—as Hatonn alludes to in his “crop formations” writing elsewhere.)

After all, the dark energies are hardly “playing nice” with you Lightworkers who, in total, are making a tremendous difference—if “only” by your good (Lighted) example, even in seemingly small matters. Remember how Mark Twain put it: “There is nothing more annoying than a good example!”

Observant readers will recognize in the following writing the threads of an urgent theme that have been common to many of the spiritual messages shared in these pages, especially over the last few years. However, perhaps the weaving of those threads within so personal and down-to-Earth a sharing as this will help make the whole picture more “real”—something easier to identify with or relate to—and thus give more practical direction to some who are struggling with these same tricky issues.

8/17/01 MASTER HILARION WITH ESU “JESUS” SANANDA

Distractions, distractions, distractions.

Isn’t it interesting that, just as soon as you think you have cleared the decks and have a bit of quiet time, along comes another distraction which needs to be dealt with “right away”.

Why is it that all these things that pop up seem to carry an urgency with them? Do you realize that you spend most of your time “putting out fires”? And, they are generally fires that have been started by someone else, but in the end affect you directly, and you must deal with them.

We are not going to have a pity party; however, you wonder why you cannot quiet your mind, or why you cannot find that inner peace. Mostly it is because you have many outside sources continually distracting you.

And now, to put the frosting on the cake, so to speak, all sorts of issues from the past are rearing up, causing additional stress upon you. You have said so often recently that, if one more thing happens, you will scream. So why don’t you scream and at least release some of that pent-up energy that is weighing you down?

You MUST learn to take a stand with those who are so demanding upon your time and energy. Though it is a good thing that you are so willing to assist others with their problems, and do for others who need your help, remember that you are but one person, and have burdens of your own which must be handled.

It is your nature to help. It is your nature to be a caring and nurturing person. But you cannot save the whole world alone! There comes a time when you must have the courage and tenacity to simply say “Enough is enough!”

Do you realize that you have merely been running in what we would call the “autopilot” mode? Your greatest challenge of late is to simply get through one more day, only to face another day in the same manner.

Is this living your life? Is this doing your part in the mission? Is this what you came here to accomplish? Or—have you been distracted off your chosen path?

Being a responsible person does not mean that you must continually give away your energy to everyone else. Sometimes the kindest thing is to NOT help, and allow the other persons to work things out for themselves. By continually doing for the other persons, you may be having the effect of short-changing them—in that they will not have the opportunity for their own personal growth. The greatest teacher is experience, and if they are not given the opportunity to work through things for themselves, they will not have the experience of learning to solve problems.

You need to examine closely how you came to have much of the knowledge that others are so quick to take advantage of. Did you not garner the wisdom experientially—BY DOING? Did you gather some of it by being observant and learning from another’s example? Did you always call upon someone else to solve your problems, or did you sit down and think the problem through and come to your own conclusions? And in that problem-solving mode, did you not remember back and think how someone else might have handled the same situation?

It is very easy to slip into the do-it-yourself mode, because quite often it seems to be the best and most efficient way of dealing with the immediate situation. It also seems to you to be the “good samaritan” thing to do. However, you are only setting up a pattern. Now you have people calling you continually, wanting you to help them, or do it FOR them.

You must learn to let go of others’ burdens. You are wearing yourself out mentally, emotionally, and physically, and that is not really helping anyone.

The memories from the past that are creeping into your consciousness are doing so for a reason—and that purpose is CLEANSING! It is time to clean-out those dark, dingy, stuffed-to-the-brim closets. You have spent a lifetime stuffing things into those closets, and they are bursting at the seams!

Remember the saying about putting new wine into old skins? That the old skin will taint the new wine? Well, you are on the brink of discovery of MANY new things, but first you must clean-out the old to make room for the new. The emotions of the past will taint the new experiences if you do not first clean-out the old.

The connection between your heart energy center and your conscious mind is misaligned. And the connection between your emotional energy center (the solar plexus) and the heart have a shorted connection. You have spent so much of your life stuffing your emotions into the solar plexus energy center, when the healthiest thing would be to allow those emotions to flow upward, through the heart center for healing, through the throat chakra to release them verbally, through the psychic energy center, and out through the crown chakra (the spirit energy center), where that energy can be transformed.

You have no need to cling to those emotions. Let them go! Realize that YOUR feelings are as valid as anyone's, and there is nothing right or wrong with what you feel. It's how you DEAL with the feelings that is right or wrong (beneficial or detrimental).

By ignoring the emotions, you are never releasing them, and emotions are energy. After all this time, they have become stagnant and putrefied. They have become toxic to your system (body, mind, and spirit), and you will not be able to achieve a full integration of your whole being.

Until you can have a full integration of body, mind, and spirit, you will continue to view your life as a struggle. Until you cleanse yourself of those old, stale energies, you will not be able to move forward.

A truly balanced person is one who has fully recognized, acknowledged, and integrated all aspects of the being. Each aspect has it's own part, and each is equally important to the overall health and well-being of the individual. In this physical dimension, all parts are important, and one cannot function without the other. So, it is imperative, especially right now, that the whole being be cleansed.

The mind is a most powerful part of you, and has effects upon all parts of your being. Your greatest challenge is the ability to discern what you "hear" from what you think. Past programming is strong, and though you recognize truth from lies consciously, the old programming is stored in the unconscious and affects how you consciously discern.

Anything that tells you that you are not important, that you are a mistake, that you can't do anything right, that everything you do comes out wrong—is a lie! Anything that tells you that you do not deserve to rest, or that you have not earned your keep, is a lie. Anything that tells you that you deserve to be put down, is a lie. Anything that tells you that you are always wrong, is a lie. Anything that tells you that if someone does not agree with you, then that person doesn't like you, is a lie. But—the old programming keeps replaying, and it is adding confusion within you.

You have spent so much energy in your life putting your ego down that your ego is like an injured child. It has little-to-no self-confidence or self-worth, which is why you are continually beating yourself up and denying yourself even the smallest of pleasures.

For goodness sakes, if you want a bowl of ice cream in the middle of the day, allow yourself that pleasure once in awhile. Wherein is the harm in it? When you are hungry, eat! Stop telling yourself that you haven't earned your right to sit down and eat. The physical body needs nourishment! Why do you deny it same? That's old programming again.

Growing up, you were programmed with the strict farmer mentality that "those who don't work, don't eat"—even though there was always an abundance of food available. And, you were programmed to believe that having a snack (such as ice cream) is reserved only for reward of good behavior: "If you're real good, we'll have ice cream tonight." But since the old programming is always telling you that you're no good, you feel the guilt about indulging in what you consider a treat.

You have heard that "until you can love yourself, you cannot truly love another". It is very true. You have fallen into the lie that you are not worthy of love. If you're not worthy to be loved, then you are not worthy to love another. This is the way your mind has confused things.

There is a very strong dark influence very near you. It follows you around like a dark shadow. It has gained an advantage over you in your weakened moments and has taken a very strong hold over you.

"Why?" you ask? Why, indeed!

You have been on the very brink of a great and wondrous breakthrough in your journey, and you were about to become an extremely powerful being, once again, as you were in a distant past lifetime.

The dark energies are not playing nice! It is all out WAR against the forces of Light, for if the Light should win this war, the dark forces will no longer have any place upon the Earth. And the Earth has been their playground for mischief for a VERY long time!

The Light always has been—and ever shall be—more powerful than darkness. The dark entities know that their time is extremely short, so they are working day and night to drag as many as they can down the long, dark corridor with them. If they can sway the Lightworkers off their path and into the darkness, it is considered to be a giant victory—sort of like bonus points. You Lightworkers are sort of their Special Projects.

These dark influences can be so subtle that you may not notice the influence until it reaches a point where it is noticeable by others, or you reach a crisis point. In the beginning, it may just manifest itself as a little self-doubt, or a little short-term depression from time to time. Or you may experience a few nights of sleeplessness. Or you may have others who just attack you without provocation.

But then the pace and the intensity step up. You slip into a month or two of sleeplessness, depression follows on, loss of appetite hits, people seem to be mean and nasty to you all the time, you get disorganized, you become forgetful, you start making little errors here and there, then more and more. Finally, you are in such a state that you don't even recognize who you are. You become full of self-doubt and begin to wonder just why you're here in the first place. You may begin to feel that you are useless and that those around you might be better off without you in the picture, that you are a burden to them.

All of a sudden, you step back and realize that something is seriously wrong. Is it physical? Are you losing your mind? You can't seem to get anything accomplished; you're always running behind, but you are so busy you don't know how you're going to handle all of it.

You try to sit down and get quiet and get centered, but you can't. You pray, you meditate, you ask for Guidance, but you hear nothing. Then you become afraid that the Lighted Brotherhood has abandoned you. Then you think that there is no such thing as the mission. That there are no Lighted Ones or dark ones; it's all a bunch of nonsense and has absolutely no bearing on REAL life.

You begin to believe that REAL life is work, bills, family, chores, responsibilities—and nothing more. You tell yourself to stop complaining and just accept the lot you have drawn because, after all, this is as good as it's going to get, so stop whining.

And there you are! You are just existing. Going from one day to the next, going through the motions, not feeling, not caring, just plodding along, in hopes that one of these nights you'll be able to sleep for more than 2 hours straight.

You experience digestive problems. No matter what you eat, it sticks in your throat, and then causes such excessive acid reflux that you think you're about to die. You sit in your house, and only go out when it's absolutely necessary. You don't want to talk to anyone or see anyone.

You are now effectively immobilized, and it's one more Lightworker who the dark forces think they have disarmed. It's a real victory to them!

The only way out is to RECOGNIZE what is happening and what the source is, and to take a CONSCIOUS step to put it to an end. If it's not halted, sooner or later you will manifest a serious, life-threatening condition.

To effectively deal with these dark energies, you have to first RECOGNIZE them, and then FACE THEM WITH CONFIDENCE. They aren't going to leave on their own! It is going to require YOU to take action and be vigilant and conscious of nearly every thought and feeling that goes through you.

Let's take a bit of a break here, and we will, if you are willing, pick this up later on. Stop worrying about vacuuming, and what's going to be for supper. This is the most important thing that you can work on right at this present moment, for we have a door that has opened a bit, and we ask that you not get busied in other things right now. Leave that door cracked, for much Light can slip through the smallest of openings.

It is good that you have chosen to seek help. We are pleased and elated that you have finally come to the place where you are ready to tackle the issues.

You are needed. You are important. You are worthy. And you are much loved.

As always, we are with you in the Light of Creator Source, and we serve only the Highest Purpose of the Lighted Creator. Remember that when God looked upon His Creation, He was pleased, and called It a very good thing. He did not look upon anything as useless or junk, and neither should you.

We are Hilarion and Sananda. You honor us with your presence. We enjoy these times of communing with you. Peace be with you.

* * *

Sit back, and allow the words to flow. You need not be concerned, for I am right here with you, guiding you all the way. Yes, it is I, Esu "Jesus" Sananda, and with me is Master Hilarion. We, as always, come to you in service to the One Light of Creator Source, and we bring unto you the peace and healing that can only come from the Creator of all things. So, just relax, and you will do just fine.

You are not alone in your struggles, for there are SO MANY others who are experiencing similar difficulties, and each of you should know that there is reason for what is occurring in your lives. Those who have come into this life, especially at this time, are experiencing the greatest of all cleansings—that of the emotions. Your emotional centers are where so much of your burdens are carried, and where so much of your turmoil resides.

There is a new energy that cannot share space with the old, stagnant energy of suppressed emotions, and if you are going to move into this new energy, you must cleanse the emotional energy centers. This is the very reason that many of you are experiencing old, especially "negative" emotions, revisited.

Most of these emotions are from a long-ago past, that you have even perhaps forgotten about—and suddenly, there they are, confronting you. Be aware that if you are experiencing these things, there is nothing wrong with you; conversely, there is much right with you, for you are readying yourself for the new energy!

If these old emotional energies are not cleared away, you run the risk of manifesting physical ailments within the physical body. Have you taken a look lately at the obituary columns in your newspapers? They are filled with men and women in their 40s and 50s who are dying from all sorts of ailments, most of which can be traced back to levels of stressful living that the body and mind were unable to cope with.

Stress is a killer, and most of you are living in extremely stressful situations, running on the treadmill of life as though you are in a race against something. It need not be so, for you see, in the long run, it matters not whether you had that high-level job, the fast and fancy car, the big house in the "right" neighborhood, all the toys; IT WILL MATTER ONLY HOW YOU TREATED OTHERS AND YOURSELF.

People are allowing their own perceived expectations of others to dictate how they live their lives. You must ask yourself: Are you truly happy at a SOUL level, or are you just too busy trying to "get ahead" and have more?

If you would, stop for a moment and ask yourself why you came into this life. What did you wish to accomplish this time around? Are you there, or have you been distracted by what you thought you were expected to do?

Working long hours all week, going to the gym to work on the "perfect body", grabbing a bite to eat on the run, just to get to the weekend—and continually busy, catching up on the laundry, mail, housecleaning, shopping, going out to dinner, catching a movie, washing the car, running the kids to this activity and that activity—is a perfect recipe for physical collapse. You may take an hour or so on Sunday morning to sit in a church pew, and you consider yourself taken care of spiritually.

"So, what is wrong with this kind of life?" you ask. "Everyone else is doing the same thing" you say. But if you get still for more than a minute, and ask yourself: "Is this really what I want? Is this really why I'm here?" Most of you would be amazed at the revelation you would get.

Ask yourself this:

What am I running from?

What am I really trying to find?

Why am I in such a hurry?

What have I truly accomplished?

All the money, all the material possessions you can gather, all the physical pleasures you can find, are not going to fill that emptiness you know exists. Your spirit is crying out to you, but you are so busy running to and fro that you cannot even hear it. It is trying very hard to get your attention, but you keep ignoring it.

The perceived pleasures of the physical world are very enticing, and are everywhere you turn. But these pleasures are so short-lived that you continue to pursue more and more.

Stop and ask yourself: "When is enough really enough?" And "Have I achieved true happiness?"

So, is it any wonder that relatively young people, both men and women, are manifesting physical disorders that take them out of your world?

There is so little time taken to enjoy the beauty of the night sky, or the wonder of a flower opening, petal by petal, or the miracle of planting a seed and watching as its first little shoot of green appears. It is amazing how much more perspective you can gain by just getting quiet and watching Nature, and viewing it as a little child would—full of awe and wonderment.

Many of you are so caught-up in your complex lives that you have no room for the simple things. If it's not "high-tech", you have no time for it. If it's not making more money for you, what is its worth?

I ask you this, however: When you leave this world, what will you be taking with you? All that travels with you is your experiences and your memories. What experiences and memories are you packing for your journey? On the other side, there is no need of the high-tech toys, and you certainly can't spend any money there for there is no need of such. So, why are you in such a hurry accumulating things and money?

Ah, yes, you must gather lots of things and money for your old age, your retirement, your golden years. You must have all this stuff and money to leave to your children—for what? So they can fight over it and repeat your lives?

After you leave this world, you will realize that all you were seeking, gathering, and accumulating was of no consequence whatsoever. And, at the pace some of you are going, you may never make it to those supposed "golden" years because you are rapidly destroying the physical body. Again I say to you to read the obituary columns in the newspapers. They may give you a new perspective.

We point these very fundamental matters out to you, not to scold, but to try to reach you. The dark energies are exerting greater and greater influence upon your world. The greed and lust for more and more are giving these energies power. And, to many of you, it looks as if the dark side is winning this battle.

But I assure you that they are not! They are much more boisterous, and brag some, but the Light is much stronger than you can imagine. One little spark of Light is all it takes to create a blazing fire!

The time is critical, children. You are embarking upon a new journey in a whole new level of energy. And if you are going to step into this new life, this new world, you MUST purge from your lives the old things.

The energy you are about to encounter is most powerful, and will make your supposed technological wonders seem foolish and tarnished by comparison. It will make the world you are now living in seem dark and foreign.

There is a bright new day just over the horizon, but you cannot take the old things into it. The two energies cannot share the same space. You MUST get in there and clean out the old stuff. Cast off old doubts. Throw away the old programming. Purge from you the old stagnant energy. You will have no need of these, and they will only hold you back and make the journey more difficult.

Nearly every one of you has a sense that “something is coming”. You may not know what it is, but you know it’s “out there” somewhere.

Actually, that “something” is coming from WITHIN each one’s own spirit. It is trying to awaken you to prepare for the changes—for the new energy that is beginning to manifest upon your planet. The stirrings of dissatisfaction with your life are for the purpose of getting you out of your rut and moving forward. These stirrings, in conjunction with your own personal Guides, are attempting to get you to recognize and understand that your world is about to change drastically.

And yes, in many ones this is causing fear, because for most change is a fearful thing. Not because you don’t enjoy a change, but because it is an unknown. You are not certain what all that change is going to entail. You are not certain what that is going to mean to you personally. You have many fears of losing something. And yes, much will disappear—but only because you will embrace that which is about to occur, so it will not be perceived as loss.

If you are one of those who are on that treadmill of living, and you just don’t know why you are dissatisfied, step off and stop for a moment, and just watch and listen. While you are so busy running to catch up, or keep up, you will never know why you are “just not happy”.

But get quiet, and above all, GET HONEST WITH YOURSELF! Stop running and stop hiding from yourself, and you will get your answers. Seek the help of we of the Lighted Higher Realms, who stand ready to answer your heart’s longing to know. Realign your energy and your focus, and you will be able to see and understand. You will, at long last, find peace within.

But, I give you fair warning—it shall change you forever! But I think you will like the change.

We have told you for several years now that your planet was being infused with Light. That infusion of Light is what you are all sensing. It is what is causing the questions and changes within each of you. It is also the cause of the heightened battle of the dark energies, for the Light is weakening them.

But they are not going to leave without a struggle, and they are struggling right now to drag as many of you with them as possible. They are subtle and they are tricky, and unless you are on-guard against their tricks, they can influence you greatly and cause you much confusion.

Learn your own weaknesses, for these are the places where the dark energies will enter-in and gain a foothold. Self examination is the first place to start. Recognize where you are weak, and reinforce those areas. Put a shield of Light about them and work on them. Find out what is the source of weakness and strengthen it. Call upon we of the Lighted Realms for help.

But also know your strengths. These are your weapons against the enemy. Don’t be shy about knowing what you are “good at”. Just as you have weaknesses, you also have strengths. Make good use of them; don’t squander your gifts.

* * *

Well, now, that wasn’t so bad, was it? Working together, we have been able to get through this writing without any problems, haven’t we? Take note that not once did your phone ring, and no one came to bother you. It’s all a matter of attitude, my child, and I must say that your attitude right now is better than it has been for a very long time.

Learn to love yourself. Learn to appreciate yourself. Take the time to be good to yourself and get to know yourself again. Life isn’t going to be perfect, but if you allow us to work with you, it won’t be so overwhelming, either. You have no need to continue beating on yourself. You have many talents and many strengths, and whether or not you believe it now, you are a mighty powerful individual! Choose not to be swayed by every little breeze that blows. Keep your eye on the goal and you shall make it.

All that you have been going through will serve only to strengthen you further. It has also been an education for you that will come in handy in the near future. Others are going to need your help, and you will be able to draw from the experiences in order to help them.

What can we say but “Welcome back!” You know we never left your side, but you were in such a place of darkness that you could not hear us. But we were always there. You may not be back fully, as yet, but with time, love, and patience with yourself, you will get there again.

Understand that all those things of the past can only affect you if you give them power over you. It’s important that you examine each of them, but do not be attached to them, and then set them aside and move forward. There have been a lot of dark days, but there are many more days of Light just ahead for you.

Remember that you cannot do it all, nor should you try. Give others the opportunity to do, as well. It is as important for you to allow them their growth as it is for you to grow. It’s called balance.

Peace and love be with you. We are Hilarion and Esu “Jesus” Sananda, and we thank you deeply for taking the time to sit with us. As always, we leave you with the blessing of the Light of the Creator—The One Source—the only Source of All That Is. If you wish to call this God, then do so.

Keep the Light about you and the darkness can have no foothold. Salu.

The Masters and the Spiritual Path

You have friends in high places...

There are Masters who have come out of all the world’s great spiritual traditions. These Great Lights of East and West have graduated from Earth’s schoolroom and reunited with Spirit in the process known as The Ascension. Now they come to show us the pathway home.

The Masters tell us that they are examples and not exceptions to the rule. We, too, are destined to fulfill our life’s purpose and reunite with Spirit.

In this intriguing work you will discover valuable keys to your own spiritual path: How The Ascension differs from nirvana and samadhi, the relationship between the spiritual and material universes, and the difference between ascended and unascended Masters. You will learn about the function of the spiritual hierarchy and the role of the Masters of East and West. Includes a unique meditation on the bliss of union with Spirit and a breathing exercise to help you balance and expand consciousness.

The Revolutionary World Of Free Energy: A Status Report

Editor's note: For a long time now, we have been keeping a lookout for a good general summary article on the subject of Free Energy. Many of you have a longstanding interest in this area of technology, and some of us have even been involved in Free Energy developments and in exploring "suppressed" areas of science and technology which, among other things, support such devices.

Back in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM was when we last presented something worthwhile on this subject. At that time we shared an eye-opening account of just one aspect of the Free Energy subject, titled "Purposeful Con-fusion Surrounding Cold Fusion" which many of you appreciated for its insights AND implied cautions.

Working in this area in any way other than quietly and silently is a good way to paint a bulls-eye on your back. First there's the fact that such devices challenge the contrived "bibles" of conventional science—and thus make a lot of ego-driven and money-driven scientific "preachers" look bad. Then there's the much larger fact (so big that it's often overlooked) that Free Energy has vast ramifications in terms of shifting the balance of power from those who have been the longtime controllers of this planet to those who have been the slaves under such control.

Those of you familiar with the great electrical genius Nikola Tesla are well aware that, for some time before even the twentieth century began, he was a pioneer in this area. The powerful, dark forces of greed, exercising their selfish control over this planet, schemed mightily to prevent Tesla (and some others of his contemporaries) from sharing discoveries and inventions with humanity that would have transformed this prison planet into a paradise.

It is critical to appreciate the far-reaching effects that Free Energy would have on so many larger issues that are measures of our fundamental freedom as human beings. It's not just a matter of no electric bills or the need for gasoline for our cars and trucks. The crooks in high places know all too well that, as soon as we-the-people are sufficiently free from their control over energy sources, the game is OVER and their entire, longstanding "pyramid of power" crumbles—to use David Icke's familiar power-structure analogy.

Our News Desk eagle-eye, Dr. Al Overholt, recently came across a document well worth sharing with SPECTRUM readers that has been spreading around a number of Internet websites. This disbursement (as well as herein) is all the better to insure the continued existence of this information, for as many of you are well aware, great efforts of deception are continually expended behind the scenes to cause the public to believe that no such things as Free Energy or Free Energy devices exist—except, of course, in the minds of lunatics.

The document we are sharing here was prefaced on Jeff Rense's (www.rense.com) website with an important introduction by Ken Adachi (Editor@educate-yourself.org) which we are likewise including here for obvious reasons:

"I played a role in helping to arrange an important lecture on September 12, 2000 in Irvine, California by Dr. Peter Lindemann titled 'The Cold Electricity Secrets Of Edwin Gray'. Prior to that, we had often talked on the phone about Free Energy topics and had both agreed that the only way to get Free Energy 'secrets' out to the public is to simply give them away and forget about making money. Any attempt at going the conventional route, by applying for patents and lining-up money with venture capitalists, etc., was doomed to fail (as history has repeatedly demonstrated) at the hands of the controlling corporate elites and their pals in the military and government.

"This well written essay by Peter Lindemann is a fair accounting of the reality of Free Energy today, and of the forces that have conspired to keep these marvelous technologies from benefiting the common man for nearly a century. That time of suppression has now passed. Thanks to the Internet, the cat is definitely out of the bag and, in more ways than one (unfortunately and fortunately), it's a Brave New World."

While the cost of both gasoline for our automobiles and electric power for our houses is driven ever upward by the greed of those who control such industries, that greed likewise drives the search for alternative energy sources. It can't be long now before these nearsighted, greed-drunk neanderthals do themselves in. And it couldn't happen to a "nicer" bunch of crooks.

Those of you aware of The Larger Picture (such as David Icke reiterates and expands upon again in our front-page feature for this issue of The SPECTRUM), may feel somewhat confined within Dr. Lindemann's more conventional breakdown of "The Invisible Enemy" into "The Four Obstructions". After all, it is basically ONE "Invisible Enemy" (controlling force) operating through MANY, MANY categories of puppets—not just those he mentions. And even in that assessment, it would be more accurate to recognize this "Invisible Enemy" as a teacher playing a role to induce us to grow in responsibility in this schoolroom-Earth environment.

That issue of personal responsibility for what has befallen us is a fundamental point which Dr. Lindemann DOES emphasize, which we can all agree is the case. It is certainly time we began to reclaim what has been gifted to ALL of humanity, not just the controlling elite. And Free Energy is only one category of such confiscated gifts. As Dr. Lindemann puts it so well in the context of The Larger Picture: "If we stand up and refuse to remain ignorant and action-less, we can change the course of history. It is the aggregate of our combined action that can make a difference. Only the mass action that represents our consensus can create the world we want."

Notice that this statement is just about identical to what David Icke is likewise urging us to do. Perhaps we're being Guided to learn the same fundamental lesson from many seemingly different directions!

In the late 1880s, trade journals in the electrical sciences were predicting "free electricity" in the near future. Incredible discoveries about the nature of electricity were becoming commonplace. Nikola Tesla was demonstrating "wireless lighting" and other wonders associated with high-frequency currents. There was an excitement about the future like never before.

Within 20 years, there would be automobiles, airplanes, movies, recorded music, telephones, radio, and practical cameras. The Victorian Age was giving way to something totally new. For the first time in history, common people were encouraged to envision a utopian future, filled with abundant modern transportation and communication, as well as jobs, housing, and food for everyone.

Disease would be conquered, and so would poverty. Life was getting better, and this time everyone was going to get "a piece of the pie".

So, what happened? In the midst of this technological explosion, where did the energy breakthroughs go? Was all of this excitement about "free electricity"—which happened just before the beginning of the last century—all just wishful thinking that "real science" eventually disproved?

CURRENT STATE OF TECHNOLOGY

Actually, the answer to that question is NO. In fact, the opposite is true. Spectacular energy technologies were developed, right along with the other breakthroughs. Since that time, multiple methods for producing vast amounts of energy at extremely low cost have been developed. None of these technologies have made it to the "open" consumer market as an article of commerce, however. Exactly why this is true will be discussed shortly.

But first, I would like to describe to you a short list of "free energy" technologies that I am currently aware of, and that are proven beyond all reasonable doubt. The common feature connecting all of these discoveries is that they use a small amount of one form of energy to control or release a large amount of a different kind of energy. Many of them tap the underlying Ether Field in some way, a source of energy conveniently ignored by "modern" science.

1. Radiant Energy

Nikola Tesla's magnifying transmitter, T. Henry Moray's radiant energy device, Edwin Gray's EMA motor, and Paul Baumann's testatika machine all run on "radiant energy". This natural energy form can be gathered directly from the environment (mistakenly called "static" electricity) or extracted from ordinary electricity by the method called "fractionation". Radiant energy can perform the same wonders as ordinary electricity, at less than 1% of the cost. It does not behave exactly like electricity, however, which has contributed to the scientific community's misunderstanding of it. The Methernitha Community in Switzerland currently has 5 or 6 working models of fuel-less, self-running devices that tap this energy.

2. Permanent Magnets

Dr. Robert Adams (NZ) has developed astounding designs of electric motors, generators, and heaters that run on permanent magnets. One such device draws 100 watts of electricity from the source, generates 100 watts to recharge the source, and produces over 140 BTUs of heat in two minutes! Dr. Tom Bearden (USA) has two working models of a permanent magnet-powered electrical transformer. It uses a 6-watt electrical input to control the path of a magnetic field coming out of a permanent magnet. By channeling the magnetic field, first to one output coil and then a second output coil, and by doing this repeatedly and rapidly in a "ping-pong" fashion, the device can produce a 96-watt electrical output with no moving parts. Bearden calls his device a M o t i o n l e s s E l e c t r o m a g n e t i c Generator, or MEG. Jean-Louis Naudin has duplicated Bearden's device in France. The principles for this type of device were first disclosed by Frank Richardson (USA) in 1978. Troy Reed (USA) has working models of a special magnetized fan that heats up as it spins. It takes exactly the same amount of energy to spin the fan whether it is generating heat or not.

Beyond these developments, multiple inventors have identified working mechanisms that produce motor torque from permanent magnets alone.

3. Mechanical Heaters

There are two classes of machines that transform a small amount of mechanical energy into a large amount of heat. The best of these purely mechanical designs are the rotating cylinder systems designed by Frenette (USA) and Perkins (USA). In these machines, one cylinder is rotated within another cylinder with about an eighth of an inch of clearance between them. The space between the cylinders is filled with a liquid such as water or oil, and it is this "working fluid" that heats up as the inner cylinder spins. Another method uses magnets mounted on a wheel to produce large eddy currents in a plate of aluminum, causing the aluminum to heat up rapidly. These magnetic heaters have been demonstrated by Muller (Canada), Adams (NZ), and Reed (USA). All of these systems can produce ten times more heat than standard methods using the same energy input.

4. Super Efficient Electrolysis

Water can be broken into hydrogen and oxygen using electricity. Standard chemistry books claim that this process requires more energy than can be recovered when the gases are recombined. This is true only under the worst-case scenario. When water is hit with its own molecular resonant frequency, using a system developed by Stan Meyers (USA) and again recently by Xogen Power, Inc., it collapses into hydrogen and oxygen gas with very little electrical input. Also, using different electrolytes (additives that make the water conduct electricity better) changes the efficiency of the process dramatically. It is also known that certain geometric structures and surface textures work better than others do. The implication is that unlimited amounts of hydrogen fuel can be made to drive engines (like in your car) for the cost of water. Even more amazing is the fact that a special metal alloy was patented by Freedman (USA) in 1957 that spontaneously breaks water into hydrogen and oxygen with no outside electrical input and without causing any chemical changes in the metal itself. This means that this special metal alloy can make hydrogen from water for free, forever.

5. Implosion/Vortex

All major industrial engines use the release of heat to cause expansion and pressure to produce work, like in your car engine. Nature uses the opposite process of cooling to cause suction and vacuum to produce work, like in a tornado. Viktor Schauberger (Austria) was the first to build working models of implosion engines in the

What you get on this CD-ROM is the most in-depth compilation of interviews with survivors of the Philadelphia Experiment and Montauk Project to date on one computer CD.

The information on this CD comes from the memories of those who were interviewed. Because these projects are so secretive, gaining hard evidence is nearly impossible. However, that doesn't mean the projects never happened.

This information is for those who want to pursue and know the truth. Sometimes, finding the truth becomes elusive. There are many out there who do not want you to know the truth about these projects. Use your own judgment as you hear the words of these survivors.

As you follow this story, use this information as the beginning resource to hopefully, get you on the right track.

The five people featured on this CD all testify that they worked with Al at the Montauk Project, and some even remember him as Ed Cameron during the Philadelphia Experiment.

1930s and 1940s. Since that time, Callum Coats has published extensively on Schauburger's work in his book Living Energies, and subsequently, a number of researchers have built working models of implosion turbine engines. These are fuel-less engines that produce mechanical work from energy accessed from a vacuum. There are also much simpler designs that use vortex motions to tap a combination of gravity and centrifugal force to produce a continuous motion in fluids.

6. Cold Fusion

In March 1989, two chemists from Brigham Young University in Utah (USA) announced that they had produced atomic fusion reactions in a simple tabletop device. The claims were "debunked" within 6 months and the public lost interest. Nevertheless, Cold Fusion is very real. Not only has excess heat production been repeatedly documented, but also low-energy atomic element transmutation has been catalogued, involving dozens of different reactions! This technology definitely can produce low-cost energy and scores of other important industrial processes.

7. Solar Assisted Heat Pumps

The refrigerator in your kitchen is the only "free energy" machine you currently own. It's an electrically operated heat pump. It uses one amount of energy (electricity) to move three amounts of energy (heat). This gives it a "coefficient of performance" (COP) of about 3. Your refrigerator uses one amount of electricity to pump three amounts of heat from the inside of the refrigerator to the outside of the refrigerator. This is its typical use, but it is the worst possible way to use the technology. Here's why: A heat pump pumps heat from the "source" of heat to the "sink" or place that absorbs the heat. The "source" of heat should obviously be HOT and the "sink" for heat should obviously be COLD for this process to work the best. In your refrigerator, it's exactly the opposite. The "source" of heat is inside the box, which is COLD, and the "sink" for heat is the room temperature air of your kitchen, which is warmer than the source. This is why the COP remains low for your kitchen refrigerator.

But this is not true for all heat pumps. COPs of 8 to 10 are easily attained with solar-assisted heat pumps. In such a device, a heat pump draws heat from a solar collector and dumps the heat into a large underground absorber, which remains at 550° F, and mechanical energy is extracted in the transfer. This process is equivalent to a steam engine that extracts mechanical energy between the boiler and the condenser, except that it uses a fluid that "boils" at a much lower temperature than water. One such system that was tested in the 1970s produced 350 hp, measured on a dynamometer, in a specially designed engine from just 100 sq. ft. of solar collector. (This is NOT the system promoted by Dennis Lee.) The amount of energy it took to run the compressor (input) was less than 20hp, so this system produced more than 17 times more energy than it took to keep it going! It could power a small neighborhood from the roof of a hot tub gazebo, using exactly the same technology that keeps the food cold in your kitchen.

Currently there is an industrial-scale heat pump system just north of Kona, Hawaii that generates electricity from temperature differences in ocean water.

There are dozens of other systems that I have not mentioned; many of them are as viable and well tested as the ones I have just recounted. But this short list is sufficient to make my point: Free Energy technology is here, now! It offers the world pollution-free energy abundance for everyone, everywhere!

It is now possible to stop the production of "greenhouse gases" and shut down all of the nuclear power plants. We can now desalinate unlimited amounts of sea water at an affordable price, and bring adequate fresh water to even the most remote habitats. Transportation costs and the production costs for just about everything can drop dramatically. Food can even be grown in heated greenhouses in the winter, anywhere.

All of these wonderful benefits that can make life on this planet so much easier and better for everyone have been postponed for decades. Why? Whose purposes are served by this postponement?

THE INVISIBLE ENEMY

There are four powerful forces that have worked together to create this situation. To say that there is and has been a "conspiracy" to suppress this technology only leads to a superficial understanding of the world, and it places the blame for this completely outside of ourselves.

The First Obstruction:

The First Force that impedes the availability of Free Energy technology is: our willingness to remain ignorant and action-less in the face of this situation has always been interpreted by two of these forces as "implied consent".

So, besides a "non-demanding public", what are the other three forces that are impeding the availability of Free Energy technology?

In standard economic theory, there are three classes of Industry. These are Capital, Goods, and Services. Within the first class, Capital, there are also three sub-classes. These are:

1. Natural Capital

This relates to raw materials (such as a gold mine) and sources of energy (such as a hydroelectric dam or an oil well).

2. Currency

This relates to the printing of paper "money" and the minting of coins. These functions are usually the job of Government. And

3. Credit

This relates to the loaning of money for interest and its extension of economic value through deposit loan accounts.

From this, it is easy to see that energy functions in the economy in the same way as gold, the printing of money by the Government, or the issuing of credit by a bank.

In the United States, and in most other countries around the world, there is a "money monopoly" in place. I am "free" to earn as much "money" as I want, but I will only be paid in Federal Reserve Notes. There is nothing I can do to be paid in Gold Certificates, or some other form of "money".

This money monopoly is solely in the hands of a small number of private-stock banks, and these banks are owned by the wealthiest families in the world. Their plan is to eventually control 100% of all of the capital resources of the world, and thereby control everyone's life through the availability (or non-availability) of all goods and services. An independent source of wealth (Free Energy device), in the hands of each and every person in the world, ruins their plans for world domination, permanently.

Why this is true is easy to see. Currently, a nation's economy can be either slowed down or sped up by the raising or lowering of interest rates. But if an independent source of capital (energy) were present in the economy, and any business or person could raise more capital without borrowing it from a bank, this centralized throttling action on interest rates would simply not have the same effect.

Free Energy technology changes the value of money. The wealthiest families and the issuers of credit do not want any competition. It's that simple. They want to maintain their current monopoly control of the money supply. For them, Free Energy technology is not just something to suppress, it must be PERMANENTLY FORBIDDEN!

So, the wealthiest families and their central banking institutions are the First Force operating to postpone the public availability of Free Energy technology. Their motivations are the imagined “divine right to rule”, greed, and their insatiable need to control everything except themselves.

The weapons they have used to enforce this postponement include intimidation, “expert” debunkers, buying and shelving of technology, murder and attempted murder of the inventors, character assassination, arson, and a wide variety of financial incentives and disincentives to manipulate possible supporters. They have also promoted the general acceptance of a scientific theory that states that Free Energy is impossible (called the Laws of Thermodynamics).

The Second Obstruction:

The Second Force operating to postpone the public availability of Free Energy technology is national governments. The problem here is not so much related to competition in the printing of currency, but in the maintenance of national security.

The fact is, the world out there is a jungle, and humans can be counted upon to be very cruel, dishonest, and sneaky. It is government’s job to “provide for the common defense”. For this, “police powers” are delegated by the Executive Branch of government to enforce “the rule of law”. Most of us who consent to the rule of law do so because we believe it is the right thing to do, for our own benefit. There are always a few individuals, however, who believe that their own benefit is best served by behavior that does not voluntarily conform to the generally agreed upon social order. These people choose to operate outside of “the rule of law” and are considered outlaws, criminals, subversives, traitors, revolutionaries, or terrorists.

Most national governments have discovered, by trial and error, that the only foreign policy that really works, over time, is a policy called “tit for tat”. What this means to you and me is that governments treat each other the way they are being treated. There is a constant “jockeying” for position and influence in world affairs, and the strongest party wins!

In economics, it’s the Golden Rule, which states: “The one with the gold makes the rules.”

So it is with politics also, but its appearance is more Darwinian. It’s simply “survival of the fittest”. In politics, however, the “fittest” has come to mean the strongest party who is also willing to fight the dirtiest.

Absolutely every means available is used to maintain an advantage over the “adversary”, and everyone else is the “adversary” regardless of whether they are considered friend or foe. This includes outrageous psychological posturing, lying, cheating, spying, stealing, assassination of world leaders, proxy wars, alliances and shifting alliances, treaties, foreign aid, and the presence of military forces wherever possible. Like it or not, this IS the psychological and actual arena national governments operate in.

No national government will ever do anything that simply gives an adversary an advantage for free. NEVER! It’s national suicide. Any activity, by any individual, inside or outside the country, that is interpreted as giving an adversary an edge or advantage, in any way, will be deemed a threat to “national security”. ALWAYS!

Free Energy technology is a national government’s worst nightmare! Openly acknowledged, free energy technology sparks an unlimited arms race by all governments in a final attempt to gain absolute advantage and domination. Think about it. Do you think Japan will not feel intimidated if China gets Free Energy? Do you think Israel will sit by quietly as Iraq acquires Free Energy? Do you think India will allow Pakistan to develop Free Energy? Do you think the USA would not try to stop Osama bin Laden from getting Free Energy? Unlimited energy available to the current state of affairs on this planet leads to an inevitable reshuffling of the “balance of power”.

This could become an all-out war to prevent “the other” from having the advantage of unlimited wealth and power. Everybody will want it, and at the same time, want to prevent everyone else from getting it. So, national governments are the Second Force operating to postpone the public availability of Free Energy technology. Their motivations are “self-preservation”. This self-preservation operates on three levels:

First, by not giving undue advantage to an external enemy.

Second, by preventing individualized action capable of effectively challenging official police powers (anarchy) within the country.

And third, by preserving income streams derived from taxing energy sources currently in use.

Their weapons include the preventing of the issuance of patents based on national security

DEATH IN THE AIR: Globalism, Terrorism & Toxic Warfare

Hard Cover Book: $29.95 (+S/H)

Striking at the heart of a cryptocracy responsible for the latest forms of bio-terrorism, psychotronic warfare, and Malthusian eco-genocide, the revelations and wisdom contained in this book offer more than a reality check. They give humanity, you and your loved ones, a final, last minute, choice for survival.

Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz is a graduate of Harvard School of Public Health who has published more than two-dozen books, 120 scientific and lay articles, and numerous audio and videotaped educational programs. He has been a frequent guest on nationally syndicated radio and television news and talk shows representing every major network. Most recently, Dr. Horowitz’s work detailing the man-made origins of the AIDS and Ebola viruses prompted two documentaries, one by the internationally acclaimed BBC. He lives with his wife and three children in Sandpoint, Idaho.

This book explains how and why:

- We have evolved from the nuclear age into a “Technotronic Era” with “psychotronic warfare” for optimal population control.
- Non-lethal warfare is being effectively used to produce sociopolitical and economic outcomes consistent with global genocide.
- The world’s wealthiest policy-makers have recommended, and are working toward, eliminating half the world’s population.
- Accepted methods of disease prevention, such as pesticide sprayings, can only be scientifically rationalized as costly and deadly contributions to non-lethal warfare and population reduction.
- Chemtrail sprayings that obscure blue skies are not normal, but reflect a conspiracy of silence and military attacks on the health and welfare of people around the world.

grounds, the legal and illegal harassment of inventors with criminal charges, tax audits, threats, phone taps, arrest, arson, theft of property during shipment, and a host of other intimidations which make the business of building and marketing a Free Energy machine impossible.

The Third Obstruction:

The Third Force operating to postpone the public availability of Free Energy technology consists of the group of deluded inventors and outright charlatans and con men.

On the periphery of the extraordinary scientific breakthroughs that constitute the real Free Energy technologies, lies a shadow world of unexplained anomalies, marginal inventions, and unscrupulous promoters.

The Second and Third Forces have constantly used the media to promote the worst examples of this group, to distract the public’s attention and to discredit the real breakthroughs by associating them with the obvious frauds.

Over the last hundred years, dozens of stories have surfaced about unusual inventions. Some of these ideas have so captivated the public’s imagination that a mythology about these systems continues to this day. Names like Kelley, Hubbard, Coler, and Henderschott immediately come to mind. There may be real technologies behind these names, but there simply isn't enough technical data available in the public domain to make a determination.

These names remain associated with a Free Energy mythology, however, and are cited by debunkers as examples of fraud. The idea of Free Energy taps very deeply into the human subconscious mind. A few inventors with marginal technologies that demonstrate useful anomalies have mistakenly exaggerated the importance of their inventions. Some of these inventors also have mistakenly exaggerated the importance of themselves for having invented it. A combination of "gold fever" and/or a "messiah complex" appears, wholly distorting any future contribution they may make.

While the research thread they are following may hold great promise, they begin to trade enthusiasm for facts, and the value of the scientific work from that point on suffers greatly. There is a powerful, yet subtle seduction that can warp a personality if they believe that "the world rests on their shoulders" or that they are the world's "savior".

Strange things also happen to people when they think they are about to become extremely rich. It takes a tremendous spiritual discipline to remain objective and humble in the presence of a working Free Energy machine. Many inventors' psyches become unstable just BELIEVING they have a Free Energy machine. As the quality of the science deteriorates, some inventors also develop a "persecution complex" that makes them very defensive and unapproachable. This process precludes them from ever really developing a Free Energy machine, and fuels the fraud mythologies tremendously.

Then there are the outright con men. In the last 15 years, there is one person in the USA who has raised the Free Energy con to a professional art. He has raised more than $100,000,000, has been barred from doing business in the State of Washington, has been jailed in California, and he's still at it.

He always talks about a variation of one of the real Free Energy systems, sells people on the idea that they will get one of these systems soon, but ultimately sells them only promotional information which gives no real data about the energy system itself. He has mercilessly preyed upon the Christian community and the Patriot community in the USA, and is still going strong. His current scam involves signing up hundreds of thousands of people at locations where he will install a Free Energy (FE) machine.

In exchange for letting him put the FE generator in their home, they will get free electricity for life, and his company will sell the excess energy back to the local utility company. After becoming convinced that they will receive free electricity for life, with no out-front expenses, they gladly buy a video that helps draw their friends into the scam as well.

Once you understand the power and motivations of the first two Forces I have discussed, it's obvious that this person's current "business plan" cannot be implemented. This one person has probably done more harm to the Free Energy movement in the USA than any other Force, by destroying people's trust in the technology.

So, the Third Force postponing the public availability of Free Energy technology is delusion and dishonesty within the movement itself. The motivations are self-aggrandizement, greed, want of power over others, and a false sense of self-importance.

The weapons used are lying, cheating, the "bait and switch" con, self-delusion, and arrogance combined with lousy science.

The Fourth Obstruction:

The Fourth Force operating to postpone the public availability of Free Energy technology is all of the rest of us. It may be easy to see how narrow and despicable the motivations of the other Forces are, but actually, these motivations are still very much alive in each of us as well.

Like the wealthiest families, don't we each secretly harbor illusions of false superiority, and the want to control others instead of ourselves? Also, wouldn't you "sell out" if the price were inventor, don't we trade a comfortable illusion once in a while for an uncomfortable fact? And don't we like to think more of ourselves than others give us credit for? Or don't we still fear the unknown, even if it promises a great reward?

You see, really, all Four Forces are just different aspects of the same process, operating at different levels in the society. There is really only ONE FORCE preventing the public availability of Free Energy technology, and that is the unspiritual motivated behavior of the human animals.

In the last analysis, Free Energy technology is an outward manifestation of Divine Abundance. It is the engine of the economy of an enlightened society, where people voluntarily behave in a respectful and civil manner toward each other. Where each member of the society has everything they need, and do not covet what their neighbor has. Here war and physical violence has become socially unacceptable behavior, and people's differences are at least tolerated, if not enjoyed. The appearance of Free Energy technology in the public domain is the dawning of a truly civilized age. It is an epochal event in human history.

Nobody can "take credit" for it. Nobody can "get rich" on it. Nobody can "rule the world" with it. It is, simply, a gift from God. It forces us all to take responsibility for our own actions and for our own self-disciplined self-restraint when needed. The world, as it is currently ordered, cannot have Free Energy technology without being totally transformed by it into something else.

This "civilization" has reached the pinnacle of its development, because it has birthed the seeds of its own transformation. The unspiritual human animals cannot be trusted with Free Energy. They will only do what they have always done, which is take merciless advantage of each other, or kill each other and themselves in the process.

If you go back and read Ayn Rand's Atlas Shrugged or the Club Of Rome Report, it becomes obvious that the wealthiest families have understood this for decades. Their plan is to live in "The World of Free Energy" but permanently freeze the rest of us out. But this is not new. Royalty has always considered the general population (us) to be their subjects.

What is new is that you and I can communicate with each other now better than at any time in the past. The Internet offers us, the Fourth Force, an opportunity to overcome the combined efforts of the other Forces preventing Free Energy technology from spreading.

THE OPPORTUNITY

What is starting to happen is that inventors are publishing their work, instead of patenting it and keeping it secret. More and more, people are "giving away" information on these technologies in books, videos, and websites. While there is still a great deal of useless information about Free Energy on the Internet, the availability of good information is rising rapidly. Check out the list of websites and other resources at the end of this article.

It is imperative that you begin to gather all of the information you can on real Free Energy systems. The reason for this is simple. The first two Forces will never allow an inventor or a company to build and sell a Free Energy machine to you! The only way you will ever get one is if you, or a friend, build it yourself. This is exactly what thousands of people are already quietly starting to do. You may feel wholly inadequate to the task, but start gathering information now.

You may be just a link in the chain of events for the benefit of others. Focus on what you can do now, not on how much there still is to be done. Small, private research groups are working out the details as you read this. Many are committed to publishing their results on the Internet.

All of us constitute the Fourth Force. If we stand up and refuse to remain ignorant and actionless, we can change the course of history. It is the aggregate of our combined action that can make a difference. Only the mass action that represents our consensus can create the world we want. The other three Forces WILL NOT help us put a fuel-less power plant in our basements!

They will not help us be free from their manipulations. Nevertheless, Free Energy technology is here. It is real, and it will change everything about the way we live, work, and relate to each other. In the last analysis, Free Energy technology obsoletes greed and the fear for survival. But like all exercises of Spiritual Faith, we must first manifest the generosity and trust in our own lives.

The Source of Free Energy is INSIDE of us. It is that excitement of expressing ourselves freely. It is our Spiritually Guided intuition expressing itself without distraction, intimidation, or manipulation. It is our open-heartedness. Ideally, the Free Energy technologies underpin a just society where everyone has enough food, clothing, shelter, self worth, and the leisure time to contemplate the higher Spiritual meanings of Life. Do we not owe it to each other, to face down our fears, and take action to create this future for our children's children? Perhaps I am not the only one waiting for me to act on a greater Truth.

Free Energy technology is here. It has been here for decades. Communications technology and the Internet have torn the veil of secrecy off of this remarkable fact. People all over the world are starting to build Free Energy devices for their own use. The bankers and the governments do not want this to happen, but cannot stop it. Tremendous economic instabilities and wars will be used in the near future to distract people from joining the Free Energy movement. There will be essentially no major media coverage of this aspect of what is going on. It will simply be reported as wars and civil wars erupting everywhere, leading to UN "peacekeeper" occupation in more and more countries.

Western society is spiraling down toward self-destruction, due to the accumulated effects of long-term greed and corruption. The general availability of Free Energy technology cannot stop this trend. It can only reinforce it. If, however, you have a Free Energy device, you may be better positioned to survive the political/social/economic transition that is underway. No national government will survive this process. The question is: who will ultimately control the emerging world government—the First Force or the Fourth Force?

The last great war is almost upon us. The seeds are planted. After this will come the beginning of a real civilization. Some of us who refuse to fight will survive to see the dawn of the world of Free Energy. I challenge you to be among the ones who try.

Powerful Messages Can Appear In Many Forms

9/2/01 HATONN

Good evening, my scribe. It is I, Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come in the One Light of Creator Source. Be at peace and be still.

Allow for the energies to settle around you, for there are a great many distractions thrown your way at this time. See the White Light completely surrounding you and lifting your vibration. Allow the relaxing sensations of peace and love to fill you from within. Very good! Let us continue please.

A great many things have been happening that are causing "waves of recognition" that large-scale planetary change is just around the corner. These waves of recognition are being felt all around your globe. Most remarkable clues are being given to you ones in a very blatant, "in-your-face" type of manner so that you ones will have opportunity to take note and prepare in whatever manner you deem appropriate.

The blatant, "in-your-face" examples of which I speak are in the forms of what have been called "crop circles" and, more recently, due to their astonishingly involved layouts, "crop glyphs". We shall simply refer to them as crop formations. These recent formations (images) are very complex and their production is far beyond an ability to be fabricated by any of what you call "crop-circle hoaxers".

I ask that an effort be made to find images to accompany this message so that those without computer access to the Internet will be able to see what I am referring to here. [Editor's note: The Internet has become a serious mechanism for the quick posting and scattering and sharing of such important information as is being discussed herein. Thanks to several Internet sources, we are presenting several wonderful pictures to accompany Hatonn's narrative. For those of you who wish to explore this subject further, there are several good Internet locations to visit, including Art Bell's general website <www.artbell.com>, Linda Moulton Howe's always informative and well-documented website <www.earthfiles.com>, and the hub of information about crop formations <www.cropcircleconnector.com>.]

The first crop formation to which I would like to call attention was reported on Tuesday, August 14, 2001. It is an image of a humanoid face laid out in a "half-tone" presentation. (A half-tone is a series of small dots that make up an image when viewed from a distance; this is a process long utilized to render photographs in newspaper production.) This formation is not only an example of the mathematical precision of the technology being used to communicate with you ones, but the image depicts a common origin that you and your space brothers share.

There are, as always, several layers to the image's message. The picture is to let you know that they (we) will come in a form that is quite acceptable and familiar to you ones. The image also suggests that it is time to "face" the facts that we are communicating with you. And the obviously large size of the image encourages you to recognize ("face") the "larger picture" about which our communication is occurring.

As if that intriguing crop formation was not enough to puzzle over, it was followed by another quite astonishing formation, reported six days later, on Monday, August 20, 2001. (Note that the midpoint between these two dates is approximately August 17—the anniversary of the Harmonic Convergence date in 1987, which noted the commencing of a mass influx of higher-frequency "awakening" energies into your world.) Both images are situated in the same field and are "coincidentally" adjacent to the large Chilbolton radio-telescope facility in Hampshire, England.

This second formation is a direct answer to the Arecibo Message sent out on November 16, 1974. (Arecibo is a large radio-telescope facility in Puerto Rico.) This is a blatant reply to the message your government sent out, and the reply is in the same symbolic language in which you sent the original message. The reply will show various fundamental differences in genetic make-up as well as origin. Also, you ones will note that the image is laid-out directly in line with the large radio-telescope, symbolizing intentional communication.

Why the use of crop formations rather than direct radio communication or other forms of sophisticated methods? Because the electronic communications sent to your world's governments immediately become highly classified and the average public sees and hears NOTHING. We have given your world's governments ample opportunity to handle our messages in any manner in which they see fit. The result has been great silence as these ones attempt to amass a stockpile of supposedly "advanced" weaponry to be used to defend themselves against our arrival.

These ones realize that the reason we are coming is because of the Great Awakening now underway on your world. As more and more ones awaken to the reality of their place in the Grand Scheme of Existence, they also realize that they are a part of a much larger family. The would-be oppressors of your world are trying desperately to delay this inevitable awakening, using all sorts of devices which pulse electromagnetic frequencies in the range of brain functioning so as to cause a mild form of sedation—as well as apathy and anger.

These sorts of mind-control manipulations have recently been stepped-up and are largely responsible for the unusually high level of bizarre animal behaviors being noted in many locations—such as the shark attacks along your Eastern U.S. coastal waters. Such electromagnetic transmissions are also responsible for "unpredictable" distortions in many localized weather patterns, as well as for climatic shifts that have many of your scientists baffled—and thus the debates that swing from global warming at one end, to the next great ice-age at the other.

The crop formations serve MANY purposes. They communicate to your world that you are not alone and that we of the Intergalactic Federation of Sovereign Planets are quite aware of the games being played on your planet. We are also quite aware that the average person is intentionally being kept in the dark concerning the overwhelming amount of physical evidence demonstrating that intelligent extraterrestrial life not only exists, but is in fact monitoring closely the technology being developed and played with on your planet.

We have been monitoring your planet for many, many thousands of years. We have complete records of the cyclical advances and declines as your world has gone through various stages of social development.

There is great diversity among the people of your world. For the most part, the majority are humble and searching for inner fulfillment. However, there are the relative few (those you would call the "elite controllers", who are under strong adversarial overshadowment) who seek constantly and undeterred to manipulate and control others through absolute power. This is accomplished by keeping the masses ignorant of their true history and their true heritage. The game of trickery is near its end, and thus a new Age of Enlightenment and Truth is evolving.

As ones become more aware, their vibrational frequency begins to speed up. This in turn leads to an ever increasing level of awareness. There is reached a point where the old tricks no longer work. You, as a planetary species, are rapidly reaching that point, and the controllers know this. Thus their games of deception become all the more extreme, as their ability to maintain control slips away.

We of your elder brothers have given you many clues along the way to help prepare you both mentally and emotionally for the awakening process in which you now find yourselves. Despite our best efforts, there will always be ones who resist change. There are always ones who decide they know all that is truly worth knowing, therefore there is no allowance for anything that would disrupt their comfortable little microcosm of fanciful living. (Fanciful relative to the true nature of the world and universe in which they live.)

These ones (often labeled as “experts” of one kind or another on your world) will make pronouncements such as that the crop formations are merely an elaborate hoax perpetrated by clever university students with nothing better to do. However, upon closer scrutiny (which these ones never seem to do with any level of objectivity) you will find that the wheat in these crop formations is twisted in on itself and is bent, but NOT broken, as it would be if it were merely stomped or rolled down. This shows a great respect for the plant lifeform and shows that the originators have taken great care to NOT destroy the grain.

There is far less sophisticated technology we could have used that would simply “burn” an image into fields. But we are not of an ethical nature which would allow us to even consider that as a viable option.

Dear ones, ALL LIFE is precious. There is no reason to senselessly destroy any lifeform—not even a single strand of wheat being grown for the purpose of harvest.

If our intention was simply to conquer and destroy, don’t you think that we would have done so years ago? That is the warrior mentality of your world’s rulers, who think in such fear-based mental psychoses. We have all that we need or could ever want. You ones have nothing that we covet.

We come as Teachers and Guides—much the way parents look out for their children, or older brothers and sisters look out for the younger ones. We derive great pleasure in watching you ones grow in awareness. We offer our advice and guidance to those who are accepting of same. Those who choose to ignore the stretched-out hand of assistance we offer are honored as well, for they choose that which they feel is right for them and we see that they need the longer path of experience in order to find their way.

There are no “wrong” choices in the physical experience, for each choice has associated with it consequences of action. Harsh choices are often met with harsh responses. But these, too, have their place in the schoolroom-Earth learning environment.

There are, however, several choices that can be made in almost any situation. If ones were to carefully weigh their options, there are usually choices that can be made that result in a more balanced outcome. These are the “better” choices that come about usually only after several years (often several lifetimes) of making “bad” choices that result in harsh responses.

You see, we too have choices to make in terms of how best to serve. We carefully consider the consequences of our actions and communications so as to maximize effectiveness and minimize the potential for confusion and overwhelm. This is no simple task, for our messages will often impact large numbers of people (such as those who see these writings) and there are no two who are at the exact same level of awareness and understanding. Thus we often present our messages in layers. This is to say that there are often messages within messages, and those who are ready for the deeper messages will see past the outer shell and into one or more of the inner layers.

Our choices with messages in a form such as crop formations take into consideration a broad range of awareness so as to be effective and efficient, and yet simple and direct. This is what we would refer to as a “better” choice and a “balanced” choice.

Many ones ask the question about why the majority of the crop formations appear in and around England. Simply stated, that is where the true seat of power for your planet resides, and it is also where the essence of your current civilization originates. Despite the perceptual differences of the majority of the American community, the true power-brokers who dictate and decide the world’s direction do so from the infrastructure originated long ago in the British Empire.

The illusion of freedom is necessary in order to create conditions that allow for the “lullaby” of complacency to cause the eyelids of the masses to close, while the high-level game-players mold your destiny and package it in such a manner that causes you to accept it—if not chase after it and outright demand it.

Please take note of the many clues being shown to you ones at this time. Do you not see that ALL levels of society are being manipulated?

For example, did anyone notice the gasoline prices jump up and down for the same reasons? You’re told too much demand drives the price up. Or not enough was sold, so they raise the price. Later, there is a glut in the market, so they lower the price. Then there is a holiday weekend coming up, so—choose any excuse you want, but—raise the prices to gouge the public. After enough repetitions of the cycle, many of you can and do see the game being played, but you feel powerless to do anything. So, you just “go along to get along”. This is fine so long as you recognize an opportunity, when it presents itself, to step forward and speak your truth.

This is but one example of how you are manipulated and used. There are MANY others resulting from the dark, materialistic, greed mentality that drives the so-called “elite” with a chaotic fervor and passion at a level of intensity so as to be completely unbelievable if you were to see these ones as they really are. These ones’ actions, demeanor, and moral base are so far removed from the average person’s thinking that the average person has no way of understanding the mentality they are really dealing with.

It is this mentality that sits behind the various world governments. These relative few make sure that everyone is playing the same game and heading in the “proper” direction. These ones are often behind the scenes, serving as advisors to government officials, presidents, and monarchs. These are the ones to whom many of our crop formations are directed—for they are the ones who KNOW we are real and they KNOW we are coming. They also know that we will not tolerate their game-playing amongst our people, and that they cannot deceive us at all, even for an instant, for we simply go within and discern intent and see the Truth with our Inner Knowing.

As we have explained to you in these messages many times in the past, this Inner Knowing is a direct result of the inner-connectedness of ALL ones through our Common Source—Creator God, the All That Is. As you continue to evolve and grow in your understanding and awareness, you will see that these senses become more and more commonplace, and you will be given to see with the INNER “eyes” much more than the outer eyes will ever see.

Be quick to go within and ask clarification for anything that causes you concern, anger, grief, or confusion. Learn to be slow in allowing anger to build within you, and quick to release anger and forgive yourself for allowing the anger in the first place.

We of the Host of God (Overseers of this planetary transition) are here for the explicit purpose of offering our assistance when and where appropriate. Call upon us. We are the Guides, Wayshowers, Angels, and Messengers that you often pray to God to send your way. Look for the clues in your life, and you will see that we are there, working with you to help you to prepare for the times ahead. Learn to trust your Inner Guidance, and please know that you are NEVER alone along your journey.

I am Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn, come in Light and Service to the One who created me and you—The One Light, Creator Source. May you always find the clues and markers along the path you have chosen, so that you will forever know that you are a cherished and significant part of the magnificent Oneness that is The Creation.

Blessings and Peace to you ALL! Salu.

Do you enjoy the spiritual messages shared here in The SPECTRUM? If so then you won't want to miss these two volumes packed full of earlier shared messages.

“Our Elder Brothers from the Higher Realms of Creation are attempting to communicate with ALL of us at this time. Why? Take a look around you. The old ways of doing things aren't working. Our planet is entering a time of massive, turbulent change and renewal. To put it bluntly: we NEED help! And that's where these books come into the picture. Yes, eventually ‘the Phoenix will arise from the ashes’ after this Great Cleansing process, but the ride could be quite a bumpy one, especially for those ill-prepared for what is to happen.” — From the back cover of Volume I

“Let us begin with WHO you are. You, the non-physical YOU, are an infinite thought projection of the One who created you (God!). You are the product of His desire. You are, in effect, Desire manifest in uniqueness of purpose.” — Esu “Jesus” Sananda (Vol. II)

“The Voice Of Truth Shall Be Heard Throughout The Land”

8/17/01 ESU “JESUS” SANANDA

Esu Sananda present in Radiance. I come in service to the Father and unto The Creation. Let there be no mistake about WHO I AM. Darkness is no part of my being. Indeed, the adversary cannot stand in the presence of Light and Truth.

All are open to receive the messages of Truth I bring. Yet, those steeped in fear and anger and greed and ill-intent choose to listen to another drummer, for their path is twisted and distorted by choices which serve only to mislead and entangle.

I come to you this day, on the anniversary of the Harmonic Convergence, for the voice of truth shall be heard throughout the land. It is not for “the chosen” or “the elect” that I speak, for ALL are God’s children. And yet through the choices that man makes, it is a truth that few shall be chosen, though many are called.

I do not come to you as some New-Age guru—God forbid! I come to you as LIGHT ITSELF, God Energy Manifest. Your planet is still so steeped in darkness that even now it is difficult to penetrate the thick cloud that hangs over your atmosphere, keeping God’s children oppressed in superstition and ignorance!

I come that people know the true from the false. I do not come to act as a balm to your rattled nerves. I come to tear back the sheets, to uncover the darkness, and speak truth, so that those of Godly intent may know that which has happened to them to keep them in bondage.

The Kingdom of God is within you! It is not in a church, in a building, in a doctrine of any kind. It is in the innocence of the child, and in the kindness of a gentle word and a soft touch. Oh, beloved, why have you of Earth distorted and misunderstood my teaching? You must love another as self. Don’t you see? It is so easy, and yet so difficult, it seems.

Your preachers and evangelists have misled you. I come to expose them, for those deeds of misleading many souls shall have dire consequences indeed! Harsh? No, just. I have come to SEPARATE the wheat from the chaff, and this I shall do, for I know well those who have served my cause with honor and those who have only served self!

Beloved, those who teach you to shun the Light are wrong! Embrace the Light, for contained therein is all knowledge, all love, all matter of Creation. Do not listen to those adversarial speakers who teach of embracing the darkness and the void, for they are deceivers and liars. Ask of God for protection and truth, and it shall be given! The call DOES compel the answer, and the intent determines your experience. Choose life, choose love, choose to walk the path of goodness and joy. It is right before you. What have you to fear?

There is no death for those who live according to the Laws of Creation. Therefore, do your part to make this a better world. Reach forth your hand and embrace whatever problems you feel you may have, and solve them. This experience of life in this dimension is a gift of service. Do not waste it on worry and anger. Rather, ask yourself: “What can I do to make this a better place?” And then DO IT! There are NO LIMITS to what self may accomplish or become within the goodness of Lighted intent. Stop limiting and start creating, for the service you create shall be multiplied a hundred fold.

To those who say that Lucifer is the Bright Morning Star, the Brightest Light, therefore shun The Light (Creator Source), I say: By their fruits you shall know them.

Examine the message. What does it advocate? How does your heart feel when you read the message? Are you thrown into a state of conflict and turmoil and frustration and confusion? THESE are the earmarks of the adversary, the Master Deceiver himself!

If, on the other hand, the message is solidifying, calming, and brings answers to your unspoken questions, then call for God’s protection, take it within, and decide for self that which is true and that which is false. Have your false, so-called “experts” not deceived you long enough? Why do you fear the responsibility of determining for self that which is of God?

God IS all Knowledge, all Light, all Compassion, all Love. Why do you not know this? God allows you to determine your own path through the choices you make. Are you pleased with your choices? No? Then make new ones! Step forth, for fear will only hold you back and confine you. In love and joy, ALL THINGS are possible. KNOW IT!

Ask yourself: Does this one have a “vested interest” in keeping me bound to them? Does the false church leader have a reason to continue to keep his hands in your pockets? Does that one preach TRUTH? Or does that one bring fear? Why, oh why do you not examine the causes of your bondage? The locks of the cell of bondage are a creation by self. Only self may unlock the door, through knowledge, which IS GOD. KNOW, and you shall become free from the shackles that bind you.

Take my hand and let us walk this journey in joy and service.

To those who would distort and twist my message of truth I say: stand back, for none shall stop me! And to the adversary I say directly: your days are numbered!

Go in peace and service.

In Light and Service to The Creation, I am Sananda—Esu of old.

9/2/01 ESU “JESUS” SANANDA

Esu present in Light and in service to God, for the greater good of the Creation. Yes, the space is clear. I come in response to your petition, for the call compels the answer.

There are many myths that I wish to dispel, and many misunderstandings of my teaching that I wish to clarify. How may you even discern truth when the interpretations and translations presented unto you are different? Who is right? Which translation is correct? Which is complete, and which altered? You have no way of knowing, in truth.

Let me give you one small example of what I mean:

The Holy Bible, King James Version, Matthew 19:13 —

Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them.

But Jesus said, “Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.”

Matthew 18:3 —

And said, “Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

“Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.”

The Holy Bible, From The Ancient Eastern Text, George M. Lamsa’s Translation from the Aramaic of the Peshita (directly into English).

Matthew 19:13 —

Then they brought little children to him, that he might lay his hand on them and pray; and his disciples rebuked them.

But Jesus said to them, "Allow the little children to come to me, and do not stop them; for the kingdom of heaven is for such as these."

Matthew 18:3 —

And he said, "Truly I say to you, unless you change and become like little children, you shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

"Whoever therefore will humble himself like this little child, shall be great in the kingdom of heaven."

The Talmud Of Immanuel, The Clear Translation in English and German. Chapter 19, The Thought Of A Child —

It happened that the disciples stepped up to Immanuel and said, "Who is the greatest in spirit?"

Immanuel called a child, placed the youth among them.

And spoke, "Truly, I say to you: Unless you change and become like the children, you will not become great in spirit.

"Those who search, seek, and gather understanding and thirst for knowledge like this child will be great in spirit.

"Those who search, seek, and find like such a child will always reach their fullest potential within themselves.

"But they who do not heed this truth, follow false teachings, and neither search nor find, would be better off with a millstone hung around their necks and drowned in the deepest sea.

"Truly, there is no sense in life and no fulfilling of its meaning without searching, seeking, and finding."

Do you glean the same understanding from each of these messages?

Not only are children without sin, but they are open, joyful, curious about the world around them, and eager to explore and learn new things.

It is a small example, yet one in which there is room for interpretation; therefore clear understanding is lost.

And so it is with so many of the parables which were given for the time in which they were presented, within the historical and cultural context of the town or country in which they were given.

Your world is so different now, filled with noises and distractions that were unknown in the period of the Bible. The lessons must be taught within the new historical context of the time period in which you each are experiencing.

Your world is accelerating in its evolutionary cycle, and your time is speeding up at such a rate that you have little time to complete that which is started, little time to do that which must be done, and yet it is all the time you have to work with. It is as it is, and it shall accelerate at an even faster pace, making it a time for careful choices. So that which is done is of utmost importance, and that which is not important shall simply not be done.

It is a period of great introspection and reflection, a time of evaluation of priorities and relationships. It is a time to smooth the rough edges, and to calm the turbulent spirit. For only within the quiet reflection of prayer or meditation may you truly communicate with Spirit, with God the Father.

"The Kingdom of God is within you." What does this mean?

Does it mean that there is no God, EXCEPT THAT SPARK WITHIN YOU? No, no, and no! Man's soul, his Lighted soul-spirit, which is etheric, merged within the body of man upon birth, is a gift from God, within the Creation. This Lighted soul-essence is the direct "cord" or "cable" connection to God, if you want to think of it in those terms; it is your link to the beyond, to the stars, to heaven. That cable, that cord, that "silver cord" as some call it, is your "Internet" of the future. It is sacred.

There is but one God, the magnificent. But God does indeed have MANY who assist within the heavenly and cosmic reaches, and they are termed "the Hosts". What would you call them? Angels is fine, if you wish.

The fact remains, there are many unlimited beings of Light who serve God willingly, who are eternal beings, and who DO RESPOND TO PETITIONS FOR HELP AND/OR GUIDANCE. These are LIGHTED BEINGS OF GOD AND THEY ARE NOT ADVERSARIAL BEINGS SENT OF LUCIFER. Please understand the difference.

The adversary, in his overshadowing of mankind, would have all beings stop petitioning God for help, understanding, wisdom—thereby effectively cutting-off your internal "Internet" connection to Spirit and LIMITING HUMAN KNOWLEDGE AND UNDERSTANDING.

NO—NO—NO! Fear is that which paralyzes those who have certain concepts which are based in ignorance. It is alright, but do not cease your youthful, child-like quest for knowledge and understanding, lest you become locked within the cell of constraint, ignorance, fear, and evil overshadowment.

Those of the evangelical preachings ARE WRONG. Lucifer has overshadowed many beings on Earth, it is true. But there are "the Hosts" of God of Light, the One True God, who are here at this time, ready and available to assist those who will but ask.

Those Lighted Guides are being stifled in their work of helping the planet due to the fear that is being generated by evangelical preachers who say not to listen to any voices in direct response to your own prayers. And yet who do they say they are hearing from each Sunday when they preach? Do God's messengers only speak to preachers? Think about it, please.

You pray, you ask, you are answered, and yet you would turn away the help at the door. Why?

God hears you. I hear you. Prayers are answered, always! And they are always answered in direct proportion to the heart intent with which they have been projected. KNOW IT.

Why are evangelical preachers and those of evangelical understanding so arrogant as to ASSUME they know better than God? They know the true from the false. I tell you, again: by their fruits you shall know them—every time.

There IS a great overshadowing by Lucifer and his "fallen ones". But these beings are also now coming up against a population that is awakening. They know that Light shall prevail.

I did not say Lucifer, the great morning star, that HIS light shall prevail, for it shall not! God has heard your prayers and He has responded directly. I have heard your prayers and I am responding directly. DO NOT TURN AWAY THE HELP THAT IS OFFERED IN RESPONSE TO YOUR ASKING, PLEASE.

Become as the child. Ask, in that open innocence of the child, that which you seek, and then know within your heart and soul that you shall receive your answer. Do not expect the answer to appear in a certain way, for it shall, invariably, appear in a different size, shape, and manner than you expect.

Listen carefully, for you may hear your answer immediately. Pay attention! Ask God for protection from darkness. God's Light will protect you from ANY evil or ANY harm, but YOU must be diligent about your petition for "shielding".

THAT WHICH HAS BEEN HIDDEN IN THIS PERIOD OF TIME, SHALL BE REVEALED. YOU SHALL BE GIVEN ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS WHICH HAVE PLAGUED MANKIND FOR EONS. YOU SHALL BE GIVEN TO KNOW. KNOW THAT YOU SHALL BE GIVEN TO KNOW!

You shall be visited by beings sent from God to assist your planet in the Transition. There is NOTHING to fear from these beings. They are NOT "fallen angels". These are God's Hosts, sent in response to your very prayers at this time. Welcome them. Do not fear them.

The aliens of your government will be sent to terrify you. But you shall be given to know the difference—the true from the false. Remember: You shall know them by their fruits. LOOK AT THEM. How do they come across to you?

DO THEY GENERATE FEAR OR FEELINGS OF LOVE AND COMPASSION? ARE YOU ELEVATED AND ENRICHED OR DO YOU COWER IN TERROR AND FEAR?

Your feelings shall be a good measure upon which to base your discernment. How does your heart feel in the presence of these beings? AGAIN: YOU SHALL BE GIVEN TO KNOW.

The preachers, I repeat, have no corner on truth. Indeed, they are misleading many people. They shall be given to know the true from the false, also, AND THERE SHALL BE GREAT REGRETS AMONG THEM. SO BE IT.

I do not come to generate fear, or create anything other than to offer insight into that which is to come upon you, soon.

I come in service to God. I and my Father are one. I am Esu Immanuel, now known among my friends and associates as Sananda, which simply means "One with God". It is a "station" or level of achievement. It needn't be such a mystery.

BE OF GOOD CHEER AND KNOW THAT ALL OF GOD'S CHILDREN ARE LOVED BEYOND MEASURE. AND ALL OF GOD'S CHILDREN SHALL SEE MY FACE AND KNOW THAT I SPEAK TRUTH.

Beloved, you are loved.

I am Esu Immanuel.

OTHER VOICES

BY GEORGE HUNT WILLIAMSON & TIMOTHY GREEN BECKLEY

The author was one of the original witnesses at the meeting between contactee George Adamski and Orthon from the planet Venus. Williamson claims that he also underwent contacts with aliens and even received transmissions over his radio from friendly extraterrestrials. Others have claimed the same. Senator Barry Goldwater reportedly heard mysterious signals on his ham radio and our own astronauts have reportedly picked up messages not transmitted from Earth.

Other Voices is essentially a reprint of a book entitled The Saucers Speak, by George Hunt Williamson and Alfred Bailey. Originally published in the 1950s. Much of what the authors prophesy has indeed come to pass, and the warning the aliens send about nuclear war and environmental doom is still as urgent as it ever was when first published.

Fallen Angels

And The Origins Of Evil

Did rebel angels take on human bodies to fulfill their lust for the "daughters of men"?

Did these fallen angels teach men to build weapons of war?

That is the premise of the Book of Enoch, a text cherished by the Essenes, early Jews, and Christians, but later condemned by both rabbis and Church fathers. The book was denounced, banned, and "lost" for over a thousand years—until in 1773 a Scottish explorer discovered three copies in Ethiopia.

Elizabeth Clare Prophet examines the controversy surrounding this book and sheds new light on Enoch's forbidden mysteries. She demonstrates that Jesus and the apostles studied the Book of Enoch, and tells why Church fathers suppressed its teaching that angels could incarnate in human bodies.

Contains Richard Laurence's translation of the Book of Enoch, all the other Enoch texts (including the Book of the Secrets of Enoch), and biblical parallels.

The Indigo Children

The New Kids Have Arrived

by Lee Carroll & Jan Tober

(Featured interview in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

The "Indigo Child" is a boy or girl who displays a new and unusual set of psychological attributes, revealing a pattern of behavior generally undocumented before. This pattern has singularly unique factors that call for parents and teachers to change their treatment and upbringing of these kids to assist them in achieving balance and harmony in their lives, and to help them avoid frustration.

In this groundbreaking book, international authors and lecturers Lee Carroll and Jan Tober answer many of the often-puzzling questions surrounding Indigo Children, such as:

- Can we really be seeing human evolution in kids today?
- Are these kids smarter than we were at their age?
- How come a lot of our children today seem to be "system busters"?
- Why are so many of our brightest kids being diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)?
- Are there proven, working alternatives to Ritalin?

Throughout this work, Carroll and Tober bring together some very fine minds (doctors, educators, psychologists, and more) who shed light on the Indigo Child phenomenon. These children are truly special, representing a great percentage of all the kids being born today on a worldwide basis. They come in "knowing" who they are—so they must be recognized, appreciated for their exceptional qualities, and guided with love and care.

This book is a must for the parents of unusually bright and active children!

The Secret History Of Airplane Sabotage, Part Three

(8/15/01)

The original hearings of the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) into the crash of United Airlines Flight 553, near Midway Airport, were in February, 1973. From that point to May of that year, I, as the spokesperson of our investigation and research group, was numerous times on late-night radio talk shows, by phone hook-up. Several sizeable stations throughout the nation had me on the air.

To use me as their punching bag, some moderators purposely put me on the air, so they could holler me down that I had no proof of airplane sabotage. It was a way of limiting what I could say between commercials, thus using up the time. It prevented me from going into too many details. I mentioned, or vainly tried to mention, the substance of our numerous interviews with witnesses, without divulging their names, to avoid risking our eyewitnesses.

Since I am an independent, and not one of the media "favorites", they persistently heckled me: "Where are your documents?"

In that period I never publicly divulged that we had already "liberated", and had in our possession, a copy of the entire original file of the NTSB on Flight 553. It consisted of some 1300 pages of documents and reports and pictures. (Months later the NTSB, to try to down me, released a censored, sanitized version of their original file. We were in a position to show they were using fraud to cover-up airplane sabotage, a forbidden subject. BUT, at that point, the monopoly press did not permit me to be further heard on radio talk-shows and such.)

In that period up to May 1973, the American CIA, through their front, Katharine Graham, supposed head of the Washington Post, dispatched to Chicago the Post's super-duper expert on CIA matters, Ronald Kessler. We picked him up at O'Hare Airport and went with him to a reasonably nearby restaurant. After an interview of only a few minutes, Kessler said he wanted to be driven back to the airport. He said he wanted to be back in the District of Columbia.

I asked him why he had come such a distance and yet only talked to me for a couple of minutes. He did not explain.

Kessler wrote a two-part series about me that ran on the front page of the Washington Post. It condemned me for having no details of the sabotage. Savvy folks, however, from all over North America, called me, stating: "Sherman, you must really have something for the Post to have you on the front page twice, heckling you for your investigations of the Watergate plane crash."

(For more about the Washington Post and Ronald Kessler, visit our website story, "The Late Grand Dragon Of The Washington Post".)

[Editor's note: Or go back to last month's issue of The SPECTRUM for this clue-laden, eye-opening story.]

In the 1970s, the major owner of UAL, Inc., parent of United Air Lines, were the Rockefellers, and they also owned all three news networks (and, to this day, still have a large ownership) CBS, NBC, and ABC. The bosses of United Air Lines were getting increasingly disturbed by my public statements. So, in May 1973, the general counsel of the airlines sent a letter of demand to the NTSB contending that Sherman H. Skolnick had no proof whatever of sabotage. United Air Lines demanded that NTSB subpoena me to take my deposition. This would prove, they contended, that I was making unfounded statements. (The various wire services ran the letter of demand of United Air Lines.)

After being served with the subpoena, I arranged with the Safety Board, and they agreed, that I was going to represent myself and supply and direct the testimony of others.

The Safety Board panel figured that the way to handle this was through the subpoena. They arranged for re-opened public hearings at the same large motel meeting room in Chicago, as in February 1973. They set two full days for my deposition, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., with very short recesses for lunch, for June 13 and 14, 1973.

On the scheduled time and day, I rolled in with my wheelchair, with a large suitcase. Accompanying me were eight of my eyewitnesses. As the hearings began before the five-person NTSB panel, I informed them I have two preliminary matters to bring to their attention. First, I demanded that three of the Safety Board panel disqualify themselves because they and/or their immediate family are substantial stockholders in various airlines that have a joint interest that air sabotage remain a secret, forbidden subject. That they have an interest to hem me in, to prevent the truth from coming out.

Without referring to federal statutes, administrative procedures, or reasons to support her ruling, the Chairperson proclaimed: "Mr. Skolnick, your motion to disqualify is denied."

Then, with the assistance of my associates, I opened up the large suitcase and spread out on a good-sized table in front of myself and the Safety Board panel, the entire NTSB file we had "liberated".

I stated to the panel: "Secondly, I am telling you, straight in front, that I have the possession of a copy of your entire original file on Flight 553. I admit responsibility of purloining your records. I challenge you to now arrest me for so doing. Arrest me right here, in front of this audience of mostly reporters from all over the world."

The audience was estimated at 250 persons.

The woman chairperson, with as much shock on her face as when we had a deputy sheriff serve her a copy of my lawsuit against her in the midst of a Safety Board hearing in February, said only one word in a low voice: "Proceed."

The CBS Network, as well as their local TV station, WBBM-TV, Channel 2, Chicago, was by closed-circuit videoing and observing the entire proceedings. It was primarily to immediately inform the Rockefellers and other bigshots of what is being presented. The network did NOT use any of the video on the air. Their local TV station used only a meaningless, sanitized few seconds of the proceedings, revealing almost nothing.

I started out by stating: "I will show from your own records that all the air tower and airport instruments for guiding-in Flight 553, which I call the Watergate plane, were turned off just as that plane approached. They were all turned back on, the moment after the plane was steered falsely into the ground, short of the designated runway at Midway Airport.

"Contrary to established rules and procedures, Midway tower steered a small private plane to go right in front of Flight 553 as Flight 553 was on the path of in-coming, thus obstructing the commercial plane. The flight recorder in the tail of the plane was arranged to stop at a key point, censoring all that happened to Flight 553 as it was on the flight-path for landing. The electric buss bar of the plane was arranged to short out, burning out key instruments, and the plane was coming in dark, as shown by your own pictures, records, and reports, and by a witness.

"The altimeter was sabotaged, so the pilot and co-pilot were at a lower altitude than they should have been, causing the plane to pancake on top of some residences, killing some on-board and some on the ground. Persons in Midway control tower, as well as those in charge of the hand-off signals from O'Hare, caused false and erroneous signals to be relayed to Flight 553."

(During the hearings, I mentioned that the small private red plane, according to our investigations, which was falsely steered in front of Flight 553, had on-board known mafioso from Indiana and had let loose right in front of 553 a blizzard of thin metal chaff to screw up 553.)

With a series of enlarged charts, documents from the original NTSB file, and supporting eyewitness testimony, I step by step began to present the proof of air sabotage. (The specific technical details will be in a later part of this series.)

During a short lunch break, the national correspondent of the Hearst Publication chain stopped me in the hallway. "Mr. Skolnick, you don't have anything" he contemptuously proclaimed. Puzzled, I answered: "What? Were you watching everything I was presenting or were you asleep?"

Starting to shout at me, he blurted out: "Nowhere have you demonstrated that there was a bomb aboard that plane. No bomb; no proof. Period."

Trying to contain my own anger, I said: "Where did you get the idea that the only way to sabotage a plane is to plant a bomb onboard?"

He quickly retorted: "No bomb. No proof. No sabotage."

I rapidly responded: "And that is what YOU are going to report for YOUR chain of publications?" He dismissed me: "That's right. You have misled the public."

Toward the end of the day, during a short recess, the Chicago Tribune Transportation Editor, Tom Buck, arranged to photograph me sitting at the table with all the NTSB documents, reports, and pictures there, spread out.

Guess what? The Tribune later ran his story stating that Chicago legal researcher Sherman Skolnick (which is what they called me in those years) has shown no proof whatever to support his allegations that a United Air Lines plane crashed last December near Midway Airport because of sabotage. With the story, they ran a picture showing me only head and shoulders. The part of me sitting at the table with all the documents, reports, and pictures of the NTSB was cropped out. (The Rockefeller family, at the time owners of United Air Lines, were also major owners of Tribune Company, parent firm of the Chicago Tribune.)

After a long day, later in the hearings, to sort of relieve the tension in the air, I told what I thought would be a little joke. I referred to United's general counsel, Mr. Streit, as Mr.

Alley, as if I had made a Freudian slip. I quickly said I was sorry.

Then I said: "I am here to categorically ADMIT that I have no proof whatever that Richard Nixon and the head of United Air Lines were on the plane with guns and shot dead Mrs. E. Howard Hunt, the Watergate bag-lady."

Guess what? Donald Schwartz, covering the hearings for the Chicago Sun-Times, under his byline later ran a story with a big headline: "SKOLNICK ADMITS HE HAS NO PROOF WHATEVER".

The story went on to state that Sherman Skolnick, at a Safety Board hearing into the crash last December of a United Air Lines plane near Midway Airport, said he categorically admits he has no proof whatever of sabotage.

(At that time, the Chicago Sun-Times was owned by Field Enterprises, owned by a combination of the Marshall Field family and the Rockefellers.)

After the publication of that fraudulent story, when I next saw Donald Schwartz, I did not restrain myself: "Look, I am going to take my metal crutch and twist it around your neck, you lying crook." He just smiled and walked away.

On the other hand, the wireservice, Associated Press, to their credit, in a Chicago date-lined story, stated that Chicago legal researcher Sherman Skolnick, in a heavily-documented presentation of sabotage, has appeared before a re-opened hearing of the National Transportation Safety Board inquiring into the crash last December of a United Air Lines plane near Midway Airport, Chicago.

This story ran on AP's "A" wire, their national and international wire. Guess what? Only ONE newspaper in the United States ran this story—a newspaper in Seattle, Washington. All the other press outlets, print, radio, and television ignored the AP's straightforward, factually correct story. All the rest of the monopoly press went with a combination of the false stories of the Tribune and the Sun-Times and the Hearst publications.

Several news outlets overseas, however, did use the Associated Press story. Following up on that was Swedish National Television, their major network. They sent a film crew to Chicago and arranged to meet me at the crash site, right where several residences were destroyed by the pancaking Flight 553 coming down.

They interviewed me again at a later date. It was made into a 90-minute documentary with me talking in English, and below my picture, Swedish subtitles. I became a volunteer, unpaid consultant to the project, which was quite a sensation in parts of Europe.

In later years, a highly-skilled journalist, Tom Valentine, started and ran a magazine exposing the real stuff, called REEL-NEWS. It was successfully distributed, some 150 thousand copies each issue, at places like airports. Then they printed an issue with the usual press-run, about the story of the sabotage of Flight 553, with references to the specific technical details. By a strange combination of events, the magazine was blocked in the printer's warehouse, and was not distributed. It became the death warrant of the magazine, which then went under.

(Please note: a very skilled writer with a long background in aviation, Rodney Stich, has written and privately published a book The Unfriendly Skies which details the incompetence and blundering of the airlines. He also has books of his documented work in exposing high-level fraud in the government.)

The next part of this series will deal with the specific details of sabotage. Stay tuned.

The Secret History Of Airplane Sabotage, Part Four

(8/17/01)

Several situations motivated the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) to re-open their hearings into the crash of United Air Lines Flight 553. And to set two full days, June 13 and 14, 1973, for what we publicly called the crash of the Watergate Plane. My pending lawsuit in the local state court against the NTSB, claiming air sabotage cover-up, was arbitrarily removed to the federal court in Chicago.

One half of the world's current population should soon be dead according to authoritative projections. Will you, your family, and friends be among the survivors or the deceased?

Dr. Len Horowitz and Dr. Joseph S. Puleo investigate 2000 years of religious and political persecution and the latest technologies being used to enslave, coerce, and even kill billions of unsuspecting people.

This work returns the most precious spiritual knowledge, power, and "healing codes" to humanity. It offers new hope for the loving masses to survive the worldwide plagues, famines, and weather changes that are now at hand. In perfect time for these cataclysmic events, Healing Codes presents an urgent, monumental, and inspired work that will be hailed for generations to come.

knew that the banker-judges in Chicago U.S. District Court would not allow my lawsuit to be heard on the facts. A judicial cover-up. It was a reality understood by the Safety Board panel, made up primarily of those directly or through their immediate families, were major owners of airline shares. And the unwritten policy of the airlines, and their substantial owners, is to block all public discussion of airplane sabotage, a secret and forbidden subject.

Another factor was the way I was informing the public, as best I could, through late-night radio talk-shows and college and university speeches on the Watergate plane crash. And further, United Air Lines and the Safety Board had no prior knowledge that we had “liberated” the entire Safety Board original file of Flight 553.

I proceeded with my own testimony as to our investigation, with the Safety Board documents and pictures, together with our interviews including the presence at the re-opened hearings of eight eyewitnesses.

As stated earlier, #1 was THE PEOPLE; #2, THE AIRPLANE. To do a proper job in sabotaging a plane, an art and science in itself, is to know its weaknesses. This particular Boeing 737 (N9031U) had chronic trouble in the month preceding the crash with its captain’s altimeter and its air data computer—two of the most important instruments on the plane. (NTSB Docket SA-435, Exhibits 11A, 11B, 11C, maintenance data.)

The captain’s altimeter (how far he is above ground level) MUST operate at 28 volts D.C. (Exhibit 9C, page 7) An increase in amperage or voltage in the electrical system would cause the instruments to malfunction.

The plane was delayed in departure by about 10 to 15 minutes. (Later investigations and sources convinced us the tubes in the front of the plane, leading to the air speed indicator, were drilled out, to give false readings.) This was enough time for a skilled person to strip down the bus bar at a certain point and install a device (as was done) that shorts out UPON DESCENT of the plane (a sort of barometrically controlled sabotage device).

In the last 15 minutes of Flight 553, circuit breakers began popping in the cockpit, causing the flight recorder, in the tail, the air data computer, and other instruments to short out and malfunction. The NTSB transcripts of the sole surviving record, the tape of the cockpit voice recorder, shows this from the intra-cockpit (inside the cockpit) discussion. (Exhibit 12A)

[Editor’s note: For those of you with a more technical understanding, the circuit breakers “popping” would mean the circuits feeding power to these important instruments were shorted-out to cause the breakers to trip from sensing too much current flow in the circuit. The end result of the breakers tripping would be to shut-off power to those all-important instruments. And if the short remained in place, any attempts to reset the breakers would only result in them tripping immediately again.]

The pilot had a prophetic name—Captain Whitehouse. By the way, he was one of the most skilled pilots at United, with a prior background in aviation air shows and precision flying.

Captain: “Sounds to me like a circuit breaker, perhaps.”

2nd Officer: “Huh?” (Unidentified voice, apparently unlawfully deleted by the FBI/DIA.)

Captain: “Yeah, I just meant, I thought you’d better check EVERYTHING, ah.” (Emphasis added.) (NTSB, Exhibit 12A, page 7 of Transcript)

The Cockpit Voice Recorder was found and removed by the FBI, first on the scene at the crash zone. Remember what the Chairman of the Safety Board told a Congressional Committee in Washington on the same day as the re-opening of the Safety Board hearings in Chicago—about the strange doings of the FBI in the crash zone? (See Part Two of this series.) [In last month’s issue of The SPECTRUM, as well as Sherman’s website.]

Flight 553 needed its instruments. Visibility was 1 to 2 miles. Ceiling varied from 400 to 600 feet (Exhibit 5-K), with some low clouds as low as 100 feet. As for the National Weather Service, their RUNWAY VISUAL RANGE RECORDER WAS TURNED OFF AND NOT WORKING. (Exhibit 5-K)

A major radio navigational instrument is the airport outer marker, also called by the street name it’s on. The outer marker at Midway Airport is in the vicinity of 87th & Kedzie, and is called by some the Kedzie localizer. THE MIDWAY AIRPORT OUTER MARKER STOPPED WORKING JUST AS FLIGHT 553 APPROACHED IT AND WENT BACK ON JUST AFTER FLIGHT 553 CRASHED.

Captain: “Is Kedzie localizer off, off the air, is that it?”

2nd Officer: “I beg your pardon?”

Captain: “Is Kedzie localizer off the air? There’s an inbound on—ah—there’s an inbound on 31—what’s that? (referring to JET RUNWAY 31 LEFT, and a small propeller plane reportedly falsely steered right in front of 553 as it was preparing to land. The small plane was coming in right ahead of them on the same runway. Propeller planes are supposed to land on RUNWAY 31 RIGHT.) (NTSB Exhibit 12A, page 3.)

The captain’s altimeter would NOT work below 3400 feet. (Exhibit 9C, page 8) A retired aviation expert, with experience as a 4-motor bomber pilot and loads of control tower experience, as earlier stated, mysteriously was directed by his firm to be outside, measuring a parking lot just at the same time Flight 553 was in-coming. That was William J. Simonini. At the re-opened hearings, he testified that he saw Flight 553 at about 450 feet near 73rd and Kedzie, TO THE FAR RIGHT OF THE OUTER MARKER. At the original Safety Board hearings in February 1973, the Safety Board tried to conceal this data by improper questions of THEIR witness, Simonini. He later became OUR witness. (NTSB re-opened hearings, Simonini testimony, 6/13/73) At the outer marker, Flight 553 was supposed to be at about 889 feet above the ground. (Exhibit 2J, Chart 11-2)

SOME OF THE INTENTIONAL BLUNDERS ON THE GROUND:

(a) In the last 15 minutes of Flight 553, its speed was erratic. (Exhibit 3-F) (Remember, we later found out about the sabotage of the tubes to the air speed indicator on Flight 553.) It was being watched by some of the most highly sophisticated radar equipment and computers in the world at that time, ARTS III. Yet, although they claim they told him to slow down, after 21 sweeps of the radar he was still going 210 knots per hour. It was being watched by Chicago Approach Control, O’Hare Airport. (15 radar sweeps per minute.)

(b) The approach controller later admitted he had forgotten to give 553 approach clearance. (Exhibit 3A, page 9) The Flight 553 crew were led to believe they were in a holding pattern. (Exhibit 12A, page 9)

(c) The Midway tower steered a small propeller plane, Aero Commander N309VS, right in front of 553 as 553 was coming in for a landing. (Through later investigations, we uncovered a mystery. The pilot of that small propeller plane was a skilled pilot of a 4-motor plane. It was the same as finding out the captain of the huge ship the “Queen Mary” was somehow now in charge of a two-man rowboat.) This doing by the tower caused 553 to drastically close the gap between them and the small plane. That small plane, to screw up 553, dropped a blizzard of thin metal chaff right in front of 553.

(d) They stopped watching 553 from O’Hare TOO SOON (called a premature hand-off). At the time, Midway did not have precision radar. (Exhibit 3C, page 13) This violated O’Hare-Midway Letter of Agreement. (Exhibit 3G, page 3, paragraph 4)

(e) They did not tell 553 that their plane was too far right of the Midway outer marker, a dangerous situation.

(f) In violation of regulations, they were working two planes for the SAME runway at the same time, Flight 553 and the Aero Commander.

(g) Although there was only about a 6-mile-an-hour wind, they told 553 to go to JET RUNWAY 31 LEFT, HAVING NO GLIDESLOPE, an important navigational aid giving altitude and azimuth. (Intra-cockpit voice discussion, Exhibit 12A, page 13) Runway 13R, the other end, has glideslope.

(h) Within a few seconds, Midway told a different thing to O’Hare than it did to Flight 553. (Exhibit 12A, page 13, compared to transcriptions of Chicago approach control, Exhibit 3C, page 14)

OTHER INTENTIONAL BLUNDERS AND SABOTAGE:

The air traffic controllers paid no attention to the fact that 553 had too much velocity and was on too fast of a descent, and was far off-course. With circuit breakers clicking (from the barometrically-triggered sabotage devices) and instruments malfunctioning, the cockpit crew of 553 tried to switch to standby power. (As shown by comparing intra-cockpit discussion, Exhibit 12A, pages 10-11, with B-737 flight manual language, Exhibit 2F, page 4E) ELEVEN WITNESSES ON THE GROUND SAID FLIGHT 553 HAD NO LIGHTS. (Exhibit 4B, statements of witnesses; also, eyewitness testimony of Simonini)

In the first five minutes and last five minutes of flight, the pilot is supposed to be flying the plane. BUT, in the last few minutes before the crash, the co-pilot (1st Officer) and the 2nd Officer were flying. This supports our contention that the pilot was dead or disabled, such as from cyanide poisoning. (See later discussion as to high-level of CYANIDE, such as in bodies of some of the Watergate 12. We also interviewed the former head of a laboratory that made devices for the CIA, to go off in the cockpit of planes, and causing cyanide to disable those in the cockpit. He said that although he thought he was supplying these devices to be used against Eastern Bloc "enemy" civilian airplanes, he heard that some of his devices were used domestically, in the U.S.) Also, to be compared as to pilot at beginning and end of flight, there is a comparison between the intra-cockpit discussion (Exhibit 12A, pages 13-15) with the flight manual challenge-respond language. (Exhibit 2F, page 41)

Eyewitness William J. Simonini, a retired aviation expert, said how the FBI was tormenting him ever since they found out he saw the Watergate plane shortly before it crashed. He said the FBI was tormenting him in various ways, day and night. AND, that they arranged to frame-up and jail two of his sons to cause him further anguish.

As a result of the Watergate Affair, Nixon White House aide Chuck Colson was sent to prison. After getting out, he said he is a new person and devoted to promoting good deeds. He spoke at a meeting in Chicago. Afterwards, I interviewed him.

Skolnick: "What happened to Mrs. E. Howard Hunt, wife of the Watergate burglar?"

Colson: "She was murdered by the FBI and the CIA."

Skolnick: "Can you tell us more? Having been in the Nixon White House, you seem to know a lot."

Colson: "I have already said too much."

Did some of the Watergate 12 actually survive the pancaked plane but were murdered on the ground? And what happened to Mrs. Hunt's luggage for which she bought another first class seat ticket? The crash of Flight 553 and what happened on the ground were clearly overkill directed against the Watergate figures among the onboard passengers.

The Chandra Levy Affair, Part Two

(8/20/01)

The story I posted about Chandra Levy on 6/22/01 should be considered as Part One. [See July 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM.]

At that time I was about the first to raise questions as to how she somehow wiggled her way into the press office, in Washington, D.C., of the FEDERAL BUREAU OF PRISONS. The oil-soaked, spy-riddled, war-mongering monopoly press seemed to spend all their time raising only tidbits of sexual matters about Chandra and Congressman Gary Condit.

The District of Columbia authorities and the FBI, at least according to press accounts, had not taken an interest in or interviewing fellow employees of hers in that press office. Notice the time line, tending to show the importance of where Ms. Levy was an intern:

- Late November, 2000: Having earned at a California university a Master's Degree in criminal justice and journalism, Ms. Levy was given a job as an intern in a very sensitive place. (And what domestic and/or foreign intelligence agencies arranged THAT?) That was about the time Timothy McVeigh decided not to appeal further the murder conviction as to the bombing of the federal office building in Oklahoma City, April 19, 1995.

In December 2000, the federal trial judge Richard Matsch in Denver set the McVeigh execution date as May 16, 2001. That piece of data got lost in the press shuffle as it occurred on the same day that the "Gang of Five" on the U.S. Supreme Court installed George W. Bush as the "occupant" and "resident" of the White House. Albert Gore, Jr., having won the popular vote nationwide by some 600,000 votes, became the un-inaugurated President of the U.S. That was historically similar to the 1876 presidential election when U.S. troops blocked Tilden, who won the popular vote, from approaching the inauguration site where Hayes was sworn in as "President". The Hayes forces, like with George W. Bush, stole the White House through an Electoral College vote using a corrupt U.S. Supreme Court judge as well as corruption in the Florida voting. (Visit our website stories on the Year-2000 Election and Gore Vidal's book called simply 1876.)

- As the time ticked away toward the execution date, Ms. Levy reportedly had taken a great interest in unearthing details through her press office connection. After all, as a child she used to volunteer to assist the local police in her home district. At an early age she hoped to have a career reportedly in the American CIA. The McVeigh affair was a repository of numerous secrets tending to incriminate George Herbert Walker Bush, Bill Clinton, and then White House occupant George W. Bush. Such as the suppressed and concealed Iraqi connection to the multiple bombings in Oklahoma City. Such as the publicly-undisclosed FBI surveillance tapes showing, in the month before the bombings, McVeigh in the company of Iraqi military officers, supposed "defectors" (actually double agents) brought into the U.S. by the Elder Bush. Two thousand such Iraqi military officers, some from intelligence units, since the end of the Persian Gulf War in 1991, have been settled, financed, and housed in OKLAHOMA CITY. Making the arrangements was the Elder Bush as President, and continuing the same with Clinton as President, and then George W. Bush as White House resident.

(Visit our website's related stories, such as "The Secrets Of Timothy McVeigh".)

- Some weeks after her disappearance on the afternoon of May 1, 2001, the FBI contends Ms. Levy was last in her apartment in the District of Columbia that afternoon using her computer. (Could someone else have been using her computer, somehow knowing her password?) The FBI announced that they had retrieved, from her hard disk drive, from that afternoon, some 38 websites viewed by her. They proclaimed that none of them was important. REALLY? They

Emerging Viruses - AIDS & Ebola

This is the first in-depth exploration into the origins of HIV and Ebola. Claims that these "emerging viruses" naturally evolved and then jumped species from ape to man seem grossly unfounded in light of the compelling evidence assembled in this extraordinary text. Alternatively, the possibility that these bizarre germs were laboratory creations, accidentally or intentionally transmitted via tainted hepatitis and smallpox vaccines in the U.S. and Africa—as numerous authorities have alleged—is investigated herein.

This book reviews the numerous viral vaccine studies conducted simultaneously in New York City and Central West Africa by a narrow network of virologists working for major military-medical contractors under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and the World Health Organization (WHO). Included is Dr. Robert Gallo, the notorious "discoverer" of the AIDS virus. The text presents bizarre and horrifying facts about the biological weapons race of the 1960s and early 1970s when these researchers developed countless immune-system-ravaging viruses, and experimented with an assortment of antidote vaccines allegedly for "defense" and cancer prevention.

said she (or was it her alter ego and ghost) had clicked on GoFrance.About.com. It is a website for those wishing to visit France. Maps, travel guides, and such are given on-line. The site is reportedly also used by the French CIA to track those interested in visiting France who should, in their view, be surveilled. In our original story, we raised the questions of Ms. Levy with the Mossad, Israeli Intelligence, comparing the situation to that of Monica Lewinsky. A section of the Mossad has long collaborated with a unit of the French CIA—sort of an open secret.

[Editor's note: Another possible connection to this point is that Democratic Representative Gary A. Condit is a member of some congressional Intelligence committee. That tidbit only slipped out when Democratic Representative boss Richard Gephardt made the "offhand" remark in an interview that he would have to re-think Condit's position on that Intelligence committee in light of Condit's disappointing national television interview with Connie Chung. Was Gephardt actually giving us a much more important clue about the behind-the-scenes congressional suspicions about the Condit/Levy connection than we may at first derive without Sherman's data above for background?]

Newsweek reporter Michael Isikoff, in a supposedly exclusive story, claimed Gary Condit had an alibi for the early afternoon of May 1, 2001. Condit was supposedly in the office of Vice President Richard Cheney. And that Cheney supposedly was trying to win Condit over to the GOP position as to the electric mess in California. (Newsweek website, 7/20/01) Going back to the time Isikoff was with the sister publication, the Washington Post, he seemed to always be a reputed front for foreign intelligence and the American CIA, poo-pooing any real information as merely the ravings of "conspiracy theorists".

Knowing a lot about him and the Washington Post as a front for the American CIA, we call him Michael ISAFRAUD. (See our website story, "The Late Grand Dragon Of The Washington Post".)

• A few days after her disappearance, the FBI sheepishly admits on May 10, 2001, that they somehow "forgot" to give McVeigh's lawyers some three thousand documents. (Caused by details Ms. Levy uncovered through the Bureau of Prisons?) So, the execution date is changed to June 11, 2001. There are ten media people selected to be at the death-house window at the Terre Haute, Indiana, prison to witness the execution of McVeigh. One of them, not contradicted by the others, says that "he appeared to be still breathing, or what appeared to be shallow breathing, even after being pronounced dead, and his eyes remained open". (Video interview on MSNBC—video streaming, 6/11/01—of Susan Carlson, reporter for WLS-AM Radio, Chicago. Story was suppressed by most other media, including all mass media in Chicago, including apparently her own radio station.) Some doctors ridiculed the way the prison people put the go-to-sleep sedative in McVeigh's leg, not a major upper-body vein. In the leg, the sedative would take, some doctors claim, four hours to act. Hey, isn't a go-to-sleep sedative supposed to make you do that, that is, close your eyes and go to sleep?

• July 29, 2001, some five weeks after I raised the Levy/Bureau of Prisons issue, the Washington Times publishes a story entitled "Who Is Chandra Levy?" In it they state: "Her job at the Bureau of Prisons information office required her to do Internet searches and scan newspapers to prepare daily news summaries, answer telephone calls and mail, and help with SPECIAL PROJECTS. IN ONE, SHE COORDINATED MEDIA ATTENDANCE AT PLANNING SESSIONS FOR THE EXECUTION OF OKLAHOMA BOMBER TIMOTHY McVEIGH." (Emphasis added)

The owners of the Washington Times reportedly are the Korean CIA, by and through Rev. Sun Myung Moon, who ostensibly launders billions of dollars from tax-dodging and illegal dealings of heavy industry in South Korea. It is more or less an open secret that Americans are seldom reminded of that. (The Elder Bush has been a paid lobbyist and consultant for Rev. Moon's propaganda activities in South America.) By raising the McVeigh/Ms. Levy issue, is the Korean CIA trying again to blackmail the American government for an advantage for South Korea?

Some years ago, there was a tremendous scandal in Washington. The Korean CIA reportedly bribed, or attempted to bribe, key members of the U.S. Congress. Have we all forgotten about this event? (For some years,

The McVeigh matter was not the only thing Ms. Levy did using her position in the key place in the Federal Bureau of Prisons apparatus. She unearthed reportedly details tending to incriminate George Herbert Walker Bush and his sons, George W. and Jeb, among others. Ms. Levy was inquiring into a great little-mentioned secret. That is, the disappearance, reportedly from the U.S. prison system, of Carlos Enrique Lehder Rivas, also known as CARLOS LEHDER. With the aid and blessings of the Elder Bush and his sons, and the American CIA, Lehder was the co-founder of the Medellin Dope Cartel in Colombia.

Lehder is the only drug cartel baron to have been extradited to the U.S., where he was put on trial on federal criminal charges, convicted, and originally sentenced to more than a life term.

Some background: In the late 1970s, Jeb Bush was installed as the head of the Venezuela unit of Texas Commerce Bank, a principal owner of which was his father, George Herbert Walker Bush. The bank unit reportedly became part of the money laundering of proceeds from the Colombia Medellin Drug Cartel, co-founded by Carlos Lehder as a Bush family business partner. The Drug Cartel was moreso headquartered in the U.S. than in Colombia. It was part of the whole CIA operation to the southern states of the United States, headquartered, in part, through an airport in western Arkansas, at Mena. The Elder Bush, his sons Jeb and George W., and Ollie North, and Bill Clinton, were all part of the operation. Guns were smuggled by CIA airflights to Central America, with side-trips to Colombia to pick up huge shipments of cocaine which supported the Colombia economy moreso than coffee.

The tiny First National Bank of Mena, Arkansas, was purchased by the Riady family, ethnic Chinese tied to Bill Clinton and the Bush Family. The bank reportedly was a transmission point for the huge dope cash flow which went up to Garfield Ridge Trust & Savings Bank, Chicago. The Chicago bank for many years had, as a principal stockholder, Congressman Dan Rostenkowski. For years a Chairman of the Board of the Chicago bank was a reputed former U.S. Secret Service official, Dan Shannon. Rostenkowski, called Rosty for short, was closely aligned with the Chicago markets, the next transmission point of the dope loot from Rosty's bank. That is, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade, and a sort of basement, step-sister operation called Chicago Board Options Exchange.

Rosty, as the long-time head of the tax-writing committee of Congress, got many "speech fees" and other benefits from the Chicago markets. He, in turn, pushed through almost private laws, favoring the Chicago markets with tax loopholes on straddles and hedging. So, from Rosty's bank in Chicago the huge dope cash flow reportedly was transmitted to the Chicago markets and disguised as soybean and currency trading. Assisting this in all the years was international swindler Marc Rich, tied to both the Bush family and Bill and Hillary Clinton.

Rosty was eventually defrocked and sent to federal prison for defrauding the private bank of the U.S. Congress.

[Editor's note: Remember the article in last month's News Desk about Congress having their own lucrative retirement plan independent of the shaky Social Security system for the rest of us? The suggestion was made that we force Congress to be part of Social Security—and THEN see how fast the system is put into tip-top shape! In a similar way, one can't help but postulate that these "paragons of virtue" would have continued to look the other way with respect to Rosty's "extracurricular" activities if only he had left the sacred congressional bank alone.]

The Medellin Drug Cartel, operating through Mena and the Chicago bank and the Chicago markets, has other collaborators. On occasion, when the huge shipments of Colombia dope somehow became an issue in Chicago's highly corrupt federal courts, the Drug Cartel had corrupt federal judges to aid them. One such has been Chicago federal appeals judge Iliana D. Rovner. Rovner has been part of the Jim Thompson gang of public office criminals. "Big Jim"—formerly Illinois Governor—has had Rovner as his legal advisor. In recent years he has been the head of the Winston & Strawn Chicago-based law firm octopus, with worldwide offices. Some years ago, on our one-hour public-access cable-TV program Broadsides, we told how Winston & Strawn reportedly has an inner unit, walled off from the rest of the law firm, engaging not in law firm work, but in dope cartel matters. Several employees of the firm, after the show was aired, confirmed the validity of our charges.

As in the historical example of 1876, the Year-2000 Election was corrupted in the Electoral College phase through Florida. Cocaine money from the Medellin Cartel—with Carlos Lehder and his business partners, the Bush family—was the principal corrupting force. Tens of millions of dope dollars were used to work a malign influence, reportedly on Democratic officials in southern Florida, to have them stop the recounting of the ballots which would have put Gore over the top on the Electoral College vote. Gore was done-in by corrupt members of his own party. In politics, as a reality can you talk publicly about how your party's OWN KEY PEOPLE, by bribery, stabbed you in the back and helped the Bush family steal the White House after also corrupting part of the U.S. Supreme Court (just like in 1876)?

The dope cartel loot used for these purposes was laundered for them by at least two Chicago-based commodity brokers funneling the dirty money through the Chicago markets. (The disguised accounts are known to some.)

You can see the tie-in to the Bush family. In the late 1970s, about the time just after the Elder Bush was the head of America's secret political police, the CIA, a major espionage agency operative, Barry Seal, operated the airplanes to bring in dope from the Medellin Cartel, with the collaboration of the Bush family, Bill and Hillary Clinton, and Ollie North. The co-founders of the drug cartel were Carlos Lehder, originally from Germany, and Pablo Escobar and his two brothers. To control matters in later years, the Elder Bush arranged to have Pablo assassinated, disguised as an "arrest" situation. (For related details, see Killing Pablo, by Mark Bowden, 2001.)

The links of Barry Seal to the Bush family and the Medellin Cartel is evident in the recent book Barry & "The Boys"—The CIA, The Mob, And America's Secret History by Daniel Hopsicker. Carlos Lehder fought extradition to the U.S. For that purpose, he arranged to shoot-up the Colombia Supreme Court building. The justices there were considering the extradition issue. Assassinated on Lehder's orders were eleven high court justices and many other people. Lehder also reportedly arranged to have assassinated the Minister of Justice in Colombia.

Carlos Lehder was finally arrested and extradited to the U.S. He became a key witness in the dope trial against Panama strongman Manuel Noriega, who had been seized by the Elder Bush as President and his Miliary/CIA. In his own trial, Lehder was convicted and sentenced to more than a life term. BUT, because in his testimony against Noriega, Lehder had evaded mentioning that the Bush family were implicated with Noriega in the dope business, Lehder's sentence was reduced to 55 years in prison.

On occasion, the U.S. federal prison system can be as corrupt as the press tells us the justice system is in Mexico. Why is the monopoly press always pointing to corruption ELSEWHERE instead of right here in America? For a price, we are often told, a major criminal in Mexico can walk right out of prison and disappear. Is the same true in the U.S.?

Chandra Levy, through her sensitive position in the Federal Bureau of Prisons, through their computers and facilities, and human intelligence contacts, reportedly unearthed a dangerous group of details related to the foregoing. For example, that the Bush family, to protect themselves from jail, arranged for their business partner, Carlos Lehder, to disappear from the U.S. prison system. Is Lehder in Germany, courtesy of German counter-intelligence? Note: a key witness in the Oklahoma bombings, Andreas Strassmeir, part of German counter-intelligence, reportedly played a role in the bombings. He was allowed to be unlawfully in the U.S. and to disappear from the U.S., thanks to the corruption and connivance of the highest levels of the U.S. government. And remember: German counter-intelligence in Frankfurt (tied to Strassmeir) had advance knowledge of the team on the way to the U.S. to assassinate Clinton White House deputy counsel Vincent W. Foster, Jr., and make some think it was a "suicide". (Visit our website series "Greenspan Aids And Bribes Bush", Part Four.)

For the American Gestapo—that is, the Federal Bureau of Investigation—to say they have no idea what happened to Chandra Levy is simply ridiculous. A deep-down FBI secret is that they, early on, suspected she was being used by foreign intelligence agencies, the French CIA and the Mossad, to blackmail the Bush White House. So, the counter-intelligence division of the FBI was tapping her phone. (Hey, does anyone realize that while all this is happening, the Hanssen spy case unfolds? We contend he is actually a CIA official who penetrated FBI counter-intelligence to expose a high-level mole. Hanssen somehow fell between the cracks. Visit our website story on this.)

As of now, there seem to be two possibilities:

Either (1) Ms. Levy has been snuffed out to protect members of the Bush family and their partnership with drug cartel baron Carlos Lehder and his disappearance from the Federal Prison System, since the Bush family members—if this opened up widely publicly—would be subject to federal criminal prosecution for dope money laundering and treason.

Or, (2) Ms. Levy is parked somewhere overseas, Paris or Tel Aviv, where her details would suddenly surface, starting in some major foreign press outlet. In Europe, top officials mumble that George W. is incompetent on financial matters and foreign affairs. Overseas there has started an attack on the so-called U.S. dollar. Are the profound secrets of McVeigh and Carlos Lehder, in some small part involved in the attack on the U.S. dollar, which some say started with the French Rothschilds?

More coming as it develops. Stay tuned.

INTELLIGENCE AGENT'S SHOCKING REPORT FLYING SAUCERS COME FROM INSIDE EARTH!

- Aliens have established underground bases around the planet.
- Entrance ways can be found in many major cities.
- Ancient tunnel system has existed since time of Atlantis.
- Some government & military officials have taken the side of aliens.

The UFO enigma is more complex than generally believed. Though it is commonly thought that space ships are arriving here from other solar systems, there is now evidence that several groups of ETs have established bases beneath our very feet.

Here are bizarre stories about underground bases at Mt. Shasta, California; Brown Mountain, North Carolina; Dulce, New Mexico; Groom Lake, Nevada; Superstition Mountain Range, Arizona; South and North Poles; as well as in the mountains of the Andes, and the jungles of Brazil.

Here also are the first-hand reports of those individuals who have been abducted by aliens, and who have survived genetic experiments at some locations. These are the facts that everyone should be informed of—regardless of how disturbing the truth may turn out to be!

Recent Visions From Anna Detweiler

Editor's note: The following information is courtesy of Anna Detweiler. We first introduced Anna to you in an article titled "Anna Detweiler: Seeing Truth Beyond The Shadows" in the March 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM. We promised at that time to share other appropriate information as space and opportunity permits, and have done so, usually within the items of The News Desk.

It is clear that Anna is "seeing" some of the waves of the Photon Belt that our planetary system is passing through as part of the Great Cleansing now well underway. Perhaps her insights will aid our general understanding of what is going on. We are thankful that Anna offers to share these visions with us. Indeed, it is a busy time on and around planet Earth!

Subject: SPACE STORM

Date: Wednesday, August 15, 2001

Greetings to you, my friends. May the Balance of The One Light be with us all!

The Earth is entering a very high frequency band of energy this morning. This band has a frequency that is very close to feeling like fire and I sense a danger for us. I have lots of blue and green flashing across my computer and TV screen this morning. I think it's directly connected to this band of energy and sometimes it looks like my computer might get zapped again! I have a surge protector on, but it seems to be coming in on the air waves. This energy is "firing" up our planet again, just like a high-voltage wire.

That Coronal Mass Ejection that left the Sun yesterday appears to be heading in our general direction, but I can't see yet if it's going to hit us full force. I'm still having to "wallow" through the dark energy outside of our planet, so it's more difficult to see this kind of thing.

Take care! Love and peace, Anna

Subject: EARTH JOLT

Date: Saturday, August 18, 2001

Greetings to you, my friends. May the Balance of The One be with us.

We sure are in stormy space weather as of the last few days. There was a jolt picked up last night by almost all of the seismographs on the globe. I believe that "the powers that be" are doing their dirty deeds under cover of this space storm.

I noticed a major explosion had occurred last evening in the space just a bit outside of our atmosphere. That is what the seismographs picked up, but of course the establishment is saying all kinds of weird things made it happen. None of them make much sense. This was a scalar weapon attack. It was shot from a huge platform stationed out in space. What I have not get figured out is, what was exploded?

I'll tell you all what I can see just before the explosion, and if it looks like something you know about, please let me know. It was not a satellite or a craft of any kind, and it didn't look like a missile either. It actually looked like a huge crystal because it had the angles and lines that a crystal has. From the frequency I'd say it was either a crystal type of thing, or something denser like a metal of some kind. Do you know of any use of a crystal in space? Wouldn't it be easy to use a crystal to transmit things out there? But then why was it just orbiting by itself? Any comments on this would be appreciated.

We are also coming up to some other band of energy again. I am really beginning to believe we are in the midst of the Photon Belt, the way it looks. These bands are curved completely different than the energy that is coming directly from the Sun.

The Earth feels "exhausted" from this latest round of energy, or is it just me who it has exhausted? This seems like a very highly charged area that we have started going through. It frustrates me to see the "scientific" world grasping at straws trying to explain it all away as something that is kind of normal. It is not normal at all!

We had one of those space "photon" waves ready to hit us last night, when the explosion occurred, and it just splintered that wave. It's awesome to see the energy in space the last few days. I have also noticed that my energy body and my physical body seem to be out of alignment with each other. Sometimes as much as six inches off.

Well, this is once again sounding like a sci-fi story, but it's not! This is real and actually happening. Just wish I could explain a bit more as to what is happening.

Take care, Love and Peace, Anna

Subject: SUN PROTON STORM

Date: Sunday, August 19, 2001

The answer about why this proton storm reached us this quickly lies in the reality that it did not come from the Sun. I believe the Sun also got into the energy band that we got into, which resulted in the Coronal Mass Ejection that then billowed away from it. It's very strange that a scientist would not take into consideration that this event was not from the Sun. What a mixed up world it is when you try to make things match, when you have the wrong "puzzle pieces"!

We actually entered a violet energy area a few days before we hit the energy band. We are still in this "color" and it is a very high frequency.

Subject: WATCHINGS

Date: Wed, 22 Aug 2001 11:03:01-0600

Greetings to you, my friends. May the Balance of The One be with us all.

We have entered a pink-white frequency band of energy since yesterday morning. This band is more of a healing energy, and maybe it is good because of all the harshness of the other band last week when we had a proton storm.

The inner core of the Earth is now starting to react to that proton storm. It feels to me like we are living on top of a time bomb that will eventually have to explode outward somehow! I think actually the danger of volcanic activity is just as great from this as earthquakes. It is almost unbelievable to me how calm the outside of the Earth looks compared to the inner one. The magma has the feeling of boiling over, just like a kettle of milk! If I had a "craft" right now, I would probably get on it and leave. Is that the reason why I don't have one? [smile]

For a sensitive person the feeling of all the pressure building underneath our feet is almost frightening. I wonder if you saw the report yesterday of the asteroid that is going to hit us in 2003? My guess, it is Nibiru that they are looking at. But I'm sure there would be no way that they would tell us.

Another thing that sometimes happens to me is, when a future event gets close enough, I will start to have microsecond flashes of it. What I'm getting now is, I'm seeing our Sun go out! I pick up the feeling and thoughts more than the actual darkness. It is like something I have never experienced in this lifetime. I can't tell how close this might be; I just know, when I have these flash-forwards, the time is not that far off. Also, a lot of times it is only when I'm experiencing it, do I become aware of it being what I had been seeing.

Take care, Love and Peace, Anna

Subject: MORE WAVE STUFF

Date: Friday, August 24, 2001

I believe we are nearing a time and already are beginning to see the effects of phenomena that will totally defy the scientific knowledge that is known today. If a person keeps an open mind and takes notice how they try to explain these things, we can very well see that these things they are trying to connect the dots with, are almost to the point of not being connectable! Even for an average lay person it is beginning to be noticeable that something is not right in these explanations.

We are beginning to go through a very treacherous area in space for our primitive technology. I can see bands of energy ahead of us, one right after the other. The reason I don't believe these bands are being shot off by the Sun is because I can see them as we get closer to them, then we finally enter them, and then we exit the band.

Just because we are not having a proton storm doesn't mean that the band of energy is now gone. Quite the contrary! I can look to the other side of the Earth and see that the band is still just like it was before we entered it; we have just gone through it.

A blast from the Sun comes at us, engulfs us, and then diminishes. These bands keep right on pulsing like an alive thing! I also believe they may register as protons, electrons, and what have you, but the only difference is the frequency of them. The more I see, the more I believe this is the Photon Belt.

Also, don't let them tell you our atmosphere will keep all of this energy outside. For one thing, our atmosphere is woefully damaged, and for another thing, this is a frequency that filters in and right through our bodies.

It also works in a way like a time warp would. Our perception of things seems to change when we are going through these energy bands. It is truly working like a cleansing of old emotions; new feelings and almost everything imaginable is being affected.

Sometimes I get caught up in the "whirlpool" of the old way of thinking, then some frequency seems to kick in again and I realize that it is changing right before our very eyes! Also, I come to the realization that every one is allowed to go at their own pace, and I have only myself to be concerned about.

I find it sad that so many choose not to see a better way, but I have to allow it graciously to them. If I look at the ones more evolved than we are, I see that they also think I have things I need to learn yet, so the chain is always connected.

Take care and may the Blessings of The One be with us all! Love and peace, Anna

Subject: HOLLOW-EARTH MATERIAL YOU SENT ME

Date: Friday, August 24, 2001

Hi Friends,

I finally took the time to read the hollow-Earth site you sent to me, Al. It made me remember again what happened to me about a month ago.

I was in the "twilight zone", that is, between sleep and awake, when a being came and took me with her. We went out to the ocean, not sure exactly where, but it was very deep and she went into the water and motioned for me to come with her. Because of a claustrophobic feeling, I hesitated, but she kept communicating telepathically that she wanted to show me something. So finally I followed.

We went down, down, down until I could tell we were getting to the bottom of the ocean we were in. She took me to an opening in what looked like the side of a cliff, and there in the side she showed me another world! It was a most beautiful world and can be described as what I used to think of as what Heaven would look like. She said it was where she lived. I hesitated to go on in, and when I looked again she had disappeared and the opening to the other world was gone too! I could see though that there was an opening to this dimension on top of the Earth too, and could even see in what general location it was.

It's strange that I had actually forgotten this happening as I had even spoke to my family the next morning about it. Your article made me think of it again. Just thought this might interest you.

On a different note, it looks like there has been a major volcanic eruption in Antarctica somewhere. It is very hot and looks like fire is still spewing out.

Stay safe. Love and Peace, Anna

[Editor's note: There have actually been recent earthquake reports of unusual activity in the Antarctic region. One quake was 9/2/01, noted to be of a hefty M6.2 intensity.]

Subject: WHAT'S THAT I SEE?

Date: Monday, August 27, 2001

Greetings to you, my friends. May The Light of The One be with us all.

I've been looking at something "parked" in space outside of our atmosphere for about two days now. This thing is about at the same distance that the metallic crystal was that was blown apart about 10 days ago. But this thing is stationary, and by that I mean it is orbiting with the Earth. On my side of the globe, too. The latest solar flare (not the one from the 25th) is going around this thing, like it has a huge magnetic field around it. I cannot pick up any life on this thing so far, but it has the same frequency that the monolith had that I noticed by the Sun one time. It is shaped like a square on one end, and a round shape pointed towards the Earth. It is totally black; it certainly won't be seen by any Earthian's telescope, and the only reason I saw it is because of its energy. It's hard to tell how big it is, because I don't have a whole lot to gauge by in that area, but I would guess it's enormous.

We are also entering another one of those very-high-frequency energy bands—whew! This is a potent one, and the establishment will tell you it's a solar wind or something of the sort. It's not! I'm still looking for those pesky solar winds they keep telling us about. [smile]

We had a huge power outage in this area on Saturday evening, and no one seems to explain why. It lasted about 2 hours and then power came back on again.

Take care ya'll. Love and Peace, Anna

THE SMOKEY GOD AND OTHER INNER EARTH MYSTERIES

BY TIM BECKLEY

Half of the book consists of a reprint of the classic SMOKY GODS written by a Swedish fisherman who claims he found his way inside the Earth and had an amazing encounter with a race of super-wise giants who have lived inside the Earth since ancient times. Book also contains evidence that at least some UFOs may come from inside Earth and are piloted by a race of super-beings who have survived, largely unknown to the surface world. Includes interview with an inner Earth inhabitant from a city beneath Mt Shasta.

THE MISSING DIARY OF ADMIRAL RICHARD E. BYRD

"I must write this diary in secrecy and obscurity. It concerns my arctic flight of the nineteenth day of February in the year of nineteen hundred and forty-seven.

"There comes a time when the rationality of men must fade into insignificance, and one must accept the inevitability of the Truth! I am not at liberty to disclose the following documentation at this writing, perhaps it shall never see the light of public scrutiny, but I must do my Duty and record here for all to read one day in a world which hopefully the greed and exploitation of certain of mankind can no longer suppress that which is Truth."

THE OMEGA FILES: SECRET NAZI UFO BASES REVEALED

BY BRANTON

This large-size, 8.5 x 11 book, weighing nearly two pounds, describes how German engineers actually flew flying saucers shortly before the end of World War II and how some of the dreaded Nazis actually escaped due to help from the U.S.'s own version of the Secret Government, and how they actually do their work today from underground bases around the world. SPECIAL SECTION of photographs of Nazi-built flying saucers and stories told by our own pilots of encounters with so-called "Foo Fighters" during WW-II. Here is final proof that not all UFOs come from outer space!

VATICAN ASSASSINS

WOUNDED IN THE HOUSE OF MY FRIENDS

An explosive, detailed, shocking, historical account of the long-suppressed history of the Jesuit Order, from 1540 to the present, and their involvement behind the scenes manipulating the world through the Pope, via the Jesuit's General, the "Black" Pope—the most powerful man in the world.

If you were astonished by the front-page story in the May 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM titled: The Most Powerful Man In The World? The "Black" Pope: Count Hans Kolvenbach—The Jesuit's General, then you won't want to miss this in-depth study of perhaps the greatest ongoing conspiracy the world has ever known. Author Eric Phelps goes into countless details and fully documented facts concerning the "dark" side of the Vatican's un-godly history.

A 700-page, 8½" X 11" embossed paperback, with over 100 rare photographs AND a Gift CD-ROM with 13 rare, out-of-print books used in the researching of VATICAN ASSASSINS.

SUBTERRANEAN WORLDS INSIDE EARTH

BY TIM BECKLEY

Is the Earth hollow? Is our planet honeycombed with caverns inhabited by mysterious races? Are there civilizations of super beings living beneath the surface of the Earth? Are the residents of this subsurface world friendly, or do they have our domination in mind? Here are strange and unexplainable legions of the "Wee People", the Dero, and long-haired Atlantean giants as encountered by cave explorers and miners trapped far beneath the Earth.

THE DULCE WARS: Underground Alien Bases & The Battle For Planet Earth

Is an alien "Fifth Column" already active on Earth preparing total conquest via implantations and mind control? In the corner of a small town in America's Southwest something very strange is going on. Did U.S. military forces perish recently in hand-to-hand combat with a group of hostile "greys" who subsequently seized control of one of our top-secret underground bases? In 1943 the Navy accomplished the teleportation of a warship from Philadelphia to Norfolk by successfully applying Einstein's Unified Field Theory. The experiment also caused the crew and officers of the ship to become invisible, during which time they were launched into a time-space warp. One survivor tells his amazing experience. Editor-In-Chief

September 11, 2001 was a day that nobody will soon forget. In the United States of America, it began normally enough. Most people on the East Coast were heading off to work, expecting a routine Tuesday workday. What soon unfolded, over the next few hours, was to shock the world to a depth of emotional disbelief that perhaps even Mother Earth herself, metaphorically, paused in her rotation to take-in the tragic events.

For days now the well-controlled regular print and broadcast media outlets have been bombarding a stunned public with a continual array of “facts” and other, more dramatic details about what happened. Slowly and subtly, with precise calculation, certain statements and concepts and word pictures—and especially slogans—have been introduced to lead a mesmerized public down a particular, well-planned path.

Anyone who sees through this charade, and dares to speak up, is quickly ridiculed, especially on radio talk-shows, as the fine-tuned, relentless propaganda machinery weaves its spell of coercion. Political correctness has been taken to new heights through a whipped-up frenzy of blind patriotic fervor that makes an Old West lynch mob seem like a ladies’ afternoon tea by comparison. In this environment, rednecks with a few loose screws feel they have some sort of tacit permission to go after anyone wearing a turban or not waving an American flag.

In the middle of all this whirlwind are some voices of Truth and Insight. There always are, though they rarely achieve wide audience, thanks to The Controllers and those who readily sell their souls to act as puppets for these misfits and their agenda.

THE WAR OF TERRORISM BEGINS

From the Internet, <<http://209.123.142.199/lawgiver/plague.asp>>, 10/4/01: [quoting]

A highly contagious virus, which eventually causes people to bleed from mucus membranes within a few days after being infected, was officially confirmed on October 3 at the Pakistani border with Afghanistan. This is the largest outbreak since the first known case of this particular virus in the former USSR during WWII when over 200 people died.

According to a London Telegraph report, so far, at least 75 people have "caught" the virus and eight have already died. Hospital sources place those deaths within the past 2-3 days. An isolation ward, screened off by barbed wire, has been set up in the Pakistani city of Quetta, and an international appeal for help has been sent out.

As Afghan refugees flee their nation in wake of an impending war action from the U.S., those entering into Pakistan appear to be the victims of this new biological plague. The official Pakistani reports say that this "disease" is identified as the Crimean-Congo Hemorrhagic Fever (CCHF) and that its source is from directly within Afghanistan.

This "virus" has symptoms very much the same as the deadly Ebola or Marburg viruses, whereby blood vessels, veins, and eventually arteries hemorrhage, causing an infected body to internally bleed to death. This "disease" is identified by 3 segments of single-stranded, negative-sense RNA. The incubation period is anywhere from two to five days, followed by hemorrhaging after three to five days for 75% of those infected. Death occurs between six and 16 days after hemorrhages begin.

According to the published statistics, and based on the time of the confirmed deaths in the Pakistan isolation ward, that would place the beginnings of this plague inside the Afghanistan border anywhere from September 12 to 24, a time period immediately after the destruction of the World Trade Center.

It appears that some sort of an Angel of Death has suddenly and without warning befallen the people of Afghanistan. Perhaps, this could explain why there have been no large scale military actions by the U.S. or NATO within Afghanistan, which most of the world had expected.

The question to be asked is this: How does a sudden outbreak of an extremely rare RNA "virus" come about without any warning? Secondly, is this the Divine work of God, or is this the work of ungodly men raging a biological war? The answer is that God has nothing to do with this specific plague.

Biological Warfare (BW) is defined as the "employment of biological agents to produce casualties in man or animals or damage to plants". The symptoms and identification of this plague matches perfectly to a well known laboratory-manufactured Hemorrhagic Fever (HF) virus of offensive Biological Warfare.

Biological Warfare (BW) agents can cause large numbers of casualties with minimal logistical requirements. Small teams of perpetrators can escape long before BW agents cause casualties, due to the incubation periods of the agents. In other words, a highly trained team can release CCHF into the air via remotely discharged small aerosol canisters without imminent danger to themselves, getting out of the target area before it becomes contaminated.

CCHF results in Disseminated Intravascular Coagulation (DIC) and causes the most severe hemorrhaging among all HF viruses. This is the deadliest type of BW agent known.

What we're looking at is 50% casualties per square kilometer. In 1970, the World Health Organization predicted that a city of 500,000 people would be devastated following an aerosol release of as little as 50 kg of a BW agent.

1. The medical and technical facts appear to conclude that the CCHF virus was released into Afghanistan sometime very shortly after the September 11 WTC attack.

2. The Washington City leaders have promised a "War on Terrorism" repeatedly since that date.

3. President Bush has promised to capture "dead or alive" Osama bin Laden, the purported mastermind of the World Trade Center attack and the Afghanistan rebel leader said to be hiding there.

4. There have been confirmed and unconfirmed news reports of small U.S. military teams within the borders of Afghanistan. One media report even claimed that 3 U.S. Special Forces soldiers were captured within Afghanistan.

5. The laboratory-manufactured CCHF virus has been positively confirmed to be spreading throughout Afghanistan refugees fleeing into Pakistan.

According to an October 2 USA Today report: "Only an elite forces operation that lets Afghans fight the Taliban will be able to roust terrorists in Afghanistan, says a former British commando who spent more than a year under cover there training the guerrilla forces that fought the Soviets. Putting an army on the ground would be a 'fatal mistake' and bombing strikes would 'play right into their hands' says Tom Carew, a former Special Air Services agent who worked side by side with the Mujahedin to fight the Soviets after they invaded Afghanistan two decades ago.”

If Washington City agrees with this assessment, then bombing strikes or sending large scale land troops into Afghanistan would be as much a calamity as the Russian military suffered in the 1980s, if not much greater. Therefore, only alternative methods of this “War on Terrorism” are possible if Washington City plans to make good on their word.

This is all beginning to smell like lies and betrayal. Worse, it all seems to add up to one very sad conclusion, and that is, the present U.S. leadership may be responsible for beginning a Biological War. If this is true, and all confirmed reports appear to point in this direction, then there will most likely be Biological Warfare counter-retaliations right here on American soil, and innocent Americans will suffer in greater numbers than the innocent Afghanistans who are already dying.

In the days to come, our world will surely change. The mainstream media will continue to report what they are told they can, and most of us will never know the truth. Regardless, those who are responsible for the release of the CCHF virus in Afghanistan must be brought to justice. They are responsible for the beginning of what may become the worst war and terrorism the world has ever known. It will make the mustard gas deaths of World War I look small in comparison.

EBOLA-STYLE KILLER VIRUS SWEEPS AFGHAN BORDER

By Tim Butcher in Quetta
(Filed 10/4/01)

The largest outbreak in history of a highly contagious disease that causes patients to bleed to death from every orifice was confirmed yesterday on Pakistan’s frontier with Afghanistan.

At least 75 people have caught the disease so far and eight have died. An isolation ward screened off by barbed wire has been set up in the Pakistani city of Quetta, and an international appeal has been launched for help.

Evidence suggests the outbreak of Crimean-Congo Haemorrhagic Fever (CCHF) emanates from within Afghanistan, raising fears of an epidemic if millions of refugees flee across the frontier into Pakistan.

CCHF has similar effects to the ebola virus. Both viruses damage arteries, veins, and other blood vessels and lead to the eventual collapse of major organs.

As one doctor put it, a patient suffering from haemorrhagic fever “literally melts in front of your eyes”.

At the Fatima Jinnah Chest and General

Hospital in Quetta, capital of the Pakistani province of Baluchistan, an isolation ward with eight treatment beds and two observation bays has been set up.

Nine-year-old Ismail Sadiq lay on one of the beds yesterday, his body wracked with fever and a wad of cotton wool stuffed into each nostril to stem the bleeding.

Outside members of his family sat anxiously in the shade of a tree. An elderly gentleman worked a string of worry beads through his fingers, but doctors had forbidden all visits.

The only people Ismail now sees are doctors and nurses wearing the complete “barrier nursing” outfit of sterilised hairnet, mask, gloves, gown, and overshoes.

Another patient, a 65-year-old man, lay inert on his bed, with streams of dried blood on his chin, nose, and tongue. His shirt was also stained heavily with blood.

Dr Akhlaq Hussain, the hospital’s medical superintendent, said: “The first cases came in June. There were a number of deaths, but at first we did not know what was the cause.”

A number of blood samples were sent to Pakistan’s national virology testing centre in Islamabad. They were then sent to South Africa’s National Institute of Virology in Johannesburg for confirmation.

Dr Hussain said: “When the results came back, we knew we were dealing with Crimean-Congo Haemorrhagic Fever.” He has compiled a list of all 75 cases, which involved refugees recently arrived from Afghanistan or people living close to the border.

The first known case of the disease was among Russian soldiers serving in the Crimea in 1944 and then among villagers living near the Congolese city of Kisangani in 1956. Not until 1969 were scientists able to isolate the single virus common to both.

Although there have been a number of cases since, the outbreaks have never been as large as the current one.

The doctor said: “We had our first case in Pakistan in the 1970s. It would seem there is a reservoir of the virus in Afghanistan and we are now worried about the possible effects of an influx of many new refugees.

“The virus is carried by domestic animals, and if they come in large numbers with large numbers of animals we can expect many more cases.”

The authorities in Pakistan have appealed to the World Health Organisation for additional supplies to help deal with the outbreak, including storage facilities for clean blood plasma and white blood cells which can be used to replace those lost by patients.

The virus is widely distributed in the blood of sheep, cattle, and other mammals across eastern Europe, Asia and Africa. It can be passed to man by a species of tick, Hyalomma marginatum, common in the same areas.

If caught in time, CCHF can be treated by replacing enough of the lost body fluids to allow the patient’s own immune system to take over and kill the virus.

The facilities at Fatima Jinnah are basic, but the staff are dedicated and brave, treating patients even though there is a high risk of infection from spittle or blood.

[End quoting]

And what about the 63-year-old man in Florida who “just happened” to come down with Anthrax recently and died a few days later on 10/5/01? We are told he “contracted Anthrax in an isolated case”—whatever that’s supposed to mean. “But don’t worry”, we are told, “it’s not contagious.” Sounds a bit suspicious, don’t you think?

This is a dangerous “game” being played for planetary control and the stakes just went up a notch. This will open the way for biological and chemical “retaliatory” strikes in the United States (both fabricated and “real”), should those same elite diabolical misfits who are behind these atrocities be allowed to continue their war of “terrorism” against the American people and elsewhere.

Here’s another aspect of the same “terrorism” war by these same secret crooks in high places and their puppets:

CFR BANKERS PLAN FOR FINANCIAL CRASH EXPOSED

Excerpted from the July 28, 2000 issue of Executive Intelligence Review: [quoting]

by Richard Freeman

On July 12-13, 2000, while public media were assuring the credulous public of a “soft landing” for the U.S. economy, the New York Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) held a conference at its exclusive mansion-headquarters on the East Side of Manhattan, entitled “The Next Financial Crisis: Warning Signs, Damage Control and Impact”. For two days, several speakers told a high-powered audience of 250 people, comprised largely of bankers, investors, corporation officials, and policymakers, mostly from the United States, but also from Europe, of the possibility that the U.S. stock market, and potentially the world financial system, would melt down.

The conference occurred under the auspices of the CFR’s “Financial Vulnerabilities Project” which the CFR established in 1999 to systematically look at such crises. Wall Street investment banker Roger Kubarych is the director of the project.

It is with a high degree of perverse irony that these very policymakers who have put out, month after month, the monotonous story praising the soundness of the world financial system, and the abundant growth of the U.S. economy, are debating among themselves the possibility and deeper implications of the financial system shattering.

The conference featured discussion of the startling outcomes of a major event that the CFR

Project had undertaken on January 22: an eight-hour, war-game simulation of the simultaneous breakdown of major financial markets around the world. The simulation covered a period that would have unfolded over July 2-17, 2000.

What had been simulated was a policy of pumping huge amounts of liquidity by the Federal Reserve, both through public sources and also through secret channels, to “keep the main markets open”. The simulation was conducted such that “all the public would see is that the Fed volume of loans to banks had gone up”. Further, and darkly revealing the CFR according to its own testimony, the simulation began with a coup against the President of the United States.

While concentrating on the theme of financial meltdown of the “globalized” economy, there quickly emerged at the conference a dominant second theme for dealing with the crisis: the enunciated policy that many tens of millions of people in the Third World should be caused to die, by denying them any treatment for AIDS. Game-theorist Peter Schwartz, one of the more important figures at the conference, stated point-blank: “Those who have AIDS in Africa should die as quickly as possible. They should not be kept alive.”

Schwartz’s anti-human game theory played a major role in this CFR conference, and as it does in the Financial Vulnerabilities Project. Schwartz made no attempt to conceal his policy of genocide. As the financial crisis deepens, this is exactly the policy that the CFR is bringing to the fore. [End quoting]

Remember how shaky and artificially propped-up have been the financial markets—and the economy in general—before the “terrorist” attacks of September 11, 2001? How might the seriousness of an impending worldwide financial meltdown figure in the overall planning behind the attacks? After all, in the above “game” scenario, it was no problem to kill off tens of millions of Third World people.

Or if not exactly kill people off physically, how about rendering children brain-numb with poison in their milk like in the following:

UK PLAN TO FLUORIDATE THE SCHOOL MILK SUPPLY

Excerpted from the INTERNET, by George Glasser, <<http://www.rense.com>>, 9/6/01: [quoting]

<<http://home.att.net/~gtigerclaw/MILK2.html>>

The British Fluoridation Society and the United Kingdom National Health Service are presently promoting the supply of fluoridated milk to schools which, they claim, will reduce the incidence of tooth decay among socially deprived children. One dental public health officer believes that the program should be seen as an interim measure until artificial drinking water fluoridation schemes can be more widely introduced.

Aware that fluoride is a cumulative poison, the World Health Organization website states very clearly that analysis of the children’s urine should be considered mandatory for safety reasons when school fluoridated milk programs are introduced. The need for caution is also clearly addressed in the Conclusions To Fluorides And Oral Health (WHO, 1994), which states: “Dental and public health administrators should be aware of the total fluoride exposure in the population before introducing any additional fluoride program for caries prevention.” Promoters of fluoride are generally unaware of the existence of such warnings or the need for them.... [End quoting]

One way or the other the New World Order gang want to either eliminate we, the “useless eaters”, or at least turn us into docile sheep predisposed to mind control. The crooks are particularly worried about, and intimidated by, the quality of children incarnating into this planet at this time of the Great Awakening. And as well they should be!

Speaking of children who have been persecuted and torn from a close-knit family environment, remember this case:

JUDGE DISMISSES MCGUCKIN CHILD -NEGLECT CHARGE

From Bonner County Daily Bee <<http://www.bonnercountydailybee.com>>, 9/30/01:

by Keith Kinnaird

SANDPOINT, ID—A 1st District Court judge is dismissing a misdemeanor child neglect charge against JoAnn McGuckin, but a charge for harboring a vicious dog stands.

Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson submitted a motion Friday to dismiss an injury to child charge against McGuckin based on the results of an underlying child-protection case. The move to dismiss also is based on the “observed and evident medical, emotional, and personality deficits evidenced by the defendant” according to the motion. Robinson, who was in Moscow [Idaho] during the brief pre-trial hearing, could not be reached Friday to elaborate on the statement. “Further prosecution of this case is not necessary to accomplish justice, nor to provide protection, care, and safety for the minor children” Robinson wrote in the motion. Magistrate Judge Debra Heise granted the motion, dismissing the charge with prejudice, which means it cannot be re-filed.

McGuckin, 46, is pleading not guilty. A tentative trial date on the dog charge was set for October 11. If convicted, McGuckin faces up to six months in jail and/or a $300 fine. The pending charge stems from a pack of dogs the McGuckin family raised at their Garfield Bay Cutoff Road home. Days before McGuckin was arrested on the neglect charge and subsequent standoff involving her six children, as many as nine dogs set upon a neighbor, Stephanie Almy, who was walking by with her own dog. Sheriff’s deputies Bill Tilson and Mike McDaniel happened to be at the McGuckin home conducting a welfare check on the children.

The deputies waded into the pack of dogs to protect Almy. “I put my arms around her and placed my body over her the best I could to keep the dogs from biting her any further” McDaniel recalled in his report on the incident. As McDaniel shielded Almy during the minute-long attack, Tilson used his pepper spray to disperse the pack. McDaniel was bitten on each hand and Almy’s bite wounds required 17 stitches. The dogs were quarantined in McGuckin’s basement. When deputies showed up a few days later to arrest McGuckin on the child endangerment charge, the dogs were loosed on deputies by her kids as they fled into the home.

After the standoff ended peacefully, the dogs were taken to shelters in Kootenai County. Some had to be destroyed, but some were reunited with McGuckin’s kids—three boys and three girls between the ages of 6 and 13.

Bryce Powell, McGuckin’s court-appointed legal counsel, said the facts in the child-neglect case spoke for themselves. He said the family was doing the best it could given financial hardships and the recent multiple sclerosis-related death of McGuckin’s husband, Michael. “When all the circumstances came together, at least in my mind, it became readily apparent JoAnn is not a criminal” he said outside the courtroom.

A plan is in the works to reunite McGuckin with her six kids, but McGuckin admits she is not cooperating with that effort. McGuckin visited with her children on her birthday earlier this month and lamented the state’s involvement in the family’s affairs. “We all cried. We just kept wondering why we couldn’t pick up and go home” she said after the hearing. “It’s bewildering to all of us what has happened.”

This is a good example of where peaceful protest and shining a light on a sordid matter has caused the crooks to back down some on their shenanigans. Go back and review “Idaho Standoff: Exposing A Peculiar Land-Grab Scam” in the June and July 2001 issues of The SPECTRUM for eye-opening details of the suspicious, nasty plot against this family that stirred many fair-minded local citizens into a frenzy of support for the McGuckin family.

The local legal and law enforcement puppets, whose strings were being pulled from some much higher level that was very much behind the scenes, managed only to look the bigger fools every time they opened their mouths and told still bigger whoppers that further stirred-up the local citizenry to support the McGuckins and raised further suspicions about what was REALLY going on here.

This was a good example of the citizens taking control back from a bureaucracy, itself being manipulated for very suspicious reasons that were clearly not in the best interests of the citizens—who continue to maintain their watch.

And speaking of pressure on the bureaucracy, how about the following win for the people in overthrowing a very sleazy game of making money:

SAN DIEGO JUDGE TOSSES OUT RED-LIGHT CAMERA TICKETS

From the INTERNET, 9/5/01: [quoting]

A San Diego judge on Tuesday threw out 290 traffic tickets issued to motorists by the city's controversial red-light camera system, placing the privately operated program in jeopardy along with its millions of dollars in revenue.

San Diego Superior Court Judge Ronald Styn, ruling in a case that has been closely watched on both sides of a growing debate over the new technology, said that a contingency fee paid to the private operator of the city's system, Lockheed Martin IMS, made the evidence unreliable.

"The evidence from the red-light cameras will not be admitted" Judge Ronald Styn said in reaffirming his August 15 opinion in a class-action lawsuit against Lockheed Martin.

Styn's ruling came after he heard arguments from attorneys representing the motorists and by Deputy City Attorney Steven Hansen, who said he was considering an appeal.

"I'm pretty adamant" Hansen said. "The judge's decision was incorrect. The judge said that there was no problem with the camera's system. The only problem...was that a private company was operating it."

Attorney Arthur Tait, who represented the motorists, said he last week filed a suit in federal court under the government's anti-racketeering statute asking the city to reimburse 100,000 motorists already fined.

The plaintiffs are arguing that the city engaged in a scheme to defraud the public. Lockheed Martin, which has been operating the system since 1998, is also named in the suit.

While his decision is not binding in other cases, Styn said evidence in this suit was unreliable because the system was operated by a private entity on a contingency fee basis, which was not what the state legislature intended when it passed the statute that gave the go-ahead for the cameras, he said.

Since the cameras were installed at 19 intersections, they have issued citations carrying a $271 fine for each conviction, with Lockheed Martin getting $70 of every fine paid. Attorneys for the motorists argued that because the company's fees were based on the number of tickets issued, the system was flawed.

Lockheed Martin's goal was "to grab as many people as they can" said plaintiff's attorney Christopher Plourd.

But Hansen argued that even if the state statute had been violated, the evidence was still admissible, citing a 1976 case, People v. Adams. He also argued: "The fact that private employees are doing the work rather than government employees has no relevance on the trustworthiness of the evidence."

Styn disagreed, saying: "In this case, the failure of the city to operate the system as required by the legislature, combined with the contingent fee paid to Lockheed Martin goes far beyond Adams or any of the cases which follow Adams.

Meanwhile, the controversy here has attracted nationwide attention, especially in cities where similar systems are in use. Last week, city officials of Oxnard, California, said they will reevaluate their system in light of the San Diego case. [End quoting]

If we want this type of "highway robbery" scam stopped, we better start NOW to halt it while there is some momentum and publicity being generated over it, or just forget it entirely and pay them their lucrative blackmail. Remember, in previous News Desk items on this subject, that it has been clearly demonstrated how the yellow lights have been adjusted to a shorter on-time to "assist" in generating more red-light violations—and thus more revenue for all involved in the scam.

NO REGRETS ABOUT DEVELOPING PGP

No Regrets About Developing PGP

The Friday, September 21, 2001 Washington Post carried an article by Ariana Cha that I feel misrepresents my views on the role of PGP encryption software in the September 11th terrorist attacks. She interviewed me on Monday, September 17th, and we talked about how I felt about the possibility that the terrorists might have used PGP in planning their attack.

The article states that, as the inventor of PGP, I was "overwhelmed with feelings of guilt". I never implied that in the interview, and specifically went out of my way to emphasize to her that was not the case, and made her repeat back to me this point so that she would not get it wrong in the article. This misrepresentation is serious, because it implies that, under the duress of terrorism, I have changed my principles on the importance of cryptography for protecting privacy and civil liberties in the information age....

I have always enjoyed good relations with the press over the past decade, especially with the Washington Post. I'm sure they will get it right next time.

The article in question appears at <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A1234<-2001Sep20.html>.

Perhaps Philip is a little wiser now about how The Game is played in the Big League. He has developed a coding method that would allow you and me to send messages over the Internet that Big Brother couldn't necessarily listen-in on. (Big mistake!) So, to get back at him, "they" have one of their media puppets twist his words around to give the impression he is somehow aiding "terrorists" through his software. (Due to the general war climate "they" have generated since September 11, we're all supposed to go "Boo! Hiss!" at Philip for being such a bad boy.)

It's a typical and well-worn smear campaign. Makes one want to go out and get his software.

TORNADO SPREADS GENETICALLY MODIFIED CANOLA IN CANADA
CBC NEWS

From the INTERNET, <<http://www.rense.com>>, 9/2/01: [quoting]

Manitoba canola farmers say they could use a little rain, and a lot less wind.

Last week, near Homefield, canola was raining down after a tornado cut through Vic Martens' fields. "The tornado actually picked up the canola plants and actually wrapped them around these trees" he said.

The canola crop was genetically modified. The seeds from the crop were blown into other canola fields, up to eight kilometres away, raising concerns among those that worry about the uncontrolled spread of genetically modified seeds.

Brian Ellis, a professor of plant biotechnology, says genetic modification of plants, combined with extreme weather, deserves to be studied.

"This is something the regulators never even thought of. It just goes to show that you can't control something once you get it out into real Nature" said Ellis.

Ellis worries the same will happen with strains of GM wheat currently being tested in secret locations. The Canadian Wheat Board has already said it won't sell GM-contaminated wheat because of health concerns in foreign markets. [End quoting]

The organic farming crowd has been warning about the problems of cross-contamination ever since farmers were first FORCED to "choose" genetically modified seeds for their field plantings. In fact, there has been a great effort to keep stories like the above out of the news so the public doesn't get even more opposed than they already are.

As we have noted in many past News Desk articles, Monsanto and their cohorts in the genetically modified crops business have been having quite an uphill battle against a worldwide public very suspicious about such products—and rightly so. Even the cafeteria at Monsanto's headquarters has refused to utilize genetically modified products. We can assume that what is publicly known that raises suspicions about such products hardly deals with what they may be doing to such crops that the New World Order gang doesn't intend to tell us about, that serves their diabolical agenda. It is a very dangerous game.

SCIENTISTS CREATE GENETICALLY MODIFIED CORN WHICH PREVENTS HUMAN CONCEPTION

From the INTERNET, by Robin McKie, <<http://www.rense.com>>, 9/9/01: [quoting]

Scientists have created the ultimate GM crop: contraceptive corn. Waiving fields of maize may one day save the world from overpopulation.

The pregnancy prevention plants are the handiwork of the San Diego biotechnology company Epicyte, where researchers have discovered a rare class of human antibodies that attack sperm.

By isolating the genes that regulate the manufacture of these antibodies, and by putting them in corn plants, the company has created tiny horticultural factories that make contraceptives.

"We have a hothouse filled with corn plants that make anti-sperm antibodies" said Epicyte president Mitch Hein.

"We have also created corn plants that make antibodies against the herpes virus, so we should be able to make a plant-based jelly that not only prevents pregnancy but also blocks the spread of sexual disease."

Contraceptive corn is based on research on the rare condition, immune infertility, in which a woman makes antibodies that attack sperm.

"Essentially, the antibodies are attracted to surface receptors on the sperm" said Hein. "They latch on and make each sperm so heavy it cannot move forward. It just shakes about as if it was doing the lambada."

Normally, biologists use bacteria to grow human proteins. However, Epicyte decided to use corn because plants have cellular structures that are much more like those of humans, making them easier to manipulate.

The company, which says it will not grow the maize near other crops, says it plans to launch clinical trials of the corn in a few months. [End quoting]

What about tornados that blow seeds hundreds of miles? Or carried by birds? What about the effects on birds and other animals who ingest such seeds? Ooops! No more offspring—even for the New World Order gang—after it cross-contaminates with all sorts of food crops. Is this science gone mad or simply humans attempting to play God? The end result does not give one that warm, fuzzy feeling of security—particularly when the money factor figures so prominently in the equation.

Now, speaking of the possible consequences of genetic mutations, perhaps from genetically modified products that are ingested, consider the following item:

HUNTER IN NORTHERN WILDS OF CANADA'S YUKON TERRITORY
KILLS STRANGE BULL MOOSE

From the INTERNET, <discuss@tje.net>, 9/25/01: [quoting]

WHITEHORSE, Yukon—A hunter in the northern wilds of Canada's Yukon Territory got the surprise of his life last week when the supposed bull moose he shot turned out to be not a male, nor a female, but both.

"The hunter shot it, thinking it was a bull. When he got closer, he saw that things weren't as they should have been, or as he expected" Rick Ward, a moose biologist for the Yukon government, said on Friday.

"It was a hermaphroditic moose. It was a female with antlers" said Ward, who added he had never seen anything like it in his 25 years as a biologist—of which 15 years have been spent studying moose.

"It's very, very rare" he said. "It's about the same as finding hermaphrodites in humans—very, very low (odds)."

The vast Yukon territory, located next to Alaska, is home to about 30,000 people, an equal number of bears, and twice as many moose.

Hunting of male moose is permitted for three months in the autumn of every year, and those who shoot one can live on the meat of a single animal for a winter.

But hunters who shoot cows face steep fines.

Ward said the hunter, who called wildlife authorities after discovering the quirk of Nature, was not fined. [End quoting]

An accident of Nature? Or the result of man's tinkering? The reports are growing ever more common over the last few years about mutations in the animal kingdom which go way beyond the case of this moose in terms of being bizarre. Wonder what might be discovered if the DNA of this moose were analyzed? Such information is being heavily censored because, among other things, it could expose the extent of questionable experimentation going on at various secret underground laboratories.

CELLPHONE PISTOL

From RUMOR MILL NEWS (RUMILLS), (<http://www.rumormillnews.com>), 9/25/01: [quoting]

For those of you who travel frequently, beware!

A new type of gun has been developed which looks like a cell phone. This is of particular concern to anyone who travels because airport security is going to have to closely examine each cell phone, which could cause long delays.

These phones have not hit the US [don't bet on it], but they are in use overseas. So keep that in mind if you are going through customs and are asked to turn over your cell phone to be checked. Always remember that you should never joke with customs officials and you should do your best to cooperate.

"Beneath the digital face lies a .22-caliber pistol, a phone gun capable of firing four rounds in quick succession with a touch of the otherwise standard keypad. European law enforcement officials, stunned by the discovery of these deadly decoys, say phone guns are changing the rules of engagement in Europe. We find it very, very alarming, says Wolfgang Dicke of the German Police union. It means police will have to draw their weapons whenever a person being checked reaches for their mobile phone.

Although cell phone guns have not hit America yet, the FBI, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, and the U.S. Customs Service say they've been briefed on the new weapons. We received word about these guns last month. We have since alerted our field personnel to be on the lookout for cell phone guns at U.S. ports of entry.

The .22-caliber rounds fit into the top of the phone under the screen. The lower half, under the keyboard, holds the firing pins. The bullets fire through the antenna, by pressing numbers on the keypad. Amsterdam police say they are very sophisticated machines constructed inside gutted cell phones, which do not light up or operate as real phones. These are very difficult to make. We believe experts are involved." [End quoting]

What a convenient excuse mechanism through which to take away a few more of our basic freedoms. Both travel and rapid communication devices (like the Internet and cell phones) are a thorn in the side of the New World Order gang's agenda to keep us immobile and in the dark concerning what shenanigans they may be pulling on us. The element of surprise is often key to such plans and they lose some of their control if we have access to rapid means of communication. And here's a sobering thought: now they have an acceptable excuse to shoot you if you reach for your cell phone!

WOMEN BEWARE ABOUT "PERFUME" SCAM

From the INTERNET, "Mary" <msnell@txk.net>, 9/4/01: [quoting]

I was approached yesterday afternoon around 3:30 p.m. in a WalMart parking lot by two males, asking what kind of perfume I was wearing. Then they asked if I'd like to sample some "fabulous scent" they were willing to sell me at a very reasonable rate.

I probably would have agreed had I not received an e-mail, some weeks ago, warning of a "Wanna smell this neat perfume?" scam. The men continued to stand between parked cars, I guess to wait for someone else to hit on.

I stopped a lady going toward them, pointed at them, and told her about how I was sent an e-mail at work about someone walking up to you at the malls or in parking lots, and asking you to sniff perfume that they are selling at a cheap price.

THIS IS NOT PERFUME—IT IS ETHER!

When you sniff it, you'll pass out. And they'll take your wallet, your valuables, and heaven knows what else. (Maybe your life!)

If it were not for this e-mail, I probably would have sniffed the "perfume". But thanks to the generosity of an e-mailing friend, I was spared whatever might have happened to me.

I wanted to do the same for you. PASS THIS ALONG TO ALL YOUR WOMEN FRIENDS. AND PLEASE BE ALERT AND AWARE! [End quoting]

Please share this caution far and wide.

"DO ANY OBSERVATORIES HAVE WEBSITES THAT LET US SEE WHAT ASTRONOMERS ARE LOOKING AT?"

From the INTERNET, 9/01: [quoting]

<<http://image.gsfc.nasa.gov/poetry/ask/a10530.html>>

Answer: Not really. The actual data is proprietary and only "art shots" are usually given to the public. The rest of the data is for calibration purposes or is in such a crude format that you would not be able to make heads of tails of it except in some very extreme circumstances such as the Hubble Space Telescope. Even there, only some professional astronomers have access to the raw data as it came down from the telescope.

(Answers are provided by Dr. Sten Odenwald of Raytheon STX, for the NASA IMAGE/POETRY Education and Public Outreach program.) [End quoting]

Wonder why we're not allowed to see what's REALLY out there? Perhaps there would be a lot of explaining to do by the so-called professional astronomers who are well paid to keep their mouths shut about certain matters that the public would be VERY interested to know about.

On that note, this next item is well known by some of you, but may be a life saver for others for whom this is new information or simply a great reminder:

CANADA'S FAMOUS HERBAL REMEDY RECIPE FOR CANCER AND AIDS—ESSIAC

cancer. Given the choice of radical surgery or using her friend's herbal tea, she decided to give his tea a try. She prepared it, following his directions, and used it religiously. As a result of her continued use, the cancer was completely cured, and did not return. It was gone, without a trace of cancer cells in her body!

Thirty years later, on a trip to a hospital in Toronto, Ontario, for a routine physical examination, the examining nurse, Rene Caisse, asked the woman about the curious scarring of her breast, the result of the earlier cancer. The woman told Rene about the cancer, and its cure, over 30 years earlier, and shared the herbal recipe for the tea that cured it. The woman felt Rene might have need of it in her later years. As it turned out, she was right.

Rene Caisse's aunt came down with a malignant cancer, and Rene asked her relative's physician for permission to use the herbal tea recipe. The doctor agreed to allow the herbal treatment. Again the herbal tea worked its healing magic, and the aunt was entirely cured of her cancer. The physician was so impressed that he helped Rene open a cancer clinic in Bracebridge, Ontario, to treat "terminal" cancer patients, deemed so by at least two physicians. For over 40 years, Rene treated cancer patients with the herbal formula, ESSIAC (her last name reversed).

The Canadian Ministry of Health eventually raided Rene's clinic, seized medical records, and burned them in a 50-gallon drum. They obviously did not want the word getting out that an herbal cure for cancer was available. Many people owe their lives, and continued good health, to Rene's courageous fight to show the world that ESSIAC is a genuine cure for cancer! The only people she failed to cure of cancer were found to have extensive damage to their vital organs, caused not by the tea, but by radiation and chemotherapy treatments.

Dr. Charles Brusch, the aunt's physician, who also served as personal physician to former U.S.

President John F. Kennedy, ran his cancer clinic in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Dr. Brusch often assisted Rene Caisse in her Bracebridge clinic; he was quite familiar with the proven effectiveness of ESSIAC.

A son of Senator Ted Kennedy developed a particularly lethal sarcoma cancer, and was being treated at Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, an Oncology Training Center for Harvard University's Medical School. Chemo and radiation treatments failed to slow the progress of the sarcoma. Dr. Farber went to his old associate, Dr. Brusch, and asked for his advice.

Dr. Brusch told Dr. Farber to take the young Kennedy off chemo and radiation treatments immediately, and to apply treatment with ESSIAC. Again it worked its healing magic, and the young Kennedy was completely cured, without any trace of cancer cells in his body remaining. He is the only known case of a sarcoma survivor! The Dana-Farber Cancer Institute is heavily funded for their cancer "research" efforts, to this day. No mention has been made of the success with ESSIAC treatment there.

The Kennedy clan is heavily invested in pharmaceuticals; many of those drugs are used today in cancer "treatment". How much money do they stand to lose if the word gets out that a safe, herbal recipe cures cancer? How much money does the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, and Harvard Medical School, stand to lose if the successful use of ESSIAC was spread widely? "Murder for Profit" continues within the American medical & pharmaceutical industries. Cancer and AIDS bring in a great deal of public and private financial support!

Dr. Gary L. Glum, a chiropractic physician in Los Angeles, heard about Rene's incredible work with "terminal" cancer patients. He wondered if the herbal formula would be effective in the treatment of "terminal" AIDS patients. He contacted Rene, obtained the recipe for ESSIAC from her, and asked for permission to treat "terminal" AIDS patients with ESSIAC. The Director of Project AIDS Los Angeles agreed to let Dr. Glum treat five patients from a larger group of 179 people sent home to die. All of these people had average bodyweights under 100 pounds, and T-cell counts at or near zero.

Dr. Glum immediately took those five "terminal" AIDS patients off AZT and DDI chemo treatments, putting them on the ESSIAC daily regimen. They thrived. Eating three meals each day, they regained normal bodyweights, and their T-cell levels went back to normal. They appeared perfectly healthy, and exercised three times each day. The other 174 people sent home to die did!

It is not rocket science to see a pattern here, first in the actions taken by the Canadian Ministry of Health, and later by the lack of action taken by the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. At least the Project AIDS Los Angeles Director had the courage to let Dr. Glum treat otherwise "terminal"

AIDS patients. The global "Murder for Profit" continues within the medical & pharmaceutical industries. Obviously they care more about profits than they do about saving lives.

Cancer and AIDS are big moneymakers, bringing in public, federal, and private financial support to many cancer organizations, themselves proving to be cancerous. They continue to allow adults and children to die painful deaths, in order for their cash flow to continue. THIS HAS GONE ON LONG ENOUGH!

The ESSIAC Recipe

6½ cups—BURDOCK ROOT (Arctium lappa)

16 oz—SHEEP SORREL LEAVES (Rumex acetosella)

1 oz—TURKEY RHUBARB ROOT (Rheum officinalis or R. palmatum)

4 oz—SLIPPERY ELM BARK (Ulmus rubra)

Put these ingredients in a blender, and blend until finely ground and mixed.

4 oz. of this mixture will brew 1 gallon of infusion. Bring rain/spring/distilled water to a rolling boil in a stainless steel pot, stir in 4 oz. of herbal mixture, use a stainless steel ladle to stir, and cover the pot. Boil 10 minutes. Remove from heat and stir.

Cover the pot and let it sit for 12 hours at room temperature. Stir, cover, and bring to boil. Remove from heat. Using stainless steel, strain through a fine mesh colander, then funnel liquid into clean amber or blue glass bottles, and cap. Tighten caps after cooling. Refrigerate the bottles for later use.

Shake herbal infusion to mix well. Add 2 fluid ounces of bottled infusion to equal amount (2 oz.) of rain/spring/distilled water in order to make the tea for consumption. It is recommended to drink 2 to 4 ounces of tea daily on an empty stomach, preferably before retiring, as a general detoxifying tonic. If using this preparation for the treatment of cancer, AIDS/HIV, or viral infection, it is recommended that 2 to 4 oz. be taken three times daily, again taken before meals.

HOW A PINK SLIP CAN FIRE YOU UP

From USA WEEKEND, by Tavis Smiley, for 9/2/01: [quoting]

In March of this year, I went through an ordeal familiar to millions of other Americans: I was unexpectedly fired from a job I loved—host of my own nightly talk show. Although my firing made national headlines and prompted protest marches, losing a job is always a difficult and potentially humiliating experience.

Nobody gets fired under a bush. Your family and friends know; your co-workers know. I found that, although the experience was among the most trying times of my life, it turned out, ultimately, to be the most rewarding. Sometimes in life it isn’t the worst thing in the world for somebody to push you out there, because then you get a chance to truly test your value. Value, I learned, is not what you think of yourself, but what others think of you.

I rebounded and then some, landing what was called a history-making multimedia deal with ABC News, ABC Radio Network, CNN, and National Public Radio. At the same time, I’m writing two books for Doubleday.

How did I get through? My viewers may remember I closed the show every night for five years with the same three words: “Keep the faith.” That’s exactly how I closed this chapter of my life.

Here are the five biggest lessons this experience taught me:

Look high—and low. There’s a Scripture from the book of Isaiah that says: “They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up on wings like eagles. They shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint.” But there’s one thing Isaiah didn’t tell me: People throw food on the ground for pigeons, but they shoot at eagles. Sometimes when you’re soaring right along like an eagle, out of nowhere someone will take a shot at you. So you have to keep your eye on what’s going on.

Don’t count on your chickens. I like to think of my friends as two parts of an egg-and-ham sandwich: Some friends are like

Mail Delivery Slowed Due To September 11 Attacks

Just one day after we sent the September 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM to be printed and mailed, the whole country came to a standstill due to shock and disbelief.

As many of you also realize, your September paper was severely delayed. We normally have The SPECTRUM printed and in the mail within a day of the publication date on the front-page masthead, which is always the second Tuesday of the month.

After the events of September 11, the U.S. Postal Service has been severely crippled, due to the grounding of air flights and the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) putting restrictions on their ability to use commercial airlines for the transport of mail packages. The end result is a huge slowdown in mail delivery. Some people still had not received their September paper as of October 1st!

According to a recent News Release by the U.S. Postal Service:

“FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: Current as of 10/4/01—All cargo air carrier operations affecting the mail have returned to normal. These carriers are carrying all categories of U.S. Mail, including First-Class Mail, Express Mail, and Priority Mail. The Federal Aviation Administration also has authorized commercial airlines to carry letter-size First-Class Mail. Cargo mail delivery flights are being made to Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico.”

According to a local postal clerk, only letters weighing less than 1 pound are being allowed on commercial airliners; all other packages are being shipped via cargo transport—including truck, railroad, and chartered cargo planes. Though the U.S. Postal Service states that service has “returned to normal”, it is our assumption that tighter security measures will inevitably cause more delays to be the norm in the future.

Thank you for your patience with these matters.

Norey Latona, Circulation Manager, The SPECTRUM

egg-laying chickens, and some are like ham-producing hogs. The chickens can come by and lay an egg and keep on moving without any big sacrifice. But for you to enjoy the ham, that hog has to make the ultimate sacrifice. When you go through an ordeal like this, your friends are on trial with you. You learn pretty quickly which ones are chickens and which ones are hogs who will actually put themselves on the line for you. All I can say is, thank God for those hogs.

Lose the “Why me?” woes. When you get into a difficult situation, you don’t always understand what brought you there. You say: “Why is this happening to me? I didn’t do anything wrong.” But every hard time you go through is ultimately just a situation for revelation. You don’t always understand what the revelation is at that moment, but you have to learn to trust the process. As Martin Luther King, Jr. said: “The arc of the moral universe is long, but it bends toward justice.” Don’t get caught up in the blame game; just trust the process, keep your head up, and move on.

Don’t won’t; be optimistic. I never, ever worried about what was going to happen next for me. And with all humility, I don’t know anybody who knows me well who did not expect me to land on my feet. Not because I’m so much more talented than the next guy, but because my attitude is always one of “I can. I will. I must. I shall.” I’ve learned that some people succeed and some people fail, but those with a healthy attitude always go on. When you’re really passionate about what your purpose in life is, there always will be some new opportunity for you to do whatever you were put here to do. In the end, it always works out.

Draw on your own wisdom. The irony of all this is that when I looked back, I realized that I knew these four things all along. We all have overcome something before. We all have endured before. We all have succeeded before. Sometimes, when you’re going through something difficult, it just takes stopping and being silent and still and remembering the last time you went through an ordeal and survived it. It’s difficult to remember when you’re in the midst of the storm, but if you can just find that place to be silent and still, you can be encouraged. [End quoting]

Considering the economy, this is a time when many are facing a similar challenge. This advice is well worth keeping in mind and sharing with friends who may be going through discouraging times in the job market.

BILL GATES ARRIVES AT THE PEARLY GATES

From the INTERNET, S. Russell 9/15/01: [quoting]

“Well, Bill” said God, “I’m really confused on this one. I’m not sure whether to send you to Heaven or Hell. After all, you enormously helped society by putting a computer in almost every home in the world, and yet you created that ghastly Windows. I’m going to do something I’ve never done before. I’m going to let you decide where you want to go.”

Mr. Gates replied, “Well, thanks, God. What’s the difference between the two?” God said, “You can take a peek at both places briefly if it will help you decide. Shall we look at Hell first?”

“Sure!” said Bill, “Let’s go!” Bill was amazed! He saw a clean, white sandy beach with clear waters. There were thousands of beautiful men and women running around, playing in the water, laughing and frolicking about. The Sun was shining and the temperature was perfect!

Bill said, “This is great! If this is Hell, I can’t wait to see Heaven.” To which God replied, “Let’s go!” and off they went. Bill saw puffy white clouds in a beautiful blue sky with angels drifting about playing harps and singing. It was nice, but surely not as enticing as Hell. Mr. Gates thought for only a brief moment and rendered his decision.

“God, I do believe I would like to go to Hell.” “As you desire” said God.

Two weeks later, God decided to check up on the late billionaire to see how things were going. He found Bill shackled to a wall, screaming amongst the hot flames in a dark cave. He was being burned and tortured by demons.

“How ya doin’, Bill?” asked God. Bill responded with anguish and despair, “This is awful! This is not what I expected at all! What happened to the beach and the beautiful women playing in the water?”

“Oh THAT!” said God. “That was just the screen saver.” [End quoting]

Sound similar to what Billy Boy has been doing to us to get all of those billions and billions of our dollars? There’s a spiritual message elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM dealing entirely with the lesson “As you sow, so shall you reap”.

ANGELS IN MY LIFE

From the INTERNET, 9/19/01: [quoting]

There have been angels in my life. While they haven’t arrived with a blast of trumpets or a rustle of wings, I’ve known them just the same.

They performed their acts in human guise, sometimes borrowing the faces of family and friends, sometimes in the form of a stranger lending a hand.

You have known them, too. When just the right word was needed, when a tiny act of kindness made a great difference.

Or perhaps you heard a voice whispering in a night of sorrow. The words not quite clear but the meaning unmistakable: “There is hope. There is hope.”

May your angels watch over you, and always keep you safe, and whisper in your ear, to banish hate and fear. — Appreciative Anonymous [End quoting]

What would we do without them?!

MY WISH FOR YOU

From the INTERNET, <para-discuss@tje.net>, 9/23/01: [quoting]

Paul Harvey writes:

We tried so hard to make things better for our kids that we made them worse. For my grandchildren, I’d like better. I’d really like for them to know about hand-me-down clothes and homemade ice cream and leftover meat loaf sandwiches. I really would.

I hope you learn humility by being humiliated, and that you learn honesty by being cheated. I hope you learn to make your own bed and mow the lawn and wash the car. And I really hope nobody gives you a brand new car when you are sixteen.

It will be good if at least one time you can see puppies born and your old dog put to sleep. I hope you get a black eye fighting for something you believe in.

I hope you have to share a bedroom with your younger brother. And it’s all right if you have to draw a line down the middle of the room, but when he wants to crawl under the covers with you because he’s scared, I hope you let him. When you want to see a movie and your little brother wants to tag along, I hope you’ll let him.

I hope you have to walk uphill to school with your friends, and that you live in a town where you can do it safely. On rainy days, when you have to catch a ride, I hope you don’t ask your driver to drop you two blocks away so you won’t be seen riding with someone as uncool as your Mom.

If you want a slingshot, I hope your Dad teaches you how to make one instead of buying

RHYMES AND REASONS

From the INTERNET, by Antionette Ishmael, <www.chickensoup.com>, 9/01: [quoting]

As I sang to my newborn son, I contemplated my decision. The tune soothed us both.

When I think about Patrick, my firstborn, I remember how difficult those first few months were. Whenever he got restless, I'd draw from my teaching days and sing a rhyme or two.

Patrick's first cry had been in late August—and so was the first day of school for my former students. I missed the cheerful faces of the schoolchildren and the musty smell of a classroom that had been closed up all summer. Had I made the right choice? Should I have continued teaching after having the baby? Would I lose contact with my teaching peers and fade into lost volumes of aging yearbooks?

As conflicted as I was, I knew seeing my young baby mature into a toddler, and then a little boy, was something I did not want to miss. On snowy mornings past, I'd be scraping my windshield before work. Now I was cuddling my son under warm blankets and watching the snow fall. An afternoon at the museum, or a visit to the library story hour, or a walk around the block was very special for both of us. While most of my focus was on mother-child activities, I also found time to sew and read, luxuries that were virtually nonexistent before. I enjoyed making Patrick's pumpkin costume for Halloween and felt proud of his Christmas stocking, with the sequins I had worked so hard to apply, hanging on the fireplace mantel.

Unfortunately, we at-home moms are often misunderstood. I am asked: "Why are you wasting your life and career staying at home?" My reply is simple: "I can always go back to teaching, but never to those wonderful days of motherhood."

What a sad commentary on society when the most important job in the world must be defended. It has been six years since I made this decision. It is just as special to see two more stockings above our fireplace (yes, with sequins, too!) and the costume gallery I have created since that first October.

I walked near my sons' room last night and listened to Anthony corral his imaginary puppies and Dominic wail for attention. I started to enter to comfort my little one, only to be pleasantly surprised by my oldest son singing those same rhymes from my teaching days to calm his littlest brother.

As I leaned against the door, a new song filled my heart. It was then I realized I hadn't given up teaching at all! [End quoting]

Recent events are causing many ones to reexamine what is truly important in their lives.

MY QUILT

From the INTERNET, 9/29/01: [quoting]

As I faced my Maker at the last judgment, I knelt before the Lord along with all the other souls. Before each of us laid our lives like the squares of a quilt in many piles. An Angel sat before each of us sewing our quilt squares together into a tapestry that is our life. But as my angel took each piece of cloth off the pile, I noticed how ragged and empty each of my squares was. They were filled with giant holes. Each square was labeled with a part of my life that had been difficult, the challenges and temptations I was faced with in everyday life.

I saw hardships that I endured, which were the largest holes of all. I glanced around me. Nobody else had such squares. Other than a tiny hole here and there, the other tapestries were filled with rich color and the bright hues of worldly fortune. I gazed upon my own life and was disheartened. My Angel was sewing the ragged pieces of cloth together, threadbare and empty, like binding air.

Finally the time came when each life was to be displayed, held up to the light, the scrutiny of truth. The others rose, each in turn, holding up their tapestries. So filled their lives had been.

My Angel looked upon me, and nodded for me to rise. My gaze dropped to the ground in shame. I hadn't had all the earthly fortunes. I had love in my life, and laughter. But there had also been trials of illness, and death, and false accusations that took from me my world, as I knew it. I had to start over many times. I often struggled with the temptation to quit, only to somehow muster the strength to pick up and begin again. I spent many nights on my knees in prayer, asking for Help and Guidance in my life. I had often been held up to ridicule, which I endured painfully, each time offering it up to the Father in hopes that I would not melt within my skin beneath the judgmental gaze of those who unfairly judged me.

And now, I had to face the truth. My life was what it was, and I had to accept it for what it was. I rose and slowly lifted the combined squares of my life to the light. An awe-filled gasp filled the air. I gazed around at the others who stared at me with wide eyes. Then, I looked upon the tapestry before me. Light flooded the many holes, creating an image, the face of Christ. Then our Lord stood before me, with warmth and love in His eyes. He said, "Every time you gave over your life to Me, it became My life, My hardships, and My struggles. Each point of light in your life is when you stepped aside and let Me shine through, until there was more of Me than there was of you."

[End quoting]

We ALL have The Light within us—if we can just remember to ALLOW it to shine through as much when troubles and challenges cross our path as when the good times roll.

“You Shall Reap What You Sow”

9/30/01 VIOLINIO ST. GERMAIN

Thank you for sitting down and taking the time. I know that your heart is heavy, and that it is difficult for you to separate from your thoughts. However, if you will but allow, the words will come.

It is I, Germain, come to visit with you this morning. As always, I come in Service unto only the Light of Creator Source.

You have heard the phrase “You shall reap what you sow” for most of your lives. But how many of you really understand and practice it?

It may seem the simplest of lessons, yet most of you seem to have trouble with it. Well, we have taught this over and over. Now you ones are experiencing what this can mean, and yet we Guides and Wayshowers from the Higher Realms are bombarded by your cries of “Why are these things happening to us?”

There are very few in your world who are not caught-up in the World Trade Center events of several weeks ago. In fact, most have been whipped into a state of emotional frenzy, demanding some sort of retribution for the presumed attack upon your nation. However, I would caution those of you who are running on emotional auto-pilot, for it is a most slippery path.

In last month’s issue of The SPECTRUM, we spoke to you regarding the cleaning out of your emotional closets, and you were also told at that time that your world was changing very rapidly, and that you needed to get this task done immediately. You were given Guidance at that time to examine your thoughts and your feelings, and to especially be very mindful of the emotion of fear.

You ones are running in high-gear mode at present, and most of you are reacting and responding purely out of fear. Remember that fear is not what you would call “positive” emotional energy, and if you continue to exert this fear energy, you will create for yourselves exactly that which you fear.

You may fear war, but there is a tremendous amount of energy being exerted toward war, and you ones will end up creating a war. Stop and think about this, and unless a war is what you really want, stop putting energy into same. “You shall reap what you sow.”

You have the ability to change your world for either the better or for the worse. But it is up to EVERY one of you as to how your world shall be in the future.

Oh yes, change is happening! It is happening RIGHT NOW. You have entered a time of higher energy, so your thoughts and your words have much more impact and import than ever before in your existence.

We have told you, for many years now, that this time was coming, and have attempted to Guide you ones on a path of creating a better world for yourselves. However, the majority of you have just not gotten it. I am so sorry to have to tell you ones this, but it is the absolute truth.

Now, here you are, standing at the very edge of your tomorrow, and you have the ability to create a whole new world, or one that is exactly what you fear. “You shall reap what you sow.”

Do you want to live in a world of peace and brotherly love? Would you rather live in a world that has clean air and water? Do you want to live in a world of abundance for all? Do you want to live in a world where diseases no longer exist?

Or, would you rather live in a world where you have wars and destruction? Do you want to have to worry about whether your water is clean enough to consume? Do you want to live in a world where you cannot breathe the air? Or in a world where there is always lack? Do you want diseases to plague you?

Are you satisfied with the way the world is? Or can you envision a much better place?

The choices are completely yours, so—IT IS DECISION-MAKING TIME, CHELAS! [chelas = students] Your time of fence-sitting is over. There is no more time to get prepared, for your days of preparation have long since passed, and it is now time that you APPLY that which you have learned. “You shall reap what you sow.”

Nothing is as it was, and it shall never be again. You can try to run and hide, but there are no hiding places. You can choose to deny what is happening, but it will not change the truth.

It is time that you act like responsible adults, and you shall be accountable as adults. No, God is not going to judge you. God has no need to judge, as you shall judge yourselves by that which you create for yourselves. You shall live to experience your own creations, and so you shall be responsible for those same creations.

You are in the final days of counting of this age, and you cannot take the old with you into the new age, so you must finish what you have started. Why do you think retribution is coming around so quickly? Yes, everything has been speeding up for quite some time. But it is necessary, do you not see? “You shall reap what you sow.”

The dark forces are losing their battle, and they are quite aware that their days are numbered. But that fact does not keep them from influencing you ones. In fact, it is just the opposite. They are using every last bit of their energy to turn as many of you to the darkness as possible. So, it is more important now than ever before that you are on guard to their influences. They will attack you in your most vulnerable place. Right now, for most of you, that is your emotions. So, you must be on guard as never before. “You shall reap what you sow.”

If you react or respond out of fear and anger, be on guard, for you are going to have experiences that are going to be VERY unpleasant. It is so important that you keep check on your emotional responses. I cannot emphasize this enough. “You shall reap what you sow.”

You have a golden opportunity to do so much good in your world. And that good begins with one person at a time. I don’t care how small the act of kindness is—just do it!

If you are in line at the grocery store, and someone behind you has just a few items while you have a whole shopping cart full, tell that person to go ahead of you. You don’t know, but it’s possible that your small act of kindness will keep that person from going home and fighting with their spouse or children. It may keep them from rushing so much that they would have caused an accident. And, because you were kind to them, they will, in turn, be kind to someone else. “You shall reap what you sow.”

Take the time to thank people for the things they do for you. Don’t just expect that it’s the waitress’s job to bring you another cup of coffee. Your act of gratefulness will make her day a little better, and she will be kinder to others in return. “You shall reap what you sow.”

It doesn’t have to be great and magnificent things—just a smile, or a kind word, or a little selfless act here and there. These are the little things that DO make a difference. These are the things which, when MULTIPLIED BY MILLIONS, will change your world for the better! Don't be afraid of committing what was made popular some years ago as "random acts of kindness". "You shall reap what you sow."

You ones can be very rude and unkind to one another, and yet you wonder why your lives are so difficult? You are only reaping what you are sowing, chelas. Only YOU can change YOUR lives and YOUR world!

None of you are perfect—none. So, stop expecting everyone else around you to be perfect. Each of you have your own faults and weaknesses. It would serve you ones well to examine your own faults more closely, and stop worrying about everybody else's faults. I guarantee you that it will be a full-time job.

You can try to use excuses such as: "It's the dark forces making me do thus and so." But I can tell you this as an absolute fact: Nothing or no one can MAKE you do or think anything you are not willing to do or think!

You have been told how to deal with the dark forces. How many lessons have you been through regarding it? Can you truthfully stand and say you don't know how? Once you have been given the information, YOU are responsible for it, and YOU are accountable. "You will reap what you sow."

I may sound like a broken record to you, but I am trying to make a point with you ones: You cannot expect a crop of wheat when you plant dandelion seeds! Likewise, you cannot expect love and kindness when you are continually planting seeds of hatred and unkindness. Yet, you seem to assume that you have little or no responsibility for what you get, and you ones spend an inordinate amount of time and energy blaming someone else for your problems and hardships.

You live in an extremely ABUNDANT universe. But most of you act as if there isn't enough to go around. So you hoard and guard what you have, like a starving dog. Not only is there enough to go around, but there is more than enough for everyone!

You only PERCEIVE that there is lack, because you are reacting out of fear. You have planted seeds of doubt and fear (of lack), and thus you are reaping a very limited harvest.

Everything that exists is only different forms of Pure Creative Energy. The universe is literally teeming with this Energy. The more Energy that is utilized, the more Energy that is created, so it will never run out. Likewise, YOU have access to this same Energy, and it is YOURS for the taking. Use it! Don't hoard it! Because the more you use, the more there shall be available to you.

You are so used to thinking in a limited way with only your conscious mind. So your perceptions are thus such that, if you can't see it, it doesn't exist. Yet, the only REAL thing is the Energy which creates and sustains ALL things—and which, for the most part, you can't see!

It is out of this Energy that ALL comes into existence. You ones are made up of this Energy, and everything around you is part of that same Energy. There is no separation between anything, for ALL is connected via this energy. Once you can come to understand and KNOW this, you shall be creating with an en-Light-ened consciousness, rather than randomly, as so many of you do now, and you will not need to struggle any longer.

Can you imagine a world without money and without having to get up and go to a job every day to make the money to buy the things you need and want? Well, I tell you that such worlds DO exist, because you have elder brothers and sisters on other worlds who have reached the place of understanding that everything is Energy, and everything is connected and part of this Energy, and that you need not struggle to have; you merely create it out of that Energy. They know there is Abundance all around, and there is no need to hoard, for everyone has everything required.

Now, with this in mind, what kind of world do YOU want to create? Do you want your world to remain "status quo"? Do you want to continue to struggle every day? Or would you rather create a world in which there is no lack—a world where everyone's needs are met, and no one lives in need?

Well, chelas, the choice is yours. But, if you want that world of Abundance, then you must change the way you think and do things, because you are not going to get there by keeping the status quo.

As I told you, you are standing at the edge of your tomorrow. YOU must stand up, as responsible adults, and make the choice, keeping in mind that you will be accountable for what you choose. "You shall reap what you sow."

I am Violinio St. Germain, Master of the Seventh Ray, the Violet Ray of Transmutation, of changes born from the passion of soul desire and earned completion of one phase of a thrust, and now on into the next. I serve only Creator Source. I have chosen this Service, and I am honored to participate in this mission of assisting your planet in its transitionary process.

We are in the thick of it now, and there is no turning back. You have reached the point of no return, so the only direction to go is forward!

Thank you for your attention, and for your time. I leave you as I came, in the Light of Creator Source. Salu.

Fallen Angels And The Origins Of Evil

Did rebel angels take on human bodies to fulfill their lust for the "daughters of men"?

Did these fallen angels teach men to build weapons of war?

That is the premise of the Book of Enoch, a text cherished by the Essenes, early Jews, and Christians, but later condemned by both rabbis and Church fathers. The book was denounced, banned, and "lost" for over a thousand years—until in 1773 a Scottish explorer discovered three copies in Ethiopia.

Elizabeth Clare Prophet examines the controversy surrounding this book and sheds new light on Enoch's forbidden mysteries. She demonstrates that Jesus and the apostles studied the Book of Enoch, and tells why Church fathers suppressed its teaching that angels could incarnate in human bodies.

Contains Richard Laurence's translation of the Book of Enoch, all the other Enoch texts (including the Book of the Secrets of Enoch), and biblical parallels.

New World Order Thru “Terrorism”

Our last issue of The SPECTRUM was rolling off the printing presses as the September 11 so-called “terrorist” attacks began. Mark Twain’s comments in my page-2 Editor’s Note now carried a haunting tone of immediacy that wasn’t there a few days earlier when put to paper. And two of our gifted “receivers” of spiritual messages, who had been “dormant” for some time, all of a sudden had come back on-line again for last month’s paper, prompting speculation that this meant something BIG must be around the corner. It didn’t take long to confirm that suspicion.

If you go back and read again Hatonn’s writing that focused on the amazing new crop circles in England, certain comments therein take on even greater meaning now than they did then (as is likewise the case for last month’s other spiritual messages). It seems like he was already looking nine days downstream in time, at what was to be the events of 9/11/01, when he said:

“This is but one example of how you are manipulated and used. There are MANY others resulting from the dark, materialistic, greed mentality that drives the so-called ‘elite’ with a chaotic fervor and passion at a level of intensity so as to be completely unbelievable if you were to see these ones as they really are. These ones’ actions, demeanor, and moral base are so far removed from the average person’s thinking that the average person has no way of understanding the mentality they are really dealing with.”

The four spiritual messages in this issue of The SPECTRUM pick-up and take forward the ideas where last month’s messages left off. We are indeed in the thick of a battle between Good and Evil. We know how it ultimately must end—but the getting there may be quite a bumpy “wake-up” ride for many who have not a clue to what’s REALLY going on.

Because of the necessary focus for this issue of The SPECTRUM, the News Desk is shorter, but that’s partly because of Dr. Al Overholt’s huge contribution to this present outlay. He sorted through sometimes several hundred communications of one kind or another PER DAY, especially since September 11, to give me the best materials he could find—for me to then further sort and share with you.

Likewise was Rick Martin’s help central to building our topic here. He was supposed to be working on an important feature for next month’s SPECTRUM, but he constantly got pulled into this paper due to his well-earned connections and the sometimes astonishing information they wished to share with SPECTRUM readers.

Rick’s upcoming feature article has to do with extraterrestrial interactions with planet Earth. That becomes a particularly timely subject if you stop and think about what all has been put into motion by recent diabolical events—leading to the possibility of a very grim and destructive World War III.

It’s not hard to imagine that some of our Elder Brothers and Sisters have their hands full—as planetary babysitters. Meanwhile, dumb choices made in desperation by the dark “elite” controllers of this planet, trying to hang-on to their power, may create dire conditions which soon warrant more frequent, direct, and large-scale modes of extraterrestrial contact and intervention.

And that’s the intended “subliminal” message in my phrasing of the front-page headline. Recall the theme of that great 1951 science fiction classic called The Day The Earth Stood Still, starring Michael Rennie. As a decent, admirable alien with a commanding presence (the miracle is that Hollywood got it right for once), he came to Earth (landing next to the White House) to warn mankind of the senselessness of war and encourage genuine peace and cooperation between all peoples of this planet. It was a well acted movie, more timely now than ever, and delivered a powerful and brilliant script obviously inspired from Upstairs! I felt strongly that the flavor of that movie ought to be worked into our front-page headline, even if subliminally, to underscore the alarming subject matter we must cover in this story.

We are presenting herein an array of information that paints quite a different picture from that being spun ever so carefully for mass consumption. The fine art of disinformation is having a field day in print and broadcast media news items. We are assuming that readers of The SPECTRUM have had enough baloney and would prefer considering the issues that are REALLY unfolding before our eyes.

Some sources whose information we are sharing herein paint the Larger Picture necessarily with a broad brush; others bring to this forum potent clues and other insightful details which help the thinking person better discern contradictions, lies, and “slips” which reveal the degree of cool calculation behind the unfolding scheme of so-called “terrorist” activities.

Before we launch into our presentation of important “alternative” information, let’s first outlay the official chronology of events for later reference. The following is from CNN:
