This past weekend saw another swarm of quakes in and around the San Francisco area. There was only minor damage and some gas leaks. However, this is connected to the upwelling of magma under the Pacific Northwest. Mt. Rainier has been evacuated in Washington State and scientists are examining data from equipment there after a swarm of quakes around that mountain. I am headed to the region at the end of July and August. Stay tuned as I receive more information. Residents from San Jose to Seattle—take precautions!

Fire & Water—Again! (5/29/03)

Two very strange stories evolve this month. A crewman on the USS Nassau fell overboard while trying to catch a football on deck. This occurred about 900 miles east of the Virginia coast. Then, the next day, another sailor missed role call and is presumed fallen off the ship, in the middle of the ocean! Very odd that two crewmen disappear within days of each other from the same ship!

Meanwhile, both Texas and Alaska are under clouds of smoke from fires in other countries. Mexico farmers are burning off old crop material and the haze and smoke are choking residents of Central and South Texas. In Alaska, smoke and haze from fires in Russia are preventing sunlight from reaching the ground. What is going on in the skies of Texas and Alaska that the public should not see?

Youth Core? (5/29/03)

The Department of Labor is bringing child soldiers from Sierra Leone to speak in the public schools about their forced servitude in their homelands. They describe everything from graphic death scenes to rape. Do our young children really need to hear these atrocities in such detail? Once the plight of these soldier/children is publicized and society primed, they will be brought to the U.S. and "integrated" here with our own youth. (I wonder who will influence who?) These children are already traumatized and jaded, out of necessity for self-survival—perfect mind-control candidates.

Additionally, more power is being granted to our children—16-year-olds being allowed to vote because a law was passed "inadvertently" (this is already being discussed in the United Kingdom as a way to increase voter turnout—yeah, right!), school prayer as long as the children instigate it, children soldiers in our society. Sounds like the "youth core" of Communist China days when the children were turning in their parents and friends. Watch for this trend to continue.

The Kids Seem Rather Bright In School (6/1/03)

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has lifted its ban on irradiated beef for school lunch programs. This opens the way for the 27 million students in the U.S. on the lunch program to eat irradiated meat, I suppose after they have been on the Ritalin line. The USDA is on its way to becoming the largest supplier of irradiated beef in the world. They light up your life.

HERE'S THE HANG-UP: AT&T SAYS "YES SCAM" VICTIMS OWE FOR CALLS

From the www.rumormillnews.com website, 5/29/03: [quoting]

When Susan Steel called her phone line a few months ago, she heard something strange.

Instead of her usual voice-mail greeting, a man with an accent answered: "Investment office, please hold." Then after a burst of elevator music, the voice returned to say: "Yes...yes...yes." Steel kept saying "hello", but the man ignored her, then hung up.

It wasn't until the next day that Steel, a self-employed employee recruiter in San Francisco, learned what had happened: She was the victim of the "yes scam".

Someone had hijacked her voice-mail box to make thousands of dollars in long-distance phone calls to Saudi Arabia and the Philippines.

Here's how the scheme works:

In recent months, hackers have been dialing into peoples' voice-mail boxes and trying to guess the password. If successful, they then record a new outgoing message. Later on, the hacker places a long-distance phone call and asks the operator (or a computer) to forward the charges. The operator calls the hacked phone number and gets the changed message, which tricks the phone company into thinking the line's owner has agreed to accept the charges for a long-distance phone call.

In Steel's case, before she had a chance to change her phone message, the hackers had run up more than $20,000 in long-distance charges via AT&T, including 95 hours in overseas calls.

But even though AT&T agreed Steel was the victim of fraud, it insists she's on the hook for much of the charges.

"It is an awful thing" Steel said. "I can't sleep. I wake up and think about it."

Steel is hardly alone. Phone thieves have reportedly broken into the voice-mail systems of scores of victims nationwide, sticking them with thousands of dollars in overseas phone charges before they detect anything amiss.

Experts said AT&T is one of several companies affected by the scam. But while SBC Communications and other companies have agreed to reverse the charges, critics complain AT&T is insisting customers pay for thousands of dollars in calls they never made.

AT&T blamed the customers for using easy-to-guess passwords or never bothering to change the default passwords assigned by their local phone company. (Steel, who never worried about anyone tapping into her voice-mail box, used the easy-to-remember code 1-2-3-4.)

"The customer is responsible" said AT&T spokesman H. Gordon Diamond. Also, Diamond faulted SBC for not doing enough to warn customers to change their voice-mail codes.

But SBC blamed AT&T's automated system, which asked the same question exactly the same way, making it easy to fool with a recorded message.

In Steel's case, Diamond said, a human operator was fooled by the message.

Diamond said the phone company has taken several measures to trip up the scam in the future. For instance, the company sometimes asks recipients of a collect call to punch in a random number on their key pad to make sure it's a real person authorizing the call, and not a sophisticated voice-mail recording.

Since it added the security measures earlier this year, Diamond said the company has recorded only a handful of voice-mail fraud cases.

But SBC spokesman John Britton faulted AT&T for continuing to press victims of the scam to pay for the fraudulent calls. [end quoting]

Be aware of this scam and pass this information along to friends and relatives. Also note the arrogance of the AT&T position on this matter; keep it in mind when you see their folksy advertisements (and get annoying dinnertime calls) to switch your phone service to AT&T.

PRINT ME A PANCREAS, PLEASE

From Popular Science magazine, for May 2003: [quoting]

Desktop printers assemble three-dimensional living tissue. Are replacement organs next?

Seeking a better nose? Plastic surgeons might someday be able to print you a new one right on their PCs. A team of scientists has used an off-the-shelf ink-jet printer to assemble three-dimensional living tissue, a breakthrough that could pave the way for mass-produced transplant organs and made-to-order body parts.

Today's tissue engineers work mostly by hand, dipping a polymer scaffold into a bath of cells and nutrients. This is a time-consuming technique that works fine for small scraps of tissue or hollow organs like the bladder, but not for livers or kidneys, says Thomas Boland, a chemical engineer at Clemson University, who developed the technique with Vladimir Mironov from the Medical University of South Carolina.

Large organs contain millions of cells, all fed by a complex web of tiny blood vessels. Engineers cannot currently construct these vascular supply lines fast enough, so interior cells starve to death before the organ can be completely built and its cells fused.

Enter ink-jet printers. Inspired by industrial rapid-prototyping machines that squirt out plastic car fenders and doll arms, the research team wondered if they could use similar printers to slather cells right where they needed them, building complex organs one layer at a time.

"You say to yourself, 'Wow, why didn't I think of that?'" says Anthony Atala, a leading tissue engineer at Harvard Medical School.

The team scrounged Hewlett-Packard and Canon ink-jet printers from university surplus, swapped hamster ovary cells for ink, and made a few hardware tweaks. In place of paper, the scientists print the cells on a stationary sheet of temperature-sensitive biodegradable gel that holds the cells in place until they fuse. Once the cells have set, they simply adjust the temperature of the tissue slightly until the gel melts away.

The scientists haven't made anything fancy yet, just a bagel-like ring of hamster ovary cells to show the idea works. "By the end of the year, we hope to make a decent blood vessel" says Boland, who described his work in the April issue of Trends In Biotechnology.

Printing a new liver or kidney is still a long way off, the scientists emphasize. More likely the technology will first be used to create custom tissue scraps for drug screening.

But one near-term possibility is to create spare parts for plastic surgery. Cartilage, says Mironov, contains few blood vessels, so it is easier to make. (Companies already grow replacement knee cartilage.) A few years ago scientists even sculpted a crude human ear. A tissue printer, says Mironov, could speed the process and make it far more precise. "Let's say I want to have a nose exactly like Clint Eastwood" he muses. A surgeon could fill an ink cartridge with cartilage cells, download the blueprint, and tap print: "You have a new nose in five minutes." — Michael Stroh

NANO SPACE:

THE NEW SPACE RACE IS THE BATTLE FOR MORE AND MORE CONTROL OVER LESS AND LESS

From WIRED magazine, June 2003:

MICROCOSMOS — by Larry Smarr

I have seen the future, and it is small. Steady advances in miniaturization are leading technologists beyond the scale where Newton's laws govern the world and into the realm I term the nano arena. Within the unimaginably tiny space of 100 by 100 nanometers—one millionth the area of the period at the end of this sentence—we're about to witness an amazing collision of physics, biology, and information technology. Developments in nano space will define this century just as electronics defined the last.

Outside the arena, electrons behave like billiard balls. Squeeze them into narrower confines, though, and they behave like waves rather than particles, and counterintuitive quantum phenomena like tunneling, spin, and entanglement take effect. In conventional devices such as microprocessors, this is a problem; electrons won't stay on their copper paths, spontaneously disappearing and reappearing elsewhere. But some engineers now realize that if they design with quantum effects in mind, they can build incredibly small electronic devices. And if scientists can manipulate individual light quanta within the arena—a field known as nanophotonics—these devices can communicate.

Consider IBM's quantum corral, an elliptical arrangement of iron atoms on a copper base 14 nm across. The corral, invented in 1993, could conceivably store information by holding atoms that signify 1s and 0s.

IBM's minuscule invention is only a little smaller than a more common information-bearing nanostructure: rhinovirus, the cause of the common cold. Rhinovirus' 20-sided shell of interlocking proteins protects an RNA strand of roughly 7,000 nucleotides. That is, this replicating nanomachine essentially carries 7 Kbytes of executable code.

The quantum corral stores data. Rhinovirus executes a program. Design a nanophotonic interface between them and, in principle, you've got a computer only 100 times bigger than a silicon atom!

Today, the corral is considered an engineered device, while rhinovirus is viewed as a biological entity. Within the nano arena, though, the distinction is meaningless. Both are nanomachines, one built on a substrate of metal, the other on a substrate of organic molecules. Bridging the gap will spark an explosion of playful development as nanoscale devices are snapped together as if they were Lego blocks.

At first, technologists will replicate familiar devices like motors and switches, but soon they'll set out in entirely new directions. Nanocomputers will be cheap and plentiful, making it possible to embed the world with intelligence. Everything will have information-processing capability—every brick, bicycle, and body.

Scientists and engineers who come of age working in the nano arena won't cloister themselves in disciplinary guilds. They'll be equally adept with the tools of the bio lab, the chip fab, and the physics department. They'll be masters of bioinfonanotech.

COOL USE FOR MAGNETS

From Popular Mechanics magazine, June 2003: [quoting]

Mindful that Japan imports all of its fuel, Nagoya-based Chubu Electric Power has found a way to cut the electricity needed for refrigeration. At a recent meeting of the American Physical Society in Austin, Texas, Chubu described a refrigerator that uses one-third less energy. Instead of using an electric motor to compress a working fluid to carry away heat, a rotating permanent magnet compresses and relaxes a magnetic field. Chubu plans to sell a household model. [end quoting]

Considering how popular refrigerators are, with at least one in every household, this could put a big dent in the Japanese electric bill. Hopefully this company will be smart in their exporting of the technology to countries where, like the 100-miles-per-gallon carburetor, such practical increases in efficiency are squashed by Big Business greed.

MOLDING MOLECULES WITH LIGHT

From Popular Mechanics magazine, June 2003: [quoting]

Researchers have found the key to creating a real "Star Trek"-style Holodeck. Holograms have, of course, been around for decades. While your hand passes unimpeded through a hologram's ghostly images, microscopic particles can be drawn to regions where the light is brightest.

At a recent meeting of the American Physical Society in Austin, Texas, researchers explained how this particle-drawing effect has been used to create holographic optical "tweezers" that suspend particles in space. University of Chicago physicist David Grier, who pioneered the technology, said very large computer-generated 3-D holographic arrays could create bright spots or optical traps that exert sufficient force to suspend a collection of microscopic objects. "This is Star Trek's Holodeck in action" he said. The first application will be more serious: building smaller and faster "lab on a chip" chemical analyzers. [end quoting]

Does this mean we'll one day be watching Star Trek reruns on a virtual TV formed purely from light?

BLUE LIGHT SPECIAL

From Popular Science magazine, for June 2003: [quoting]

A novel way to squeeze more data onto CDs and DVDs.

Sony's high-capacity blue laser DVD recorder, set to debut in the United States this fall, crams five times more information on a disc than the standard red laser version does and heralds the arrival of next-generation technology. Enthusiasts eager to get their hands on that much data capacity, however, may think twice after learning that production snags boosted the DVD's price to about $3,500. But researchers at BlackLight Power in Cranbury, New Jersey, say they have made a discovery that may help overcome technical hurdles and get reliable blue lasers to market.

When the kinks are worked out, blue lasers will likely be the heart of next-generation DVDs, CDs, printers, and scanners. Having shorter wavelengths than their red brethren, they can etch more data on a disc. It's the optical equivalent of taking a sharper pencil to paper. But manufacturing flaws have plagued the emerging technology.

The standard way to generate blue laser light is to run an electric current through a crystal or chemical. Excited electrons in the substrate then emit blue light rays. Trouble is, the substrates tend to crack under extreme heat, a glitch that ruins up to a third of all batches. And the solutions are pricey.

Liquids, however, don't crack. Enter the world's first water-based blue laser. Researchers at BlackLight Power heated water vapor with microwaves to generate energized hydrogen atoms which emit multispectrum light rays, including infrared, blue, and violet. A prototype blue laser device is expected by the end of the year.

The team says such a multispectrum laser light could be miniaturized to micron dimensions for many microelectronic applications. "A hydrogen laser may prove to be the most useful of all" says Randell Mills, BlackLight Power's CEO.

— Charles Q. Choi

Don't hold your breath on the liquid approach to solving this problem in an affordable manner. Also don't be in a big hurry to buy the new blue laser products unless you're willing to be among the statistics where the blue lasers failed downstream after you're using the product for a few months. It sounds like they have some serious bugs to work out yet before this is reliable technology—par for the course, at the public's expense, when rushing things to market.

INTERESTING SEARCH TOOL

From researcher Calvin Burgin (wrlldline@texas.net), for 5/29/03:

[quoting]

Al, in case you don't know, if you use Google to search you can type in a phone number in XXX-XXX-XXXX format (include the hyphens), and click search, and it will give you the name and address, sometimes a map, of the person and sometimes other information.

A friend tried his phone number and it showed his name and address and an accident report of when he crashed a plane as a student pilot in World War II.

After a little testing, it was found that this identification method worked for listed telephone numbers, but DID NOT WORK for unlisted numbers. Again, do you get the feeling that Big Brother is REALLY watching us?!

HOW TO GET BETTER RESULTS USING GOOGLE SEARCH ON THE INTERNET

From Lockergnome Windows Daily (lockergnome.com) 5/03: [quoting]

Normally I have to scour the forums to bring you great little tidbits to share with you, but a little birdie gave this one to me—and it is just too good to pass up! So I'm gonna step aside, and let Oftentired take the command today:

A successful search using Google can be an interesting experience. The key is to use the best possible keywords for the search and to use as few keywords as possible. After you have your initial Google results, if you are lucky or have used these keywords before and know they work, you will find what you're looking for on the first Google page of results.

If you cannot find what you're looking for on the first (or only) page of results, there are three choices to consider:

1. Use different, or additional, or fewer keywords for a new search: If your search results appear to have too many different topics of information, remove one or more of the keywords from your search that relate to the more obvious results that you didn't want—even if those keywords seem essential to your search. If you have more keywords that you didn't use for the first search because you wanted to keep it simple, now would be a good time to use them either for a new search or in place of some keywords you removed. Sometimes your second or third choice of keywords is the right one. At the bottom of a Google results page is a link to "search within results". Sometimes you can narrow your search down using better keywords that may come to mind after you view the first search results. Just click the link and type in your keywords. No need to repeat the ones you already used.

2. If there is more than one Google page of results, try clicking the second and then third page and see if you get lucky. Do not waste much time doing this. The odds are greatly diminished if you don't find it on the first couple of pages.

3. Right-click links (see Hint #3 below) that don't have exactly what you're looking for, but which DO display words that appear to have something similar to what you're searching for, and open them in a new window. Quite often, you will find a link to what you're looking for on one of these pages. Just as often, you will discover better keywords to search for on one of these pages. Almost as often, you will get lost for an hour looking at really interesting stuff you were not originally looking for.

Hint #1: This one is a no-brainer, and you will kick yourself every time you realize you didn't do it: use a keyword that will obviously always be on the page of information you are looking for. This keyword will have absolutely nothing to do with what you are looking for. Example: If you are searching for a program to download called "cars" and perform a search for "cars", you will get a whole bunch of cars. Red cars, green cars, blue cars, new cars, used cars, 1998 cars, 2000 cars, etc.... Now, change your search and use the keywords "cars download" and see what you get. Downloads, all kinds of them, and there is a game called Tiny Cars that you can download. How about that?

"Hint #2a: If you have something you're looking for that has more than one word to describe it, and those words are in the shape of a phrase, try searching with quotes around your phrase with no other keywords present. You may get lucky. For example, if I'm searching for information on my Samsung CDRW, I can get the exact name of it from my system information and search using that exact name. But, I will get search results containing all of the words scattered around, and not just together as they would be if the page had specific information on it regarding my particular make/model. What I'm looking for WILL be in the search results, but I will have to spend an hour clicking page 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, etc., to find it. In most cases where there is a page of detailed information, it will also have the exact title of what you are looking for. If I put the quotation marks around the title of it, I will be more likely to get the results on my first or second page of search results.

Hint #2b: The use of quotation marks also applies to error messages. But searching for error messages needs a separate hint. Sometimes taking chunks of a long error message and searching for parts of it that seem to be most specific to the error can provide quick results.

Here's an example of how I would do a Google search for this error message: "The error CMDNINST caused a general protection fault in module KRNL386.EXE at 001:00002867"

1. Try the entire thing first without quotation marks (The error CMDNINST caused a general protection fault in module KRNL386.EXE at 001:00002867)

2. Try the entire thing enclosed in quotes ("The error CMDNINST caused a general protection fault in module KRNL386.EXE at 001:00002867")

3. Try the entire thing with some words removed; no quotes. (error CMDNINST caused general protection fault module KRNL386.EXE 001:00002867) or (CMDNINST caused protection fault module KRNL386.EXE)

4. Try different, completely intact sections of it in quotes ("CMDNINST caused a general protection fault") ("fault in module KRNL386.EXE") ("module KRNL386.EXE at 001:00002867")

5. Try the idiot numbers that showed up, with and without quotation marks. You might get lucky and find yourself hollering BINGO really loud. (001:00002867 or "001:00002867")

Hint #3: Always right-click and Open in New Window every link you look at from your search results. This will save you a lot of time. To go back to your search results, just minimize the new window or click the X to close it. But do remember to keep the link window open if there is even the remotest chance you will want to look at it again. By keeping the original search results open in their own pristine window, you will save a lot of time and irritation.

Hint #4: (via Chris_1013): I've got a similar tip along the same vein—ever have a song stuck in your head, but you can't remember what it's called? I just go to Google, enter the whole line of lyric I can remember, enclosed in quotes. I always find a page that's got the whole lyric of the song, and get the title from that. (Note: I would add that, in this case, the keyword you might consider including is "lyrics"—used for the same reason I suggest using "download" in hint #1.)

Hint #5: via (Chris_1013): Another thing is that Google is so good you can sometimes do away with bookmarks. Just type the name of any major company, software application, TV show, etc., and hit the "I'm Feeling Lucky" link, and it usually takes you to the official site. I do this from the Google toolbar, so I don't even have to surf to Google first!

Also, the following is a very handy free program for taking most of the "garbage" out of your email when you want to save it to a WORD document or to forward it without "garbage", etc. I use it many times a day; it's been a big timesaver for me.

"This email was cleaned by emailStripper, available for free from the www.papercut.biz/emailStripper.htm website location."

This statement (above) was put here by the program and will be put at the end of any email conversion; I just left it on so I could tell you about the program.

Go to their site and you can get this tiny free program that will clean up most of the < and > brackets and other garbage that you find in email when it is forwarded.

I keep an icon for it in the "quick launch" section of my task bar (on the lower left of my Windows desktop) so it's always handy. When I get an article from the Internet or email I want to put into my normal MSWord format, I COPY the article/message to the clipboard, and then open the Email Stripper program, which opens as a new window, and then click on PASTE, then STRIP, and then COPY (which copies to the clipboard). I then open MSWord (or any other word-processing program) and PASTE it on a clean page. I now have a clean copy.

If I want to email it, I then COPY and PASTE it into a new email message form.

COMMENTS ON THE MOVIE MATRIX II

From Dr. Richard Boylan (E-mail: drboylan@sbcbglobal.net; Website: www.drboylan.com), 5/18/03: [quoting]

Matrix II, while not a complete departure from Matrix I, nevertheless deals with metaphysical issues which seldom come within the purview of many college students who are not Philosophy majors, much less today's general public. Needless to say, aside from some seldom-viewed French philosophical movies, it sets a standard for accessible and appealing presentation of fundamental philosophical issues of human existence.

For example, take John Partridge, a professor of philosophy at Wheaton College whose work focuses on the philosophy of the ancient Greeks. Partridge considers the striking similarities between The Matrix and the "cave" scenario described in Plato's Republic. In addition to pointing out the numerous surface parallels between the cave-dwellers Plato describes and the humans trapped in the Matrix, Partridge explores a deeper continuity between the film and Plato's text: both narratives privilege the self-knowledge that follows from the right kind of self-examination.

As Plato might put it, both Neo [Keanu Reeves, the hero] and the cave-dwellers must undertake a difficult journey from darkness to light if genuine knowledge (and consequently true "care of the soul") is to be attained.

Further, I read in Matrix II a careful parallel to certain important but covert contemporary geopolitical issues. The "Merovingian" character is a sly caricature of the pretensions of certain contemporary European royalty, many deposed, who would like to regain/hold on to their thrones by wowing the general populace by claims that their royal "Merovingian" bloodlines trace back to Jesus Christ (and his wife, Mary of Magdela). Their pimp, "Sir" Lawrence Gardner, is currently on the lecture circuit pushing several books making this preposterous claim.

Then again, we cannot discount the importance of the figure of "The Architect" (the creator of the Matrix faux-universe cybernetic program). The Architect is grandly pompous, pseudo-omniscient, and patronizing, and is thus another sly parody of the Masonic secret societies' quasi-divine central principle of the world.

The "world rulers" like to think that they derive their power from their exclusive possession of the ancient secrets handed down by the Thule (Hitler's) Society, Madame Blavatsky, Illuminati, Masonic, Knights Templar, Kabala, Essene, Gnostic, Delphi, Zoroasterian, Babylonian, Akkadian, Sumerian metaphysician-regents, who wrongly monopolized the teachings given by the Star Visitors of 6000 B.C., and only handed them on to fellow secret society initiates.

This is the dangerous trend perpetuated by Nazi-era Professor Strauss, the philosophical fountainhead of the current Pentagon's "The Cabal"—housed in the Office of "Special" Projects.

Indeed, in this metaphysical whiz-movie, Matrix II, I am tempted to think that the Wachowski Brothers are waging single-handed beneficial psychological warfare against the geoplutocratic cabal elite, and mocking their pseudo-metaphysical underpinnings to boot.

Far from a message of discouragement to the Light-workers and metaphysically-aware among us, I found the Matrix II's message to be a rallying call that all is not lost, that those who are awake to the trillion-dollar deception being woven around us are capable of winning back society from the Forces of Darkness.

Finally, I must rejoin: the fight scenes as ridiculous? I think not. The scene of Neo's combat against a hundred Agent

Smiths (think elite cabal henchmen) will set the standard for years in martial arts cinematography. And a visual reminder that a Light-worker, like the Sir Lancelot of legend of old, "has the strength of ten, because his heart is pure".

All in all, I think that Matrix II realizes the best of cinema's potential, in presenting a painless but deep presentation deeply questioning the Madison Avenue contrived culture being foisted upon us as necessary and standard.

[end quoting]

One could start quite a debate about the subconscious symbolism of this movie. Ultimately, its effect depends upon the character of each viewer—as to whether it opens one up to greater mind-control manipulation or stimulates a resolve to recognize and overcome already well established mind-control techniques effectively used every day through the media.

TWO AMAZING STORIES

From the beyond-the-illusion.com website, 5/18/03: [quoting]

Story Number One

Many years ago, Al Capone virtually owned Chicago. Capone wasn't famous for anything heroic. His exploits were anything but praiseworthy. He was, however, notorious for enmeshing the windy city in everything from bootlegged booze and prostitution to murder.

Capone had a lawyer in Chicago nicknamed "Easy Eddie". He was his lawyer for a good reason. Eddie was very good! In fact, Eddie's skill at legal maneuvering kept Big Al out of jail for a long time.

To show his appreciation, Capone paid him very well. Not only was the money big, but Eddie got special dividends. For instance, he and his family occupied a fenced-in mansion with live-in help and all of the conveniences of the day. The estate was so large that it filled an entire Chicago city block.

Yes, Eddie lived the high life of the Chicago mob and gave little consideration to the atrocity that went on around him. Eddie did have one soft spot, however. He had a son who he loved dearly. Eddie saw to it that his young son had the best of everything: clothes, cars, and a good education. Nothing was withheld. Price was no object. And, despite his involvement with organized crime, Eddie even tried to teach him right from wrong. Yes, Eddie tried to teach his son to rise above his own sordid life.

Eddie wanted his son to be a better man than he was. Yet, with all his wealth and influence, there were two things he couldn't give his son; two things that Eddie sacrificed to the Capone mob that he couldn't pass on to his beloved son: a good name and a good example.

One day, Easy Eddie reached a difficult decision. Offering his son a good name was far more important than all the riches he could lavish on him. Easy Eddie wanted to rectify all the wrong he had done.

He decided he would go to the authorities and tell the truth about Al "Scarface" Capone; he would try to clean up his tarnished name and offer his son some semblance of integrity. But to do this, he would have to testify against The Mob, and he knew that the cost would be great.

But more than anything, he wanted to be an example to his son. He wanted to do his best to make restoration and, hopefully, have a good name to leave his son. So, he testified.

Within the year, Easy Eddie's life ended in a blaze of gunfire on a lonely Chicago Street. But in his eyes, he had given his son the greatest gift he had to offer, at the greatest price he would ever pay.

Story Number Two

World War II produced many heroes. One such man was Lieutenant Commander Butch O'Hare. He was a fighter pilot assigned to the aircraft carrier Lexington in the South Pacific. One day his entire squadron was sent on a mission. After he was airborne, he looked at his fuel gauge and realized that someone had forgotten to top off his fuel tank. He would not have enough fuel to complete his mission and get back to his ship. His flight leader told him to return to the carrier. Reluctantly, he dropped out of formation and headed back to the fleet.

As he was returning to the mother ship, he saw something that turned his blood cold. A squadron of Japanese aircraft were speeding their way toward the American fleet. The American fighters were gone on a sortie, and the fleet was all but defenseless. He couldn't reach his squadron and bring them back in time to save the fleet. Nor could he warn the fleet of the approaching danger. There was only one thing to do. He must somehow divert them from the fleet.

Laying aside all thoughts of personal safety, he dove into the formation of Japanese planes. Wing-mounted 50 calibers blazed as he charged in, attacking one surprised enemy plane and then another. Butch wove in and out of the now broken formation and fired at as many planes as possible until all his ammunition was finally spent.

Undaunted, he continued the assault. He dove at the planes, trying to clip a wing or tail in hopes of damaging as many enemy planes as possible and rendering them unfit to fly. He was desperate to do anything he could to keep them from reaching the American ships.

Finally, the exasperated Japanese squadron took off in another direction.

Deeply relieved, Butch O'Hare and his tattered fighter limped back to the carrier. Upon arrival he reported in and related the event surrounding his return. The film from the gun-camera mounted on his plane told the tale. It showed the extent of Butch's daring attempt to protect his fleet. He had in fact destroyed five enemy aircraft. This took place on February 20, 1942, and for that action Butch became the Navy's first Ace of World War II, and the first Naval Aviator to win the Congressional Medal of Honor.

A year later Butch was killed in aerial combat at the age of 29. His hometown would not allow the memory of this World War II hero to fade, and today, O'Hare Airport in Chicago is named in tribute to the courage of this great man.

So the next time you find yourself at O'Hare International, give some thought to visiting Butch's memorial displaying his statue and his Medal of Honor. It's located between Terminals 1 and 2.

So what do these two stories have to do with each other?

Butch O'Hare was Easy Eddie's son.

Many lives were ultimately saved due to those important lessons of character that Easy Eddie conveyed to his son. And once again, truth is so much more interesting than fiction!

A PARABLE ABOUT LIFE'S MANY CHOICES

From the www.geocities.com website, 5/29/03: [quoting]

One day, an expert in time management was speaking to a group of business students and, to drive home a point, used an illustration those students will never forget.

As he stood in front of the group of high-powered over-achievers he said: "Okay, time for a quiz."

He pulled out a one-gallon, wide-mouth Mason jar and set it on the table in front of him. He also produced about a dozen fist-sized rocks and carefully placed them, one at a time, into the jar. When the jar was filled to the top and no more rocks would fit inside, he asked: "Is this jar full?"

Everyone in the class yelled "Yes!"

The time management expert replied: "Really?"

He reached under the table and pulled out a bucket of gravel. He dumped some gravel in and shook the jar causing pieces of gravel to work themselves down into the spaces between the big rocks. He then asked the group once more: "Is the jar full?"

By this time the class was on to him. "Probably not" one of them answered.

"Good!" he replied.

He reached under the table and brought out a bucket of sand. He started dumping the sand in the jar and it went into all of the spaces left between the rocks and the gravel. Once more he asked the question: "Is this jar full?"

"No!" the class shouted.

Once again he said: "Good!"

Then he grabbed a pitcher of water and began to pour it in until the jar was filled to the brim.

Then he looked at the class and asked: "What is the point of this illustration?"

One eager beaver raised his hand and said: "The point is, no matter how full your schedule is, if you try really hard, you can always fit some more things in it!"

"No" the speaker replied, "that's not the point. The truth this illustration teaches us is, if you do not put the big rocks in first, you'll never get them in at all.

"What are the 'big rocks' in your life? Time with your loved ones; your faith; your education; your dreams; a worthy cause; teaching or mentoring others?"

"Remember to put these 'big rocks' in first or you will never get them in at all.

"So, tonight, or in the morning, when you are reflecting on this short story, ask yourself this question: What are the 'big rocks' in my life? Then, put those in your jar first." [end quoting]

Sounds like a good question to answer before we wish we had done so sooner.

THE SIMPLE SECRET OF HAPPINESS

Shared by a reader and Internet correspondent, 5/29/03: [quoting]

One day, one friend asked another: "How is it that you are always so happy? You have so much energy, and you never seem to get down."

With her eyes smiling, she said: "I know The Secret!"

"What secret is that?"

To which she replied: "I'll tell you all about it, but you have to promise to share The Secret with others."

"The Secret is this: I have learned there is little I can do in my life that will make me truly happy. I must depend on God to make me happy and to meet my needs.

"When a need arises in my life, I have to trust God to supply according to His riches. I have learned most of the time I don't need half of what I think I do. He has never let me down. Since I learned that Secret, I am happy.”

The questioner’s first thought was: “That’s too simple!”

But upon reflecting over her own life, she recalled how she thought a bigger house would make her happy, but it didn’t! She thought a better paying job would make her happy, but it hadn’t.

When did she realize her greatest happiness? Sitting on the floor with her grandchildren, playing games, eating pizza, or reading a story—a simple gift from God.

Now you know it too! We can’t depend on people to make us happy. Only God, in His infinite wisdom can do that. Trust Him!

And now I pass The Secret on to you. So once you get it, what will you do?

You have to tell someone The Secret, too. That God, in His wisdom, will take care of You. But it’s not really a secret. We just have to believe it and do it. Really trust God! [end quoting]

How easy to say, and yet how difficult for most to live.

WHAT GOES AROUND, COMES AROUND

From an Internet source, 5/30/03:

“Throw your dream into space like a kite, and you do not know what it will bring back—a new life, a new friend, a new love, a new country.”

He almost didn’t see the old lady, stranded on the side of the road. But even in the dim light of day, he could see she needed help. So he pulled up in front of her Mercedes and got out. His Pontiac was still sputtering when he approached her.

Even with the smile on his face, she was worried. No one had stopped to help for the last hour or so. Was he going to hurt her? He didn’t look safe; he looked poor and hungry.

He could see that she was frightened, standing out there in the cold.

He knew how she felt. It was that chill which only fear can put in you.

He said: “I’m here to help you ma’am. Why don’t you wait in the car where it’s warm? By the way, my name is Bryan.”

Well, all she had was a flat tire, but for an old lady, that was bad enough. Bryan crawled under the car, looking for a place to put the jack, skinning his knuckles a time or two. Soon he was able to change the tire.

But he had to get dirty and his hands hurt. As he was tightening up the lug nuts, she rolled down the window and began to talk to him. She told him that she was from St. Louis and was only just passing through. She couldn’t thank him enough for coming to her aid.

Bryan just smiled as he closed her trunk. She asked him how much she owed him. Any amount would have been all right with her. She already imagined all the awful things that could have happened had he not stopped. Bryan never thought twice about the money. This was not a job to him.

This was helping someone in need, and God knows there were plenty who had given him a hand in the past. He had lived his whole life that way, and it never occurred to him to act any other way.

He told her that, if she really wanted to pay him back, the next time she saw someone who needed help, she could give that person the assistance they needed. And Bryan added: “And think of me!”

He waited until she started her car and drove off. It had been a cold and depressing day, but he felt good as he headed for home, disappearing into the twilight.

A few miles down the road the lady saw a small cafe. She went in to grab a bite to eat, and take the chill off before she made the last leg of her trip home. It was a dingy looking restaurant. Outside were two old gas pumps.

The whole scene was unfamiliar to her. The cash register was like the telephone of an out-of-work actor: it didn’t ring much. Her waitress came over and brought a clean towel to wipe her wet hair. She had a sweet smile, one that even being on her feet for the whole day couldn’t erase.

The lady noticed the waitress was nearly eight months pregnant, but she never let the strain and aches change her attitude.

The old lady wondered how someone who had so little could be so giving to a stranger. Then she remembered Bryan.

After the lady finished her meal, and the waitress went to get change for her hundred-dollar bill, the lady slipped right out the door. She was gone by the time the waitress came back. The waitress wondered where the lady could be, then she noticed something written on the napkin, under which was four $100 bills.

There were tears in her eyes when she read what the lady wrote: “You don’t owe me anything; I have been there too. Somebody once helped me out, the way I’m helping you. If you really want to pay me back, here is what you do: Do not let this chain of love end with you.”

Well, there were tables to clear, sugar bowls to fill, and people to serve, but the waitress made it through another day.

That night, when she got home from work and climbed into bed, she was thinking about the money and what the lady had written. How could the lady have known how much she and her husband needed it? With the baby due next month, it was going to be hard. She knew how worried her husband was, and as he lay sleeping next to her, she gave him a soft kiss and whispered soft and low: “Everything’s gonna be all right; I love you, Bryan.”

You just never know how fast some random act of kindness might come home to roost. △

Your Lively, Living Universe: Both Without And Within

6/1/03 SOLTEC

Good evening, my friend. Thank you for dedicating this time to we of the Host of God that a message can be “brought through” and shared with many on your world who sincerely ask from the heart for guidance and insight.

It is I, Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec, come in the Radiant One Light of Creator Source. I speak on behalf of many of your Elder Brethren who are here with me at this challenging time for us all.

For newer readers who may be curious about such messages as these, I can be regarded as a kind of senior scientist and geophysical overseer of this present Earth Transition Project. Your living universe—both without and within—is much more alive and lively than your current level of science has yet recognized, though the clues continue to hit them over the head.

Yes, my scribe, your head feels like it is about to split apart all of a sudden. We are making adjustments as great efforts are, as usual, put forth from dark ones associated with your Earth domain to attempt to block these transmissions. While such antagonisms have crippled some of our less focused or determined receivers, our capabilities infinitely surpass those of the adversarial forces who would effort to block such messages as this.

Behold the folly of these adversarial pawns, these wayward “children of the lie” who have been conned by the Great Trickster into thinking they sit in a driver’s seat of some kind of power. They, too, will eventually learn, as a result of the free-will choices they’ve made at this time, that there are more fulfilling paths they have yet to experience.

You more Lighted ones play a teaching role in their learning, just as they presently play a strengthening and testing role in your learning. As you Lighted ones grow stronger with respect to their “temptations”, they will see the shortsightedness of their present chosen path of service to self rather than service to others. It is a valid path for some to explore in the greater unfoldment of experience.

This is the kind of schoolroom environment your dear Mother Earth provides, despite enduring so much pain from the “tantrums” of those relative few dark ones who struggle, against an incoming high-tide of great change, to sustain their status quo of control over the vast majority of you. As Mother Earth continues to shake and shudder more intensely, due to energies affecting her both from within and from without, it would be wise to acknowledge her sustained, nurturing compassion toward you ones with a simple prayer of thanks.

Many ones have been chattering on such as your Internet with great curiosity about photographs of large “objects” seen in the vicinity of your Sun. Sometimes these objects are “there” and sometimes they’re not. Sometimes areas of your SOHO images are blocked-out or patched-over with pieces of other images to avoid sharing The Truth with you who pay the bills for these projects. Some ones assert quite vigorously that such an object is imminently going to wreak havoc with Earth, sending you back to the Stone Age or worse.

Dear ones, we would remind you that the space around your planet and throughout your solar system is literally TEEMING with intelligent activity. Only a very small window of that liveliness occurs within a frequency range visible to your physical senses and related instrumentation.

But even within that narrow physical perception zone, it would truly astound most of you to see what your astronauts routinely observe during their near-space missions. Of course, you-the-people are the last to know what REALLY goes on in space. Besides it’s disguised military mission, NASA’s main job is to act as a buffer between The Truth and the public on behalf of what you call your secret government of spiritually dark, elite world controllers who function as well-duped puppets for the Great Trickster.

These dark ones are, as usual, desperately trying to keep you ignorant to the Greater Realities of your dynamic, living universe. This is because once your consciousness starts to expand from encountering such a breathtaking reality, you more clearly perceive the petty nature of the dark ones’ deceptions, and thus their control tactics quickly lose power over you.

Why do you think your astronauts have returned from important space missions as profoundly “changed” people? Of course some of their odd behaviors are indeed due to an immense degree of memory-blocking mind control having been imposed on these ones—in addition to very real “national security” death threats to themselves and their families, etc. And yet The Truth still leaks out under certain triggering circumstances, as some of you who follow such matters are well aware. Such revealing outbursts are kept to a minimum by keeping these astronauts away from public interactions as much as possible.

As for those controversial “objects” sometimes being sighted near your Sun—well, at any given time objects both natural and artificial may be present and observable there. Your Sun is a great conscious being as worthy of attention at this epochal Transition time as are you ones. Much is going on there that is of interest to (and has attracted the presence of) some of your elder cosmic brethren, who seek to learn more about the thinking of our Creator, the Grand Designer of All That Is, through that which you would recognize as “scientific” study of Creation.

Dear ones, it is time to grow beyond the image of space painted by your disinformation experts and their media (especially Hollywood) stooges as some kind of hostile, haphazard place wherein nobody is “minding the store”. Nothing could be further from The Truth!

We have explained to you, over and over again, that you are in a time when your entire solar system is entering into a region of universal space wherein there exists a domain of high-frequency energies that act as a kind of a “cosmic car-wash”. We (and some of your wisest Native teachers like the Hopi) often refer to this as the time of the Great Awakening and Great Cleansing on planet Earth because these terms describe the kinds of global transformational events that are being energized and accelerated all around your world as a result of the influx of these Great Celestial Healing Energies.

EVERYTHING—from delicate mechanical and electrical devices on your planet (like clock mechanisms and computers), to rates of radioactive decay of isotopes, to cellular structure of both plants and animals, to the behavior of Mother Earth herself—is being affected. NO PHYSICAL MATTER CAN AVOID RESPONDING TO THESE INCOMING HIGH-FREQUENCY ENERGIES because their transformative effects occur first at the “etheric” level wherein operates the substructure of energy patterns which literally form what you perceive as physical matter.

Naturally, you too are being affected. This is partly because you utilize a bio-electric physical apparatus—your body—to interface with the physical reality of your environment, and that body’s physical matter/energy construct is responding just as much to the incoming high-frequency “cleansing” energies as is everything else around you. Your cellular structure is enhancing in response to this energy stimulation, in essence greatly expanding what your experiential machine is capable of doing—as many of you will gradually be discovering.

One common effect of these accelerating changes is a feeling of tiredness partway through your day, and a need to sleep more. In sleep your body can more easily “catch up” again to the frequency upshifting that you begin to lag behind, as your day progresses, due to the typical stresses associated with modern living (which tend to lower your frequency).

Even those who generally remain in a higher-frequency state of laughter, joy, and appreciation are feeling some effects from the energies which are bathing your planet at this time. And those who allow themselves to entertain the lower-frequency states of pessimism, anger, depression, etc. for any length of time are having particular difficulties now, often manifesting life-threatening illnesses of one kind or another. (So consider well the Hopi message shared in last month’s SPECTRUM.)

Furthermore, ones are finding themselves gravitating toward “lighter” meals in smaller portions, but perhaps more often. A peanut butter sandwich with fresh fruit or salad is more often sounding more satisfying than is a heavy meal of steak and potatoes.

But beyond the physical changes taking place, so too is your “mental body” responding to these incoming high-frequency energies. Though perhaps at times disorienting right now, these energies are stimulating an expansion of consciousness leading to a deeply felt awareness of a greater personal connection to all around you—from the little butterfly that just landed on your finger to the massive churnings going on at the center of Mother Earth.

This expansion most emphatically includes the awakening of greater intuitive or “psychic” abilities, including a stronger perception of dishonesty in any of its many prevalent forms on your planet at this time. Needless to say, this situation alone poses quite a problem for those dark ones who wish to maintain their status quo of control over you!

Meanwhile, these incoming high-frequency energy effects are certainly not limited to your Earth environment—though that’s understandably your

WISDOM OF THE RAYS: The Masters Teach, Volumes I & II

Do you enjoy the spiritual messages shared here in The SPECTRUM? If so then you won't want to miss these two volumes packed full of earlier shared messages.

“Our Elder Brothers from the Higher Realms of Creation are attempting to communicate with ALL of us at this time. Why? Take a look around you. The old ways of doing things aren’t working. Our planet is entering a time of massive, turbulent change and renewal. To put it bluntly: we NEED help! And that’s where these books come into the picture. Yes, eventually ‘the Phoenix will arise from the ashes’ after this Great Cleansing process, but the ride could be quite a bumpy one,

especially for those ill-prepared for what is to happen.”

— Back Cover, Vol. I

— Esu “Jesus” Sananda (Vol. II)

More Quotes From Volume II

“Be not in fear of the changes that are upon you, for they are a very necessary part of the [planetary] transition. The Earth will heave to and fro, and many wondrous things will you experience, but lose not your sight upon the final goal. We will always be there with you, and we are but a call away.”

— Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec

“You live in perhaps the most unique time that your planet will ever experience—COMING OUT OF IGNORANCE (DARKNESS) AND INTO KNOWLEDGE (LIGHT). Would it not be wise to take full advantage of this exquisite learning environment?!”

— Sanat Kumara (“Grandfather”)

— Master Hilarion

— Aton, The One Light

immediate viewpoint. ALL of your solar system—including your planets, as well as their great parent, your Sun—are likewise responding in their own ways to stimulation from these cosmic energies of cleansing and healing leading to a fundamental dimensional upshiftment. That is what this time of Transition is all about.

In that regard, we of the Host of God (and many who work with us in various observational and supervisory capacities from throughout the omniverse of universes) are very busy these days monitoring—and in some cases stabilizing—that which is underway in your physical domain for the greater balance of our combined evolutionary journey.

Thus you may, for instance, see “objects” near your Sun one day and not the next. And if the object is not seemingly “there” when you look, is that because it has moved away from your space, or has it simply moved up in frequency, out of your range of perception with physical senses and instrumentation?

Let me repeat this as a clue for your consideration: Your universe is NOT a bunch of dirty rocks haphazardly flitting about in some random format, like an accident waiting to happen, with nobody supervising what’s going on! WHERE DOES GOD (OR WE OF HIS HOSTS) FIT INTO SUCH A LIMITED VIEWPOINT?! This is a similar view to what one of your more insightful astrophysicists—ostracized (as usual) by the conventional scientific community—has asserted on a much smaller scale about the complex beings you ones call comets: that these are not simply “dirty snowballs” as is conventionally believed.

Meanwhile the dark controllers on your planet are scrambling to hold onto the “kingdom” they have been building for so long now. In that quest they are utilizing every possible avenue of deception to create their favorite consumer control product: FEAR! And outer space is no exception.

Those of you who have been following a certain source of the “outer space object coming this way very soon” agitation may wish to now more closely examine how woven in FEAR have been the many doom-and-gloom pronouncements in that regard. Thoughtful examination of the information presented would show the telltale hallmarks of such a manipulation exercise: (1) throw some truth in the mix as a convincing hook, but (2) leave God out of the picture.

Dear ones, if it is the Will of God that such be done, do you not think we of God’s Host have the capability to literally move an entire planet to a new location in a universe?! So rest assured that ANY object which may come your way is by design for your growth in the Earth schoolroom—and not some careless or hostile or random act of chance.

[Editor’s note: Furthermore, picture what would happen to NASA’s credibility with the public, the press, and the not-bought-off amateur astronomers if NASA chose to make a public announcement about some object in space that’s, say, spotted as coming toward the Earth. And then a few weeks later it has changed course, perhaps radically—or worse yet, just plain disappeared. That’s a much bigger dilemma to try to explain away than just saying nothing to begin with. What is NASA supposed to do at that point? Certainly not admit The Truth that would negate their entire disinformation mission!]

And that brings us to matters of the heart. This is your “connection point” to your Higher Self, and also your “truth meter” for detecting all kinds of sophisticated manipulations that the desperate world controllers are throwing your way.

ALL of you were endowed by your Creator with exquisite inner perceptive abilities. These are the ones we have been encouraging you to develop through many past messages of this nature.

These inner perceptive abilities are going to become more and more important to you ones as your world seemingly appears more topsy-turvy to the physical sensing experience. These inner senses will become your source of orientation, balance, and “grounding” as you experience a stronger and stronger personal connection with the grand dimensional upshiftment that your entire solar system is experiencing at this time.

So we say to you again: Go within for your answers, and ask your questions with a pure and sincere desire of the heart. AND THEN LISTEN FOR THE ANSWER! For the call always compels the answer.

Let us end this here with the expectation that our discussion has been of some value. You who are honestly seeking answers through such as these messages are on a grand journey of discovery and expansion. Do not be concerned about those ones not yet ready to move past the comforts of the familiar, for at this time of Transition they, too, will be caused to grow in ways consistent with their seeming free-will choices actually rooted in fear.

I am Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec, speaking on behalf of many other Teachers and Wayshowers from what you would call the Higher Realms. I am of the Host of God and I leave you in His Infinite Light and Love.

You have much to think on and even more to feel hopeful about. There is nothing random about Creator’s Grand Design—except that which is perceived to be such due to lack of understanding.

You are now at the threshold of the doorway that leads to a grand exploration of both inner and outer space. Will you knock or turn away in fear? Salu.

“You both have something in common. Dr. Rudolph has discovered a particle which nobody has seen, and Prof. Higbe has discovered a galaxy which nobody has seen.”

Cancer Cure Since 1930s

Interview by Rick Martin

Notice you don't see news stories about the numbers of deaths and injuries by our medical establishment in their "practice" of medicine. That's a sacred cow as off-limits to media probing as are those incessant (but oh-so-lucrative) advertisements pushing drugs that, as they tell you more, sound downright lethal. If Hitler had done what American medicine is doing, it would have been called a holocaust.

And then there's the rising costs of our current medical system. But we're not JUST talking about money here. Sure, we're being robbed of more and more money at every turn in the road—from simple office visits to unnecessary procedures. But—as you'll see as this story unfolds—WE'RE LIKEWISE BEING ROBBED OF GOOD HEALTH AND, IN MANY CASES, OUR VERY LIVES! How do you calculate those costs?

Because so many people—millions and millions of them now—realize that something is terribly wrong, they're seeking alternatives. And that's bad news for the BUSINESS of conventional medicine.

When the sheep start to stray, the "Medical Mafia"—in one form or another—is called in to "restore order" by suppressing alternative (and especially superior) avenues to wellness which are derailing cash flow from the designated Big Business coffers and, higher up the ladder, upsetting the world control gang's depopulation agenda.

And who leads this assault restricting the health choices—and in a sense, overriding fundamental freedoms—of the American people? Enter the federal Food & Drug Administration (FDA), working in collusion with the American Medical Association (AMA) and the top (wealthiest, elite-owned) pharmaceutical companies.

The FDA—supposedly watching out for you and me—has abused its authority for decades, and has regularly made it a habit to walk all over the constitutional rights of those whom they choose to identify as a target for persecution (but not necessary prosecution, which could raise too much public awareness of their bullying tactics).

One of the KEY (but by no means the only) focal points for the FDA has been the perpetual suppression of Rife technologies—or what is generally referred to as "electro-medicine". And the FDA's usual technique for suppressing this amazing technology is simply to go in and confiscate all equipment and related business tools, thus effectively financially ruining many of the small businesses working to develop and promote this route to good health.

One confidential impeccable source tells The SPECTRUM that, since 1982, the FDA—"watching out" for us—has conducted over 12,500 raids on American citizens and businesses!

None dare call these government-sponsored FDA raids criminal grand-theft, and none dare call them terrorism. BUT THAT IS EXACTLY WHAT THEY ARE!

When there is no genuine Congressional oversight, the checks and balances built into our democratic republic by the Founding Fathers have been effectively shut-down, giving easily influenced alphabet agencies like the FDA an open invitation to carry out the wishes of behind-the-scenes controllers. And that's exactly where we find ourselves today.

Perhaps since Congressional oversight of that which directly affects we-the-people is OBVIOUSLY NOT WORKING, a Special Prosecutor or Special Council should be appointed. The only problem is: who would do the appointing? Certainly not the foxes already running the henhouse! Or perhaps it is up to the individual states to act as watchdogs over those federal agencies abusing the constitutional rights of citizens. Perhaps legal actions, class actions, by daring prosecutors would carry the message loud-and-clear as well.

(NOTE: This story constitutes an educational sharing of available information. It is not intended to represent a medical prescription, nor is it to be construed as giving medical advice. If you have a medical condition, consult your physician.)

For medical practitioners and scientists in the know, Rife technology is one of the most powerful and effective tools available for health and wellness. This is precisely why it represents such a threat to the longtime domination of the medical-pharmaceutical cartels, while emerging as a powerful alternative to the solutions offered by an antiquated medical system which is finally revealing itself to be in a full-blown crisis in the United States.

California Publicly Recognizes Alternative Healthcare

In a long overdue public recognition of the fact that millions are looking for a better approach to health and wellness, last year California passed legislation THAT SHOULD BE NOTED VERY CAREFULLY BY OTHER STATES. I am including this here because, as the FDA raids continue in the state of California, it opens up some potentially significant legal ramifications to be noted and perhaps utilized in defense actions.

In a press release from the California Health Freedom Coalition issued on September 23, 2002, we read: (OTHER STATES, PAY ATTENTION!)

Senate Bill 577 Signed Into Law
By Governor Davis!

We did it. With your help, the California legislature has now passed landmark health freedom legislation that guarantees health freedom not only for our state, but changes the health freedom climate nationwide.

California has passed landmark health freedom legislation—Senate Bill 577. In fact, the bill passed the legislature without a single “no” vote.

Today (9/23/02) Senate Bill 577 was signed into law by Governor Davis. As he said when he signed the bill, SB 577 “will ease access to alternative and complementary healthcare options for all Californians”. He also stated that “the bill provides adequate safeguards for California consumers and enables them to make an informed choice regarding their personal healthcare.”

SB 577, authored by Senate Pro Tem John Burton (D-San Francisco), provides that a person is not in violation of certain provisions of the Medical Practice Act (that prohibit the practice of medicine to anyone who is not a licensed physician) as long as that person does not engage in certain specified medical acts. It also requires specified disclosures to each client about practitioner training and method of treatment. Client receipt of disclosure materials must be acknowledged in writing.

The California Health Freedom Coalition (CHFC), sponsor of the bill, expects that SB 577 will change and improve the culture of healthcare in California by enhancing access to alternative forms of healthcare. Since the law also requires unlicensed alternative and complementary healthcare practitioners to provide basic information to consumers about themselves, their training, and their work, it also serves to enhance consumer safety.

SB 577 will become effective January 1, 2003.

In the first paragraph of the bill, the legislators recognized the fact that: “Based upon a comprehensive report by the National Institute of Medicine and other studies, including a study published by the New England Journal Of Medicine, it is evident that millions of Californians, perhaps more than five million, are presently receiving a substantial volume of healthcare services from complementary and alternative healthcare practitioners.”

Five million people represent A LOT OF MONEY to the medical establishment (and that’s just California). Is it any wonder that the FDA has stepped-up its attacks on such “alternative” approaches as the Rife electro-medicine device?

Will the FDA come forward and admit they’re a well-oiled front for the elite Big Business cartels dominating the medical and pharmaceutical industries? Not likely on their own. Not until we-the-people put more pressure on them to clean up their act. But their covert collusion with business doesn’t alter the historical facts. I will be sharing more on that subject later in this article.

In early April of this year, one such Rife wellness-device business in San Diego was raided by the FDA, and a lot of equipment was, as is their usual tactic, simply taken away. No charges, as yet, have been filed, but federal prosecution in that case is anticipated later this summer.

The FDA and federal prosecutors can expect a major fight on their hands. SPECTRUM readers have seen the advertisements for this particular Rife device within our pages, month after month. These are the kinds of devices that the FDA seized.

Before we examine the arrogant specifics of that FDA raid, we need to cover some background about who Royal R. Rife was and what he created that is so important to suppress.

The following superb article about Royal Rife and his amazing research comes to us from the British publication Everyday Practical Electronics for April 2001 (www.epemag.wimborne.co.uk). Portions of what you are about to read are necessarily technical in nature, but this fine article explains all the relevant background for understanding over 60 years of technology suppression, making it quite clear why the FDA is frantically trying to “keep the lid on” this cheap alternative to the lucrative status quo.

First here’s some introductory comments by the Editor of Everyday Practical Electronics in that April 2001 issue of their fine magazine:

Suppression

It’s not often that we carry an interesting story in EPE rather than a technical feature, project, or review, but this month our The End To All Disease supplement is just that. It’s quite a departure for us, but when you read it you will realise why we feel it is important to publish the full story, rather than simply skim the surface and give an experimental circuit.

The level of interest in this material, following our brief announcement last month, has been amazing, and once you are aware of the story, some research on the web will throw up many sites with information. We hope that by giving exposure to the original work of Rife it will encourage a more open-minded approach by those in the medical profession, and thus further research and development of this important area....

Let us hope that the work of Rife will be resurrected, and that substantial investment will be made in progressing this important area of medical research to the benefit of everyone. Unfortunately, for too long powerful organizations with vested interests have suppressed development and research in this area. It appears that, with the availability of information via the web, that is no longer so easy. /s/ Mike Kenward, Editor, EPE [end quoting]

Indeed, as the public becomes more and more disillusioned with conventional medical procedure, and savvy to superior alternatives, it's going to be hard to continue to maintain the current atmosphere of suppression.

With that said, let's plunge now into the following commendable report: [quoting]

The End To All Disease

by Aubrey Scoon

Can disease be cured electronically? Here's a story involving electronics, blackmail, intimidation, government conspiracies, arson, vandalism, theft, bribery, and murder!

Nobody can deny that today's doctors know more than ever about the nature and effects of disease, but as technology advances, many people are all too aware that the results often pose more questions than they answer. The fact is, the more we know, the more obvious it becomes that there is even more that we don't know.

The growing migration to "alternative" therapies underlines this all too well. Nowadays an increasing number of people are turning to all kinds of seemingly strange therapies where the deficiencies of traditional medicine are all too obvious.

One area that has seen a revival in recent years is electrotherapy—the idea that disease can be cured through the application of electric, magnetic, or electromagnetic fields. There are numerous weird and wonderful devices both on the market and in use today. Some are described in this article, but also, as will become clear, this is far from a new area and is simply a continuation of a trend that started in the late 1700s.

In the 18th century, static electricity was well known. Nobody knows who first proposed experiments to use it as therapy, but it was not uncommon for major medical schools in Europe to conduct electric experiments on patients, particularly the poorer ones. This continued well into the 19th century and became all the more prevalent following Faraday's publication of his discovery of electromagnetic induction.

Frankenstein's Lab

The early "therapies" in most cases were little more than applied electric shocks. Numerous interesting, novel, and in some cases hilarious ways were found to generate and apply electric potentials, both static and alternating, which were applied seemingly haphazardly to patients.

The results were unpredictable to say the least. Many experiments failed badly, and in some cases the "therapy" was more successful at removing the patient permanently than the disease. However, there was at the same time a growing body of evidence that indicated that some of these "quack" cures actually did seem to improve the condition of seriously ill patients who had not responded to the traditional treatments.

The discovery of radioactivity, X-rays, and Tesla coils only served to fuel this trend. There was a general perception that if something was mysterious, used hidden rays or energies, and involved high technology (or even big sparks) then, in true Frankenstein style, it had to be good. An attitude which is not entirely absent today. Hence it became almost common practice to expose patients to radiation, electric shocks, and magnetic fields.

In Figure 1 is shown a 19th century sketch of a Clarke Machine, a typical generator which would apply a strong voltage to anyone holding two rods, shown in the foreground. The operator would crank the machine while the patient held the rods. Ouch!

Mysterious Energy

Vendors of "mysterious energy" devices had a field day with these machines. They came up with more and more bizarre gadgets, belts that gave the wearer electric shocks to relieve back pain, weird Tesla and Oudin coil contraptions that bathed people in showers of high-frequency sparks, magnetic and electric jewelry, and so on. A simple Internet search will show that this kind of weirdness thrives as much today as it did then.

It was only a matter of time before it became obvious to anyone other than hard-core fanatics that these kinds of devices were at best useless and in most cases seriously dangerous. Amidst ever mounting calls for regulation, the medical establishment started to firmly entrench itself against this kind of quackery and eventually succeeded in slowing the sale and development of these devices. Unfortunately this was achieved more through suppression and intimidation rather than education.

New Age Or Old Age?

Although there was a steady background trade in electrotherapy devices that continued, most people were unaware of it; and it was only in the 1960s when "New Age" solutions to everything appeared that it took off again. Ironically, the "new" age material is far from new.

But the excesses of the late 19th and early 20th century had taken their toll. The medical establishment was now more vigilant than ever and ruthlessly determined to stamp out quackery. Unfortunately, this literal counter-reaction had the effect of reinforcing the idea that conventional medical techniques were the only ones worthy of consideration and that any mainstream qualified doctor knew better than anybody else, resulting in its own semi-fanatical mentality. And nobody can deny that many doctors today still show signs of this kind of attitude and are quick to condemn any alternative therapy that they know nothing about.

Suppression

The worst side effect of this attitude was the suppression of serious research into these therapies. While many serious theories of the time appear ridiculous in the light of present-day knowledge, at the time they deserved a better reception than they got. And, of course, the very real and compelling results obtained by many serious researchers were also ignored.

One or two of the old therapies have actually crept back into medical favor. But only after being introduced slowly and cautiously by conservative researchers who followed the proper protocols of placating the medical establishment.

What is more startling, however, and widely unknown, is that among all the snake oil and quackery of the old electrotherapies were a few gems that did not just seem to have a sound medical basis or benefit to them, but might potentially surpass the achievements of the best modern therapies in curing major diseases.

This article concentrates on one of them, a fascinating story about a potential cure for nearly all diseases that is a scientific detective story in itself, including, if it is to be believed, blackmail, intimidation, government conspiracies, arson, vandalism, theft, bribery and murder. It would make a great X-Files plot, but is truth really stranger than fiction?

A Quick Disclaimer

While I have tried to verify everything in this article that I can, the lack of objective material has meant that I have had to rely on second-hand sources for a lot of material. I have not personally witnessed some of the effects claimed and present them here solely as a matter of interest.

Royal Raymond Rife

Our story starts with a man called Royal Raymond Rife, pictured in Figure 2. Rife was not the first to experiment in this field, but his alleged results remain the most intriguing.

His history is sketchy at best, and is mainly reconstructed from his own notes, newspaper reports, and anecdotes of his associates. Rife was born on 16 May 1888 in Elkhorn, Nebraska, U.S.A. No records remain of his early history (as far as I am aware) but his work became widely known around 1929.

In 1913 Rife was in Germany and was awarded an honorary Ph.D. by the University of Heidelberg. During the course of the next seven years he supposedly spent further time in Europe performing work for the U.S. Government, and during this period he worked for a time for the Zeiss optical company. It is claimed that he was trained by Carl Zeiss himself. He later became famous for his development of advanced optical microscopes. By 1920, he ended up living in San Diego, California.

From his own lectures, Rife says that around 1920 he first became interested in the biological effects of electromagnetic fields and their possible therapeutic effect, and from that point developed the microscopes to observe the effects of electric phenomena on bacteria. Rife had certainly been influenced by earlier theories and machines. However, the microscopes were the key to his later research and so make a good starting point.

The Microscopes

Rife was determined to develop an optical microscope with unprecedented magnification and resolution. He proceeded to look at the problems associated with high-magnification microscopy from a unique angle. There are quite a few problems associated with building a high-resolution microscope, one of the most important being the light itself.

Purely theoretical work of the time indicated that optical resolutions beyond about 20,000 times were impossible because of limitations imposed by the wavelengths of the light itself and effects such as diffraction. Also, the amount of light that could be focused into an objective at high magnification was limited; that is, the area being looked at is so small, there isn't much room for the light to get in.

Vibration was another problem. Even modern electron microscopes suffer badly under ambient vibrations, because an otherwise imperceptible movement becomes all too obvious at high magnification, as anyone who has used a modern zoom camera lens will know. Finally, there is the question of how one is to stain the specimen to make it visible.

To expand on that last point, it is usually necessary to apply some sort of stain to any (optical) microscopical specimen because many microscopic cells, etc., are basically transparent at high magnifications, and very little detail can be seen. A stain, however, is just a chemical dye of some sort, and unfortunately, since its uptake cannot be precisely controlled, the stain may not properly penetrate the specimen and may even collect in clumps. So under a high enough magnification, the stain itself appears as a series of lumps or spots that do not reveal anything much about the specimen. Furthermore, the stain itself, being a chemical, may kill the organism under study.

Polarization

Rife decided therefore that he had to dispense with the stain. But how can one see the specimen without a stain? The first obvious answer lay in polarized light.

The theory of polarization is quite simple. Light is an electromagnetic wave, it consists of an oscillating electric field in one plane, with a corresponding oscillating magnetic field in another plane at right angles to the first.

Normal light consists of a mixture of such waves all traveling with their electric and magnetic fields oriented at arbitrary angles relative to each other. Polarized light, on the other hand, is light in which all the waves have their electric field in the same plane and their magnetic field (at right angles to the electric field) also in the same plane.

Fortunately, polarized light (or any electromagnetic wave) is easy to produce. All you need is some sort of fine grating in which the spacing of the rails is less than the wavelength of the light itself. The waves that have their electric fields lined up with the spaces of the grating pass through, while the ones with their electric fields at an angle are blocked by the grating in proportion to the angle; so at 90° all light is blocked. This is the principle of polarizing film and sunglasses, which are simply fine gratings of this type.

Polarized light is useful because, if you pass it into a compound or specimen, chemicals, stresses, or density changes in the specimen itself cause the rotation of the incident plane of polarization. By comparing the variably rotated output from the specimen with a fixed polarizing filter, different rotations appear as different shades, and in this way you can see the density changes, stresses, or different chemical structures as shades of light.

Incidentally, this technique has been used for many years to identify specific chemical compounds and is the basis of the designations given to amino acids and complex organic molecules; that is, when you see something like L-arginine or D-tryptophan (both amino acids), the L and the D refer to Levo-rotatory and Dextro-rotatory respectively, polarizing molecules that twist light to the left (levo) or right (dextro).

Fluorescence

Rife took the reasoning still further. Not only did he decide to use polarized light, but he also wanted to avoid the limitations of backlighting a tiny object. It was much better if the object could be made to fluoresce in its own light or reflect the incident light. Most biological specimens would fluoresce or reflect, but only in ultraviolet (UV) or other invisible light ranges. And this depends on their chemical structure.

So he hit upon the idea of illuminating the object with two polarized beams of monochromatic light in the UV range that would heterodyne each other and the result of which would be fluorescence or reflection in a visible range. It would be the differences in the wavelengths of two or more illuminating sources that would determine the output.

[Editor's note: Actually, the heterodyning process mentioned above—which simply means bringing the two different frequencies or wavelengths together to interact—produces a sum and a difference component as well as the two original interacting light frequencies or wavelengths. So for you more technical readers, it should be noted that an important key to the Rife microscope's amazing operation is likely due to the heterodyning interaction of the light, but that key is not recognized in the above explanation.]

By means of a complex set of polarizers and rotating prisms, Rife developed a way of making any biological sample fluoresce in such a way that its internal structure was clearly visible. He didn't need a stain; the light itself became the stain. So in this way one type of bacteria, for example, would appear a specific shade of blue, another red, and so on. The actual color of the resulting "light stain" itself gave a lot of information about the chemical structure of the specimen under study and the polarization helped distinguish fine structural differences.

After a lot of development work, around 1929 Rife finally produced a prototype of what was later to become known as the Universal Microscope which used the above principle. Not much is known about the early prototypes but they reportedly succeeded in producing unprecedented magnifications, supposedly up to 60,000 times in some cases. This kind of magnification is comparable to a modern-day electron microscope. The photograph in Figure 3 is of one of the later Universal Microscopes and shows just how complex these instruments were.

These optical microscopes had one major advantage over the modern electron microscopes. They allowed the study of live specimens. An electron microscope operates in a high-vacuum chamber and bombards the specimen with high-energy electrons; not much can survive that!

Beam Ray Machine

Now that Rife could clearly see bacteria and cells, using his microscope, he began experiments in which he exposed the samples to various electric and magnetic fields. He then discovered that he could make bacteria and single-celled organisms react to the fields.

Curiously, static fields had little obvious effect, but alternating or pulsed fields caused dramatic changes, depending on the frequency he applied. Each different type of bacteria, etc., appeared to respond to one specific frequency, and in particular, that frequency ultimately caused the destruction of the organism.

The effect, which modern researchers have duplicated, is very interesting. Supposedly, as you approach the critical frequency of a bacterium, for example, it appears under the microscope to have what might be best described as a "seizure". The bacterium changes shape or becomes agitated. A typical example (reported by a modern researcher) is where a rod-like bacterium "seizes" into a "C" shape as the critical frequency is approached.

The frequency range of the effect varies with the specimen and the intensity of the field seems to become pronounced within five or six Hertz of the critical frequency. If you give the specimen a short burst of electromagnetic energy near the critical frequency it seizes and then usually recovers after a few seconds. If, however, you proceed to expose it to the critical frequency, it literally explodes.

[Editor's note: While the above explanation is vague about how the various electromagnetic fields are applied to the specimen, we can probably assume the procedure was the same for all the samples.]

Selective Destruction

Rife repeated his experiments with thousands of samples and reproduced the same effect every time. What was even more interesting, however, was that he was unable to find any frequency that would cause human (or other mammalian) tissue cells to explode in the same way.

The implications were profound. He had seemingly found a way to selectively destroy bacteria and other pathogens without damaging human cells. If this method could be applied to a live human patient, he could potentially eliminate a specific species of invading bacteria, and thereby cure whatever disease that bacterium caused in the patient.

His first task was to catalog the critical frequencies that destroyed specific bacteria. He reasoned that the effect worked through simple resonance and that the bacteria were shattered by a specific frequency much like a wineglass when it is exposed to a specific high-pitched sound. So he started compiling a list of what he called the Mortal Oscillatory Rates of specific pathogens (MORs for short).

Modulated Emissions

At the same time he wanted to refine his equipment to produce the requisite electromagnetic fields. He commissioned engineers to build a device that would emit a field he could tune. He was convinced that light was an important factor and so he wanted the tuneable device to produce light as well as other forms of radiation.

The development of the device unfortunately is not documented. But the result was that the engineers ended up with an X-ray tube which was filled with low pressure helium gas (a normal X-ray tube has a vacuum) driven by a powerful radio frequency transmitter that caused the gas to ionize and conduct current. The MOR was then created by quenching the carrier at a lower modulating frequency. So the original MORs actually consisted of two parameters: a carrier frequency (C) and a modulating frequency (M).

[Editor's note: Again keep in mind that this is a heterodyning process and results in not just the two frequencies above, but also a sum ($C + M$) and difference ($C - M$) frequency, which may or may not contribute to whatever effect is observed in the specimen.]

The end product became known as the Rife Beam-Ray Device. It allowed Rife to expand upon his experiments.

Rife started conducting lab tests using live animals. Most of his notes were later destroyed and very few remain. But he clearly documented that he was able to apparently cure the animals of specific infections with only short exposures to the Beam-Ray Device.

We may never know exactly how many experiments he performed, or all of what he found, due to the destruction of his notes. But his associates later told of literally tens of thousands of experiments he performed and that he became obsessed with his work, spending days at a time without sleep, tuning the device and cataloging effects. His surviving research papers also show evidence of meticulous work.

A Cure For Cancer?

Rife became obsessed with the idea of curing cancer. He found from his experiments that cancerous tumors in animals shrank and even disappeared at certain frequencies. But his observations showed that the tumor cells did not explode like the bacteria. Something was killing the tumor cells, but in a different way.

He then turned his attention to viruses. At that time little was known about viruses. The word virus itself is derived from one of their properties: "filter passing". A virus by definition was some infective agent that was so small that it could pass through a filter that would block bacteria and other pathogens.

After thousands of further experiments, Rife finally announced that he had isolated the "filter-passing form" of an infective agent that would reliably induce cancer in any animal it was injected into. His conclusion was simple: cancer is caused by a virus and the machine could destroy viruses as effectively as bacteria; ergo, he could cure cancer.

At this point it is worth mentioning that although Rife isolated the cancer pathogen, there were other researchers in the 1920s, notably Thomas Glover and M. J. Scott, who had also done so, and probably earlier than Rife—although Rife was probably the first to actually SEE the agent with his super microscopes.

In the light of this revelation the tumor cell results became clear: The machine did not directly kill tumor cells. It killed the virus that was infecting the tumor cell, and when the virus died, it decomposed into a mixture of chemical poisons that effectively poisoned and killed the host cell. The dead tumor cells were subsequently reabsorbed and digested by the host animal's immune system.

Intermediate Side-Effects

There was a further implication to this. Rife had noted that when he “cured” animals of various infective agents, they often became more ill for a short time after exposure to the Beam Ray, but rapidly recovered. He reasoned that the destruction of the infective pathogens always released poisons (which were normally inside the infecting organism) into the animal's body and blood stream, and that the illness was caused by the effect of these poisons.

Since these poisons are often the very same chemicals that are responsible for the symptoms of a particular illness in the first place, it was therefore not unusual to see a worsening of symptoms, after exposure, that rapidly improved as the body disposed of the toxins. This effect is well known in medicine today; it is known as the Jarisch-Herxheimer reaction, and it was originally recorded in the antibiotic treatment of syphilis.

Ultimately, Rife succeeded in identifying two different viral agents that caused cancers—one that caused carcinomas (cancers of covering and lining membranes), and one that caused sarcomas (cancers in bone, connective tissue, or muscle). He called these two agents the BX and the BY cancer viruses respectively.

Pleomorphism

Rife also found direct evidence of pleomorphism. Ever since the theory was proposed by Antoine Béchamp (the forerunner of Pasteur and probably the true discoverer of microbial infection) in the 19th century, it had been the subject of much controversy. To put it simplistically, it stated that every pathogen had multiple developmental cycles with different forms in each cycle; for example, a simple bacterium can organism with a specific chemical balance that made it revert to viral form. While discredited at the time, modern researchers are finding increasing evidence that supports the theory of pleomorphism.

It is certainly accepted today that some cancers are caused by viral agents, a theory that was resisted in the 1920s. The “discoverer” of the first officially recognized cancer virus in the late 1940s, Virginia Livingston, had worked with Rife and already knew of his results, as well as those of Glover and Scott. As far as I know, she gave some credit to “Glover's theory”—but Rife is never mentioned.

The End To All Disease

During this time Rife had periodically released information to the press about his work. He had described and demonstrated his microscopes several times and had received enthusiastic reviews from doctors and researchers who had been allowed to use them. On 3 November 1929 his work was featured on the front page of the San Diego Union newspaper, as an article about his microscopes.

Numerous other articles followed around this time, including at least two articles in the Los Angeles Times. He had also mentioned his work on electromagnetic effects and that he hoped one day to be able to cure diseases like cancer, although it is clear that most of the reporters didn't understand the implications of what he was saying.

By 1931, Rife had announced his results to various doctors and university medical departments. He was visited by a stream of eminent doctors and researchers, most of whom enthusiastically endorsed his work.

One of Rife's supporters was Dr. Millbank Johnson, president of the Southern California branch of the American Medical Association and one of the board of directors of Pasadena Hospital. Another was Dr. Arthur Kendall, Director of Medical Research at Northwestern Medical School in Illinois.

On 20 November 1931, Johnson arranged a banquet for Rife at his estate in Pasadena, California, which was attended by 44 of the most eminent transform itself literally into a viral equivalent (or vice versa).

Rife insisted that he had observed that each bacterial pathogen had a corresponding viral form, and, depending on the mixture of proteins that the bacterium digested, it could transform reversibly into its viral form and back to bacterial form. He mentioned this in various research papers, and concluded that there were only about 10 different classes of pathogens that were responsible for nearly all diseases, and even that it was possible for any pathogen in one class to transform into another pathogen of the same class.

For example, Rife believed that E. Coli, a common bacterium found in most water supplies, was the bacterial form of one cancer virus. It would only produce cancer-causing effects in a weakened

From this point on the story takes a twist. Many incidents referred to are documented and historically verifiable, but are the subject of great controversy. Also, the chronology is occasionally confused.

In early 1934, Johnson rented premises in San Diego for Rife to begin clinical treatments. Under his instructions, the University of Southern California arranged formal clinical trials of the Rife Beam-Ray device. They appointed a special committee of top doctors to oversee the project including, apart from Johnson and Kendall: Dr. Rufus Klein-Schmidt (President, University of Southern California), Dr. Edward Kopps (Metabolic Clinic, La Jolla, California), Dr. George Fisher (Children's Hospital, NY), Dr. Karl Meyer (Hooper Foundation, San Francisco, California), Dr. Whalen Morrison (Chief Surgeon, Santa Fe Railway), Dr. George Dock, and Dr. Alvin G. Foord, a pathologist.

Initial daily treatments were suspended due to extreme Jarisch-Herxheimer reactions. At the end of three months, however, all the patients were still alive and were examined.

Rife reasoned that maybe they were infected with a mutated form of the cancer virus and made some slight frequency adjustments. Four weeks later the remaining two patients were examined and also pronounced clinically cured. The results were stunning; it was a major breakthrough.

Johnson then introduced Rife to Dr. Mildred Schram of the International Cancer Foundation in Philadelphia. However, on hearing of the work, Schram allegedly made demands for experiments that Rife insisted would not and could not work. Following much argument, he eventually refused to have anything further to do with the foundation. Schram supposedly admitted, years later, that Rife had been right.

In 1937, the medical committee who oversaw the clinical trials ended up arguing over when and how they should release the results, with no actual decision ever being reached. By now they had plenty of evidence to support Rife's claims, but they found themselves pressured by the medical authorities and feared that they would not be believed.

During this time, a new player emerged. Dr. Morris Fishbein was editor of the Journal Of The American Medical Association between 1924 and 1949. However, Fishbein was a very rich and powerful man who, by that time, owned all the stock of the AMA and had extremely powerful political connections.

[Editor's note: Readers not already aware of Fishbein's nefarious background should read Eustace Mullins' superb classic research volume Murder By Injection. And if you happen to have your back issues of The SPECTRUM handy, review the excerpt in the July 2002 issue. If that alone doesn't raise your blood pressure, then check your pulse.]

Fishbein approached Rife with an offer to buy the exclusive rights to the Beam-Ray technology. Rife refused.

The details of the offer are unknown but Fishbein had made similar offers to other inventors of medical technologies claimed to cure cancer. In one case Fishbein made an offer to the creator, Harry Hoxey, of an herbal cancer cure in which Fishbein would receive all profits from the invention for nine years, and thereafter, at Fishbein's discretion, he would pay 10% of future profits to Hoxey. When Hoxey refused, Fishbein effectively destroyed him. Hoxey was allegedly arrested 125 times in 16 months at Fishbein's instigation. The charges never stuck, but Hoxey was ruined.

Fishbein then did the same to Rife. AMA officials started visiting doctors who were using Rife's machines and informed them they would be struck from the medical register if they did not stop immediately. Many gave in and honesty rather than fear and greed?]

Beam-Ray Corporation

By this time, Rife had established his own company to market the device. The corporation became known as Beam Rays Inc. However, in 1939, an engineer called Philip Hoyland, an employee of the company, brought a lawsuit against Beam Rays Inc., claiming that he, and not Rife, had invented the machine, and that he had developed the initial theory that was now claimed by Rife—despite the fact that he had only joined Rife around 1937 and Rife had published details long before that.

Another factor that emerged at this time was that there was some difference between Rife's original machine and newer Hoyland variants that the company had been shipping. Rife's original machine created the MOR frequency using a variable carrier wave which was then modulated with a super-regeneration wave at other frequencies (ranges of 15 kHz to 11 MHz appear in Rife's lab notes). Table 1 gives carrier frequencies in kilohertz and super regeneration wavelengths in meters, compiled from his original lab notes.

The MOR frequencies studied by Rife were mostly in the hundreds of kilohertz to megahertz range. The details of the difference between the original Rife and Hoyland machines are unclear, but Rife complains in a letter of 14 May 1939 to Dr. Gonin, head of the London School of Tropical Medicine, about Hoyland's machines:

"I spoke only Friday evening to a Mr. John Chanblin, a radio man now connected with Beam Rays Inc., about the redesign and building of a device according to the old original Rife Ray principles, as the present instrument has been so deviated away from that old principle that it is nowhere near the same.

"I know nothing about the experimental machines you have, as I was never even asked to see them or to pass on them in any way before they were shipped to you. But Henry stated in one of his last letters that he had tried one of them on a culture of his bacteria and it had failed to do the work. I would consider from that, that those devices which you have are merely working on a harmonic and not a true frequency; and in our research on electronics, we definitely know that there is no possible surrendered the machines to AMA investigators or allowed the machines to be destroyed. Others held out and refused. Many were arrested or had equipment and notes seized and destroyed by Food and Drug Administration (FDA) agents.

Fishbein refused to allow publication of any reference to Rife's work in the AMA journals, and also supposedly pressured other medical journals insisting that they should not publish anything about Rife's work because it was all a fraud. A number of doctors actively opposed this, including Johnson. But many of the doctors who had attended Johnson's banquet for Rife in 1931, fearing the loss of their medical licenses, started denying that they had ever heard of Rife, even though many had been photographed with him at the banquet.

[Editor's note: Here we see a perfect example of how, through many small steps such as these, we've lost so many of our basic freedoms. Can you imagine how different the medical world would be right now if the doctors who knew better had banded together in a unified front on the side of decency and

way of controlling electrical harmonics of a frequency.”

Nobody knows why Hoyland started a lawsuit he couldn't possibly win, or why he produced non-working Rife machine variants, except that it is alleged that Hoyland's legal costs were funded by the owner of a major pharmaceutical company. Rife's invention was potentially lethal to the multi-billion-dollar pharmaceutical industry.

Rife eventually won the lawsuit, but the costs bankrupted Beam Rays Inc., putting it out of business. And Rife's reputation had been damaged by inferior machines that had been shipped out by Hoyland, using Rife's name. After this, Rife started drinking heavily, and became depressed and discouraged.

Vandalism And Arson

Around this same time Rife's laboratory was subject to a spate of thefts, his microscopes vandalized, and finally, his laboratory was burned to the ground (and most of his notes destroyed) in an arson attack. Nobody was ever caught or prosecuted for it.

Another doctor, a Dr. Nemes, who had set up an independent laboratory and confirmed some of Rife's results, was killed in a laboratory fire and all his notes and research lost. A third laboratory working on confirming Rife's work, the Burnett Laboratory, also mysteriously caught fire and burned to the ground, with all research destroyed.

In 1940, two other doctors who had supported Rife, Cooperson and Clayton, were raided by Federal officers who confiscated their equipment and notes. Later, each was found dead, supposedly having committed suicide by poison.

[Editor's note: This leads one to contemplate which was more effective in furthering the New World Order gang's ongoing depopulation agenda—this blatant suppression of a truly health-giving technology, or what the same crooks were about to engineer, called Pearl Harbor, to “convince” a naïve American public that millions needed to die in yet another contrived world war.]

In 1944, Johnson arranged a press conference and let it slip that he would announce publicly the clinical results and that the cure for cancer had been found. There are allegations that Johnson had already been approached by “representatives of the pharmaceutical industry” who offered him money to suppress information about Rife's work. Supposedly he refused. He had also certainly been pressured by Fishbein.

The night before the press conference, however, Johnson died suddenly and mysteriously and all his notes were pronounced as “lost” by the executors of his estate. His death was recorded as “accidental death” although I have no details. There are claims that his body was later exhumed by FBI investigators who concluded that he had been murdered by poison.

Dr. Arthur Kendall, one of Rife's most prestigious and influential supporters, suddenly accepted an unprecedented pension of $250,000 to retire to Mexico, and effectively disappeared from the scene. George Dock, another of Rife's clinical team, and also highly respected and influential, also took a huge and unprecedented gratuity to retire early.

Many of Rife's supporters were convinced this was the work of drug companies who were anxious to suppress a technology that would make virtually all drug treatments obsolete.

Rife was hounded by the FDA and the AMA. He was unable to practice without official intervention, and continued a steady decline into alcoholism. This didn't stop him, however, trying to continue his research. In the early 1950s Rife teamed up with a man called John Crane, under the auspices of a new company (owned by Crane) called Life Labs, Inc.

Life Labs, Inc.

Here the record becomes confused again. Crane worked on the development of several new machines. One in particular was quite different; it used a pad which had to be placed in contact with the body. Crane claimed that he and Rife had developed the machine together, and Rife was certainly associated with the company because he wrote letters on its behalf. But apart from Crane's statement there is no direct evidence to suggest that Rife developed or endorsed the pad machine. Because of this there is some confusion as to what constitutes a real “Rife machine” because some people (particularly those selling such devices) claim the former and others the latter.

Users claim both are effective, but the original plasma device has the advantage that it can be used to treat the whole body, or even several bodies at once, since it has an effective operating radius of around 20 to 30 feet, depending on power level, and does not require any body contact.

Modern researchers who made contact with Crane studied circuit diagrams that Crane gave them and concluded that not only could the circuits not work as they were, but Crane did not seem to know very much about electronics. However, some of the circuits did work with minor modifications, indicating that Crane had probably taken the diagrams from prototype notes of other engineers who had worked for him.

Crane's involvement led to a second source of confusion. Crane published lists of MOR frequencies which were all in the low audio range. Clearly there was a big difference between Crane's frequencies and Rife's.

A popular list of frequencies (Table 2) which was obtained from Dr. Robert P. Stafford M.D., who is claimed to have used a “Rife machine” (probably a “Crane machine”) for clinical trials between 1957 and 1963 and which is often advertised as Rife's original frequency list, is in fact a copy of a document he received from Crane.

Interestingly, these frequencies have been claimed to be effective for Rife-type plasma machines by modern researchers, but they are obviously not Rife's original frequencies.

[Editor's note: From a technical point of view, confusion is unavoidable here because most (if not all) of the researchers likely were unaware that a multiplicity of electromagnetic healing modalities were at work.]

A simple analogy would be that a researcher gives some patients a glass of "elixir" every day at noon while they're sitting out on a patio. The people get better, so the researcher ascribes success to the elixir—completely unaware that sitting out in the sunlight was a crucial component (if not the major component) to the recovery.]

In 1971 Rife was admitted to the hospital. Details are unclear, but I've seen accounts that attributed it either to a car accident or an alcoholic binge. Either way, it is reported that he died following accidental injection of a massive overdose of Valium.

The Lost Technology

Following his death, Rife's work was forgotten. Most of his original notes had been lost in the fires and/or supposedly destroyed by AMA/FDA agents. But some of his associates remained alive, particularly Crane, who wrote a book about the work (supposedly very long-winded and not very technically accurate according to those who have read it).

Crane was arrested numerous times for promoting Rife's work, and spent three years in prison for it. And there were still a few old doctors who claimed to have been successfully using the device for treatments (mostly in secret) over the years, and still had working machines.

Even Rife's microscopes were forgotten, except for odd articles of historic interest. For example, a 1944 report from the board of the Smithsonian Museum stated basically that the microscope worked and that Rife's results had been validated. The author, Dr. Raymond Seidel, reportedly survived a subsequent assassination attempt in 1945, after which he refused to mention Rife ever again.

An original Rife microscope (which, however, had probably been tampered with by Hoyland) resides today in the Science Museum in London, unfortunately broken and not on display. The microscope was formerly used at the London School of Tropical Medicine, but following a dispute between Dr. Gonin, the British doctor who used it, and Beam Rays Inc. (probably Hoyland), the machine was supposedly smashed by a mysterious man who arrived from America. It was later donated to the Science Museum by Dr. Gonin's family after his death.

Even the newspaper reports were hard to come by. Some of the newspapers told researchers that they had lost the specific editions with reports of Rife's work. (Note: only those editions!) Luckily there were people who did still have copies.

Modern Revival

The whole matter was revived suddenly around 1986. As far as I know, the recent efforts appeared after a book about Rife called The Cancer Cure That Worked was written by an author called Barry Lynes.

[Editor's note: According to the book cover, it was "written by Barry Lynes with John Crane". Barry also has a new (2002) book called The Cancer Conspiracy: Betrayal, Collusion, And The Suppression Of Alternative Cancer Treatments. There's a lot of related information at his barrylynes.com website.]

Whatever the cause, several modern researchers tried to build duplicates of the original Beam-Ray devices. Most of them succeeding in producing allegedly bioactive machines, but none of them were truly original.

Eventually these modern researchers managed to make contact with the few surviving doctors who had worked with Rife and his machine, and slowly the details began to emerge.

Although Rife had used a variable carrier wave in his original prototype machine, later models of the machine used by other doctors used fixed carriers with amplitude modulation. It is not known whether these machines were Rife's, Hoyland's, or Crane's.

The modulation was a square-wave pulse with fast rise-time. Calibration and measurement of dial settings on the old machines revealed that the active frequencies of modulation were all in the low audio range, corresponding to the lists published by Crane.

One explanation of the discrepancy between Rife's original notes and the derived frequencies may be explained in terms of harmonics. The higher harmonics of a square wave pulse represent odd multiples of the fundamental frequency (Fourier's theorem) and so the square wave produces a range of different (higher) frequencies for any given fundamental frequency.

[Editor's note: For you more technical readers, the above is partially correct and illustrates the confusion, noted earlier, that's so easily generated over this subject. And the shorter the pulse, the more complete is the array of other frequencies produced in addition to the fundamental (pulsing) frequency.]

However, let's not get lost in details, and keep in mind that Rife was identifying mortal frequencies by subjecting his specimens to electromagnetic energies in a very particular beam pattern, and he did this WHILE watching the reaction on the specimen DIRECTLY through his special microscope. You can't do any more elegant "real-time" experiments than that! And it's questionable how many later researchers arrived at their mortal frequencies in so exact a manner.]

Another theory is that the

microorganisms have more than one mortal frequency. There is some support for the latter idea in letters written by Johnson which indicate that, at one stage, he and Rife stumbled onto a "super-frequency" which would kill almost any microorganism. Unfortunately, this frequency was never recorded.

The modern researchers took various approaches to reproducing the machine. Some used old X-ray tubes filled with low-pressure helium or argon, others had tubes made, and some even made them themselves.

Bare Machine

One of the most popular recent incarnations of the Rife machine was developed by a Dr. James Bare. Bare took a minimalist approach to the problem and modified a CB transmitter and power amplifier to increase the bandwidth and to drive the tube at a carrier frequency around 27 MHz. Using the audio input of the transmitter to introduce the modulating pulses, he then proceeded to perform experiments to verify Rife's work.

I don't know exactly which experiments he did (I haven't read his book), but he claims that the device worked just as Rife described and he has had photomicrographs taken which allegedly show the device destroying single-celled organisms like Blepharisma. You can download a Windows AVI video file showing the process via the Internet (address at the end of the article). Bare also sells videos of other experiments.

The book of Lynes, and the work of Bare and others, caused a virtual explosion of activity in this field. Today, it is estimated that nearly 5000 people have Rife machines (or at least modern equivalents) in active use, and an enormous amount of anecdotal data has been compiled through amateur efforts to cure specific diseases. Although many of the anecdotes are purely subjective, a great many claim to have been verified by doctors, and some contain considerable clinical detail.

It is not unusual to see comments in which users have stated definite biometric measurements of their own diseases, both before and after treatment with the device. One thing is overwhelmingly clear: a large number of people are convinced that the devices work. Fantastic as it may seem, many people claim to have experienced improvements in cases of the most dire diseases, such as cancer and even AIDS.

THE CANCER CONSPIRACY BY BARRY LYNES

Few people are aware of the deep criminal activities by organized medicine, top university medical researchers, drug companies, and high-ranking government "health" officials which perpetuated the crisis that gave birth to the grassroots demands for choice in healthcare. In his latest book, Cancer Conspiracy, world reknown Rife Energy Medicine researcher Barry Lynes describes in great detail the atrocious actions by those in power and the unapproved remedies and cures developed by Rife that have been suppressed for decades. It's time to learn the truth.

Available at: www.barrylynes.com

What is even more interesting is the number of people who have reported relief from the symptoms of diseases that are not known to have any viral or bacterial component, or the cause of which is still officially unknown. The devices have also allegedly been widely and successfully employed in veterinary practice as well, implying that the results are not simply due to the placebo effect.

Frequency Lists

As a result of all these efforts, there now exist a number of frequency lists (all freely available on the Internet) which give specific treatment frequencies for just about every disease imaginable. Others are classified by the micro-organism species.

Another interesting point worthy of note is that while Rife's original work only concentrated on MORs for bacteria and viruses (though he knew it affected yeasts, etc., as well), the modern researchers claim to have found MORs for yeasts and molds, various protozoa-like amoebas, worms, and parasites like flukes, and even some insects.

The consensus seems to be that low frequencies are deadly to simple organisms. The more complex organisms like mammals (at first sight, see comments later) seem to be immune to these frequencies.

Side-Effects

Advocates of the machine are very keen to point out that there do not appear to be any negative side-effects (apart from the inevitable Jarisch-Herxheimer reactions), and so far nobody claims to have identified any bad or dangerous frequencies. My own feeling is that this is not strictly true and there is ample evidence of possibly bad frequencies. However, to someone dying of a terminal cancer, the risk is worth the potential reward.

How It Works

By now you are no doubt longing to know how it works. The answer is that nobody knows for certain—although there are many clues to be found in modern research into the effects of electric and magnetic fields on biological systems. Unfortunately, this whole area of research still appears to be vehemently opposed by the mainstream medical establishment, and very little (compared to other fields of medical research) serious and rigorous research is being done.

At first sight it appears that the electromagnetic waves emitted by the plasma tube of the device are inducing fields or currents into body cells. However, many researchers are quick to point out that putting the device inside a Faraday Cage (which will block all electromagnetic waves) does not impair its effectiveness. Nor will a simple aerial produce the same effect.

Plasma Waves?

Some have speculated that the light from the tube is involved, but once again the device appears to work well with covered tubes. I have seen various theories that claim the existence of a mysterious new type of energy, called a plasma wave, but my personal feeling is that this is too fanciful and there is a simpler explanation.

[Editor's note: The physics of Rife devices operates as much in the etheric as in the physical domain. This is what leads to so much of the present confusion because, figuratively speaking, ones are trying to deal with a three-dimensional object in flat, two-dimensional terms (of conventional science). Those who are familiar with Nikola Tesla's poorly (if at all) understood early 1900s research, involving the astonishing effects of very short pulses of electricity, may realize the important parallels to Rife's work.]

Patented HIV Cure

At this point I would like to digress to look at some other machines of a similar nature that may throw some more light on the puzzle before returning to the question of what is actually happening.

On 14 March 1991, two researchers, William Lyman and Steven Kaali, at the Albert Einstein School of Medicine, announced to the First International Symposium On Combination Therapies that they had found they were able to inactivate the HIV virus in blood samples by passing a tiny electric current (less than 100 microamps) through the blood itself. A similar paper was published around the same time by a team in Japan.

The interesting thing here was that they didn't kill the virus; they just made it inert.

The virus reportedly was unable to penetrate and infect body cells after exposure. Either way, the result was more or less the same; it provided a clue to a potential cure.

The Einstein team were quick to file a patent (U.S. Patent 5,139,684) in which they described a hypothetical device which could be connected to the patient's circulatory system, and in which the blood would pass through a set of electrodes which would in turn pass a current through the blood, the "deactivated" blood being returned to the patient's body. Other researchers were also quick to confirm that the effect wasn't just limited to HIV; it worked just as well with other bacteria and viruses.

New-Age Devices?

This led to more amateur experimentation. A host of "new" machines emerged from various experimenters. I qualify the word "new" because all of them are just modern rehashes of the old 19th century electrotherapy machines. They basically fall into two main classes: those that pass a low-voltage alternating current through the body (ideally across some major artery) and supposedly purify the blood according to the Lyman/Kaali principle, and others that produce intense magnetic field pulses.

People who claimed to have tried these devices for the most part reported that they provided an amazingly rapid relief from symptoms. Of further interest was the fact that many people reported a consequent Jarisch-Herxheimer reaction. To put it simply, if you kill enough

The healing power of gentle currents of electricity was known in ancient Rome (electric fish) and was used extensively in spas and clinics before The Medical Health Model was established. Snake-Oil And Snake-Bites Vendors claim that these machines (which typically produce about 28 volts peak-to-peak a.c. square waves across the skin for the electric machines), and magnetic pulsers which work by discharging capacitors charged up to a few kilovolts into a magnetic coil, have no deleterious side-effects and are completely safe to use.

I am personally skeptical about most of the claims made for these devices and very much so about the safety of some of them. I believe that they do provide some of the symptomatic relief that they claim and not simply through a placebo effect. However, the long-term effect of using these machines has never been properly studied.

Some of these devices are supposed to be frequency dependent, others not. But as far as I can tell, the Rife machine still remains the clear winner.

None of these devices have been accepted by the mainstream medical establishment. However, many hospitals today use pulsed magnetic field therapy to speed up the healing of broken bones. This highlights the hypocrisy of some medical people who on one hand declare that there is no possible benefit to these kinds of therapies, yet happily use them to heal fractures.

[Editor's note: This author's skepticism of the efficacy of the electric-field and magnetic-field pulsers likely stems from a lack of familiarity with the sizeable body of medical research reporting sometimes astonishing findings utilizing electric currents and magnetic fields to assist healing. The clues are all over that literature—and thus make the hypocrisy noted above all the more glaring!]

As an interesting aside, there is a modern item of "bush-lore" widely accepted and used by travelers in certain parts of the world, and even endorsed by many doctors, that an excellent therapy for venomous snake bites is to apply a strong electric shock to the site of the bite, which apparently somehow neutralizes most snake venoms.

You can get manuals on how to perform an instant "bush cure" using the ignition coil of a car. It's supposed to work great for Rattlesnake bites.

Returning to the question of what is happening, I have frequently seen it suggested that electroporation, or voltage-dependent gating, may account for the effects of electric and magnetic fields on bacteria. I don't believe this to be the case and I think these ideas arise from an inadequate understanding of cell structure. To explain, let's start by looking at cells.

Bacterial, plant, and yeast cells are very different from the kind of cells found in the human (or other animal) body. Pathogens like the ones listed earlier tend to have a thick cell wall and an internal cell membrane that encloses

Voltage-Dependent Gating (VDG) is a different effect in which a protein molecule just a bit longer than the width of a cell membrane, typically helical in shape, tends to burrow its way through the cell membrane literally like a corkscrew. This creates what is known as an ion bridge and, under the influence of an electric potential, the ion bridge turns on like a switch and carries ions across the cell membrane. This mechanism occurs in many biological subsystems, most noticeably nerve cells.

The theory I have seen advanced for the operation of the Rife machine is that one or both of these effects results in an ion imbalance in the bacterial cell (but not the body cell) which results in an osmotic pressure differential that ultimately causes the bacterium to blow up like a balloon and then explode.

Balloons Versus Footballs

But the two effects above both operate on cell membranes (I don't know if they operate on cell walls), and so it follows logically that they are much more likely to damage a normal body cell than a pathogen.

To put it more simply, imagine a bacterial cell to be rather like a football, and a body cell to be rather like a child's balloon. If you blow air into both the football and the balloon at the same rate, the balloon is going to explode much more easily and much sooner than the football, because the football is thicker and stronger.

So this explanation is unlikely because observation supposedly shows the opposite to be happening.

New Theory

If the reports are to be believed, the real explanation must lie in some electrochemical property that cell walls have that cell membranes don't.

The answer may lie in what are known as ion exchange membranes (IEMs for short). The full technical explanation is too long and complex to reproduce here, but to simplify: a cell wall acts like an IEM; a cell membrane doesn't. An IEM promotes the exchange of ions either side of it when an electric potential is applied.

Simplistically speaking, I personally believe that the electric potential them. There is a major distinction between the cell wall and the cell membrane. The cell wall is typically about 200nm thick, and the cell membrane usually consists of a layer of two protein molecules bonded together and is about 5nm to 10nm thick, depending on which protein is involved.

A typical body cell does not have the cell wall, it only has the cell membrane. Simply put, a bacterium or fungal cell has a coating many times thicker and stronger than a body cell. See Figure 4.

Electroporation, an effect often used by genetic engineers to introduce DNA strands into cells, occurs in cell membranes. Cell membranes have natural pores due to the statistical movement of the molecules that they are made of. The molecules move about, leaving momentary holes. If the movement of the molecules is increased by electrical stimulation, they tend to leave bigger (sometimes permanent) holes, and the cell membrane becomes more porous. A large enough hole will destroy the cell.

induced across a cell wall by an external magnetic field (or local electric current) causes ion exchange across the cell wall, which results in profound changes in the chemical environment of the cell, for example pH (acidity/alkalinity).

Under the influence of such changes, the proteins that hold together both the cell walls and the cell membranes denature, depolarize, or lose their hydrogen bonding—i.e. they change shape from nice regular helixes into random strands. As such, they firstly lose their ability to properly participate in the chemical reactions that keep the cell alive and, secondly, result in the weakening of the cell wall which eventually ruptures and disintegrates.

This would explain both the Rife exploding bacteria effect and the Lyman/Kaali bacterial inactivation.

Mild denaturing of the cellular proteins will inactivate the pathogen's ability to bond to other cells or participate in chemical exchanges with body cells; a more pronounced denaturing will destroy the pathogen's cell wall.

I have greatly oversimplified this explanation because molecular electrochemistry is not an easy subject to master. I hope, however that I have conveyed a simplistic picture of what may be happening and why I have doubts about the more conventional explanations.

[Editor's note: A simplified rebuttal to this theory would point out that ionic movements like those suggested above are generally far too slow for the electromagnetic frequencies involved in Rife-like devices. It would be like a bowling ball on the deck of a boat that's being rocked back and forth very fast; above a certain "rocking frequency" the bowling ball more-or-less stands still because it can't respond fast enough to move in any one direction.]

A Cautionary Note

Having said all that, I must urge caution. While the mechanism of these electrotherapy devices may have a greater effect on bacteria, etc., than normal body cells, it would be a great mistake to assume that body cells are never damaged by these effects. Any body cell relies on an extremely complex system of electrochemical reactions to operate.

Clearly an electric, magnetic, or electromagnetic field applied close to the body will induce electrical potentials across cell membranes (and those of organelles) and will inevitably disrupt normal body cellular electrochemical processes as well as those of bacteria.

Two real questions remain: firstly, whether these devices have any beneficial effect at all; and secondly, whether the gentler devices like the Rife Beam-Ray Machine (as opposed to something like the magnetic discharge machines) are really completely safe.

Of course, a degree of "collateral damage" may well be acceptable when you are treating a serious disease such as cancer. Undoubtedly existing traditional radiation and chemotherapy techniques which are commonly used to treat cancer (and even in some cases antibiotics) do cause serious "collateral damage" to normal body cells.

Another point to consider is that if you can kill a tumor cell by exploding a virus inside it, it follows that you can kill a normal cell the same way.

Up to this point I've been relating stories and theories secondhand. Now I'd like to just mention some experiments that I've done in this field. I would like to stress that I am giving this information for completeness and because it is interesting. I am not suggesting that anyone else should try this; it might be dangerous.

Subjective Experiment

As an experiment, I decided to try making a simple machine. Basically I designed a very simple magnetic pulse generator.

I made a simple driver circuit that accepts square-wave pulses from a TTL input and drives them at about 36 volts with a current capacity of up to four amps into a 35mH magnetic coil. The resulting magnetic field is quite intense.

I then hooked the machine up to a signal generator and tuned it to various known Crane MOR frequencies for common pathogens that most people have, and held the coil near to my body in various places.

Interestingly, I felt nothing at most frequencies, but got a noticeable reaction when I tuned to certain frequencies, for example 464 Hz, which turns out to be the MOR for Candida Albicans (a parasitic yeast that just about everybody has to some degree).

I was suffering from a gastric ulcer—i.e., gnawing pain under the ribs when my stomach was empty, bleeding, etc. I also have a hiatus hernia (weak stomach valve) which for many years has caused almost continuous indigestion and acid burning.

I normally have to take antacids every couple of hours, and certainly after every meal. Having had no results from any conventional therapy in the past, I figured I had nothing to lose by trying the machine. I tried setting the machine to 676 Hz, the modern MOR frequency for Helicobacter Pylori, which is the usual cause of ulcers.

After about three minutes exposure at 676 Hz I felt a bit dizzy. About an hour later I had a particularly bad attack of acid and pain which lasted for about two hours. But next morning when I woke up, the usual pain under the ribs was much less. Later that day I tried again, this time two six-minute exposures, one at 676 Hz and the other at 464Hz (the Candida frequency).

I discovered that 676 Hz makes me feel dizzy and 464 Hz gives me stomach gas. This time I got a much smaller attack of pain, but also this time I got a spate of red blotches on the skin followed by itching all over, again lasting for about two hours. I figured the first was a Jarisch-Herxheimer reaction to the 676 Hz, and the second the reaction to the 464 Hz.

The next day, I woke up again with hardly any pain at all. During the whole day I only had to take one antacid tablet, which is unprecedented. After four days of similar treatments, all pain had gone and I was getting no detectable reaction at all to either of the frequencies. What is more important, I had no indigestion for the first time in years and there was no more bleeding. I stopped the treatments at that point.

At the time of this writing, it is now nearly three months since I performed this experiment. I have had no pain, no bleeding, and feel better than I have in years.

A few weeks ago, I got the symptoms of a mild cold for a couple of days. The indigestion returned for a day, although not as badly as before. I tried the machine again, tuning randomly through various frequencies and looking for reactions. I got strong reactions at frequencies which I later discovered were known MORs for Adenovirus (a common respiratory infection) and also Chlamydia Pneumonia (also a respiratory pathogen). Two days of treatment, as before, at the new frequencies, has once again removed all symptoms and the indigestion is gone.

Placebo Effect?

It's not very scientific, but I'm convinced it works. If anything, it has convinced me that this whole field is too important to ignore, and the more serious research and experimentation that is done, the better.

Skeptics will, of course, argue that this is a classic placebo effect. But having tried various remedies over the years without anything like these results, I believe otherwise.

I also tried a further experiment with molds. I took a piece of bread, dampened it, and left it out overnight. I then broke the bread into two similar pieces and put each piece in a separate, sealed, sterile container. I took one container and exposed it to a range of different antimold frequencies of the magnetic pulser. The first container was left untouched.

After four days, the containers were compared. The first, untouched container was full of mold; the second was completely clear. Since the only difference between the two was the exposure to the magnetic pulser, I concluded that the magnetic pulser had killed all the mold spores in the second container.

Pulser Circuit

For anyone interested in doing further experiments, the circuit diagram of a second, very simple prototype of my pulser is shown in Figure 5. The input is a simple TTL square wave at the frequency of interest. The circuit consists of two simple buffer/inverter stages, around transistors TR1 and TR2, to translate the TTL signal into a larger voltage swing to drive the two parallel MOSFETs in the output stage, shown combined as TR3, into hard conduction.

The MOSFETs are wired in parallel to increase their current capability and mounted on a big heat-sink, although they have a very low on-resistance and so the dissipation of the circuit is low. The 20-Volt Zener diode, D1, wired from the drain to gate of the MOSFETs, prevents inductive voltage overshoot and gives the MOSFETs a very hard switch-off edge, which is supposed to be ideal for bioactive effect.

The power supply is a simple 21-Volt unregulated supply (a rectified 15V a.c. transformer with a 4700pF smoothing capacitor) but which needs to have a high surge capacity as the transients generated by the coil can overload the transformer and rectifier.

The second prototype uses a 200 VA transformer and 10 A rectifier, which works well. My first prototype used only a 100 VA transformer and died suddenly in a cloud of smoke!

The coil, L1, consists of approximately 333 turns of 22-gauge enameled wire wound on a plastic form of about 13 cm diameter (a standard plastic waste-pipe coupler) in eight layers, across a span of about 25 mm. The turns of the coil need to be tightly wound and well varnished into place to prevent oscillation and heating in operation. The prototype coil gets mildly warm in normal use, about 40°C.

Do Not Try This At Home

Again I urge everyone to take care. I only experiment on myself. The cardinal rule for me is: don't try to treat anybody else. I am aware of the risks I take and accept them; other people may not be. I also don't encourage anyone to try this on themselves, but only to perform proper experiments with microorganism samples with due precautions under scientific conditions. There is still too much that is not properly understood about this technology.

I personally believe that the Rife-type plasma machine is the safer option. However, these machines are difficult to obtain and very overpriced (ready-built). I have asked a few manufacturers for specs, but I've found that many are unwilling to give proper specifications, and in some cases the advertising claims are simply untrue.

If there are any decent r.f. engineers out there (high-power r.f. design is not my specialty) I for one would be interested in a modern design for a Rife plasma device built from the ground up and optimized, not just based on modified CB radios. It should also work with lower carrier frequencies, as there is some evidence that carriers in the range of 3 MHz to 11

MHz are more effective than the 27 MHz CB range.

Currently, I am working on the design of a high-accuracy digital frequency synthesizer that I intend to use for further experiments.

I must add that, despite my opinions, I am not specifically endorsing any of these devices in any way. I am only presenting this information as a matter of interest.

Other Evidence

Among the scientific literature, I have discovered there is a wealth of information as yet not properly compiled together, and usually buried in incomprehensible technical gibberish. I have seen research reports which indicate that weak magnetic field pulses at 16.7 Hz can stimulate the body into increased production of T-lymphocytes. I have seen other reports that indicate that other frequencies inhibit the same lymphocytes.

There are also reports that claim similar effects at various frequencies that inhibit cancer cell growth and ones that stimulate it. Most of the current research, however, has focused on the effect of power-line frequencies (50/60 Hz). Most reports indicate that these frequencies are dangerous; I have not seen any evidence of any beneficial effects reported at these frequencies.

One thing that does seem to be confirmed repeatedly by research is that weak electric and particularly magnetic fields have a most profound effect on growing cells. The faster the rate of cell growth, the more pronounced the effect. This implies that any low-frequency magnetic field may be particularly dangerous to children, and especially to unborn children. Also, prolonged exposure to any low-frequency magnetic field may cause VDG and/or electroporation and consequent cellular damage.

It is now widely accepted by many researchers that any field in excess of 150nT is likely to have an immediate bioactive effect on cellular metabolism, and much weaker fields may have effects after a longer exposure.

Official Recommendations

Despite numerous well-founded and intensive research studies on the bioactive effects of low-frequency electric and magnetic fields, both the U.K. NRPB (National Radiological Protection Board) and the U.S. NCRP (National Committee on Radiation Protection) insist that their official position is that there is no proven risk of adverse health effects from low-frequency fields.

Many informed observers believe that this is a short-sighted view motivated by political considerations. For example, both authorities have close ties to power generation companies that obviously would be reluctant to admit that their product might be dangerous to consumers.

In the United States, at least, this has led to conflict between various government agencies. For example, the NCRP and the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency). The EPA has allegedly petitioned various U.S. government authorities to classify low-frequency radiation as "a possible human carcinogen", but has met with concerted resistance from the power companies and their lobbyists. In addition, numerous lawsuits have been filed by consumers and environmental groups against power generation companies, citing research and statistical studies that supposedly show a strong correlation between childhood leukemia and proximity to power lines emitting low-frequency electric and magnetic fields.

The fact remains that while these authorities insist there is no proven risk from low-frequency fields, they are talking in the context of normal domestic power lines, and on the basis of projected field strengths and exposures in normal use. Neither authority is actively denying that low-frequency fields have bioactive effects per se, although there is controversy over the field strengths that might have an effect, and whether or not the effects are temporary or permanent.

The NRPB in the U.K. has published reports in which it admits that some strong low-frequency fields might have temporary bioactive effects. The NCRP is also at the center of a controversy over a "leaked" internal draft recommendation of 1995 by its own research teams which makes various recommendations, citing specific bioactive effects of low-intensity low-frequency fields and which concludes:

"Based on available evidence, the committee concludes that it is desirable to reduce human exposure to electric and particularly to magnetic fields over the frequency range from near zero to 3kHz. This may be accomplished, particularly in areas with frequent and prolonged human occupancy, by recommending an exposure standard, or a set of safety guidelines, or by recommendations that fall short of establishing either a standard or guideline, but offer guidance to limit exposure."

Food Preservation

Perhaps the most interesting twist to the whole story comes in the form of two new reports by the U.S. FDA, the very organization that tried to shut down Rife. These latest two reports consider the use of pulsed electric and magnetic fields for food preservation on the basis that accepted research shows that pulsed electric and magnetic fields can kill bacteria, viruses, and other pathogens.

These two reports (which are available on the Internet, addresses later) cite impressive figures for kill rates of specific bacteria at specific pulse rates of a strong magnetic field. But the conclusion of the reports is that pulsed fields do not qualify for approval as a method of food preservation because the mechanism of action is unknown, and also because of inconsistent results; in some cases the fields appear to enhance the action of bacteria, in others they kill them, and some appear to have no effect at all.

The interesting conclusion the FDA draws from this is that the effect is obviously frequency dependent and also is influenced by field strength, exposure time, and the nature of the material exposed. This is almost exactly what Rife was saying in the first place.

Magnetic Field Report

Here is an extract from the FDA magnetic field report:

"Exposure to a magnetic field may stimulate or inhibit the growth and reproduction of microorganisms. A single pulse of intensity of 5 T to 50 T and frequency of 5 kHz to 500 kHz generally reduces the number of microorganisms by at least 2-log cycles (Hoffman, 1985). High-intensity magnetic fields can affect membrane fluidity and other properties of cells (Frankel and Liburdy 1995). Inconsistent results of other inactivation studies, however, make it impossible to clearly state the microbial inactivation efficiency of a magnetic field or to make any predictions about its effects on microbial populations."

Finally

I have deliberately tried to keep this article simple, trying to find a balance between completeness, common sense, and scientific overkill. I hope that I have at least stimulated some readers to research this fascinating subject themselves.

David Icke exposes the real story behind global events which shape the future of human existence and the world we leave our children. Fearlessly, he lifts the veil on an astonishing web of interconnected manipulation to reveal that the same few people, secret societies, and organizations control the daily direction of our lives. They engineer the wars, violent revolutions, terrorist outrages, and political assassinations; they control the world market in hard drugs and the media indoctrination machine. Every global negative event of the 20th Century, and earlier, can be traced back to the same Global Elite, and some of the names involved are very well known. Never before has this web, its personnel, and methods been revealed in such a detailed and devastating fashion.

Icke reveals the esoteric background to the

meant as opposed to what I actually said! So I'd just like to clear up a few points that have been misinterpreted.

Firstly the circuit described in the article is for a simple magnetic pulse device. It is NOT a Rife device and I have never made any claim to that effect. The only association with Rife's work is the fact that I personally tried it with Crane frequencies that have been (probably wrongly) attributed to Rife. The article is designed to throw some light on several aspects of electrotherapy. While Rife is the main focus of the article, it is not exclusively about Rife, so the fact that various devices are mentioned does not imply that they are all forms of Rife devices or that they have anything to do with Rife.

The reason I decided to try a magnetic pulse device was to test an initial theory of my own that it was the magnetic field from the Rife ray device that was responsible for the bactericidal effect. I have since found that I can duplicate the effect with pure electric fields, magnetic fields, and even infra-red light. I haven't tried electromagnetic fields. All the pure scientific research I have seen indicates that normal EM fields (i.e. radio waves) do NOT (in general, there are exceptions) exhibit the Rife effect.

So to all the people who have commented to the effect that my circuit doesn't produce EM fields or is an inefficient EM transmitter: it is NOT an EM transmitter; it's just a crude prototype designed to create pulses of magnetic flux, nothing else.

As for the coil mentioned in the article, the one described measures at an inductance of 931uH. The 35mH coil referred to was a first prototype, the construction of which is not described in the article. As I did mention in the article, the circuit described is for my SECOND prototype, which was much simpler and more efficient than the first.

Some readers have asked me for therapeutic recommendations for the magnetic pulse device. I mentioned clearly in the article that I am NOT recommending medical treatment with this pulser. It was not designed as a proper therapeutic tool. It was meant to confirm some crude experimental results. I have no idea of what the longterm effects of exposure to pulsed magnetic fields might be and recommend that anyone who wants to experiment with this should do so with extreme caution. If you want to see if the Rife effect works, try it on a sample of mold or bacteria in a culture dish; don't go around trying to cure people with it. If you want to try it on yourself, that's up to you; but I didn't tell you to do it!

I did not comment anywhere in the article that I recommended this kind of treatment and that I thought it was unconditionally safe. On the contrary, I clearly stated that I thought it could potentially be very dangerous. I did mention that other people had claimed it was safe; but I didn't make that claim myself. There are many different forms of electrotherapy and many different kinds of devices. Each should be independently assessed and treated on its own merits, something I didn't try to do in my article.

A few readers have commented that the super-regeneration wavelengths quoted from Rife's papers are higher frequencies than the carriers. This is true, but one should not literally accept that an original Rife machine consisted of a simple modulated carrier. In fact, the little information that does exist about those original machines indicates that they may have been more like mixers than simple modulators. I believe I now know the significance of the "super-regeneration" aspect of Rife's original machine and intend to expand on that in a forthcoming follow-up article.

With regard to how the Rife effect works, I believe that magnetic and electric fields are inducing electrochemical changes in cell membranes which affect electrochemical pumping mechanisms. In particular I believe that the Rife-type machines interfere with proton pumps that are fundamental to the operation of bacterial cells, but which are not present in animal cells. I have no idea how the Rife effect works on viruses, and as yet I don't even have the basis of any theory because viruses are very different to animal-bacterial cells. I am working on an expanded theory that may account for how infra-red pulses can produce the effect by photoelectrochemical absorbance, but I would like to clarify that I do not endorse the view that the Rife effect is due to mechanical resonance. Rife thought it might be, but I didn't say I agreed with that idea!

I do encourage readers to do their own research. Look at proper published scientific research papers; don't just accept what you read on some website or book or advertisement (or even magazine article!) either for or against. The only way to find the truth is to look for it yourself, with an open mind.

Some people have commented that the only correct way to approach this is with skeptical thinking, but there is a flaw in that because a skeptic—in my definition at least—is someone who refuses to believe the facts before them unless they can be made to fit an accepted, conventional theory. But the facts are the facts; the theory needs to be modified to fit the facts, not the other way around! Unconditional belief is just as bad because, despite the best intentions of some of the “distributors”, a lot of the material that one reads about Rife, etc., on places like the web is unresearched and in many cases just plain wrong. But you can read from some of Rife's original papers; you can find proper scientific research papers; and finally, best of all, you can do your own experiments and see it for yourself.

You can do historical research too. The full story is a lot more interesting than just my brief description. You can find information on the people mentioned and events referred to. Look it up and decide for yourself what is true or not.

I recommend that readers read Barry Lynes' book, look at James Bare's experiments, the reports on Peter Walker's Rife Information Website, and also check out the recently available reproductions of audio tapes and video films of Rife himself talking about his work. But don't stop there; keep looking!

The true spirit of scientific method is to investigate something with no preconceived ideas about whether it's right or wrong. It involves simply looking at the facts, checking and verifying them, and then formulating a theory to fit them. The moment one makes any assumption, either way, the scientific method has been lost. The same applies if you discard any facts you don't like or introduce unverified information as fact. The fundamental reason why such a promising field of research is still in its infancy is simply because many people are more concerned with forming themselves into opposing camps of skeptics and believers than with simply looking for the truth for themselves.

[Editor's note: Well, even though it's not the FUNDAMENTAL reason by a longshot, he's certainly correct to imply that a lot more progress will come from working together in honest inquiry than from extremes of “blind belief” that lead to fighting. After all, those crooks in high secret places who have long worked to derail such advancements as electro-medicine have always found that well-placed skeptics can keep a field in a turmoil, chasing its tail rather than getting anywhere productive. It's time to rise above being so easily hoodwinked by such baited trickery.]

I have a couple of personal rules of thumb that are not strictly in accordance with the true spirit of scientific enquiry but may be valuable in general. Firstly, if someone is trying to sell you something, then any information offered in support of their product should be treated with the utmost suspicion unless it can be independently verified. Secondly, if anyone quotes a dozen pages of their professional qualifications in support of their pet theory, whether for or against, that should also be viewed with suspicion, because facts speak for themselves; they don't need qualifications, accreditations, certifications, and accolades to be facts.

Anyone who needs to do this to promote their ideas probably has a very weak case, because facts should stand on their own merits.

[end quoting]

In light of the above astonishing information, is it really any stretch to imagine that the major pharmaceuticals (and their AMA and FDA puppets) would go to any lengths of immorality to suppress such cheap electromagnetic alternatives to an otherwise lucrative business?

Royal Rife Comment

Not long before he became ill, Dr. Rife made the following profound (under)statement:

I hope I have helped humanity some. I am just an ordinary man, doing the best he can.

We are all here to do our part. Each has a purpose as he lives it and thinks it. We need religion to balance scientific discovery, and the material and the spiritual must go side-by-side.

Religion guides scientific discoveries. Religion is a stabilizer. I sincerely think and believe that our Good Lord helps us in many ways to accomplish our desires. This has been proven in many cases where results obtained were from none other than our Almighty God.

The most important thing I ever did was build a microscope. The things I've done have possibly [!!!] helped humanity. I have tried to create and develop things for the good of the Universe. I am grateful to God that he has allowed me to do the things I have done.

Is it any wonder why Dr. Rife was chosen to bring forth a gift of such vast good for humanity? But what a threat to the world controllers! And their suppression tactics continue to this day, which brings us to our next topic.

Now that we have an understanding of why Rife's discoveries and equipment represent such a threat to the modern medical-business establishment and the pharmaceutical cartels, we're going to examine the matter of a recent FDA raid on the home of Jim Folsom in San Diego. (He's the author of the quote at the very top of this article.)

We'll begin with Jim's letter to the President and Congress:

[quoting]

Open Letter To President George Bush & Congress

Re: Operation Health Freedom

(Editor's note: Though it's called Operation Health Freedom, their website is noted as www.othf.org—which means Operation Total Health Freedom.)

This past March you launched Operation Iraqi Freedom. I commend you on your desire for freedom for the Iraqi people. This great endeavor and the success of the American military men and women serving under you is most commendable.

On July 4, 2003, We-The-People of the United States of America are launching "Operation Health Freedom". We are calling upon you as the President of the United States to join us in this great undertaking. We are calling upon our Representatives in Congress to join in also.

Also, We-The-People and Citizens choose July 4th for a New Declaration Of Independence and A New Era Of Freedom for the People of the United States of America.

On April 2nd of this year, while American soldiers and marines began incursions into Baghdad for the liberation of Iraqi men, women, and children from an oppressive dictatorship and a flawed oppressive governmental system, homes here in the United States of America came under attack, not by members of Saddam Hussein's Red Guard, but rather by U.S. Federal Agents from the FDA (Food & Drug Administration) and other Federal Police who are under your administrative authority. Our homes were forcefully invaded as we became victims of fraudulent, "illegal/legal" actions, with clear violations of our civil and constitutional rights. Without any charges of illegality our homes were searched, property seized, we were placed under intense interrogation (no Miranda rights presented), with intimidation of possible further economic loss (legal fees), and possible seizure of our homes. Yes, this in our free America, and at a time when we are "liberating" Iraq from oppressive tyranny.

One of these U.S. invaded and terrorized

DEATH IN THE AIR: GLOBALISM, TERRORISM & TOXIC WARFARE

This book explains how and why:

- We have evolved from the nuclear age into a "Technotronic Era" with "psychotronic warfare" for optimal population control.
- Non-lethal warfare is being effectively used to produce sociopolitical and economic outcomes consistent with global genocide.
- The world's wealthiest policy-makers have recommended, and are working toward, eliminating half the world's population.
- Accepted methods of disease prevention, such as pesticide sprayings, can only be scientifically rationalized as costly and deadly contributions to non-lethal warfare and population reduction.
- Chemtrail sprayings that obscure blue skies are not normal, but reflect a conspiracy of silence and military attacks on the health and welfare of people around the world.

Striking at the heart of those responsible for the latest forms of bio-terrorism, psychotronic warfare, and ecological genocide, the revelations contained in this book offer more than a reality check—they give you and your loved ones a final, last-minute choice for survival.

homes belongs to an honorably served U.S. Army veteran. One family experiencing this armed "terror attack" was a newly arrived Mexican family, one member with recent U.S. citizenship, and having come to the U.S. for better political and economic freedoms. Their part of the American dream has been shattered. Another experiencing this attack was a legal resident from Southeast Asia who came to the U.S. in order to be away from brutal police tactics that are often known in that part of the world. Her dream of a truly free America was severely shaken.

How does all this tie into Operation Health Freedom, which we are asking you, Mr. President, to join and even lead the way? Another great success for freedom, particularly for freedom here in America, will be a great tribute to your Presidency.

This terror attack on our homes was done on the pretext of "protecting" the health of American citizens. We believe it is only a pretext to protect and hold together an "old order" and "lagging edge" medical and pharmaceutical industry that all too fraudulently holds its economic power grip on the U.S. economy, the political processes, and most importantly the vital health and welfare of every citizen of America.

[Of course, with the well established Bush family ties to the Eli Lilly Pharmaceutical Company, it is likely that this request to the President will fall on deaf ears. — R.M.]

What are we saying here?

Example: The life expectancy of Americans is high, but is the quality of life—when our children are drugged to keep them "attentive" in school, our senior citizens drugged, kept numb, and partially alert until the "die-off" drug,

"pacified" in an old-age home or special-care facility? Industrialized Japan finds its citizens, both young and old, happy, healthy, and not loaded with drugs, who pass their senior years in a quality state of health and well-being.

Our American hospitals are among the most deadly infectious places on planet Earth. There are third-world countries more infection free than our hospitals, which have infection rates, leading to death, of over 100,000 citizens per year. This rate does not match the number of deaths caused annually by medical abuse, mis-diagnoses, and mis-application of drugs which, together with hospital infections, cause 270,000 deaths per year.

These drugs often cost $100 or more per pill, and more often than not just "mask-over"—or at best "manage"—a symptom, not eliminate it; and another drug is used to mask-over the symptoms of the prior prescribed drug, and on and on this goes.

Hospitalization stays, often minimal at $2,000 per day, are financially breaking all too many of our citizens. Medical insurance is too cost-prohibitive for most, and becoming costlier daily.

Are we surprised that medical costs are one of the greatest causes of bankruptcy here in America? Or, that the true healthy well-being of our people is not the best in the world?

We desire cost-effective health and wellness modalities that are not restricted and controlled by Federal bureaucratic tyranny, with its main purpose to hold the "old order" medical/pharmaceutical system in place. No, we no longer seek our salvation in more and costlier "research", expensive technologies, "miracle" surgeries, "wonder" drugs, etc. The later is responsible for the "health crisis" in America and is placing us and our families at risk. We demand change for the better.

It is well known, the current "health" system in America is flawed and in crisis. We are calling upon you, Mr. President, Congressional Representatives, Federal, State, Local representatives and civil servants at all levels to join and assist in our endeavor Operation Health Freedom. There is a part each and every one of you can take.

For you, our Congressional Representatives, we are requesting that you personally demand a full and complete U.S. General Accounting Office investigation of the Food and Drug Administration which, under the guise of "protecting the health" of citizens, is all too often only protecting the "old order" and often doing so with blatant civil and constitutional violations of our citizens. We are requesting a full and complete Congressional investigation of the "health crisis" in America, an investigation into the money trails and the strings of influence. We believe a very flawed "old order", lagging-edge, costly, entrenched system has been strongly in place for all too long.

We-the-American-people are paying the price for this in our health—physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually, and economically, and we are demanding change. Not little change. A big change. Now.

I, the author of this letter, am a U.S. Army Veteran, having honorably served during the Vietnam era in a NATO missile command in Southern Europe. My lineage here in America is tenth generation, and those who came before me are among those who helped build this country, fought for its freedoms, helped preserve and protect it in its battles and wars, and made it the great country that it is today.

Mr. President, those who walked before us in this great country would not be proud if they saw what happened with this terror invasion of our homes last week by armed U.S. Federal agents, with fraudulent "lawful" disregard for our civil and constitutional rights—actions which only the likes of Saddam or Hitler would truly be proud.

Mr. President, we are talking about agents under your direct authority. I have had FBI agents in my home assisting them in investigative matters and with them being aware and having in their files the business activities that I am involved with and represent.

I am demanding that, if I did anything in my business that is illegal, that I be legally charged accordingly, arrested, and provided my day in court.

Otherwise, I demand that all property, records, books, historical library, reports, etc., that were seized in these terror raids, be returned immediately and be returned in good order.

This is a text case for us here in America. Civil and constitutional rights violations and freedoms are only part of the issue. The troubling and overriding issue for the "health police" is the economic, low-cost technology that the American people are becoming aware of, finding affordable, effective, and are purchasing.

At issue is: Do we, as citizens of these United States of America, have the right to care for our own health and wellness, without having to rely upon the "old order", cost prohibitive, medical/pharmaceutical/governmental system that is in crisis? The recent armed Federal Police and FDA Agents' terror attacks on our homes were a result of equipment used for experimental and investigative research that is often used in health clinics by N.D.s, Ph.D.s, M.D.s (often retired), D.C.s, Dentists, other "wellness" practitioners, and a broad spectrum of American citizens.

The historical records, results, and research of this technology spans most of the prior century.

As has happened in the past, your Federal Police and FDA agents today are making a continued effort of suppression and destruction of low-cost, cost-effective "alternative" health technologies and services. The trail of this conspiracy is vast.

Again, Mr. President, as this drama plays out, and that is exactly what it is, we-the-citizens of the United States of America are asking for your participation, along with the participation of others, and we are watching to see who is on our side in Operation Health Freedom.

We would like to know if we still have a government here in America that serves us, its citizens. Is this truly so?

We commend you for your desire to bring freedom to the Iraqi people. Are you willing to do the same for we-the-citizens of the United States of America?

We are requesting that you come aboard to assist us in this great cause for freedom. Yes, this is a great cause. It will not be easy. There are entrenched interests that are not about to let go easily. And yes, we are talking about freedom, here in America—freedom regarding basic physical health, economic health for us as individuals, and for the health and economic well-being of our families, all our families. This also involves freedom from fear of individual and family fortunes being wiped-out due to this tragic health system here in America.

Those seeking answers in the old system are not going to find answers to our health crisis; they are looking in the wrong direction. Just as you did not look to Saddam for freedom for the Iraqi people and provide him with billions upon billions of U.S. taxpayer dollars, we expect neither you, nor our Congressional Representatives, to receive much valuable assistance, answers, or results from the "old order" medical/pharmaceutical/governmental system currently in place. Nor do we desire seeing more and more billions thrown into this flawed system.

It is known that a majority of our citizens are seeking low-cost "alternative methods" for health and wellness and are not deferring to the “old order” of drug medications and surgeries. This includes 67% of the post-war generation (Baby Boomers and richest segment), 70% of their children (the largest segment), and 87% of their parents who are seeking alternative health services and technologies. We are referring to health and wellness modalities that are cost-effective, affordable, results-oriented, not infectious, crippling, or riddled with side-effects.

This is the first in-depth exploration into the origins of HIV and Ebola. Claims that these "emerging viruses" naturally evolved and then jumped species from ape to man seem grossly unfounded in light of the compelling evidence assembled in this extraordinary text. Alternatively, the possibility that these bizarre germs were laboratory creations, accidentally or intentionally transmitted via tainted Hepatitis and smallpox vaccines in the U.S. and Africa—as numerous authorities have alleged—is investigated herein.

This book reviews the numerous viral vaccine studies conducted simultaneously in New York City and Central West Africa by a narrow network of virologists working for major military-medical contractors under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and the World Health Organization (WHO). The text presents bizarre and horrifying facts about the biological weapons race of the 1960s and early 1970s when researchers developed countless immune-system-ravaging viruses and experimented with antidote vaccines allegedly for "defense" and cancer prevention.

These alternative health services and technologies to date have only minimally, at best, been supported by insurance companies or governmental health programs, research funding, etc. Secretary of Health and Human Services Tommy Thompson fortunately has started in the right direction with the release of the ABC Codes. This is only a beginning.

Lastly, AIDS, West Nile Virus, SARS—there are more of these diseases upon us and we expect they will be coming with greater and greater intensity. We are requesting a thorough investigation as to which of these diseases have come from pharmaceutical laboratories and to what extent they are being fostered upon us to further entrench the “old order” costly systems.

With news media hype paralleling each new disease, we are being told this “old-order” system is here as our “savior”. Is this truly so? Are they manufacturing these “new” diseases in their labs (truly we like to believe no one could be so cruel and dastardly), and then are the only ones to provide the diagnosis and cure?

What is truly happening here? We-the-people of the United States of America demand an investigation and true answers. We are demanding and declaring a New Declaration Of Independence and a New Era of Freedom for the people of the United States of America.

Post-Scripts: Operation Health Freedom

1. An example of costly, often debilitating “old-order” health systems, perpetrated and locked into place in most U.S. states is the California law restricting all cancer treatments to Chemo, Radiation, and Surgery. There are many very viable modalities for treating/curing cancer.

Dr. Lorraine Day, M.D., San Francisco General Hospital surgeon (see website: www.drday.com) turned her large malignant breast cancer/tumor around nutritionally. A good immune system is the best natural first-line of defense against debilitating diseases and it is the immune system that Chemo and Radiation is known to destroy. Is this why the FDA never approved Chemo (mustard gas) which is considered “slightly less deadly” than cancer itself?

2. It is documented that upper-echelon FDA officials will send their cancer-stricken family members to Germany in order to obtain treatments which they themselves ban in the U.S.—i.e., ozone, etc. There are many viable cancer treatment modalities available in Germany’s hospitals and clinics that are banned by the FDA in the U.S., including Rife-type frequency technologies.

3. The FDA, via the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) has set out and is attempting to close all cancer clinics along U.S. borders, particularly the Mexican clinics. Dr. Hulda Clark’s and The New Hope Clinics in Tijuana, Mexico, are among those already hit. (Clark’s remains open after a court battle.) Those being closed are usually clinics of last hope after cancer victims have been Chemoed, Radiated, and Surgeried in the U.S.

In Canada, Don Tunney, who assembles and provides Jim Bare/Rife frequency instruments was presented a “cease and desist” order by the FDA (thanks to and via NAFTA) in June/July 2002.

4. Why the FDA’s banning of Rife-type frequency instrumentation? It has been suggested that after 70 years of suppression and cover-up, if the general public becomes aware of the results and resulting unnecessary suffering and deaths caused by the “old-order” money system, there will be a public outcry and resulting litigation that will, by comparison, make the cigarette industry affair look like a small firecracker.

5. South Africa, as a result of the AIDS epidemic there, is currently investing 24 million Rand in R&D in “electo-wellness” technologies (Rife frequency-type technologies).

Germany has the Grayfield Versatile Microscope capable of viewing live microbes at 40,000 magnification. Rife’s Universal Microscope views live microbes at 60,000 magnification. The electron microscope today has great magnification; however, in the staining process, views only dead microbes. The electron microscope, as currently used in microbiology/pathology, views the dead past, while the other microscopes view the live life cycles of microbes. The difference is similar to civilizations being studied via archaeology or walking through live cities and neighborhoods of the present.

6. Bayer pharmaceutical, in May 2001, is reported to have purchased from the current South African government, in perpetuity, all rights to naturally grown herbal/floral products of that country (and who knows how far these purchase restrictions and control processes reach into other third-world countries). Currently, the pharmaceutical cartel is perpetuating the United Nations Codex to restrict the worldwide use and sale of natural herbal and food supplement products.

In November 2002, the European community came under the Codex restrictions, leaving mostly large pharmaceutical companies in control of herbal and food supplement products there. At the same time the FDA/pharmaceutical industry is making every attempt to restrict and control all natural herbal and food supplement products sold here in the U.S. Does this smell of a worldwide FDA/medical/pharmaceutical cartel conspiracy? Certainly this is worthy of investigation.

7. Naturally grown products cannot be patented. Artificial, chemically produced/created pharmaceutical products can be patented. Resulting very costly prices are obtained from these patented drug products, prices most often supported by high insurance premiums, costly government/taxpayer support for pharmaceutical aid to seniors, “health and welfare” programs for the poor, etc.

Are these artificially produced petroleum-based products toxic to the body? Read the warning labels because they tell the story. The same process applies to the cosmetic industry; if it’s natural, it is not patentable. If it is artificial, even laden with very toxic chemicals, it is patentable (with no FDA approval or monitoring required).

Follow the industrial money trail from petroleum to chemical to pharmaceutical and cosmetic, then discover the trail of toxicity from one industry to the other, and then to the human body. Bill Meyers made a report showing where the chemical industry is using the cosmetic industry as their toxic chemical dumping ground. The EPA would be “all over” the chemical industry if these same chemicals were placed in the environment, and yet, as extremely toxic as some of these chemicals are, they can go onto the human body and never fall under the attention of the FDA. Is it any wonder why just 40 years ago cancer was expected to reach 1 of 25, and today it is expected in 1 of 3 or less?

8. The not so BIG SECRET. Cellular receptors in the body respond to frequencies. Frequencies will fracture the membranes of viruses and bacteria, etc., and destroy them. Frequencies will assist in cellular cleansing, regeneration, and healing. Minerals (as in mineral supplements), herbs, food supplements, and yes, even pharmaceuticals are carriers of frequencies, and this is how they work and operate.

Minerals, as found in fruits and vegetables at ionic size, will readily pass through the cellular receptors and provide natural nutrients at the cellular level. Pharmaceuticals will pass through the cellular receptors the same way; however, they are artificial and for the sake of being patentable are manufactured with exotic substances that are often toxic and will often lower the body's natural blueprint frequencies, thus allowing other ailments to take over, and consequently the dreadful side-effects that require one after another drug to mask over the symptoms of the prior drug, etc.

9. Why the threat to the pharmaceutical/medical system? Because natural herbs, food supplements, essential oils, and frequency instrumentation are not noted for toxic side-effects, lowered immunity problems, destroyed benevolent intestinal flora (primary cause of candida problems), lowered body/organ/hormonal blueprint frequencies, etc. They are not the cause of 100,000 drug-induced hospitalizations per year, and the cause for 10% of all hospitalizations in the U.S. They are not the cause of 270,000 hospital infections, or misapplied or abusively applied pharmaceutical deaths per year in the U.S.

10. Currently in Iraq, as the war there comes to a close, we are witnessing the looting and burning of that nation's cultural heritage, and the whole world suffers for this. Silently our own nation experienced looting and burning from this nation's records and history books, removing the memory of one of our greatest geniuses, Dr. Royal Raymond Rife, who is right up there with the likes of Tesla and Einstein.

The medical/pharmaceutical cartel saw this man as a major threat to their monied monopoly interests because of his inventions and discoveries. His Universal Microscope made it possible to view (by refractive light) live viral and other pathogenic forms. He was the first one inventing the means to view live viruses, bacteria, and other pathogens, and then he developed the means to devitalize and destroy them.

In the human body this destruction of harmful pathogens takes place without the harmful side-effects often experienced from pharmaceutical drugs. We are looking forward to the day this great 20th century genius, posthumously, is honored with a Nobel Prize. Some have suggested he may become the first to receive two Nobel Awards.

As Jim makes the point quite clearly, should enough of the public become aware of what the medical/pharmaceutical industry has suppressed that would bring true health, there would surely be a mutiny. The problems of the tobacco industry would pale by comparison.

Continuing with the presentation of this matter, I next present a letter written by Jim Folsom's wife, Sata Burwell, to the Assistant U.S. Attorney, following the raid on their home:

Letter From Sata Burwell

Assistant U.S. Attorney
U.S. Attorney's Office

Re: Case No. 03mg0800

Dear Melanie:

Why was my house raided and terrorized by your armed Federal FDA agents? Why were my Rife frequency instruments taken from my bedroom and my living room where I use them daily for research purposes and for my personal health and wellness?

These instruments are vital for my health. They were hooked-up and operating at the time your agents took them from me. Since they are legal for me to use and operate, I do not understand why you have taken them. For the sake of my health and wellness, I demand they be returned to me immediately.

I am Asian, and I do not believe in putting toxic chemicals and drugs into or onto my body. I do not work full-time and cannot afford expensive health insurance for drugs, doctors, and hospitals. Your American hospitals are infectious and costly. This is why I rely on this available technology. Why should you take it from me?

Months ago I experienced what it is like to visit your American hospitals. I had heart palpitations, so I visited Dr. Cao, M.D. He put me on heart diagnostic equipment to find out what was wrong. While in his office my heart began racing and I was passing out, with difficulty of breathing, and I was scared. Dr. Cao had me rushed to the hospital emergency. There they put me on monitoring equipment, gave me IVs, Tylenol, and nothing more. Three and a half days of this, and $10,000 later, I went home. The next day I visited Dr. Nguyen, M.D., cardiologist, for further testing. He recommended drugs which I did not use. At home I used natural dietary supplements and the Rife instrument, and now I am healthy and well. Is it because your Federal Drug agents want me to use expensive drugs that they took this equipment from me?

I rely on this Rife technology that works to make me healthier and healthier. If a cold or flu comes along, I can usually get rid of it in a few hours and not have to take drugs and suffer for days, or weeks, which would usually be the case.

A year ago, I had two ugly cataracts that were blurring my vision. I used the frequency instrument, and 10 days later the cataracts flaked and peeled away. My vision is good again.

Three years ago I was working at banquets for a local hotel. My arms and shoulders were becoming numb and partially paralyzed due to heavy lifting. As a result, I would wake up in the night crying for fear of what was happening to me. I did not believe I would live to the age of 50. Then I was laid off from my full-time work and could not receive Workmen's Comp or disability payments. That is when I was introduced to the Rife frequency technology. Today, my health is back, my shoulders and arms are serving me well, and I feel healthier than before.

On another occasion, I experienced a severe appendicitis attack where I was buckled-up in pain. With the use of the Rife equipment, the infection, swelling, pain, and blockage cleared within a 2-hour period and I was back immediately in good health. Your drugs, hospitals, and surgeries could not accomplish this with such speed.

Today I would no longer have a very necessary organ to my body had the surgeons gotten to it first. They would have cut it out and discarded it in the nearest dumpster. Financially this would have likely cost me well over $20,000 between the ambulance, emergency room, doctors, anesthesia, surgery, and hospital stay.

Can I have my Rife instruments back? I was using them for good and I was harming no one, not even myself. They give me no side-effects like the expensive drugs the doctors want to give me. Why should I put those harmful chemicals into my body?

I have my own dietary food supplement distributorship. This is how I make a living. These supplements help to keep me and others healthy and feeling young. I reference my product brochures "BioSolutions". I wonder if this is a crime because your Federal agents took away some of my equipment that I need for my business. Do I also deserve this?

I feel violated by the intrusion of your armed Federal FDA agents into my home. Is that what it is to be "free" in America? My father was a policeman back in the country where I came from. I hope he never did to anyone as your Federal agents did to me and my home. I left my home in S.E. Asia to be away from this kind of police terror and tactics. Shame on your people in America for allowing this to happen in your great country. I fear for you, America.

I now wake up in the middle of the night, frightened and wondering if this is going to happen again. Are these strangers going to return and steal from me? Your Federal agents went through my entire home, through my bedroom, drilled open my safe where I keep my valuables, documents, and business contracts, etc. They took family video tapes and business contracts from the safe. They took my Rife instruments. Why?

It occurred to me while writing this letter why most Americans are not truly "free" as they like to believe. Coming from outside I can see what is happening here.

You have a medical/pharmaceutical system in crisis. Your people can no longer afford health insurance. So much of your national economy is caught up servicing a health system that is nearing total failure.

Your medical doctors are running scared because the best of your drugs are not keeping up with the mutating and new oncoming viruses and bacteria. Your drugs only mask over the symptoms of the prior drug. Your elderly are fed cupboards full of these costly drugs. Your children are drugged to keep them "attentive" in school. You fight a costly "war on drugs" while your whole economy is based upon drugging your people with some of the most toxic and costly drugs.

You pay and pay and pay for this craziness. Most of you are living from one paycheck to the next, hoping and praying you are not laid off or lose your job or become ill and can no longer work. Your people are enslaved to a system and don't even realize the entrapments you are in, and you still call yourselves "free".

Who is kidding whom? I truly feel sorry for all of you.

Melanie, now I understand why you sent your terrorizing Federal FDA agents into my home. They have a very long history of these terror tactics in ruining families and health businesses and technologies that do not conform to your monied enslavement system. I and others chose to step out of this system by choosing other technologies, and now I truly know why your Federal armed agents had to come after me and the business my husband is associated with. My husband chose to help others get out of the medical system entrapment. There is a better way, but this is not allowed because your government is dedicated to protecting a failing system. Even the economic security of your country would be shaken if there were a public awareness of technologies and means to good health, as described above.

P.S. I am formally requesting of you, as the Assistant U.S. Attorney authorizing the raid on my home, that you provide all names, contact addresses, Federal Departments, or other departments and locations, their authorizing supervisors' names, and by what legal authority they approved this raid, badge numbers, etc., of each and every person or agent who entered my home, including the locksmith.

Several years ago a local sheriff investigating a burglary returned later a burglar himself. I fear this will happen to me. I do not sleep well knowing these strangers may return at night, with no good intent.

Enclosures: Hospital and Medical Statements

[end quoting]

As she says so well above, just what is it that's FREE about the United States when Big Business can dictate governmental actions so blatantly at odds with fundamental constitutional rights of the citizenry?

To explore this critical matter further, on April 24, 2003, I had the opportunity to speak with Jim Folsom about the FDA raid. Here is what he had to say:

Interview With Jim Folsom

Folsom: This is Operation Health Freedom. Now, it involves raids here in the San Diego area. My house was invaded. This was a period of time when there were incursions starting into Baghdad, April 2. This was seizing property.

There was a tremendous amount of civil and constitutional rights violations, spearheaded by the FDA and the Postal Inspector, and half a dozen other people.

Let me just lead into this. What we're doing is stating that, while Bush was sending in troops into Iraq to free the Iraqi people, our homes were being invaded by federal police and agents, under the authority of Bush. We're asking for a New Era Of Freedom in this country. Look at what is happening. On July 4th, our Independence Day, we're asking for a New Declaration Of Independence and a New Era Of Freedom for the American people.

Martin: It's interesting you should say that because—do you know what the headline of our June issue is?

Folsom: [Laughter] Tell me.

Martin: You're the first to know.

Folsom: Ok, beautiful.

Martin: "Operation American Freedom"

Folsom: You're kidding. This is perfect.

Martin: It sounds like the synchronicity here is pretty good.

Folsom: I knew when you said this would be in your July issue that it was timing brought in from Higher Levels.

Now, my end of the operation deals, basically, with electro-wellness, the instrumentation you're aware of. It's advertised there in The SPECTRUM. We look at this as more than frequency instrumentation, more than herbal, dietary supplementation, more than the old term "alternative".

"I stopped taking the medicine because I prefer the original disease to the side effects."

The new terminology, as Tim Bolen told you, is "advanced wellness". It's the total area of American freedom, and getting back to American rights, as the Constitution provided. That's the basics of it.

When these raids took place, they weren't just of my home. I was anticipating this two days ahead of time, and was not frightened, or scared, or anything else; but they took a major amount of stuff.

But I saw it as, they were opening up the OPPORTUNITY for what we're seeing here, coalescing people on all levels. This is the opportunity to make it happen. And there is no greater opportunity than right now, with this coalescing, and the American people's involvement on a major scale. When we get this out on the Internet, there is no reason why this couldn't be—well, it WILL BE BIG-TIME!

When we talk about the tobacco affair, what has been brought on by these powers that have held the "old system" together, as this overturns, it should make the tobacco industry situation look like a small firecracker, and everything that's gone on for most of the last century, that's holding a failed system in place, and that's what we're dealing with, a failed system.

The FDA claims "right"; they came in with the idea that this is an "unapproved" medical device. They were given, by Congress, a 1977 law to, basically, set up control with this. With that they were given responsibility to put together an independent review board for any growing, new technology of public interest. THEY TOTALLY IGNORED THIS. They abrogated, as a result, any authority over this area. And they are stretching the imagination when they say it's a "Class-III Instrumentation" case; I can't go into all of that.

But, we're on a roll, and it's happening.

Martin: When were your raided, and who raided you?

Folsom: The raid was at 9:00 on April 2, by the FDA, Jim Logan, and the District Postal Inspector from Los Angeles, Patricia, and there were several other people, not providing names. I did request names; they did not provide them. I requested names, badge numbers, and department locations, and I was told I would have to request that from the U.S. District Attorney, or Assistant District Attorney, Melanie Pierson.

Martin: Have you done so?

Folsom: I have not, at this point. I am working through the attorneys. That is in part of the letter that was put together. (The letter from Sata Burwell above.)

Martin: And who is your attorney?

Folsom: I am working with Jim Turner, Esq., from Washington, DC. He's a former FDA attorney. And, as it becomes necessary, we'll have attorneys out here in California.

Martin: Were you served with a Warrant?

Folsom: Yes, and it's under a "Gag Order"—sealed. There was a Search Warrant and a Subpoena.

Martin: And it's sealed because it's pending criminal prosecution?

Folsom: Correct, from an investigation ongoing from about August 1999. Now, with this—I don't know if they were just raids, but there were similar shut-downs here in San Diego, same technology.

Martin: On the same day?

Folsom: No, several years back. And then, December 1, 1991, there was a raid on the Biotech 2000 people in the San Francisco area. There was Jacques Bovee and Roger Whitman—they went into their homes and confiscated materials.

Martin: When you were raided, how many people participated in the raid?

Folsom: There were approximately 7 people, total.

Martin: Who was present at your place?

Folsom: There was one lady from Mexico, my wife Sata, and myself.

Martin: How were you treated?

Folsom: I would say, once they heavily knocked on the door, pounded on the door and said "Federal Police, open-up", they came in, they rushed in, and basically secured the area. They were armed. From that point on, they were cordial. They had us sit in the corner of the living room, after they searched the sofa, etc.

They were hauling out boxes.

Martin: Documentation?

Folsom: Yes, documentation. There were frequency instruments, which I told them I had to do some repair and servicing on. People had paid good money for these instruments, and I was here to see that they were provided the service, whenever it was necessary.

Now, when the agents came in—they had the blue jackets, like FDA, Postal Inspector, the others would have Federal Police on the back—one of the first questions I asked them is: Is this instrument legal for me to own?

The answer was "Yes."

Is it legal for me to use and operate?

The answer was "Yes."

Is it legal for anyone else to own?

The answer: "We know where you're going; we are not going there."

Martin: [Laughter]

Folsom: They rounded-up the instruments. The subpoena, etc., had full territory; anything that related to Rife equipment, they seized and took. They took videos that did not even relate. They took all the John Crane videos that I had, showing equipment, talks he gave around the country, etc., Rife CDs, Barry Lyne's books, his latest one that goes into the conspiracy, the FDA with the pharmaceuticals, and the NIH, and the Cancer Institutes, Kettering Sloan, etc. Now, in this raid, they went through the house. They went into the bedroom and disconnected these instruments that I have that were hooked-up to the electrical supply; one was in the bedroom, one was in the living room, it was on at that time. These were instruments that they said were legal for me to have! Their response was: "We're taking them, anyway."

Martin: How many machines did they take?

Folsom: Out of the house here, they took—these were used instruments, one was new that had been returned from the Postal Department—they took about 16 machines.

Martin: That's a lot of money.

Folsom: Yes. But they hit another person who I was working in conjunction with, and they took about 60 instruments from him. They hit a storage facility too. All total, it was a retail value in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

The same identical instrument by the Energy Wellness people was hit the following day, raided. That is Bruce Perlowin, in North County.

Martin: He is being charged, as well?

Folsom: No charges.

Martin: Yet?

Folsom: It doesn't mean there won't be an indictment.

Martin: Assuming you're arrested and charged later this summer, is your approach a counter-action, a separate suit in Federal court, or is it as your defense?

Folsom: We're aiming for counter-action. One of the items could be in the category of a Class-Action suit; it could be in the category where the attorneys took on the cigarette industry.

In doing so, we would make that affair look like a small firecracker, considering all the pain and suffering and the death that has gone on without warrant over the last 70 years—and all in conspiracy and collusion and suppression.

Martin: You mentioned using a Washington, DC lawyer. Is he prepared to go the distance?

Folsom: We need to get the funding in.

This is very necessary. We will be calling upon the public to make donations.

Martin: So, a Legal Defense Fund?

Folsom: A Legal Defense Fund, yes.

Martin: How is your and your wife's general attitude?

Folsom: It's a little tough along the way, the way my wife takes it.

What I'm looking at, I feel this is a major opportunity that we have actually been looking forward to, we've been anticipating, in order to galvanize everyone in the "alternative health field", to get the publicity out, and to turn this whole corrupt system around.

The current medical system is lagging-edge, and it is in crisis. There are no answers where they are currently looking for answers. The answers are: bringing-up the whole advanced medical system—when I say advanced, that's the terminology for what was used for "alternative health". This is for health and wellness, not for treating symptoms, as the old mode has been—and symptoms with drug medications, to bring on another symptom, to bring on another symptom with another drug.

We've got to get away from that. We've got to get into building the immune system, detoxifying the body, clearing the parasites, etc., and bringing the body into a healing mode, as we were created.

The natural direction of the body is toward health. We want to be able to facilitate that. We are moving away from the "alternative" concept terminology; we are into "advanced wellness" or "advanced medicine, health, and wellness".

Martin: It's like us here at SPECTRUM. We cringe at the phrase "alternative media". We're not alternative media; we are TRUTHFUL news media! So, you are the health industry, the wellness industry.

Folsom: "Alternative" implies subservient or secondary, and that is totally out of place. We are advanced! "Alternative" means that we are on the defensive. We are no longer on the defensive; we are on the offense!

Martin: Another thing that you've just mentioned, that Bolin also stated, which is true, is that so many of the Rife-related and so-called "alternative"-related businesses are either not talking to each other, or there is not a coordinated unity among them. Therefore, as individuals there is a vulnerability to attack. And it's through a united front that greater leaps and bounds may be made.

feature story. He talked in more general terms, that "people of Light" needed to come together in a united front and not allow themselves to be so easily divided by differences that don't amount to anything important—except perhaps for feeding egos! The dark elite controllers work to foster such division since, should the "people of Light" come together, then the longtime dark control game is over—whether it is control over our rights to good health or control over any other of our fundamental freedoms.]

Folsom: This is absolutely the case, and this is where it is. And this is why we see the opportunity here to galvanize, to bring together. It does not mean that the people in the Rife and the frequency instrumentation field will necessarily galvanize, until THEY become a direct target. And the powers that be, like the FDA, have stated clearly that they will take down each and every one of them.

Martin: I would believe them. They are out to do it. They have the money; they have the resources; they have the man-power; and they can do it. [Thanks to YOUR tax dollars; how's THAT for the ultimate insult?!]

Folsom: That is what they are targeting, not to take down just the Rife equipment. But if they have their way, to take down anything that is in the dietary and whole-health fields. But, THEIR time is short, and it's time for US to act!

We include the herbal and homeopathic industries, that they see these as extensions of where we are, because homeopathy, herbal, ARE frequency-based. They are resonant-frequency modalities.

Martin: Everything is frequency.

Folsom: The pharmaceuticals—and they don't want to have this out I'm sure—even pharmaceuticals deal with frequency. Whether it's herbal, dietary, anything, it's all frequency, but some of lesser value. The problem with pharmaceuticals are the toxins that come along with them, and they come from a petroleum base, and they're drawing from animal substances, etc. They have to synthesize, in order to get something patented, to have their controls over it.

Martin: Do you want to tell me more about the raid itself?

Folsom: The Postal Inspector came in, Postal Department, on the supposition that "there was a fraudulent return address label on a package".

Martin: [Laughter] Excuse me, I shouldn't laugh.

Folsom: [Laughter] This is true! Now, this was a postal annex, and they said they could not trace the owner of that particular box. This is how they termed it "fraudulent". It happened to be a long-term box, and they may have changed the rules along the way in signing-up for the boxes. It was paid, current.

Now, that label was on a Federal Express package. FedEx is, I'm told, working right in conjunction with the Postal Department today. The Postal Department may not have been informed of this, but the overriding label was the large, preprinted FedEx label, my home address, with my phone number, in my name, and my FedEx account number.

Martin: And this was all on the box?

Folsom: All on the box, and this was a box going to the United Kingdom. The FDA saw my man going there to FedEx, after it was paid for, contracted for constitutionally, they went in and seized that package, and that was not the only one they seized. They were seizing packages, shipments in the postal system, as well.

Back to the raid here. They came in and had us on the sofa.

They tried their interrogations. There were no Miranda rights. There were no charges. And they started asking me for a plea-bargain, and they started reeling out information.

And I said: "What information? There are no charges! How do I respond? How do I reply?"

Let me back-up. This was between the Postal Inspector and the FDA Agent—they were playing "good guy-bad guy" here—and they brought up a phone conversation that I made to FedEx, when I was trying to track that package through the FedEx tracking number. Apparently, I was switched over, I suspect, I was switched over to someone who was an FDA Agent. I said there was a prior FedEx package, ground shipment to Florida, that never arrived. When I called up to track that, they said it was damaged.

I said: "You didn't inform me? Why was I not informed? What was done with it?"

Response: "We destroyed it."

They don't do that. They confiscated it; they seized it!

Get this one: during the interrogation they said they have a recording where I referred to British Homeland Security.

I then said: "British Homeland Security? I never knew such a thing existed! I've never used that terminology; you guys are way off-track here."

Then I said: "You guys are asking me for a plea-bargain? You've already convoluted the first opening statement of what I, supposedly, said. Anything, even if it were writing, you would know better than I do that it would be totally convoluted, fallacious, and have no value."

Silence.

Then the FDA Agent says: "You seem like an honorable and good guy, trustworthy."

My response: "Why do you say that? I never implied such."

Then it was interesting, the two of them jumped on me with the "good guy-bad guy" routine of interrogation. They said: "You cannot lie to a Federal officer." She jumps in: "It's a Federal offense, a felony offense to lie to a Federal officer."

At this point I said nothing. I pointed to the FDA Agent and I looked him dead in the eyes and I said: "Don't even go there. I did not lie to you. I do not intend to lie to you. I did not in the past, the present, nor do I intend to in the future."

At that point they started backing-off. They knew they were not getting anywhere, and they went about their seizure processes. They even went into the bedroom, etc. They could not open the safe. They brought in a locksmith; they drilled it; and finally reset it. They took contracts out of there, one of which was for a foreign country that has government registration of this instrumentation.

In the meantime, the FDA is trying to say this whole technology is a myth, no value to it, never proven. There was never anything proven with Rife; that's what the Agent was saying.

Also, there has been some significant stuff going on here in San Diego associated with the people dealing with Rife—we're talking about across-the-border items.

Some of this first started out when I had received a call from the FBI. They said there is some significant information we need to get to you, can we set up an appointment. Two Agents arrived at my home. They said, due to a recent law passage, they can head-off potential kidnappings, etc. They said that I was subject to being kidnapped, while first enticed across the border for a business deal—and enticed to return, at which point I would be kidnapped and either done away with, or the message would get across that I would not be dealing with these instruments anymore. Now, basically, not drug cartel, but a private-eye that got involved with the marketing of the instrumentation, and wanted to not have competition. This went on.

Then, during the interrogation by the FDA, they asked me to "spill the beans".

I said: "I don't know what you mean. All of this is on the record. I've had as many as six FBI Agents in my home; go to the FBI."

And what's interesting is, I don't fully understand it, but I saw fright on their faces, from not doing their homework, plus there is always that competitive situation between agencies. But they were caught unaware, and they knew it. And there may be some significant legal implications here, also. That was the one time they flinched. I never flinched through the whole operation.

Martin: Jim, do you want to take a few minutes and bring this in for a landing. What do you want to say that would be a general statement to all of our readers about this whole issue, and what is at stake?

Folsom: WHAT IS AT STAKE IS THE RIGHT OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE TO HAVE THE FREEDOM OF CHOICE TO HAVE THE ABILITY TO TAKE ON RESPONSIBILITY FOR THEIR OWN HEALTH AND WELLNESS. THIS IS WHAT IS BEING DENIED THEM, COMPLETELY. THIS IS WHAT IS BEING DENIED THEM THROUGH THE SUPPRESSION GOING ON.

There is the fear from the whole conspiracy cartel situation, the knowledge of this type of technology, which is user-friendly; it is free of side-effects, and so often conditions can be eliminated in one or two sessions. Sometimes it can go on for longer periods, requiring detoxification and cleansing of the body, then clearing the condition. There are no guarantees that it will work in every instance.

But it's a matter of FREEDOM OF CHOICE for the American people. And this is not just an issue of frequency instrumentation; it's the whole dietary, supplement industry; it is into the advanced wellness, the prior "alternative" wellness territory, the freedom of Americans to have this.

It goes beyond that, even. This comes down to basic constitutional rights. Who is in charge here?! Is it a dictatorial bureaucracy or systems of bureaucracy? Or, is it the American people who have the choices? Is it the people who determine their own path? Who serves whom?

This is the vehicle that we have here, to allow the American people to coalesce behind a movement. This is exactly what it is leading up to, at this point. And it is expanding and growing at a very rapid rate.

We welcome and we urge everyone who has an interest here to come aboard and see this to the end! These are American freedoms! We're coming upon the 4th of July here, Independence Day, dealing with what we would like to see as a New Declaration Of Independence, and a New Era Of Freedom in this country.

Martin: Thanks for sharing that with our readers; they're on your same wavelength about the issue of freedom.

So there you have an up-close-and-personal account of a recent action by the medical/pharmaceutical gestapo. This time, however, they've picked on someone who is not about to roll over and play dead. In many ways, Jim is a patriot fighting for freedom in the fullest sense our Founding Fathers intended!

Dr. Len Horowitz

To add another important perspective to this volatile issue, I've asked longtime SPECTRUM friend Dr. Len Horowitz [see News Desk] about his views on electro-medicine and recent attacks by the FDA on the Rife frequency technology. Here is what Dr. Horowitz had to say:

[quoting]

Martin: What is your stand on the use of frequency technology as a wellness option?

Dr. Horowitz: I think it's absolutely rude that the federal regulators have in any way, shape, or form infringed upon the rights of human beings to practice what is, clearly in the Bible, in the book of Numbers, Chapter 7, Verses 12-83, in my book Healing Codes For The Biological Apocalypse, we showed you that those are the electromagnetic frequencies for, virtually, creation, destruction, and miracles, including miraculous healings. The third tone of that ancient musical scale, it's a set of six tones known as the ancient Solfeggio musical scale, has to do with repairing damaged DNA. All the tones have to do with an affirmation of who we are as spiritual beings, first, crystallized into physical matter, ultimately by the voice and music from the Heavenly Throne.

The bottom-line is that, if there is to be separation of Church and State, and if there is to be religious freedoms, then this particular case could be landmark in setting precedents for affirming our right to exist without government infringement on the entire field of electro-medicine, as it speaks to, above all, our spirituality.

Now, let me also add to that point. The concept that DNA is simply a protein-synthesis machine that is directing RNA to send messages to the ribosome, which is the protein manufacturing station of the cell, and subsequently, that creates proteins being formed, which gives rise to new cells and new life. That has been the focus of what we have learned about genetic interests and biotechnologies, namely, that the DNA is simply a physical, mechanical blueprint. That is absolutely false and misleading, based on the most recent science, in the fields of genetics and resonance and biotechnologies and water science, in particular, which shows that the principal function of DNA—that is, about 93% of its active function—is as an electromagnetic receiver and transmitter.

Technically it's called "photon-phonon emissions for intercellular communications and for cellular regulation". Photon is light; phonon is sound. Over 90% of the function of DNA is to receive and transmit electromagnetic frequency signals for everything that is going on in the cell, at any given instant. That means, the enzymatic reactions, the development of the energy processes, the neurological and immunological and endocrine functions, everything that is going on is a manifestation, first and foremost, of electromagnetic frequency signaling.

THAT'S THE BIG SECRET IN MEDICINE!

The Food and Drug Administration is acting as a virtual Gestapo for the pharmaceutical interests and those who wish to continue to control humanity. Ultimately this knowledge, this truth, has the capacity, literally, to set not simply the field of electro-medicine free from such control, but humanity entirely free, from virtually the shackles of ignorance as to who we are as physical beings, second, and spiritual beings, first.

So, that's the wonderful opportunity that's been presented by the Adversary, through the Food and Drug Administration, with regard to this case.

NEW! Anthrax, Smallpox, Vaccinations, And The Mark Of The Beast!

by Dr. Leonard Horowitz

If you are one of the millions of people concerned about recent bioterrorist threats in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks on America, prepare yourself for a reality check. This shocking video analysis of the little known facts regarding threatened outbreaks, and the science, economics, and global politics underlying bioterrorism and forced vaccinations, features one of America's most riveting speakers. Among the world's foremost authorities on the subject of bioterrorism, vaccination risks, and public health, Dr. Horowitz's expert diagnosis here dovetails perfectly with Bible prophecies. Pay special attention to his disclosures regarding the infamous "Mark of the Beast". Dr. Horowitz reveals sacred Bible codes that give expanded meaning to the infamous "666" prophecy (Rev. 13:18) while implicating widely trusted vaccinations, medical biochips, politicians, and institutions that have advanced some of the most horrific population-controlling ploys ever conceived. Anthrax, smallpox, and vaccinations are all part of the same deadly swindle. Watching this video may do more than raise awareness. It may help save millions of lives!

NEW! Star Wars Weapons And End Times Warfare!

by Dr. Leonard Horowitz

If power is the game, and population control the aim, the world's most advanced weapons and energy technologies would be directed from space. Star Wars Weapons would be able to change everything from the weather to people's moods, thoughts, behavior, and health.

Have you noticed the weather has been changing? Are you like millions of people who no longer feel as good as you know you should for your age? Welcome to the new world of electromagnetically managed chaos heralded by U.S. National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski in his book The Technotronic Era.

In this video presentation, Dr. Leonard Horowitz, an award-winning internationally-known public health authority, discusses these technologies for war-making and population control. He explains how toxic metals and human genetics can now be manipulated from space, providing an insidious arsenal with which to conduct genocide in the name of "national security" and the New World Order's "war on terrorism".

I plan to be as active as I possibly can be, working with my colleagues to assert our religious freedoms and exemptions from any legislation that would impair our ability to utilize this technology and this knowledge, to the greatest ability that we have, to uplift the physical and spiritual well-being of people all over the Earth.

Martin: Well said! Wonderful. What is your feeling about the effectiveness of these kinds of technologies for wellness applications?

Dr. Horowitz: It's something that we observe daily, we absolutely experience daily in many ways that are not even perceived. The fact that the new science shows that the electrical signaling in the body affects the nervous system, the nervous system itself, the transmission capabilities of cells, and ultimately tissues, the fact that all of this is being utilized by clinicians in Naturopathy, and electro-medicine, and acupuncture (Oriental medicine), herbology, essential oils techniques, light therapy, color therapy, sound therapy—ultimately it's all based on the fundamental principle of the way the entire Universe operates according to frequencies. And, ultimately, the clinical results are well established.

You have the American public currently clamoring for these services, even though it's mostly out-of-pocket expense, not covered by third parties. Obviously, people are moving away from the fraud of slash, burn, and poison healthcare, to the preventative and alternative healthcare practices that involve natural healing. And ALL of natural healing is based, again, on this concept.

When you think about even the concept of loving, heart-filled intent, and the effects of prayer on healing, or the Placebo Effect, you have to consider how it is that thoughts, ultimately, effect the physical body, and either enhance our immune system or disable it. What's been now proven increasingly, is that it's ALL electromagnetic phenomena ultimately being expressed in a more physical form.

So, the science of frequencies is tremendously powerful. It is THE most powerful! It really integrates your concept of the Great Creator with the physical beings, the living creatures, on this planet.

[end quoting]

So now you see a much larger picture in which to place Rife-like technologies. In that larger picture, both the power for good and the threat to the status quo become all too clear!

Interview With Tim Bolen (JuriMed)

With that point established, we now turn to a conversation I had with Tim Bolen on 4/29/03. Who is Tim? Well, noted on his business card is the following statement you can probably identify with by this point in the story: "Strategies for government-beleaguered health professionals." That ought to give you a good idea of where he fits in. Here's what he had to say:

[quoting]

Bolen: I'm going to give you my opinion about what is going on because I am an opinion writer, and that gives me a little more latitude in terms of what I think is going on. All I have to do is show that I have good reason for it.

Here's what is going on:

There is an organization called the Quackbusters who, in my opinion, their only objective is to shut-down competition to the drugs and surgery paradigm.

[Editor's note: See the great story on page 11 in last month's News Desk relating the sound thrashing these weasely Quackbusters got in a California court recently. The tide is turning and signals the possibility of great gains for freedom if enough people take advantage of these conditions to act with a concerted focus.]

Martin: It's my understanding that they got hammered recently.

Bolen: They sure did, and I was one of the people who arranged that! We set them up, staked-out a bleeding sheep in the jungle, and waited for the lion to show up, then shot 'em. That's what happened to them. They walked into a trap. Having said that, here's what has happened:

They call themselves quackwatch.com. We call them quackpots, so my competitive website is named www.quackpotwatch.org.

Now, on my website, I've got on the left-hand column an article called Who Are These Quackbusters? I did a considerable amount of research to figure out who they are, talked to authorities, followed-up from Jim Carter's book Racketeering And Medicine, and how these came to be, and how they came to be a power in the United States today.

Now, the Quackbusters, several years ago, as part of their project, began to influence certain employees in our government agencies to their way of thinking. They have, I think, three employees under their influence at the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). One of them is named Michael Milgrom, Esq. He's an attorney out of the Cleveland office, and he's the one who attacks everybody with his letters. He's the official attorney for one of their subgroups, called Operation Cure-All, which you can find on the Internet if you go to any search engine and put in Operation Cure-All.

You'll find that Operation Cure-All was funded, several years ago, to the tune of $10 million dollars.

But since that time, they basically have attacked—and on their website they make claims to shutting down—these terrible people. But these terrible people, from my investigation, there are 8 of them last time I looked, are all mom & pop operations who couldn't afford an attorney to fight back. So, that's their big claim.

Now, Milgrom is the attorney for that group, plus he sends out nasty letters to people about Internet operations. They have two others: Matt Daynard and another named Richard Cleland. Richard Cleland's claim to fame is, every time Stephen Barrett ends-up in an article in a newspaper or a magazine around the country that has anything to do with the FTC, Richard Cleland is there speaking, right alongside Barrett. That's the major connection there, against whatever it is that the FTC is attacking.

Since no one in our organization, the North American Health Freedom Movement, has paid any attention to how the politics works, the Quackbusters have had free reign with their three people at FTC. What I think has happened is, those three have put together a little program to convince Timothy Muris, the Bush appointee and his group up there, that there are real problems out here in the world, on the Internet, and one of them is “energy medicine” or what is called “electro-medicine”—because that, frankly, competes very quickly and very strongly with the pharmaceutical industry.

The big push now with this Operation Cure-All and from the FTC, they went to San Diego and they got hold of the U.S. Attorney there, and if you know how U.S. Attorneys work, they are almost autonomous from region to region. It must have come from very high to get the U.S. Attorney's attention.

They assigned a prosecutor down there in San Diego; I have not met the woman, I only know her first name is Melanie. But, from her description, she's in her mid-30s; she's on a fast-track for upward. They've given her this case, and she is just an attack-dog that goes after people. We believe that—and I've made sure that the Rife people and the others understand that—an indictment is imminent; these are criminal charges.

This is just now beginning, criminal indictments, out of San Diego.

Now, the reason for San Diego is because there are a lot of Rife people who operate out of there. There are the Mexican clinics, across the border, which attract attention. So, there's going to be a big push to shut-down alternative practitioners in the San Diego area. And there's going to be arrests, indictments, seizures, the whole thing.

They've already seized stuff from these people [Jim Folsom], and I made it clear to them that they better plan on an indictment. They have not hired me, yet. I would help them with a strategy to defeat it. I have no problem working with them. I am talking to them about it.

My recommendation to them is that they adopt a very hard-nosed strategy about this, and it goes something like this:

When a pharmaceutical company brings a new drug to market, it costs them anywhere between $50 and $100 million dollars of testing to get it approved through the FDA. The system has been set up with the FDA to make it cost this much. They demand this kind of testing on a new product. What the FDA and the FTC together are saying here, through Operation Cure-All, is that unless you've got $100 million bucks, you can't play in this game.

The system has been set up to favor only the richest of the rich, and that means the drug companies. And I consider that system to be bogus.

So, what happens for me here is, my advice to the Rife people is: marshal your forces; get your words together; there is another way of proving that what you are doing is right. Let them take you to court,

Federal Court. It will cost you a whole lot less. They will try to block the evidence; they'll try and block the argument; they'll try to do it all. But, make them do it.

Go ahead; do the campaign in two ways: one, through public opinion; and the other, through this right here. And that's exactly what we're talking about, how to deal with it. It's happened before; they'll try and exclude information. But, basically, what they're going to say is that all of this is fraud.

The answer is: This is NOT fraud! This technology has been around for a number of years; it's time to stop the suppression! That's the defense.

You know why? Because it's true!

It's time to stop the suppression of these things, not just all electro-medicine, which is a big thing, but a lot of our other things that have been suppressed, like oxygen therapies.

Why the suppression?

They're cheap; they work extremely well. They're being used around the world.

Is there any other research being done on electro-medicine like Rife?

Oh YES! A huge amount of it is being done, both underground and above ground, on planet Earth.

We can no longer, in this country, claim to be the do-all, be-all of medical care. Frankly, our medical system here is the 3rd largest killer of Americans. We know that to be true. What in the hell are we protecting it for? We should be attacking it left and right.

So, consequently, those people who are trying to find answers are under fire by our government. Well, that's got to quit! And I'm making these noises, and I'm a conservative Republican from Orange County. I want this to quit, right now!

This isn't a matter of: "Please, would you think about making it quit?" I want to know, from our government: What is your point in putting this out of business? I want the suppression stopped, right now! And I want the people who are behind the suppression placed in a nice federal prison!

Martin: It's been the Big Boys all along. How far it will go in the Federal court system remains to be seen.

Bolen: There's more happening. There are a lot of attacks going on nationwide. I know because that is my business and I have clients everywhere. Some of them are confidential, and I'd like to be able to leak it right now, but I can't. There's a lot happening. Ones like the Quackbusters, and their federal friends, are after them all.

You know, the Quackbusters have been after Hulda Clark for a long time.

Martin: She's fine, now, isn't she?

Bolen: No, they still are at it. They maintain some lawsuits. They're just trying to drain-off her finances so she can't continue her research.

Martin: That's the way they do it.

Bolen: The problem with that is, we've been designing ways to get back at them.

I tried, about a year and a half ago, to get the Rife people interested. I knew something was coming because of my other projects around; I hear things. They didn't listen to me. They decided as a group, the Rifers around the country, that they felt they were doing just fine staying below the radar, and that they would be ok.

I said: "You're wrong and you're about to find out, sooner or later." Sure enough, I was right.

It's like nobody wants to be the first one to test this in California. But we passed SB 577 here [see early in this article]. If you'll read that bill, it makes it ok for homeopaths, naturopaths, nutritionists, etc., to do whatever it is they want to do. That's the law that was passed this last year—in fact, unanimously, both houses, and the governor signed it. So, we've got an impressive lobby here.

Martin: The foundation has been laid.

Bolen: My trouble is, the way I see it around the country, the Health Freedom Movement is kind of like a Celtic army. The Romans defeated 480,000 Celts with 78,000 Roman troops in France, way back when. And the reason was, the Romans were very organized, and the Celts couldn't get together. So, I've learned from that. That's all it takes is organization. But the thing is, the Health Freedom Movement is so huge in this country that they really ought to win, easily—except they don't communicate.

Here's the thing. I don't mind you quoting me on this:

The suppression issue is the biggest health issue we have in America. Since health is such a big problem right now, it makes it one of the top issues in America. To me, and to others who are insiders, the suppression issue is killing Americans.

I want to find out who's behind it, and I want something done about it. I'll do something about it. It's not going to happen on its own. What do we do?

Martin: Going through the legal system is one approach. It's time consuming, and it's expensive.

Bolen: What happens is, people say: don't use the legal system because it doesn't work. My thing is: listen, I'm in a war. It takes all kinds of attacks to win a war!

Martin: That's right. And it's the system we have in place.

Bolen: It's the system we have in place; that's right.

Martin: Not only that, you're sending a message—big time!

Bolen: You bet! That is the message that we intend to send!

[end quoting]

And that's the kind of organized front which eventually sent the British back to England at the time of the Revolutionary War!

Let's turn to an article written some time ago by Tim Bolen which provides background on the subject of the Quackbusters:

[quoting]

Quackpot Watch: The Last Days Of The Quackbusters

Opinion By Consumer Advocate
Tim Bolen

I've been following the activities of the "Quackbusters" for about five years, ever since the name Stephen Barrett (www.quackwatch.com) came up, as a player, against a client of mine in California. I asked the question: "Why would this group be using a doctor from Pennsylvania as their witness, when there are 300,000 health professionals in this State?"

Thus began my education. Now I'm going to educate YOU!

The "Quackbuster" operation is a conspiracy. It is a propaganda enterprise—one part crackpot, two parts evil. Its sole purpose is to discredit and suppress, in an "anything goes" attack mode, what is wrongfully named "Alternative Medicine".

It has declared war on reality. The conspirators are acting in the interests of, and are being paid directly and indirectly by, the "conventional" medical-industrial complex.

Millions of health freedom fighters, and members of the public, worldwide, know what I know. Public outrage and reaction is growing. After 25 years of unopposed success, the "Quackbusters" are now in real trouble. "The end" for them, has begun. They, themselves are being hunted.

The "Quackbuster Conspiracy" is in a desperate place now. They know they've lost the war, and are going to pay a terrible price for their actions. The fear is in their eyes.

Crackpots?

Yes. When the self-named "Quackbusters" stumbled around to find a derisive name to call their victims, they picked the word "Quack" without ever bothering to discover its origins. Its original meaning, from Europe, comes from the term "quacksalver" which was used to describe dentists who were dumb enough to use mercury (a poison) as fillings for teeth. Look at propagandist and Quackbuster kingpin Stephen Barrett's website (www.quackwatch.com), and you'll find that HE IS IN FAVOR of mercury amalgam tooth fillings. Barrett, his cronies, and minions, are not known to do intelligent research.

Evil?

Yes. The "Quackbuster Conspiracy" was started shortly after the American Medical Association (AMA) lost the court battle to the chiropractors in a case begun in federal court in 1976. The federal judge ordered the AMA's covert operation shut down—and leave the chiropractors alone. The AMA files, library, etc., ended up in Stephen Barrett's 1,800 square foot basement in Allentown, PA. Barrett and his minions had the common sense to stay away from criticizing chiropractors for quite some time. Barrett has since abandoned that common sense.

Federal judges have a way of enforcing their decisions using shackles, federal marshals, the federal prison facilities, asset seizure, etc. Even Barrett, in all his incredible arrogance, isn't dumb enough to match wits with a federal judge. I think the Chiropractic Association should consider re-opening the Wilks case in front of that same federal judge—and point right at Barrett and his cronies.

In that early educational case for me in California, Stephen Barrett and two slime-ball investigators from the California Medical Board had convinced members of the Laguna Beach Police Department that a nutritionist using ozone therapy was "a sex criminal preying on women". Flak-jacketed thugs screwed a gun into Salvatore D'Onofrio's ear, forced him to lie on the ground, and thus began a brutal, anything goes, persecution.

D'Onofrio's attorney was a hiking partner of mine, and told me the story on a ridgeline, seven miles up from a trailhead. I laugh now when I remember my naive response: "This can't be happening in America!"

Sal D'Onofrio, through his attorney, hired us, at day 43 in solitary confinement in the Orange County Jail. He was in "solitary" because that's what they do with sex criminals. He was in jail because the judge had set bail at $500,000, an amount his supporters couldn't raise. Barrett's minions were ruining D'Onofrio's life in the press.

We organized a bail hearing for day 48 of incarceration, put 62 of D'Onofrio's supporters in the courtroom, LA network television in the jury box, got the front page of the Los Angeles Times, etc.,—and the judge let D'Onofrio out on his own recognizance. Seven weeks later, the prosecutor dropped the charges.

Who are these people who would, so casually, inflict that kind of nightmare on an innocent man?

James Carter MD's authoritative book Racketeering In Medicine, published by Hampton Roads, carefully explains the Quackbuster Conspiracy.

Alternative Medicine?

"Alternative Medicine" is defined as any protocol, action, or therapy that isn't "drugs, radiation, or surgery oriented".

Wrongfully named? Yes.

So-called "alternative medicine" is actually the health choice of planet Earth. It is a combination of every good health idea invented by mankind, in every country and culture on this planet. There is nothing "alternative" about it. Labeling planet Earth's health choice as "alternative" is, and was, a propaganda device.

North Americans have overwhelmingly (by their purchases) made "Alternative Medicine" the "health choice of the people"—for the best of reasons: it works better than allopathic; it "removes the cause" rather than "treating the symptoms"; it is cost effective; it makes people feel better and think clearer; and it doesn't have all those horrible side-effects of invasive surgery or prescription drugs.

More than half of the U.S. health dollar in 1999 was spent on "Alternative Medicine" and it was all out-of-pocket. Conventional medicine is being paid for, and is surviving, only because insurance and Medicare pay for it; the public won't spend an out-of-pocket nickel on it.

Alternative Medicine philosophies fit the American way of thinking. ("I'll make my own decisions!") Allopathic Medicine philosophies fit the Germanic way. ("Follow my orders!")

"Alternative Medicine" is for people who think for themselves—Americans.

The door to real "alternatives" is barely open. The future of medicine is right in front of us. It isn't in pharmaceuticals; it is in nutrition, body cleansing, prevention, oxygen therapies, and energy medicine—all of which are constantly targeted by the sleaziest of the "Quackbuster" soldiers.

The "Quackbuster" Stronghold

The Federation of State Medical Boards (FSMB) is a vital medical doctor (MD) control point. It is the trade organization of all 50 States' medical boards. The FSMB is the organization that writes the policy manuals, and provides training for, medical board investigators and prosecutors all over the United States. The FSMB is the Quackbuster police agency.

The Quackbusters use the FSMB to persecute two groups: (1) "Alternative Practitioners" within the MD ranks (they treat them like traitors); and (2) non-licensed alternative health professionals (they charge them with "practicing medicine without a license").

The Quackbusters, through the FSMB, have been able to change the focus of prosecutions against "bad doctors". They define "bad doctors" as those who use alternative modalities—and maximum penalties are exacted. We have seen in California that real "bad doctors"—those who kill their patients—actually get off with a slap-on-the-hand by using the defense "but I prescribed a lot of drugs".

State medical boards are not serving the needs of we-the-people; they are serving the needs of the Quackbusters and their paymasters.

Medical board prosecutions are funded by the States [taxpayers]. Barrett and his slime artists don't have to spend a dime. I couldn't even count the number of "alternative medicine" practitioners currently under persecution from mis-informed medical board investigators and prosecutors. The damage done to Americans from this attack is incalculable.

Barrett's Dubious Claims About What "Health Fraud" Really Is

The U.S. government has indicated that "health fraud" is a major problem in the United States healthcare system. Statistics show that "conventional medicine" rips off the American public significantly each year in bogus billings, false claims, unnecessary procedures, and tests, etc.

[Former] Attorney General Janet Reno has a special nationwide "Health Fraud Prosecution Unit" to deal with this massive problem. The prosecutions are against mega-greedy hospitals, HMOs, ambulance companies, nursing facilities, etc.—all "conventional" medical units, not "alternative".

But, if you peruse Stephen Barrett's—don't call him doctor, he's not licensed—website, you get the impression that "allopaths" are to be classified somewhere next to archangels, and "alternatives" are snake-oil salesmen, akin to the devil's minions.

Barrett clearly defines, in smirky arrogance, health fraud as "alternative medicine". Huh?

Doesn't Barrett read national statistics on health fraud? Of course he does; he just ignores them. And "Barrett's parrots" at the FSMB mimic their supreme commander's every word in their policy statements. Anyone can read FSMB policy statements, in their entirety, on the web. Just go to www.fsmb.org and start reading. They, like Barrett, define "health fraud" as "alternative medicine" and fail to even mention the real national "health fraud" statistics.

Why The Fear In Their Eyes?

Three Reasons: Exposure, ridicule, and public rage.

1. EXPOSURE: Health Freedom Fighters, tired of the persecutions, and outnumbering the Quackbusters 100,000 to 1, are now watching Barrett and his soldiers carefully. They've decided to put a stop to Barrett and company. Lists are being made of who the Quackbuster conspirators are, what their function is, where they fit into the conspiracy, who they work for, who their associates are, where they live, and what their probable motives are. Their daily activities, as Quackbusters, are being monitored and documented.

Health leaders consider Barrett and company to be running a subversive organization working against the interests of America.

2. RIDICULE: Examination of Barrett's operation proves that the Quackbusters are a paper tiger. They are a construction with a 25-year-old modus operandi. Their membership is small, they have an even smaller core group, the industry is turning its back on their extremism, and their leadership "public presence" is laughable. Their support network could best be described as pea-brained.

Their "annual meeting" for the conspiracy was held in a Super 8 motel in Missouri. 25 stalwarts attended from, at least, six different plotter groups. Not very impressive.

"Bizarre" Stephen Barrett, his cronies and minions, even labeled two-time Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling as a "quack". The American public, in a consumer-driven movement, is rejecting, with laughter and ridicule, Barrett and company's ludicrous assertions—hence the term "Quackpot" is now used, commonly, to describe the self-named Quackbusters.

3. PUBLIC RAGE: The American public is just now realizing two things: (a) that a good many of those "alternative" things being blocked and suppressed have been around for a long while, but not available to them because of the conspiracy; and (b) that the system to find and put new things in place is corrupt, and works against Americans. Every "cure" since polio has been suppressed, and the proponents of those cures reviled by the Quackbuster conspirators.

Statistics show that every one of those "cures" worked to some extent.

Barrett, his cronies, minions, and henchmen, have every reason to fear public rage. Russian leader Nikita Khrushchev said it best. He said: "We would never invade America, for every American has a gun."

"You mean my mother didn't have to die that horribly, or even die at all?" is a question more and more Americans are asking.

[end quoting]

And yes, indeed, the numbers are at least 100,000 to 1 who are awakening to the longtime conspiracy and unconscionable fraud that's been perpetrated upon the American public by their own government operating as puppets for the big business of medicine.

But people are fed up with such usurpations of basic health freedoms and they're becoming outspoken in their opposition—particularly people who who are experienced in the benefits of alternative technologies.

Anti-Constitutional Activities And Abuse Of Police Power By The U.S. Food And Drug Administration And Other Federal Agencies

In recent years, there has been an upsurge of police activities in the U.S.A., the nature of which most Americans would more readily associate with repressive dictatorships. We Americans have been educated to believe that democracy, due process, assumed innocence-until-proven-guilt, and constitutional protections against illegal search and seizure are the laws of the land.

On paper, these protections are there; but in reality, these basic constitutional rights and freedoms have been gradually and steadily eroded away by new laws, judicial rulings, and bureaucratic decrees.

One of the lesser-known but more significant leaders of this assault on American freedom has been the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Background To FDA Police-State Activities

As early as the 1950s, the FDA was engaged in aggressively spying on healthcare providers who employed medications and approaches which were not considered "acceptable" by mainstream orthodox medicine. Notably, it was and has been the American Medical Association (AMA) which has dominated ideas within the medical community, as well as nearly all legislation related to health care.

If the AMA dislikes a particular healthcare approach, they work to banish such methods within hospitals, and to suspend the medical licenses of any doctor who employs them. They have often been able to rely upon state licensing boards and legislatures, and even the U.S. Congress, to pass laws outlawing natural healing methods and the non-MD practitioner (such as midwives, herbalists, or acupuncturists). Failing here, the AMA and friends in the drug industry have relied upon their allies in the FDA to aggressively assault the advocates of natural treatment methods.

Many new healthcare discoveries have thereby remained "underground", never being allowed to flower productively in the light of day. Inexpensive, non-toxic, and unpatentable natural healing methods have never been seriously or honestly evaluated by the AMA-FDA pharmaceutical-dominated medical establishment. Instead, policemen have been called in to simply arrest and jail the offending practitioners, seize their files, mailing lists, and other property, burn their books, and otherwise trample the U.S. Constitution into the dirt.

• Dr. Royal Raymond Rife was crushed when his new microscopical techniques demonstrated the pleomorphic nature of viruses and bacteria. [1]

• Harry Hoxsey's successful herbal formulas for the treatment of cancer, used in dozens of clinics across the U.S.A. in the 1950s, were stomped into oblivion by an enraged FDA, after Hoxsey refused to sell his formula to Dr. Morris Fishbein, then president of the AMA. [2]

• Max Gerson's dietary immune-boosting treatments for degenerative disease were criminalized by the FDA at the very time he published scientific evidence and clinical reports on their effectiveness. [3]

Today, none of these treatments are OPENLY used in the U.S.A., but only in clinics south of the Mexican-California border.

The FDA also attempted to ban and burn Rodale's Organic Farming And Gardening magazine as "advertising literature" not covered by the First Amendment; many vitamin companies were advertising in it, and Rodale claimed—to the annoyance of the chemical fertilizer and drug companies—that the vitamin and nutrient values of plants were increased by use of natural organic farming methods, thereby improving human health. The FDA lost that case, but Rodale was forced to spend a fortune in legal fees to defend his right of free speech.

Probably the most significant and blatant example of FDA aggression and anti-constitutional activity is the case of Dr. Wilhelm Reich. The Reich Legal Case surpassed the Scopes Monkey Trial in legal and historical significance, as it clearly marked the willingness of the U.S. courts to condone the censoring of speech, the burning of books, the unreasonable seizure of property, and the willful ignoring of written documents presented to judges.

Reich may not have been what one could call a "model legal client", but the willingness of the U.S. courts to incarcerate him, burn his books, and in general treat him like a criminal, demonstrated how far legal technicalities and procedural issues had replaced the original intent and spirit of the law. Certainly all the various judges who reviewed Reich's case and ruled against him, from the local and district court judges, to the U.S. Supreme Court judges, knew they were agreeing to censorship of speech and to the burning of books.

[Editor's note: A superb article on Dr. Wilhelm Reich appears elsewhere in this issue of THE SPECTRUM in conjunction with the theme of this front-page feature story.]

The judges also demonstrated no interest in any of the technical or procedural issues which would have weighed in Reich's favor, such as the fact that the prosecutor was himself Reich's former personal attorney, or that Reich had submitted documents (his "Response to Ignorance") to the lower courts which were, essentially, thrown into the trash. Indeed, the deep significance the courts gave to procedural technicalities in his case was exclusively to those matters which worked AGAINST Reich. Clearly, they were out to "get Reich", no matter what.

On the basis of legal technicalities, his many books and research journals were burned in incinerators by court order, and both Reich and a co-worker, Dr. Michael Silvert, were sentenced to over a year in prison. Reich died in prison, while Silvert committed suicide shortly afterward. Other FDA violations at the time included the warrantless invasions and searches of the homes of people peripherally associated with Reich. In one such case, a home was searched and Reich's books were confiscated from private bookshelves. School teachers and doctors who worked with Reich were fired from their jobs, in a manner reminiscent of the more purely political repressions of that time, the McCarthy period.

The Reich Legal Case has been discussed in detail elsewhere [4], and so will not be repeated here, but its importance lies in the fact that the FDA was able to commit severe anti-constitutional actions—indeed, MURDEROUS actions, against an internationally-known and respected scientist without so much as a peep of protest from the various academic "scholarly societies", "civil liberties", or "free speech" groups, etc. This lack of significant social protest was an encouragement and green light of approval to nearly every federal agency wanting to shape public or private behavior to one or another government policy.

[Editor's note: So, once again, when people finally wake up enough (usually through personal experience) to ask where their freedoms have gone, the answer is: stolen, one small step at a time,

Money And The Conspiracy Of Evil

Conspiracy Con 2002 Lecture (2 hrs.)

By Eustace Mullins

Sixty years ago Eustace Mullins was a protégé of literary giant Ezra Pound, who understood central banking and its relationship with world unrest. He has been a respected researcher for over 50 years, and has since authored many books on conspiracy, including Secrets Of The Federal Reserve and The World Order.

Using his recent travel experiences and Orwell's 1984 as examples, Eustace discusses the irony of Homeland Security and how Americans are now treated as "Enemies of the State". He then describes the real manipulators behind all major wars, the Cold War, the Stock Market, the Medical Scam, 9/11, terrorism, and more.

To accomplish all this, the "perpe-traitors" control the government, the schools, and the media, while keeping us in unimportant jobs, and stealing most of our earnings. For these purposes the Central Bank is the only mechanism that works. Without the government-granted license to print money, the conspiracy would be no more of a threat to us than bin Laden actually is.

Eustace gives a history lesson you won't forget—nor should you!

while you were busy waving the flag and pretending that all is well.]

While blatant political repression of politicians has declined over the years [because they're now more effectively bought-off before ever being placed in the public arena], with increasing protections afforded to political speech, the political repression of unorthodox scientific discoveries related to health and sickness has not declined at all. In fact, repression of non-political speech has increased, especially when it is linked with concrete marketplace activities which conflict with official government policies or big business monopolies.

In the years since Reich's death, constitutional protections against illegal seizure of property, assumed innocence-until-proven-guilt, and due process of law have been flagrantly violated and trampled into the dirt by the FDA leaders and field agents, who are increasingly teaming up with other arms of the federal bureaucracy to increase their power.

Numerous medical pioneers have been assaulted and personally destroyed, in a manner so blatant and aggressive it makes Reich's treatment by the FDA appear almost gentle by comparison. The FDA's police-state activities are taking place all across the U.S.A., but little of it is being reported in the mainstream media—or if so, generally with biased justifications given for the FDA actions, that "the FDA is combating health fraud" or "medical quackery". Here, the reader will be informed of more recent assaults by the FDA against the natural health movement.

The AMA/FDA/Pharmaceutical Cartel

Increasingly, health care decisions in the U.S.A. are being mandated by small cadres of "specialists" who decide whether this or that medication will be made legal and available to the American public. Where scientific evidence once was the criteria for extended use of a new medication, such decisions are today being made more on the basis of the profits which can be made from a particular medication.

Too many of the top physician-bureaucrats working in the FDA, National Institutes of Health (NIH), American Cancer Society (ACS), etc., are themselves often drug-company millionaires, with personal stock holdings or investments in the companies whom they regulate. Drug companies provide large sums to political campaigns so as to definitively influence legislation, and to various medical institutes to "research" their products. Their full-page color advertisements for new drugs in medical journals essentially pay for those publications.

Pharmaceutical companies are one of the highest profit-margin industries in the U.S. who do not have to account for the often extreme prices they charge—higher than anywhere else in the world. Drug company money plays a powerful role in shaping health policy, the approval process for new patent drugs, and publishing (or censoring) research findings about the effectiveness or side-effects of those drugs.

Additionally, nearly every major medical organization and medical society in the U.S.A., to include many governmental agencies like the FDA, NIH, and ACS, expend significant sums of money each year to fund unfactual, even slanderous propaganda against relatively inexpensive natural healing methods, which might otherwise substitute for the expensive and often toxic medications and surgical procedures pushed by the medical-pharmaceutical cartel. "Quack-busting" groups, such as the National Council Against Health Fraud, team up with various medical societies, licensing boards, and the FDA to efficiently snoop upon and "police" the medical community, making sure that only the most orthodox medical treatments will prevail.

Word quickly spreads, through the medical gossip system, if a doctor does not prescribe the usual drugs or treatments. Any doctor employing vitamins, herbs, nutrition, energetic medicine (homeopathy, [Wilhelm Reich's] orgone accumulator), chelation therapy, or any other progressive, innovative, or unorthodox treatment can expect great pressure from these groups, up to and including visits from aggressive, gun-waving "healthcare" policemen.

Similar, or even more aggressive, treatment is meted out to midwives, herbalists, or to other healthcare providers who lack the MD degree, and employ methods which compete with the entire lucrative doctor-hospital system. A doctor or midwife who is today labeled a "quack" in the newspapers can expect as bad and unfair a treatment as did a "witch" in the Middle Ages.

The quite telling consequences of this anti-scientific pogrom against the new and unorthodox health research findings are that a higher percentage of people are dying from degenerative illness today than in the 1950s, while cancer cure and survival rates are essentially unchanged from when the multi-billion-dollar orthodox "war" against cancer was initiated. [5] and drugs, the "war against cancer" has been a huge, expensive flop, benefiting only the over-bloated cancer industry. Today more people are engaged in the "treatment" of cancer than those who die from it in a given year. Obviously, the attitude that "war" is necessary to solve a social or healthcare problem is itself part of the problem, and not part of the solution.

[Editor's note: And for you astute SPECTRUM readers, that "war" attitude provides a big clue about how far up the Pyramid of Power resides those really in control of this whole FEAR-based medical fraud. Another clue would be that "their" agenda includes extensive depopulation of planet Earth without alerting the public that anything particularly sinister is going on. And, hey, if "their" willing puppetry can make a buck in the process, all the better for keeping the REAL agenda on track!]

Increasing Use Of Swat Teams & Seizure Laws

One clear consequence of the widespread "war" approach to social problems has been the growing use of police Special Weapons and Tactical (SWAT) teams to enforce bureaucratic decrees by federal agencies, even those agencies one normally does not associate with "law enforcement".

In recent years, the [superb] farm journal Acres, USA [6] has exposed numerous examples where individual farmers, who were making legal challenges to U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) rulings about crop quotas or loan-security arrangements, had their homes, land, and farm equipment SEIZED at gunpoint by the USDA. A few farmers have been shot dead.

[Editor's note: And as was briefly alluded to earlier, those farmers wanting to run their farms along natural, chemical-free and pesticide-free, "organic growing" guidelines—much healthier for the farmer, the farm, and the consumer—have experienced a mountain of obstacles. So too (as was earlier briefly mentioned) has such organizations as Rodale's popular Organic Gardening magazine (and Rodale Institute, near Emmaus, Pennsylvania), which has been promoting natural techniques since their first (May 1942) issue, as the lucrative "chemical agriculture" push began by ones likewise controlling the pill-pushing business. Was it really an "accident" that founder J.I. Rodale's son and then-Editor-In-Chief Robert Rodale died in an auto crash in 1990 during a trip to Moscow?]

Legal and constitutionally-protected citizen opposition to federal government policies has been met by increasingly aggressive and militant reactions by policemen—armed with machine guns, flak jackets, concussion grenades, and even tanks. The message is: Obey, Or Else!

The USDA, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF), Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA), and even the U.S. Forest Service (USFS) have all developed well-armed "security forces", equipped with Special Weapons and Assault Tactical (SWAT) teams, armored personnel carriers, military-style attack aircraft, and other forms of sophisticated weaponry which flagrantly defy the constitutional ban against the use of military forces for domestic law enforcement.

Hundreds of millions of dollars in property—to include homes, automobiles, cash in bank accounts, and other personal and business property—has been seized by these various agencies, who often work in coordination with the FBI, Internal Revenue Service (IRS), U.S. Customs Service, and U.S. Postal Service.

Surely, some of this military weaponry is genuinely used against organized crime and illegal drug traffic. But it surely does not stop there, and it is precisely the spill-over of such methods against ordinary civilians who break some petty or technical rule of federal bureaucracy, or civilian dissenters to federal policy, or even only unorthodox medical practitioners, which makes it all so dangerous.

RULE BY SECRECY: The Hidden History That Connects The Trilateral Commission, The Freemasons, And The Great Pyramids

BY JIM MARRS

In this astonishing book, celebrated reporter and New York Times bestselling author Jim Marrs painstakingly explores the world's most closely guarded secrets, exposing clandestine cabals and the power they have wielded throughout time. Defiantly rooting out the truth, he unearths startling evidence that the real movers and shakers covertly collude to start and stop wars, manipulate stock markets and interest rates, maintain class distinctions, and even censor the six o'clock news. And they do all this under the mindful auspices of the Council on Foreign Relations, the Trilateral Commission, the Bilderbergers, the CIA, and even the Vatican.

Drawing on historical evidence and his own impeccable research, Marrs carefully traces the mysteries that connect these modern-day conspiracies to humankind's prehistory. The eye-opening result is an extraordinary synthesis of historical information—much of it long hidden from the public—that sheds light on the people and organizations who rule our lives.

Disturbing, provocative, and utterly compelling, Rule By Secrecy offers a singular worldview that may explain who we are, where we came from, and where we are going.

SEE NEXT-TO-LAST PAGE FOR ORDERING OR CALL TOLL-FREE: 1-877-280-2866

laws, for example, have allowed various government agencies to “seize and impound” (STEAL!) the property or cash money of any citizen, based upon MERE SUSPICION that the property or money was acquired from sales of illegal drugs. A citizen whose property which has been seized must post a significant cash bond to the courts (a percentage of the value of the seized goods), and then go to court and “prove their innocence” to the judge before the property is returned. Failing to do so, the “law enforcement” agencies which made the seizure are then allowed to auction off the seized properties and keep a percentage of the money for “internal use”!

For example, there was the case where a large fishing boat was seized by the DEA during a “routine” U.S. Coast Guard inspection, when one of the deck hands was found to have marijuana cigarettes in his pocket. The seizure of the expensive fishing boat destroyed the life’s work of the boat-owner captain, who was held responsible for the concealed actions of one employee.

Then there was the case of Willie Jones, a hard-working gardener who paid cash for an airline ticket, not knowing that airline ticket agents often provide “tips” to policemen about travelers who pay for tickets with cash. The assumption is that anybody buying an airline ticket with cash is a drug dealer! The cops confronted Jones, and confiscated $9,600 he was carrying for purchase of shrubbery for his landscaping business; he was flying to a gardening convention to purchase plants for next year’s work. Although the cops “arrested” his cash, Jones was never charged with anything, and he did not have additional money to go to the courts to “prove his innocence”. So the cops just kept the money. Jones observed: “I didn’t know it was against the law for a 42-year-old Black man to have money in his pocket!”

In another remarkable case, two gardening supply stores, along with inventories and bank accounts, were seized by DEA agents after an employee advised undercover agents how grow-lights might be used for indoor cultivation. Marijuana was implied, but never mentioned explicitly—but so what! The DEA felt the selling of grow-lights was contributing to the drug trade, so they raided the stores.

Now, this is purely legal stealing, where the activities of the cash-greedy federal agents and judges is not supported by anything written in the Constitution, nor by any other moral or rational premise. Indeed, in fully 80% of the cases where assets are seized by the U.S. government under the forfeiture laws, NO ONE IS CHARGED WITH A CRIME OF ANY SORT. [7]

Even the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has gotten into the act of creating its own police force SWAT teams. They recently raided an insectary which was legally challenging the need to obtain “EPA permission” to sell lady bugs to organic farmers.

In another recent disgusting example, when the National Park Service (NPS) wanted to purchase a large plot of land adjacent to a National Park in southern California, the elderly owner, Mr. Donald Scott, refused to sell. Angered, NPS officials teamed up with the IRS and DEA and went snooping for dirt on Mr. Scott “to see” if he was growing pot on his property. One of the NPS agents then conveniently volunteered that he had seen “pot plants” when flying overhead many hundreds of feet up in a helicopter (!), and somebody else received an “anonymous tip” that Mrs. Scott was seen purchasing items in town with hundred-dollar bills. With this fabricated “evidence”, they raided Scott’s rural mountain home with SWAT teams and gunslingers, with the expectation that—if drugs were found—they could confiscate his home and land, and whatever money he had in the bank, which would then become the property of the various “law enforcement” agencies.

As they burst in on Scott’s mountain home early in the morning, Mrs. Scott screamed with alarm at the sight of guns being pointed at her by strangers. Still dressed in pajamas, Mr. Scott jumped up from his bed with a pistol in his hand to defend his wife against intruders. With his pistol pointed to the ceiling, he was shot dead in his own home by the cops, at the very moment when he was complying with police orders to put the gun down. No drugs of any kind were found on the property. The entire raid was staged purely for the purpose of stealing the man’s land, and placing it on the auction block! [7]

These are just a few incredible examples, from HUNDREDS TO PERHAPS THOUSANDS of similar cases, of federal assaults upon ordinary citizens who were never charged with a crime, as more political powers and guns are accumulated into the hands of our unelected federal bureaucracy.

And, of course, there were the events in Waco, Texas, where a fundamentalist religious group was needlessly assaulted by swarms of federal and state police, and Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms (BATF) agents armed with automatic weapons and tanks, leading to nearly 100 deaths (including over 20 children). [8] The incident at Waco was undertaken for allegations which were no more severe than what has been routinely certified and documented as occurring within more established religions (such as child sexual abuse by Catholic clergy). By contrast, no Catholic church or school has ever been invaded by BATF or Health and Human Services (HHS) agents, snooping out “alleged child sexual abuse” at the point of a gun.

A recent Congressional investigation into the Waco massacre suggested the allegations of “child sexual abuse” had been concocted, after-the-fact, by [then] Attorney General Janet Reno, to justify her approval of the shockingly aggressive raid.

These examples are only a few, from many, of clear and growing evidence of the decline of respect for constitutional principles and due process of law—not by ordinary citizens, but rather, by out-of-control, power-hungry government leaders and bureaucrats, stimulating the growth of an American Police State.

Increasingly, these various federal police forces are coordinated through larger and larger computer data banks on ordinary citizens. With poverty and homelessness on the rise, with more and more of the public wealth, lands, resources, and means of production owned and controlled by fewer and fewer people, and with new reforms blocked by both political barriers and bureaucratic immobility, it is not surprising to see an increase in social chaos and crime.

But the public clamor has unfortunately NOT been to address the root causes of crime, or even to hold the guilty federal leaders accountable for their autocratic, indeed fascistic, conduct. Rather, with the news media nearly silent about these various assaults upon democracy and freedom (or with the media uncritically parroting only the federal “party line”), the cry from Washington DC is for even MORE police “protection”.

And so, new legislation is making its way through Congress, supported by both conservative Republicans and liberal Democrats, to grant even more police powers to the various federal agencies, and frighteningly, to centralize their activities under a single anti-crime umbrella.

This is the background against which the AMA/FDA/Pharmaceutical cartel has turned up the heat against healthcare reformers, midwives, physicians employing natural healing methods, and vitamin and herb companies.

Growth Of Natural Healing Methods In The U.S.A.

According to a recent study in the New England Journal Of Medicine [9], about a third of all American adults use unconventional medical treatments, such as chiropractic, therapeutic massage, relaxation techniques, special diets, and megavitamins. Americans are increasingly attracted to non-toxic natural healing methods, as an alternative to the cut, burn, and poison methods of allopathic medicine.

In recent years, there also has been increasing evidence that vitamins and other items advocated by "healthfood nuts" do indeed work to prevent degenerative diseases, and to promote recovery and remission from severe illness. Health reformers are increasingly advocating natural healing methods, including natural childbirth, home birth, breastfeeding of infants, and organic fruits and vegetables.

Vitamins A, B, C, and E, in moderate to high doses, are increasingly being found to reduce one's risk of heart disease, cancers, and other degenerative diseases. Indeed, the National Institute of Health, in response to growing pressure from the public, recently opened an "Office of Alternative Medicine", and has started to fund investigations of natural healing methods. [10] to natural healing methods is growing and threatens the economic monopoly of Big Medicine, the AMA/FDA/Pharmaceutical cartel, which has for many years dictated healthcare approaches used in the U.S.A. with an iron fist.

This appears to be THE major reason for the intensification of the FDA's vicious and murderous war against the natural health movement. The Director of the FDA, under both the Bush and Clinton Administrations, is [was] Dr. David Kessler, a powerful bureaucrat who epitomizes what Wilhelm Reich meant by the term HIG (Hooligan In Government). Kessler has intensified efforts by the FDA to control what is said, published, used, or sold in all aspects of healthcare in the U.S.A. He has established a "snitch" telephone hotline whereby "responsible doctors can call in and report any of their colleagues engaged in unacceptable, unorthodox, or deviant medical practice".

A blatant double-standard is applied: natural health advocates are assaulted for legal technicalities or for no reason at all, while big pharmaceutical and surgical device companies can literally get away with murder. Nutritional supplements with proven benefits are banned without evidence of any public health hazards, while synthetic pharmacological drugs or horrific surgical devices which have never been proven effective, are approved in spite of demonstrated deadly side-effects.

Even when evidence is found that the pharmaceutical companies completely fabricated their FDA-approval data out of thin air, nothing is done; the FDA turns a blind eye in such cases.

Some examples [1993]:

- The FDA has received over 5,500 complaints against Aspartame (NutraSweet), which was legalized amid controversy regarding the capacity of this substance to alter brain hormone balances; some 9% of the complaints today involve serious neurological effects, including seizures.

- A recent major study by UCLA researchers of 109 patent-drug advertisements found 81% to be "inaccurate, misleading, and even dangerous." [11]

- A General Accounting Office report found that 51.5% of patent drugs approved by the FDA between 1978 and 1986 had "serious post-approval risks" not disclosed on originally-approved package inserts, including "heart failure, myocardial infarction, anaphylaxis, respiratory depression, convulsions, seizures, kidney and liver failure, severe blood disorders, birth defects, and blindness". [12]

In spite of these and many other deadly problems associated with costly "FDA-approved" patent drugs and medical devices, you never read about a major pharmaceutical company being raided with SWAT teams, their bank accounts seized, with offices, laboratories, and homes of officers being raided and ransacked at gunpoint, or their drug inventories being confiscated and impounded. Nor has the FDA taken any actions against the blatant advertising of drugs within medical journals publishing papers purportedly evaluating the efficacy and safety of those same drugs.

But such repressions and police actions are being taken against natural healing clinics and smaller laboratories all across the U.S.A. for doing nothing more than manufacturing, selling, or prescribing vitamins, aloe vera, herbs, and other non-toxic food substances. 9/11: THE GREAT ILLUSION

End Game Of The Illuminati. Our Choice: Fear Or Love?

NEWEST BOOKLET BY GEORGE HUMPHREY

[Excerpts from the author's Introduction:] Though I knew in my heart from day one that the 9/11 WTC/Pentagon assault was a staged event, I told myself that I would not write another booklet. Plus, I had had one too many conversations with dear and educated friends who had gone absolutely ballistic when even the concept that anything other than the reported "news" could be behind this episode.

However, as I listen to the media and their 24/7 frenzy of hateful misinformation, I knew it was time to act. This booklet is not for everyone. But it is for those who love their country and have that rare quality called an open mind.

9/11: The Great Illusion is intentionally kept short so as many as possible will have access to this material. People must wake up to some cold hard realities: A small occult group—The Illuminati—have been organized for centuries, and have control of our economy, culture, and political organizations. These people have ZERO respect for our Republic and Bill Of Rights. They are behind a vast majority of the wars and revolutions, and are behind the events of September 11th.

This booklet is presenting evidence that goes against everything that the mainstream media and political structure would have people believe.

supplements to low-income individuals, is raided by armed FDA agents and U.S. marshals. Breaking down the doors, the agents spent 12 hours seizing every nutrient product, file, and newsletter they could get their hands on, including many personal items of owners and employees. Even telephones and computers were "ripped from the wall". Four years later, another raid took place, after the Foundation relocated to Arizona. Employees were intimidated into thinking they had been "shipping illegal drugs" (vitamins!), but no charges were filed against anyone. The raid took three days to complete. Requests for the return of property were consistently refused. Lawsuits against the FDA are in progress. [13]

2. (1990) Mt. Angel, Oregon:

Nine FDA agents, 11 U.S. marshals, and 8 heavily armed Oregon state police raid Highland Laboratories, kicking in both front and back doors. Over an 11-hour period, virtually everything except tables and chairs were carted off to waiting trucks, including many items not listed on the search warrant, at a total value of $37,000. Nobody was informed about the grounds for the raid, the "supporting affidavit" being suppressed by the court. The seized property was taken to an undisclosed location. Mr. Kenneth Scott, owner, and other Highland employees were threatened with violence if they attempted to enter the company premises, and the daughter of the owner was held "in house arrest" for 12 hours at a location several miles away.

Highland subsequently reopened, and hired a separate outside mailing service to satisfy FDA requirements. In response, the FDA raided the mailing service, which was a small business run out of the home of a woman in another town. Finding nothing there except mailing equipment and business records, FDA agents threatened to confiscate the woman's checkbooks and cash, failing to do so only after being begged not to. When she asked them: "Why are you doing this?" the agent replied "Somebody's got to do it!" Because of the raids, the owner of the mailing firm subsequently closed her business and refuses to file charges out of FEAR OF GOVERNMENT REPRISALS (!). No charges were ever filed by the FDA against anyone, nor has any of the seized property been returned. The FDA still has not given anyone reasons for their outrageous tactics, which were designed simply to put the firm out of business. [14]

3. (1990) El Cajon, California:

The FDA attempts to railroad Sissy

Harrington-McGill, 57-year-old owner of a pet food store, for violation of a proposed Health Claims Law because her literature stated vitamins would help keep pets healthy. Her store was raided and ransacked without a search warrant. When her day in court arrived, Harrington-McGill requested a jury trial. The judge refused her request, dictating that he alone would judge the case. She was tried and convicted of violation of the Health Claims Law, EVEN THOUGH IT HAD NOT YET BEEN PASSED BY THE U.S. CONGRESS AT THE TIME THE FDA RAIDED HER, OR AT THE TIME OF HER TRIAL OR CONVICTION. Ms. Harrington-McGill repeatedly informed the federal judge of this fact, but he ignored her complaint. For this first-time misdemeanor "violation" of a non-existing law, she was sentenced to 179 days in prison, with a fine of $10,000. She was led away in chains and served 114 days in prison before being released after the U.S. Congress refused to pass the Health Claims Law. Lawsuits against the FDA have been filed. [15]

4. (1990) Reno, Nevada:

The Century Clinic, which employs chelation therapy, homeopathy, nutritional, and natural therapies, is raided twice by FDA and Postal Service inspectors and other government agents. During the first raid, a 14-page list of items was confiscated even though the warrant itemized only three short paragraphs of materials for seizure. Virtually all equipment, supplies, files, mailing lists, computers, and records were taken during a 16-hour ransacking of facilities. No charges were filed. Century Clinic then recovered, rebuilt their facility, and sued the FDA for return of the seized property.

The FDA responded with a second raid, this time involving searches of the persons, homes, and vehicles of Clinic owners and employees. Patients in treatment at the time of the raid were treated rudely, ordered about, and interrogated. Many were not allowed to leave without giving names and addresses. Cash and checks were also seized, along with another 14 pages of inventory. Again, NO CHARGES WERE FILED AGAINST ANYBODY! [16]

5. (March, 1991) Tijuana, Mexico:

Four armed Mexican police, without warrants or charges, kidnapped Jimmy Keller from his office at the St. Jude Hospital, and took him to their headquarters. There, six men in blue jeans and work shirts who refused to identify themselves (later identified as bounty hunters for the U.S. Justice Department) seized him and forced him to cross the border to the U.S.A. There, Keller was arrested by the FBI on 12 counts of wire fraud. Keller had made telephone calls across interstate lines to attract people to his Mexican clinic.

Following the illegal kidnapping of Keller from Mexican soil, without extradition, he was jailed in Texas, his bond set at $5 million. He was later convicted and sent to a North Dakota prison for two years. Keller ran a very successful cancer treatment clinic, which he founded after using natural methods to cure himself of "terminal" cancer. His own cancer had been unsuccessfully "treated" 25 years earlier by orthodox cancer specialists who amputated his ear and mutilated his face. Following the horrific surgery, Keller's cancer returned and metastasized. He investigated natural healing methods, cured himself, and then began helping others to do so. [17]

6. (1991) Texas:

The alternative medical clinic of Dr. Stanislaw Burzynski, an emigre from communist Poland, is raided by FDA and Texas Department of Health agents, following public announcement that Burzynski's successful, unorthodox methods will be evaluated by the National Cancer Institute. Until then, Burzynski had worked quietly for 15 years without any complaints or trouble with the law. [18]

7. (1991) San Leandro, California:

NutriCology, a nutrition supplement company operated by Stephen Levine, Ph.D., a molecular geneticist from the University of California at Berkeley, is raided by 12 FDA agents. Levine spends $500,000 over the next year to fight three different FDA injunctions, all of which are thrown out of court. No complaints were ever made about the firm. [19]

8. (1992) Kent, Washington:

The unlocked door of Dr. Jonathan Wright's natural medical clinic was kicked in, while FDA agents wearing bullet-proof vests, with drawn guns, pushed into the room, shouting at everyone to "Freeze! Put up your hands!" The raid was in reaction to a recent FDA ban on a contaminated batch of B-vitamins in another state.

Wright was not connected to that particular incident, and did not ever use contaminated vitamins. No matter. Workers were held at gunpoint and his office searched, while computers, mailing lists, books, and files were hauled away in a large truck. Patients were generally treated like criminals. The FDA Gestapo agents spent 14 hours at the clinic, searching through everything.

Dr. Wright is internationally known for his work on nutritional medicine and preventative health approaches. At the same time, down the street, the For Your Health pharmacy was being raided in a similar manner. This pharmacy serves preventative health doctors in the Kent area. As of mid-1993, none of the impounded equipment, computers, or files have been returned, and NO CHARGES HAVE BEEN FILED AGAINST ANYONE. [20]

9. (1992) San Diego:

David Halpern and several of his family members, as well as the Presidents of three British and one German vitamin companies, are charged with 198 counts of "conspiracy", "smuggling", and "violation of the Food, Drug, And Cosmetic Act" for importing banned nutritional supplements which are freely available, over the counter, in Britain and Germany. The indictments carry a potential prison term of 990 years in prison. [21]

10. (1992) Texas:

The FDA, working behind the scenes, prompted the Texas Department of Health (TDH) and Texas Department of Food and Drug to undertake raids upon over a dozen large healthfood stores. Over 250 different products, an arbitrary list some 88 pages long, was forcibly seized from shelves. The list includes flaxseed oil, effervescent vitamin C, various herbs, Sleepytime Tea, aloe vera, and zinc products. Following a public outcry, and restraining reactions from Texas politicians, the TDH Gestapo officers threatened one of the ravaged healthfood store owners in the manner of a Mafia extortionist: "Don't talk to the press, or we'll come down on you twice as hard!" No justifications were given for the inclusion of any of the products on the seizure list, no charges were filed, and none of the products were ever returned to the stores. [22]

11. (1993) U.S.A.:

Nearly 40 different natural-healing clinics, healthfood stores, and vitamin manufacturers were raided in May and September, in armed commando-style assaults by combined agents of the FDA, DEA, IRS, U.S. Customs and U.S. Postal services. Details on these more recent raids are difficult to come by, but it is reported that, besides seizing various stocks of vitamins, herbs, and other nutritional supplements and compounds (such as shark cartilage), IRS officials seized both personal and company bank accounts, along with automobiles, computers, office equipment, and other valuables. Mailing lists of customers and patients were of particular interest in the seizures. The homes of the company owners and employees were also raided, without search warrants. SWAT teams, armed with machine guns and flak jackets, participated in some of the raids. The Post Office, in turn, acted to illegally block the mail of some of the companies, effectively shutting them off from communication with the public and leaving them without funds, mailing lists, or other resources necessary to mount a proper legal defense. As before, NO CHARGES WERE FILED.

Some shocking examples of Gestapo tactics occurred. At the home of one employee, dark-dressed men with guns demanded entry, but the scared individual refused to let them in; instead, she went to the bedroom to dial 911 for the local police. The door was smashed down and she was shoved to the floor with a gun put to her head.

In another case, a breast-feeding mother employed at a raided firm was roughed-up and handcuffed for 11 hours while FDA agents ransacked her home.

These latter raids included the clinic and offices of Dr. Kurt Donsbach, author of many self-help nutrition-oriented books widely sold in healthfood stores. Donsbach's home was also reportedly raided, and his personal bank accounts seized. Also raided were the U.S.A. distributors of German-made Neiper Products, formulated by the internationally-known and respected Dr. Hans Neiper, who operates a successful clinic in Germany, and sponsors the popular health-science magazine Raum & Zeit.

Many ordinary citizens were manhandled and threatened with death by gun-pointing government agents during these raids, all for the "crime" of manufacturing, distributing, selling, or prescribing vitamins, nutritional supplements, and related natural health products or methods. [23]

The above are only representative examples from a very long list of similar FDA abuses of power in recent years.

The FDA clearly has become the attack-dog tool of the AMA and pharmaceutical industry, and many FDA field agents are on record as stating that the agency is out to "destroy the health food and nutritional supplements industries". And that is precisely what they are trying to do.

[Former] FDA Director Kessler wants to control not only the marketing of products, but also what is said in speech or print about health matters. He has vowed to "crack down" even on scientific meetings and conferences which present findings "unacceptable" to FDA policies—and this is no idle threat.

SEEDS OF FIRE: CHINA AND THE STORY BEHIND THE ATTACK ON AMERICA

Seeds Of Fire explains how China will use a crisis to launch itself as a new Super Power—and become America's new major enemy.

China by 2015 will have deployed tens to several tens of missiles with nuclear warheads targeted against the United States, mostly more-survivable land and sea mobile missiles. It will also have hundreds of shorter-range ballistic and cruise missiles for use in regional conflicts. Some of these shorter-range missiles will have nuclear warheads; most will be armed with conventional warheads.

That prediction is from a CIA briefing paper to the Bush Administration. It is one of almost 100 pages of never-before-published official documents in SEEDS OF FIRE: China And The Story Behind The Attack On America, by Gordon Thomas. No one can afford to ignore this book!

SEEDS OF FIRE is a book that every patriotic American — everyone who cares about the future of this country, everyone who wants to know what goes on behind the scenes — must buy and read. This is THE book. Written by a highly experienced intelligence analyst, it is simply a MUST. You cannot ignore the warnings Gordon Thomas gives.

As an example of his total credibility, hours after the book was published, the CIA was forced to confirm its findings about the threat China poses. The CIA publicly confirmed what Gordon Thomas reveals in SEEDS OF FIRE. Just how big a threat China is.

This has been kept out of the news agenda because it does not suit certain business interests to have that truth emerge. But at last here it is. Every patriotic American should buy and read this book! It is simply revelatory.

Other revelations include the Inslaw/Promis "largest global software theft in history", MK-ULTRA mind-control applications, and the link between newspaper magnate Robert Maxwell and the Los Alamos laboratory nuclear secrets "spy" case.

But it is the China connection that ought to alert all thinking Americans to "the sleeping giant" of the Orient. Be informed. Be astonished.

Kessler and the FDA are the closest thing to a domestic Gestapo-type police force in the U.S.A., and their power is growing; new alliances are being cemented between the FDA, IRS, DEA, FTC, Customs and Postal Services, HHS, and other government agencies, to "combat the growing menace of health fraud".

The FDA alliance has destroyed the lives and work of numerous medical pioneers, as outlined above, usually WITHOUT ANY CHARGES BEING FILED. They simply arrive at the offending clinic and home of the pioneer, break down the doors, shove guns into the faces of everyone present, seize and impound office and laboratory equipment, mailing lists, computers, files, bank accounts, etc., carting everything off to a warehouse where it is dumped. Even personal funds in a bank account are "impounded" (stolen!) by these government thugs, whom we may assume are, like DEA agents raiding a crack house, using drug-seizure laws to keep a percentage of whatever they steal!

Amazingly, NONE of the major political parties have displayed alarm or interest in these FDA assaults. It has all been done with the full knowledge and approval of top politicians (Reagan, Bush, Clinton, Gore) and Justice Department officials (Janet Reno). Virtually ALL of these politicians have consistently been sent letters of protest by the lawyers, friends, patients, and co-workers of the various clinicians or small businesses who have been raided. To my knowledge, nobody who has been raided by the FDA has ever received a friendly note or a helpful response from any of our political Royal Family. These power elites either agree with the FDA, don't care about natural health matters, or are completely isolated from what is going on in the real world by layers of bureaucracy and "helpers", who censor the pleas for help from their mail and telephone calls.

The FDA raids demonstrate a serious erosion in the principles of government by law, due process, liberty, and justice. For health matters, at least, we now have government by iron-fisted bureaucratic decree, with only the façade and illusion of law.

Originally the FDA was formed under the mandate of the Pure Food & Drug Act, which simply required that products be accurately labeled as to what their contents are and to actually contain those ingredients, which is a necessary regulation in order for consumers to make informed decisions. However, this simple mandate has grown into a bureaucratic monster which has decreed itself the sole judge, jury, and prosecutor (with its own hit squads) on matters of medical efficacy.

Since Reich's time, and through the 1960s, 1970s, and 1980s, the FDA has consumed millions of taxpayer dollars to wage its war against natural approaches to healthcare. The result is that our healthcare system is one big gigantic expensive mess, rife with official fraud, and a holocaust of victims, due to the toxic and deadly side-effects from ineffective "approved" drugs and horrific surgical mutilations.

Nature, science, and compassion have been thrown out of the house of modern medicine, and the doors and windows have been barred shut, with armed guards posted outside.

The Congressional Battle

In spite of the damage done to many individuals, clinics, and small businesses, the natural health movement continues to fight back, through legal means and by pressuring their elected representatives to restrain the FDA. But the FDA has its own supporters in Congress, and wants even more power and authority so that it can go out and even more thoroughly "search and destroy" the natural health movement.

New legislation has been offered into the U.S. Congress which would grant the FDA the more complete and sweeping police powers it wants. In 1993, several new Congressional bills were proposed: the Regulatory Enforcement Amendments for the existing Nutritional Labeling And Education Act (H1662, H2597, H3642, S1982, S2135). Their sponsors are long-time FDA supporters and recipients of pharmaceutical PAC "donations"—Rep. Henry Waxman (D-CA), Rep. John Dingell (D-MI), Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-MA), and Sen. Howard Metzenbaum

(D-OH).

The proposed legislation would grant to the FDA:

- Power to set arbitrarily low potency levels for vitamins and foodstuffs, and to forbid the sale of any vitamin or foodstuff which contained levels higher than the FDA mandates.
- Power to forcibly censor advertising of health claims in magazines and books.
- Power to embargo and destroy any imported product without proving its threat to the public health.
- Power to issue its own subpoenas and to undertake WARRANTLESS searches, seizures, and electronic surveillance, based upon MERE SUSPICION, without the need for court approval.
- Power to set its own punitive fines against anyone who fails to obey their demands—up to $250,000 for individuals, and $2 million for businesses.
- Power to dictate to the Federal Trade Commission new regulations for censoring health claims in television and radio programs and advertisements.
- Power to pay informants a reward, up to $250,000, for reporting on suspected violators of FDA regulations.

Other related legislation was also proposed (SS732, S733, H940, Sen. Edward Kennedy sponsoring on behalf of the Clinton Administration), which would establish a "national registry and tracking system" for the vaccination of all infants and children—a prelude to the notorious "Smart Card" or "Health Identity Card"—with total control over healthcare decisions by a centralized medical Big Brother. These bills, which are offered up in one version or another, year after year, mandate "social workers" to essentially become the new "healthcare police", calling upon every home in America, door to door, to "investigate" whether or not every child in residence would have all "mandatory vaccines". If not, the child might be blocked from enrollment in school, or the parents charged with "child abuse", and the child forcibly taken away by the state for adoption.

Already, legal attacks for "child neglect and abuse" have been mounted by social workers and medical authorities against parents opting for home-birth, and against parents refusing to inoculate their children with potentially dangerous experimental vaccines. [24]

Even breast-feeding mothers have had infants ripped from their arms, being charged with "child sexual abuse" by power-drunk "social workers" who did not approve of breast-feeding beyond two years. [25]

Coupled with the new, national health insurance initiatives, we rapidly approach the creation of a politically-directed, centralized network of "health spies" and "health police", whose ultimate goal would be to root out any and all forms of natural healthcare, or anyone who would exhibit signs of independent-mindedness or "disobedience to authority" regarding basic matters of child-rearing, sexuality, education, or health.

This is reminiscent of the KGB neighborhood-spy systems of the communist nations, and the religious police of the fundamentalist Muslim nations. It is a clear and present danger to our democracy, given the fact that Americans today are prone to grant to white-coated "doctors" the same uncritical, unquestioning obedience as once was given to black-robed priests during the witch-burning period of history, or to communist-party functionaries during the Stalinist purges.

Science, particularly medical science, is today the New Religion of Homo Normalis, and the witch hunt against heretic disobedient unbelievers is gathering steam.

Opposing the above FDA/AMA/pharmaceutical Gestapo legislation was the Health Freedom Act (S784 and H1709) sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) and Rep. Bill Richardson (D-NM). This bill, which was passed in modified form, restricted the FDA on some of the above matters, preserving the rights of Americans to make their own essential health decisions—regarding vitamins, herbs, and food supplements at least.

There additionally are a few states, such as Alaska and Washington, which have passed specific legislation to protect natural healthcare methods, though it is not clear that these laws do anything to restrain the FDA, which is governed by federal legislation. Rep. Henry Hyde (R-IL) has also sponsored the Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act Of 1993 to restrain the "long arm of the law", and place the burden of proof on the government in asset seizure cases, where it belongs.

These latter laws to restrain government power are a start in the right direction, but in fact do not go far enough to curb the persisting abuses.

Wilhelm Reich's suggestion that judges, prosecutors, and government officials who plot to throw innocent people into prison should themselves be imprisoned, is the kind of strong medicine necessary to prevent our social situation from spiraling into even more despotic conditions.

Clearly, a Congressional Investigation with public hearings and testimony should be initiated in Washington DC to allow hundreds of ordinary citizens the right to come forward and tell their stories about U.S. government hooliganism, in full light of day, and where the "mainstream" news media could not so easily ignore it.

A Special Prosecutor should also be appointed by the President, to investigate the blatant Police State activities of the FDA and other governmental agencies.

FDA Commissioner Kessler should immediately be fired and investigated for his role in these abuses.

All FDA leaders, field agents, and lawyers, AMA officials, and prosecutors and judges who plotted, approved, or directed the invasions of clinics, laboratories, and homes of medical pioneers, carrying out the massive seizures of property where nobody was ever charged with a crime—those individuals should receive stiff fines and jail terms, with compensation paid to those whose lives and work was destroyed by power-drunk bureaucrats.

Even those now-elderly FDA officials, prosecutors, and judges who presided over the burning of Reich's books should be held fully accountable for their past abuses of power.

These and other concrete steps must be undertaken if we are serious about our Constitution and Bill Of Rights, and if the words "land of the free" are to have meaning beyond that of a mere slogan, recited mindlessly at political rallies.

Clearly, unless our social reformers and healthcare pioneers are allowed to move from the present suppressed "underground" situation, and practice their arts openly in the social marketplace, free from constant FDA-police harassment, there will be no real health reforms or pioneering health breakthroughs to reach the general public. The battle lines are drawn, but the outcome is not clear or certain at all. Hanging in the balance is nothing less than the future of our remaining democratic and social freedoms.

Postscript, 1995-2001

Since the time when this article was written, the following events have taken place:

- Congressman Henry Hyde has introduced new legislation to dramatically scale-back seizure laws, putting the burden of proof back on the government, where it belongs. To date, however, his reform measure is not part of the new "Republican Agenda", and no meaningful reform has in fact yet taken place.

- Mrs. Scott, widow of the murdered Donald Scott mentioned above, sued the government for shooting her husband in his home without cause. She lost her case, which is on appeal.

- Congressional hearings on the Waco, Texas massacre of the Branch Davidians has revealed that the FBI and BATF lied and fabricated documents later presented to the U.S. military and Justice Department, falsely claiming a "methamphetamine laboratory" was in the Davidian's compound. This lie allowed the military to provide helicopters and tanks to the FBI, for use in the subsequent "final assault" on the compound, which resulted in the deaths of nearly all inhabitants. (Federal law prohibits the use of military weaponry and resources in civilian law enforcement, except in drug-related cases.)

The hearings also revealed a sharp split between the FBI/BATF "troops" on the ground surrounding the compound, and the FBI negotiation team, who were in telephone communications with Koresh and the Davidians inside the compound. The "troops" were literally "chomping at the bit", wishing to invade the compound with poison gas, concussion grenades, tanks, machine-guns, etc., in spite of the fact there were women and children inside. A deal which had been arranged by FBI negotiators for complete surrender of the inhabitants was sabotaged by the "troop" leaders who pushed for the gas attack (flame attack?), and whose contempt for the negotiation team was well-documented.

To my knowledge, the issue of the flame-throwing tank, documented in videotapes [8], was never openly discussed at those hearings. FBI top brass were reprimanded, but nobody has been charged with any crimes, and nobody has spent a day in jail for the nearly 100 civilian deaths, or the subsequent cover-up.

• New “anti-crime” and “anti-terrorism” legislation, some of which was rammed through Congress after the Oklahoma City bombing, provides even more sweeping powers to the FBI, and for both CIA and military resources to be used against U.S. citizens for anti-drug or anti-terrorism activities.

The problem here is the very wide and broad definitions of what constitute such activities. Even before the new laws were passed, anti-drug legislation had been abused to attack physicians engaged in natural healing methods.

(Note in 2001: More leeway is given to the FBI and CIA in new anti-terror laws following the disastrous WTC and Pentagon airline terror-attacks. While it is the opinion of this writer that these laws are justified and necessary in this time of national emergency [except that such “national emergency” was obviously fabricated by the same ones pushing the subsequent legislation!], it is also a legitimate fear that they will be misapplied against unorthodox physicians and healers by the FDA [among many other targets].)

• Dr. Jonathan Wright, with help from citizen’s organizations such as National Health Federation, Cancer Control Society, and Citizen’s For Health, organized a public relations assault upon the FDA and fought back with lawsuits. He won a victory of sorts when the FDA recently announced they were not going to file charges against Wright, even though for 3 years they have illegally held onto his property, patient records, computers, files, etc. The Congressional legislation which would have given the FDA increased power and authority was passed, though in watered-down form. New legislation by both pro-FDA and anti-FDA forces have been organized. The battle is not yet won.

• Newt Gingrich and other Republicans announced in 1995 that they would “take on the FDA” and “restrain its powers”. This led, in my opinion, to a highly premature celebration on the part of many health-reform activists, that the new “Republican Revolution” would bring about more freedoms in healthcare. Unfortunately, in various televised and published interviews, it is unmistakably clear that the new Republican Congress only wishes to prevent the FDA from restraining the drug companies and medical device industry.

I personally overheard, on one of the televised news programs, a debate between leading Republican and Democratic lawmakers, wherein they both emphatically stated that they were opposed to “medical quackery” (meaning: natural healing methods) and both supported the FDA in its efforts to “clamp down” on healing methods not approved by “general medical practice”. In short, there is no evidence that natural healing methods will get more support from the Republicans than from the Democrats.

• In the face of evidence of demonstrated health risks, and strong protests by citizen’s health groups, the FDA has approved the public marketing of dangerous new drugs and vaccines with proven toxic side-effects, irradiated foods (for food preservation), genetically-engineered bovine hormones (for stimulation of milk production in cows), and artificial fat. In coordination with the push to provide BGH to all American milk cows, “protein bypass” feeding methods have been initiated, wherein the carcasses of sheep and cattle (even those which have died of unknown causes) are ground-up and mixed with cattle feed, and then fed back to the dairy cattle for “protein enrichment”. Such foul and unclean feeding methods were part of the reason why Mad Cow Disease spread in England. A similar syndrome exists in the U.S.A. under the name “Downer Cow Syndrome”. Because of such health risks from American beef, the European Economic Community has a ban on the importation of American beef products. The FDA says it is OK for Americans to eat what Europeans feel is unclean and unsafe.

• In late 1996, the FDA announced plans to try and “regulate” (read: suppress) the free flow of information on “unapproved” healing methods on the Internet. As always, they want to control what is said, and by whom, on health matters.

• As of 1996, Dr. David Kessler was still in charge of the FDA. But not much long after. Kessler left the FDA, and at least some of the rather draconian police-state aspects of FDA attacks against holistic medicine have declined in frequency ever since. This does not mean the FDA has “reformed” however, as seen in their enthusiastic embracing of genetically-modified foods, and their push to introduce food-irradiation, and to undermine all efforts to have genetically-modified foods fully labeled.

Even though the above article is almost ten years old, it speaks with great clarity about the trend, already then in full swing, to deny Americans the freedom to choose their own pathway to health. And since the contrived events of 9/11, that trend has only been expanded through even more legislation—like the Patriot Act and the Homeland Security Act—which is designed to further limit our fundamental freedoms in all aspects of living, including health.

Much More Has Been Written

There has been so much written on this subject that there is simply not room to include more of it here. Just a few of those additional, substantial, and more recent articles that have been written about the FDA's abuse of authority include (available online):

- LEF's Magazine, August 1998, titled "First Amendment & Codex Alert" by William Faloon.

- "FDA Abuses Alternative-Medicine Industry But Is Lax On Drugmakers" by Milton R. Copulos, appearing in Insight On The News, and posted on the Life Extension website.

FDA—A Rogue Agency

With such a long pattern of abuse of power, some important questions come to mind:

What can be done to curtail these abuses by this aggressive super-puppet agency with an annual taxpayer-supported budget (that we know about) of $27,355,000?

Has Congress effectively abrogated its authority over the FDA, thus coming in violation of Article 1, Section 1 of the U.S. Constitution, which states that: "All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress..."?

And if Congress is in violation of the U.S. Constitution—still the highest legal authority in the land regardless of efforts to make it subservient—what is to be done about it and by whom?

Could Congress, despite its current impotent role, be pressured enough by we-the-people to appoint a Special Prosecutor to investigate a long pattern of criminal activity, theft, and intimidation by the FDA—the very agency it is turning its own authority over to?

And at what point do the individual States step forward, under pressure from the citizenry, to address legal violations of basic rights by these federal thugs manipulated by Big Business and those higher up the world-control ladder?

The fact remains that government, unchecked, is hardly likely to police itself! It's the responsibility of we-the-people to correct this out-of-control situation that's gotten to this point precisely because WE'VE not been minding the store.

Class Action? That's one possibility. Certainly with the number of "alternative" healthcare and wellness organizations that exist throughout the United States, NETWORKING BECOMES KEY to finding united solutions that have been begging attention for so long. It takes aggressive participation. Perhaps even aggressive lobbying. (Note: I didn't say hostile or violent; I said aggressive.)

Consider the tragic toll in terms of compromised health, lost human lives, and unnecessary astronomical costs due to the suppression of Rife and other powerful technologies by the FDA over the years, especially since the early 1930s! AND THEN ASK YOURSELF HOW WE CAN POSSIBLY LOOK THE OTHER WAY AND ALLOW SUCH A MOCKERY OF COMMON SENSE TO CONTINUE!

Whatever the final outcome may be, the fact remains that more and more people ARE stepping-up and taking responsibility for their own health, and no amount of "bought" legislation will reverse that wise and determined trend. It's time for the politicians to pay attention to the will of their constituents, not to Big Business and other related special interests that have for so long manipulated public policy.

When will we finally hold Congress accountable for playing a significant role in such extensive criminal behavior against we-the-people?

Nobody said reclaiming our health freedom was going to be easy. But what's the alternative?

And think about this: How important is your health to YOU?! ☺

Who Was Dr. Wilhelm Reich?

And Why Has History Tried So Hard To Erase Him?

Editor's note: The following superb article, from the March 13, 2003 issue of The Idaho Observer, is offered as an important extension in conjunction with this month's front-page feature story. Dr. Wilhelm Reich is mentioned in that story (along with Dr. Royal Rife) as another significant trailblazer whose advanced research was viciously attacked and suppressed by those wishing to preserve the status quo of people control on planet Earth.

Reich's research opened up vistas of possibilities with such far-ranging implications—well beyond “just” the simple curing of illnesses—that his work held the keys to nullifying the core forces of coercion utilized by the world controlling elite to keep the rest of us in line. You can imagine how many big-ego toes he stepped on—whether he realized it or not!

The Idaho Observer introduction to this article states Reich's situation well:

“Before dismissing what you are about to read, consider that the FDA did everything in its power to eliminate the knowledge of orgone energy from the world because, it claimed, ‘it doesn't exist.’

“If orgone energy does not exist, it is, therefore, not a threat—is it?”

“Rather than ignore this thing that does not exist, the FDA effectively sentenced Dr. Wilhelm Reich to death and, for at least a decade, actively pursued a campaign to destroy all the books, notes, and research papers it could find containing the word ‘orgone’. Judging by the government's actions, orgone energy does, indeed, exist.”

Their extreme actions against him only served to reveal, beyond any doubt, just how important Reich's research actually was.

3/13/03 JERRY MORTON

Dr. Wilhelm Reich (1897-1957) is still noted historically for his work in psychiatry and psychoanalysis. However, Dr. Reich's work in biophysics has been stricken from the historical record.

In the mid 1930s Dr. Reich began noticing an energetic connection that is shared by all living beings and had the clarity of mind to not dismiss the observation as unimportant. Dr. Reich called this energy “orgone” and worked for decades demonstrating its laws and studying its various manifestations.

His work encompassed 40 years within six countries, but in the end he suffered the indignity of seeing his life's work by the American government and the American medical system.

Wilhelm Reich was born in Austria in 1897 as the son of a rather wealthy farmer and, as was common at that time, he was home schooled, first by his mother and later by a number of tutors. He excelled in his studies because of his intelligence and also, in part, out of fear of his father's horrible temper that would erupt over something as trivial as an incorrect answer in his studies.

Reich's family was tragically dysfunctional and, at age 13, his mother poisoned herself to flee the abuse of Reich's violently-tempered father. Four years later, Reich's father died of pneumonia—a financially destitute and lonely man. Reich, at 17, ran the farm himself for a short time after his father's death, but the property was destroyed by World War I in 1915.

After serving in the Austrian army on the Italian front, Reich began attending classes at the University of Vienna and graduated in 1922 as a doctor of medicine.

While studying for his doctorate, Reich became a protégé of Dr. Sigmund Freud, and soon after graduating became the clinical assistant at Freud's Psychoanalytical Clinic where he, himself, became a pioneer in psychoanalysis.

In his book Character Analysis (1933), Dr. Reich detailed a biological basis for neurosis and provided a step toward the discovery of the cosmic orgone energy. During the years 1936-1939, Dr. Reich conducted experiments concerning the idea of airborne infection. He showed that microorganisms form themselves from inorganic material and disintegrating organic substances. He proved where airborne germs came from and demonstrated the absurdity of the commonly held “air germ” theory. It was during these experiments in 1939 that Dr. Reich accidentally discovered radiation particles which he later named orgone.

An assistant had mistakenly taken the wrong container from the sterilizer and banned in America and tons of his books and journals burned by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration per bureaucratic decree.

It was a brazen act of censorship that is overlooked today within the texts of history.

Prior to his organomic research, Dr. Reich had earned an international reputation as a scientist of integrity. Once, after he had demonstrated orgone energy to Albert Einstein, the famous physicist exclaimed that “this would be a bombshell to physics”.

Dr. Reich spent his last days in prison falsely labeled a quack and a racketeer heated the substance within it to incandescence. The substance was common ocean sand and, when cultured and inoculated on an egg and agar medium, yielded a yellow growth. When viewed under high magnification this growth was seen as vesicles (he called them SAPA bions) that glimmered an intense blue color that, in time, would grow and then move about.

As he continued to experiment with these "bions" he noticed that, when he placed live cancer cells next to them, the cells would die. It was during days of observing these phenomena that Dr. Reich came down with an extreme case of conjunctivitis, and his eyes became very sensitive to light. He noticed that it affected his eyes the most when he was looking at these vesicles through his microscope.

During the course of this work, in the winter of 1939, Dr. Reich also noticed that he had developed a suntan under his clothing. He reasoned he was being exposed to some type of radiation, and it greatly worried him. He used a radium electroscope to test the culture tubes, and it gave no reaction. It took a few weeks for him to realize that this newly noticed radiation (that he had named "orgone") was present everywhere.

Taking his SAPA bions into the darkness of his basement and waiting for two hours, he noticed that his hair and clothing emitted a blue glimmer, and the room was filled with a hazy, slow-moving, gray-blue vapor.

Over time, Dr. Reich demonstrated that the orgone radiation was the same energy that the Sun gave off and that the incandescing and swelling of the sand had released this energy once again from its material state. He was forced to this conclusion by the facts before him, but he admitted having to overcome great emotional reluctance in doing so.

Further experiments showed that this ever-present orgone would be repelled by metal objects and absorbed by organic material. By making a box with alternate layers of organic material (wool) and metal, Reich found that he could accumulate a more concentrated field of orgone. He called these boxes "orgone accumulators" and they played a major role in his experimentation with orgone.

Nearly 15 years later, the American government made an attempt to wipe the very word "orgone" from the English vocabulary, by banning the accumulator and destroying Dr. Reich's books and journals.

Dr. Reich was able to watch orgone in the various forms it would take on within an accumulator. The forms were: a bluish-gray fog-like formation, deeply blue-violet luminous dots, or whitish rapid rays.

He was also able to demonstrate and measure orgone with a thermometer and an electroscope, as well as with a Geiger counter.

[Editor's note: These very sensitive but very different devices—and other instruments, if they had been available at the time—all respond to this energy

because it interacts with the very SUB-STRUCTURE of the physical matter out of which all the different instruments are necessarily constructed.

For example, it's not that the orgone is radioactive; but in the case of the Geiger counter's REACTION to an orgone concentration, it may seem that way. In actuality, the concentration of orgone likely changes the properties of the gas in the Geiger counter's high-voltage tube, causing the gas to behave differently (like ice behaves differently than water or steam), and thus the Geiger counter acts AS IF something radioactive were present.

This is a common problem (and often overlooked consideration) when analyzing experiments that involve psychic energies like psychokinesis. Did the psychic's mind influence, say, the actual thermometer that's buried fifty feet below the floor (as is often claimed), OR influence the circuitry sitting right in front of the experimenter that converts the thermometer's output signal to read on a chart recorder?]

What astounded Dr. Reich was the fact that, for over two thousand years, the presence of this orgone energy was overlooked or argued away whenever a scholar attempted to describe what he saw.

What Dr. Reich discovered is nothing short of the energy responsible for the biological pulsation of life on Earth (and possibly the universe). Rather than embracing Dr. Reich's discoveries, the collective (politically motivated) scientific community responded with levels of anger and derision that bordered on hatred; rather than conducting investigations of their own and furthering the knowledge of orgone energy for the betterment of mankind, the (politically motivated) scientific community led the charge to destroy any documents that even mention the word "orgone". And then the (politically motivated) scientific community destroyed Dr. Reich.

Though a meticulous researcher and prolific scientist, Dr. Reich saw himself as only a pioneer in the field of orgonomy (the science of orgone) and likened himself to Christopher Columbus. In his book Ether, God, And The Devil (1950 and 1951), he said that, as Columbus did not discover New York City or the resources on the West Coast of America, but rather a stretch of seashore that was up to that time unknown to Europeans, so he only discovered the orgone energy. This phenomenon, being the common etheric energetic thread coursing through all life forms, represents a universe of discovery of which Dr. Reich located only one small shoreline.

The object of the (politically motivated) scientific community's opposition of Dr. Reich's work was his "orgone accumulator". The orgone accumulator, a "box" large enough for a person to sit in and constructed of alternating layers of organic and inorganic substances, was used to successfully treat his patients for various maladies.

In his book Cancer Biopathy (1948), Dr. Reich recreates his carefully documented work regarding the treatment of several cancer patients deemed hopeless and terminal by orthodox medicine. Several of his cancer patients were “cured” but, being the careful man of science he was, Dr. Reich was careful not to declare orgone treatment as a cure for cancer.

After a lengthy harassment campaign by the FDA over the medical use of orgone, that began in the mid 1940s, Dr. Reich died in prison in 1957.

All of his books and papers were, by federal decree, burned, up through 1962, and may have continued on a lesser scale until 1970. The government of the United States had declared that orgone did not exist and orgone was the only word that was necessary to appear in print to qualify the material as worthy of destruction.

During the course of his varied orgone experiments, Dr. Reich touched upon many aspects of science. Among these, the disciplines of medicine, physics, cosmology, and meteorology. He discovered atmospheric orgone and noticed that, in the presence of pollutants of various kinds, including electromagnetic emissions, the orgone would become stagnant and cause illness and environmental damage.

Dr. Reich called this “stagnant” orgone, “dead” orgone or “DOR”. The effects of DOR would often be that of drought and the formation of deserts.

To counter the effects of DOR, Dr. Reich added long pipes to an orgone accumulator box and pointed it skyward to help balance the atmospheric orgone and bring rain. He called this device a “cloud buster”.

In one experiment starting in October, 1954, Dr. Reich was successful in bringing rain to the desert around Tucson, Arizona. Even before the rain fell, the newly-balanced orgone had caused the grass to grow a foot tall in the desert. This green spectacle stretched some 40 to 80 miles to the east and north of that city. It took tremendous skill to use the cloud buster because it drew the dead orgone into the device and could pose serious health problems to both the operator and the atmosphere itself.

The ability to safely use the cloud buster died with Dr. Reich and remained buried for half a century.

Science, good or bad, historically moves forward of its own inertia; a scientist dies, another scientist picks up his notes and continues where he left off. Not so with orgonomy. It wasn't until almost 50 years after the (politically motivated) scientific community sentenced Dr. Reich to death and erased the memory of his work from history that a new and improved cloud buster would be developed.

Self-taught bioelectric innovator Don Croft has recently developed a modern cloud buster he claims is safe for both the operator and the environment.

Dr. Reich touched upon many aspects of the cosmic orgone energy and knew that it would take many people to develop the many potentials of its nature. In 1948 a close friend of Dr. Reich, by the name of A.S. Neill, stopped by Reich's laboratory, called Orgonon, in the state of Maine. He saw a small motor turning over that was attached to an orgone accumulator. He said that Reich cried out with great joy: “The power of the future!”

When later asked if he had developed that power source any further, Reich is reported to have said that his job was one of discovery and he was going to leave it to others to carry out the results.

Note from Don Harkins, Editor of The Idaho Observer:

The Idaho Observer understands the controversial nature of orgone energy. Though one cannot see or smell it, sensitive equipment can measure it. Therefore, it exists—regardless that the FDA determined [actually just pronounced, like a decree] it did not exist in 1954.

Our contemporary controversy, therefore, has nothing to do with whether or not orgone energy exists, because the federal government's non-scientific wishing-it-away doesn't make it so. The controversy is the modern adaptations of orgonomy and claims by a growing circle of people who believe that Reich's work provided a foundation for positive changes in our embattled world.

One has to wonder if those who worship the “DOR” and revel in its ability to cause misery recognized Reich's discoveries as a direct threat to their globalist intentions. Is that recognition the power behind the campaign to ruin the man and erase the memory of his orgonomic research from history?

The answer becomes obvious when you place into perspective what the government did to Reich. It killed him at the age of 60 for continuing to research, without FDA approval, something it claims does not exist. When asked to prove orgone energy does not exist, it refused to provide the science that supports its claims or the identity of those who conducted the experiments and reached that conclusion.

Those who have ever taken a high school-level biology class understand the scientific method and can determine that Dr. Reich was sent to his death by a government that ignored science to make a political point for all those who may wish to explore orgone energy: Do not.

Most Idaho Observer readers understand energy—that good energy which produces good things (like sunshine, positive thoughts, healthy food, and healthy bodies) occupies higher vibrational frequency ranges, and bad energy that produces bad things (like rot, disease, unhealthy food, and negative thoughts) occupy lower vibrational frequency ranges.

It follows, therefore, that a world saturated in low-frequency vibrations will produce a world filled with anger, hostility, disease, and death.

What kind of world do we live in now?
Ah, success.

Because the U.S. government has managed to keep low, through a variety of socio/political maneuvers, the vibrational frequencies within which Americans operate, our people are sick, angry, frightened, and living in chaos—the environment most conducive to totalitarian control.

Dr. Reich's work evoked the wrath of the baby totalitarian state. It killed him to send a message to scientists that orgone energy is off limits for further study. In the absence of scientists developing beneficial applications for orgone energy, the totalitarian state has come of age.

Now it appears we have nothing left to lose. The pretense of freedom is gone. All that remains is the illusion of freedom being kept alive in the minds of dwindling numbers of Americans.

As the totalitarian police-state emerges, its emissions of dead, stagnant energy from exponentially-increasing sources (both organic and inorganic) is also increasing. Rising to the challenge are groups of people who have picked up Dr. Reich's work and are running with it.

Next month we will continue this story [in the Idaho Observer newspaper] with the adventures of those who claim to be using orgone energy to replace bad energy with good.

A small candle, when lit, can, all by itself, overcome darkness, where the same amount of darkness cannot similarly affect light. The same is true when it comes to good and bad energy. That's why bad energy must have outside help from government and its duplicitous minions to prevail.

Those who have chosen to expand upon Reich's work believe they can prove to a candid, if not doubting world, that the following ills can be corrected by the proper application of techniques that harness orgone energy. They believe in their ability to prove how properly directed orgone energy will neutralize bad-energy emissions from cell towers, chemtrails, and angry people. They also believe they can reproduce Dr. Reich's experiments and bring rain to drought-ridden areas.

Can they direct orgone energy to accomplish these things? My own personal skepticism has been extreme for many months. However, a few things have happened to cause my skepticism to waver and my hope begin to grow.

Besides, we haven't much else to lose. Wouldn't it be marvelous if something as simple as overcoming bad energy with good is the antidote for all the evil which has so saturated our modern world? Isn't it also just like God to set things up to be so simple even His human children can do it?

Whatever Happened To William Washington?

by Don Harkins

As Dr. Reich indicated, he only discovered the shoreline of what could lead to a universe of potential applications for orgone energy. Though we may never know which potential application caused the federal government to sentence Dr. Reich to death and zealously seek out and destroy all references to his work, a clue may be found in the mysterious Fall of 1948 disappearance of William Washington.

Reich biographer and Harvard graduate Myron Sharaf (Fury On Earth: A Biography Of Wilhelm Reich, 1983), claims to have met "Bill" at the University of Chicago when they were both freshmen in 1944.

Sharaf explains that Bill began working with Dr. Reich in the summer of 1947 to help him with the mathematics of developing an orgone energy motor. "When he left Orgonon in Fall, 1948, he took the motor set-up with him in order to work on further refinements. He was supposed to return to Orgonon in early Summer, 1949, but he did not appear, nor was there any word from him" wrote Sharaf.

Sharaf and Dr. Reich checked out some of the stories Bill had told them about his past and previous employment. "None of these stories proved true" Sharaf noted.

Dr. Reich was able to speak to Bill on the phone once in late Summer, 1949. Reich, a lifelong student of the human mind, deduced that Bill was hesitant in his speech because he was being monitored by some outside force, probably the federal government, a conclusion not shared by Sharaf. "Washington was never heard from again" wrote Sharaf.

Ola Raknes, Ph.D., had observed the orgone-force motor in action and saw that the theory was valid. Unfortunately, no further research into this area was conducted after Bill left Orgonon. "This would be an extremely important area of orgone energy research" Raknes observed in 1970.

* * *

The following is from the book Wilhelm Reich And Orgonomy—The Great Psychologist And His Controversial Theory Of Life Energy, by Ola Raknes, Ph.D, of Norway, 1970:

What Is Orgone Energy?

Dr. Wilhelm Reich was first a protégé and then a contemporary of Sigmund Freud. Most people associate Freud with his belief that the manifestations of being human are directly related to sexual repression or expression.

As Dr. Reich's work began pulling away from that of Freud, he became intrigued with identifying the specific form of energy that made sexual expression possible. He discovered that the formula of function that led to an orgasm was the common formula of function for all biological processes in all living matter: tension > charge > discharge > relaxation.

Dr. Reich isolated the particle responsible for this formula and named it "bion". He was also able to culture bions from inorganic matter and, quite accidentally, solved the riddle of biogenesis: He discovered the mechanism whereby lifeless substances transition to living matter.

He later named the energy that resulted from bionic activity "orgone". Its properties can be summarized as follows:

1. Organic substances attract and absorb orgone energy.
2. Metallic substances attract and repel

Final Comments By Don Harkins
(Editor, The Idaho Observer)

We should begin construction of the Museum of Federally-Buried Technologies so we can dream about what the world would be like if problem-solving intelligence was celebrated instead of persecuted.

Did the FDA ban evil's antidote in 1957?

Dr. Wilhelm Reich, MD, died at the age of 60 after serving eight months of a two year prison sentence. Since his death, tremendous energy has been expended to erase his memory from history.

One must ask: "Why?"

The following paragraph, taken from the book Wilhelm Reich And Orgonomy, by Ola Raknes, Ph.D, sets the stage for answering that question:

"The existence of such energy is still contested—or at least neglected—by practically all scientists who have not themselves made the observations and experiments, and had the experiences, that form the basis of the discovery. An American Federal Court has even, in March, 1954, in a Decree of Injunction, declared Orgone Energy to be nonexistent, without, however, giving the facts on which the Injunction is said to be based. In a correspondence with the present writer [Raknes] the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), on whose complaint the Injunction was decreed, said that experiments executed with the most modern equipment and methods by experienced scientists had proved the nonexistence of orgone energy. None of these experiments has ever been published, and in further correspondence, the FDA refused to divulge the names of those scientists or any of the experiments on which the complaint was said to be based. As Dr. Reich did not obey the injunction, he was arraigned for contempt of court and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. He died in prison after not quite eight months."

Dr. Reich, a world-renowned psychologist and protégé/contemporary of Sigmund Freud, was sent to prison at age 60 to die because he insisted upon continuing his research into orgone energy—in defiance of a federal injunction that resulted from the FDA's apparently unscientific opinion that orgone energy did not exist. All Reich's books were banned, and those that were found were burned by the FDA. Any printed matter that contained the word "orgone" was subject to the ban and burning by the FDA per the injunction. The injunction was still holding in 1970.

The question now becomes: "What is orgone energy?"

If it did not exist, why did the federal government behave so militantly in its attempts to remove all mention of it from the world of print and the minds of people? Why did the federal government give a death sentence to a well-respected old man for insisting upon continuing his studies of something that doesn't even exist?

The federal government has used its authority to ban many viable and useful technologies. Should we accept the FDA's position that orgone energy doesn't even exist? Or, is it in our best interests to take another look at Dr. Reich's work and his controversial theory of life energy? More importantly, can orgone energy be used to help neutralize the negative energies that so permeate our modern world?

COMMON SENSE II

Thomas Paine's pamphlet Common Sense was written and widely circulated in 1776. The simple logic and wisdom presented in Common Sense persuaded thousands of ordinary citizens to support a movement that sought to unite the colonies in an effort to win their independence from England. The birth of our nation and freedom from King George's tyranny is a direct result of this nation's people understanding the REAL issues and choosing freedom over tyranny.

We, the editors of Common Sense II, are anonymous—just as Common Sense was originally published anonymously. We recognize that this 92-page, 3" x 6" booklet has tall shoes to fill. Time is running out and we must once again persuade our countrymen to choose freedom over tyranny.

The sole purpose of Common Sense II is to awaken our sleeping countrymen. We have compiled the most illustrative and eloquent writings available, and have arranged them in the manner most likely to persuade a nation to stand up for freedom and independence—our God-given rights!

Cancer Research: A Super Fraud?

Editor's note: Given the theme launched by our front-page feature story this month and expanded through several other articles, the following is surely another very important contribution to the overall picture, one that should be publicized as widely as possible.

This is a well-researched 1997 article from "down under" (remember the story from there in last month's News Desk on the attack on health supplements?) copyrighted by the Campaign Against Fraudulent Medical Research, P.O. Box 234, Lawson NSW 2783, Australia; phone +61 (0)2-4758-6822; website: www.pnc.com.au/~cafmr.

What this contributes to the overall picture is a professionally strong, honest, and bluntly stated appraisal of the outright fraud being perpetrated by so many working in cancer research today.

Regular readers of The SPECTRUM will need to be kind in terms of overlooking that this analysis stops at the level of money motivation. It would appear to be unaware of the New World Order gang's depopulation agenda (coming from much higher up the pyramid of world control power structure) that is "simply" moved along through the motivating power of money.

As Dr. Sydney Singer put it so candidly herein: "Researchers are like prostitutes. They work for grant money. If there is no money for the projects they are personally interested in, they go where there is money. Their incomes come directly from their grants, not from the universities. And they want to please the granting source to get more grants in the future. Their careers depend on it."

Behold the simple equation (money plus ego) which reliably casts its spell of control over so many for so long.

That said, we are thankful to be able to share with you such candid and passionate commentary from several courageous conventional medical professionals about the cancer racket. It surely encourages further development of alternative pathways to good health!

1997 ROBERT RYAN, B.SC.

"Everyone should know that most cancer research is largely a fraud and that the major cancer research organizations are derelict in their duties to the people who support them."

— Dr. Linus Pauling
(Two-time Nobel Prize winner)

Have you ever wondered why, despite the billions of dollars spent on cancer research over many decades, and the constant promise of a cure which is forever "just around the corner", cancer continues to increase?

Cancer Is Increasing

Once quite rare, cancer is now the second major cause of death in Western countries such as Australia, the U.S.A., and the United Kingdom. In the early 1940s cancer accounted for 12% of Australian deaths. [1] By 1992 this figure had climbed to 25.9% of Australian deaths. [2]

The increasing trend of cancer deaths and incidence is typical of most Western nations. It has been said that this increase in cancer is just due to the fact that people now live longer than their ancestors did, and that therefore the increase of cancer is merely due to the fact that more people are living to be older and thereby have a greater chance of contracting cancer.

However, this argument is disproved by the fact that cancer is also increasing in younger age groups, as well as by the findings of numerous population studies which have linked various life-style factors of particular cultures to the particular forms of cancer that are predominant there.

The Orthodox "War On Cancer" Has Failed

"My overall assessment is that the national cancer program must be judged a qualified failure." Thus said Dr. John Bailer, who spent 20 years on the staff of the U.S. National Cancer Institute and was editor of its journal. [3] Dr. Bailer also said: "The five-year survival statistics of the American Cancer Society are very misleading. They now count things that are not cancer, and, because we are able to diagnose at an earlier stage of the disease, patients falsely appear to live longer. Our whole cancer research in the past 20 years has been a total failure. More people over 30 are dying from cancer than ever before.... More women with mild or benign diseases are being included in statistics and reported as being 'cured'. When government officials point to survival figures and say they are winning the war against cancer, they are using those survival rates improperly."

A 1986 report in the New England Journal Of Medicine assessed progress against cancer in the United States during the years 1950 to 1982. Despite progress against some rare forms of cancer, which account for 1 to 2% of total deaths caused by the disease, the report found that the overall death rate had increased substantially since 1950: "The main conclusion we draw is that some 35 years of intense effort focused largely on improving treatment must be judged a qualified failure." The report further concluded that "we are losing the war against cancer" and argued for a shift in emphasis towards prevention if there is to be substantial progress. [4]

Most Cancer IS Preventable

According to the International Agency for Research in Cancer: "80-90% of human cancer is determined environmentally, and thus is theoretically avoidable." [5]

Environmental causes of cancer include lifestyle factors such as smoking, a diet high in animal products and low in fresh fruit & vegetables, excessive exposure to sunlight, food additives, alcohol, workplace hazards, pollution, electromagnetic radiation, and even certain pharmaceutical drugs and medical procedures. But unfortunately, as expressed by medical historian Hans Ruesch: "Despite the general recognition that 85% of all cancer is caused by environmental influences, less than 10% of the (U.S.) National Cancer Institute budget is given to environmental causes. And despite the recognition that the majority of environmental causes are linked to nutrition, less than 1% of the National Cancer Institute budget is devoted to nutrition studies. And even that small amount had to be forced on the Institute by a special amendment of the National Cancer Act in 1974." [6]

Prevention Not Profitable To Industry

According to Dr. Robert Sharpe: "In our culture, treating disease is enormously profitable; preventing it is not. In 1985 the U.S., Western Europe, and Japanese market in cancer therapies was estimated at over 3.2 billion pounds [that's many BILLIONS of dollars, too], with the 'market' showing a steady annual rise of 10% over the past five years. Preventing the disease benefits no one except the patient. Just as the drug industry thrives on the 'pill for every ill' mentality, so many of the leading medical charities are financially sustained by the dream of a miracle cure, just around the corner." [7]

Desired: A State Of No Cure?

In fact, some analysts consider that the cancer industry is sustained by a policy of deliberately facing in the wrong direction. For instance, in the late 1970s, after studying the policies, activities, and assets of the major U.S. cancer institutions, the investigative reporters Robert Houston and Gary Null concluded that these institutions had become self-perpetuating organizations whose survival depended on the state of no cure.

They wrote: "a solution to cancer would mean the termination of research programs, the obsolescence of skills, the end of dreams of personal glory; triumph over cancer would dry up contributions to self-perpetuating charities and cut off funding from Congress; it would mortally threaten the present clinical establishments by rendering obsolete the expensive surgical, radiological, and chemotherapeutic treatments in which so much money, training, and equipment is invested. Such fear, however unconscious, may result in resistance and hostility to alternative approaches in proportion as they are therapeutically promising. The new therapy must be disbelieved, denied, discouraged, and disallowed at all costs, regardless of actual testing results, and preferably without any testing at all. As we shall see, this pattern has, in actuality, occurred repeatedly, and almost consistently." [8]

Indeed, many people around the world consider that they have been cured by therapies which were "blacklisted" by the major cancer organizations.

Does this mean that ALL of the people who work in the cancer research industry are consciously part of a conspiracy to hold back a cure for cancer?

Author G. Edward Griffin explains: "Let's face it, these people die from cancer like everybody else.... [I]t's obvious that these people are not consciously holding back a control for cancer. It does mean, however, that the [pharmaceutical-chemical] cartel's medical monopoly has created a climate of bias in our educational system, in which scientific truth often is sacrificed to vested interests.... [I]f the money is coming from drug companies, or indirectly from drug companies, the impetus is in the direction of drug research. That doesn't mean somebody blew the whistle and said: 'Hey, don't research nutrition!' It just means that nobody is financing nutrition research. So it is a bias where scientific truth often is obscured by vested interest." [9]

This point is similarly expressed by Dr. Sydney Singer: "Researchers are like prostitutes. They work for grant money. If there is no money for the projects they are personally interested in, they go where there is money. Their incomes come directly from their grants, not from the universities. And they want to please the granting source to get more grants in the future. Their careers depend on it." [10]

Money Spent On Fraudulent Research?

A large portion of money donated to cancer research by the public is spent on animal research which has, since its inception, been widely condemned as a waste of time and resources. For instance, consider the 1981 Congressional Testimony by Dr. Irwin Bross, former director of the Sloan-Kettering, the largest cancer research institute in the world, and then Director of Biostatistics at Roswell Park Memorial Institute for Cancer Research, Buffalo, NY: "The uselessness of most of the animal model studies is less well known. For example, the discovery of chemotherapeutic agents for the treatment of human cancer is widely heralded as a triumph due to use of animal model systems. However, here again, these exaggerated claims are coming from or are endorsed by the same people who get the federal dollars for animal research. There is little, if any, factual evidence that would support these claims. Indeed, while conflicting animal results have often delayed and hampered advances in the war on cancer, they have never produced a single substantial advance either in the prevention or treatment of human cancer. For instance, practically all of the chemotherapeutic agents which are of value in the treatment of human cancer were found in a clinical context rather than in animal studies." [11]

In fact, many substances which cause cancer in humans are marketed as "safe" on the basis of animal tests. As expressed by Dr. Werner Hartinger of Germany, in regard to cancer-causing products of the

Since September 11, 2001, the people of the world have been told the Big Lie. The official story of what happened on 9/11 is a fantasy of untruth, manipulation, contradiction, and anomaly. David Icke has spent well over a decade uncovering the force that was really behind those attacks and has traveled to the "Hidden Hand" behind the cover story of "Bin Laden did it". Icke takes apart the official version of 9/11 and the "War on Terrorism" and shows that those responsible are much closer to home than a cave in Afghanistan. He explains why 9/11 was planned and to what end. It is vital to maintaining our freedom that the light shines on the lies and deceit behind September 11.

Icke also places these events in their true context as part of an agenda by hidden forces working behind the puppet politicians to create a global fascist state based on total control and surveillance. But it doesn't have to be like this; it does not have to happen. We can change the world from a prison to a paradise and, as Icke explains, the power to do that is within you and within us all.

How an interdimensional race has controlled the world for thousands of years—and still does!

We are born into a world controlled by unseen forces that have plagued and manipulated humanity for thousands of years. You may look around and think that what you see is "real". But in truth you are living in an illusion designed to keep you in a mental, emotional, and spiritual prison cell.

Icke exposes these forces and their methods of human control and reveals a fantastic web of global manipulation, orchestrated by forces beyond this physical realm. He exposes the hidden bloodlines, through which other-dimensional entities live and operate unseen among us; and he shows how the bloodlines of the royal, political, and economic rulers of today are the same as those who ruled as the kings and queens of ancient times.

The truth is not only out there.

Much of it is right here.

THE REPTILIAN AGENDA: PARTS I, II & III

David Icke has produced two amazing videos with the Zulu shaman, Credo Mutwa, who reveals astonishing information which, until now, was only available to the highest initiates of the African shaman tradition.

Credo says, "The world must know this—and know it now!"

He reveals how a shapeshifting reptilian race (the "Chitauli") has controlled humanity for thousands of years and how their bloodlines are in the positions of royal, political, and economic power today.

These videos will re-write the UFO/

extraterrestrial story in a way that will blow your mind. UFO researchers have ignored Africa and therefore ignored one of the greatest sources of knowledge on the planet.

While people still argue over Roswell and the extraterrestrial beings apparently found there, African tribes-people have been interacting with these ET "gods" for thousands of years.

Credo has not only seen dead "greys" many times, he has seen them examined behind their "grey" exterior and he knows exactly what they really look like—and it is nothing like we think!

After making these videos, Credo was visited by two people from Cape Town who offered him 50,000 rand, and a house anywhere in South Africa, if he would agree to never speak to David Icke again and never have anything to do with him. Credo's reply can be imagined!

Imagine What Could Be Achieved

The next time you are asked to donate to a cancer organization, bear in mind that your money will be used to sustain an industry which has been deemed by many eminent scientists as a qualified failure, and by others as a complete fraud.

If you would like to make a difference, inform these organizations that you won't donate to them until they change their approach to one which is focused on prevention and study of the human condition. We have the power to change things by making their present approach unprofitable. It is only through our charitable donations and taxes that these institutions survive on their present unproductive path.

Understanding Your Bio-Electric Sensing Machine

Editor's note: The new/old theme of electro-medicine—highlighted in this month's front-page feature story and expanded in several other articles in this issue—begs the sharing of the following insightful two-part dissertation from 1997, especially for our newer readers who may not have the benefit of so many of our past presentations of spiritual messages "received" from Master Teachers of the Higher Realms.

Furthermore, the "subtle energy" physics discussed so simply yet profoundly herein may assist readers looking for insights in trying to understand the true mechanisms through which electro-medicine's seemingly exotic devices, like Rife machines, could be so dramatically effective in restoring health. For example, consider the following point that opens a doorway to treating causes rather than effects:

"These ones trained in your so-called medical schools (again under the control of those drug companies) can prescribe electrochemical mixtures (drugs) which will cause reactions and responses in the physical as your body tries to deal with the chemical invader. They can offer electromagnetic radiation treatments to kill living tissue (both cancerous and non-cancerous). But these 'medical professionals' do not understand the non-physical effects that their treatments have on the light-body part of the human apparatus. Therefore they, for the most part, end up treating the symptom(s) instead of the TRUE cause(s)."

Indeed, even for some who claim to be familiar with electro-medicine, often their explanations for what's going on focus too much on contriving purely physical mechanisms rather than appreciating that non-physical, higher-dimensional processes and principles underlie and govern ALL that is manifest in the physical.

As the planetary frequency continues to rise at this time of the great Awakening and Great Cleansing, and all of us upon Mother Earth experience various effects stimulated by these incoming energies associated with a dimensional upshift, it is helpful to review this most instructive lesson from Master Hilarion. Our physical body—that machine which most of us just take for granted—is indeed a most amazing creation and, as Master Hilarion so skillfully points out, can be very helpful in our quest for inner peace and fulfillment through the sorting out of those often nagging fundamental questions about direction and choices and purpose.

The following is Chapter Four in Volume II of WISDOM OF THE RAYS: The Masters Teach. And for those of you who are wondering: yes, a Volume III will eventually be a reality. How soon that happens is a matter that depends upon the usual things that bring such a project into manifestation. Volume III will continue the collection of spiritual messages from where Volume II left off, up to the present. The wonderful, heartfelt appreciation you have so often expressed about this ongoing series of messages from the Higher Realms is what keeps the momentum going and expands their reach worldwide—in both English and French editions, so far.

5/17/97 HILARION

Good afternoon, my friend. Please release of the emotional charge and allow the energy to flow naturally and smoothly. It is I, Hilarion, of the Fifth Aspect of Creator's Spectral Expression. I come in The Light of Holy God of Lighted Creation. I come as the Cohan (Master Teacher) of the Emerald Ray.

Ones on your planet are greatly concerned with the physical well-being of the body in which they are housed. Here we shall give forth some insights that will help to clarify the causes of the conditions that ones are experiencing. For most this will not be "comfortable" reading because the reasons for illnesses are most often other than what a person wants to hear, let alone accept.

The physical body is "merely" a conduit for the interaction into and the interfacing with the physical experience. I say "merely" because that body is a most exquisite creation indeed and poorly understood by your current level of so-called medical science.

It is a self-contained bio-electric machine that is quite suited to handle a wide array of energy patterns and frequencies that allow for the animation and coordination between the physical and the non-physical. The body's electrical system is quite sensitive and balanced in such a manner as to have the capability to respond and alter according to emotional desires of the one controlling the mechanism.

YOU ARE NOT YOUR BODY! "You" are the one inhabiting the mechanism and it responds to your desires. There is similarity between "you" inhabiting and operating your body, and the process of sitting behind the wheel and driving your automobile.

The body, for the most part, is self regulating and will tend to run quite well in an "autopilot" mode. However, there come times of experience where the body is subjected to threat, such as physical injury, when it will offer a reactionary response to the danger and bring focus to the impending physical condition.

An example of this reactionary impulse would be to quickly remove one's hand from a hot stovetop. The body will retain information that will help one to avoid future damage and will offer a cautionary warning to the host (you) when the hand even gets close to a warm object.

This mechanism is part of the design of the body so that more primitive (lesser aware spiritually) users will be able to persist long enough in the physical without demise so that there will be adequate time sequence for growth.

This is the situation wherein one will tend to live instinctively and obey the signals of the body such as hunger, thirst, and rest. Ones will seek out the satisfaction of these basic needs so that they can experience as fully as possible.

As entities begin to grow more and more aware spiritually, they will begin to come out of the fog and into a more reasoning condition wherein mental anticipation of the future need for food will be recognized and planned for through storage.

This is the point where ones begin to awaken enough to realize that there is something more to the experience than to just exist and search out survival needs. This is where ones begin to reason with others the value of working together with one another in order to quiet the distractions and concerns of the body. This is where there occurs the first spark of sensing that man is more than a reactionary animal and that there is an inner desire to explore this awareness.

As cultures and beings evolve, there comes the need for Guides and Wayshowers to interject more and more of the true nature of the physical experience. While Esu "Jesus" Sananda is a good example of one such Wayshower who came to your planet 2000 years ago, MANY have come at this present time. These more advanced ones will volunteer for the challenge of fulfilling this task and will choose to take on a body in the physical to bring forth the all-important messages concerning the non-seen-but-felt spiritual connectedness of mankind.

These awakening nudges will often cause great emotional stirrings in the body. Ones will not know how to handle these energy surges at first, because they are subtle yet strong in their grip upon the physical apparatus. The surges will cause an array of sensations within the physical which, in turn, can provide the physical entity with guidance as to what is right versus what is wrong.

Much like the reactionary impulses to avoid physical danger, the body will offer reactionary impulses in response to other kinds of situations, which can nudge you to go toward that which will offer comfort and warmth. And in the case of the presentings of spiritual truth, the body will offer the best it can in the way of "gut felt" responses to that which is being offered.

"How", you may ask, "does the body do this?"

The physical part of the body is but "only" one small part of the entire apparatus that makes up the entire, functioning, bio-electric machinery. Just like in a computer, you have all the physical components—the main processor, the memory modules, the peripheral (audio and video) circuit boards, and the interconnecting wiring. And yet, more fundamentally, the computer still requires electricity (energy) operating in very focused ways in order to function and come to life at all.

In the case of the body, there are various electrical counterparts associated with each physical part of the body, including each organ and each individual cell. More fundamentally, there is a coordinated electromagnetic (LIGHT) energy field that encompasses the entire physical body. Some can actually see this "luminous" electromagnetic field under the proper conditions and call it the aura.

Your body's electromagnetic field interacts with the electromagnetic fields emanated by others and will respond to the various frequencies of these fields.

This is when you ones will say that you KNOW you can trust a person immediately; you don't know why but you can just "feel" it. This is why, when another comes offering true spiritual knowledge, you "feel" it within your "gut". You are responding to the higher-frequency energies flowing into the electromagnetic field of your body. The body then responds with a desire to find more of what causes this reaction.

This is also the reason why some ones will be frightened of you. They will know that you hold truth and they cannot hide their trickery from you and that you will, in time, see through their games. These ones have resisted the spiritual path, having not yet learned to recognize that there is value in the experience. These ones have an energy signature that is much lower in frequency. They are usually the ones clinging to the physical-material for their comforts and security. They are much like the animal who has to hoard and hide food from others who might take it away—not realizing that there are infinitely abundant sources of nourishment for both the physical apparatus and, more importantly, the soul (the non-physical, God-like, thought projection of Creator Source).

When ones turn from their purpose, there come the "STRESSES" of the life experience. This unbalanced condition is a signal to you so that you can stop to evaluate where you are heading and compare that to where your heart tells you that you should be heading. The heart knows the direction which will garner fulfillment.

More accurately, it is the emotional

Everyday Enlightenment: The Twelve Gateways To Personal Growth

Here is Dan Millman's magnum opus—the most complete presentation of his teachings, showing how to live as a peaceful warrior, how to actually practice a more enlightened way of life. Everyday Enlightenment presents twelve "gateways" or arenas that radically redefine the meaning of success and the purpose of our lives. These twelve gateways: keys to worth, will, energy, money, mind, intuition, emotions, fear, shadow, sexuality, heart, and service, represent twelve books in one, a clear map of the territory of human potential.

Comments by Dan: Those who have read most or all of my books know that each has a different purpose, and expresses another piece of the puzzle of personal and spiritual growth. Like the story about the five blind men who came upon an elephant and perceived a different kind of creature depending on whether they touched the elephant's ear, tail, trunk, or leg—someone who reads The Life You Were Born To Live may see me as a "numerologist". Someone who reads Divine Interventions or Body Mind Mastery or The Laws Of Spirit will have a completely different experience.

Everyday Enlightenment provides, in a single volume, the most complete map to the major practical and spiritual challenges (and solutions) we face in everyday life. It culminates with a final chapter worth far more than the price of the book: "The Practice Of Enlightenment"—a radical approach to living wisely and well.

(electromagnetic) energy center associated with the heart that is attuned to both your purpose from Creator Source and the impinging emotional currents of the ever-changing electromagnetic pulse-wave universe in which you exist. This heart energy center responds by instinctively offering that which will help you to discern your most satisfying path in life.

When you first start heading in a direction that is not fulfilling to the purpose for your being down there, you may or may not notice the subtle annoyance that you feel. But be assured that it is there. This causes slight distortions in the energy field of the body as you resist the natural flow of your experience. These distortions are what you ones refer to as "stress" and the corresponding worry and frustration is a by-product of the electromagnetic distortions in the non-physical part of the body.

If these distortions are allowed to persist, they will cause physiological malfunctions within the body. The physical body will respond to the out-of-balance (out-of-phase electrical impulses) condition of the electromagnetic energy field of the body. This will result in negative physiological changes within the body if the condition persists—such as colds, flu, cancers, and especially that #1 cause of death: HEART dis-ease.

Please be aware that the direction of the individual always starts with a thought and a decision. When ones are considering choices of action is when ones should really make an effort to monitor the response of the heart or "gut" while evaluating their choices. Some do this automatically and may cause frustration in others because there will be times when the only reason they can offer for an action is: "I don't know; it was 'just' a feeling." These perceptive ones have learned to recognize and utilize the "bio-feedback" that is being offered to them.

When there is illness of any sort in the body, you can be assured that the one experiencing the illness was not paying attention to the signals offered through the heart energy center. There are choices and decisions associated with the condition that allowed for the stress to persist on and on until there is great unbalance within the physical, causing improper coordination between the various energy centers, and thus the body will not regulate itself properly.

When ones can isolate that which causes them "stress", they will be looking for that which has a decision or choice associated with it and would be wise to perhaps re-evaluate or look for that which they are resisting. Usually those things that the heart desires by way of growth have responsibility associated with them, and ones know analytically that there are often "growing pains" associated with such responsibility—as the primitive, ego-based, reactionary mode of living is replaced with a freer, more personally responsible mode of living.

Many will go through many life experiences without ever recognizing the connection between the physical condition and the non-physical stress—only to cast blame upon another for their lack of physical balance. YOU each are creator of YOUR experience, either through deliberate action or passive reaction. Your physical condition is no exception!

Ponder upon these words, for they are offered in love and NOT with the intent to be offensive or hurtful. At this time many are crying out for assistance with the physical condition of the body. You will see that there is great value in finding within yourselves the TRUE cause(s) of any unbalanced situation.

The subject matter discussed here is far from complete. It is offered as a general overview so that ones can come into awareness of self in a general, yet more balanced, manner. There shall be more coming forth on this subject of the physical body's functioning. Please be patient and understanding. Thank you!

I am Master Hilarion. I represent the Heart Center of God. In Light and Love, Salu!

5/24/97 HILARION

Good afternoon, my scribe. It is I, Master Hilarion, of the Emerald Ray of Creator's Spectral Desires. I come within the Wholeness of The One Light, Creator Source. Let us please continue from last we wrote, for there is great interest and desire for this information at this time.

We last spoke about the general overview of the basic functioning and interactions of the physical body. The various energy centers of the body function in a harmonious and balanced interchange in carrying out the regulation of the various physical-functioning organs and cellular matter that make up the entirety of the body. There must be two-way communication, in a timely manner, between the physical body and the non-physical counterpart we will refer to as the light-body (light being electromagnetic pulse-wave energy) in order for the body to respond to the delicate fluctuations of the electrical impulses generated by each cell of the body.

This exquisite communication is accomplished through what you ones would call superconductivity. We will here broadly define superconductivity as the conduction of electrical energy without resistance to that flow of energy.

In the world of "science", ones are having trouble achieving this superconducting state utilizing just basic metal and ceramic compounds, even at temperatures just slightly above where the conditions are most favorable (very cold). Yet, in Nature (God manifest), it is happening all the time right before your eyes. (In fact, it is happening IN your eyes, for that matter!) And in the body, this superconductivity occurs at temperatures averaging 98.6° Fahrenheit—and higher when the body is fighting foreign invaders.

The problem is that the current perceptions of "physics" are based upon assumptions which would appear to be true, but actually only include half (at best) of the picture. This is why your typical mainstream scientists are having so much trouble duplicating (or even realizing the true physical nature of) the world in which they live. But here I am digressing from the lesson for today, so let me return to that subject.

Each individual type of cell is attuned to very specific frequencies and will respond to the regulating currents of the light-body energy pulses. There is an underlying unique frequency signature associated with EACH individual on the planet that will keep each of you, to some extent, electrically isolated from one another, so that the direct electrical functioning of your

OTHER VOICES

BY GEORGE HUNT WILLIAMSON
& TIMOTHY GREEN BECKLEY

The author was one of the original witnesses at the meeting between contactee George Adamski and Orthon from the planet Venus. Williamson claims he also had contacts with aliens and received transmissions over his radio from friendly extraterrestrials. Others have claimed the same. Senator Barry Goldwater reportedly heard mysterious signals on his ham radio and our own astronauts have reportedly picked up messages not transmitted from Earth.

Other Voices is essentially a reprint of The Saucers Speak, by George Hunt Williamson and Alfred Bailey, originally published in the 1950s. Much of what the authors report has come to pass. Warnings of aliens about nuclear war and environmental doom remain urgent.

His work details the struggle that is going on in the Middle East and the ongoing conflict between the Christian world and the Islamic world. Jack Manuelian has combed through the prophecies of more modern seers, pointing out how they may agree with what Nostradamus had to say. body will not interfere with the direct functioning of another person's body.

This is the "genetic signature" of the body, unique to the DNA structure or blueprint of each cell. This is a "plasma shielding" that the body exists within. It will allow physical matter to pass through, while shielding out specific frequencies and wavelengths.

Without this shielding, ones would empathically alter the state of one another. There are ones who can tune into the various frequencies associated with this energy field, and if not careful, make themselves quite sick (unbalanced) if they are tuning into one who is out of balance.

When ones are in an out-of-balance condition, the energy field tends to be compromised in that it will lower in frequency and in intensity. This is a condition wherein you ones become more susceptible to manipulations by those who specialize in the "black arts". These dark ones will alter their frequency to match the lower-frequency state that you enter when in these "stressed" states. Know that these dark ones operate ONLY in the lower spectrum of the physical range of existence.

When you move up in frequency, you are moving beyond the range of their influence. This is why we of the Lighted Hosts of God will urge you to keep your Light shielding in place and fortified.

While each physical body is isolated in certain frequency ranges, each entity is also connected in other HIGHER frequency ranges that will allow for the communication with the rest of the universe (God's infinitely creating Mind). As we spoke about in last week's writing, the creative desires are projected out from the heart energy center and are focused with the mind. The greater the desire, the quicker the physical manifestation of the desire.

This mode of creation exists and works outside of the limitations of moral and ethical beliefs of the individual. This is to say it works for everyone regardless of their morals or beliefs. This is a basic Law of Creation: Go forth and CREATE, expand, and GROW!

There are ones on your planet who will manifest money and power without regard for who they step on, in order to reach their goals. Their desires often manifest quickly because they are not easily distracted with the Conscience that the average person has to contend with.

These ones, who are so physically focused and self-isolated from their Conscience (inner guidance from their Higher Self), will achieve a state where they get to the top of the mountain and will have everyTHING (physical) that they desire—only to find that there is still an inner lacking that is not satisfied. These ones are taking to extremes, one aspect of creating, and will, in time, either disintegrate their souls completely, or rebound back into the Light Source who created them—then wiser, for they know then where value IS NOT!

You focus your desires and send them out through the heart, and then the universe responds. Yet you never seem to get what it is you are wanting. Therefore you dismiss these words as fanciful delusions of a lost soul.

NO! They are NOT!

You ones fail to monitor your thoughts CAREFULLY! You will send out conflicting signals, and thus negate the energy pulses. You will say: "I want more money!" And then, in the next breath (or thought) you will say: "But, I never get it." Do you see that the one thought cancels out the other? Your vacillating heart will send out both, and the net sum will be zero—or quite a bit less than you "thought" you were creating!

The seeming lack of clarity and single-mindedness of thought and focus usually comes from a conflict between what you consciously desire and what your Higher Self is desiring in the way of growth. And that Higher Self is doing battle with the ego-based self which desires comfort and satiation of physical desires.

This causes the kinds of stress that you ones feel, usually in the heart area of your chest. While this lower, ego-based self serves a self-preservation purpose in the primitive cultures, it must be overcome if you are to ever move beyond the limitations that hold you from reaching through to Higher levels of realization.

The ego's reactionary impulses will serve you physical "warnings" to obey, by offering physical reactions or pains if you do not follow what it desires. Much like the warning sensations felt when your hand comes into close proximity to a hot object, the ego-based reactionary self will attempt to cause you to avoid situations that could lead you to override the ego's functioning. This "war" is perhaps the greatest challenge you ones face in the physical experience because there are great efforts on the part of the dark ones to hold you from progressing through that physical classroom.

When you live in fear, you live in a reactionary state that will, at best, only serve the ego's desire for self preservation. However, your Higher Self knows the functioning of the ego and will offer to you challenges that will shed light upon this fact. Most often the "clash" which results from encountering the lessons of this learning process will cause physiological changes and unbalanced conditions within the body. These reactions could manifest in many different ways, from sudden weight gain or loss, to colds and flus, or even cancer.

Most elderly people in poor health are in that deteriorated condition due to years and years of ignoring the "small" stresses and allowing them to build and accumulate into conditions of cancers or other various disease ailments. These ones will often be very unhappy in general, and will reflect this in their physical demeanor, appearance, and voice.

Middle-aged people on this same path will often exhibit physical symptoms of old age (such as prostate troubles or menopause) at an "early" age. The individual always has a choice to turn around the physical conditions of the body, for it will respond miraculously to a re-balanced mental state wherein the head and heart can live in harmony.

Teenagers and younger adults tend to act irrationally to their inner conflicts and will lash out and hurt those around them in both physically and mentally abusive manners. When they realize that this behavior is not acceptable, they will begin to internalize their frustrations and hide them from the world. Meanwhile those stresses begin to manifest in the body, in later years, as degenerative malfunctions like cancers and organ failures.

You may be asking: "How can one avoid this, or turn it around?"

First there must be a desire for inner balance. This means that you have to either confront the garbage that the ego-self holds onto, and see it for what it is, and come to grips with the fact that YOU are responsible for YOUR condition, and accept the responsibility for that which you have created. Or, you can (and this is possible though difficult) simply insist on balanced physical health, and focus the mind and heart on that singularity with the entire passion of your heart, and don't listen to those who would hold you down, for they are the puppets and tools of the adversary.

Particularly within the framework of policing controls set up by those dark ones who own the drug companies and make great profits from a drug-based "health" business, medical "science" has yet to (be allowed to) discover the correlation between the various electromagnetic energy fields of the body and the body's physical functioning—let alone perceive the connection between (and the true impact from) this "clashing" of the mental reactionary ego with the Higher Self or soul connection. Therefore there is, more often than not, misdiagnosis of the cause for a condition that is manifesting in the body.

These ones trained in your so-called medical schools (again under the control of those drug companies) can prescribe electrochemical mixtures (drugs) which will cause reactions and responses in the physical as your body tries to deal with the chemical invader. They can offer electromagnetic radiation treatments to kill living tissue (both cancerous and non-cancerous). But these "medical professionals" do not understand the non-physical effects that their treatments have on the light-body part of the human apparatus. Therefore they, for the most part, end up treating the symptom(s) instead of the TRUE cause(s).

These ones are usually well intending and well educated in the physical structure of the body (to a point), yet they would need to study fundamental electrical science and molecular physics to great depths in order to come into a more complete understanding of what is taking place around the body. And even then, they would still need special abilities and talents in order to directly perceive these all-important energy fields of the body.

You will have to follow your own Guidance, and be responsible for the choices and decisions that affect both the quality and length of your stay in the physical. Do keep in mind that what you voice with your mouth is often in conflict with what you radiate from your heart. You may be able to hide behind words, but the heart will give you away every time. And for those who tune into the heart energy emanations, they will know you and they will know when you are out of balance and off purpose.

And for those of you who like to deny this to yourselves, you can look to that which manifests in your life: Is your current state of "living" this life's experience something that is fulfilling to you, or is it full of stress and frustration?

May your heart be your guide, and may you learn to listen with the heart and project forth from those inner satisfying desires that bring forth balance. I am Hilarion, Master Teacher and Healer, come in the Radiant One Light of Creator Source so that His promise to you may be fulfilled—and so that I, too, may grow in wisdom of experience. Salu! △

Blindness, Mad Cow Disease, And “Canola” Oil

Editor's note: Something's going on right now that's VERY fishy—figuratively speaking. And it's serious enough, especially given the health theme dominating much of this issue of The SPECTRUM, to warrant our revisiting a potent article we last shared with you way back in December of 1999.

The curious situation is that so-called “Canola” oil is showing up in the ingredients list of more and more products all of a sudden. And for at least some of those items, it would seem this ingredient was forced into the mix under some kind of edict!

I (E.Y.) already commented on this matter recently, in the April 2003 issue, in the process of introducing a fine article from the Edgar Cayce group's magazine titled What Are We Doing To Our Food? wherein I said:

“Alarming things are happening to our foods these days. And if we're not aware and vigilant enough about such matters to ‘vote with our wallets’ to send messages back to the purveyors of such unconscionable shenanigans, then guess what—we deserve the poor health and medical complications we get as a result....

“For example, if you're vigilant about reading ingredients, you've probably noticed nasty poisons like “Canola” oil, MSG, and Aspartame [and I forgot about aluminum in so many bakery goods at the time of that writing] creeping into products—even so-called and more expensive “health” products—where they never found residence before and surely don't belong. Longtime readers with good memories will be quick to point out that these three pivotal ingredients have all been the subjects of past ominous articles within our publication. And for very good reasons!

“When a longtime staple of the food shelf, previously with a very healthy ingredient like olive oil, has now quietly switched to ‘Canola’ oil—while still prominently bragging about their ‘fine old Italian recipe’—one can't help but wonder what nonsense is REALLY going on. Students of conspiracy recognize the trademark clues of the New World Order gang's calculated high-level agenda in play, to slowly but surely compromise the health of, well, the actively health-conscious consumer.

“Who better to target? This is the same uppity portion of the citizenry most feared by the world control misfits because these are the people most likely to be actively protesting, say, the war in Iraq. But only if their health permits. An unhealthy public is a docile public of easily herded sheep.

“Further, if such poisonous ingredients are, as an incentive for use, nearly ‘given away’—perhaps at dirt-cheap prices—to key manufacturers more infatuated with profit than, say, their ‘fine old Italian recipe’—then the temptation becomes practically irresistible. From a pure ‘business’ point of view, it's a captivating situation for such manufacturers, who've sold their souls (and the earned trust of loyal customers) to become—knowingly or unknowingly—agents for the higher-level depopulation agenda of the depraved New World Order elite.”

But what finally tipped the scales, in terms of deciding to again share the following article with you, was a recent shopping trip wherein a whole bunch more items, that were always “Canola” oil-free, now list this dubious intruder in their ingredients. What's the rush all of a sudden to get this into so many products?! It sure takes a lot longer to shop when, each trip to the store, you have to now check the ingredients lists of staple items that for years previously hadn't gone down this road of selling out.

Originally the following article was bravely published in the March/April 1996 issue of the often excellent Perceptions magazine, which appears to be no longer in production.

The finely aware author, John Thomas, draws a number of important parallels between Canola and soy—noting that the impact on our health from the Canola scam is 1000 times nastier than from the soy fraud. Those of you familiar with Edgar Cayce may remember that he, likewise, cautioned about these two items. (We presented a lengthy and alarming discussion about soy in our July 1999 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

In the debate section of this article (later on), it is amusing to watch the familiar tactics of establishment scientists feverishly at work, as prostitutes for Big Business, quoting their “religious books” in order to discredit what is both beyond their understanding and a major threat to their way of life. Their antics recall all those sanctimonious tobacco executives lying to Congress about the health risks of cigarettes.

The kind of “subtle energy” or “higher vibrational” considerations which are integral to what author John Thomas talks about herein are—like Rife, Reich, and related technologies addressed in our front-page feature story—the “energy medicine” of the future and give a whole new (and much more accurate) meaning to the phrase “you are what you eat”. Edgar Cayce had much to say on this matter, a subject which is only now beginning to be appreciated by ones willing to foresake the shackles and blinders which mainstream scientific training religiously imposes—especially at advanced levels.

With that idea of “subtle energies” in mind, it is important to note a subject which John Thomas does not cover herein. That is, longtime readers of The SPECTRUM would be wise to entertain a possible link between deleterious effects on your mind and body that electromagnetic shenanigans like the HAARP system are capable of producing, and such effects perhaps being enhanced or amplified when even a small amount of Canola oil is present in your body. Might that be the REAL reason for getting Canola oil into enough different products—especially among the so-called “healthy” products—so that one or another of them will be sure to “infect” each of us?

The duplicity of the scam being perpetrated by the mind-control (marketing) departments of big dietary businesses is exactly to target and convince those MOST conscious about their health to embrace these questionable ingredients as healthy for you. The sleeping masses are not a problem for the world elite controllers, but those of you who are naturally driven to become informed, and then call their bluff, ARE a BIG threat!

The original Perceptions article carried the introductory statement: "This excerpt from John Thomas' new book Young Again! How To Reverse The Aging Process, published by Promotion Publishing, San Diego, has been edited especially for Perceptions." Some of you may enjoy reading John's longer story in that still-available book format.

So—just what IS the "magic" about Canola oil that is making it appear in so many products now? While we don't have any concrete answers, justifiable suspicions run high—just like with the chemtrails sprayings going on over our heads. And one thing's for sure: after you read the following, you'll be checking the ingredients lists of your favorite food products a lot more carefully!

MARCH/APRIL 1996 JOHN THOMAS

Millions of people have suffered the loss of their vision from glaucoma, a disease involving atrophy (deterioration) of the optic nerve. For years, "experts" have been telling us that glaucoma results from fluid-pressure buildup in the eye that causes the optic nerve to deteriorate. This theory was based on an incorrect medical model: They were wrong!

Now the experts have admitted that this is not true and have given birth to a new theory. According to it, glaucoma is instead caused by a deficiency of oxygen and blood flow. Finally they are on the right trail. In the end, they will discover that glaucoma is the result of insufficient blood flow due to agglutination (clumping together) of the red blood cells, and waste buildup in the cells and intercellular fluids.

These blood-corpuscle clusters cannot squeeze through the extremely tiny capillaries in the posterior of the eye, so cannot deliver oxygen to the mitochondria. Mitochondria are microscopic bodies inhabiting the cells of all animals. They contain enzymes responsible for the conversion of food to useable energy. They produce and burn the energy-carrying molecule adenosine triphosphate, ATP.

This is what the problem has been all along, and if people continue to eat soy and "Canola" oils, a lot more of them are going to experience vision irregularities—like retinitis and macula lutea degeneration. (The macula lutea is an area in the eye near the center of the retina in which visual perception is most acute.) Soy oil contains phytohemagglutinin, PHG, a toxic biochemical that causes blood to clot and combines with impurities to form plaque, obstructing capillaries. PHG numbs immune-system T-cells, alters hormonal activity, and slows vital organ function. Its effects are cumulative.

Death of the mitochondria in the cells in the posterior of the eye is due to oxygen starvation, sodium toxicity, and waste accumulation. When the mitochondria die, the cells die, and the posterior eye tissues atrophy. In this respect, glaucoma has much in common with hair loss, Alzheimer's disease, multiple sclerosis, cerebral palsy, and hearing problems.

[Editor's note: Some of you may be aware that there has been a tremendous increase, in recent years, in the number of senior citizens diagnosed with macular degeneration. Care to guess why?]

There are several things a person can do to reverse these debilitating conditions. Biologically friendly water is basic to all rejuvenation, as is fresh, viable food. Detoxification of the tissues and body fluids is accomplished with yucca extract, Kombucha tea, PACs, and colon therapy. (Biologically friendly water is water resonant at 7.8 hertz, or Earth frequency—pure, highly charged, and magnetic in its strong right-spin molecular charge; Kombucha tea is a revitalizing brew made from a fungus-like organism; PACs are proanthocyanidins, which are plant-derived antioxidants, free-radical scavengers.)

Rape Seed Oil Or "Canola"

"Canola" is a coined word. It appeared out of nowhere and is not listed in any but the most recent reference sources.

[Editor's note: This fact alone ought to raise a flag of caution as to who is behind such marketing.]

The flip side of the Canola coin reads: "rape"! You must admit that Canola sounds better than rape. The name Canola disguised the introduction of rape oil to America.

Canola oil comes from the rape seed, which is part of the mustard family of plants. Rape is THE MOST TOXIC of all food-oil plants. Like soy, rape is a weed. Insects will not eat it; it is deadly poisonous! THE OIL FROM THE RAPE SEED IS A HUNDRED TIMES MORE TOXIC THAN SOY OIL!

Canola is a semi-drying oil that is used as a lubricant, fuel, soap, and synthetic rubber base, and as an illuminant for the slick color pages you see in magazines. It is an industrial oil and does NOT belong in the body!

Canola oil has some very interesting characteristics and effects on living systems. For examples, it forms latex-like substances that agglutinate the red blood corpuscles, as does soy, but MUCH more pronounced. Loss of vision is a known characteristic side-effect of rape oil, which antagonizes the central and peripheral nervous systems—again like soy oil, again worse. The deterioration takes years, however.

Rape (Canola) oil causes emphysema, respiratory distress, anemia, constipation, irritability, and blindness in animals—and humans.

Rape oil was widely used in animal

ALIEN AGENDA: Investigating The Extraterrestrial Presence Among Us

BY JIM MARRS

Jim Marrs is best known for Crossfire: The Plot That Killed Kennedy (1989), the book that Oliver Stone's film JFK was partially based on. Now Marrs attacks new mysteries and conspiracies in this extensive review of UFO history and government cover-ups. After describing his own UFO sighting near Jackson, Mississippi, in 1952, Marrs recounts his involvement with other UFO cases as a newspaper reporter, and his suspicions that the U.S. government knows much more about aliens than it will admit. He incorporates an ample amount of information from UFO books of the 1960s and 1970s—strange lights on the Moon, the ancient-astronaut theories of Erich von Daniken, cattle mutilations, Nazi saucers at the South Pole, the contactees of the 1950s—and updates it credibly with UFO data from the 1980s and 1990s, providing a reasonable survey of abductions, secret underground UFO bases, the MJ-12 group, crop circles, remote viewing, and channeling. How can something as momentous as contact with aliens be kept secret? In an appendix, Marrs refers to the Bilderbergers and the Council on Foreign Relations as examples of how small groups of powerful individuals can withhold information and manipulate world events. The facts are mostly accurate, and the writing is crisp and journalistic.

feeds in England and Europe between 1986 and 1991, when it was thrown out. You may remember reading about the cows, pigs, and sheep that went blind, lost their minds, attacked people, and had to be shot.

A woman called me from Chicago to tell me that she had been in England when the "Mad Cow Disease" was at its peak. She said that she had seen a television news report which told people not to panic if they had been using rape oil in their diet and were over 65 years of age. The "experts" added that the effects of rape oil in ingestion take at least 10 years to manifest, and in all likelihood, most of these people would be dead by then anyway. Comforting!

In the reports I read, the "experts" blamed the erratic behavior on a viral disease called scrapie. However, when rape was removed from animal feed, "scrapie" disappeared.

No longer a European livestock problem, now it is ours. U.S. farmers grow rape seed, and manufacturers use its oil (Canola) in thousands of processed foods—with the blessing of government watchdog agencies, of course.

Officially, Canola oil is known as "LEAR" oil—Low Erucic Acid Rape. (Erucic acid is a solid fatty acid, a homologue of oleic acid, derived from oils of mustard seeds and rape seeds.) Industry experts love to tell how Canola was developed in Canada and that it is safe to use. (Can-ola = "Canadian oil"—get it?) They admit it was developed from the rape seed, but that through genetic engineering (i.e. irradiation), it is no longer rape seed, but Canola instead.

They love to talk about Canola's qualities—its unsaturated structure (omega 3, 6, and 12), its wonderful digestibility, and its fatty-acid makeup. They turn us against naturally saturated oils and fats, while they come to the rescue with Canola oil. They even tell us how Asia has warmly embraced Canola due to its distinctive flavor.

Isn't it wonderful how internationalist brokers "help" third-world peoples? Reminds me of the introduction of the microwave oven.

[Editor's note: That's another very important health subject we've covered, in an article titled Some Well-Hidden Hazards Of Microwave Cooking, back in the January 2001 issue of The SPECTRUM.]

An earthy expression from the Old West sums up the flimflam accompanying rape oil's rebirth and promotion worldwide: "horseshit and gun smoke!" Its new name provided the perfect cover for commercial interests wanting to make billions in the United States. The euphemism is still very much in use, but is no longer needed. Look at the ingredients lists on peanut butter labels. The peanut oil has been removed and replaced with rape oil.

[Editor's note: Now stop and think about that one for a minute! Going to such an extreme suggests an agenda far beyond any simple business "cost effective" step in manufacturing.]

Chemical Warfare

Rape oil is also the source of the infamous chemical-warfare agent, mustard gas, which was banned after blistering the lungs and skin of hundreds of thousands of soldiers and civilians during WW-I. Recent French reports indicate that it was again used during the [1991] Gulf War.

Between 1950 and 1953, white mustard (rape) seed was irradiated in Sweden to increase seed production and oil content. Irradiation is the process the experts want to use to make our food "safe" to eat. Genetically engineered fruits and vegetables—which will soon have innocent things like Hepatitis-B spliced into their DNA—are another example of man's misuse of technology and abuse of public trust by powerful interests and "head-in-the-sand" watchdog agencies. (See the article called The Devil's Bargain: Gene-Altered Food, in the November/December 1995 issue of Perceptions.)

[Editor's note: Regular readers of The SPECTRUM are likewise very well aware of the pitfalls of genetically engineered or genetically modified (GE/GM) foods. And, of course, the most telling incident of all was when GE/GM giant Monsanto's own headquarters cafeteria REFUSED to use such products!]

Canola oil contains large amounts of isothiocyanates—cyanide-containing compounds. Cyanide INHIBITS mitochondrial production of adenosine triphosphate (ATP), which is the energy molecule that fuels the mitochondria. ATP energy powers the body and keeps us healthy and young!

[Editor's note: So in effect the Canola oil acts as a slow poisoning agent, if nothing else. Who does that suggest to you is behind this project? Hint: Who has a longstanding agenda item to eliminate we "useless eaters and consumers of natural resources"—and has the worldwide means to do so?]

Canola Oil & Metabolism

Many substances can bind metabolic enzymes and block their activity in the body. In biochemistry, these substances are called inhibitors.

Toxic substances in Canola and soy oils encourage the formation of molecules with covalent bonds which are normally irreversible: They CANNOT be broken by the body once they have formed.

For example, consider the pesticide malathion. It binds to the active site of the enzyme acetylcholinesterase and stops this enzyme from doing its job, which is to divide acetylcholine into choline and acetate.

Nerve Function And Organophosphates

Organophosphates are any organic compound containing phosphorus, specifically ones used as insecticides, e.g. malathion—the "harmless" pesticide spray used to kill the Med Fly and blanket every living thing in California a few years ago, and again in 1994 and 1995, and in Texas in April 1995.

Acetylcholine is critical to nerve-impulse transmission. When acetylcholinesterase is inhibited, as by pesticide residues, nerve fibers do not function normally, and muscles do not respond.

For example, think of a garage door opener: If its signal is not received, the door does not open. With one's body, the hand or leg is ordered to move, but does not respond. Recently there has been a tremendous increase in disorders like systemic lupus, multiple sclerosis, cerebral palsy, pulmonary hypertension, neuropathy, and "myelinoma", which is a catch-all term used by doctors for the deterioration of the myelin sheathing around the nerves. (The word ending "-oma" means "tumor", but the condition could as easily be "myelinosis".) It is also often called "walking legs syndrome" and causes its sufferers intense burning sensations they must walk off.

Soy and Canola oils are players in the outbreak of these disease conditions. So are the organophosphates—insecticides such as malathion, used in food production [modern agribusiness] in the name of efficiency.

Acetylcholinesterase inhibitors cause paralysis of the striated (skeletal) muscles and spasms of the respiratory system. That is why malathion is the pesticide of choice by experts; it kills insects by paralysis—just like rotenone from soy beans does! It inhibits the insect's enzymes—and those of humans, too!

Agents Orange and Blue that were used in Vietnam to defoliate jungle cover are also organophosphorous compounds. The Vietnam vets and the Vietnamese people know about them firsthand. Government experts who okayed their use, and chemical companies who manufactured them, have finally owned up to their toxic effects on people and the environment. Nevertheless, present-day experts in academia and government continue to bamboozle the public with stories of “safe” science and cheap food through the use of poisons.

Canola oil is also high in glycosides that cause serious problems by blocking enzyme function and depriving us of our life force—chi, qi, prana—call it what you like.

Glycosides interfere with the biochemistry of humans and animals. Their presence in rattlesnake venom inhibits muscle enzymes and causes instant immobilization of the victim.

Canola Oil, HIV, And AIDS

Soy and Canola oil glycosides also depress the immune system. They cause the white-blood-cell defense system—the T-cells—to go into a stupor and fall asleep on the job. These oils alter the bioelectric “terrain” and promote disease. Floride, immunizations, antibiotics, and bio-junk food play a similar role in immune system collapse.

An alcohol is a chemistry term for the “reactive” chemical group on an organic molecule. These “R” groups are what make organic compounds work—for good or bad! Canola alcohols and glycosides are very reactive. They are as toxic as fermented alcohols, but their effects manifest differently. The damage takes years to show up. In a future article, I will discuss the sweet proteins in soy.

When the medical “experts” check your blood for the presence of the HIV virus, they are looking at your white blood-cell “count”. If the numbers are normal, they will tell you that you do not have HIV. What they don’t see is that the T-cells are in this toxic stupor. This opportunistic condition causes life forms in the blood and lymph to metamorphose, manifest as Hepatitis, Pneumonia, and HIV, bypass the body’s immune-system defenses (the T-cells), and get a foothold. As Claude Barnard said: “The terrain is everything!”

Once inside the cells, HIV takes over the RNA and DNA. It uses the mitochondria to produce energy for its own use. Quietly it multiplies; then one day—BANG!—you wake up dying of AIDS.

AIDS & Green Monkeys

In his Earth-shaking book called AIDS: The End Of Civilization, Dr. William Campbell Douglass asked: “Do you really think some green monkey all of a sudden bit some guy in the ass, and presto, AIDS all over the world?”

Dr. Douglas was examining the hype that the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta have been peddling to the public about the AIDS virus, HIV. Douglass’ book tells the “whole” story of the development of HIV at the Ft. Detrick (Maryland) military installation. His story is well documented and confirms the theme of the futuristic movie Outbreak.

[Editor’s note: As our readers know well, longtime SPECTRUM friend and health crusader Dr. Len Horowitz has exposed in great detail the vast historical webs of conspiracy behind AIDS and many other manufactured diseases—mostly involving the same cast of nefarious characters working in concert with the elite world controllers.]

Lorenzo’s Oil

Another film, Lorenzo’s Oil, offers a good example of how far off course medical science has strayed and how muddled is the scientific mind. Early on in the movie, the experts say the problem with the dying child is not the “math”, i.e., pH. They are wrong.

Had the experts determined the pH of the saliva, urine, and blood, they would have instantly known what they were up against: That dying boy had a chronically low total-body pH—so low [meaning a highly acidic state] that his fluids were dissolving the myelin sheathing protecting his nerve fibers. This caused his nervous system to disintegrate. Does this description sound like the dozens of degenerative nerve-related disorders plaguing people today?

The boy was given Lorenzo’s oil to boost energy output and act as a detoxifier of metabolic poisons. The oil shocked his body into a less-acid condition. LORENZO’S OIL IS OLIVE OIL! When given in large quantities, olive oil shocks the body and causes it to adjust its pH. It will also safely purge the body of gall and liver stones, thus removing the need for gall-bladder surgery. (Yucca extract and PACs must precede the “flush”).

[Editor’s note: One of the reasons for again sharing this fine article with you was precisely the fact that two well-known products, that always contained olive oil as a key ingredient, have recently replaced the olive oil with Canola oil. But you can’t tell that from the big labels on the front of the bottles; you have to read the fine-print ingredients list!]

Shortly after Lorenzo’s Oil was released, my brother saw an “expert” on a TV talk-show claim that Lorenzo’s oil was rape oil. This was a lie. Give rape oil to a sick person, and you will seal his or her doom.

HERE IS ANOTHER GOOD EXAMPLE OF “DISINFORMATION” IN THE PUBLIC DOMAIN. THESE FALSEHOODS SHOULD CAUSE EVERY THINKING PERSON TO QUESTION THE MOLDING OF PUBLIC OPINION BY THE POWERFUL COMMERCIAL INTERESTS BEHIND THE SCENES.

Blood & Oils

By now it should be obvious that congested blood and lymph flow negatively affect every part of the body. Moreover, using processed foods containing Canola oil, soy oil, and chemical additives “confuses” the body and weakens the immune system.

It should come as no surprise that anyone wanting to enjoy peak health and longevity MUST take personal control of, and responsibility for, his or her health and life. There is NO other way! “Healthcare industry” is an oxymoron; it protects its own health and economic interests.

Learn to protect YOUR health and economic interests by learning how to take care of yourself. Then act on that knowledge.

POINT:

The Great Canola Debate

Spectrum Naturals Offers A Rebuttal To “Blindness, Mad Cow Disease, And Canola Oil”

As a service to both writers and readers, Perceptions offers a forum for informations all too often absent from mainstream media. We make no claims for any specific health products or therapies, but provide space to those responsibly presenting opposing views.

The following “debate” involves a spokesperson for Spectrum Naturals, a manufacturer of Canola and other oils, and John Thomas, author of Young Again! How To Reverse The Aging Process. As always, we invite our readers to think and seek the truth and, with it, greater power for themselves, recognizing that it is sometimes found only outside current scientific dogma.

An article by John Thomas, published in the March/April 1996 issue of Perceptions magazine, makes several unsubstantiated claims connecting Canola oil with “Mad Cow Disease”.

Upon even the most casual consideration, Thomas’ major assertions fall flat. The article, based on the author’s opinions, cites no clinical, medical, or biological research references. Thomas fails to explain the basic biochemical interactions that are inferred to evolve out of the claimed actions of toxins he attributes to Canola oil. To be scientific, Thomas’ claim for the ensuing biological pathologies should be tied to specific symptomology. Thomas offers no such connection.

Despite Thomas’ claims, his article contains not one scientific reference, nor any cogent chemical or biochemical argument based on known laboratory testing or methods associated with brassica/napus campestris plant varieties (the botanical name of Canola) or L.E.A.R., i.e., Low Erucic Acid Rapeseed. Further, Thomas presents no scientific credentials or experience which would lend any measure of credibility to the discourse he offers in Perceptions.

With the above preamble in mind, please review our analysis of Thomas’ claims. Spectrum’s abridgment of Thomas’ claims are noted below. [Editor’s note: Remember that this reference is to a company called Spectrum Naturals, which is in the dietary oils business; there is NO connection at all to The SPECTRUM newsmagazine!] They can be found throughout his article, but we have condensed them to deal with claims in summary. They have been grouped here for focus. Our point-by-point response includes scientific citations and refutations for your consideration.

Thomas’ Claim 1: Glaucoma

For years “experts” have been telling us that glaucoma results from fluid-pressure buildup in the eye that causes the optic nerve to deteriorate. This theory was based on an incorrect medical model: They were wrong! Causes: agglutination, waste buildup in cells, and intracellular fluids caused by consuming soy and Canola oil. Loss of vision is a known characteristic.

Spectrum’s Rebuttal:

Glaucoma is caused by fluid-level abnormalities in the ocular membranes of the eye. It rarely occurs before age 40. This disease is caused by injury to the eye or a degenerative disease like uveitis. Blockage of the drainage duct adjacent to the ciliary muscles is the principle cause of humoral-fluid pressure in the eye. No scientific study links glaucoma to any lipid toxicity or diet.

Platelet aggregation, as Mr. Thomas states, is a possible cause of glaucoma. If his suggestion is true, however, Canola oil may be helpful in glaucoma since the 10% omega-3 fraction in Canola oil, as well as the 16% omega-6 fraction of fatty acids tend to reduce platelet aggregation. Thus, Canola oil would be a curative rather than causative agent of aggregation of cells. However, there is no scientific evidence that platelet aggregation is related to this eye disease.

People suffered with glaucoma long before the widespread use of Canola, rapeseed, and soy oils. To the contrary, statistics tend to indicate that the widespread use of these oils benefits health. [Ref: Dr. C. Calyman, editor, American Medical Association, Encyclopedia Of Medicine, Random House, NY, 1989; Shahidi, F., Canola & Rapeseed, Production Chemistry, Nutrition And Processing Technology, AVI Printers, 1990.]

Thomas' Claim 2:

Canola appeared out of nowhere. Rapeseed (Canola) is the most toxic of all food plants. Rapeseed, like soy, is a weed. Insects will not eat it. Oil from rapeseed is 100 times more toxic than soybean oil.

Spectrum's Rebuttal:

For more than 3,000 years, rapeseed was the preeminent culinary fat for the Indians, Western Asians (Indian subcontinent), and China. It has been cultivated in Western Europe since the 13th century and has become the most popular culinary oil due to its high oleic and mono-unsaturated fat profile. It is considered the most nutritionally balanced dietary fat. In 1985 the USDA granted GRAS (generally recognized as safe) status to the hybrid variety of rapeseed. Canola was pedigree bred (not genetically engineered) in Canada during the 1970s.

[Editor's note: Now there's a statement whose "deception coefficient" is worthy of the Bush Administration; see Al Martin's columns elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM for similarly choice examples. By some liberal stretching of the definitions, it may even have been true "during the 1970s"—but, just from past eye-opening articles in our News Desk, we know that the terms Genetically Engineered and Genetically Modified have, through Monsanto's aggressive marketing tactics alone, been associated more with rape seeds than perhaps with any other GE/GM agricultural product pushed on farmers.]

The origins of the seed are "nigra" or black mustard, generated to "juncea" or leaf mustard, generated to "campetris" or turnip rapeseed, and it is a cousin of kale and cabbage plants. Napus is the common variety grown in the Western world. Because Canola is susceptible to numerous types of pests which thrive in temperate climate zones, it is only grown in climates that do not experience extended periods of freezing. Canola seed plants are susceptible to flea beetles, aphids, cabbage seed-pod weevils, and all types of foliage-feeding insects which thrive in temperate climates. This plant does poorly in southern climates due to insects; geographic regions out of Kansas are not suitable. Because of their extended cold weather, western Canada and the Great Plains states are the prime areas for cultivation.

The consumption of Canola for feed or oil content presents no known toxicity in either crude or refined states. The L.E.A.R. variety has only a small percentage of erucic acid remaining in the oil (less than 0.02% to 0.01%). Erucic acid is the same substance that gives mustard its potent flavor bite. All mustards that have this potent flavor property contain some percentage of erucic acid (up to 66%). The special breeds used for Canola cooking oil contain only very small amounts. This flavor property was bred out for taste, not health considerations.

Barlow and Standby corrected the prior perception that erucic acid was damaging to humans, as the original studies were conducted on rats with flawed results. Recent laboratory research has retested this hypothesis and indicated that the 1970 findings were flawed. Unfortunately, these flawed studies continue to be cited in error. Erucic acid has not been proven harmful in humans and has been used as a medicine in others (see Lorenzo's Oil). [Ref: Barlow, S.M. and Standby, M.E. eds., Nutritional Evaluation Of Long-Chain Fatty Acids In Fish Oils, London: Academy Press, 1982; Bell, J.M., "From Rapeseed to Canola: A Brief History Of Research For Superior Meal And Edible Oil", Poultry Science, 61:613-618, 1982. Canada Grains Council, Canadian Grain Industry, Statistical Handbook, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, Jan. 1988; Murray, G.A., Auld, D.L., O'Kieffe, L.E., and Thill, D.C., "Winter Rape Production Practices In Northern Idaho", Idaho Agricultural Exposition, Station Bulletin, 634, 1984.]

Thomas' Claim 3:

Canola is an industrial oil not fit for human consumption. Rapeseed causes emphysema, respiratory distress, anemia, constipation, irritability, and blindness in animals.

Spectrum's Rebuttal:

Canola is not an industrial oil. Canola is and has been history's most investigated fat and feed source for humans and animals. Walnut, soybean, and flax oils, high erucic rapeseed H.E.A.R. variety, can be used industrially to make paints, plastics, cosmetics, inks, etc. Any organic hydrocarbon (meaning all vegetables) can be processed and denatured to make industrial chemicals. Extensive refining and modification of vegetable phytochemicals makes them inedible. Protein in milk can be used to make glue, the oils in orange skins are used to make explosives, the skins of various fruits emit gases that can be fatal in high concentrations. Various plant chemicals which serve humanity well as foods can be dangerous and even lethal in high concentrations. [Ref: American Heart Association, Report of Nutrition Committee, "The Value And Safety Of Diet Modification To Control Hyperlipidemia In Childhood And Adolescence" Circulation 58:381, 1978; Kramer, J.K.G., Saur F.D., and Pigdin, W.J. eds., High And Low Erucic Acid Rapeseed Oils, Toronto: Academic Press, 1983.]

Thomas' Claim 4:

Rapeseed causes "Mad Cow Disease".

Spectrum's Rebuttal:

"Mad Cow Disease" is a brain disorder (spongiform encephalopathy) caused by errant protein structures in the brain. Prions (pronounced pree-ons) are the suspected cause. Neither bacteria nor virus, these are protein structures that cause decay of synapses, nerves, and cells in the brain. The transmission of "Mad Cow Disease" occurs when the rendered animal tissue from sheep and other animals is added to cattle feed. Offal and diseased organ tissues are the suspected transmission vector, originating in sheep, with crossover into cattle and then humans. Cattle are not fed Canola oil as part of their typical diet in England. There is no proven or even suspected causative role played by Canola seed, meal, or oils in this disease. Mr. Thomas' link between Canola and "Mad Cow Disease" is a completely inaccurate affiliation of an edible oil to a serious health problem. [Ref: Wall Street Journal, March 26, 1996, Section A15, "EU Agrees To Ban Exports Of British Beef (Mad Cow Disease)"; Press Democrat, "Mad Cow Disease" March 26, 1996.

Thomas' Claim 5:

Rapeseed is genetically engineered.

Spectrum's Rebuttal:

Some forms of rapeseed are genetically engineered—primarily the somatic diploid or gametic haploid cell modification. However, all new seed variants were within the same species block as far as our research shows. In other words, there is no evidence that cross-species genes were used. The rapeseed varieties are primarily used in seed varieties that have industrial uses. Canola does not fit into this category since it is an edible human oil produced under very tight controls governed by both the United States and Canadian departments of agriculture.

Editor's note: And while those "very tight controls" looked good on paper to politicians and bureaucrats "well-oiled" by GE/GM money, as many more scientific and common-sense voices predicted, those so-called controls proved useless to prevent the contamination of adjacent fields with undesired GE/GM rape seed (and other) varieties. So it's a big mess right now that's kept mostly out of the press because the "expert" opinions were—as is usual where Big Money is involved—wrong. And that often quoted "scientific" baloney rests on top of the typical kind of deception quoted since the mid-1990s, to push GE/GM agriculture, such as you are about to read.]

Furthermore, Canada has a strict genetic-engineering program and closely controls the release of new plant varieties. The seed stock which generated Canola from rapeseed originated from experiments conducted in the 1970s—twenty years before genetic engineering became popular in the United States. [Ref: Chen, B.Y., Heneen, W.K., and Jonsson, R., "Re-synthesis of Brassica Napus L", Plant Cell Reports 7:407-40, 1988; Chuong, P.V. and Beverdorf, W.D., Powel, A.D. and Pauls, K.P., "Somatic Transfer Of Cytoplasmic Traits In Brassica Napus L By Haploid Protoplast Fusion" Molecular Gen. Genet. 211:197-201, 1988.]

Thomas' Claim 6:

Rapeseed "isothiocyanates", cyanide-containing compounds, cyanoglycosides, and glycosides in Canola, interfere with the biochemistry of humans and animals. Soy and Canola glycosides also depress the immune system.

Spectrum's Rebuttal:

Most seed of any type have small amounts of cyanogenic glycosides. If ingested in concentrated amounts over a number of years, these cancer-causing agents may be detrimental to one's health. When consumed in large quantities, however, even common apple seeds become lethal due to the organic cyanide compounds each seed contains. Rincin, processed from rice, is also a lethal refined material used as a nerve agent. However, these toxic substances do not make rice, apples, and Canola seeds lethal in their natural form. These chemicals become toxic only if synthesized using highly refined and post-refined techniques.

Super-high concentrations of these toxins cannot be found in Nature. Mustard gas is another example. There is no mustard gas in natural rapeseed, mustard, or Canola seeds. Flax seed, if harvested green or frozen before curing, has high levels of prussic acid, a form of organic cyanide. Cyanide in excess can cause illness and even death; however, the heating of seeds destroys these low-level natural agents. As seeds are expeller-pressed and heated above 120°F, isothiocyanates and other compounds are destroyed. [Ref: Erasmus, U., Fats That Heal, Fats That Kill, Alive Books, 1990; Erasmus, U., Fats & Oils, The Complete Guide To Whole Wheat & Nutrition, Alive Books, 1986.]

Thomas' Claim 7:

Lorenzo's oil is olive oil.

Spectrum's Rebuttal:

Lorenzo's oil was not olive oil. Croda, the New Jersey-based lipid-research and specialty-oil-products firm, developed a purified erucic fatty acid, the very same substance in mustard that gives the pungent bite to mustards. Erucic acid, used as a therapeutic agent, helped the little boy in the movie Lorenzo's Oil, stabilizing his disease condition. Erucic acid is a 22-carbon-chain fatty acid with a single double-bond (C22:1). Olive oil has no naturally occurring erucic acid, unless it has been blended with Canola oil. Lorenzo's oil is not olive oil. [Ref: Lavoisier, Dictionnaire Des Huiles Vegetables, Springer-Verlag, USA, Salunke D.K. 1996; Chavan J.K., Adsule, R.N., and Kadam, S.S., World Oilseeds: Chemistry, Technology, And Utilization, AVI Books, 1992.]

We trust that the foregoing scientifically substantiated rebuttal to Thomas' unfounded claims for a connection between "Mad Cow Disease" and glaucoma clarifies the issue to your satisfaction.

COUNTERPOINT: The Great Canola Debate

John Thomas Responds To Spectrum Natural's Rebuttal

I expected the Canola cartel to go ballistic when Perceptions magazine published the "Blindness and Oils" chapter on Canola from my book Young Again! How To Reverse The Aging Process. I look for a repeat performance from them when the soy oil, soy protein, tofu scam impacts public consciousness.

Spectrum Naturals conjured up the usual establishment tar and feathers: "no scientific proof, lack of credentials, divergence from known and recognized scientific community" and other mewings designed to belittle me, degrade Perceptions, and blur public consciousness about the energy nature of the substances we call food and water. Spectrum does not understand that all substances have a racemic energy footprint and electrical signature that manifests itself as a "measurable" right-or left-spinning energy field.

When food enters the body, it imposes and transfers its vibratory signature to the body's bioelectric energy fields. Therefore, food and water either increase or diminish health and the body's energy spin, as reflected in our aura. The effect is best described as a bioelectric energy shift. This shift is not based on carbohydrates, fats, and proteins, and is not understood by conventional science, which knows disease and aging only by their symptoms.

Food and water influence the tissues and cells through the homeopathic principles of resonance and transference, which describe subtle energy changes in the body when substances are introduced into the system. Canola and soy upset the body subtle-energy fields because they are powerful, deep, and rapid left-spinning energy substances that are toxic and, therefore, should NOT be ingested.

I suggest everyone learn to use a pendulum, a vibration chain, and aurameter so they can confirm for themselves that Canola and soy are bad news. I highly recommend everyone read the article "Soy Products For Dairy Product? Not So Fast..." in the September 1995 issue of Health Freedom News and learn of the deleterious effects of soy oil and soy protein on living systems. Then let's see what Spectrum has to say in response to this very well done article that backs up and confirms what I had to say in my chapter on soy: "Bald Heads And Oil".

Once people understand the energy nature of food as relates to aging and rejuvenation, they will discover to their horror that Canola and soy are not only out of place in their diets, but actually accelerate the breakdown of the body's connective tissues and nerve fibers.

These "experts" who have been telling us fairy tales about the wonders of Canola are the same nice folks who vaunted oleo and soy margarines and orchestrated the condemnation of butter, coconut oil, and lard.

Is it any surprise? Last year's [1995] haul on "industrial" food oils—like Canola and soy—was in the range of $12,000,000,000 (BILLION)! As the consumption of these oils increases, people's health slowly deteriorates and the old-age homes and cemeteries fill. Scientific madmen seem to forget that the human body works synergistically and that their snake oil has multiple fangs when turned loose in bodies already stressed from environmental and chemical toxicities.

The toxic effects of Canola and soy take years to manifest.

[Editor's note: What could be more convenient to the New World Gang's depopulation agenda than a subtle-acting time-delay poison to make it difficult to trace blame—a much better plan than the tobacco industry's longtime scam.]

Laboratory test tubes, studies, and industry experts cannot be counted on to give us the truth. Wasn't it "experts" who gave us Agent Orange, DDT, malathion, thalidomide, Gulf War Syndrome, aspartame (NutraSweet), MSG (monosodium glutamate), Swine Flu shots, fluoridated water and toothpaste, and presently, live Hepatitis-B vaccines for helpless children under two years of age?

How about conditions like Type-1 diabetes, hearing loss, and death in children from mutant DPT and polio vaccinations the "experts" are rabidly pushing at us? What about the thousands of "safe" drugs the pharmaceutical and medical folks peddle—all with known, toxic contraindications for the liver (our most vital organ)?!

Perceptions readers should not be surprised to learn that the international food cartels peddle energy-toxic, industrial "food" oils like Canola and soy to an unsuspecting and ignorant public. The experts don't have a clue about disease prevention and consider aging reversal to be ludicrous. Spectrum's experts quote chapter and verse to support their position, but it matters not. Their response suggests that behind the smoke screen is a powder keg of information they hope the public will never learn. [Just like finally came out in the tobacco industry scam.]

Young Again! How To Reverse The Aging Process was not written as a scientific work, but as a common-sense guide to help people understand why they prematurely age and die.

If your readers want to keep their health or get back what they have lost, they must learn to ignore the advice of the experts and do exactly the opposite of what the masses are being brainwashed to do and think.

Canola and soy are serious players in degenerative aging and disease. At best, they confuse body energy patterns. At worst, they become the straw that breaks the proverbial camel's back—or precipitate things like "Mad Cow Disease", glaucoma, and a thousand other "degenerative" conditions that keep the cattle lines in the clinics full and profitable.

Lastly, cunning marketing propaganda by the international food cartels has Americans foolishly believing in the widespread historical use of Canola just as they did with their fairy tales about bigtime soy use in Asia and how healthy Asians are as a result of a dietary intake of soy.

The TRUTH of the matter is that we produce 144 billion pounds of WASTE soy protein a year. Cartel propaganda is behind the massive push for consumption of soy products (tofu, soy milk, and baby formulas) over conventional protein and fat sources. Soy and Canola are in almost all processed foods. We dump the balance on the Asians.

Edgar Cayce advised against the use of soy and rape (Canola) oils. Skilled doctors of Chinese medicine will not use soy because it interferes with subtle-energy patterns in the body. Canola is 1000 times more toxic than soy.

I suggest your readers read Young Again! cover to cover before they find their health in serious jeopardy from following "expert advice" and ingesting toxic-food substances. Vision loss, nerve degeneration, connective tissue breakdown, and balding are just a few of the problems they may avoid. For sure, they will learn how to live long and healthy lives.

— John Thomas

P.S. On my desk is a fax about a test-lab finding that Canola oil produces sterility in rabbits. Perhaps this is behind the plummeting sperm counts in young U.S. males? Canola oil is in almost every processed food on the grocery shelves. Scary! △

Bushonomics And The Downfall Of America

Editor's note: There is no arguing with the point that, if you want to size-up what is happening to the United States in very concrete terms, then examine the condition of the financial arenas. No one does this better than Al Martin, whose savvy reading of the financial playing fields is like the way some of the best coaches explain the fine points of a football game.

The problem is, this isn't a game—though too many asleep Americans take it as such. And thanks to Al's courageous spelling out of the impending dire consequences, perhaps more people will awaken to reverse the writing on the wall. After all, a lot can be accomplished by the wolves in the henhouse when the guard dogs are bought and farmers sound asleep.

Remember that old story about the frogs being boiled in the pot of water? So long as the temperature goes up slowly enough, the frogs remain blissfully unaware of their predicament until it's too late. Sound familiar?

But all is not in a downhill slide, as Al so optimistically points out: "The American Psychiatric Association noted that anti-depressant sales (Prozac, Zanax, etc.) are at record highs. They have now increased 40% since the election of George Bush Jr." How's that for an omen to reflect our subconscious knowing of what's really going on?!

For those newer readers who may not be familiar with this crusader, according to his own biographical statement (at his AlMartinRaw.com Internet website), Al is America's foremost whistleblower on government fraud and corruption. A retired U.S. Navy Lt. Commander and former officer in the Office of Naval Intelligence, he has testified before Congress (the Kerry Committee and the Alexander Committee) regarding Iran-Contra. Al Martin is the author of the revealing and witty exposé titled The Conspirators: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider (© 2001, National Liberty Press; order from Wisdom Books & Press: see information nearby).

Want Your Civil Liberties And Rights Back? Move To U.S.-Occupied Iraq

According to the latest reports, the benefits that Iraqi citizens will now enjoy under a U.S.-supported regime (they're not calling it U.S. occupation) will be much better than the disenfranchised naïve American flag-wavers.

General Brooks, a spokesman for CENTCOM Command, made a pronouncement reiterating the expanded First and Second Amendment privileges that Iraqi citizens will have. The would-be Iraqi leaders being groomed for the coalition they're trying to form were being interviewed and told about all the new benefits they're going to have.

A Shiite mullah with a turban on his head heard this announcement and he says: "If that's the case, I can't wait to be occupied." But what struck me funny about it is that Iraqi citizens will now have (at U.S. taxpayers' expense) universal free healthcare coverage, universal education up to university level, and they will be entitled to financial aid for the purchases of food, utilities such as water and electricity will be subsidized, gasoline for cars, and so on will remain at 13¢ a gallon. How can you beat that?

Iraqi citizens understand that it is a coalition of widely disparate people who the United States has to put together in order to rule Iraq under at least the guise of an Iraqi government. He said that there will be protests against us in Iraq, but Iraqi citizens should know that they will have all the rights of civil disobedience and they will be able to protest. Also, Iraqi citizens will have the absolute right to keep and bear their own firearms, unfettered by the Iraqi government.

Then, after hearing all of this, I thought to myself: There are 70 million Americans who no longer have health insurance or can no longer afford their medications because medical costs are now rising by 14% a year under the Bush Administration, because the Bush Regime will do nothing to limit costs insofar as the pharmaceutical industry is the third richest source of money for Republicans.

Tuition costs at major universities are now rising by 10% a year under the Bush Administration. At the same time, the Bush Regime is cutting back federal student aid and grants and loans.

If you're one of the 70 million Americans who doesn't have healthcare coverage, or can't afford prescription drugs, and you can't afford to send your kids to college because you've been wiped out and your 401K account is now a 201K account under the scourge of Bushonomics, and if you're concerned about your civil rights and liberties (as the representative from the Constitutional Law Center points out), Iraqi citizens will now have greater First, Second, and Fourth Amendment privileges than do the citizens of the United States in the post-U.S.A. Patriot Act world.

As General Brooks said himself, the new U.S.-backed administration in Iraq will do away with the national identity card in Iraq. At the very same time, Senator Orrin Hatch says that we see smooth sailing for the National Identity Card Act in this session. So while national identity cards are being done away with in Iraq, U.S. citizens will be compelled to carry them. Patriots would love to move to Iraq now.

The Constitutional Law Center's spokesman further pointed out that the State Department is forming restrictions because they're afraid that U.S. citizens who have been wiped out by Bushonomics, and are frightened of the limitation of their civil rights and liberties which have come under the Bush Regime, will start expatriating themselves to Iraq.

Subsidized by U.S. taxpayers, we are exporting the gospel of corporate socialism to U.S.-occupied territories. But at the same time we're giving the Iraqi people greater civil rights and liberties than the American people now enjoy. And that's the great irony.

Bush says that we are going to export to Iraq an absolutely free and unfettered democratic state—which is precisely the opposite agenda of what the Bush Regime is doing domestically.

Even the Wall Street Journal is writing about the new liberal gun policies in Iraq—much more liberal than in the United States. This is from an April 16 story by Dan Morse: “Surrounded by warehouses holding candy, yarn, tea, and shaving cream, Army Capt. Paul Stanton listens to five import merchants explain in imperfect English that they NEED the seven assault rifles his troops have found here to fend off looters. ‘You’re a businessman right? I’m going to leave you with four.’ Salam Bayram, one of the importers, counters that even seven aren’t enough. ‘Ok, here’s the deal: I’ll let you keep all seven, but we’re going to record all the serial numbers; we’re going to come by daily, and if the guns aren’t here, we’ll detain everyone.’”

Imagine this conversation in the U.S. of A.—where even one assault rifle is illegal: “But officer, I need seven assault rifles.”

Iraq is now the new Land of Milk and Honey, gratis of the U.S. Taxpayers. Or maybe it's just the Land of Bilk and Money.

And then there’s Ahmed Chalabi, the U.S. quisling choice to head the government in post-war Iraq, who is strongly supported by the Department of Defense and the CIA, despite State Department opposition. And that is so common during Bush Regimes. DoD and CIA always support an old Bush Cabalist like Chalabi, and the State Department says: “Watch out for this guy.” After all, this is a guy who hasn’t been in Iraq in more than 40 years. Although he was well known and respected in Iraq at one time, now nobody in Iraq remembers who he is anymore. The median age in Iraq is 29 years and this Chalabi hasn’t been in Iraq since 1958—i.e., since Edsels were manufactured.

Chalabi is wanted by the kingdom of Jordan for banking fraud. He was involved with Bushonian-controlled companies during the Iran-Contra period, all the way to the early 1990s before Clinton came into office.

Chalabi cofounded Petra Bank in Jordan in 1978, which collapsed in 1989 after which he fled the country. In absentia, Chalabi was then tried and convicted of embezzlement, theft, and fraud. Chalabi was afraid the Clinton Administration might extradite him to Jordan, which they did consider doing.

A lot of Jordanian banks got scammed during these Bushonian Cabalist banking scams. Chalabi was a principal partner in the Blackstone investment group, as were Frank Carlucci and Pete Peterson and Dick Armitage.

Chalabi also became an associate partner with the Kissinger group in those transactions with Ghaith Pharoan and the Bush Family’s Pilgrim Investment Trust, which committed all sorts of fraud in Bahrain.

With those kinds of credentials, you could run a country. These are the perfect credentials to run a Bushonian Regime in Iraq. Chalabi is an old Bushonian Cabalist and Republican Scammer.

Al Jazeera did a poll in Iraq, and the Iraqi people definitely don’t want this guy in the leadership. They’re frightened of him. Along with the Bush Family, he’s defrauded a lot of people in the Middle East.

Meanwhile Bloomberg News stated that they would stand up to White House Bushonian pressure. They have been running a crawl tape on Chalabi every day. It says: “Chalabi, wanted in Jordan for bank fraud...” The White House has pressured them every day, but a spokesman said that, though CNN has knuckled under pressure, Bloomberg will keep reminding their viewers who this Chalabi is.

Evidently Mayor Bloomberg even wrote a letter to the King of Jordan asking him why Jordan isn’t pressing the extradition warrant on Chalabi it had filed with the Department of Justice. Why did they suddenly withdraw several months ago? Could it have anything to do with Jordanian “aid”?

The Jordanian government withdrew its extradition filings at the exact same time that Bush was recommending an increase of about $143 million in Jordanian aid. As usual the American taxpayers continue to pay for the Bushonian cover-up.

This isn’t the Bushonian Cabal using the fruits of its previous frauds to maintain a cover-up. It is again the American people in their capacity as taxpayers who are forced to maintain a cover-up of those who are now in control of the government.

Even though a CNN poll said that 61% of American citizens now say that all tax cuts should be delayed, Bush keeps pushing it and pushing it.

If the $726 billion Tax Relief Bill were to pass intact, including the elimination of the double taxation of dividends as well as all of Bush’s tax relief for the Republican Rich, the top 1% of the nation, which now controls 66.3% of all the private wealth of the country (78% of said people being Republicans), would in 12 months increase to 67.5% control.

In fact, the Bush Family would personally profit by at least $14 million. And that’s probably a low figure. As the EPI pointed out in the past, so much of the Bush Family wealth is held through a network of secret and complex shadowy offshore trusts.

American citizens not only pay for their own narrow-mindedness, the American people pay to maintain the Bushonian Cover-up.

Now to all those Old Flag-Wavers: watch those taxes going up to pay for the Iraqi Occupation.

And to those Old Farts, especially those who complain about spending $500 per month on their prescription medication: Hey, move to Iraq!

Don’t forget the vets. Even the VA medical benefits have now been reduced by the Bush Regime. The prescription charges have been increased. First it was $3, then it went to $7 and $10, and now it’s going up to $20.

The reason why they’re pushing Zoloft all the time, and Larry Kudlow talks about it, is because it reduces your willpower. As Bill Wolman said to Larry: I know why you want everyone to take Zoloft; it’s because after they’ve all lost their money under Bushonomics, they take Zoloft and you tell them to buy more stock, and they do.

You may have heard about the $680 million sole-source non-compete contract that Bechtel got to rebuild Iraq and the $500 million non-compete contract that CSC/Dyncorp got for the police and prisons and judiciary system in Iraq. Bushonian minions have successfully used the line that Halliburton, Bechtel, etc. are all public corporations, and if they can be helped through Bushonian largesse, then that helps all other shareholders as well.

The Untold History Of America

by Ray Bilger

This book shatters the image that has traditionally been portrayed as American History, by exposing the high-level corruption that passes for business-as-usual in the Halls of Congress, the White House, and throughout our entire Judicial System.

Special emphasis is placed throughout the book on the original Native inhabitants of America. They lived for thousands of years on this continent in complete harmony and balance with the Earth. With their help we may yet be able to turn things around so that our tomorrows will be something we will all feel honored to pass on to the children who are our future generations.

Just compare American society and the new Iraqi society (at American taxpayers' expense). American people should be moving to Iraq because of all the freebies we're giving them.

A lot of the right-wingers are up in arms over this. They say we should be turning Iraq into a capitalist state like the United States, but we're turning Iraq into a social welfare state at the expense of the American taxpayers.

So now all those Americans who have seen their 401K accounts turn into 201K accounts under the scourge of Bushonomics, and all those who have lost their jobs, their pensions, their healthcare, since the election of Junior, should move to Iraq. There's free healthcare. There's free education. Subsidized everything.

Will they be on the dole forever? Of course they will. Once they get used to the Yellow Brick Road of U.S. taxpayers' dollars, you'll never wean them off of it.

The Religious Right like Jerry Fallwell and Pat Robertson are always harping on the idea that the United States is supposed to be spreading the gospel of capitalism. But what we're creating in Iraq is a socialist welfare state funded by U.S. taxpayers.

This is an issue that really gets people upset, this idea of U.S. taxpayer largesse in rebuilding Iraq, when the Bushonian Regime opposes universal healthcare, universal education, etc., in the United States. Yet U.S. taxpayers are going to pay for it in Iraq.

It's as if the Great Satan is building a Yellow Brick Road for Iraqis. But don't follow the Yellow Brick Road or you'll end up with a 201K plan in America. This is directly counter to the Bushonian Regime's pretended philosophy that capitalism and free enterprise are the rules of the game.

You have to remember that there are now millions of those people in this country—millions who have had their jobs, pensions, and healthcare wiped out. This is a big issue, particularly when the Iraqi people are provided with programs which the Bush Administration opposes here in the United States.

The irony is once again deafening. Under a Bushonian Regime, you pay for it again and again and again. It's a never-ending payment scheme for the U.S. taxpayers.

That's a definition of Bushonomics: It's a Never-Ending Payment Scheme.

Even the NRA people are upset now, especially after seeing the pictures of U.S. soldiers handing out AK47s to the newly defeated Iraqis, when the AK47 is considered an assault weapon and is banned in the United States.

As General Brooks said, private Iraqi citizens will have the right to keep and bear arms—including fully automatic weapons as well as light-armored-vehicle assault weapons. The conclusion is obvious.

Disenfranchised, disarmed Americans should immediately move to Iraq to enjoy the rights, liberties, and financial largesse which the rest of the flag-waving U.S. citizens are stupid enough to pay for.

Now you too can enjoy the new rights and liberties of the Iraqi people (which U.S. citizens have lost or will lose), as well as U.S. taxpayer-funded largesse.

Just move to U.S.-occupied Iraq. Before the rush starts.

FLASH UPDATE: U.S. Government Hires Former Soviet Spies (4/22/03)

Former KGB counterintelligence chief, General Oleg Kalugin, confirms U.S. agency relationship with former KGB chiefs General Yevgeny Primakov and General Aleksandr V. Karpov.

Recently interviewed on the Spy Cruise (San Diego to Hawaii, March 27 to April 9), Kalugin, a Fox News commentator, stated that DARPA's Office of Information Awareness has hired both Primakov and Karpov as consultants and "advisors".

The Office of Information Awareness is headed by convicted Iran-Contra felon Vice Admiral John Poindexter.

In essence, a convicted felon (Poindexter) is hiring former Soviet spies (Primakov and Karpov) to help the Bush Administration spy on U.S. citizens.

[Editor's note: Some readers will remember the first installment of this eye-opening story, Al's 3/17/03 column on page 90 of the May 2003 issue of The SPECTRUM. That story must have really stepped on some big toes because the Internet was abuzz for awhile with disparaging accusations thrown at Al, which he explains further on in this story.]

The Office of Information Awareness has received great notoriety with its bizarre logo of a floating pyramid in space with the all-seeing eye in the capstone, flashing a searchlight onto the planet Earth.

(Why go to the lodge when you can just go to the Office of Information Awareness?)

Since it was first unveiled, however, the office has deleted its occult logo and its ponderous Masonic symbology to a much more straightforward letterhead design, which now simply says "IAO".

Another participant in the Spy Cruise, FBI counter-intelligence expert David Major admitted that Poindexter was his boss. When asked if he wasn't concerned, Major just shrugged and said that he'd have to see their (the Soviets') "backgrounds" before he could make a comment.

Evidently American spymasters have great respect for the KGB and they want to learn all they can, so they can further their agenda of internal passports for U.S. citizens in the United States.

The British MI-5 is also aware of these "new hires" and is monitoring the situation with some alarm.

AlMartinRaw.com had previously reported that Primakov and Karpov were hired by the Department of Homeland Security, but this was incorrect.

When the Bush Administration found out that they couldn't deny this new "hiring" of Primakov and Karpov, to misdirect everyone they put out the word that these two former Soviet spies had a relationship with the Department of Homeland Security, which they don't.

In this way, when the media called (and they were constantly pestered), the Department of Homeland Security could legitimately say that the former KGB chiefs don't have a relationship with them. And it's true—Primakov and Karpov are working for Poindexter in the Office of Information Awareness.

[Editor's note: So the point of Al's original story remains quite valid (and perhaps just a bit scary), and in fact takes on even more seriousness once we see the extent of deception the Bush Administration used to try to obscure what was going on!]

Bush Cabal's World Domination Tour Continues; Prozac Nation Still Sleeping (4/28/03)

Bushonian Regimes have traditionally used the office of the Vice President to hide mischief making. Think of the Vice President's Task Force on Drugs in 1983, formed in Miami with George Bush Sr. as its head, which acted in an illicit capacity to ensure that CIA-authorized Iran-Contra-related narcotics shipments were not inadvertently stopped.

This tradition continues to this day. George Bush Sr. himself as Vice President was in charge of Iran-Contra operations to maintain "deniability" of then President Ronald Reagan. This is the same game that Bush and Cheney play today.

Put Cheney in charge of everything that's illegal to maintain deniability for the President. What has changed? Not much. The Republican tradition of Vice Presidents taking the fall goes back to the forgettable Spiro Agnew—or at least the Republicans hope we forgot.

Meanwhile, in an important ruling, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals has allowed the lawsuit filed jointly by Sierra Club and Judicial Watch against Vice President Richard Cheney, in his capacity as chairman of the Energy Task Force, to proceed despite heavy pressure against the Court from the Department of Justice.

Larry Klayman of Judicial Watch reiterated that he intends to get to the bottom of the consultations that were held in secret between U.S. oil companies and the Vice President regarding oil pricing before the war on Iraq. Klayman went on to say that this was a blatant example of Bushonian Cabalism.

The Department of Justice responded through their spokesperson, Barbara Comstock, that DoJ will "vigorously" appeal this most recent ruling and will fight "obviously liberal-influenced" courts that would allow private lawsuits to proceed that would attempt to dictate U.S. policy.

The inference is that if the Bush Administration loses on this issue before the Supreme Court, it will simply invoke their newly found national security powers and override the court's decision. They steadfastly will not submit these materials to the court that the Sierra Club and Judicial Watch have requested, namely the so-called secret minutes of the meetings that Cheney had with various CEOs of various oil companies.

In a related matter, the General Accounting Office has stated that it too has launched an investigation into the Vice President's affairs and his contacts with U.S. oil companies vis-à-vis the awarding of non-competitive bids under the Rebuilding of Iraq program.

As the GAO points out, the Vice President simply ignored the agreement previously made with the British and Australians and other allies who actually committed troops to the Iraqi Adventure. The Vice President was required by the agreement, which the Bushonian Regime agreed to, that these contracts would be open to British and others of our allies. The Vice President has refused to do so.

Also the GAO is concerned that the Vice President is awarding these non-competitive contracts on "a political point system". The GAO will challenge the non-competitive status and how it was done without congressional approval, which should have been required, or so the GAO seems to believe.

They said they have support in this action from the Republican-controlled CBO (Congressional Budget Office). The inference is that the Republicans have consistently chided the GAO, but now they have the support of the Republican-controlled CBO, which also supports them in this action. They are alleging that the Vice President gave out these contracts on a political point system wherein the first preferences are given to U.S. companies which have donated the most money to the Republican Party or its interest groups.

The GAO spokesman also reiterated the comments of Larry Klayman that this is the worst case of Bushonian Cabalism yet seen.

In other news, the UN Office of Hans Blix is also upset at the Bush Administration because they've stated that there is no envisioned role for UN inspectors in Iraq.

UN Chief Kofi Annan wants to send a team back and so do the French, Russians, and Germans—as a condition to financially supporting the rebuilding of Iraq. The Bush Administration however wants them to sit out. In response to this, the UN announced, through the office of Hans Blix and Kofi Annan, that the Bush Administration is dangerous and they are sustained by the creation of a "web of lies unheralded in human history".

The UN complained about it and they had documentation how the Bush Administration did it. They formally charged the Bush Regime with forging documents with intimidating and bribing witnesses to give statements in an effort to discredit UN arms inspectors in Iraq pursuant to the Bush Administration's "need" to have a war with Iraq. They didn't elaborate about what they meant by the word "need"—but you can probably read between the lines: in order to divert the public's attention from what the scourge of Bushonomics is doing.

The Bush Administration is tight-lipped about it. MSNBC ran the story by Alex Witt and they made some terse comments. She was shuffling the papers on her desk and then some guy from off-camera yells (you can't see him, but you hear his voice): "We're not supposed to run that story." And she turned around in her chair and looked in the direction of the voice, and then she starts shuffling her papers again, and stops reading the story. Fox News wouldn't run it. The UN put it out to everyone, but very few people ran it. But I like Annan's comments about the Bush Administration in which he called them a dangerous gaggle of right-wingers maintained by a web of deceit, unheralded in human history, who are hell bent on world domination.

The Russians already knew that the Bush Regime was sabotaging UN weapons inspectors in Iraq, and yet the Russian government came out with a statement feigning surprise, dismay, and even shock at the Bush Administration's activities.

The Russians, French, and Germans see this as a real coup because it's played up very well in the rest of the world, outside of the United States. Chirac and Schroeder issued a joint statement stating that it is their belief that the Bush Administration is the single greatest danger to world peace.

And now, with the UN report to back them up, it's obvious how the Bush Administration has consistently acted to sabotage the UN inspections thorough a web of lies, forged documents, and intimidation.

You may have heard that the U.S. Army found $600 million in U.S. hundred dollar bills behind the wall of one of Saddam's palaces. They showed this money being lifted out by whole lines of forklifts, pallet after pallet of freshly wrapped notes. They're wrapped in the hermetically sealed wraps with the yellow bands, which is exactly the way they come from the Federal Reserve. However, Secretary of the Treasury Snow issued a release saying that they are nearly 100% certain that the notes are counterfeit.

Of course, coming out of the Iraqi regime, the Treasury agents believe that the Iranians gave the Iraqis the money, or the Iraqis bought the money from the Iranians because the Iranians were the only ones with intaglio presses.

This goes back to the Super Counterfeit Bills story from the early 1980s. But what everyone has forgotten now, of course, is that there was a special Army operation in 1986 (and this was widely publicized at the time) wherein a special elite Army unit comprised of retrained (but not refried) Treasury agents secreted themselves into Iran and destroyed the Iranian intaglio presses and plates. Then the Reagan-Bush regime pressured the Government of Italy so that no more presses were sold. The Iranians haven't had the ability to produce counterfeit notes in many years, yet the Treasury department states that these notes are all the new series.

The upshot is that everybody is laughing about it. People say: "You wait and see. In a couple weeks, when these notes finally get back to the United States, the Treasury will immediately declare them to be counterfeit, and they will issue a statement saying that the notes have been destroyed." In fact, the money is genuine.

And that's how the Bushonian Cabal will get $600 million in "extra" cash to spend.

When they showed the money, most people wouldn't understand that it's very hard to duplicate the original Federal Reserve wrappers. The notes were also block-sealed in plastic. You could tell by looking at it that this money came directly from the Federal Reserve. Not only was it block-packed, but the stacks of notes were alternated reverse, obverse, reverse, obverse. It's exactly the way they came out of the Treasury.

It should be remembered that three-quarters of all U.S. hundred dollar bills printed are in circulation outside of the United States. Only 25% of $100 banknotes are in the United States. The Russian Government is the largest individual purchaser of the U.S. $100 bill.

So here's a prediction: The bank notes found in Iraq will be declared counterfeit.

In other news, first quarter profit expectations of the major pharmaceutical companies, like Merck, Pfizer, et al, were 60% to 80% above original estimates. Even the individual companies all put out statements stating that it was due to the continuing surge in the sale of anti-depressants.

Coincidentally the American Psychiatric Association noted that anti-depressant sales (Prozac, Zanax, etc.) are at record highs. They have now increased 40% since the election of George Bush Jr.

The APA is a very liberal organization, completely opposite of the AMA. That's why they never amalgamated with them—because of their political differences.

The APA reminded everyone about the first-quarter profits due to the record sales of anti-depressants as the American people continued to feel the adverse effects of Bushonomics. The spokesman for the American Psychiatric Association also stated that Bushonomics is the greatest threat to the mental health of the American citizens since the Great Depression.

And the Bush White House's response to the American Psychiatric Association's report? They will try to speed up the development and increase the testing on the program of the Valium Gas/Prozac Water.

[Editor's note: See Al's column in the December 2002 issue of THE SPECTRUM for details about this outrageous tactic against the American people.]

It makes sense because not only is it an instrument of control, but the Bush Administration understands the great mental stress that's being created by Bushonomics and they need a way to counter it.

It also brings to mind the Gallup poll, regarding the contention of Malthus and the longevity of political parties. Malthus pointed out that in all democratic societies since the ancient Greeks (for the last 3,500 years), all political parties whose members exceeded the median age of the underlying population were extinct 50 years later. In other words, they had disappeared as the gap continued to grow between the median age of party members and the median age of the population.

In this context, in round numbers, the median age of the U.S. population is currently 36.5 years, and the median age of Republican Party members is 43.5 years. In other words, this gap has been growing and continues to grow. This is a record gap. As the Rukeyser Report pointed out, this does not bode well for the Republican Party.

The Republic Party did try to attract young people in the 1980s, but after the Reagan-Bush effort in the 1980s, they gave up. When the 18-24-year-old Republican vote peaked in 1986 at 24.9% of the population, I was surprised. 87.9% of all 18-24 voters were Republican, almost 90%. Today that fraction has dropped to 30% and young people have frankly abandoned the Republican Party in droves.

Could it be the End of the Republic Party (As We Know It)?

They'll just have to recruit within their families to keep the thing going. Or they can change the name back to Whigs.

* * *

And here's an update to the Flash Update of the Oleg Kalugin story (U.S. Government Hires Former Soviet Spies).

Fox News commentator and former KGB General Kalugin left his Hotel Pierre digs in New York rather abruptly after my story was posted on my AlMartinRaw.com website and he immediately checked in under an assumed name in a Washington DC hotel. (Note to indolent reporters: It is a certainty that the good general is staying in a hotel where Fox maintains a corporate charge account. Although this may be the age of Corporate Journalism, good old-fashioned political investigative reporting is still alive and well at AlMartinRaw.com.)

It should be noted that Kalugin is one of the savviest of the KGB generals. Like a chess grandmaster, he doesn't say hello until he thinks about it first.

So here's the mea culpa: AlMartinRaw.com got snookered by Bushonian disinformation too, but we'll correct any errors as quickly as possible.

* * *

As a further note on the market commentary we present on this site, we called the market rally last week precisely when the SPX went to 920 and that's what we said it would move to, before it backed off. The predictions in the equities and the commodities were correct, right to the dollar.

We have to tell you about how much money you could have made. Note: Please feel free to pass this information on to your sophisticated trader friends and acquaintances so they can benefit as well. And subscribe as well.

Even Gore Vidal talks about the United States as the United States of Amnesia. And he is known to have said that he found my book The Conspirators: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider to be "very revealing".

In more exciting news, the Highway Safety Administration announced that traffic fatalities are at a 13-year high, even with a reduced speed limit. The funny thing is that they also mentioned the growing depression of the American people. People are so depressed that they're driving wildly, like they don't care anymore.

The nation's murder and suicide rates are also at 15-year highs. All-time use of antidepressants is at an all-time high.

Psychology Today magazine, in a cover story on the new Prozac Nation movie, reports that almost 30 million Americans are taking Prozac—that's just Prozac and not counting other antidepressants. Alcohol consumption is at its highest since 1939. The person reporting these statistics just threw up his hands in the air and said: "The nation's falling apart!"

The reason I found this noteworthy is because this is the collateral damage (and consequences) of Bushonomics. We saw the same thing in the era from 1989 to 1991, when the Great Credit Bubble created by Bushonomics-I unraveled. We saw the same increase in highway deaths and in the murder and suicide rates, and the increase in the use of liquor and drugs.

We are, after all, a confused and depressed people because of Bushonomics.

Meanwhile the Bush Cabal's World Domination Tour continues. George Bush says Iraq yesterday, Syria tomorrow, and North Korea next month.

So what are we going to do about it?

The Scourge Of Bushonomics Explained—Part 1 (5/5/03)

In a recent Wall Street Journal / NBC opinion poll, only 18% of the people claim they actually understand what a budget deficit is. And out of all the respondents, only 6% understood the deleterious effects that ever-expanding budget deficits have on economic growth. (When their check bounces and they get charged twenty bucks at the bank, these people probably ask: "Hey, why am I being penalized here? This is just a budget deficit.")

Now the Bushonian Regime is encouraging American business and industry to borrow from future revenues, and there is now a record number of companies selling on these delayed credit deals. You buy something for zero down, zero interest, no payments for a year for consumer purchases like washing machines, TVs, and cars. And this is all done to maintain the phony consumption numbers. Because of this I have decided to explain once and for all the meaning of Bushonomics and the scourge it represents to the American Economy.

This "borrowing from future sales" is the latest pernicious effect of Bushonomics, and now they're doing it at levels unprecedented. The people of the United States, wearing their hats as consumers, in the last 12 months have "spent" more than $500 billion in expenditures on these delayed-payment programs. And this means that business and industry are just stealing from future sales in order to maintain sales in the present.

Of course what happens is that this makes it very difficult for an economic recovery to take hold, because these future payments act like an anchor around the neck of the economy.

This does bode well for the repo market. The repossession industry is the only industry in the country that's growing. (Here's another tip for my readers: Go into the repossession business!) Pawnshops are also doing well, as are money-lending services at 36%. Psychiatrists and mental health facilities are also enjoying record business.

The key word for the future is "vig"—as in what's the magic word for the New Era of Bushonomics? Vig.

Bushonomics is revitalizing an old concept. In order to survive Bushonomics in the future, make the vig—or else.

Let me explain the concept of vig or vigorish for you: If you're a business owner

THE CONSPIRATORS: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider

WHAT IF a criminal cabal, a de facto white-collar crime syndicate, took over the U.S. Government and used its systems and operations for its own profit? According to former government operative and now whistleblower Al Martin, this is exactly what has happened.

For example, at a meeting with General Richard V. Secord, Martin was briefed about Iran-Contra operations and allowed to view voluminous CIA white papers concerning Operation Black Eagle, the code-name for the Bush-Casey-North program involving U.S. Government-sanctioned narcotics trafficking, illicit weapons deals, and wholesale fraud—corporate securities fraud, real estate fraud, banking fraud, and insurance fraud.

Martin has first-hand knowledge of the dirty deals, high-level scams, frauds, and treasonous activities of the U.S. Shadow Government costing taxpayers hundreds of billions of dollars—and still growing. This is a story of true conspiracy, an uncensored look at what really goes on in the back rooms of criminal power politics.

or a consumer in this environment, the only way you're going to survive is to pay the vig—or the egregious interest payments on the loans you've made.

Coincidentally, the Bush Regime, in the last 12 months, has quietly allowed the states to relax the usury laws. There is a federal usury limit, although the states regulate individual usury laws within a federal limit. The federal limit is 36%, but a lot of the states have imposed 24% caps.

The Department of Justice had a lawsuit going against the Money Store for the “we’ll cash your check this week and you don’t have to pay us till next week” crowd. The DoJ finally figured out that you’re paying about 78% or so per annum. They had fled a suit on behalf of the government against Money Store, Amsco, and a lot of check cashing places for violation of the usury laws. And that lawsuit has been quietly withdrawn.

When that lawsuit got withdrawn, larger and more mainstream business and industry took it as a sign that you can now literally charge what you want. And that’s another group of people who are making money in America—the Vitos and Guidos (as in the Guido Collection Agency who come out to your house to ask why you haven’t made the payment like you were supposed to).

But to get back to Bushonomics, both the OMB and CBO have stated that Bushonian budget deficits are not supportable beyond 2009—when they will reach $1 TRILLION per annum.

Then people who call-in to radio shows ask me what does it mean when they say “unsupportable”. When a nation can’t sell any more bonds to support its debt, it means economic collapse.

Instead of using the government’s own language to say that deficits are unsupportable beyond a certain period of time, you have to tell people that budget deficits will lead to economic collapse. It sounds frightfully shrill to say it that way, but it’s true.

I often wonder about how Bush can stay in power, and it’s only because he is governing a nation of stupid people, people who are too stupid to understand what he’s doing to the nation’s economy. If you compare Americans to other first-world nations, people are more adroit and there is a greater understanding of things political and economic and social than there is in the United States.

[Editor’s note: There’s no argument that it certainly helps to have so many people more focused on shopping at the mall and watching gladiator sports than supervising THEIR government. But SPECTRUM readers are likely to point out that the more direct answer for why Bush “can stay in power” is that those who PUT him in that puppet capacity of seeming power obviously still want him in that slot—or changes in personnel would “happen”.]

Consequently that’s why we have leadership in which Iran Contra, IraqGate and BCCI only happen in this nation. They only happen here. Why? Because the government knows it can get away with it because the people are too stupid.

And the United States is where the scams are the biggest—those scams perpetrated by U.S. Administrations. They perpetrate these scams in what I call the American Vacuum of Stupidity. There is a vacuum between the people and government and that vacuum is what I call a Stupidity Vacuum. It’s not a Power vacuum. It’s not a Recognition Vacuum. It’s a Stupidity Vacuum, and this is what allows Bushonomics to happen.

But this is why we added the Market Analysis—to give people the ability to make money even during an Era of Bushonomics.

(Check this week’s column at www.almartinraw.com/subscription/marketcommentary.html to see how much money you could have made by following last week’s trades.)

You may have heard that the famous Enron Scamscapeer, Thomas White, who was the Secretary of the Army, finally resigned. It’s surprising he lasted this long since this guy was a liability as soon as his nomination was announced. There has to be a reason for the timing of this “resignation” because the Administration tried to protect him for a long time after he became a liability.

So why are they kicking him out now? It must be that there’s something new coming with Enron. What’s coming is the second wave of Enron documents that the SEC and other investigative bodies are putting together regarding Enron’s offshore accounts and details of their other frauds.

This second wave of documents is most likely going to show some Republican connections. You’re going to start to see the linkage. The Bush Regime was getting nervous that these documents would start to document the real linkage between Enron and the Republican Party. There must be a bigger story behind White than what is known, and that’s why the Administration got rid of him. Perhaps White was used as some sort of conduit by Enron to funnel money into the Republican Party illicitly.

They should send Head Enron Scamscapeer, Ken Lay, to Iraq and have him be the new interim president of Iraq. He could set up all sorts of oil scams and he’d have that country Republicanized in 60 days. He’d turn Baghdad into Scam City—like it never was before.

What the Bush Regime is trying to do (and this has nothing to do with the civil rights of the Iraqi people) is Republicanize Iraq, and that means Scam City Here We Come. It would go from Banana Republicans to U.S. Republicans.

Why do you think guys like Richard Secord are over there all the time? And speaking of retired Major General Richard V. Secord, this notorious Iran-Contra felon was recently subpoenaed for CTI, his medical scam company, which even had a doctor as a front man. The technology never really worked and it was actually dangerous. Women who had their boobs scanned with these machines said that later their boobs glowed in the dark. It’s what they called The Second Touch.

The Washington Post reported: “A federal grand jury subpoenaed Richard V. Secord, the Iran-Contra figure and chief executive of Computerized Thermal Imaging Inc., who sold nearly $127,000 worth of the company’s stock just before a federal panel recommended against approving its leading product.”

After Secord sold his stock, the company’s stock price fell 63% to close at 39¢ a share.

The Washington Post also reported that: “one of the members of the company’s six-member board and chairman of its audit committee is Brig. General Harry C. “Heinie” Aderholt, who was Secord’s commander in Southeast Asia when both were involved in covert operations for the CIA.... Secord pleaded guilty in 1989 to lying to Congress about his role in the Iran-Contra affair, in which Reagan Administration officials arranged arms shipments to Nicaraguan rebels and to Iran.”

But to get back to Bushonomics:

Bushonian budget deficits have been DOUBLING every year. People need to understand that the government fiscal year ends September 30 every year. Of course Bush came in with a $58 billion budgetary surplus on the day he took office. In his first year (2001), the fiscal budget deficit was $100 billion. In 2002, it was $200 billion; and in 2003, it is estimated at $400 billion.

However, since last November, you have to understand that Bush formally transformed the U.S. economy from GAAP (Generally Accepted Accounting Principles) which Clinton people had put us back on after George Bush Sr. was gone. Then Bush Jr. took us off GAAP and put us back on B-FLAP (Bush Fantasy Land Accounting Principles).

Bush did this last November, when the Administration boldly announced before the bi-elections (it’s surprising they had the nerve to do it) that after the elections they would begin once again the Bushonian Scam of raping and pillaging the nation’s Social Security Trust Fund as well as the 42 other public trust funds.

In other words, they would count the $125 billion of surplus revenue payment into the Social Security system that people make through their FICA taxes as "general revenue" and that furthermore they would (as they had done from 1986-1992) begin re-scrambling the $40 billion a year in revenue out of the 42 other public trust funds.

This $40 billion is a hodge-podge of revenue the government receives from these 42 public trust funds—ranging from Bureau of Land Management mineral rights and royalties, public land grazing fees, Bureau of Indian Affairs federal gaming taxes, special federal taxes, pass through taxes, etc.

The Bush Jr. Administration (as the Bush Sr. Regime also did) is now simply counting this $40 billion of payments every year as general revenue, instead of segregated payments for their underlying beneficiaries.

Therefore, in order to convert B-FLAP (trying to figure out the annual federal budget deficit), you have to add $165 billion per annum (under a Bush Administration) on top of whatever the Bush Administration claims the federal budget deficits are, in order to convert B-FLAP into GAAP.

That is a point I've had to make a thousand times, and I know people still don't understand it. That's why it needs to be stated and restated again, especially if they see it in print.

Therefore, it is estimated that this year the federal budget deficit will be $400 billion for fiscal year 2003 ending September 30. However, in terms of GAAP (or "real money") the deficit would be $565 billion because you have to add the $165 billion on top.

GAAP or Generally Accepted Accounting Principles is the normal standard of accounting principles applied in business and industry and within government in order to calculate revenues, payments, debts, liabilities etc.

B-FLAP or Bush Fantasy Land Accounting Principles is where you take government revenue, which is supposed to be segregated for other purposes, and you count it as general revenues.

B-FLAP then creates continuing deficits within the 43 public trust funds.

Remember the Bush Sr. Administration (1986-1992) sucked $3.88 TRILLION out of the Social Security system. The Bush Administration gets around that (you have to put something in there) by replacing the hard cash they sucked out with 3-1/2% non-marketable non-convertible restricted U.S. Treasury bonds with no fixed maturity date—essentially worthless paper.

GAAP, however, does not distinguish between a restricted instrument and a full-faith-and-credit marketable government instrument. Therefore they are able to count these worthless instruments as what is known in accounting terms as "near cash equivalents". That is how they make up the underlying deficits.

The 3-1/2% coupons that these instruments bear under a GAAP system should be paid from the U.S. Treasury every year into these accounts to at least cover the coupon. Therefore that would represent a current burden of about $100 billion per annum just in the Social Security General and Disability Trust Funds—and this does not include what the U.S. Treasury should be paying back into the 42 other public trust funds.

But the money is not paid under a Bush Administration. It was paid in the second Clinton term, but now that Bushonomics is back, that $100 billion of interest on these non-marketable securities is not paid. It is simply put on an accrual basis, wherein the coupon payment accrues indefinitely in arrears and is counted as part of the principal liability or principal debt.

People have asked me why it is that the Social Security deficit was $3.8 TRILLION when Bush Sr. left office. This constitutes the $3.8 TRILLION which the Bush Administration stole.

There is no way around it. They didn't bleed it out. They didn't convert it. It was unlawfully stolen in order to mask or obfuscate the actual size of Bushonian budget deficits that were created during the 1986-1992 timeframe.

Why is that $3.8 TRILLION deficit today a $5.3 TRILLION deficit? How did it grow?

It grew by that $100 billion per year coupon payment that is not being paid by the U.S. Treasury, but being accrued into the principal amount of the debt. That's how they do it.

In B-FLAP, you convert interest payments owed into principal accrual of debt. Therefore the debt simply increases.

However since you're not servicing the debt and you're not counting the Social Security debt as part of the overall federal National Debt, then it doesn't really make any difference.

The Bush Administration claims they can do this under B-FLAP. Their position has always been (because it is somewhat nebulous) that Social Security debt does not constitute a direct liability of the United States Treasury. Therefore, it should not be included in the calculations of the overall federal National Debt.

Technically they're right about this. The government has no direct obligation to fund any deficit that should occur in the Social Security Trust Fund. The only obligation the government has is the continuation of payments.

If there is a deficit in the Social Security Trust Fund, the government can (and is now doing so) reduce future payments—and alter the age at which you can collect those payments.

The laws governing U.S. Treasury's commitment to the 43 public trust funds is exactly the same as those laws governing the U.S. Treasury's commitment to so-called GSEs or Government Sponsored Enterprises—i.e., Freddie Mac, Fannie Mae, Ginny Mae, Sallie Mae, etc. It is only an "implied" indirect obligation.

Brokerage firms, for instance, claim that those Ginnie Mae and other funds are guaranteed by the government. They're not. There is no direct obligation of the U.S. Treasury to guarantee the GSEs. That's why they are called "quasi-governmental" agencies, because they are 50% publicly owned and 50% owned by the U.S. Government. All of the liability is ultimately transferable to the underlying public shareholders.

The U.S. Government has no ultimate liability pursuant to the maintenance or funding it guarantees to government-sponsored enterprises.

The Bush Administration is scared to death of putting the U.S. Treasury in the capacity of directly guaranteeing the Social Security Trust Fund. If the Democrats are able to change the law, then the accumulated so-called Social Security deficit would: (1) have to be counted as part

William Cooper: Death Of A Conspiracy Salesman

On November 5, 2001, William Cooper was shot to death by sheriff's deputies in a gunfire exchange. Who was Bill Cooper? Was he a true patriot? A tough survivalist? Or simply a fanatic?

Some knew him as a UFO "expert" (claimed insider information on government knowledge of extraterrestrials living among us)...a conspiracy theorist...a former Navy Intelligence operative...and the person the President once called "the most dangerous man on American airwaves". Cooper always said he acted from his "conscience" and sought to warn all Americans of the dangers of the New World Order, creeping socialism, and our own brand of Nazism. of the overall national debt, and (2) the U.S. Treasury would have to start to service that debt at a cost of more than $100 billion a year simply to maintain the debt (not even paying down the debt).

That $100 billion a year in turn would pass through directly to the bottom line of Bushonomics-created federal budget deficits. This in turn would raise interest rates and there would be many more repercussions.

Under Bushonomics, all economic growth is a fallacy. It doesn't really exist. It only exists on paper. The total debt of the U.S. Government exceeds its total assets. The total debt of all business and industry also exceeds their total assets.

And then there's the pro forma loophole. All publicly held businesses and industries report their earnings on both a pro forma and an adjusted basis. The adjusted basis is always less than the pro forma.

Pro forma means according to the broadest interpretation of GAAP standards. Fully adjusted would be taking out all special payments, special-interest payments, accrued reserves, accrued contingent funds for future liabilities, etc.

The analogy of business to U.S. government is that all government statistics are issued on a pro forma non-adjusted basis.

The U.S. Government does not issue fully adjusted numbers, and it's only pro forma numbers. If the U.S. Government was forced to issue fully adjusted revenue numbers, then it would have to start to make contingencies for future debts and obligations—something the Bushonian Administration is steadfastly against.

In 1995, when the Clinton Regime attempted to push through the recalculation of pro forma to include adjustments, the Republicans fought it like hell and they defeated it, knowing that when they got back into office (had they not defeated it), it would have closed again another loophole which allows Bushonomics to continue.

If the U.S. Treasury were forced to make capital surplus reserves for future liabilities, both actual and contingent, the deficits would balloon.

We get back to this one key point which Republicans who call-in to radio shows ask: If we're in such bad shape, why is it that the total debt service of the U.S. Government is only 24% of revenue, while in Britain it's 37% of revenue, therefore making the U.S. look pretty good economically?

And I always have to say that the reasons debt service is so low is because the United States, unlike the other countries you're talking about, only services about half of its outstanding federal debt at any one time—because so much debt is not counted as debt, such as the deficit in the Social Security Trust Funds.

The accumulated deficits, which now total more than $2 TRILLION in the 42 other public trust funds, are also not counted as debt. This is at the very heart of Bushonomics.

Of course, a country that has the ability through "creative accounting practices" to only service half of its debt is always going to be able to stay between 18% and 26% of the budget. That's all it will have to commit to debt service because, as time goes by under Bushonomics, the government services less and less of its debt.

This gets a little more complex. People ask me how you can be a government and actually service less of your debt over time insofar as the principal amount of that debt continues to rise.

You can do that under the crafty smoke-and-mirrors accounting procedures which Bushonomics incorporates. You do it by reducing estimated future liabilities vis-à-vis that debt.

The Social Security Trust Fund is a classic example. Each year that goes by, the future liability of the Social Security Trust Fund grows as the population growth continues. Furthermore, future liability grows as the median lifespan of the nation (now at 77 years, an all-time high) continues to increase.

However, to get around that, so they do not have to show an even larger future contingent liability, the government simply recalculates the basis of future payments, to make those payments lower. This is the plan that is the Bushonian 2029 Social Security Readjustment Plan, wherein between now and 2029, the age at which you can collect social security gradually rises, and it's not going to be 62 and 65. It will rise to 65 and 67, and then from 67 to 70. The Bush Administration tries to justify this by saying that the median lifespan of the nation is growing.

To keep Social Security solvent, you have to reduce future demand for Social Security, and the only way you can do that is to do what the Bush Regime has done, and that is to: (1) make sure people can't collect Social Security until they're older, which reduces financial demand on the fund, and (2) annuitize Social Security, which is incorporated into the 2029 Social Security Readjustment Act.

Social Security payments will no longer be calculated the way they have been since 1935, when the fund was first established. That is, there won't be a fixed payment amount as there has been in the past. To some degree, there is some justification for this because there has been a vast increase in the median lifespan of the people.

In the future, beginning in 2017, Social Security payments will be calculated on an annuitized basis, i.e., an actuarial table, instead of a fixed payment scheme. That will immediately reduce Social Security payments by at least 50%.

The Republicans feel perfectly free in talking about annuitization because they understand that the American people don't know what they're talking about.

The Social Security Trust Fund must be annuitized by 2016-2017. These dates are important because the general trust fund that pays pensions to old people cannot financially survive beyond 2017 without a reduction in payments.

This is the terminus date of the old fixed-payment system, which cannot be sustained beyond 2017. Therefore, in the annuitization process, not only would retirement benefits drop by approximately half, immediately, but also, benefits for future generations would gradually decline, as the median lifespan of the nation would increase. Payments will now be calculated on an actuarial table.

One pizza or two?) Or you can be the kind of no-brainer who reads AlMartinRaw.com and makes money. This separates the no-brainers who survive and those no brainers who thrive. Which no brainer would you rather be?

It's hard not to keep beating the drum on this, but this column, and the economic market commentary column, really are a service to the nation. You could even call it an Al Martin Raw Economic Rehabilitation Program. We'll get you off your Prozac. And you'll make money and restore your 201K account, that used to be a 401K account before the election of Junior.

(Remember: Al Martin is not a CFP or RIA, and these are just floor-trading suggestions.)

All the suggestions I made last week based on floor commentary, for example, came true. When I said buy the June T-bonds on any dip below 113-1/2 to sell on the ensuing rally 114-5/8, you would have been able to capture at least at 1-1/4 point profit ($1250 per contract).

What's better? To have $1,250 of new money or two pizzas?

But people really need to understand the realities of "offshore banking"—especially now when it becomes crucial to protect your assets, or anything you may have left after the scourge of Bushonomics. Popular media has marginally connected this term with money laundering and tax evasion and illicit political funding, but it's really something you need to research for yourself.

You may have heard about former drug czar and Secretary of Education Bill Bennett and his gambling problem. They're even calling him the "Bookie of Virtue" in honor of his self-righteous and obviously hypocritically titled Book Of Virtues (sic).

(According to several reports, Bill Bennett even scammed his ghostwriter and didn't pay him for his work. You didn't think he actually "wrote" the book himself? How's that for "virtue"?)

Every time there was a state which didn't have gambling but wanted it, they would march out Bill Bennett to talk about the evils of gaming in order to throw a sop to the Republican Religious Right. But Bennett says that gambling is not evil and it takes an adult to control it. As reported by Newsweek, his losses were in the $8 million range for the last ten years or so.

This is another example of the disingenuous right-wingers and how they used to put this guy out front to talk about anti-gambling. When he was a "Drug Czar" they started the policy of using taxpayer money to help out narcotics users and gamblers to help the "poor souls". But for a Republic Role Model—nobody is pointing out how disingenuous this is.

TRANCE Formation Of America

This is the documented autobiography of a victim of government mind-control. Cathy O'Brien is the only vocal and recovered survivor of the CIA's MK-Ultra Project Monarch mind-control operation. Chiseled deep into the white stone of the CIA's Langley, Virginia headquarters is a partial verse lifted from the Holy Bible and writings of Saint John: "...and the truth shall make you free." This statement, like the agency, is total unreality. The building that it is engraved upon houses the world's most successful manufacturer of lies to facilitate psychological warfare. The "Company" uses truth and technology as their raw materials to produce "pure" lies for control of you and America's allies. Within the pages of TRANCE Formation Of America you'll find the truth.

U.S. GOVERNMENT MIND-CONTROL

On August 3, 1977 the 95th U.S. Congress opened hearings into the reported abuses concerning the CIA's TOP SECRET mind-control research program code-named MK-Ultra. On February 8, 1988, an MK-Ultra victim, Cathy O'Brien, was covertly rescued from her mind-control enslavement by Intelligence insider Mark Phillips. Their seven-year pursuit of Justice was stopped FOR REASONS OF NATIONAL SECURITY. TRANCE Formation Of America exposes the truth behind this criminal abuse of the unconstitutional 1947 National Security Act.

And speaking of disingenuous Drug Czars, remember when General Barry McCaffrey was the Drug Czar and he said let's fill up the prisons. Later it turned out that the General owned stock in companies that owned the nation's privatized prisons, as well as other prison suppliers,

And then there are the stories about Bill Bennett and his partying with Peter Fonda in Montana. They don't even have to call Ollie North's drug delivery service. They get pizza and coke right at the door.

But Bill Bennett has had this reputation of being such a "good and virtuous" man and he doesn't have any vices.

In other news, Ambassador Paul Bremer has been named as the new dictator of Iraq—a U.S. dictator, mind you. Bremer, of course, is the former shill for Henry Kissinger. He is, after all, the Henry Kissinger front-man. Bremer was also an Ambassador at Large and former deputy Secretary of Defense.

As mentioned in my book The Conspirators, Bremer is connected to a lot of Bushonian swindles. He was president of Kissinger Associates, as well as connected to all the usual right-wing deals, but he essentially acts as a front for Kissinger. He goes to countries that Kissinger is frightened to go to, because he will be subpoenaed or charged with war crimes. If you're Henry Kissinger, you need somebody to front for you.

But why Bremer is really there is to act as a coordinating function for Kissinger's office in Baghdad and Kissinger clients such as Halliburton and Fluor. He's there to make sure a certain group of companies receive all of the contracts. He is the defector Bostonian Cabal's Man in Iraq.

The Administration gives good government awards to those in business or to members of Congress, but this year, they took out a full page ad in major newspapers around the country to announce that the award in the New (Bushonian) Era went to Boeing Chairman Phil Condit and to Senator John Warner. Why? Because obviously the defense industry is the second largest source of Republican Money and the first largest source of Bushonian Cabal Faction Money within the Republican Party. Boeing is also the largest contributor to John Warner and his campaign committees and so on. And that is "Good Government" according to the Bush Administration.

Warner has shown his appreciation by consistently voting against all investigations of Boeing for fraud regarding the handling of government contracts and by using his influence to steer ever more government contracts with no fixed delivery dates and unlimited cost over-runs to Boeing and/or its defense consortium partners

There was a follow-up on the Vermont high school student who got into a big ruckus because of the George Bush poster he had on the inside of his locker. This picture of George Bush had a piece of duct tape over Bush's mouth—as a protest. (The student was just looking for a way to use up the duct tape he bought during the last Orange Terrorist Alert.)

Anyway, a group of right-wing high school boys (they called themselves the "state security boys"), who are rabid pro-Bushers, went to a local cop who apparently was also a notorious naïve flag-waver. This flat-topped hairdude cop, without the knowledge of his superiors in the police department, marched down to the high school and demanded that the principal open this boy's locker, and the principal wouldn't. He told him that he would have to get a warrant. The cop knew he couldn't do it because there hasn't been any test case on warrants for the Seditious Publication Act.

So the cop then waits till after dark, and breaks into the high school, and goes to the kid's locker, and breaks it open. He rips the poster out, apparently intact, then presents it to the principal the next day. He calls the Office of Homeland Security and then demands that this kid be expelled. The cop evidently yelled and threatened the principal, and called him a dangerous left-winger who promotes sedition among his students by unlawfully allowing them to display anti-Bushonian materials. But the high school principal wouldn't budge.

Now the cop, acting as an individual citizen, with the support of the Office of Homeland Security, is now suing the principal and the school board in an effort to get the principal to enforce the new expanded Seditious Utterance And Publication Law to expel this student.

Apparently the cop was surprised that the principal stood up to him because, according to the cop, "liberals don't have any backbone".

The Republican National Committee has made it official: we will have a Bush-Cheney ticket in 2004 (providing that the Vice President is not indicted for any sundry malfeasances pursuant to the ongoing SEC and other regulatory agencies' investigations of fraud committed at Halliburton while the Vice President was chairman). However, the RNC assures the public that, although there may indeed be indictments, Vice President Cheney will not be among those indicted. (I'd like to know how they know that in advance, but I guess it's because they're members of the Bushonian Cabal. Obviously they know the conclusion of the "investigation" even before it gets started.)

You can imagine Cheney's former high-ranking associates at Halliburton looking at each other and wondering who's going to get the word "scapegoat" written on their back.

As they pointed out, most of the former high-ranking people at Halliburton who were close to Cheney when he was Chairman are of course Arch-Bushonian Cabalists. Several of them are RNC Committee-Men. Most of them have already left for their non-extraditable Cayman Island retreats—and taken their ill-gotten millions with them.

There was another failure at the Bushonian LCB (Lie Coordination Bureau)—or, How the Good Humor Man Became a Terrorist in the Bushonian Regime.

[Editor's note: Al is referring back to a wonderful column he wrote on Bush's need for a Lie Coordination Bureau that's in the November 2002 issue of The SPECTRUM.]

In the morning, the infamous Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage of Iran-Contra infamy announced that he was absolutely positive that biochemical weapon facilities would be discovered in Iraq. In the afternoon the U.S. Army "coincidentally" found a so-called biochemical weapons mobile laboratory in a truck.

This turns out to be the same ice cream truck they trotted out several months ago as "proof"—under the presumption that nobody would remember they showed a picture of this truck. And, of course, the American people don't remember what happened yesterday. It was kind of beat-up looking and parked in a ditch, half tipped over in Northern Iraq. The U.S. Army proclaimed it to be the "Infamous Biochemical Mobile Weapons Laboratory" in question.

In fact this is the same truck that Secretary of State Powell had shown in the UN briefing prior to the commencement of hostilities in Iraq which the Secretary had said that the CIA had identified through satellite photographs as a "biochemical mobile weapons laboratory".

However the truck in question, in Hans Blix's response to the Secretary of State's allegations, was that this was in fact an ice cream truck that had already been identified by UN inspectors. It was refuted several days later.

And wouldn't you know it —the Good Humor ice cream truck made a comeback.

This is the first time I had ever seen it close-up in a live photo. The photo that Secretary of State Powell presented was taken from 500 miles up. The UN-submitted photo was taken from about 30 feet away, and you could see the little panel that lifts up on the side and the Formica counter that comes down. But this was the first time I had ever seen it close-up. The Iraqis painted it in a camouflage brown sand color, but on the top panel of the truck you could still see the faded "Good Humor" Ice Cream written on the top of it. This was on CNN.

But nobody in this country actually remembers. If you did a poll of how many people remember the incident of the ice cream truck from Powell's UN testimony, maybe 3/10ths of 1%. They were safe in this. And its our job to expose it and remind people.

Here's what they're doing. First Armitage announces that we're sure we're going to find it. And then "coincidentally", six hours later, the Army finds this much-vaunted "Mobile Bio-Chemical Weapons Production Facility". Wow, you couldn't even fit all those initials on the Good Humor ice cream truck logo.

Where are those people at the Lie Coordination Bureau when you need them?

Another egregious example of Bushonian market manipulation in order to benefit the Republican Elite and the Friends of Bush Society was on the CNN crawl tape, which reported that former deputy defense secretary Richard Perle secretly gave advice to "Republican insiders" to short U.S. equity markets prior to the invasion of Iraq. This was done in order to generate profits for themselves AND for the Republican Party.

Late in the day, interestingly enough,

This is the most in-depth compilation of interviews with survivors of the Philadelphia Experiment and Montauk Project to date on one computer CD. The information comes from the memories of those who were interviewed. Because these projects are so secretive, gaining hard evidence is nearly impossible. However, that doesn't mean the projects never happened.

There are many out there who do not want you to know the truth about these projects. Use your own judgment as you hear the words of these survivors. Use this information as the beginning resource to help you onto your own research track.

The five people featured on this CD all testify that they worked with Al at the Montauk Project, and some even remember him as Ed Cameron during the Philadelphia Experiment.

CNN stated that they would not run the story, no doubt under White House pressure. It's interesting how Bushonian Market manipulation works. Perle was telling wealthy Republican insiders to short U.S. equity markets at the very same time the Bushonian shills like Larry Kudlow were out in force telling the "little investors" to buy, buy, buy.

By the way, this is a principal component in the Bushonian Agenda pursuant to the "continuous consolidation of money and power into higher, tighter, and righter hands". This constitutes a direct transfer of wealth from the so-called "Joe-Sixpack 300 Shares Buyers" or "Sucker Buyers" into wealthy Republican hands.

When Bush appeared at a commencement address at the University of South Carolina, there was no applause—and when there was, it was, how would you say, very lackluster.

Bush now travels to all these functions (which seems to be just about every day) in which he continues to preach to the choir. There is never a hostile crowd, but now he goes with a special group of political handlers. It's incredible to what extent Bush's appearances are now stage-managed. Now they position these handlers at key points in the audience.

They even unbutton their jackets so you can see their guns in their shoulder holsters. They have large signs which you don't see from the TV camera perspective. The signs say: "Applaud if you know what's good for you."

Who needs canned laughter or applause when you have your goons in the audience?

Sedition & Treason In The U.S. Imperial State (5/19/03)

The most important story last week was: The Department Of Homeland Security Pursues Seditious Democrats.

The 50+ "Fugitive Democrats" were the Texas state legislators who were hiding out at the Holiday Inn in Ardmore, Oklahoma. Governor Rick Perry of Texas, an Arch-Bushonian Cabalist, in fact issued arrest warrants for them under the Seditious Utterance And Publication Act, insofar as they were obstructing the will of the State (not the state of Texas, but the Nation State. Note the capital S.)

And what's behind this fracas? It's a redistricting bill that's being sponsored and pushed by Congressman Tom Delay. The Democrats are asking, and rightfully so, why the U.S. Congressman from Texas is involved in an issue which should be a state issue. This should be decided by the Texas state legislature, not by a United States Congressman—and furthermore not by an Arch-Right-Wing Nut like Delay.

If the redistricting bill is passed, it will eliminate between 5 and 7 Democratic seats in the State of Texas. Delay stated in an interview that the Democratic Texas delegation has "consistently stood against the Leader". Those are his words. He means George Bush Junior. He looks at it as his God-given mission to eliminate the Democratic Party from Texas, and in so doing make Texas the first Sedition-Free State in the union.

Although the media is trying to put a humorous spin on it, there is a more serious (and sinister) side to the situation. The Texas Republicans, particularly the Speaker of the House Tom Craddick, as well as Texas Governor Perry and Congressman Delay, are using this incident to do what they say they intend to do—eliminate the Democratic Party in the state of Texas.

They've even made playing cards with the Texas Democrats on them, implying that they are terrorists like the DoD playing cards with the Wanted Iraqis.

There was evidently a letter sent out by the Republican Committee caucus of the Texas state legislature urging loyal Texas Republicans to start taking down the names of their Democratic neighbors, whom they feel may be harboring seditious views.

And the 9/11 Presidential Commission Investigative Report has still not been released, although Democrats in Congress have tried to force its release. The report has long since been done. This is the report by the 9/11 Investigative Committee chaired by Henry Kissinger, who resigned because he refused to disclose his Middle Eastern clients, particularly his Saudi clients. After Kissinger's resignation, the committee was chaired by Paul Bremer, who is currently the defacto Overseer of U.S.-Occupied Iraq.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said he doesn't care how much pressure there is; the report will not be released until all information that would embarrass the Saudi government has been removed. But the Democrats are beginning to push the concept of backing away from Saudi Arabia, a concept that scares the Bush Regime because of their deep financial interests there.

They don't care about strategic oil or political ties. It all comes down to money—the Bushonian Cabal's personal financial interests in Saudi Arabia, including the personal interests of the Bush and Cheney families.

But as I've said on radio shows before, these Democrats who are holed-up in the Holiday Inn SHOULD have been arrested. Why? Because they were in clear violation of the relevant statutes of the Sedition Act as now revised and expanded, thanks to the U.S.A. Patriot Act.

To put this in some context, the president now has the absolute authority, under the expansion of the War Powers Act Of 1947 therein contained in the U.S.A. Patriot Act. This expansion of these powers means, in this case, that once the president declares a State of National Emergency, which he did on September 14, 2001, three days after the 9/11 incident, that effectively authorizes the president to do a variety of things: postpone elections, cancel elections, impose a state of martial law, order the arrest of any legislative or judicial members of government, etc. Those powers had always existed. However the president couldn't act without the consent of Congress. He couldn't assume these imperial powers without a super-majority vote in Congress and without a majority opinion from the Supreme Court.

The U.S.A. Patriot Act, however, sidelines the legislative and judicial branches from their oversight role—legislative oversight or judicial review—after the president declared a state of National Emergency. It gives the president the power to act by edict.

Therefore, with the extension of the Seditious Utterance And Publication Act, the president has the right to authorize the attorney general to swear out arrest warrants against any member of any legislative branch of the government of the United States which includes, by the way, state legislators like in Texas—should the legislators act to obstruct or otherwise frustrate the will of the State or impede its operations.

The Department of Homeland Security, not the Department of Justice, is now charged with arrest of these Texas Democratic legislators. Once the president has declared martial law, the Department of Homeland Security would assume many of the powers of the Department of Justice.

We are currently living under a State of National Emergency, a lesser act than the imposition of the state of Martial Law, which the president has not yet imposed, but he still has as much power.

Here is the key difference between the old law and the new law. Under the old law, short of the imposition of martial law—i.e. the imposition of a declared state of national emergency—the president had to seek legislative review and judicial oversight. That is the key difference. He no longer has to do that.

However, now the president, since he has declared a state of National Emergency, can now rule by edict and has assumed, therefore, extra-legal powers. To some degree, that sidelines the Department of Justice, because the DoJ is not authorized to carry out arrests under extralegal proceedings. That's one of the reasons the Office of Homeland Security was created.

By this reasoning the Seditious Democrats in Texas are endangering the

A Writ For Martyrs by Eustace Mullins

This is a fully documented exposé of the atrocities which federal agents regularly commit against American citizens.

This book reproduces 121 pages from Eustace Mullins' FBI file, which he obtained only by the personal intervention of a college classmate, Senator John Warner, Rep. Of Virginia. The FBI refused for two years to send Eustace his files through Freedom of Information Act inquiries. When Eustace found it, he discovered a plot by the FBI, with 60 pages of memos, in which J. Edgar Hoover personally ordered that Eustace be committed to a mental institution for life.

On the basis of these revelations, Eustace obtained two "Default Judgments" against the FBI in Federal Court. One judgment was for $50 million, and one for $35 million, which remain on the books today.

This book also documents atrocities committed against Eustace's handicapped sister, his ailing mother, and his invalid father, who all died of heart attacks after daily harassments by the FBI terrorists.

security of the State because they were obstructing a vote in the Texas legislature. Therefore they were impeding the will of the State (the Nation State). This has nothing to do with the bickering over redistricting in Texas. It doesn't make any difference what they were voting for, whether it was for more fire hydrants or whatever else.

The Texas Democrats are therefore required to be there. Why do you think the governor had authorized using his powers under the U.S.A. Patriot Act? The governor stated that he would authorize the state police and/or the Texas Rangers. In other words, he would order the arrest of these legislators if they were in the state of Texas. This is a power that is granted to state governors under the U.S.A. Patriot Act.

Since the Texas Democrats were out of the state (beyond his jurisdiction), he had to go to the attorney general of the United States, who then in turn had to go to the Department of Homeland Security, because the arrests at a federal level would have been an extra-legal proceeding. Not illegal, but an extra-legal proceeding, which would have required the Department of Homeland Security to actually order the FBI or the U.S. Marshals' office to place these guys under arrest once they were in federal jurisdiction—the minute they crossed state lines.

When they do not perform their constitutional duties, the Texas Democratic legislators become liable then since they are acting in a seditious capacity.

Had the next step been taken, had Deputy Reichsfueherer Ridge of the Department of Homeland Security actually ordered the FBI or the U.S. Marshals' office to take these people into custody, and had they then continued to evade that custody, then the charges would have been upgraded to treason against the Republic of the United States.

If they attempt to evade arrest when in federal jurisdiction against extra-legal proceedings (the United States now being in a state of declared National Emergency), the charges would be upgraded to treason. Here's how they make the leap. This is also part of the new law, which has been vastly expanded. It's called "implied harboring".

To make the leap from sedition to treason, here's what needs to take place: First, the Department of Homeland Security would have had to have stated that the wayward legislators were attempting to impede or frustrate the will of the State. Insofar as it was obvious that they were not going to vote for a proposal by the will of the majority of the said legislative body, they were attempting to impede the will of the majority of a governing body. That means that they could have been declared as harboring views contrary to the security of the State and the domestic tranquility of the people. That is treason. (It didn't used to be, but now it is.)

The harboring is implied because the reason they fled was to obstruct the will of the majority.

The U.S.A. Patriot Act, in conjunction with the expansion of the Seditious Publications And Utterance Act and the vast expansion of presidential powers under the War Powers Act Of 1947 et al, then significantly waters down constitutional guarantees under a bicameral system of government.

We are now in a state of National Emergency, which means that constitutional bicameral guarantees of legislative bodies DO NOT exist.

It can be declared "seditious" or "treasonous" for a minority in a legislative body to "obstruct" the will of the majority. That now translates into obstructing the will of the State. Because the President says so. The President is the Leader of the majority party. His power by edict, after the imposition of a state of National Emergency, is ABSOLUTE and UNCHALLENGABLE by any legislative or judicial body.

The only body that can review the expansion of powers is the new Supreme National Security Court in Washington, not to be confused with the old National Security Court.

There is a new National Security Court as well as a New Supreme National Security Council. Remember: now we have four; we used to have two.

The president directly chairs and controls the new National Security Court and the New Supreme National Security Council. You can tell the difference between the "new" and the old because it has the word "Supreme" in it.

People don't seem to understand that, with the passage of the U.S.A. Patriot Act and subsequent pieces of legislation, the president has fulfilled the requirements by the imposition of a declared state of National Emergency to now act in this extralegal capacity given to him with the passage of these various pieces of legislation.

The president now has the power to act as the Supreme Leader of the State.

George Bush actually said that if he was a dictator, it would make it much easier.

The word "dictator" is not used in the text, which comprises HR 3601, which now is actually over 4000 pages, when you include the subsequent legislation related to it.

Instead of using the word "dictator" you will see the word "supreme" used—as in supreme power, Supreme National Security Council, the Supreme National Security Court, the Supreme Office of World Internet Police, etc.

Anytime you see the word "supreme" used in the creation of these new federal agencies, offices, or bureaus, it means that the president can direct these agencies, etc., to act in an extra-legal authority, which is tantamount to dictatorial rule.

This is the ineluctable conclusion—and we have allowed this to happen in the United States of America.

As soon as Orrin Hatch and John Warner, the Chief Bushonian Minions of the Republican-controlled Senate, mark up and pass the NICA (National Identity Card Act) funding bill, which failed in last year's Democratic majority-controlled senate, and the bill to overturn the Posse Comitatus Act Of 1878, then the president's power will be absolute.

We will then go from a semi-dictatorship to a full dictatorship. They won't need any more pretenses.

This will be after the Posse Comitatus Act is overturned. This is the real Bushonian agenda—and they've said so, so that none of this is all that secret. The Bush Regime has made their agenda rather public. They're not acting secretly. They want the militarization of domestic law enforcement. They have already set up all the offices and machinations, to wit the new NorthCom Command—North American Command—in Philadelphia, the establishment of a fifth service branch to be headed by a four-star general who will then become the chief law enforcement officer of the nation. The attorney general will relinquish that title because it will be required. Obviously, if you're militarizing law enforcement, you're going to have a military officer as chief law enforcement officer of the nation.

And here's what the Bush Administration has done: They haven't got A yet, but they've already put in all of the B through Z. Now all they need is the A. The infrastructure is already in place and ready to go.

In the words of Ashcroft, the so-called secret court within the Department of Justice would be done away with and replaced with a new Office of Political Security, which can then act in complete secrecy. The attorney general would still nominally direct the Office of Political Security, and Rumsfeld has already stated that with the establishment of the Northcom Command in a post-Posse Comitatus environment, the Department of Defense would do away with its internal security division and then set up an expanded Office of State Security.

The Department of Defense would then become involved in domestic law enforcement and, more importantly, the ferreting out of all seditious elements. For instance, the control of the CILF Program (Civilian Inmate Labor Facility), which is now jointly under the control of FEMA and the Department of Justice. Then it

THE REAL TRUTH ABOUT THE DRUG WAR

by Michael Ruppert

"This is the man who cost CIA Director Deutch his guaranteed appointment as Secretary of Defense after confronting him at Locke High School with hard facts about CIA dealing drugs." (Dick Gregory)

Mike Ruppert was an Honors graduate of UCLA in Political Science; he comes from a family rooted in intelligence and the military. As an undergraduate he interned for Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis and worked at 5 LAPD Divisions before graduating and becoming an officer in 1973. During Mike's 5+ years of active service, he received thirteen citations and four commendations. Twice the CIA attempted to recruit Mike: the first time just before he graduated, and again after he was a highly praised field officer and budding narcotics investigator. In 1977 he discovered CIA bringing drugs into the U.S. through New Orleans in an operation supervised by his then fiancée, a CIA agent. He began to speak out and was forced out of LAPD in November 1978 after being shot at and threatened. He has been speaking out publicly ever since. In 1981 he spoke out about CIA and drugs inside the White House during a visit to his college classmate Craig Fuller. Fuller later served as Chief of Staff to Vice President Bush.

OPERATION MIND CONTROL: THE CRYPTOCRACY'S PLAN TO PSYCHO-CIVILIZE YOU

by Walter Bowart

Walter Bowart is best known as the author of the best-selling 1970s classic Operation Mind Control, which even today, remains an authoritative guide to the intricate world of mind control. Delving deeper than just drugs or electroshock, Walter H. Bowart takes serious research a step further, into the Monarch mind-control program and the development and programming of multiple personalities for future secret actions including murder and terrorism.

That this research, in so many great halls of learning, has exceeded a cost of untold secret millions of dollars, indicates that this project being produced by our secret police is a matter of ambitious policy rather than the happenstance of cloak-and-dagger adventure.

To alter and control human minds is the ultimate anarchy. What is offered by official apologists as a tribute to the deeds of daring-do by romantic spies are acts of hatred and sadism against all people in an insane and degraded determination to extirpate conscience from society.

would be transferred to the Office of State Security and would be administered directly by the military.

But people are joking about it because the mainstream media has turned it into a joke ("Democrats holed up in a Holiday Inn"). It was Tom Delay's idea originally to have these people arrested and charged with sedition. When he made his comments that it was his God-given right to eliminate Democratic Party influence in Texas, and thus declare Texas the first sedition-free state in the union, he did it on purpose. In Delay's mind, Democrats are seditious by their very nature. And he's right—under the new interpretation of the laws previously mentioned. Being a Democrat or the opposition party, and acting to frustrate the will of the Supreme Leader, is seditious.

Anyone who attempts to impede or frustrate the will of the Leader of the New Imperial State is acting in a seditious capacity.

As it has been pointed out quite correctly, the Democrats are not an opposition party anymore in our new defacto One-Party State. No money equals no power. Therefore, the Democrats have become superfluous and they cannot meet the constitutional bar, as it were, to be an effective party in opposition.

And how does this relate to the history of the Roman Empire? The exact equivalent to what we have in this country today would be when Imperial Rome moved from Tiberius to Caligula, his grandson.

The United States is now entering the era of the "Twelve Caesars". On the flowchart of the Twelve Caesars, George Bush and Company represent the passage to Caligula from Tiberius.

The great emperors who had built Imperial Rome—Caesar Augustus, Caesar Hadrian, Caesar Tiberius—it was all destroyed under Caligula. Caligula had senior members of the Imperial Senate murdered and seized all power for himself, until he was assassinated himself. Then Nero finished the job by making the emperor truly the emperor in terms of ruling by edict.

We know about Nero, but what about the Bushonian Cabal? What are their sexual proclivities?

Remember what Nero said: half my empire to be a woman. He wanted to be a woman so desperately that he would have given half his empire. The Caesars weren't just bi-sexual, homosexual, and transsexual. They were polymorphous.

And now in America, you have a politically popular president who's doing stupid and costly—but politically popular—things, with control of the media, which spins everything the right way, and with everyone waving the flag around.

Dr. Samuel Johnson said: "Patriotism is the last refuge of the scoundrel." But the Bushonian Cabal has even transcended that. Now patriotism is the last refuge of the would-be dictator.

Bushonomics Roils The Markets: Sucker Buying, Gold, And The Threat Of The Truth (5/27/03)

The latest scuttlebutt in Washington is that the time of the Silent Coup by the Bushonian Cabal has begun.

After his meeting with Philippine President Arroyo, Bush made a statement calling al-Qaeda a shadowy cabal that hides in dark corners plotting its envisioned havoc on the world's political, economic, and social order to impose its beliefs and values on the majority. It's time to cut off their money and bring them to justice.

After hearing this, I thought to myself: Couldn't the exact same thing be said about the Bushonian Cabal and their allies in the Religious Right?

If you substitute al-Qaeda for the Bushonian Cabal, you'd have something that would be closer to the truth. But you can't cut off their money because they already have it all.

Then there was the interview with former Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, who's now working at the Blackstone Group. He told the truth and it cost him his job as a Treasury Secretary. He might end up working for twenty grand a year for some pro bono Democratic outfit. Wouldn't that be a comedown?

O'Neill said in an interview with CNBC that, thanks to Bushonomics, the nation has TRILLIONS of dollars in debt—off the books. The U.S. Treasury has no idea who we actually owe this money to. He points out the discrepancy between the number of U.S. Treasury bonds outstanding, and what the actual debt is. He said that there's a lot of debt out there, but nobody seems to know where it is, or to whom it's owed.

Ever since the 1980s the Republicans have used off-budget financing to hide debt. They accumulated TRILLIONS in debt through this smoke-and-mirrors accounting trick, and now nobody even knows where it is. This is the legacy of Bush Senior.

Bushonomics has built-in a time bomb, he said, for those being born today. It will make the Great Flood look like a spring rain. I was surprised at his candor, given the fact that he works for Blackstone. (See my book The Conspirators: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider for more details about Blackstone Group frauds.)

They finally told Treasury Secretary Snow to keep his mouth shut, because every time he says something, the dollar gets hammered. That's the problem when you have a guy as Treasury Secretary who knows nothing about public finance. He doesn't even have a clue what he's saying. He doesn't understand the implications because he doesn't even understand what he's talking about.

The White House then came out with a statement saying: "Oh, no, we still have a strong dollar policy." This contradicted what Snow had said over the weekend. Snow said over the weekend that the dollar hadn't fallen very much. Catherine Yang, who was interviewing him, said something like: "Well, Mr. Secretary, the dollar has lost 30% of its value since the election of George Bush. What do you call 'a lot'?"

Ari Fleischer, Bush's press secretary, has also announced that he's resigning. He must have gotten fed up with lying all the time. But he'll do fine. Generally, press secretaries will end up with $300,000 a year for life directorships at the Heritage Foundation or the American Enterprise Institute. But he'll never have to do anything because these Republican political patronage directorships are really about just getting the money and not really doing anything.

Revelations of a Mother Goddess An Interview by David Icke

The staggering story of human sacrifice and satanic ritual, involving the most famous people in the world.

Arizona Wilder, formerly Jennifer Greene, was mind-programmed from birth to become one of the three most important female conductors of Satanic rituals on the planet. Her programmer was Josef Mengele, the notorious "Angel of Death" in the Nazi concentration camps. When he died in the late 1980s, her programming began to break down.

In this video interview with David Icke, she describes human sacrifice rituals at Glamis Castle and Balmoral, in which the Queen, the Queen Mother, and other members of the Royal Family sacrificed children in Satanic ceremonies.

She talks of the same experiences with Henry Kissinger, George Bush, Bill Clinton, members of the Rockefeller and Rothschild families, and a host of the most famous names in the United States and the United Kingdom.

Your view of the world will never be the same when you hear the revelations of Arizona Wilder and consider their relevance to your daily life.

Ari Fleischer will join the ranks of the Bushonian Nomenclatura. He'll be taken care of for life as long as he keeps his mouth shut. Somebody's got to tell Bush that this isn't supposed to happen in a Capitalist State. But then Bush seems to have some confusion. His idea of "capitalism" is that only Bushonian Cabalists should have cradle-to-grave security. This is in the longstanding tradition of Bushonian Corporate Socialism.

And then the Wimping Out of Paul O'Neill happened. He was back on the commentary break on CNBC in the afternoon. O'Neill asked if he could come back and he did weave into the conversation that, in the interim since the interview of the morning, he said he had talked to the "Boss Man", as he calls him, the infamous sinister and dreaded Arch-Bushonian Cabalist Frank Carlucci, Republican Scamsateer Extraordinaire. (He's "retired" but he's still in control.)

Now that he got the word, O'Neill said that the dollar's decline isn't any problem and he sees that the White House and the Treasury Secretary are coordinating their statements on the dollar, and the dollar's decline is healthy for the economy, and he supports the Bushonian tax cuts. It was a complete wimp-out. Why do you think he mentioned that he had talked to the Boss Man? Everything had changed.

And that's what happens. You step out of line and you get a phone call from an Arch-Bushonian Cabalist who sets you back on the right path and who reminds you of your perks, benefits, pensions, inside stock tips, and encourages you back on the Path of Righteousness. And that's Righteousness—Bushonian Style. You'll reverse yourself in a hurry when you speak a little truth.

Then I saw an interview with a British psychiatrist who was commenting on the "growing wave of suicides" sweeping the "Euro Zone" in Europe and Japan as the world's economy continues to sink into the abyss. The American interviewer said that the suicide rate in the United States has also increased since the election of Gorge Bush, but by no means could it be considered a "wave". The British doctor responded by saying that, fortunately for you, Americans are too stupid to understand what is happening. After then, the interviewer didn't say anything. He didn't have any follow-up comment at all.

In other news, gold has skyrocketed $10 in the regular session, and then, in the so-called third-market after-hour session, where there is normally light volume in gold trade, gold has continued to rise another $3 (when it usually ordinarily only moves 20¢ or so). A gold trader I know said that it's "wild action" going on. What has propelled gold has been an enormous demand for physical gold coming from shadowy Republican-controlled offshore gold bullion depository accounts. He also said that, in the same light, the same shadowy Smart Money Republican accounts have also been massively liquidating the dollar—particularly in the morning session. That's what caused the dollar to get hit so hard in the morning, before it floated back in the afternoon.

He also said that there is a genuine fear among the Smart Republican Money Crowd that there is a catalyst in all this, and the catalyst may be that this dollar decline may be unstoppable.

The Bush Administration may not be able to stop it because they don't have the ability. The Treasury reserve funds are exhausted. The Federal Reserve Currency Stabilization Fund is exhausted.

What they would do is to start changing their comments for one thing—to try to "jawbone" some stability into the dollar by coming out and simply renouncing everything they have said before. They would have to say: "We stand behind a strong dollar—period."

The Bush Regime is trying to have it both ways. They want a strong dollar in order to act as a governor on inflation—although there is no inflation currently. As a matter of fact, we have the opposite problem. The Bush Regime knows that there is an enormous amount of incipient inflation that they have built up in the pipeline since the election of Junior, by ramping the money supply so much and by reducing the interest rates rather quickly.

This inflation hasn't been felt by the consumer because there is a counterbalancing weight against that inflation, namely the global debt deflation we are now experiencing.

What the Smart Republican Money is concerned about is that the dollar may act as some sort of tripwire and that the dollar's decline cannot be halted. The Bush Administration does not have the means to stop it. It has released so many conflicting statements that it has lost any credibility in terms of its ability to jawbone the dollar higher. In terms of concerted measures, the Bush Administration doesn't have any money to support the dollar because they've drawn down and misspent all of the Treasury's and Fed's "reserves" normally dedicated to supporting the dollar.

Evidently my comments on radio shows I've done have had some impact. He said there were comments on the CME floor about someone who had been writing recently about "missing gold" from the U.S. stockpiles. And I'm the only one I know who has been writing about it. And it's growing into a real rumor on the floor.

The Smart Republican Money (those who have made TRILLIONS shorting the equity markets since the election of their Boy George and have consequently gotten out of those dollars, converted their profits into gold, and gotten that gold into offshore, non-taxable, non-attachable, and non-attackable jurisdictions) is afraid that the dollar could act as a tripwire and it could keep sinking so that eventually the American people may figure out what Bushonomics has done to this nation and to the global economy.

At that point, as this guy points out, there would most likely be a revolution in this country—or at the very least, a huge increase in civil unrest—if people ever figure out what Bushonomics is all about and what the Bushs have done. (Obviously outright revolution is no longer possible with the passage of the U.S. Patriot (sic) Act giving the Bushonian Regime dictatorial power to suppress internal dissent.)

He said that the Smart Republican Money Crowd, as in Glenbrook, Illinois, is having nightmares about barbed wire on top of their fences and in front of their homes, and being attacked by mobs—once people figure out what they have done and who's responsible. He said that is the dangerous part of the game of Bushonomics, and that the American people must not find out.

The American people know they've been scammed. They just don't understand by whom or how it was done. That's why they're so confused and depressed. If they ever figure it out, we're going to have one hell of a problem in this country.

I've said this on radio shows before: Look at the price of gold, and more importantly, look at the flow of gold—where it's going and who's buying it and how its being accumulated.

The traders on the floor know who the buyers are (but they can't tell you), and they know what the buyers are doing with it.

Last week, billionaires George Soros and Warren Buffett were interviewed. Soros essentially stated that he was short the U.S. dollar, and he is continuing to sell short the U.S. dollar and U.S. equities. It is his belief that Bushonomics is pressuring not only the U.S. economy, but the global economy, which is growing increasingly precarious. His view is that if Bushonomics is allowed to persist, he, George Soros, has absolutely no doubt that it will cause the eventual collapse of the world economy.

Buffett made some comments on the Bushonian "tax plan" in which he made comparisons between himself and his secretary. If the tax plan passes through the proposed House-Senate compromise, Buffett's tax rate would go down to 3%, while his secretary's taxes would increase from 28% to 30%—despite the fact that Buffett's income is 10,000 times greater.

After Buffett made those comments, on CNBC and FNN, they dragged out every Bushonian shill they could find. Steve Forbes called him an idiot and said that Buffett comes from a working-class background and he's not educated and he obviously doesn't understand tax issues.

All the Bushonian skills kept saying: don't listen to the self-made billionaires who made their billions by being short U.S. equity markets at the right time—i.e., during Bushonian Regimes. Therefore, they are first unpatriotic, and secondly not credible—despite the fact that this is how we, the Bushonian Cabalists, made our money.

Sucker Buyers: please help your favorite billionaire and buy more stocks.

Soros even mentioned how Republicans speak with forked tongues, and that he knew personally that the big deep offshore Republican-controlled short pools have been quietly taking in money from Bushonian-connected Republicans in the United States. He said they currently have more than $400 billion sitting offshore waiting for the Final Last Uptick of the current bear market rally, as he put it, to jump on it. What they want to do is try to get their minions (the Larry Kudlows and Bill Seidmans of the world) to drum up every last retail sucker buyer they can.

But Soros won't come back to the United States now. He permanently lives in Europe despite the fact that he is a U.S. citizen. He says he keeps trying to tell the truth and warn the people about Bushonomics and what the Bushonian Cabal is doing to the country, denuding the people of their civil rights (something which Warren Buffett has also spoken about).

Soros is afraid of what might happen to him, that the Bushonian Regime may have something untoward planned for him. He said that the only thing the United States is good for anymore is to sell short everything that says "Made in the U.S.A." on it, and make all the money you can, and live comfortably somewhere else.

Last Monday afternoon (May 19) there was a period of time wherein almost $58 BILLION in 34 minutes left the United States. There has been such a huge sudden demand by wealthy Republicans in the United States converting their dollars into gold and effectively hiding that gold in offshore, non-taxable, non-attachable, non-attackable, gold bullion depository receipt accounts.

What's suspicious is that when pressure on the dollar got relieved (when this transaction was over and when gold came back down after hitting that $370.50 tick), twelve minutes later the nation's terrorist alert status was raised from yellow back to orange. This took the market off-guard because there wasn't any warning of it as there had been previously.

What's caused additional fear and unsteadiness in the world's markets was that the Bush Administration did it very suddenly—unlike the last two times it raised the alert to orange when it clearly announced it in advance and clearly stated the reasons. They did this about 24 hours in advance the last two times.

Deputy Reichsfuehrer Ridge actually gave a speech to Congress saying that everything was fine. Then he goes to the White House, and 12 minutes after he gets there, they raise the terror alert from yellow to orange. Then they state there are "no specific reasons" for the terror alert. (Other than the requests by 3M to help increase now flagging sales of duct tape and plastic sheeting.)

The markets globally were roiled by this—by the way it was done—with no precursor, no warning, and no imminent threat. The Bush Administration didn't come out and say there were any domestic targets. Why raise it to orange when you have absolutely no proof that there is increased risk of terror attack? That immediately made people suspicious.

There is a growing feeling that something is coming. The growing nervousness in the global equity markets, the wild inter-day gyrations we're seeing in U.S. Treasury bonds, gold, and even oil to some extent. The enormous sudden amount of expatriation of dollars from wealthy Republicans outside the United States. The conversion of that money into gold.

Then suddenly the Department of Defense is very nervous. Suddenly the White House and Department of Justice is very nervous. Something has leaked out. Something they've done wrong has leaked out and they're frightened of it.

This might be a trigger or a catalyst that would simply be a level of truth about the Bushonian Cabal that would be unacceptable for the American people to know.

Since Sunday night, six former Democratic congressional investigators of the committees on Iran-Contra, IraqGate, BCCI, BNL, etc., have suddenly disappeared, and their current whereabouts are unknown. Their offices were looted and documents were shredded.

I've been making calls and people have left the country. People are in hiding. The Bush Administration, to prevent this truth from coming out, has instituted an operation to clean up its past. There is great angst coming out of the White House, and those who know too much are the recipients.

The orange alert may be a precursor for a red alert. If they cannot prevent these truths from coming out, we may see another terrorist incident in the United States.

It would be a two-fold strategy: first, to deflect public and media attention, allowing them to get underneath the radar and to clean up all their problems; then, if the truth cannot be sufficiently discredited, then they could actually use this as an excuse to seize control. The signs are all there that something big is coming potentially. I think they're setting up the pretext, as it were.

Ridge said he wants any U.S. citizen, charged with any seditious behavior for publicly criticizing the Bushonian Regime during an orange alert, to not be allowed to board a U.S. commercial aircraft, no matter where the destination is. Further, they should not be allowed to board any train or bus that would cross an internal border.

I like that they're not even saying "state lines" anymore. Now the language is "internal border". Notice that just after Ridge and Ashcroft have a meeting with one of their Soviet "consultants", they start using the language of "internal borders" and "internal passports". The Soviet jargon is being revived.

If you add all these little factors up, you come up with the concept that there is a piece of truth out there that they can't control. It may have to do with the Huntsville Arsenal story and how weapons ended up in Iraq. Another more recent piece of it has to do with what happened to the $2 billion in cash seized from Iraq, which is genuine yet will be declared counterfeit. There is a military connection in this thing. Some piece of truth has leaked out, and they're trying to control it.

First, your 401K account becomes a 201K account. Next you lose your pension and health plan. Then you're told to buy duct tape, plastic sheeting, and cans of Spam. This is the New Bushonian Learning Curve for the masses.

"Medicine is not only a science; it is also an art. It does not consist of compounding pills and plasters; it deals with the very processes of life, which must be understood before they may be guided."

Vatican Assassins

Wounded In The house of My friends

An explosive, detailed, shocking, historical account of the long-suppressed history of the Jesuit Order, from 1540 to the present, and their involvement behind the scenes manipulating the world through the Pope, via the Jesuit's General, the "Black" Pope—the most powerful man in the world.

If you were astonished by the front-page story in the May 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM titled: The Most Powerful Man In The World? The "Black" Pope: Count Hans Kolvenbach—The Jesuit's General, then you won't want to miss this in-depth study of perhaps the greatest ongoing conspiracy the world has ever known. Author Eric Phelps goes into countless details and fully documented facts concerning the "dark" side of the Vatican's ungodly history.

"Almost 700 pages filled with names, facts, and carefully wrought conspiracies on the kind of vast scale that creates or destroys empires."

—The Book Reader, America's most independent review of new titles, Fall/Winter 2001/2002

"Probably of all books which could be called 'conspiracy oriented', this is the grand-daddy. This is the Big One, I mean it...."

"It's one of those books that, even if you're a cynic and can come to terms with only half of it, it changes everything."

— Jeff Rense, Oct. 11, 2001

THE INDIGO CHILDREN

The New Kids Have Arrived

by Lee Carroll & Jan Tober

(Featured interview in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

The "Indigo Child" is a boy or girl who displays a new and unusual set of psychological attributes revealing a pattern of behavior generally undocumented before. This pattern requires parents and teachers to change their treatment and upbringing of these kids to help them achieve balance, harmony, and avoid frustration.

In this groundbreaking book, international authors and lecturers Lee Carroll and Jan Tober answer many of the often-puzzling questions surrounding Indigo Children:

- Can we really be seeing human evolution in kids today?
- Are these kids smarter than we were at their age?
- Why do a lot of our children today seem to be "system busters"?
- Why are so many of our brightest kids being diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)?
- Are there proven, working alternatives to Ritalin?

Throughout this work, Carroll and Tober bring together some very fine minds (doctors, educators, psychologists, and more) who shed light on the Indigo Child phenomenon. These children are truly special, representing a great percentage of all the kids being born today on a worldwide basis. They come in "knowing" who they are—so they must be recognized, appreciated for their exceptional qualities, and guided with love and care.

This book is a must for the parents of unusually bright and active children!

Anthrax, Smallpox, Vaccinations, And The Mark Of The Beast!

by Dr. Leonard Horowitz

If you are one of the millions of people concerned about recent bioterrorist threats in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks on America, prepare yourself for a reality check. This shocking video analysis of the little known facts regarding threatened outbreaks, and the science, economics, and global politics underlying bioterrorism and forced vaccinations, features one of America's most riveting speakers. Among the world's foremost authorities on the subject of bioterrorism, vaccination risks, and public health, Dr. Horowitz's expert diagnosis here dovetails perfectly with Bible prophecies. Pay special attention to his disclosures regarding the infamous "Mark of the Beast". Dr. Horowitz reveals sacred Bible codes that give expanded meaning to the infamous "666" prophecy (Rev: 13:18) while implicating widely trusted vaccinations, medical biochips, politicians, and institutions that have advanced some of the most horrific population-controlling ploys ever conceived. Anthrax, smallpox, and vaccinations are all part of the same deadly swindle. Watching this video may do more than raise awareness. It may help save millions of lives!

"Unless we put medical freedom into the Constitution, the time will come when medicine will organize into an undercover dictatorship.... The Constitution of this Republic should make special provisions for medical freedom, as well as religious freedom."

— Dr. Benjamin Rush, a signer of the Declaration Of Independence and member of the Continental Congress.

What sinister plot do you suppose was already so formidable by the latter 1700s that it prompted Dr. Rush to employ such strong language in his caution above?

Whatever the early signs were, last month's exposé surely confirmed the prediction that "medicine will organize into an undercover dictatorship" in the guise of "protecting" us from that which is a threat to their lucrative business enterprise.

An Analysis of the September 11th Attack

Is the U.S. Government so incompetent that the 9/11 attack merely appears to be a scam?

This book discusses the aspects of the September 11th attack and the response of the U.S. Government that can make us wonder whether our government is involved in the attack, or whether they are so amazingly incompetent that they only appear to be involved. A government of idiots is as dangerous as a government of conspirators, so we have a serious problem in either case.

The suggestion that the CIA or military knew about the 9/11 attack is often rebuffed with a remark similar to: "But it doesn't make sense for them to allow the attack!"

It may not make sense to you, but it may have made sense to them. After all, it made sense for them to use Americans in LSD and nuclear radiation experiments many years ago. For all we know, they decided to sacrifice a few thousand of our lives and a few billion of our dollars to help us gain access to Caspian Sea oil. Perhaps some British government officials also allowed the attack for that Caspian oil, and perhaps some Israelis wanted the attack so they could justify attacking their neighbors.

Those of you who do not believe anything illegal occurred should look for explanations for the mysteries this book brings up. The inability to properly explain the attack is simply more evidence that we are witnessing an incredible scam.

Politics In Healing: The Suppression And Manipulation Of American Medicine

by Daniel Haley

$24.95 (+S/H)
Code: PIH (1.75 lb.)

THE POLITICAL SUPPRESSION OF EFFECTIVE CANCER CURES: We have a war on cancer, but the more money we spend on cancer, the more people die of it.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH AMERICAN HEALTHCARE? Why does one American die every 3 to 5 minutes (100,000 - 150,000 a year) from the effects of FDA-approved pharmaceutical drugs, used as directed?

Read why we don't have effective cancer cures in ten "stories that should not have happened, but that needed to be told". Read about cancer cures that were and still are being relentlessly suppressed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the American Medical Association (AMA), working for the Big Business of pharmaceuticals.

WHAT IS THE SOLUTION? Not more money for bureaucrats, but freedom from bureaucrats! The author's Rx: a freer market in non-toxic therapies, to provide competition to the drug companies and drive their prices down, as only a free market can do. With a free market in non-toxics, we would have cancer cures available, including the ones in this book. Can you afford to NOT read this book?

Death In The Air: Globalism, Terrorism & Toxic Warfare

Months before the September 11, 2001 aerial attacks on America, Dr. Leonard Horowitz, a Harvard-trained award-winning author, published his thirteenth book by this title. Internationally, people called it "urgent" and "frighteningly prophetic". This "live" presentation strikes at the heart of the global "beast"—the military/medical/pharmaceutical industrialists and international financiers directing terrorism and modern wars for politics and profit. So if you've wondered who is really behind the terrorist attacks on America, listen and learn the stunning truth presented in this presentation.

Dr. Horowitz is American healthcare's most riveting speaker. Here he explains how and why you and your loved ones are being insidiously victimized using the latest chemical and biological weapons. He explores deadly and treasonous advances in the fields of genetics, electromagnetics, and mind control that are absolutely numbing. He definitively proves how and why the world's wealthiest policy-makers have targeted half of the current world's population for elimination; and why accepted methods of "disease prevention", such as pesticide sprays and vaccinations, can only be scientifically rationalized as cost-effective contributions to "non-lethal warfare" and other covert depopulation schemes.

THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR FOR HEALTH FREEDOM

This issue of The SPECTRUM continues from last month a theme so fundamentally important to our wellbeing that it is perhaps a more formidable test of the imposition of absolute slavery on the peoples of the world than any other imaginable trap could be.

Nobody has placed the stark Truth of the matter in better perspective than did Eustace Mullins in the 2/22/88 Foreword to his classic research volume Murder By Injection:

"The present work, the result of some forty years of investigative research, is a logical progression from my previous books: the exposé of the international control of monetary issue and banking practices in the United States; a later work revealing the secret network of organizations through which these alien forces wield political power, and the secret committees, foundations, and political parties through which their hidden plans are implemented; and now; to the most vital issue of all, the manner in which these depredations affect the daily lives and health of American citizens. Despite the great power of the hidden rulers, I found that only one group has the power to issue life or death sentences to any American—our nation's physicians.

"I discovered that these physicians, despite their great power, were themselves subjected to very strict controls over every aspect of their professional lives. These controls, surprisingly enough, were not wielded by any state or federal agency, although almost every other aspect of American life is now under the absolute control of the bureaucracy. The physicians have their own autocracy, a private trade association, the American Medical Association. This group, which is headquartered in Chicago, Illinois, had gradually built up its power until it assumed total control over medical schools and the accreditation of physicians.

"The trail of these manipulators led me straight to the same lairs of the international conspirators whom I had exposed in previous books. I knew that they had already looted America, reduced its military power to a dangerously low level, and imposed bureaucratic controls on every American. I now discovered that their conspiracies also directly affected the health of every American. This conspiracy has resulted in a documented decline in the health of our citizens. We now rank far down the list of civilized nations in infant mortality and other significant medical statistics. I was able to document the shocking record of these cold-blooded tycoons who not only plan and carry out famines, economic depressions, revolutions, and wars, but who also find their greatest profits in their manipulations of our medical care.

"The cynicism and malice of these conspirators is something beyond the imagination of most Americans. They deliberately mulct our people of millions of dollars each year through "charitable" organizations, and then use these same organizations as key groups to bolster their Medical Monopoly. Fear and intimidation are the basic techniques by which the conspirators maintain their control over all aspects of our healthcare, as they ruthlessly crush any competitor who challenges their profits. As in other aspects of their 'behavioral control' over the American people, their most constantly used weapon against us is their employment of federal agents and federal agencies to carry out their intrigues. The proof of this operation may be the most disturbing revelation of my work."

Rick Martin's front-page feature this month picks up where Eustace leaves off—juxtaposing the prostitution of those federal agencies that are so obviously under the control of the pharmaceutical cartel, against the resolve of those freedom-fighters working to break the chains of coercion and take back what is our own right to choose. Even the News Desk this month begins with items essential for illustrating both sides of this skirmish that's rapidly building up to an all-out war for freedom of health-choice.

And yet this issue is hardly new. The provocative warning that begins Rick's article ominously predicted what turns out to be a vital sub-theme running through this entire subject: that the modern war for health freedom is a still lingering extension of (and as old as) our original Revolutionary War for independence from the same lineage of world-control crooks that Eustace pinpointed long ago.

As Dr. Benjamin Rush (signer of the Declaration Of Independence and member of the Continental Congress) implored: "Unless we put medical freedom into the Constitution, the time will come when medicine will organize into an undercover dictatorship.... The Constitution of this Republic should make special provisions for medical freedom, as well as religious freedom."

May the current groundswell of aware people worldwide finally make medical freedom a reality!

HUNDREDS OF VITAMIN PILLS TO BE BANNED IN U.K.

From the London Times, 6/29/03:

by David Leppard

A wide range of natural food and vitamin supplements used by millions are set to be banned from High Street shops.

Ministers are introducing regulations that will outlaw the sale of 270 minerals and vitamins used by people suffering ailments from arthritis to PMT. They want to bring Britain in line with new European Union rules based on tougher standards in other EU countries where many of the substances are already banned.

The move has, however, provoked a furious political backlash by opposition peers who will try to block the regulations in the House of Lords tomorrow. They claim it is an unjustified curb on consumer choice, and are backed by a host of celebrities including Sir Paul McCartney and Sir Elton John.

Earl Howe, the shadow health minister, said: "This is a civil liberties issue. If consumers can't go out and buy things that do them good, just because of the nanny state, then that is a very sorry state of affairs."

The substances on the new proscribed list are used in hundreds of multivitamin and food supplements. Holland & Barrett, the health chain, said it would wipe out sales of at least 1.5m bottles a year worth £6m.

Among the minerals affected are boron, mainly used to maintain healthy teeth and bones, sulphur, used for skincare and arthritis, and vanadium for reducing cholesterol and fighting diabetes. Other products such as vitamin B6, for countering stress and PMT, and vitamin C, used to tackle infections and colds, as well as zinc, to protect the immune system, will only be allowed to be sold in far lower doses than now.

Under the law, manufacturers of banned products would have to prove they were safe, which would require tests that they claim would make them "prohibitively expensive".

The above story illustrates the serious lockdown of controls that the Big Medicine Business interests are trying to impose on a global scale, one area at a time. Do you think they're determined and serious about this New World Order agenda item? Here's the results:

7-6 VOTE SEALED U.K. FATE TODAY UNLESS ANH LAWSUIT OVERTURNS EU FSD

Hot news from the www.iahf.com website, for 7/3/03: [quoting]

Paul Taylor reported today from the British House of Commons that the ruling Labor Party had stacked the Standing Committee on Health with "yes men" who voted 7-6 in favor of the Standing Instrument which results in England's "harm-onizing" their vitamin laws to the mindlessly restrictive EU Food Supplement Directive.

This move, which has grave international ramifications, came as no surprise and underscores the dire need for vitamin consumers globally to back the Alliance for Natural Health's (ANH) lawsuit to overturn the EU Food Supplement Directive.

With the EU expanding next year from 15 to 25 nations, we can see the writing on the wall. Unless supplement manufacturers, health food stores, alternative practitioners, and vitamin consumers band together to support ANH's lawsuit, we won't be able to stop a horrible vitamin standard from being shoved through to completion at the UN's Codex Alimentarius Commission.

John Hammell, who first alerted the world to the Codex International Threat to Health Freedom in an article in 1996 in Life Extension magazine will be on the air tonight on a web-based radio program at 9 P.M. Eastern Time at the www.highway2health.net website to discuss how the Cartel's global takeover has been proceeding, why you haven't heard of it through your local health food store, and what you can do about it. (Once you're on the website, click on “tropic wave radio”).

Hammell will be exposing IADSA, (International Alliance of Dietary Supplement Associations) an umbrella group of vitamin trade associations that has been going through the MOTIONS of defending the supplement industry, while ACTUALLY doing the exact OPPOSITE.

Learn about the smoking gun that exposes IADSA as fraudulent. Learn of the means by which vitamin trade associations are being controlled from the top on down by pharmaceutical interests which have been doing spin against Hammell's message for years, keeping you from learning the truth about this.

Learn how pharmaceutical interests whitewashed the Congressional Oversight Hearing regarding the Codex vitamin issue on March 20, 2001—such that the fix is in, the truth was suppressed, and Congress did NOTHING to stop the FDA from violating U.S. law in their zeal to set us up to lose in a future WTO Trade Dispute via which our vitamin laws can be harmonized to a mindlessly restrictive international standard. THIS IS JUST WHAT HAPPENED TODAY IN THE UK!

Remember the eye-opening story about this same sneaky move in Australia, back a few months ago in the June 2003 News Desk? Is the United States next? Will “they” get away with this or will enough people wake up and oppose such a bold intrusion on their own health freedom choices?

This story is a good example of why The SPECTRUM has devoted our front-page feature focus last month, and again this month, on the matter of taking back our health freedom choices.

And directly following the Australia article in the June 2003 News Desk, you may remember the news about the big win FOR alternative medicine against the so-called self-styled “Quackbusters”. The following is connected with that matter, continuing the sadly comical saga:

QUACKPOT BARRETT CRUSHED IN FEDERAL COURT — AGAIN!

From the www.bolenreport.com website, 6/25/03: [quoting]

(Opinion by Consumer Advocate Tim Bolen)

Some people never learn. Stephen Barrett (quackwatch.com) seems to be one of those.

Despite loss after loss, and humiliation on top of humiliation, self-styled “quackbuster” Stephen Barrett trudges on to the next embarrassment.

Like a bug in the fast lane, Barrett is doomed to be wiped off the windshield of the North American Health Freedom Movement time after time, I guess.

This time, Barrett, apparently stung from defeats in other arenas, and perhaps trying to reclaim some dignity from a world becoming accustomed to laughing at his anti-health antics, sued the attorney, Carlos Negrete, he's come to associate with his steady downfall in the politics of healthcare.

I'm not sure what the subject of Barrett's suit against Negrete in Federal Court in San Diego was all about. Barrett submits volumes of whiney material in his court actions, none of which, to me, seems to be acquainted with reality. But what I do know is that Barrett used, as his own attorney, one Morse Mehrban, listed as the general counsel of the National Council Against Health Fraud (NCAHF). It was Mehrban who was quoted in the LA Law Journal as saying: “I consider suicide daily.”

Negrete flattened them both—without breaking a sweat. Another victory for Good, in the battle against Evil.

Of course, Barrett also sued, in the same lawsuit, world-renowned health-humanitarian Hulda Regehr Clark, Ph.D., N.D. Barrett can't seem to talk, or write, these days, without bringing up Clark's name in some way. So, I'm not surprised he put Clark's name in the lawsuit. He describes her as “Unlicensed Naturopath Hulda Clark” in his writing. His hatred and resentment of her accomplishments, compared to his, are obvious. He lost to Clark, too.

Barrett had to allegedly “retire” from the medical profession, giving up his license in 1993, when he was in his mid-50s. He admits that he didn't have enough medical practice income in 1993 to even pay the required malpractice insurance premiums. Barrett, who claims to be a retired psychiatrist, was forced to admit in court documents (forced by Negrete) that he only had nine patients all year, each year, for several years, before he supposedly “retired”. Psychiatrists get their patients from referrals from other MDs. Doctors in the LeHigh Valley of Pennsylvania just weren't sending him any business. Anybody wonder why?

And now Barrett is failing as a “quackbuster”.

By the way: Barrett lost in an anti-SLAPP motion, which means he gets to pay the attorney fees for Negrete and Clark.

This “Millions of Health Freedom Fighters — Newsletter” is about the battle between “Health and Medicine” on Planet Earth. Tim Bolen is an op-ed writer with extensive knowledge of the activities of a subversive organization calling itself the “Quackbusters” and that organization's attempts to suppress and discredit any and all health modalities that compete with the allopathic (MD) paradigm for consumer health dollars. The focus of the newsletter is on the ongoing activities, battles, politics, and the victories won by members of the “Health Freedom Movement” against the “Quackbusters”. It details: Who the Quackbusters are; what they are; where they are operating; when they appear; and how they operate. And how easy it is to beat them.

The sad part of this matter is how well it illustrates just how many (and pathetic) are the prostitutes available to be used by the pharmaceutical cartel in their quest to herd the sheep into recognizing only THEIR brand of medicine.

And for a little comedy about the above, consider this marvelous item that just arrived at the last minute before press time. Call it “the sequel”—just out, by popular demand, for the holiday weekend:

HOW DO YOU TRAP A QUACKBUSTER?

From the www.quackpotwatch.org website, for 7/3/03: [quoting]

(Millions Of Health Freedom Fighters Newsletter opinion by Consumer Advocate Tim Bolen)

How do you trap a Quackbuster?

It's easy. You set out cheese.

Our project in Wisconsin is a prime example of how to deal with quackbusters, correctly, and efficiently.

First, understand who and what you're dealing with. Once you know that, you've installed a ring in their nose, which you can use to lead them to their end.

That's what we're doing to Robert S. Baratz, MD, DDS, PhD, the current President of the National Council Against Health Fraud (NCAHF) in Wisconsin.

Quackbusters are so arrogant and predictable by nature that it's easy to lead them to their downfall. Individually, they're like one of those pull-string dolls I bought for my kid when she was three years old. Pull the string and you get a message like: "I'm going to be a big girl some day." And then it wets its diaper.

I call the rank-and-file quackbusters "Barrett's Parrots". If failed MD Stephen Barrett says it, the minions say it. Like the pull-string doll, there's only one message—and that's ALL there is.

Except for the diaper part.

Hair Removal Salon owner, Robert S. Baratz, is sort of an upgraded quackbuster. Made in a laboratory, Baratz is sort of a combination pull-string doll and rodent. Watch videos of him and you'll see what I mean.

I've helped nail little Bobbie in Florida twice, Texas twice, California twice, and some other places. He's easy to beat. I'm not surprised he broke into tears in Wisconsin.

He ran twice in Florida, had a jury laugh at him in Texas, dropped a case in California to avoid being deposed, and more. If he'd had any idea that a trap was being set in Wisconsin, he'd have stayed home with the drapes drawn, with his Mom answering the front door.

Quackbusters, individually or together, aren't much. Their hallmark is the "fake resumé" designed to make quackbusters look like they are in the same world as those they criticize—when they aren't.

Almost all of them do it—to try to give some credibility to their dubious pronouncements about healthcare. In Robert Baratz's case, the resumé is a major issue. His resumé is literally a fantasy world. But Baratz isn't the only one.

Wallace Sampson, who parades himself on the Internet as the editor of The Scientific Review Of Alternative Medicine [belch] claims as his descriptive title "Clinical Professor of Medicine at Stanford University". The fact is, this rancid old fart probably couldn't even FIND Stanford University, if he had to. He's NEVER taught an alternative medicine class at Stanford, or for that matter, ANY class at Stanford.

He got his title ("Clinical Professor...") when he was required by his former employer, Santa Clara Medical Center, to sign off on Stanford medical students, working weekends, cleaning bedpans. Sampson performed that function in the 1980s, and he's been using the title ever since.

I guess, on a quackbuster resumé, it sounds better to say "Clinical Professor of Medicine at Stanford University" then the reality of "bedpan cleaner, signer-off-er". What we should all make note of is the significant fact that Sampson uses this self-description FIRST and FOREMOST, which would indicate that, to him, being a "bedpan cleaner, signer-off-er" was, and is, the high point of his professional career.

Sampson is typical of quackbuster leadership.

Anybody can see that the first qualification to be a top quackbuster is to be hateful, and resentful of others' accomplishments. The second qualification is to be vicious. The third is to be willing to lie and misrepresent important issues. The fourth—and very important—is to LIKE hurting others, the ability to revel in the knowledge of how much damage they are doing to Americans.

Knowing the quackbuster's personality traits makes it easy to set a trap.

The Trap

In the Wisconsin case, Baratz came in thinking the case was going to be a slam-dunk. For Baratz and prosecutor Arthur Thexton knew that Eleazar and Genia Kadile were suffering the financial and emotional devastation of having two of their grown children beset by lupus, an incurable disease. They knew these two kind, caring people had each given one of their children more life by donating each of them a kidney. They knew that only one of those children survived. Baratz figured he'd come in, get a quick $50,000 in fees, take the Kadiles' home, their business, their retirement, their very lives, away from them, and go on to his next victim.

But it didn't work. Baratz and Thexton didn't count on Eleazar and Genia's friends coming to their aid.

In Wisconsin, Baratz sunk his teeth into the cheese—and we slammed the trap shut. And now HE, Robert S. Baratz, MD, DDS, PhD, is on trial for his life.

Never before in any trial, anywhere, of a leading-edge health practitioner like Eleazar Kadile MD, has the situation been reversed—where the accuser is on trial. Except here.

But it won't be the last time. Look what happened to quackpots Wallace Sampson and Stephen Barrett when they showed up in Los Angeles Superior Court (NCAHF vs. King Bio), didn't like the Court's decision, and filed an appeal. The three-judge Appeals Court labeled them "biased, and unworthy of credibility".

What we did in Wisconsin was a simple tactic. It can be used on any quackbuster who comes to testify in any case: Just keep them talking. Keep them writing down answers. Keep asking about the claims they make on their resumé.

It doesn't take long before they run out of stock answers. Then, like Baratz did, they'll start to make things up. Keep going. That's when you've got them. Keep going some more. One bad answer, or two, can be written off as a mistake. Thirty bad answers, or fifty, or a hundred, become a pattern of Perjury and Fraud.

As an example, Baratz claims on his resumé that he's a "consultant to the FDA Office of Criminal Investigation". When it was pointed out that we have two different letters from the FDA saying they "never heard of him", Baratz responded that he was "a secret agent" and that "he couldn't tell us what department or Supervisor he worked for" [insert laughter here]. Agent Double-O Goof ball? Do you suppose he has a shoe phone?

This is what Baratz is facing July 14, 15, and 16. And maybe the 17th, and 18th. He's going to be cross-examined ONLY on his resumé and his CREDIBILITY, on those days. If he survives that, and I doubt that he will, then he'll face a whole week of cross-examination on his "expert witness" statements. His "expert witness" statements were so ludicrous that top MDs and scientists reviewing his documents, and the statements within those documents, at first thought: "This guy knows nothing about science or medicine."

But then reality struck. Baratz has three doctorates. He has to know. He was simply lying. Lying under oath is called Perjury. Perjury is a Misdemeanor. In volume, it's a Felony.

This Is A Landmark Case

Have you ever heard of a case where the Judge assigns THREE DAYS of cross-examination on the "expert witness's" resumé and credibility?

When I say that Baratz is on trial for his life, I mean exactly that.

Don't lose hope! JAPAN'S KEY OVERNIGHT MONEY RATE FALLS BELOW ZERO FOR FIRST TIME

Excerpted from the business-times.asia1.com website, 6/26/03:

TOKYO—Borrowing money in Japan took on a new dimension on Wednesday when the nation's overnight lending rate fell below zero for the first time in history, the Bank of Japan said. The minus 0.001 percent money rate—which means lenders pay interest to borrowers—came because Japanese authorities have eased monetary policy in an effort to support the ailing economy and steady stock and currency markets.

"The overnight money rate averaged at minus 0.001 per cent today, down from 0.002 per cent" a central bank official said. "It was the first time the overnight rate has fallen below zero in our history...."

"We had thought this would happen anytime, since there have been below-zero rate deals since earlier this year" said Yasuo Goto, an analyst at Mitsubishi Research Institute....

"If they had effective tools to fight deflation, Greenspan and Duisberg already would have jumped in" said the Japan Minister of Finances. "All of which proves that they do not have any."

"AS GOES CALIFORNIA, SO GOES THE NATION" SEC. OF STATE PREPARING TO DELAY RECALL TIL NEXT YEAR!

Update from the Recall [of Governor of California] Gray Davis Committee, The Honorable Howard Kaloogian, Chairman (www.RecallGrayDavis.Com), 6/28/03:

— Immediate Call To Action —

People are becoming outraged at the shocking news leaking from the Secretary of State's Office. Democratic Secretary of State Kevin Shelley is making plans to obstruct the public will and ignore the 1+ million recall petitions we have already collected. The signs point to his deliberately ignoring the law and California Constitution to DELAY the election until next year—still hoping that legal challenges will totally destroy the recall effort.

We haven't seen rigged elections like this since the collapse of the Soviet Union. We can't sit by and allow the inside politicians to steal this recall campaign and destroy it.

There has been a great deal of discussion today regarding statements made by Secretary of State Kevin Shelley's office indicating they plan to intentionally delay the counting and verification of recall signatures.

The Secretary of State's office has made an internal decision to advise counties NOT to count and verify hundreds of thousands of signatures they have already received.

As reported today by the Sacramento Bee's Dan Weintraub, the consequences of this will be severe:

If this ruling stands, it will delay considerably the verification process and the date by which the recall qualifies for the ballot. It would almost certainly delay the election until March.

The worst part of this diabolical plot is that the Davis forces are planning to find a judge who is a political ally of Davis who will try and throw out the entire recall campaign!

The politicians are afraid that the people have finally had enough and are about to take back their government. We can't let them steal this from the will of the people.

ACTION ITEM #1: Flood the Secretary of State's Office with phone calls, emails, faxes.

We warned Mr. Shelley's office before not to thwart the democratic process of the recall effort. This is his last chance. Mr. Shelley must stop playing political games with the law. He must stop providing cover for his friend and failed Governor, Gray Davis. We have a duty, as does he as an elected official, to hold Davis accountable to the voters for his lies and deceit regarding the state's massive budget problems.

They'll pull every trick they can muster to try and save his neck; he's one of their "darling boys". But such a blatant move could have quite a boomerang effect that wakes up a lot of fence-sitters who otherwise might not have actively wanted Governor Davis out of office. In other words, there may soon be 5+ million signatures!

As a democratic opponent-target to what SPECTRUM commentator Al Martin calls "the Bush Cabal", his fatal mistake was not being able to effectively deal with the Enron-type of Republican con game that caused so many electric power problems and skyrocketing rates, leading to a state budget meltdown. That's all the average Californian sees of a much larger tug-of-war game. We covered this matter in some detail in past issues of The SPECTRUM.

WEST VIRGINIA SUES WALL STREET INVESTMENT FIRMS

Excerpted from the latimes.com website, 6/25/03: [quoting]

NEW YORK—West Virginia has sued 10 investment banks over alleged conflicts of interest among stock analysts, saying a proposed settlement between the firms and state and federal securities regulators doesn't go far enough to punish wrongdoing on Wall Street. The lawsuit, filed Monday in West Virginia state court, could seek as much as $1.9 billion from 10 major firms, said Fran Hughes, the state's chief deputy attorney general. The charges parallel those alleged by state and federal investigators in their lengthy probes of stock analysts over the last two years. Those investigations were capped off in late April by a proposed settlement that would require the firms to pay $1.4 billion and implement a series of reforms. The so-called global settlement is awaiting approval from a federal judge in New York. It also is being reviewed by regulators in all 50 states for their final signatures.

West Virginia filed suit because it was dissatisfied with the global settlement, Hughes said. The state is suing on behalf of residents who may have made investment decisions based on what it said could be biased research issued by the firms' analysts. "We don't think the global settlement goes far enough in taking away the ill-gotten gains from people who deliberately violated the laws" she said. "We believe the fines were too light.... I'm disappointed that they've filed this lawsuit and I'm not really sure what they have in mind" Bruenn said.

The other states have said they will remain in the global settlement, Bruenn said [for now].

MARK TWAIN: "VICTORY OF THE LOUD LITTLE HANDFUL"

From "Ed Hager Mail" (stooges3@netrax.net), 6/4/03: [quoting]

An excerpt from The Mysterious Stranger published in 1910:

The loud little handful, as usual, will shout for the war. The pulpit will, warily and cautiously, object—at first. The great, big, dull bulk of the nation will rub its sleepy eyes and try to make out why there should be a war, and will say, earnestly and indignantly, "It is unjust and dishonorable, and there is no necessity for it."

Then the handful will shout louder. A few fair men on the other side will argue and reason against the war, with speech and pen, and at first will have a hearing and be applauded, but it will not last long; those others will shout them, and presently the antiwar audiences will thin out and lose popularity.

Before long, you will see this curious thing: the speakers stoned from the platform, and free speech strangled by hordes of furious men.

Next the statesmen will invent cheap lies, putting the blame upon the nation that is attacked, and every man will be glad of those conscience-soothing falsities, and will diligently study them, and refuse to examine any refutations of them; and thus he will, by and by, convince himself that the war is just, and will thank God for the better sleep he enjoys after this process of grotesque self-deception.

TROOPS SHOW URANIUM SICKNESS SIGNS, CLAIMS EXPERT

From the Internet, 6/26/03, (the website has a very long address; use Google to search for Zeph [Report] and Iraq Radiation): [quoting]

Australian servicemen and women who served in the recent Iraq war were reporting symptoms of uranium sickness, a United States nuclear weapons expert said today.

Dr. Douglas Rokke is a former U.S. Army nuclear health physicist and was formerly the Pentagon's expert on the health effects of depleted uranium ammunition.

Speaking in Melbourne today, Dr. Rokke said Iraqi women and children and American and Iraqi military personnel had reported respiratory illnesses and rashes after the recent conflict, and he had also been told of Australian servicemen and women with similar symptoms.

"That's the reports I received from the U.S. Army medical department. That's something that needs to be verified and looked into" he said.

"When American soldiers are sick and the Iraqis are sick, there's nothing that says an Australian soldier is going to be isolated when he goes through those areas and he is not going to become ill."

During operation Desert Storm in 1991, Dr. Rokke led a team assigned to clean up uranium contamination caused by friendly fire.

"What we saw can be described in only three words—Oh My God! The wounds were horrible; the contamination was extensive" he said.

"Although myself and my team members wore respiratory and skin protection, that protection we know today does not provide any adequate protection against the inhalation, the ingestion, the absorption of uranium compounds."

He said he now suffers rashes, respiratory problems, kidney problems, and cataracts related to his exposure to uranium.

Dr. Rokke is in Australia to speak against the use of depleted uranium weapons, which he describes as a crime against humanity, creating a toxicological nightmare.

He is campaigning for the outlawing of depleted uranium munitions, medical care for those who have been exposed to uranium, and a clean-up of exposed environments.

He will speak at public meetings and meet government officials and returned service groups while in Australia.

"What I have learned from my work is that uranium munitions must be banned" Dr. Rokke said.

"When we can no longer clean up the environment and we can no longer provide medical care for anybody who's exposed, then that weapon must never be used in conflict."

Jacob Grech, of the OzPeace Network, said while Australia did not use depleted uranium munitions, the country exported between 2500 and 3000 tonnes of uranium to the United States each year for energy.

"It's the waste energy products that is used in the manufacture of these munitions.

"From the very start, before they are even made, Australia and the Australian government is complicit in the production of these weapons."

"We'd like our government, as a bare minimum, to put Australian service veterans from the first and second Gulf wars, as well as Afghanistan, through rigorous testing to get a baseline study of exactly what the health effects are of depleted uranium and other chemical toxins...and treat them" Mr. Grech said.

"So far our government has been lying; it's been releasing reports which parrot the Pentagon line, 6 to 12 months later; it's been in a state of denial."

Mr. Grech said he had not yet had reports of service personnel from the most recent conflict suffering uranium sickness, but there were a lot of veterans from the first Gulf war displaying symptoms.

"I think what we are going to see with Australian returned service people from the Gulf and Afghanistan is, 20 years down the track, exactly what happened with Agent Orange in Vietnam" Mr. Grech said. [end quoting]

How often do you think so-called friendly-fire "accidents" affecting service personnel are meant to silence ones who might otherwise come home and tell the world about a lot of the dirty little secrets of modern warfare? Furthermore, if such soldiers tell journalists in the field about these matters, and those journalists have an ounce of conscience which disposes them to maybe tell The Truth rather than merely collect a paycheck, perhaps those are the journalists who meet with unfortunate "accidents" in the field—if the threat of losing their job doesn't get the message across.

DIVINE WAR INTERVENTION?

From the tje.net website, 4/15/03:

I am sure that all of you heard about the sandstorm in Iraq recently (the worst in 100 years some say) and the drenching rain that followed the next day. Our troops were bogged down and couldn't move effectively. The media was already wondering if the troops were in a "quagmire" and dire predictions of gloom and doom came from the left-wing media.

What they didn't report was that yesterday, after the weather had cleared, the Marine group, that was mired the worst, looked out at the plain they were just about to cross. What did they see? Hundreds if not thousands of antitank and antipersonnel mines had been uncovered by the wind and then washed off by the rain. If they had proceeded as planned, many lives would have undoubtedly been lost. As it was, they simply drove around them and let the demolition teams destroy them.

Some of the most profound miracles ever reported occur in war situations. No wonder the statement "there are no atheists in a foxhole" remains as true today as ever.

NGOs TO BECOME GOs — OR ELSE!

From SPECTRUM friend in Japan, Chris Lock (lockkpeter@hotmail.com), 6/23/03: [quoting]

Now Bush wants to buy the complicity of aid workers. Relief groups have been told they must be an "arm of the U.S. government".

The Guardian, London

by Naomi Klein

The Bush Administration has found its next target for pre-emptive war. But it's not Iran, Syria, or North Korea. Not yet anyway.

Before launching any new foreign adventures, the Bush gang has some homeland housekeeping to take care of: it is going to sweep up those pesky non-governmental organisations (NGOs) that are helping to turn world opinion against U.S. bombs and brands.

The war on NGOs is being fought on two clear fronts. One buys the silence and complicity of mainstream humanitarian and religious groups by offering lucrative reconstruction contracts. The other marginalises and criminalises more independent-minded NGOs by claiming that their work is a threat to democracy.

The U.S. Agency for International Development (USAid) is in charge of handing out the carrots, while the American Enterprise Institute, the most powerful think-tank in Washington, is wielding the sticks.

On May 21 in Washington, Andrew Natsios, the head of USAid, gave a speech blasting U.S. NGOs for failing to play a role many of them didn't realise they had been assigned: doing public relations for the U.S. Government.

According to InterAction, the network of 160 relief and development NGOs, Natsios was "irritated" that starving and sick Iraqi and Afghan children didn't realise that their food and vaccines were coming to them courtesy of George Bush. From now on, NGOs had to do a better job of linking their humanitarian assistance to U.S. foreign policy and making it clear that they are "an arm of the U.S. government". If they didn't, InterAction reported, "Natsios threatened to personally tear up their contracts and find new partners."

For aid workers, there are even more strings attached to U.S. dollars. USAid told several NGOs that have been awarded humanitarian contracts that they cannot speak to the media. All requests from reporters must go through Washington. Mary McClymont, CEO of InterAction, calls the demands "unprecedented" and says: "It looks like the NGOs aren't independent and can't speak for themselves about what they see and think."

Many humanitarian leaders are shocked to hear their work described as "an arm" of government. Most see themselves as independent. (That would be the "non-governmental" part of the name.)

The best NGOs are loyal to their causes, not to countries, and they aren't afraid to blow the whistle on their own governments. Think of Médecins Sans Frontières standing up to the White House and the European Union over AIDS drug patents, or Human Rights Watch's campaign against the death penalty in the U.S.

Natsios embraced this independence in his previous job as vice president of World Vision. During the North Korean famine, Natsios didn't hesitate to blast his own government for withholding food aid, calling the Clinton Administration's response "too slow" and its claim that politics was not a factor "total nonsense".

Don't expect candor like that from the aid groups Natsios now oversees in Iraq. These days, NGOs are supposed to do nothing more than quietly pass out care packages with a big "brought to you by the U.S." logo attached—in public-private partnerships with Bechtel and Halliburton, of course.

That is the message of "NGO Watch", an initiative of the American Enterprise Institute and the Federalist Society for Law and Public Policy Studies that takes aim at the growing political influence of the non-profit sector. The stated purpose of the website, launched on June 11, is to "bring clarity and accountability to the burgeoning world of NGOs". In fact, it is a McCarthyite blacklist, telling tales on any NGO that dares speak against Bush Administration policies or in support of international treaties opposed by the White House.

This bizarre initiative takes as its premise the idea that there is something sinister about “unelected” groups of citizens getting together to try to influence their government. “The extraordinary growth of advocacy NGOs in liberal democracies has the potential to undermine the sovereignty of constitutional democracies” the site claims.

Coming from the AEI, this is not without irony. As Raj Patel, policy analyst at the California-based NGO Food First, points out: “The American Enterprise Institute is an NGO itself and it is supported by the most powerful corporations on the planet. They are accountable only to their board, which includes Motorola, American Express, and ExxonMobil.”

As for influence, few peddle it quite like the AEI, whose looniest of ideas have a habit of becoming Bush Administration policy. And no wonder. Richard Perle, member and former chairman of the Pentagon’s Defence Policy Board, is an AEI fellow, along with Lynne Cheney, the wife of the vice-president. And the Bush Administration is crowded with former AEI fellows.

As President Bush said at an AEI dinner in February: “At the American Enterprise Institute, some of the finest minds in our nation are at work on some of the greatest challenges to our nation. You do such good work that my Administration has borrowed 20 such minds.”

In other words, the AEI is more than a think-tank; it’s Bush’s outsourced brain. Taken together with Natsios’s statements, this attack on the non-profit sector marks the emergence of a new Bush doctrine: NGOs should be nothing more than the charity wing of the military, silently mopping up after wars and famines. Their job is not to ask how these tragedies could have been averted, or to advocate solutions. And it is certainly not to join anti-war and globalisation movements pushing for real political change.

The control freaks in the White House have really outdone themselves this time.

First they tried to silence governments critical of their foreign policies by buying them off with aid packages and trade deals. (Last month U.S. trade representative Robert Zoellick said that the U.S. would only enter into new trade agreements with countries that offered “cooperation or better on foreign policy and security issues”.)

Next they made sure the press didn’t ask hard question during the war by trading journalistic access for editorial control.

Now they are attempting to turn relief workers in Iraq and Afghanistan into publicists for Bush’s brand of U.S. policy.

The U.S. government is usually described as “unilateralist”, but I don’t think that’s quite accurate. The Bush Administration may be willing to go it alone, but what it really wants is legions of self-censoring followers, from foreign governments to national journalists and international NGOs.

This is not a lone wolf we are dealing with; it’s a sheep-herder. The question is: which of the NGOs will play the sheep?

[end quoting]

More and more organizations are feeling the New World Order gang’s control ropes tightening around their necks, such as those being exercised through the Bush Gestapo. As the writer above puts it so well: Who, indeed, will give in to playing the role of the sheep and who will not? That’s the real testing going on at this time on schoolroom planet Earth.

OPEC TOLD TO CUT OIL OUTPUT BY ENERGY GIANT BP

From the English.PeopleDaily.com.cn website (China), 6/24/03: [quoting]

Anglo-American energy giant BP [British Petroleum] said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) needs to cut oil output in the fourth quarter of this year to stop oil prices from falling once Iraq oil enters the market, the daily Jakarta Post reported Tuesday.

BP energy analysis head Michael D. Smith said the current crude price of between 26 U.S. dollars and 27 dollars per barrel was “not fundamentally strong” as it was caused by low oil stocks, particularly in the U.S. market.

“It (the low stock) helps underpin the price of oil. But the supply is now coming back. If Iraq comes back to the market, we’ll have more supply of crude. Then, unless OPEC takes some action to reduce their production, we are likely to see some movement (on the price)” Smith said.

He added cutting output was necessary for OPEC to defend its price target of between 25 dollars and 26 dollars a barrel.

In its recent ministerial meeting in Doha, Qatar, OPEC decided to maintain its current output until the next meeting scheduled for September this year.

Meanwhile, BP’s Statistical Review Of World Energy says Indonesian oil production was down by 8.1 percent in 2002 or 1,278 bpd compared to 1,389 bpd in 2001.

The country’s oil consumption also fell 1.7 percent or 1,072 bpd in 2002 from 1,090 bpd.

However, Indonesia’s natural gas production is up by 6.4 percent or 66.3 billion cubic meters in 2001 to 70.6 billion cubic meters in 2002.

Natural gas consumption also increased 4 percent from 33.4 billion cubic meters in 2001 to 34.7 billion cubic meters in 2002.

Energy consumption growth in emerging economies had been particularly robust during 2002, the review says. Non-OECD Asia Pacific (excluding Japan, South Korea and Australia) countries experienced growth of almost 11.5 percent.

[end quoting]

Note how the timing on this “squeeze play” on the consumer works well to also act as an excuse to boost the upcoming winter heating oil prices. The greed of those who control these companies knows no bounds. Yet each new extortion tactic acts to raise people’s interest in the field of alternative energy sources.

AVERAGE U.S. FUEL PRICES ON THE RISE

Excerpted from the www.rense.com website, 6/24/03: [quoting]

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Average gasoline prices across the United States are on the rise after 11 consecutive weeks of decline.

The average price per gallon rose less than a penny per gallon to $1.51, CNN reported Sunday.

The increase is due to a rise in the price of crude oil after OPEC announced a drop in production on June 1, said Trilby Lundberg, of the Lundberg Survey.

Lundberg also predicted prices would remain steady in the coming weeks.

“We do not appear to have any supply problems” heading into the summer tourist season, she said.

The $1.51 per gallon average is more than a dime over what consumers paid during the same period last year, the survey said.

Drivers in Honolulu paid the most per gallon at $1.95 while gas was the cheapest, $1.33, in Charleston, SC.

REMOTE-CONTROL QU-22 BOMBS JEWISH QUARTER IN HOLLYWOOD

From the beyond-the-illusion.com website, 6/10/03: [quoting]

by Joe Vials (www.geocities.com)

At 1000 hours Greenwich Mean Time [6 a.m. East Coast time; 3 a.m. West Coast time] on 7 June 2003, Australia's early television news ran some extraordinary Japanese video footage showing a Beech 36 single-engine aircraft rolling into a perfectly controlled 85-degree dive overhead Hollywood, California. With its wings rock-steady, and without the slightest trace of yaw, the Beechcraft accelerated swiftly before plunging vertically into an apartment block in Fairfax, a predominantly Orthodox Jewish quarter located close to the famous Hollywood Sunset Strip. Speed of impact was approximately 250 miles per hour.

Twenty minutes later, stunned by the audacity and accuracy of the attack dive, I called the network and asked if they could send me a few frames of the footage by email, because my VCR was not switched on at the time. "Not a problem" the Chief of Staff said, "but why are you so interested in the accident?" I told her, which was probably a very unwise thing to do.

Within minutes, network "policy" got in the way and I was abruptly disconnected. Forty minutes after that, when the other news networks went to air, the startling Japanese footage had vanished completely, replaced by low-angle ground shots of Jewish volunteer paramedics helping out at the crash site.

The FBI initially sent in counterterrorism, hazardous materials, and bomb squad units, but after an urgent telephone call from the Department of Homeland Security, changed its approach completely, stating instead that: "A preliminary investigation has determined the crash Friday afternoon was an accident." This absurd and completely premature judgment was swiftly backed up by local Californian Councilman Jack Weiss, who claimed: "This was not a terrorist incident."

Just how ridiculously premature this decision was, can best be judged by the statement of NTSB investigator Tealeye Cornejo, who said a few hours later the same day: "No flight recorder has been found in the wreckage, and investigators have not yet determined who owns the plane." To make things worse, the alleged (but unknown and unseen) pilot failed to contact the Southern California Terminal Radar Approach Control facility, as ordered by the Santa Monica control tower.

Now let me see if I have this right so far: An aircraft nose-dives like a crazed German Stuka right into the middle of a pack of "vulnerable" Jews, who in turn are located right in the middle of Hollywood, the most hated propaganda filmmaking facility in America. The Department of Homeland Security does not know the name of the pilot or the owner of the Beechcraft 36, but does know that the aircraft failed to follow direct orders issued by the Santa Monica control tower. Then the Department of Homeland Security declares it was merely an accident.

Does this make any sense to you? Of course it doesn't, because the entire sequence of events shrieks "terrorism" at anyone with an IQ higher than 50.

Unfortunately, the Office of Homeland Security faces a problem so serious that, as you may have already noticed from time to time, it feels obliged to tell outright lies. Many Americans have become so sensitized to "terrorist" air crashes in the wake of 9/11 that they now travel by Amtrak or by automobile, thereby accidentally driving the American domestic airlines ever deeper into debt, with many operators now approaching complete bankruptcy. So if even a single small aircraft crash is linked to terrorism, as was the case with the Cessna flown into the Bank America building in Florida for example, about one million more Americans join the ever expanding throng of those who permanently refuse to fly. This is very bad news for airline investors and Wall Street alike.

There are only three ways a light aircraft like the Beechcraft 36 in Hollywood can return to Earth in accidental circumstances:

- If the engine fails or runs out of fuel, the aircraft glides at a relatively shallow angle of about 30 degrees, allowing the pilot time (and a little distance) to pick a suitable landing site.

- If the engine fails and the pilot accidentally loses control and stalls the aircraft completely, it will fall to Earth in a spin, unless or until it is physically recovered from that spin by the pilot.

- If the aircraft suffers major structural failure in mid air (lost or broken wing or elevator or vertical stabilizer), it will flutter towards the ground like a falling leaf.

None of these three accidental conditions applied in any way to the Beechcraft 36, which dived rock-steady at 85 degrees and 250 mph into Hollywood, with its engine screaming at full power.

So who was the poor sap who buckled himself in at Santa Monica and took off on this suicide mission? For those who have studied the Cessna crashes into the White House on 9/11 (1994) and Bank America building on 5 January 2002, or the Rockwell crash into the Pirelli Tower in Milan on 18 April 2002, the most likely conclusion is that the pilot was either dead before take-off, or not on board the aircraft at all. In all three earlier cases no-one saw any of the alleged pilots board the aircraft, no-one saw them take off, and there are no existing control tower tapes that record any of the three voices. In like manner, none of the three pilots (Corder, Bishop, and Fasulo) had any record of instability or lack of flying discipline, nor any motive to embark on a "suicide" mission.

What is especially intriguing is that the aircraft used for the vertical dive on the Jewish Quarter is "officially" one of the exact types converted for remote-control use during the Vietnam War.

Modified from the civilian Beech Model 36 Bonanza under the "Pave Eagle II" program, the military-designated "QU-22" contained several changes for military service. The QU-22 carries an extra generator to power its electronic equipment, and additional fuel in extended wingtip tanks for increased endurance.

Its remote-control equipment allows the QU-22 to be flown directly by an onboard pilot or as an unmanned drone. The aircraft can stay airborne for 10 hours unmanned, or for 8 hours if the detachable tip tanks are removed. The last QU-22 operational mission in Southeast Asia was flown in September 1972. After use in military service, most of these fully-equipped aircraft were placed in the civilian market, with one changing hands as recently as late 2002.

The most extraordinary thing about the Hollywood crash was the complete lack of media fuss. Now think about this very carefully, people, think about it:

When did you last (or ever) hear of a catastrophe striking a Jewish community, without an immediate media knee-jerk reaction demanding retribution and compensation? If a Palestinian so much as scratches a car in Tel Aviv with his bicycle, he is likely to be fined or shot dead, before the brave Jewish soldiers move on to demolish his parent's house—after looting it first, of course.

By comparison with Tel Aviv, Hollywood is a veritable gold mine. Within 12 hours there should have been strident demands for millions of dollars in compensation from the pilot's insurance company, and then from the pilot's parents, children, cousins, and whoever. Following this, Raytheon-Beechcraft should have been asked to contribute a million or two, with Santa Monica airport rushing in to provide free transport and kosher catering.

But it never happened, and the entire episode was killed by the media in just a few hours. Exactly why this riveting story was killed so quickly is not too hard to work out.

It is a fact (rather than "anti-Semitic" hyperbole) that the largest investors in America's domestic airlines happen to be Jewish-controlled corporations or individuals. Say too much about the Hollywood crash, and watch your airline investments instantly diminish in value as yet another million Americans decide to travel by train or automobile.

It is also a fact that the largest investors in the American media and film industries (especially Hollywood) are, once again, Jewish-controlled corporations or individuals. Say too much about the Hollywood crash, and watch your tourist dollars melt away from southern California like snow in the Spring. But, hey, getting the media to shut down the Hollywood story really isn't a problem. Well, it isn't a problem if you own most of the media as well!

The most fascinating questions about the Hollywood Beechcraft 36 attack revolve around who is doing what to whom, and why. If, as seems likely, this was a small-scale "proof of concept" strike, then the attackers have come out decidedly on top. The high-speed denial without evidence by Homeland Security, the FBI, local police, and politicians, has confirmed that no-one wants to talk about invisible "Arab hijackers" anymore, and no-one wants to risk their investments any further by linking them to invisible "terrorists" of any persuasion.

The bottom line is simply this: The attackers now know that they can pancake a blazing 200-ton Boeing 767 straight down Sunset Strip at 550 mph any time they want to, and rely completely on the Department of Homeland Security to pull the FBI off the scent, while Councilman Jack Weiss helpfully claims: "This was not a terrorist incident."

This major piece of news was pulled from the American media really fast compared to what they would normally do. That alone is a strong clue that the REAL culprits, pulling another coverup like 9/11, operate from quite high and powerful positions of world control.

If we move up to a higher level of view, we might see this event as being orchestrated by a faction of the elite world controllers working to hasten the collapse of the American economy as a means to cripple their opposition. And moving still higher up, we could surmise this obviously contrived event could have been intended to ignite further tensions in the Middle East—perhaps to hasten the start of World War III, and definitely to incite the high levels of fear and confusion in the masses that are constant New World Order agenda goals.

OFFSHORE FUNDS BEING STOLEN BY ELITE

U.S. Offshore Forfeiture

Dear A-Letter Reader: It gives us no pleasure to have predicted all this. That blind legislative reaction, known as The Patriot Act, by the U.S. Congress after the 9/11 terror attacks on Washington and New York, continues destroying our freedoms.

Last Friday the New York Times reported that the U.S. Justice Department in secret has begun using counter-terrorism powers to seize millions of dollars from foreign banks that do business in the U.S.

And the kicker is that, according to one government official: "The seizures have involved fraud and money-laundering investigations that are unrelated to terrorism." So can the IRS tax collectors be far behind?

These seizures are not based on criminal convictions or even indictments for alleged crimes. They're based solely on suspicions of U.S. government agents.

They base their money grabs on Sec 319 of The Patriot Act that gave federal money police the power to seize unrelated cash that passes through banks in the U.S. Although these extraordinary powers were to be used to fight terrorism, the money grabbers are confiscating funds for non-terror crimes. All they must do is convince a judge that the money deposited overseas at the bank "was obtained illicitly". No probable cause. No due process. No notice and no appeal.

Using this drastic procedure, government agents ignore mutual legal assistance treaties used in the past that do contain procedural safeguards. They simply demand that the U.S. correspondent bank hand over sums they claim to be the result of alleged illegal activity of someone who has funds in the offshore bank. Once the U.S. bank surrenders the cash, the offshore bank is left holding the bag. They either deduct it from the accused's account, or sustain the loss.

Millions have been snatched from foreign banks' U.S. "correspondent accounts" in American banks, which usually are nothing more than a cash flow to facilitate U.S.-offshore bank transactions. Thanks to federal judges who seal the records of the pending cases, America knows little about these cash seizures.

Congress passed The Patriot Act without even knowing what was in it. Less than six weeks after 9/11, the Congress rammed through a 362-page law, sight unseen, with few members having the courage to oppose one of the worst attacks on American liberties ever enacted into law.

Now maybe they will discover what havoc they wrought.

Welcome to the New America.

That's the way it looks from here.

MONSANTO SENDS SEED-SAVING FARMER TO PRISON

From the www.rense.com website, for 6/19/03: [quoting]

by Peter Shinkle, St. Louis Post-Dispatch

A farmer opposed to Monsanto Company's genetic seed licensing practices was sentenced May 7 in federal court at St. Louis to eight months in prison for lying about a truckload of cotton seed he hid for a friend.

Kem Ralph, 47, of Covington, Tennessee, also admitted burning a truckload of seed, in defiance of a court order, to keep Monsanto from using it as evidence in a lawsuit against him.

The prison term for conspiracy to commit fraud is believed to be the first criminal prosecution linked to Monsanto's crackdown on farmers it claims are violating agreements on use of the genetically modified seeds.

Ralph pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court on February 21 of lying in a sworn statement in the civil case.

At issue is seed-saving, the age-old agricultural practice of keeping seed from one crop to plant another. Monsanto's licensing agreement forbids it, a policy that has drawn bitter opposition from some farmers.

In court Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Richard Webber ordered Ralph to serve the prison time and to repay Monsanto $165,649 for about 41 tons of genetically engineered cotton and soybean seed he was found to have saved in violation of the agreement.

Monsanto says it has filed 73 civil lawsuits against farmers in the past five years over this issue.

Officials of the company, based in Creve Coeur, hoped that Ralph's case would send a stern message. Monsanto has distributed information about it and about the civil litigation as a warning.

Before Ralph's sentencing Wednesday, a Monsanto official told Judge Webber that other farmers would closely watch the outcome.

"Their behavior will be set according to the results here today" said Scott Baucum, an intellectual property protection manager for Monsanto.

The ruddy-faced Ralph appeared in court in blue jeans and a plaid shirt. He made no comment during or after the hearing. His attorneys have asked him to hold his peace because his civil case with Monsanto—in which he has already been ordered to pay more than $1.7 million to the agribusiness giant—is still not over.

But Ralph has been outspoken about his feelings. He said in a deposition in 2000 that opposition to Monsanto led to his decision to burn the bags of seed.

"Me and my brother talked about how rotten and lowdown Monsanto is. We're tired of being pushed around by Monsanto" he said then. "We are being pushed around and drug down a road like a bunch of dogs. And we decided we'd burn them."

Monsanto's new seeds have won widespread acceptance among American farmers. [That's quite a whopper of an exaggeration!] An example is genetically modified soybean seeds, which are designed to work with Monsanto's herbicide Roundup.

The seeds, which won government approval in 1994, are expected to account for 80% of the 73 million acres of soybeans planted in 2002 and 2003, the Department of Agriculture says.

Monsanto and its supporters say its fees are justified so the company can recoup costs and pay for future research.

Farmers who refuse to pay the fees obtain an unfair advantage over others, Monsanto says. [Always a logical excuse. "If some bow to this outrage, all others have to—by law." This gets back to the farmer being nothing but an unlabelled slave to the seed seller.]

Some critics contend that the company's pricing is excessive and too tough on farmers.

"Farmers were always able to compete by saving seed. It's really a question of the corporate profit; that's what's being protected. If you can't save seed, you've got to buy it" said Lou Leonatti, an attorney from Mexico, Missouri, who represents Ralph in his civil case.

People from Tipton County, near Ralph's home, wrote to tell Judge Webber that farmers there had suffered some hard years.

Paul D'Agrossa, attorney for Ralph in the criminal case, argued for probation so his client could continue to work the soil and support his teenage son.

But Webber, who explained that he had saved seed on the family farm where he grew up, said he could not ignore Ralph's efforts to conceal evidence.

"I'm not interested in making an example of Mr. Ralph. At the same time, I can't turn a blind eye to his conduct" the judge said.

Taking note of the planting season, Webber said he would not require the farmer to report to prison before July 1.

Comments from the www.organicconsumers.org website:

1. Why don't they start with organic farming? It is a viable method with the same profit after the first couple of years needed for the soil to recover.

2. Obviously, there are many farmers who suffer under this evil conduct of Monsanto.

3. What will happen when THOUSANDS of farmers do the same? i.e. save seeds for the next year? They can't send them all to prison!

4. Civil disobedience is the right way to answer this and it is usually successful. Use the Internet to get organized!

5. By the way, here in Europe Monsanto is THE symbol for evil Amerikkkan companies.

Longtime readers of The SPECTRUM are, month after month, made well aware of the diabolical games being played by such companies as Monsanto. Given the bought-and-paid-for judicial system under the control of the same elite who own such companies as Monsanto, it would seem that the farmers must either come together in grassroots opposition or choose the organic route and leave companies like Monsanto with no buyers for their seeds.

It also helps as more of the public become aware of what's going on to undermine our food choices, a matter directly related to the subject of restricting health choices that has been our front-page feature for two months now.

INSECTS LOVE GM PEST-KILLING CROPS

From the www.rumormillnews.com website, 6/25/03: [quoting]

Two research teams in England and Venezuela have discovered something alarming about the new genetically modified crops that produce their own insecticide: The insects that eat them do not die; they not only eat them, they seem to thrive on them.

The (London) Independent, on Sunday, March 30, 2003, in an article by Geoffrey Lean, Environment Editor, reports that the startling new research has revealed that genetically modified (GM) crops, that were specially engineered to kill pests, in fact nourish them.

The research—which has taken even the most ardent opponents of GM crops by surprise—radically undermines one of the key benefits claimed for them, and it suggests that they may be an even greater threat to organic farming than has been envisaged. It strikes at the heart of one of the main lines of current genetic engineering in agriculture: breeding crops that come equipped with their own pesticide.

Drawbacks have already emerged, with pests becoming resistant to the toxin. Environmentalists say that resistance develops all the faster because the insects are constantly exposed to it in the plants, rather than being subject to occasional spraying. But the new research—by scientists at Imperial College London and the Universidad Simon Rodrigues in Caracas, Venezuela—adds an alarming new twist, suggesting that pests can actually use the poison as a food and that the crops, rather than automatically controlling them, can actually help them to thrive.

They fed resistant larvae of the diamondback moth—an increasingly troublesome pest in the southern U.S. and in the tropics—on normal cabbage leaves and ones that had been treated with a Bt toxin. The larvae eating the treated leaves grew much faster and bigger—with a 56% higher growth rate.

Let's see now:

First it was that those "wonderful" genetically engineered/genetically modified (GE/GM) crops were good for you—and then Monsanto's own headquarters cafeteria refused to use such products.

Then it was touted that they are harmless to be near non-GE/GM crops—until they jumped fields and contaminated entire regions where they weren't wanted.

Now they tell you they have engineered these crops to fight pests—yet they make the pests big and fat and further resistant.

Does anyone see a pattern here? Maybe we better all start eating in the Monsanto headquarters cafeteria!

MY PERSONAL ENCOUNTER WITH THE WAL-MART RFID

From the www.rense.com website, for 6/10/03: [quoting]

Hi Jeff [Rense], this is my personal encounter with the Wal-Mart RFID tags.

I bought two pairs of panties a few months ago at Wal-Mart. These were the kind that were hung on a little plastic hanger, individually sold, and not packaged. (I'm sure many women are familiar with these.)

Anyway, one day I noticed a small hard object inside the crotch of the panties I had chosen to wear that day. When I began to investigate what this was, I realized that the panties had an opening at the seam of the cotton crotch lining. I felt inside to get the small hard object which was glued or taped with some type of strong adhesive. I had worn and washed the panties several times before noticing this—so that will give you some idea how strong this adhesive was, as well as how small the object was.

The object was in an unmarked white casing, very small, less than half an inch long, and fairly thin across. I checked the other pair of panties (same make but different color), and it also had the object inside the crotch. It was so small it was undetectable by just the wearing. I had no idea what it was, though thought it odd but really didn't give it much thought. I just threw the little things away. Now I wish I had kept them.

And now, today, I just read this article on Wal-Mart and RFID, and just knew that little thing in my panties was a tracking device!

Seems to me that a thing like that would be placed in an obvious place, where the person buying the product can see and remove it. I hope you post this so people will be sure to check products they buy at Wal-Mart.

By the way, I don't shop at Wal-Mart anymore, but from what this article states, it looks like we may be fighting a losing battle.

I did a little research and was shocked at the possibilities of privacy invasion with RFID. Yours truly, Gena

MILITARY TESTING RED LEDS FOR HEALING ACCELERATION

From the www.rense.com website, for 6/25/03: [quoting]

Hi Jeff,

In the 6/24/03 Los Angeles Times, there's an interesting but small feature article about the military's current experimentation with the use of standard red light-emitting diodes (LEDs) to promote healing ("in half the time") of wounded soldiers in active combat. You can sign on as a member to see it, but I thought it might be more useful to you to get something you could publish more directly with better depth on the subject, and found this on a search:

Business Uses Infrared To Speed Healing Of Wounds

by Donna Redman

for the Albuquerque Journal

Just five minutes from the Placitas exit off I-25, there is a small business called BioScan (www.bioscanlight.com) that uses a relatively new NASA technology to promote healing with light.

Nadine Donahue, founder and president of BioScan Inc., said the light therapy involves using infrared and near infrared or visible red generated by light-emitting diodes (LEDs) to speed healing of injuries and wounds.

The equipment is approved by the Food and Drug Administration and the therapy is approved for coverage by Medicare and Medicaid.

Donahue said she started the business 13 years ago with horses.

"I've been riding horses all my life" Donahue said during a recent interview. "When I was in Virginia riding one of the greatest horses I've ever sat on, one day he just wasn't right. The veterinarians couldn't find anything wrong. So I pursued all sorts of alternative possibilities."

Eventually she came up with an early form of LED light therapy for the horse, and it worked, she said.

She collaborated with a college professor and with several engineers to develop a handheld device to treat problem areas.

The problem area is exposed to specific wavelengths in the infrared and visible red light spectrum with an LED device to promote healing, she said.

BioScan executive vice president Rick Breden said the process is "very sophisticated yet very simple. To oversimplify, the light triggers cells to heal themselves."

More than three years ago, NASA/Marshall Space Flight Center awarded a Small Business Innovation Research grant to Wisconsin-based Quantum Devices Inc. to develop LED technology for healing wounds. Subsequent human clinical trials were conducted at the Medical College of Wisconsin.

In an article in the online magazine NASAEexplores in April 2001, Harry Whelan, M.D., of the Medical College of Wisconsin said LED therapy has improved healing for people with serious burns, crush injuries, complications of cancer chemotherapy and radiation treatment, and with diabetic skin ulcers.

According to a paper by Whelan and colleagues, the light therapy provides low-energy stimulation of tissues which results in increased cellular activity during wound healing.

Three years ago, BioScan expanded to include human applications as well as equine. And about three months ago BioScan added a treatment clinic called Signature Series Light Therapy by Energy Applied Research.

The lead therapist is Rick Murdoch, who also is on staff at the University of New Mexico physical therapy department.

"The clinic is service oriented" said clinic director Rick Breden. "It's about treating people—using our LED device, which is based on laser technology, except LEDs are a lot more gentle, safer delivery."

The initial BioScan therapy session costs $45, with subsequent sessions $25 each.

"Most people have insurance co-pays in the range of $10 to $30, so that's kind of in the range of most people's co-pays" Breden said. "Most anybody can afford it."

"We don't do insurance billing ourselves" he added, "but we are approved by Medicare and Medicaid. Our products are cleared by the FDA; we became FDA-cleared on July 18, 2000. There are no known contra-indications; you can't overtreating yourself; you can't damage yourself, which is really wonderful."

"Light is incredibly forgiving" Donahue said.

BioScan products are used on race horses at Hollywood Park and Santa Anita race tracks near Los Angeles, and at tracks around the world, Donahue said.

"One of our first target markets for BioScan was some of the major sports teams, and now there are several of them that use our equipment" Breden added. "The Phoenix Coyotes, the Montreal Canadiens, the Philadelphia Eagles, the Milwaukee Bucs, the NBA, the NFL, the NHL."

"We realized, in looking at our database, that we're on every single continent except Antarctica, and we're not sure of that."

Currently the Placitas firm is negotiating with distribution companies in Europe and Japan, as well as in the United States, to sell BioScan products. In the future, they want to develop more consumer products.

BioScan also is participating in a

This wonderful technology has been evolving for over twenty years now, and along the way it has presented quite a problem for the Medical Gestapo because (1) there are no side-effects to pick on to give the medical police an excuse to hold it back, and (2) a lot of good has been constantly demonstrated. Moreover, major elite-controlled front-operations like NASA and the military already knew (and it got out to the public) that this was useful and they were going to use it. So, for the pharmaceutical cartel to attempt to keep it from the public would have been practically impossible.

Remember our June 2002 front-page feature story on all these kinds of light-therapy technologies? It will get really interesting when the connection between the now-approved light therapies and the "under attack" Rife-type technologies (that we've discussed last month and this month) are realized to be closely related!

U.K. HEART-FAILURE WARNING

From the tje.net website, 4/8/03:

Subject: statin drugs and heart failure (www.sky.com/skynews/article/0,,30100-12175258,00.html)

Thousands of people in Britain may be at risk of death from heart failure brought on by "life-saving" drugs, a new study warned.

The results of the research suggest statin drugs could cause an "epidemic" of heart failure.

Statin drugs are taken by one million people each day in the UK to reduce the risk of heart disease and strokes.

Hailed as a "wonder drug", they block the body's production of cholesterol leading to heart attacks and strokes.

But a new study in the U.S. reveals the drugs also deplete the body's ability to produce coenzyme Q10 (CoQ10).

Reduced levels of this vital nutrient results in heart failure and death, the research suggests.

U.S. cardiologist Dr. Peter Langsjoen, the author of the study, will present his findings at a medical conference in central London.

He said: "I think people taking statins should be very worried. I don't think this can be ignored."

Statins, costing £1 per pill, are currently restricted to people who have heart disease and raised cholesterol.

They were first used in the UK in 1996. [end quoting]

This situation has become more the rule than the exception any more and, day by day, makes a stronger and stronger case for alternative healing modalities and the freedom to choose non-drug therapies. This chronic kind of danger from drug products also cautions us to be concerned about so many other possible (yet still hidden) side-effects associated with so many of the pharmaceutical cartel's poisonous offerings.

SEN. ORRIN HATCH: DESTROY DOWNLOADERS' COMPUTERS!

From the www.washingtonpost.com website, 6/17/03: [quoting]

Hatch Takes Aim At Illegal Downloading

The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee said Tuesday he favors developing new technology to remotely destroy the computers of people who illegally download music from the Internet. [It has been reported that Hatch is himself using unlicensed software on his official website; see next article below.]

The surprise remarks by Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) during a hearing on copyright abuses represent a dramatic escalation in the frustrating battle by industry executives and lawmakers in Washington against illegal music downloads.

During a discussion on methods to frustrate computer users who illegally exchange music and movie files over the Internet, Hatch asked technology executives about ways to damage computers involved in such file trading. Legal experts have said any such attack would violate federal anti-hacking laws.

"No one is interested in destroying anyone's computer" replied Randy Saaf of MediaDefender Inc., a secretive Los Angeles company that builds technology to disrupt music downloads. One technique deliberately downloads pirated material very slowly so other users can't.

"I'm interested" Hatch interrupted. He said damaging someone's computer "may be the only way you can teach somebody about copyrights."

The senator acknowledged Congress would have to enact an exemption for copyright owners from liability for damaging computers. He endorsed technology that would twice warn a computer user about illegal online behavior, "then destroy their computer."

"If we can find some way to do this without destroying their machines, we'd be interested in hearing about that" Hatch said. "If that's the only way, then I'm all for destroying their machines. If you have a few hundred thousand of those, I think people would realize the seriousness of their actions" he said.

"There's no excuse for anyone violating copyright laws" Hatch said.

I venture to say that he and his staff violate copyright laws many times every day in doing their basic job of gathering information from all sources to accomplish what he does. But then, the good senator operates in a realm above the laws he fancies for the common people.

Meanwhile, there's a real clash going on right now—through the medium of the Internet—between those who ascribe to the philosophy of freely sharing information and those who see the Internet as yet another avenue for conducting "business" and should be squeezed for all the money it can generate.

Furthermore, if you saw any of this Hatch matter on the network news programs, the whole episode looked like a case of grandstanding for personal visibility as well as for special interests who likely will (if they didn't already) donate liberally to his election fund. This is what our politicians focus on while the country falls apart from neglect of the truly important matters—as is so well stated in an article ("The Giant Sucking Sounds In Washington DC") elsewhere in this issue of The SPECTRUM.

Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) suggested Tuesday that people who download copyrighted materials from the Internet should have their computers automatically destroyed.

Looks like Senator Orrin Hatch is as guilty as the kids whose computers he wants to destroy!

Does that same deal go for his website too? Naw, he's got immunity 'cause he's one of them there Senators back in DC; the rules don't apply to him! Heck, he can do what he wants, but those "little people" better pay up or get blowed up! [end quoting]

VISIONS FROM ANNA

Tuesday 17 Jun 2003

From: Anna Detweiler

To: Al Overholt

Yes, all is fairly well in this area of the world. We are having so much rainy weather it is very frustrating for the farmers who need to be cutting and curing their hay. My husband suggested we might want to think about building an ark instead of a shelter in the ground. [smile]

As far as the Earth changes are concerned, things are in a very mixed up state. The fog/mist outside of the planet seems to keep building up. The magnetic particles are in a constant state of motion and the motion is every which way. On Sunday there was a wave of energy that was on top of the Earth that kept washing back and forth across the globe. It looked exactly like a wave of water except it was energy. Every time it washed over this area I became physically nauseated.

There is still a tugging of the Earth going on from something out by the Sun. Also there are short periods of times when it feels like the object by the Sun is pushing us like the end of a magnet would. Yesterday morning I noticed that the tail of the object is blowing in a different direction, like maybe towards the Earth. But it still appears to be quite a ways off.

I have seen several different reports too where there are high wave/tide anomalies. Also the boat capsizing in Oregon was a signal to me that maybe the seas are becoming extremely rough. This is something that I can believe is happening because the Atlantic Ocean still appears to rise up in the middle as a high tide would do. This happens when the Sun passes overhead.

The atmosphere is under constant stress. It has an appearance of being frazzled all over. Not strong and smooth like it used to be.

Yesterday evening, at the time and afterwards too, that the earthquake occurred in Kamchatka [Peninsula, to the west of Alaska's Aleutian Islands], the area between the crust and the core began showing signs of extreme heat. That is something that seems to happen when the

"I must thank and congratulate you on the best news reporting and solid analysis of the current state of affairs in this country. It is good to see that some people are able to tell when someone is trying to pull the wool over their eyes.

"While I want to see a free United States, I do not want to go back to the 'freedom' that was given to my Native American and African ancestors. That 'freedom' did not recognize their humanity rights or full citizenship. The wealth of America today was built on a most wicked racism which stole land and labor. The freedom of the future must recognize all humans and treat them all with respect.... I am pleased to see the inclusion of Native American elders and the reporting of continuation of the slave trade in Africa and Asia.

Sun starts to pull away from the mid Atlantic region. Then, when an earthquake occurs, the energy is somewhat released again and the cycle begins to rebuild itself again.

The boom heard in Florida yesterday also is very interesting. It could have been an assortment of things but it could also have been the effects of the amazing tugging that goes on there at the mid Atlantic region.

I also notice that my perception of time/reality is constantly coming under fire. Some electromagnetic anomaly is definitely affecting it. The energy of the Earth also still feels strange and different then I have ever experienced before. I have learned to adapt to it, until it becomes really unstable, like last night, when the extreme heat was felt between the crust and the core. At that point I begin to wish I was elsewhere in the Universe!

As you can see, I'm still watching to see what will happen to the Earth, but at this point I still don't know what will actually be the outcome of the object by the Sun. I think Zetataalk has [consciously or unconsciously] put out too much disinfo to just take what they say will be the final result and not question it. I certainly question it extensively.

Take care. Love and Peace, Anna

Subject: Update on the conditions of planet Earth

Good morning everyone:

I am watching extreme heat buildup between the crust and the core of the Earth this morning. The molecules-atoms I am watching look like they are about at the point of explosion.

There are also points all across the Earth that are showing it worse than the overall. Let me just name a few of these spots. Off the coast of Newfoundland several hundred miles, a bit south of the North Magnetic Pole, southern parts of the Great Smoky Mountains as in North and South Carolina, in the western part of the Gulf of Mexico, Japan, Gulf of Alaska, off the coast of Oregon-Washington.

This is only a sampling of the places that are feeling very hot, but I think you get the idea. Lots of tension showing up everywhere.

Subject: It's building up again!

Good morning to you all:

Keep watch for another big quake, because the energy is building up dramatically since last evening about 7:30 p.m. The tugging on the Earth moves as the Sun/object pass overhead.

This morning the atmosphere over the mid Atlantic also feels hot. When remote viewing it appears the dark comet has come quite a bit closer to the Earth now. It is still coming pretty directly at us. The tail seems to be whipping in the wind. When will it turn or will it turn? My crystal ball isn't talking. [smile]

I am just trying to keep my physical body intact as it feels sometimes like it could explode.

Stay safe. Love and Peace, Anna

ANALYST STEWART SWERDLOW'S NEWS BRIEFS AND COMMENTS

From the stewartswerdlow.com website: [quoting]

In this regularly updated column, Stewart discusses current events based upon his personal knowledge and experience of Illuminati plans for the Earth.

Bragg Leaves The Rag (6/1/03)

The New York Times has suspended yet another reporter, Rick Bragg, a Pulitzer Prize winning national correspondent. He finally quit saying the Times could "be a prison" for him. His "mistake" was saying that a story he wrote about a Florida oyster fisherman was contributed to by a freelance writer. I suppose the Times does not want people to know that stringers are used to fill their stories. The New York Times, a global newspaper and big mouthpiece for the New World Order, is ahead of its times (pun intended) for eliminating staff writers who will not play the Illuminati game.

Funniest Interview (6/1/03)

Last night I saw the most hilarious interview on CNN. A reporter was asking Jessica Lynch's father in West Virginia about his daughter and the alleged (staged) rescue attempt in Iraq, paraphrased as follows:

Reporter: How is Jessica?

Father, with thick Southern drawl: She's fine.

Reporter: How's her memory?

Father: She ain't got no memory problems. Her memory is just as good as before she left.

Reporter: So, what happened with her rescue? There is controversy.

Father: I ain't supposed to talk about it. I can't say nothin'. There's an investigation.

Reporter: Who told you not to talk?

Father: Nobody.

Well, after I wiped away my tears of laughter, I just shook my head. Their small West Virginia home was nearly doubled in size during the last few weeks, thanks to the efforts of local workers who built add-ons to help with Jessica's rehabilitation. I doubt her "amnesia" will be cured. Imagine all that daring military equipment being used to rescue a lone woman from an unprotected, mostly empty hospital. There's a movie in this somewhere. Oh, wait—it's already been done! It was called Wag The Dog.

What The Heck Was That? (6/1/03)

A reader of this website in Northern Indiana reports hearing a disturbance outside his home. Birds were going crazy in the woods. He stepped outside to see what was happening. Birds were flying all over. Then, a huge, over two-foot-tall bird appeared out of the trees. He wrote to me and also asked local authorities to tell him what kind of bird he saw. No one knew. Upon further investigation, he says that hunters told him they had seen an even larger bird like that in the woods recently. Huge birds have been seen lately from Alaska to New Jersey to Alabama. They appear to be identical to the giant Thunderbirds of Indian legend and artwork.

This reader finally contacted the local Animal Protection office. They told him that the U.S. Government recently re-introduced a new species of bird to National Parks. One place was Glacier Park in Michigan. They did not tell him the species name or any other details. Is the U.S. government involved with their own Jurassic Park experiments? Yes. I know. A big birdie told me.

DARPA Diary (6/9/03)

DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) has solicited bids to develop a "digital super diary that records heartbeats, travel, Internet chats, and everything a person does" through a camera, microphone, and sensors worn by the user. Known as LifeLog, this breakthrough software "will be able to find meaningful patterns in the timetable, to infer the user's routines, habits, and relationships with other people, organizations, places, and objects. A DARPA spokesperson says that LifeLog is intended for those who agree to be monitored and could enhance the memory of military commanders and improve military training.

But, defense analyst John Pike of GlobalSecurity.org says: "I have a much easier time understanding how Big Brother would want this than how [Defense Secretary Donald H.] Rumsfeld would use it; they have not identified a military application." Steven Aftergood, a Federation of American Scientists defense analyst, said that the information far exceeds what is needed to improve a general's memory, and that it would "measure human experience on an unprecedentedly specific level".

DARPA rejects the idea that this technology would be used to spy on others and invade people's privacy. While LifeLog is now designed to be used by volunteers only, it is noted that the information collected could be obtained by the government without a search warrant. And, once they have the information, how will it be interpreted and what kind of story will they create with it? Sounds like we need a new national motto: "Resistance is futile; you will be assimilated."

Wilderness Classification Halted (6/9/03)

"Essentially, what this administration is saying is, 'no more wilderness'" said Michael Matz, executive director of the Campaign for America's Wilderness. As with much of the Bush Administration's policies, this one also ignores the consistent public support for protecting America's wilderness areas. As a result of the Administration's emphasis on oil and gas development, wells could be quickly drilled in many of the West's most pristine areas. Our freedoms and resources are quickly being (officially) disbursed into the hands of a select few.

Slave Labor? (6/9/03)

Approximately 12,000 Bantus from Somalia will be resettled into the United States over the next two years. This largely agrarian group will experience culture shock in this industrialized country as they become accustomed to so many things that we take for granted, such as electricity and running water. Their families are usually large, frequently including up to ten children per family.

Government officials admit that it will take up to six months for the Bantus to find work, and they will have to rely on public aid and food stamps to get by. A consultant who co-wrote a report for the State Department says that many are skilled laborers with a powerful work ethic. They most likely will take the most menial jobs at sub-standard pay. The division to a two-class society continues.

13 File (6/9/03)

- In Iraq, it was reported that 13 girls had been abducted at a prestigious Christian academy in Baghdad.

- In Rich Township, Michigan, a man with a high-powered rifle surrendered to authorities after a 13-hour stand-off.

- German politician Juergen Moellemann, an experienced skydiver, plummeted over 13,000 feet to his death as his home was raided by authorities to investigate tax evasion and fraud charges.

- In Illinois and Wisconsin, it is reported that 13 people have gotten sick after buying prairie dogs that may be infected with a virus.

Dubya's Debauchery & Death (6/11/03)

A popular Boston syndicated columnist, Derrick Z. Jackson, wrote a scathing anti-Bush article that appeared in the Chicago Tribune on June 9, 2003. Titled "Bush's Reign Of Deception", Jackson says: "With about 180 American soldiers sacrificed and thousands of Iraqi soldiers and citizens killed, the unprecedented war is unraveling into a scandal that dwarfs President Clinton's Thong-gate and threatens to surpass the violation of national trust symbolized by Watergate. Iraq is about Bush sending Americans to die for what may have been a lie."

This anti-Bush theme is getting unusually high press coverage. A Newsweek article quoted a recently retired State Department analyst saying that he "could not believe that Bush would use 'that stupid piece of garbage' to make his case." He was of course referring to the forged document on the letterhead of a Nigerian minister of foreign affairs (who had been out of office for a decade) regarding Hussein buying uranium from Africa for nuclear weapons. A Central Command planner also made negative statements about Bush in Newsweek, referring to the sites where weapons of mass destruction were stored as "crap".

An intelligence official was quoted in U.S. News & World Report that: "The policy decisions weren't matching the reports we were reading every day." The article went on to say that Secretary of State Colin Power was fed "evidence" that could not be confirmed before his testimony to the United Nations. David Albright, a former Atomic Energy Agency arms inspector, said "the White House 'deliberately' selected information that would increase the perception that Iraq was a serious threat" among other negative comments.

A Time article quoted a senior military official who originally helped plan the Iraq war, but quit after seeing the exaggeration of bad intelligence by the White House. Another Army intelligence officer stated that: "Rumsfeld was deeply, almost pathologically distorting the intelligence."

Former CIA analyst on Iraq, Patrick Lange, said: "Intelligence was exploited and abused and bypassed by the White House." Vincent Cannistraro, former head of CIA counter-terrorism operations, said: "Many intelligence officials 'believe it is a scandal'."

Jackson ends his article on an extremely strong note by stating: "If Bush cannot shoulder the burden of truth, his disgrace should be one that makes Bill Clinton's lust a footnote in history and Richard Nixon's tapes a petty larceny of democracy. The denial and deception of President Bush ended in debauchery and death."

After this article, let's keep our eye on Mr. Jackson, and ask for his safe-keeping in our prayers.

Take Two: Will Monkeypox Do? (6/11/03)

Well, now that no one is interested in smallpox vaccinations, how about a monkeypox scare? The virus, normally found in Central and West Africa, may have come to the United States in an imported Gambian rat, an African rodent sold as a pet. There is no known treatment for monkeypox, but, get this, the U.S. Centers For Disease Control And Prevention "is studying whether people who have been vaccinated against smallpox may be protected from monkeypox." (!) Scientists believe that smallpox-vaccinated people may carry some protection against monkeypox. The deputy director of the Centers For Disease Control's National Center For Infectious Diseases says that: "Some animal studies suggest there is some protective effect of smallpox vaccine for monkeypox." Come on now, you're boring us again!

Try, Try Again! (6/11/03)

Officials are determined to flush out the Black genetics one way or another. The latest reparation story involves a 104-year-old Black man in rural Louisiana who claims that he and his children were enslaved throughout much of the 20th Century. The man was discovered by an independent historian-genealogist. Lawyers say he is an uneducated man who picked cotton for a living in rural Mississippi before being forced to move to Louisiana with his master in the late 1930s, long after the official abolition of slavery.

In addition, his children were forced to provide farm labor without pay and live in "squalid" conditions. The man and his family, according to court papers, suffered "rape, torture, kidnapping, and horrific abuses at the hands of the slave masters." Sounds like the perfect scenario to move the reparation cause forward. Once the case is "settled", and the man and his family are awarded their settlement, the powers-that-be expect the millions of African-American slave descendents to line up to collect their funds. Beware!

Jackson Jacking (6/14/03)

An Indiana court is forcing Michael Jackson to appear (on June 13, 2003), along with his brother, on a copyright lawsuit concerning a name of a band and two of their songs without legal license. This occurred when Michael was 9 years old. The alien-faced entertainer failed to appear for a deposition on May 21, 2003, when he was hospitalized for an anxiety attack. Looks like this programming icon is being used-up and thrown away. The aliens must be near.

Hillary's Silleries (6/14/03)

Hillary Clinton's new autobiography Living History is selling out in huge numbers all over the U.S. The $8 million "tell-all" book about her days in the White House with Bill was written by other paid authors. Most people in-the-know claim that this recollection of events is quite different from what actually occurred. She is on every talk show, acting like a poor, innocent victim, and trying to be the bastion of peace and assimilation. She looks and sounds phony. She fools no one. The real story is that she and Bill dated the same women and allowed many others to be murdered. They also facilitated drug distribution from Arkansas. The true story will not be found in Hillary's words, face, or book.

Ontario Is For Lovers (6/14/03)

The first full marriage licenses to homosexuals was issued in Toronto this week, causing Canada's definition of marriage to be put to the test. Ontario joins with Holland, Belgium, and Denmark to allow same-sex unions full rights. In the U.S., only Vermont allows this, although, like Quebec, calls it a "civil union" rather than a marriage. This, then, will legitimize the New World Order ruler being prepared to govern this planet. He is bisexual, but predominantly gay. Very androgynous.

Stinks On Ice (6/14/03)

A little-known incident occurred a few months ago which slipped by in the news rather unnoticed. A North Korean missile remnant was found in the ice in Western Alaska, apparently the remains of a test to see how far into North America these weapons could be fired. I do not have details, but if true, could be a clue as to how the U.S. will "legitimize" a take-over of North Korea in coming months.

Iran—You're Next (6/18/03)

Now that Iraq has been sewn into the fabric of the New World Order, the eyes of the New World Order are focused on its neighbor to the East, Iran. Already, the CIA/NSA have stirred up the muck and incited students to protest against the Islamic government. Even the United Nations has declared that Iran refused to allow inspectors at possible nuclear facilities in and around Tehran. Iran is now surrounded by U.S. troops—in Iraq to the West, and in Afghanistan to the East. Iran doesn't stand a chance.

Over the course of the next few weeks, Iran will also be eliminated from the Islamic Fundamentalist world and be occupied by coalition troops. Then, the staged alien invasion information should be predominant in the media. Thankfully, the internal Illuminati war has delayed the culmination of the agenda. However, it is still in progress and it's only a matter of time before it all catches up to us.

British Warning (6/18/03)

A senior member of Britain's Secret Service warned an audience at London's Royal United Services Institute that a major attack using chemical, biological, radiological, or nuclear technology is just a matter of time. However, she cautioned that we need not panic (really!) because most terrorists simply prefer a standard bombing or suicide attack. (Well, that calms me right down!) Seems like they are stirring up some jitters in time for the summer. The New World Order is covering its nasty behind.

Madonna In Massachusetts (6/26/03)

The image of the Madonna has appeared on a piece of clouded glass in a hospital window in Massachusetts. More than 25,000 people have flocked to the hospital to catch a glimpse of this, turning the window into a religious shrine. Experts are claiming that the image came from a chemical component trapped inside the window pane. According to them, the chemical spread over the glass, staining it, and creating the image. Sounds like a Blue Beam thing to me.

They're Coming Up! (6/26/03)

Arizona has been the latest setting of some really nasty fires. Those of you who have been following this story know that these are intentionally set as part of the New World Order agenda. Arizona is home to a huge Reptilian underground nest. These fires are started to keep people away from a particular area while those who inhabit the inner Earth come up for a little air.

Environmental Editing (6/26/03)

The EPA is about to release a major report on the environment showcasing the talents of the White House editing department. The report originally featured a lengthy section about global warming, which now reads as only a few watered-down paragraphs. Lord only knows what else the report may have contained that was deleted entirely. Perhaps a section on the abundance of East Coast rain?

De-Calf-Innated (6/26/03)

President Bush is currently suffering from a torn muscle in his right calf. According to a White House spokesperson, the President first experienced the pain in late April but "tried to run through it". It was also reported that the President experiences aching in his knees, and attributes it to age. Those of you familiar with the Healer's Handbook know that muscles represent the power with which one embraces their support structure. Knees note flexibility in the future. Hmmm, perhaps the President is in need of finally addressing some of his mind-patterns. I hope he calls for a consultation.

Red Zone, White Zone, Protection Zone (6/26/03)

Prime Minister Tony Blair's government is planning to set up "holding centers" for all the immigrants coming to England. They are hoping it will serve to reduce the number of refugees they are receiving. The idea has sparked much controversy and has been compared to concentration camps. Officials are calling the centers "Zones Of Protection". Protection from whom?

Once again we want to thank Stewart for his insights to help us spot the Truth behind the shadows.

WOULD YOU LIKE A GLASS OF WATER OR COKE?

From the beyond-the-illusion.com website, 6/9/03: [quoting]

I'll have another glass of reverse-osmosis-filtered deionized water, thank you! This is really an eye opener. We all know that water is important, but I've never seen it written down like this before.

WATER:

- 75% of Americans are chronically dehydrated.

- In 37% of Americans, the thirst mechanism is so weak that it is often mistaken for hunger.

- Even MILD dehydration will slow down one's metabolism as much as 3%.

- One glass of water will shut down midnight hunger pangs for almost 100% of the dieters studied in a University of Washington study.

- Lack of water is the #1 trigger of daytime fatigue.

- Preliminary research indicates that 8-10 glasses of water a day could significantly ease back and joint pain for up to 80% of sufferers.

- A mere 2% drop in body water can trigger fuzzy short-term memory, trouble with basic math, and difficulty focusing on the computer screen or a printed page.

- Drinking 5 glasses of water daily decreases the risk of colon cancer by 45%, plus it can slash the risk of breast cancer by 79%, and one is 50% less likely to develop bladder cancer.

And now for the properties of COKE:

- In many states (in the U.S.A.) the Highway Patrol carry two gallons of Coke in the truck to remove blood from the highway after a car accident.

- You can put a T-bone steak in a bowl of coke and it will be gone in two days.

- To clean a toilet: Pour a can of Coca-Cola into the toilet bowl and let the "real thing" sit for one hour, then flush clean. The acid in Coke removes stains from vitreous china.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION:

- The active ingredient in Coke is phosphoric acid. Its pH is 2.8. [You should keep your body pH near 7.0 to be in balance. Be aware, for this reason alone, of drinking carbonated beverages.] It will dissolve a nail in about 4 days. Phosphoric acid also leaches calcium from bones and is a major contributor to the rising increase in osteoporosis.

- To carry Coca-Cola syrup (the concentrate) the commercial truck must use the "Hazardous Material" placards reserved for highly corrosive materials.

- The distributors of Coke have been using it to clean the engines of their trucks for about 20 years!

Now the question is: Would you like a Coke or a glass of water?

Don't forget that, when using Coke for cleaning and other purposes—as some have advocated—that it is loaded with sugar, and I'm sure you won't want to use it for some of these purposes.

And as for the importance of water for good health, every reader should be aware of the astonishing pioneering work of F. Batmanghelidj, M.D., which has been collected in two very popular books: Your Body's Many Cries For Water and You're Not Sick, You're Thirsty! He's another good example (related to our front-page feature story last month and again this month) of a real healer who has suffered much in the way of persecution by the Medical Gestapo—for pushing water instead of expensive drugs!

PROCESSORS CAUGHT BEEFING UP CHICKEN

From The Guardian, London, 5/31/03:

by Felicity Lawrence

Food processors have been caught on video boasting that they have developed undetectable methods of adulterating the chicken that goes into British hospitals, schools, and restaurants with cheap beef waste and water.

Tests by a television program have also shown that samples of an own-brand label of chicken nuggets sold by the British supermarket chain Sainsbury's contain bovine and pork DNA. The company says the bovine DNA comes from milk protein and the presence of pork DNA in one sample may be the result of contamination in the laboratory.

Secret filming for BBC TV's Panorama revealed that vast quantities of frozen chicken coming into Britain each week have been injected with beef proteins.

Working with The Guardian, the program went undercover to find the source of the beef proteins. BBC reporters were told by Dutch manufacturers that beef DNA can now be manipulated in such a way that the safety authorities' tests cannot detect it.

Adulterated chicken has been imported widely by British wholesalers. Brakes, a leading supplier to schools, hospitals, and restaurants, has unwittingly imported chicken with beef DNA, laboratory tests for the BBC found.

On the program, to be shown in Britain today, a German protein supplier for huge Dutch chicken companies tells undercover reporters his firm, Prowico, has developed high-tech methods to break down the DNA of the proteins so much that no government tests can detect the beef.

The proteins are hydrolysed and mixed into additive powders which are then injected into chicken meat to hold extra water, thus vastly increasing profits. Tests have found that some chicken fillets are as much as 50 percent added water.

The owner of Surplus, the Dutch company that blends the Prowico proteins into powder, tells undercover reporters the industry has been extracting hydrolysed beef proteins to inject into chicken and other meats, including ham, for more than 10 years.

Prowico says the original source of the beef is cow hides from Brazil. It admits it does not test its beef for BSE, but says Brazil is BSE-free and that hides do not carry a BSE risk.

However, the British Government's leading BSE adviser, Professor Roy Anderson, warns that since beef is known to carry disease, any use of undeclared beef proteins is unacceptable.

[end quoting]

You can assume that similar methods are also used on this side of the pond.

EZ-D(ESTRUCTO) DISCS

From MAXIMUM PC magazine, July 2003: [quoting]

Remember those self-destructing DVDs we told you about awhile ago? As soon as you open one, exposure to oxygen darkens the surface of the disc until, two days later, it can no longer be read by DVD players. Then, instead of returning the disc, you just throw it away. The Walt Disney Company will be the first to bite at the new technology, releasing in August titles including The Recruit, Signs, and—ugh—The Hot Chick. The discs will be called EZ-D, and are otherwise identical to normal DVDs.

[end quoting]

Another addition to our greed-driven throw-away society.

REALLY ERASING PC DATA

From The Costco Connection magazine, June 2003: [quoting]

John of New York City wrote [in consumer advocate David Horowitz's column] that he was surprised to read in The Costco Connection ("Recycle Those Old PCs", April 2003) that data can be safely erased from computers that are sold or given away. He asked: "Isn't the only surefire way to protect your identity to destroy the computer?"

I guess at some point we have all wanted to smash our computer with a sledgehammer. But don't waste your time. Destroying the computer still won't necessarily eliminate all your important data. Several companies told me that they have been able to rescue information even after a computer was in a fire, thrown in a pool, or dropped three stories from a window!

It could be costly, but these companies claim that you can recover business or priceless personal data even if your computer has been seriously damaged. That means a scam artist with similar technology can steal your identity from an old computer bought at a computer auction, or from a broken laptop tossed in a dumpster.

Computer experts tell me that deleting files is not enough. Fragments of data (or even whole files) will still exist around the original location and provide enough material for an expert to recover

NEW ORLEANS FINDS MAJOR FRAUD IN SCHOOLS

From The Daily News, Los Angeles, for 6/22/03: [quoting]

NEW ORLEANS — Suddenly, no one wants to claim hundreds of paychecks issued by the city's public school system.

To some outraged school board members and their auditor, it's a sign that fraud likely accounted for a good portion of the mispending estimated in a report released last week at around $20 million a year.

"People don't let their checks just sit there. If there's a problem with somebody's check, we hear about it 10 minutes later" said school board member Jimmy Fahrenholtz.

The paychecks were being cashed regularly until a few weeks ago, when employees were required to provide identification to pick them up. Since then, checks made out to more than 300 names have not been picked up, and the names have not been verified as school employees.

Together, they add up to at least $7 million a year, school board consultant Stuart Piltch said.

[end quoting]

If this scam has been working in New Orleans, there's a good chance it's being worked at many other "public troughs". It would be wise to have your school district and other agencies in your community require proper identification for employees to get their checks—just to clarify who all is on the payroll!

U.S. GOVERNMENT BANS LEAD IN CANDLE WICKS

From the www.rense.com website, for 4/9/03: [quoting]

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) said it was banning lead wicks in candles because of health risks, but consumer groups said on Tuesday the agency should have acted sooner.

Putting lead in candle wicks makes them stand up straighter but it vaporizes when set alight and can be inhaled, the agency and consumer advocates said.

"It's a kind of Viagra for candle wicks. They like it because it keeps the wick upright in burning and also during production" Dr. Peter Lurie of the Public Citizen's Health Research Group said in a telephone interview.

"CPSC determined that candles using lead-cored wicks could present a lead poisoning hazard to young children" the agency said in a statement on its www.cpsc.gov Internet website.

"Lead poisoning in children is associated with behavioral problems, learning disabilities, hearing problems, and growth retardation. Although the primary source of lead poisoning in the United States is lead from paint in older homes, lead accumulates in the body, and even exposure to small amounts of lead can contribute to the overall level of lead in the blood."

The ban will allow U.S. Customs to seize any imported candles containing lead and outlaw their production in the United States.

Lurie complained that action should have been taken earlier.

"It is a good thing, although it has taken them 30 years since we first filed a petition" Lurie said.

[end quoting]

Don't hold your breath that this will result in instant improvement. It might take another 30 years, while people continue to be unnecessarily poisoned in a way most have no idea even existed. Besides, what's one more little poison source when our water and food supplies and "allowed" medicines are loaded with so many other poisons? As far as the New World Order gang's depopulation agenda is concerned, things are moving along right on schedule!

PLANET MARS AT ITS CLOSEST TO EARTH ON AUGUST 27

Excerpted from St. Clair's Newsletter, 6/15/03: [quoting]

We will see planet Mars at its closest to Earth ever, on August 27, and almost in stand-still motion, in Pisces, at a moment of a very particular alignment—New Moon—when four planets, i.e., Sun, Moon, Venus, and Jupiter conjoin at 1-to-5 degrees Virgo, all opposing Mars & Uranus across the band of stars in Pisces.

This will be an enlightening moment in time. However, no moment is ordinary; every moment counts. The time for choices has arrived, as we all know very well, deep down. We can no longer live a lie. [end quoting]

There's no doubt that we're living in an interesting time. And Mars' close approach is bound to have presently unanticipated influences.

At its closest, at 2:51 a.m. Pacific Daylight Time on August 27, Mars will be

THE INDIGO CHILDREN

The New Kids Have Arrived

by Lee Carroll & Jan Tober

(Featured interview in the March 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM.)

The "Indigo Child" is a boy or girl who displays a new and unusual set of psychological attributes revealing a pattern of behavior generally undocumented before. This pattern requires parents and teachers to change their treatment and upbringing of these kids to help them achieve balance, harmony, and avoid frustration.

In this groundbreaking book, international authors and lecturers Lee Carroll and Jan Tober answer many of the often-puzzling questions surrounding Indigo Children:

- Can we really be seeing human evolution in kids today?
- Are these kids smarter than we were at their age?
- Why do a lot of our children today seem to be "system busters"?

This book is a must for the parents of unusually bright and active children!

- Why are so many of our brightest kids being diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD)?
- Are there proven, working alternatives to Ritalin?

Throughout this work, Carroll and Tober brings together some very fine minds (doctors, educators, psychologists, and more) who shed light on the Indigo Child phenomenon. These children are truly special, representing a great percentage of all the kids being born today on a worldwide basis. They come in "knowing" who they are—so they must be recognized, appreciated for their exceptional qualities, and guided with love and care.

34,646,437 million miles away—give or take about 50 feet, according to E. Myles Standish, an astronomer at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, who plots precise positions of planets for spacecraft navigation purposes. On June 13, 2001, Mars was 42.3 million miles away, and on November 7, 2005, it will be 43.7 million miles away. Earth is closer to the Sun and, like a car on the inside lane of a race track, overtakes Mars every 2.1 years. But there are individual variations in the orbits which factor into the actual distances at these “close encounter” times. A Belgian astronomer, Jean Meuss, calculated that this August 27, 2003 encounter is the closest in about 60,000 years.

PHONECAM NATION

From WIRED magazine, July 2003:

Everyone’s posting instant photos on the Web. Get ready for your close-up. by Xeni Jardin

Whipping out a cheap phonecam at the height of a late-night bash, a Michigan frat boy snaps his own Girls Gone Wild shots and instantly uploads them to an online gallery accessible by anyone in the world. At a Los Angeles convenience store, a woman witnesses a holdup—and with the press of a button, she captures the thief’s image and zaps it to 911. In Hong Kong, a mobile phone user photographs the apartment complex of a neighbor suspected of carrying SARS. He posts the pictures, details, and GPS coordinates to an unofficial database designed to do what the government won’t: collect and provide data about the spread of the virus.

The trend started innocuously a few years ago, when novelty cameras that plugged into mobile handsets were marketed to gadget-obsessed kids in Japan and Europe. But in the past few months, a global phonecam revolution has begun to emerge. Take the device’s portability, add its ability to post images online, multiply by its growing ubiquity, and what do you get? A cheap, fast strain of do-it-yourself publishing in which everyone is an embedded reporter.

The rise of the technology resembles the leap from late-’90s personal homepages to today’s weblogs: Like blogs, phonecams are a fresh combination of familiar elements that equal way more than the sum of their parts.

As phonecams proliferate—more than 13 million were sold in Japan in 2002, and U.S. buyers will snap up 2 million this year—you’ll never know when someone out there might snap your photo, then upload it for the world to see. The cams will instantly capture and disseminate scenes of crimes in progress or police brutality as it happens (think Rodney King or Lizzie Grubman slamming into her four-wheeled prey).

Like TV’s addictive, blurry-jerky live videophone footage from Mideast war zones, device portability makes up for image quality. As the mobile imaging hordes colonize the globe, they’ll capture and send news of natural disasters or political upheavals before conventional media can react.

(London war protesters did just that last winter, uploading images to a site created by the BBC.) And the news and gossip feed will be cross-platform: Minutes after a story breaks, television and Web sources will gather phonecam shots from the scene and disseminate them to viewers. The world will be one big reality show.

It’s already happening. Weblogs are giving way to photoblogs, and these are morphing into phoneblogs. From LA to Paris to Tokyo, glimpses from the mundane (just how bad was midtown traffic?) to the sublime (just how red was the Sun when it sank into the Pacific?) are captured and published by newly minted, accidental phone-media diarists. They may not consider themselves writers or photographers, but they’re using the gadgets to broadcast the days of our lives, everywhere they go, through improvised frame-by-frame storyboards.

And don’t forget sex—always a spur to innovation. “Upskirt” phonecam voyeurism in Japan is already a growing challenge for law enforcement. The device’s low profile makes snapshot-sneaking easier and detection harder. (The devices are already banned in some Hong Kong changing rooms.)

Of course, we’re still in the early days of this revolution. Phonecams won’t fulfill their potential until they can send big photos fast, anytime, anywhere, to anyone. American mobile networks remain pitifully unreliable compared with those in Asia and Europe. Getting giddy over phonecam photos and video seems hasty when U.S. carriers can’t even deliver voice service that works everywhere, all the time.

Eventually, though, network upgrades will bridge the bandwidth gap—and the introduction of megapixel phonecams from Sony Ericsson, Mitsubishi, Sharp, Fujitsu, and others suggests that device makers will be ready with better hardware. With video in the mix, things get really interesting. AT&T network subscribers can now choose Nokia’s 3650 model with video capture and Bluetooth so they can shoot phonecam movies to nearby PCs and PDAs. Sony Ericsson’s clamshell Z1010 phone, coming later this year, is equipped with two cameras and displays for apps like videoconferencing.

The pieces have been around for a while, but as time and technology advance, the cloud of bits and bytes begins to converge. Is it public? Is it personal? Is it media? Is it conversation? We’re about to find out.

[end quoting]

If you don’t own a computer or cell phone, the above must seem more like science fiction than the world you live in. But the speed of the Internet, coupled with such video technologies, is indeed making it more difficult to suppress events anywhere on our shrinking globe. There are too many “amateurs” around to really control the information that can spread at lightning speed.

LET THERE BE O-LIGHT

From MAXIMUM PC magazine, June 2003: [quoting]

Why OLED technology could put LCDs out of business

If the Duponts and Kodaks of the world have their say, we’ll all eventually be swimming in OLED displays—and LCD and plasma screens will be obsolete. Both megacompanies are developing “organic light-emitting diodes”, and this month we sat down with Dupont to learn more about its specific implementation, branded as Olight.

Here's how it works: First you take a thin layer of organic material (basically the same stuff found in fireflies, but produced in a lab), and then sandwich a very small amount between two electrical contact layers. Apply a modest voltage to the sandwich, and voila, you have Olight. At first glance, Olight displays might look like LCDs, but they promise key improvements:

- Because they're emissive displays (i.e., they generate their own light), OLEDs don't require a backlight like LCDs do. Thus, they're thinner and lighter.

- No backlight means less power consumption, so portable devices running OLEDs will offer much better battery life.

- LCDs can be difficult to view at off angles, but OLEDs can be viewed from any angle. (We tested this claim in person—it's true.)

- Today's LCDs switch colors at about 25 milliseconds, but OLEDs will switch at about 25 nanoseconds. [That's a thousand times faster switching.]

- Because their subpixels will be printed on glass by extremely complex and expensive inkjet printers, desktop OLEDs should offer extremely fine pixel pitches. Today's LCDs offer pitches of about 0.50 mm, but OLEDs are targeted at around 0.20 mm.

Dupont says that by 2004, OLED will go active-matrix, and these brighter, more high-definition iterations will appear in desktop flat-panels. The next stop on the road map will be in 2006 or 2007, when OLEDs are printed on plastic, which is eminently formable compared with glass. (You might even see flashy OLED logos sewn into clothing!)

But the pinnacle of OLED technology could be achieved by 2010, when continuous yards of Olight are printed in a "roll to roll" web printing process, which is how magazines are produced. A display manufacturer could simply print 200 yards of Olight, and then chop it up into massive screens for HDTVs—HDTVs that could be rolled up and put in the closet after the movie's over.

[end quoting]

This looks like a very versatile technology. And note that the basic science was done by the firefly, waiting for man to finally figure it out. (There's still that small problem of the bumble bee who isn't supposed to be able to fly!)

OODLES OF GOOGLE

From The Tehachapi News, Tehachapi, CA, by Greg Gaxiola, 6/16/03: [quoting]

Two columns ago I mentioned one of my favorite search engines—Google. My suggestion in that column was to discover all the power that each search application has. Well, since then I have discovered even more about Google.

To use the power of Google's advanced features, you will need to download the Google toolbar for free of charge at the toolbar.google.com website. I did this on my machine running Windows 98 and Internet Explorer version 6.0. The system requirements are at the toolbar download site and will take just a few minutes to install.

I like to be able to use multiple windows when using Google, but the standard search page doesn't allow this. However, when using Google's toolbar, this is possible. To do this, click the Google button on the toolbar and select "Search Preferences Page". Then check the box labeled "Open Search Results In A New Browser Window".

The "Highlight Search Text" feature is really helpful for long web pages. It's just like using a highlight pen on a printed document. When this tool is selected, your search word is highlighted in yellow marker pen everywhere it appears. To use the feature, click the Google button on the toolbar, then click "Toolbar Options" and check the box under finding a word within a page. Voila! The highlight button will be available on the toolbar.

Here's an example of one Google search I performed using a sampling of Google's tools. I did a search for a term that I'd seen for aquarium algae—Caulerpa. After I typed the word in Google's tool bar, several hits were listed. But, before opening some of these pages, I wanted to know the definition using the dictionary feature. I clicked on the underlined word in the blue bar at the top of the results page and the definition of the word was displayed along with a picture of one type of Caulerpa algae.

One page was in Italian—so I used the translate feature of Google and learned a little more about my mysterious word. I even found web pages where the little Caulerpa—Sea Grapes—could be purchased for my salt water aquarium. The translation feature can translate whole pages and also phrases.

I have only scratched the surface here. With Google you can also find people, places, and things. You can also find copious amounts of news, directories, addresses, images, and much, much more.

In addition, you can use search filters to clean up and refine your search results. For the kids, you can use the adult search filter and avoid unwanted search results. Of course you can learn about these features and more by going to the Google.com website.

Greg Gaxiola is the owner of Alpha Computer Systems; send e-mail to his greggaxiola@earthlink.net address.

[end quoting]

For those of you with computers, Google has certainly become the outstanding search engine of choice. The more skilled you become in how you word your search for specific information, the less you have to wade through what you didn't want on the way to what you did.

LATEST DARWIN AWARDS: ACTS OF IMPRESSIVE STUPIDITY

From chris lock,
(lockpeter@hotmail.com), 6/20/03:

Just a breather from all the seriousness.
Exercise your right to have a laugh.

— Chris

For those of you not familiar with the Darwin awards, they are awarded annually for the most extreme acts of (occasionally terminal) stupidity. These are published annually. They are now in for 2002.

FIRST PLACE — The 2002 Darwin Award Winner:

When his 38-caliber revolver failed to fire at his intended victim during a hold-up in Long Beach, California, would-be robber James Elliot did something that can only inspire wonder: He peered down the barrel and tried the trigger again. This time it worked.

AND NOW, THE HONORABLE MENTIONS:

- The chef at a hotel in Switzerland lost a finger in a meat-cutting machine and, after a little hopping around, submitted a claim to his insurance company. The company, suspecting negligence, sent out one of its men to have a look for himself. He tried the machine out and lost a finger. The chef's claim was approved.

- A man who shoveled snow for an hour to clear a space for his car during a blizzard in Chicago returned with his vehicle to find a woman had taken the space. Understandably, he shot her.

- After stopping for drinks at an illegal bar, a Zimbabwean bus driver found that the 20 mental patients he was supposed to be transporting from Harare to Beltway had escaped. Not wanting to admit his incompetence, the driver went to a nearby bus stop and offered everyone waiting there a free ride. He then delivered the passengers to the mental hospital, telling the staff that the patients were very excitable and prone to bizarre fantasies. The deception wasn't discovered for 3 days.

- An American teenager was in the hospital yesterday recovering from serious head wounds received from an oncoming train. When asked how he received the injuries, the lad told police that he was simply trying to see how close he could get his head to a moving train before he was hit.

- A man walked into a Louisiana Circle-K, put a $20 bill on the counter, and asked for change. When the clerk opened the cash drawer, the man pulled a gun and asked for all the cash in the register, which the clerk promptly provided. The man took the cash from the clerk and fled, leaving the $20 bill on the counter. The total amount of cash he got from the drawer? $15.

(If someone points a gun at you and gives you money, was a crime committed?)

- A thief burst into a Florida bank one day wearing a ski mask and carrying a gun. Aiming his gun at the guard, the thief yelled, "FREEZE, MOTHER-STICKERS, THIS IS A FK-UP!" For a moment, everyone was silent. Then the snickers started. The guard completely lost it and doubled over laughing. It probably saved his life, because he'd been about to draw his gun. He couldn't have drawn and fired before the thief got him. The thief ran away and is still at large. In memory of the event, the banker later put a plaque on the wall engraved with the words: "Freeze, mother-stickers, this is a F-up!"

- Seems this Arkansas guy wanted some beer pretty badly. He decided that he'd just throw a cinderblock through a liquor store window, grab some booze, and run. So he lifted the cinderblock and heaved it over his head at the window. The cinderblock bounced back and hit the would-be thief on the head, knocking him unconscious. Seems the liquor store window was made of Plexiglas. The whole event was caught on videotape.

- As a female shopper exited a New York convenience store, a man grabbed her purse and ran. The clerk called 911 immediately, and the woman was able to give them a detailed description of the snatcher. Within minutes, the police apprehended the snatcher. They put him in the car and drove back to the store. The thief was then taken out of the car and told to stand there for a positive ID. To which he replied: "Yes, officer, that's her. That's the lady I stole the purse from."

- The Ann Arbor [Michigan] News crime column reported that a man walked into a Burger King in Ypsilanti, Michigan, at 5 a.m., flashed a gun, and demanded cash. The clerk turned him down because he said he couldn't open the cash register without a food order. When the man ordered onion rings, the clerk said they weren't available for breakfast. The man, frustrated, walked away.

- Kentucky: Two men tried to pull the front off a cash machine by running a chain from the machine to the bumper of their pickup truck. Instead of pulling the front panel off the machine, though, they pulled the bumper off their truck. Scared, they left the scene and drove home. With the chain still attached to the machine. With their bumper still attached to the chain. With their vehicle's license plate still attached to the bumper. They were quickly arrested.

A 5-STAR STUPIDITY AWARD WINNER!

When a man attempted to siphon gasoline from a motor home parked on a Seattle street, he got much more than he bargained for. Police arrived at the scene to find a very sick man curled up next to a motor home near spilled sewage. A police spokesman said that the man admitted to trying to steal gasoline and plugged his siphon hose into the motor home's sewage tank by mistake. The owner of the vehicle declined to press charges, saying that it was the best laugh he'd ever had.

"ALL IS NOT LOST" A CHRISTMAS STORY

From heroicstories-admin@lyris.net, for 6/9/03:

by Deborah Dessaint Clayton Bennett

Right after high school, I got married and had two children. Child care cost as much as I could make by working, so we decided I should stay home for a few years. It was rough sometimes, trying to make ends meet on just my husband's income as a grocery clerk. While the pay was decent, the hours were crazy and we still struggled to get by. We only had one car, so I would sometimes keep it and then pick my husband up from work.

One Christmas Eve, my husband had worked from the wee hours of the night until early afternoon. He was just finishing when I arrived to pick him up. I had our infant son and toddler daughter in tow when I entered the store. We had bills to pay and food to buy, and we hadn't bought any Christmas presents yet. We were hoping a Christmas bonus would pay for presents. It was payday, and we planned to do all our chores that afternoon.

When I laid eyes on him, I knew something was wrong—something more than the usual exhaustion or the dread of last-minute shopping. He explained what had happened. Not only was our entire Christmas ruined, we couldn't even pay our bills!

That morning, after the store opened and the armored car left, the overnight employees picked up their checks. Because we were going shopping, my husband cashed his check and bought some food to take on his break. He then curled the rest of the bills into a roll and stuffed it in his pants pocket. Somehow, the roll of money must have fallen out and been picked up by someone shopping. His entire paycheck and Christmas bonus were gone!

How could someone do such a thing on Christmas Eve? We had nothing under the tree at home, and now nothing even to buy Christmas dinner. Not only was I worried about how we would pay our bills, I was just plain angry.

We slowly started toward the front of the store, trying to figure out what to do. Then the manager paged my husband to the courtesy booth. When we got there, the manager handed him a fat, plain, white envelope and told him to look inside. It was full of money! The other employees felt so bad for us, they took up a collection. While my husband counted the money and I fought back tears, a few employees gathered around, wished us a Merry Christmas, and went quietly back to work.

We never knew exactly who contributed or how much. They made up almost the entire amount that was lost! My faith in others had been destroyed and rebuilt in a matter of minutes. Ever since then, I have remembered that it was just one person who did a wrong—but many who worked together to make it right again.

We probably don't often enough thank God for His many Angels—often appearing as our fellow workers, friends, colleagues, and especially strangers who come “out of nowhere” to lend a helping hand and just as quickly disappear again.

ROOM 712

From an email from SPECTRUM friends “Mark & D. R.”, 6/9/03: [quoting]

The hospital was unusually quiet that bleak January evening, quiet and still like the air before a storm. I stood in the nurses' station on the seventh floor and glanced at the clock.

It was 9 P.M. I threw a stethoscope around my neck and headed for room 712, last room on the hall. Room 712 had a new patient, Mr. Williams. A man all alone. A man strangely silent about his family.

As I entered the room, Mr. Williams looked up eagerly, but drooped his eyes when he saw it was only me, his nurse. I pressed the stethoscope over his chest and listened. Strong, slow, even beating. Just what I wanted to hear. There seemed little indication he had suffered a slight heart attack a few hours earlier.

He looked up from his starched white bed. “Nurse, would you...” He hesitated, tears filling his eyes. Once before he had started to ask me a question, but changed his mind. I touched his hand, waiting. He brushed away a tear. “Would you call my daughter? Tell her I've had a heart attack. A slight one. You see, I live alone and she is the only family I have.”

His respiration suddenly speeded up. I turned his nasal oxygen up to eight liters a minute. “Of course I'll call her” I said, studying his face. He gripped the sheets and pulled himself forward, his face tense with urgency. “Will you call her right away—as soon as you can?”

He was breathing fast—too fast. “I'll call her the very first thing” I said, patting his shoulder. I flipped off the light. He closed his eyes, such young blue eyes in his 50-year-old face.

Room 712 was dark except for a faint night-light under the sink. Oxygen gurgled in the green tubes above his bed. Reluctant to leave, I moved through the shadowy silence to the window. The panes were cold. Below, a foggy mist curled through the hospital parking lot.

“Nurse” he called, “could you get me a pencil and paper?”

I dug a scrap of yellow paper and a pen from my pocket and set it on the bedside table.

I walked back to the nurses' station and sat in a squeaky swivel chair by the phone. Mr. Williams's daughter was listed on his chart as the next of kin. I got her number from information and dialed.

Her soft voice answered. “Janie, this is Sue Kidd, a registered nurse at the hospital. I'm calling about your father. He was admitted tonight with a slight heart attack and—”

“No!” she screamed into the phone, startling me. “He's not dying is he?”

“His condition is stable at the moment” I said, trying hard to sound convincing. Silence. I bit my lip.

“You must not let him die!” she said. Her voice was so utterly compelling that my hand trembled on the phone.

“He is getting the very best care.”

“But you don't understand” she pleaded. “My daddy and I haven't spoken. On my 21st birthday, we had a fight over my boyfriend. I ran out of the house. I haven't been back. All these months I've wanted to go to him for forgiveness. The last thing I said to him was: ‘I hate you.’”

Her voice cracked and I heard her heave great agonizing sobs. I sat, listening, tears burning my eyes. A father and a daughter, so lost to each other. Then I was thinking of my own father, many miles away. It has been so long since I had said “I love you”.

As Janie struggled to control her tears, I breathed a prayer. “Please God, let this daughter find forgiveness.”

“I'm coming. Now! I'll be there in 30 minutes” she said.

Click. She had hung up. I tried to busy myself with a stack of charts on the desk. I couldn't concentrate.

Room 712; I knew I had to get back to 712.

I hurried down the hall nearly in a run. I opened the door. Mr. Williams lay unmoving. I reached for his pulse. There was none.

“Code 99, Room 712. Code 99. Stat.”

The alert was shooting through the hospital within seconds after I called the switchboard through the intercom by the bed.

Mr. Williams had a cardiac arrest. With lightning speed I leveled the bed and bent over his mouth, breathing air into his lungs (twice). I positioned my hands over his chest and compressed. One, two, three. I tried to count.

At fifteen I moved back to his mouth and breathed as deeply as I could. Where was help? Again I compressed and breathed, compressed and breathed.

He could not die!
 "O God" I prayed. "His daughter is coming! Don't let it end this way."

The door burst open. Doctors and nurses poured into the room pushing emergency equipment. A doctor took over the manual compression of the heart. A tube was inserted through his mouth as an airway. Nurses plunged syringes of medicine into the intravenous tubing.

I connected the heart monitor. Nothing. Not a beat.

My own heart pounded. "God, don't let it end like this. Not in bitterness and hatred. His daughter is coming. Let her find peace."

"Stand back!" cried a doctor. I handed him the paddles for the electrical shock to the heart. He placed them on Mr. Williams's chest. Over and over we tried. But nothing. No response.

Mr. Williams was dead. A nurse unplugged the oxygen. The gurgling stopped. One by one they left, grim and silent.

How could this happen? How? I stood by his bed, stunned. A cold wind rattled the window, pelting the panes with snow. Outside—everywhere—seemed a bed of blackness, cold and dark. How could I face his daughter?

When I left the room, I saw her against a wall by a water fountain. A doctor who had been inside 712 only moments before stood at her side, talking to her, gripping her elbow. Then he moved on, leaving her slumped against the wall. Such pathetic hurt reflected from her face. Such wounded eyes. She knew.

The doctor had told her that her father was gone. I took her hand and led her into the nurses' lounge. We sat on little green stools, neither saying a word. She stared straight ahead at a pharmaceutical calendar, glass-faced, almost breakable-looking.

"Janie, I'm so, so sorry" I said. It was pitifully inadequate.

"I never hated him, you know. I loved him" she said.

"God, please help her" I thought.

Suddenly she whirled toward me. "I want to see him."

My first thought was, why put yourself through more pain? Seeing him will only make it worse. But I got up and wrapped my arm around her. We walked slowly down the corridor to 712. Outside the door I squeezed her hand, wishing she would change her mind about going inside. She pushed open the door.

We moved to the bed, huddled together, taking small steps in unison. Janie leaned over the bed and buried her face in the sheets. I tried not to look at her at this sad, sad good-bye. I backed against the bedside table. My hand fell upon a scrap of yellow paper. I picked it up.

It read: "My dearest Janie, I forgive you. I pray you will also forgive me. I know that you love me. I love you too, Daddy"

The note was shaking in my hands as I thrust it toward Janie. She read it once. Then twice. Her tormented face grew radiant. Peace began to glisten in her eyes. She hugged the scrap of paper to her breast.

"Thank you, God" I whispered, looking up at the window. A few crystal stars blinked through the blackness. A snowflake hit the window and melted away, gone forever. Life seemed as fragile as a snowflake on the window.

But thank you, God, that relationships, sometimes fragile as snowflakes, can be mended together again. But there is not a moment to spare.

I crept from the room and hurried to the phone. I would call my father. I would say: "I love you."

The Giant Sucking Sounds In Washington DC

Editor's note: It's no stretch from pinpointing how the United States fell so far down the hill in terms of protecting the health freedom of its citizenry (the main subject of this issue of The SPECTRUM), to identifying the source of the plummeting health of the United States itself.

Some, of a more apologetic or naïve nature, prefer to point their finger everywhere else BUT at the ultimate assemblage of trustees of this nation who are supposed to represent and protect the fundamental principles of government OF the people, BY the people, and FOR the people. Where did our Founding Fathers specify that these ones of sacred trust should act as prostitutes for Special Interests and only pretend to care (when the cameras are rolling) about the actual wellbeing of the United States?

The sickness afflicting this nation causes a lot more than "just" the healthcare stranglehold over the citizenry. And exactly because the nature of this illness is so general, it's refreshing for a concerned and involved citizen to so honestly and courageously state The Truth which so many others of similar awareness are silently thinking.

The author of the following article from the NewsWithViews.com website, Betty Freauf, is a former Oregon Republican Party activist, having served as state party secretary, county chairman, 5th congressional vice chairman, and then elected chairman, a precinct worker for many years, and twice ran unsuccessfully for the Oregon State Legislature. The Republican tradition is to stay neutral in Primary races, but in Betty's case they supported her opponent! That should give you a BIG clue as to the "popularity" of her views. You can contact her at her bettyfreauf@webtv.com email address.

As Mark Twain so appropriately stated the nature of this most chronic problem we face as an American citizenry: "There is no distinctly native, American criminal class—except Congress."

6/9/03 BETTY FREAUF

A June 13, 1945 Portland Oregonian article headline said "Buy An Apple And Help Feed Our Congressmen". It seems blind Dan Mahoney of Portland was selling apples to keep the wolf from biting underpaid Congressmen, whose salaries were $10,000 but there was talk about raising it to at least $15,000.

By today's six-figure salaries, these amounts seem like small potatoes; but in 1945, $10,000 was a lot of money. Inflation had not yet kicked into high gear, caused by our government printing money without gold backing, so prices were low and many annual family incomes were less than what it costs to put braces on a kid's teeth today, yet mothers weren't having to work. A year in a state college cost less than $1,000.

Today—while Americans are writing bad checks, depleting savings accounts, borrowing all they can from relatives or friends, reaching the maximum limit on credit cards or home equity loans, homes are being repossessed, and bankruptcies have been hitting record highs—retired members of Congress are collecting big pensions and perks over their lifetimes.

So the 1945 apple sales must have paid off.

Mark Twain has allegedly said that fleas can be taught nearly everything a Congressman can. Time and time again, this Capitol Hills Royalty has given up its most important authorized power—to the President and to the United Nations—rather than risk losing elections.

Oregon's own infamous Senator Bob Packwood (R-OR) said in 1979 that Congress had given wider powers to the President because then: "If the President acts unwisely, Congress can be rid of the responsibility for making decisions which might make people mad; and members of Congress are not accepting the responsibilities of leadership because they fear public disfavor." Prior to sending our young men and women to Iraq II, we saw ample evidence that this position is still the case today.

Because it is impossible to please all people at all times, why don't these mugwumps simply obey their constitutional oaths and forget about "public disfavor"? A mugwump is one who has his mug on one side of the fence while his wump is on the other. So they speak in vague terms, and itch the ears of any audience they address, and the media pundits protect them by not asking prying questions.

The government body most representative of the American citizens is the one that has been most easily subverted.

Milton William Cooper, in his 1991 book Behold A Pale Horse, said that through PACs, payoffs, pork-barrel politics, professional politicians, congressmen who are members of secret societies, and through greed and fear, our representatives and senators quit representing us long ago.

A speech delivered on March 17, 1993 by Rep. James G. Traficant (D-OH) and made a part of the Congressional Record said that the U.S. is in Chapter 11 bankruptcy. He said: "Members of Congress are official trustees presiding over the greatest reorganization of any bankrupt entity in world history, the U.S. government.... It is an established fact that the United States Federal Government has been dissolved by the Emergency Banking Act, March 9, 1933, 48 Stat. 1, Public Law 89-719, declared by President Roosevelt, being bankrupt and insolvent, H.J.R. 192, 73rd Congress session of June 5, 1933.... The United States Federal Government exists today in name only.”

He stated: “The receivers of the United States bankruptcy are the International Bankers, via the United Nations, the World Bank, and the International Monetary Fund. All United States offices, officials, and departments are now operating within a de facto status, in name only, under Emergency War Powers. With the constitutional Republican form of government now dissolved, the receivers of the bankruptcy have adopted a new form of government for the United States. This new government is known as a Democracy, being an established Socialist/Communist order...”

Journalist Tom Anderson, in Straight Talk (September 1989), said that congressmen and senators are like a bunch of bananas. They come in green and clean. Gradually they turn yellow with dark spots. Finally, they get soft inside, their skins get slippery, and they begin to stink.

But Congressman Traficant was a rare breed indeed. Because he was an outspoken thorn in the side of the powers that be, he was later framed, sent to 7½ years in jail, all the while the media portrayed him as a Forest Gump variety.

Should we be surprised that Traficant stood alone? Publisher Doug Thompson (Capitol Hill Blue) said a few years ago that 117 Congress people had run two or more businesses that went bankrupt, 71 had such bad credit they couldn't get AXP cards, 53 had personal and financial problems so severe they would be denied security clearances, 29 had been accused of spousal abuse, 14 had drug arrests, eight were shoplifters, and even Teddy had left a trail of unpaid debts from past campaigns. (Source: October 1999 McAlvany Newsletter.)

It seems inconceivable that a nation of millions cannot replace the irresponsible elected officials, who check their spines at the Capitol door. But if voting isn't rigged, as I suspect it might very well be, then why do we keep re-electing these incompetent buffoons?

Former presidential candidate Pat Buchanan has said Capitol Hill is a swamp that ought to be drained regardless of the exotic wildlife we have permitted to flourish there. Half of Congress is more socialist than self-proclaimed socialist Bernard Sanders from Vermont. In 1998 Sanders had a constitutional cumulative 33% score for the 105th Congress and was more conservative than more than 196 of his colleagues—20 Republicans and 176 Democrats.

A 12/25/93 Human Events article said Americans—by a margin of 65% to 24%—had a negative view of Congress. But get this: by 51% to 31% they approved of the job their own representatives were doing. Go figure. The dumbing down of Americans (www.deliberatedumbingdown.com) has been a success.

It is impossible for Congress to oversee all the agencies it has created that cause Americans to be guilty of breaking many laws before they get up each morning. Congress is fully responsible for the national mess and the inevitable forthcoming collapse and resulting chaos.

The Plunge Protection Team can only put Band-Aids on the stock market to boost it back up and give the illusion that everything is OK, but when the bubble finally bursts, the Plunge Protection Team is likely to be overwhelmed and run for cover.

The Senate passed Bush's $350 BILLION tax cut in the middle of May. The end of May, President Bush quietly signed a bill raising once again the debt ceiling. We're seeing deflation for the first time since the 1930s. The only area where any inflation still exists is in health insurance and energy costs.

The majority of the members of the House and the Senate seldom read the bills they vote on, leaving that chore to their aides. Ed Rollins, a former GOP consultant and manager of Ronald Reagan's 1984 re-election campaign and later campaign manager for Ross Perot and author of the 1996 book Bare Knuckles And Back Rooms, confirms this fact (page 62) when he says there are few Congress people on the floor during debates, but when it comes time to vote, the bells and whistles go off everywhere and a great procession of members march in from their offices, the gym, or the cloakrooms, and as they file in, party whips tell them how to vote, and for those who were sleeping, someone would vote for them.

And then a 6/5/03 news article said an independent, bipartisan commission wants to change the Constitution to ensure that Congress can be reconstituted quickly if lawmakers are killed in a catastrophic attack such as those of September 11.

What a joke! Haven't we already determined how obsolete they are?

After the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) was passed, Ross Perot called it the “giant sucking sound” of jobs going to Mexico. And while NAFTA, which was fully supported by the GOP and its mouthpiece, Rush Limbaugh, has done great damage to our economy, another giant sucking sound began evolving in Washington DC way back in 1933!

One of our Founding Fathers said: “We've given you a Republic. We hope you can keep it.” Today's Congress has become a lifetime career completely contrary to what our Founding Fathers envisioned 227 years ago.

Let's Call A Spade A Spade!

They stack it thick in Congress,
It's really awful raw;
What should be spread by tractor,
They enact and call it law. ☹

“Stop making promises — you're already elected.”

War To Control Our Health

Rick Martin

In this story, I will expand upon last month's theme of health freedom, the war against vitamins and health foods and other alternative healing and wellness modalities—including the very powerful technology of electromedicine. We will here more deeply explore abuses by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), as well as unfold a strategic action plan for overcoming a long history of “alternative” medical suppression tactics.

It's clear that we live in a drug-oriented society. This is by DESIGN. So many people—especially conventional medical professionals—are trained to think only in terms of pharmaceutical answers to defined medical “conditions” that to even speak of alternative modalities of healing is looked upon as some kind of heresy against the “religion” of medicine.

It is, of course, understood that the information presented here comes from available research sources and is not to be construed as giving medical advice. If you have a medical condition, consult your physician.

With that said, let's begin by noting that it is surely not a difficult equation to link Big Medicine with Big Business—and that marriage includes all the aggressive tactics Big Business has long employed to survive and flourish in a competitive environment. Dr. Matthias Rath, M.D., (website: <http://eu.dr-rath.com>), a courageous leader in the field of health internationally, wrote the following blunt statement about the central role that the pharmaceutical industry plays in shaping the religion of medicine:

[quoting]

The Nature Of The Pharmaceutical Industry

1. The natural purpose and driving force of the pharmaceutical industry is to increase sales of pharmaceutical drugs for ongoing diseases and to find new diseases to market existing drugs.

2. By this very nature, the pharmaceutical industry has no interest in curing diseases.

The eradication of any disease inevitably destroys a multi-billion-dollar market of prescription drugs as a source of revenue. Therefore, pharmaceutical drugs are primarily developed to relieve symptoms, but not to cure.

3. If eradication therapies for diseases are discovered and developed, the pharmaceutical industry has an inherent interest to suppress, discredit, and obstruct these medical breakthroughs in order to make sure that diseases continue as the very basis for a lucrative prescription drug market.

4. The economic interest of the pharmaceutical industry itself is the main reason why no medical breakthrough has been made for the control of the most common diseases such as cardiovascular disease, high blood pressure, heart failure, diabetes, cancer, and osteoporosis, and why these diseases continue like epidemics on a worldwide scale.

5. For the same economic reasons, the pharmaceutical industry has now formed an international cartel by the code name “Codex Alimentarius” with the aim to outlaw any health information in connection with vitamins and to limit free access to natural therapies on a worldwide scale.

6. At the same time, the pharmaceutical companies withhold public information about the effects and risks of prescription drugs, and life-threatening side-effects are omitted or openly denied.

7. In order to assure the status quo of this deception scheme, a legion of pharmaceutical lobbyists is employed to influence legislation, control regulatory agencies (like the FDA), and manipulate medical research and education. Expensive advertising campaigns and PR agencies are used to deceive the public.

8. Millions of people and patients around the world are defrauded twice: A major portion of their income is used up to finance the exploding profits of the pharmaceutical industry. In return, they are offered a medicine that does not even cure.

On the informative www.heall.com/medicalfreedom/codexabuse.html website is a 1998 document titled Abuse Of Codex Alimentarius Cartel And The Berlin Tribunal: Can We Stop It? Dr. Rath led the public tribunal, as well as being a leader in the movement to “Stop The Global Ban On Vitamin Therapies”. That document is an historical indictment of the pharmaceutical industry, originating with IG Farben, and moving forward to include Hoechst, Bayer, and BASF. While that document is too lengthy to include here, I want to at least mention it for those of you wanting an additional good source of historical information on this subject.

Many of you longtime diligent readers of The SPECTRUM already recognize these pharmaceutical Big Business names from many past lessons shared by Dr. Len Horowitz. These same companies, tied directly to the world controlling elite, are part of the mechanism for carrying out the New World Order depopulation agenda—while simultaneously extracting a lot of money from our wallets along the way to achieving that goal.

Consider the following points by Elaine Feuer from her book Innocent Casualties: The FDA's War Against Humanity when looking to compare pharmaceutical drugs with health foods and vitamins:

[quoting]

Drugs Versus Nutrients

Scientists and government regulators refuse to recognize the differences between drugs and nutrients:

- Drugs are foreign to the body, and the body begins to detoxify and eliminate them immediately after they are ingested. Nutrients are essential to the body, which utilizes and stores them for future needs.

- Drugs interfere with the metabolism or biochemical pathways of the body. Nutrients support the metabolism and biochemical pathways.

- Drugs have immediate and specific therapeutic results. Nutrients have broader and much more gradual effects.

- Drugs are often dangerous when taken in combination. Nutrients work best in combination.

- Most drugs (with the exception of antibiotics) alleviate the symptoms, not the disease itself. Nutrients play essential roles in human health because they always deal with the underlying cause of the disease.

- All drugs are toxicants, with many having serious side-effects. Hundreds of people die every day from the ingestion of prescription drugs. Nutrients are natural to the body, and it is their absence that leads to disease.

[later on:]

Since nutrient deficiencies are a component of most diseases, when drugs are prescribed, the underlying cause of the disease is masked and the disease usually worsens. At least 130,000 Americans are killed annually from side-effects of prescription drugs. In a counterclaim filed in federal court against the FDA, Attorney Conrad LeBeau presented documented evidence of 1.3 million deaths in a 10-year period from adverse drug reactions. So why is the FDA spending its time worrying about health foods?

[end quoting]

Why indeed! Such a pursuit by the FDA would make no sense unless they were acting as an agent for the pharmaceutical Big Business interests. And this deception is becoming clear to more and more people every day. And thus the incentive grows among the public to explore and pursue alternative healing modalities.

In the early 1990s, during the introduction of the Dietary Supplement Health And Education Act, Rep. Bill Richardson (sponsor of the bill, along with Senator Orrin Hatch) made the following statement for the House bill:

[quoting]

The exploding costs and inadequacies of our current health system have caused many citizens and health professionals to explore and investigate the use and efficacy of complementary and alternative forms of healthcare. The great interest in dietary supplements reflects the desire of our citizens to have more control over their own healthcare decisions. We must consider, as many of our constituents have, the potential value of dietary supplementation in order to prevent disease and to maintain health and wellness. Scientific research findings continue to show that supplementation of certain nutrients can significantly reduce the incidence of chronic diseases.

[end quoting]

Even a correlation as simple and direct as that stated above would be regarded as a dangerous threat by the moguls of the pharmaceutical empire. They would not accept such an "attack" without a fight. And that fight is actually being conducted on a global scale.

This next article, written in 2001 by Simon Kernow (website: <http://dwij.org>) covers a wide range of points concerning GATT, the FTC, Operation Cure.All, and Codex. It will help to place into perspective a number of tools being used to attack health freedom on a global scale—the level from which operates the Big Business of pharmaceutical drugs:

FREE BLIND MICE

Questionable "Standardization" By
GATT, WHO, WTO, And The FTC

While freedom has different meanings across the cultural spectrum, it is a direct reflection of education, the truth of the information imparted, and the ability of the populous to contribute their interpretation of that information towards the fundamental directives that give shape to that culture—locally or globally. While many embrace the concept of being free, they may be as blind as the mice in the children's fairy tale if misinformation is the hallmark of government and media.

The concept of "One World" has been with us in some shape or form since the dawn of history. On its own, it is a wonderful idea—a Utopia where people everywhere, regardless of race, color, or creed, would live side-by-side in harmony.

It all sounds wonderful and, as we move further into the 21st Century, the idea of "The Global Village" is something that we are encouraged to believe in and embrace. World travel and world trade are a reality. The Internet makes nearly instant communication possible with virtually anyone or any place on the planet. Nation can speak unto nation; the cold war and all of its ramifications have retreated into the mists.

In most of the industrialized world, everyone has food on their plates, at least one car in the garage, a well appointed home, and access to affordable medicine of their choice, while the peoples of the non-industrialized communities benefit from the export of their natural resources, exotic foods, and native crafts worldwide. Spiritual awareness is blossoming, with many embracing doctrines that we would have found positively "cranky" only a decade or two ago.

So what is wrong with this picture?

Basically, the pieces of the scenario that you DON'T see are the issue—those interesting pieces of the jigsaw that just won't fit without some careful manipulation.

One of those ill-fitting pieces is the idea that "standardization" is a necessary requirement of the Global Village—ostensibly to facilitate world trade and understanding. Thus, packaging must carry the same message to everyone, and products must meet a universal standard. At a recent world trade meeting, a document was introduced which required the major trading nations to agree on a "standardization" policy for the production and labeling of all foodstuffs and medicines, an idea which was heartily supported by the World Health Authority. After all, people have a right to know that the products which they are consuming are indeed good for their health. Unfortunately, this piece of helpful legislation has a very sinister "side-effect".

Take a closer look at the label on your herbal tea or vitamin supplement and you will find a little note that reminds you that any statements made by the manufacturers as to the possible benefits of their product "have not been evaluated by the FDA" or

THE WAR ON FREEDOM: THE 9/11 CONSPIRACIES

Was the U.S. invasions of Afghanistan and Iraq planned long before the tragedies of September 11, 2001? Why did many WTC survivors mention bombs? Why did normal security measures consistently fail that day? Why has no one in government been fired or even reprimanded for failure to anticipate and prevent the attacks? For that matter, who was truly behind the strikes? Who and where is Osama bin Laden? What connects the bin Laden and Bush families?

If the purpose of the perpetrators of 9/11 was to end traditional American freedoms, they may well have succeeded. Laws rushed through a Congress that never had a chance to read them while under a declared state of emergency have curtailed our freedoms.

Research for The War On Freedom was begun on September 11, 2001 and culminated in a contract with a major New York publisher. Despite passing a legal review and the excited interest of the editors, the book was suddenly canceled with the explanation that it may "upset the families of 9/11 victims". These families, as well as the public, deserve the truth, even if it is not "politically correct". Here are the uncensored facts; judge for yourself.

MAFF (Ministry of Agriculture Farming and Fisheries, if you live in Europe) and that the product is “not intended to diagnose, treat, cure, or prevent any disease”.

Another statement starts with the phrase: “Dietary Supplement: Not intended for...” The meaning is the same.

Herbal or natural products that are not produced by pharmaceutical companies cannot claim to have any beneficial properties; they are not scientifically approved or clinically tried medicines, so how can they be anything other than food supplements?

All this—if the officers of GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade), WHO (World Health Organization), WTO (World Trade Organization), and the FTC (Federal Trade Commission) have their way—is about to change.

Under the guise of “standardization”, any food, herb, or natural product that is known to have medicinal properties will have to be manufactured and controlled by the pharmaceutical companies, who will set “standards” and prices. Health food stores will only be able to offer products with low or very low potencies (agreed upon by the pharmaceutical companies), and there will be no “confusion” as to what is food or what is medicine.

“And what is wrong with that?” you may ask.

Herbal medicines are as old as history; their benefits are known to, and appreciated by, millions of people all over the world, and to many in different parts of the world they are the only medicine which is available and affordable. Once the new requirements of the bill (which is becoming known as Operation Cure.All) are fully implemented, the pharmaceutical companies world-wide will have total control over any food that may have medicinal properties, and THEY will decide what products will be freely available, where they can be sold, what price you will pay, and which products should be available only with a physician’s prescription.

Imagine the scenario where you may need a prescription for a simple herbal sweetener. No need to imagine!

In the United Kingdom, the herb stevia, a natural alternative to sugar, has been declared a “novelty food” and its sale banned. (Not surprisingly, the strongest lobbying for this measure came from the sugar refiners.) No one, however, has sought to ban the sale of other manufactured “artificial sweeteners”—although the harmful side-effects of Aspartame are well known but not readily available to the general public. (See Nancy Markle’s article Diet Drink Anyone? Newsletter Vol. 5, issue 6d, at the www.healthfree.com website.)

Sufferers from diabetes who have relied on stevia for their “treats” are currently seeking supplies from more liberal-minded countries, but Operation Cure.All will soon cure that.

The policies outlined in this document are already law in Norway (where an extract of echinacea can only be produced and marketed by one pharmaceutical company) and Germany. Legislation will soon be in place to force all member countries of the European Economic Community (EEC) to fall in line. Nations who fall outside of this consortium will not be immune from this dictate, as trade embargos, exorbitant export levies, and other trade sanctions will be brought to bear on any malcontents who fail to comply.

Stevia, incidentally, is not the only herb to fall victim to “legislation”. Herbs such as comfrey (symphytum officinale), aloe vera, roman chamomile (chamaemelum nobile) and eucalyptus (eucalyptus globulus) are already subject to legal restrictions in some countries.

Cast your mind back five years and recall how the traditional medical profession emphatically denied the value of supplements, herbs, and alternative healthcare. Is it not interesting to note that, since realizing how many millions of dollars are spent annually on these items, the pharmaceutical companies (who have a large vested interest in what doctors prescribe) are now so keen to acknowledge that there may indeed be some very real benefits in those “folk medicines”—to the extent that they want global control?

For those of you who appreciate and depend on herbal, homeopathic, or alternative therapies, take heed: every signatory of the GATT trade agreement is required to comply with this ruling before the end of the year 2002. The United States, Canada, Japan, most of Asia, and South America have already signed agreements pledging total harmonization of their food and drug laws with these international standards.

No one would argue with the common sense of warning a prospective user of any contra-indications that exist for a particular herb or oil, and of the very real dangers of trying to self-diagnose a serious illness. The recommended daily amount (RDA) is already used as a standard guideline across the world, and a universally accepted common language for herbs, herbals, and homeopathics already exists—it is called botanical Latin. (Stevia is stevia rebaudiana anywhere in the world.) Those who fervently believe that herbal medicine is hogwash and that alternative practitioners are a bunch of charlatans, watch out when you reach for your bottle of “spring water”—as it may have healing properties and very soon you might need a prescription for it. Everyday edibles such as garlic and peppermint could also be categorized as drugs.

To understand the full implications of Codex Alimentarius (“food code”), you should read The Sinister Truth Behind Operation Cure.All by Ruth James [which appears later in this article]. She can be contacted by e-mail at rjames@therealessentials.com.

Advances in information technology and the Internet have made global communication possible, but much of what we read is couched in sound bites and “news-speak” (a phrase coined by George Orwell in his novel called 1984) designed to encourage us to buy, buy, buy, or simply to hide the real truth behind statements which we are urged to believe.

(Consider the chain store, for example, that advertises items as being on SALE for much lower than the regular price, while conveniently omitting the fact there is only one, or very few, of these items available in their store. Or, to cite another example of Orwellian news-speak: "The price of this bar of chocolate has been reduced." What they do not disclose is the fact that the weight of your bar of chocolate has also been reduced, and that you are effectively paying the same price for 3 ounces as you paid for 4 ounces last year.)

This is the first in-depth exploration into the origins of HIV and Ebola. Claims that these “emerging viruses” naturally evolved and then jumped species from ape to man seem grossly unfounded in light of the compelling evidence assembled in this extraordinary text. Alternatively, the possibility that these bizarre germs were laboratory creations, accidentally or intentionally transmitted via tainted Hepatitis and smallpox vaccines in the U.S. and Africa—as numerous authorities have alleged—is investigated herein.

This book reviews the numerous viral vaccine studies conducted simultaneously in New York City and Central West Africa by a narrow network of virologists working for major military-medical contractors under the auspices of the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and the World Health Organization (WHO). The text presents bizarre and horrifying facts about the biological weapons race of the 1960s and early 1970s when researchers developed countless immune-system-ravaging viruses and experimented with antidote vaccines allegedly for “defense” and cancer prevention.

We all know that there are some who are using this technology for more malefic purposes and they should rightly be brought to book, but when "in the interests of national security" actually translates as "more limitations on civil liberty", there is something wrong with the picture. The flaw in the perfect idea of the Global Village is the hidden element of Global Control or World Domination.

Throughout history there has always been one person (Genghis Khan, Julius Caesar, Napoleon Bonaparte, Adolph Hitler, Mao Tse Tung, Pol Pot), one body (the orthodox Christian church, [the Catholic church], the Communists, the Capitalists, the Islamic Fundamentalists), or one industrial conglomerate whose goal has been world domination through their products. They have all tried to impose their will on the populace—in many cases by censoring what people read or listen to. Reading is knowledge, and an educated, well-informed population is more difficult to control.

In ancient times only the elite were taught how to read and write, for this very reason. The Catholic church ordered the burning of all books that could be deemed heretical and, more recently, the leaders of South Africa legislated that Blacks should receive only the most rudimentary education (in order that they could not question the rightness of apartheid). Today, it is the Taliban who prohibit women from education, thus ensuring their subjugation to the males, who regard them only as brood mares—incapable of intelligent thoughts, and with no more rights than cattle.

Optimally, we believe and trust that those who we elect, in a democratic process, will govern us and do so with integrity and wisdom of the highest order.

[Editor's note: While "optimally" that would be nice, SPECTRUM readers no doubt have a more realistic view concerning the implementation of that utopian statement in our present corrupt society.]

The truth may not always be the sweetest medicine to swallow, but in the end, it is the bitterness of lies and deceit that leads to social unrest, and allows the less scrupulous elements in our world to incite hatred and acts of terrorism; ordinary people are told that they must be prepared to sacrifice their civil liberties in the name of democracy and freedom. History has shown that, once lost, those liberties are never regained, and the voice of the people is drowned in the shouting of those with money and vested interest.

For 6 billion souls, whether they are all aware of it or not, the Global Village is a reality. Six billion souls! How many languages, creeds, and cultures from this rich human tapestry will be lost, in the name of "standardization" when one Global Government prevails? It is vital that we all understand the REAL implications of what is being said, or being fed to us daily, and that we educate ourselves so that we can recognize those little things, of vital importance, that are "conveniently" left out.

Remember that, while you embrace the concept of being free, without sterling information to guide you, you may become as blind as the mice in this [modified] children's fairy tale:

Free blind mice, free blind mice;
See how they run, see how they run.
They all ran after Mendacity's wife,
Who cut off their heads by creating strife;
Did you ever see such a thing in your life,
As free blind mice?

If it becomes law, the Codex Alimentarius will not only affect your quality of life, it will also decide how the future is shaped for your children and your grandchildren, even before they are born.

[end quoting]

Mendacity, in plain language, means lying, and surely the so-called government agencies "protecting" us from fraudulent health items are guided by their corporate sponsors to take lying to new heights of deception in the name of Big Business interests. This next item is a good example of that exercise.

On June 14, 2001, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) released this statement for the press concerning Operation Cure.All. It appears on their official www.ftc.gov website and, not surprisingly, directly attacks the Internet because of the ability of that medium to circumvent the long established mechanisms for keeping information from the public:

Anthrax, Smallpox, Vaccinations, And The Mark Of The Beast!

by Dr. Leonard Horowitz

If you are one of the millions of people concerned about recent bioterrorist threats in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks on America, prepare yourself for a reality check. This shocking video analysis of the little known facts regarding threatened outbreaks, and the science, economics, and global politics underlying bioterrorism and forced vaccinations, features one of America's most riveting speakers. Among the world's foremost authorities on the subject of bioterrorism, vaccination risks, and public health, Dr. Horowitz's expert diagnosis here dovetails perfectly with Bible prophecies. Pay special attention to his disclosures regarding the infamous "Mark of the Beast". Dr. Horowitz reveals sacred Bible codes that give expanded meaning to the infamous "666" prophecy (Rev. 13:18) while implicating widely trusted vaccinations, medical biochips, politicians, and institutions that have advanced some of the most horrific population-controlling ploys ever conceived. Anthrax, smallpox, and vaccinations are all part of the same deadly swindle. Watching this video may do more than raise awareness. It may help save millions of lives!

Star Wars Weapons And End Times Warfare!

by Dr. Leonard Horowitz

If power is the game, and population control the aim, the world's most advanced weapons and energy technologies would be directed from space. Star Wars Weapons would be able to change everything from the weather to people's moods, thoughts, behavior, and health.

Have you noticed the weather has been changing? Are you like millions of people who no longer feel as good as you know you should for your age? Welcome to the new world of electromagnetically managed chaos heralded by U.S. National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski in his book The Technotronic Era.

In this video presentation, Dr. Leonard Horowitz, an award-winning internationally-known public health authority, discusses these technologies for war-making and population control. He explains how toxic metals and human genetics can now be manipulated from space, providing an insidious arsenal with which to conduct genocide in the name of "national security" and the New World Order's "war on terrorism".

Operation Cure.All Wages New Battle In Ongoing War Against Internet Health Fraud

FTC, FDA, and other law enforcement agencies move to stop Internet scams for supplements and other products that purport to cure cancer, HIV/AIDS, and countless other life-threatening diseases. FTC also warns of risks associated with some supplements, including drug interactions.

As part of an ongoing and comprehensive law enforcement and consumer education campaign begun in 1997, the Federal Trade Commission today announced a new round of enforcement actions against the fraudulent marketing of supplements and other health products on the Internet. The FTC's action is part of a coordinated effort with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), Health Canada, and various state Attorneys General to crack down on unscrupulous marketers who use the Internet to prey on the sickest and most vulnerable consumers.

The six new FTC enforcement actions target companies marketing a variety of devices, herbal products, and other dietary supplements to treat or cure cancer, HIV/AIDS, arthritis, hepatitis, Alzheimer's, diabetes, and many other diseases.

Among the many products for which unfounded claims were being made were a DHEA hormonal supplement, St. John's Wort, various multi-herbal supplements, colloidal silver, and a variety of electrical therapy devices. The FTC's cases were also prompted by representations by some marketers that their products are safe when, in fact, there may be potentially dangerous interactions with other medications.

Among the many false and unsubstantiated claims challenged in today's cases were promises that:

- people could cancel their surgery, radiation, or chemotherapy in favor of herbal cures that cost hundreds of dollars;

- a device that delivered mild electric current would kill the parasites that cause such serious diseases as cancer and Alzheimer's; and

- those with HIV or AIDS could use St. John's Wort as a safe treatment for the disease. In fact, the FTC alleged, there is inadequate evidence to support the use of the herb to treat AIDS. Indeed, St. John's Wort is known to interfere with proven HIV/AIDS medications.

"Many of the websites targeted today are jeopardizing the health and safety of consumers with outlandish promises and false hope" said FTC Chairman Timothy J. Muris. "Unfortunately, examples of questionable products being peddled on the Web abound, and the Federal Trade Commission, with its partners, will step up its efforts to protect consumers from these compelling but deceptive health claims."

"The Internet provides many benefits. But, its unique qualities—including its broad reach, relative anonymity, and ease of creating new websites or removing old ones—pose new enforcement challenges" said Bernard A. Schwetz, DVM, Ph.D.,

Acting Commissioner of the FDA. "FDA and the FTC are working together to protect the public from those who try to take advantage of consumers through this new technology."

"Health Canada fully shares the concerns of the U.S. FDA and FTC about the potential public health risks involved in the marketing of untested, unlicensed, and in some cases fraudulent and dangerous drugs and devices. In an era of globalization, it is a problem that knows no borders, and intergovernmental cooperation is essential. Health Canada accordingly welcomes opportunities to work with its U.S. and other international counterparts to ensure that devices and drugs are safe and effective, and that they are compliant with the regulations and laws put in place to protect the public" said Danièle Dionne, Associate Director General, Health Products and Food Branch, Health Canada.

Today's announcement by the FTC marks the fourth group of targeted enforcement actions to address marketing of unproven health products on the Internet. The cases in this phase of Operation Cure.All, like earlier cases, often involve dramatic treatment and cure claims, often for a multitude of serious diseases. Some of the cases also raise serious safety implications.

Those more cynical among you readers might have noticed that, with only a slight adjustment in the wording, the above statement pretty much accurately spells out the dangers inherent in the pharmaceutical Commentary: Freedom Of Healthcare Choice By Renowned Expert James E. Bare, D.C.

Editor's note: Just as we are going to press with this issue of The SPECTRUM, I (E.Y.) received a wonderful letter about last month's SPECTRUM from a longtime courageous scientist, healer, and crusader of the highest renown in the field of electromedicine and related natural healing modalities. What Dr. Jim Bare had to say is MUST reading for our entire SPECTRUM readership, and thus I share his letter here.

We are, without any doubt, on the verge of a health freedom revolution here in the United States. The anger is building as more and more people awaken to the choices that are ACTUALLY available to address their health concerns—choices that have long been suppressed while shoving down people's throats (perhaps literally) the sometimes barbaric and frequently poisonous options that the pharmaceutical cartel would like us all to believe are our only options.

6/28/03 JAMES E. BARE, D.C.

I would like to congratulate Rick Martin on his excellent article in the July 2003 issue of The SPECTRUM magazine. The article touches upon many subjects, but one in particular is the subject of this letter.

Freedom Of Healthcare Choice will be the next great constitutional issue which faces our country. Freedom of choice in healthcare is fundamental to a society based upon the principles of personal liberty.

Rick Martin's article on Royal Rife begins with the disclaimer: "If you have a medical condition, consult your physician." There is a great legal issue within this statement which is no reflection on Mr. Martin.

That is, there is a governmental quasi-legal assumption that medical physicians have some sort of absolute control and monopoly over the concept of health. There is also the assumption that only the medical profession can provide a definition of what constitutes health and how to restore it.

The elimination of this derisive ideology from lawmakers' and regulators' psyches alike is a fundamental requirement for healthcare freedom.

To make a point, what must be said and thought is that, if you are industry—as opposed to the alternative healing modalities they’re actually going after, to “protect” us.

Naturally, there’s a lot more to Operation Cure.All than the officially stated purpose outlined above. Let’s now look at what Ruth James (website: www.therealessentials.com) had to say on this matter in a 2001 report:

[quoting]

The Sinister Truth Behind Operation Cure.All

What’s really behind Operation Cure.All? Is it just the FDA and FTC taking their power too far? Or is there a deeper, more sinister purpose to this campaign?

How could a country that prides itself on its freedom of speech, freedom of choice, and freedom of information be facing such severe restrictions in health freedom and dietary supplements? Haven’t the people made their will known? Didn’t our government pass the Dietary Supplement Health & Education Act Of 1994 to insure our right to health supplements?

Indeed, our government did. But the FDA and FTC have found ways to get around that. The laws put in place to protect us are being ignored. And what’s worse is that those laws are about to be superseded, if the powers-that-be have their way.

Operation Cure.All Is Just One Means To An End

You see, Operation Cure.All is just a tactic, a vehicle, in a much bigger overall plan. It is a result of Codex Alimentarius (meaning “food code”)—a set of regulations that aim to outlaw any health information in connection with vitamins, and limit free access to natural therapies on a worldwide scale.

What’s Behind Codex ?

Behind the Codex Alimentarius Commission is the United Nations and the World Health Organization, working in conjunction with the multinational pharmaceutical cartel and international banks. Its initial efforts in the U.S. with the FDA were defeated, so it found another ally in the FTC. Now Codex, with the FTC and the pharmaceutical cartel behind it, threatens to become a trade issue, using the campaign of Operation Cure.All to advance its goals.

Codex began simply enough when the U.N. authorized the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization to develop a universal food code. Their purpose was to “harmonize” regulations for dietary supplements worldwide and set international safety standards for the purposes of increasing trade—to standardize labeling and regulatory requirements between countries to facilitate increased international trade.

Pharmaceutical interests stepped-in and began exerting their influence. Instead of focusing on food safety, Codex is using its power to promote worldwide restrictions on vitamins and food supplements, severely limiting their availability and dosages.

Real Goals Of Codex

This is to bring about international “harmonization”. While global harmony sounds benign, is that the real purpose of this plan? While the stated goal of Codex is to establish unilateral regulations for dietary supplements in every country, the actual goal is to outlaw health products and information on vitamins and dietary supplements, except those under their direct control. These regulations would supercede United States domestic laws without the American people’s voice or vote in the matter.

How Can It Be Possible?

Americans gasp at the thought. It goes against everything America stands for. Many believe this can’t be possible. The truth is: it’s not only possible, it’s required by the Codex agreement.

In fact, under the terms of the Uruguay Round of GATT, which created the World Trade Organization, the United States agreed to harmonize its domestic laws to the international standards. This includes standards for dietary supplements being developed by the United Nation’s Codex Alimentarius Commission’s Committee on Nutrition and Foods for Special Dietary Use.

The Uruguay Round Agreements carry explicit language clearly indicating that the ill and do not have a medical condition, “please consult a NATURAL healthcare professional”.

The FDA and FTC assault on certain so-called “medical devices” is an intent to maintain the medical monopolistic trust. So blatant has been the monopolistic behavior of the AMA, that it has lost antitrust suits to the chiropractic, optometric, and dental professions.

Irrespective of criminal findings and tort losses, the medical monopolists control the behavior of government. The FDA and the FTC, under direction of medically indoctrinated individuals, carries out suppressive actions on non-medical treatments and devices that threaten the medical monopoly.

It is fundamental that the FDA acknowledge that there are medical and non-medical types of instruments. There are instruments that are used and accepted within the medical profession, and there are instruments accepted and used by the natural healthcare professions.

For example, the medical profession disavows the use of “Rife”-type instruments. They do not lecture on it, teach it, or implement it in their profession. It is very clear that “Rife”-type instruments are not medical devices.

Let us all understand that there are certainly medical devices. But there are also chiropractic, naturopathic, acupuncture, massage, and so on, devices!

“Rife”-type instruments are used within many of the natural healthcare professions, and should rightly be considered as a chiropractic, naturopathic, and so on, device. What the medical profession decides about non-medical devices has absolutely nothing to do with what the natural healthcare professions have decided about the same devices.

Just because some device has “no medical benefit” doesn’t mean it does not have benefit to the patient! Ever hear of a situation where the FDA or FTC claims a device has “no naturopathic benefit” and then raid an MD’s office who is using the device?

For those who are ignorant of history, the FDA has conducted numerous raids over the decades on the offices of non-medical professionals. They have confiscated and destroyed devices that were in widespread acceptance and usage within natural healthcare professions. These are devices that experts within the natural health professions accepted as valid and of benefit to patients.

The chiropractic profession has suffered the brunt of these abuses. I have talked to doctors who have had their offices raided, devices confiscated, and then literally smashed to pieces with an axe or sledgehammer in their parking lots. All because someone, ignorant of a differing healing reality, decided the device had no benefit.

The United States currently has over 200,000 licensed and non-licensed natural healthcare professionals. There are about 69,000 licensed Doctors of Chiropractic and 85,000 Licensed Massage Therapists. There are

U.S. must harmonize to international standards:

"Members are fully responsible under this Agreement for the observance of all provisions.... Members shall formulate and implement positive measures and mechanisms in support of the observance of the provisions...by other than central government bodies." [WTO TBT Agreement at Article 3.5]

In other words, the federal government must NOT ONLY CHANGE FEDERAL LAW, but must ALSO require state and local governments to change their laws as well to be in accordance with international law.

Not only that, but Codex is now enforceable through the World Trade Organization (WTO). If a country disagrees with or refuses to follow Codex standards, the WTO applies pressure by withdrawing trade privileges and imposing crippling trade sanctions. Congress has already bowed to this pressure several times and so have the governments of many countries.

While the exemption clause [USC 3512(a)(1) and (a)(2)] was created to supposedly protect our laws from harmonization to international standards, it has proven to be totally ineffective. The United States has already lost seven trade disputes despite the exemption clause. Due to the enormous pressures put on them by lobbyists from multinational corporations (who contribute millions to congressional campaigns), Congress bowed to pressure and changed U.S. laws.

It appears our government is being manipulated one way or another to serve the goals of the UN, the World Health Organization, and the World Trade Organization. Food control equals people control—and population control. Is this beginning to sound like World Government and One-World Order? Could this be the REAL goal behind Codex?

The United States, Canada, the Europeans, Japan, most of Asia, and South America have already signed agreements pledging total harmonization of their laws, including food and drug laws to these international standards in the future.

What Codex Will Bring

What can we expect under Codex? To give you an idea, here are some important points:

- Dietary supplements could not be sold for preventive (prophylactic) or therapeutic use.
- Potencies would be limited to extremely low dosages. Only the drug companies and the big phyto-pharmaceutical companies would have the right to produce and sell the higher potency products (at inflated prices).
- Prescriptions would be required for anything above the extremely low doses allowed (such as 35 mg of niacin).
- Common foods, such as garlic and peppermint, would be classified as drugs or a third category (neither food nor drugs) that only big pharmaceutical companies could regulate and sell. Any food with any therapeutic effect can be considered a drug, even benign everyday substances like water.

- Codex regulations for dietary supplements would become binding (escape clauses would be eliminated).

- All new dietary supplements would be banned unless they go through Codex testing and approval.

- Genetically altered food would be sold worldwide without labeling.

According to John Hammell, a legislative advocate and the founder of International Advocates for Health Freedom (IAHF), here is what we have to look forward to:

"If Codex Alimentarius has its way, then herbs, vitamins, minerals, homeopathic remedies, amino acids, and other natural remedies you have taken for granted most of your life will be gone. The name of the game for Codex is to shift all remedies into the prescription category so they can be controlled exclusively by the medical monopoly and its bosses, the major pharmaceutical firms. Predictably, this scenario has been denied by both the Canadian Health Food Association and the Health Protection Branch of Canada (HPB).

"The Codex proposals already exist as law in Norway and Germany, where the entire health food industry has literally been taken over by the drug companies. In these countries, Vitamin C above 200 mg is illegal, as is Vitamin E above 45 IU, Vitamin B1 over 2.4 mg, and so on. Shering-Plough, the Norway pharmaceutical giant, now thousands of licensed Naturopaths and Doctors of Osteopathic Medicine, as well as other non-licensed professionals, accounting for well over the aforementioned 200,000 natural healthcare practitioners. These natural healthcare providers treat tens of millions of Americans yearly.

In the November 1998 issue of the Journal Of The American Medical Association, the AMA disclosed that, in 1997, there were 386 million visits to primary care MDs and 629 million visits to the offices of natural healthcare practitioners! One must understand that visits to the natural healthcare providers were paid mostly out of the consumers' pocket, and were not covered by insurance. In spite of the disparity in utilization, the medical profession monopolistically accounts for about 96% of the healthcare spending in the USA.

The FDA and the FTC completely ignore the opinions and research of the many qualified experts who exist within the natural healthcare professions. The FDA and FTC wholly and absolutely rely upon concepts and ideologies created within the medical model. There is reason to believe and claim that the FDA and the FTC are ignoring the will and intent of the American people, and have become little more than strong-arm enforcement lackeys of a monopoly.

The Congress of the United States has differentiated the practice of chiropractic from that of medicine through many different laws. Laws covering Medicare, federal workman's compensation, veteran benefits, and enlistment within the active armed forces are different for chiropractors than for medical doctors. For the FDA and the FTC to equate the practice of chiropractic with medicine, through regulation, is not in accord with federal law.

The FDA and FTC have been remiss in developing regulations that apply to devices utilized within the natural healthcare community. They have failed to recognize the unique methods, and empirically based results, which provide treatment techniques and methodologies to the natural healthcare professions.

The FDA and FTC are out of step with the desires of the American public and have lost the confidence of many tens of millions of Americans. The FDA and FTC are not doing their job. They are, however, doing an excellent job of protecting a very large monopoly.

In the U.S.A. we have a right to free speech, but commercial speech can be regulated. The FTC and the FDA can and do regulate commercial speech. The problem is that they try to make the natural healthcare professions speak "medical" when they do not. The natural healthcare professions have their own speech that is based upon the unique healing philosophy within each profession.

Just because some MD or medically indoctrinated bureaucrat can't grasp the concepts of yin and yang, subluxations, or subtle energies, does not mean the FDA and FTC can force anyone to conform! That is a very clear violation of the First Amendment.

controls an Echinacea tincture, which is being sold there as an over-the-counter drug at grossly inflated prices. The same is true of Ginkgo and many other herbs, and only one government-controlled pharmacy has the right to import supplements as medicines which they can sell to health food stores, convenience stores or pharmacies."

It is now a criminal offence in parts of Europe to sell herbs as foods. An agreement called EEC6565 equates selling herbs as foods to selling other illegal drugs. Action is being taken to accelerate other European countries into "harmonization" as well.

Paul Hellyer, In His Book
The Evil Empire, States:

"Codex is supported by international banks and multinational corporations, including some in Canada, and is in reality a bill of rights for these banks and the corporations they control. It will hand over our sovereign rights concerning who may or may not invest in our countries to an unelected world organization run by big business. The treaty would make it impossible for Canadian legislators, either federal or provincial, to alter or improve environmental standards for fear of being sued by multinational corporations, whether operating in Canada or not.

This will create a world without borders, ruled by a virtual dictatorship of the world's most powerful central banks and multinational companies.

This world is an absolute certainty if we all sit on our hands and do nothing.

This is the future the FDA and FTC are striving to bring us via Codex harmonization. Is this a future we are going to willingly accept or prevent?

Why Target The Internet ?

It is no accident that the FDA and FTC are targeting Internet health sites through Operation Cure.All. We are standing in the doorway of an unprecedented revolution—the information revolution brought about by the Internet.

Now all people everywhere have the ability to learn about anything that interests them, with just a few clicks. History has shown that informed, educated people change civilizations—they change the flow of thought and they change the flow of money. They can even change the direction of a country.

When similar transitions have happened in the past, the powers that existed did not give up willingly. The Catholic church fiercely protected its practice of selling "indulgences" as a forgiveness of sin. When the practice was abolished, the Catholic church lost a great deal of power and money.

When the printing press was invented, books were banned and printers were imprisoned by the authorities, who feared an educated public could not be governed.

In the same way, the medical monopoly and the UN now fear that a public educated in health and privy to the shortcomings of modern medicine could not be controlled.

Loss of control means loss of revenue and loss of power. And they are doing everything they can to stop progress so they can contain their losses and strengthen their power.

The printing press changed the world. Can you imagine what life would be like today if the book banners had their way? But because the printing press won out, society progressed and freedom was embraced. The Internet is changing the world in an equally significant way. While the entire Internet can hardly be suppressed, the pharma-cartels and their backers are looking to protect their interests by restricting as much information as they can on the Internet.

Will we, the people, win out again—or will the pharmaceutical cartel change the course of history and take us back to the "dark ages" of medicine?

What Can We Do?

Step Number One is to learn as much as possible about this issue. Here are some websites where you will find a great deal of information:

- John Hammell's www.iahf.com/index2.html International Advocates for Health Freedom website.

- "Codex Alimentarius Commission: A Threat To Mankind" article from Dr. Rath's www.drath.com website.

- "The Nature Of The Pharmaceutical Industry" article on Dr. Rath's website.

- "U.S. And European Leaders Agree On

As long as the professional is using speech that is accepted within his or her own profession, the FDA and FTC has no ability to regulate it! FDA evaluation of non-medical devices by those indoctrinated with medical philosophy is another direct violation of constitutional rights.

The FDA and FTC have adopted a legal viewpoint that those who are natural healthcare professionals practice "alternative medicine". Such assignments are prejudiced nonsense.

Medicine is not the practice of chiropractic, naturopathy, acupuncture, or massage. The acceptance of such a philosophy is like considering people of color "alternative caucasians" or that MDs are practicing "alternative chiropractic".

Each profession is unique; each profession has a different philosophy and speech. There is a diversity in the treatment of disease, just as there is a diversity in Americans. The same freedoms that apply to religions, cultures, philosophies, speech, and races, must also apply to health!

Yet the FDA and FTC try to make everyone conform to one healthcare model. This philosophy has failed. This failure has resulted in the abuse of the natural healing professions and the promotion of a monopoly.

Ultimately, it has been the health, as well as the pocketbooks, of the American public which have suffered. Healthcare freedom is a modern civil rights issue, with the people on one side and a century of "Jim Crow" legislation, regulation, and thought on the other. The government needs to align itself with the will of the people. The FDA and FTC must recognize there has been a fundamental shift in public attitude, and their regulations must be significantly revised.

There is a very significant amount of civil disobedience within America at this moment regarding the selling and utilization of devices which the FDA and FTC have classified as having "no medical benefit". These devices do have tremendous patient benefit.

For example, in just discussing frequency devices, there are a good 100,000 Beck Pulsers, several thousand EMEMs, hundreds of thousands of Clark Zappers, well over 25,000 electrode-style Rife instruments, a couple of thousand other plasma-based frequency devices, many thousands of other types of frequency instruments, and a good 6000 of my devices in the United States. All totaled, well over 400,000 individual frequency devices are currently being used to treat the "non-medical" health problems of Americans. Not a single one of these hundreds of thousands of instruments has FDA or FTC approval.

Like the 1960s, the American public has decided that freedom is something they would rather go to prison for, than to surrender to a government law or regulation. The American public no longer supports bigoted, conformist regulations and the monopolistic gerrymandering behavior of their government. The Civil Rights issue of Freedom of Choice in Healthcare must be immediately addressed at a legislative level!

An oversight hearing was held in March, but the truth was not allowed to come out. Witnesses who could have exposed what was going on were denied the opportunity to testify. Congress is strongly resisting another Codex hearing, telling their constituents it is not necessary. This could not be further from the truth.

Clearly the multinational corporations and banks, acting as instruments for the world elite controllers, feel they have the upper hand when it comes to controlling our health, due to public ignorance and apathy. Make sure your friends and family understand what is afoot that is working secretly to make even those peppermint candycanes on the Christmas tree a prescription item!

It is always the insiders who know what is really going on behind the scenes. And it is through the few conscientious insiders, who bravely step forward to share what they know, that we are given a glimpse into what is really happening. Dr. Herbert Ley, former FDA Commissioner, provides us with a glimpse of Truth:

“The thing that bugs me is that the people think the FDA is protecting them. It isn’t. What the FDA is doing and what the public thinks it’s doing are as different as night and day.”

With that blunt revelation to mull over, let’s consider some excerpts of equally blunt counter-measure advice appearing on the www.rmhiherbal.org website, by Roger Wicke, PhD:

[quoting]

Stop FDA Attempts To Restrict Availability Of Herbs And Natural Products

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) persists in attempting to restrict the availability of herbal products by regulations, in spite of public outrage. Suggestions for political strategy in defeating these trends are outlined. Note: this article is of an educational nature and should not be construed as providing legal advice.

Introduction

In spite of recent passage of the Dietary Supplement and Health Education Act (DSHEA) by Congress, which was intended to protect the access of consumers to nutritional supplements and herbal products, the FDA is currently proposing GMP (“Good Manufacturing Practice”) regulations that could potentially jeopardize the viability of small herbal product manufacturers. If proposed regulations requiring expensive lab testing are adopted, small herbal businesses may be forced to close due to the burdensome expenses these regulations may impose.

Similar legislation is being promoted worldwide by the pharmaceutical cartels, both on an individual national level and through an international treaty proposal referred to as Codex. The FDA has claimed that it wants input from the community of professional herbalists and manufacturers before drafting final versions of its proposals.

The unstated purpose of the FDA, and similar organizations in many other countries, is and always has been the protection of major pharmaceutical company profits. Expensive testing protocols act as a way to keep drugs and herbs within the control of the international cartels.

While such tests may make sense for newly synthesized drugs with no track record in cultural tradition or popular usage, they are inappropriate for herb and food products, especially those with a long history of usage.

The FDA must be held within its lawful authority as defined by Congress, and any unlawful exercise of power beyond this must be stopped.

While recent legislative actions to restrict herbal products in Australia, New Zealand, Canada, or Great Britain may have relevance for U.S. herbalists, through no merit of our own generation we have more legal and constitutional protections against government abuse than citizens of these other countries of the former British empire.

Due to an accident of history, American citizens are not subjects of a monarchy or parliamentary government that rules largely at its own discretion, but are, IN PRINCIPLE, sovereign citizens whose rights, recognized by the Constitution, cannot be abrogated by any government action. This fact has had considerable impact on the protection of individual rights and liberties in U.S. legal practice and is not merely a theoretical or quaint distinction.

DEATH IN THE AIR: GLOBALISM, TERRORISM & TOXIC WARFARE

This book explains how and why:

- We have evolved from the nuclear age into a “Technotronic Era” with “psychotronic warfare” for optimal population control.
- Non-lethal warfare is being effectively used to produce sociopolitical and economic outcomes consistent with global genocide.
- The world’s wealthiest policy-makers have recommended, and are working toward, eliminating half the world’s population.
- Accepted methods of disease prevention, such as pesticide sprayings, can only be scientifically rationalized as costly and deadly contributions to non-lethal warfare and population reduction.
- Chemtrail sprayings that obscure blue skies are not normal, but reflect a conspiracy of silence and military attacks on the health and welfare of people around the world.

Striking at the heart of those responsible for the latest forms of bio-terrorism, psychotronic warfare, and ecological genocide, the revelations contained in this book offer more than a reality check—they give you and your loved ones a final, last-minute choice for survival.

It would be sad indeed if, through ignorance, we failed to utilize these protections, and by so failing, lost them entirely.

Since the early 1990s, Gestapo-like actions by the FDA against health practitioners around the country have escalated, and public outrage over this behavior pressured Congress to pass legislation (DSHEA) protecting the availability of nutritional supplements and herbs. To understand why the FDA might have chosen to engage in such behavior, let's examine what undercover agents, intelligence operatives trained in torture techniques, and law enforcement officials know as the "Mutt and Jeff" routine as described in the U.S. Supreme Court case of Miranda vs. Arizona.

In the first step of this routine, "Mutt", the burly henchman, tortures, threatens, and abuses the victim without mercy. When the victim appears near breaking, a kindly "Jeff" appears to relieve the victim's suffering, offering a path to salvation by giving in to "reasonable" demands.

If the kindly Jeff's suggestions are rejected, the threat of Mutt is ever in the background. (The author extends apologies to anyone whose real name is Jeff.) Terrorism, whether sponsored by rogue organizations or governments, often takes this form: the stick and the ever-so-reasonable carrot.

Is it merely a coincidence that the current worldwide push for Codex-type legislation restricting the availability of herbal products worldwide has been preceded by acts of FDA-sponsored terrorism? Were these acts of terrorism intended to soften up citizen-victims to make them more malleable in the hands of the suave and debonair "Jeffs", officials at the FDA, who are merely trying to do their jobs and would like our cooperation?

Such Macchiavellian strategies cannot be defeated by well-meaning but naive herbalists who think that rational discussions alone will achieve success. Moreover, herbalists who aspire to political power may succumb to the temptation of hobnobbing with these Jeffs, convincing themselves of the rightness of their course of action by the seeming reasonableness of the FDA's demands.

When asked by fellow herbalists to justify their actions, these dissembling Chamberlains of healthcare appeal to our sense of immediate convenience rather than our principles. For on principles alone, one cannot justify compromise with an agency that has shown the most callous disregard for the health and well-being of the citizens it claims to represent.

It is ironic that, while many members of the lay public are outraged over this

TRANCE Formation Of America

This is the documented autobiography of a victim of government mind-control. Cathy O'Brien is the only vocal and recovered survivor of the CIA's MK-Ultra Project Monarch mind-control operation. Chiseled deep into the white stone of the CIA's Langley, Virginia headquarters is a partial verse lifted from the Holy Bible and writings of Saint John: "...and the truth shall make you free." This statement, like the agency, is total unreality. The building that it is engraved upon houses the world's most successful manufacturer of lies to facilitate psychological warfare. The "Company" uses truth and technology as their raw materials to produce "pure" lies for control of you and America's allies. Within the pages of TRANCE Formation Of America you'll find the truth.

callousness, some professional herbalists are debating the inevitability of a creeping police state and the relative merits of groveling and compromise, when instead, they should be demanding thorough investigation of FDA abuses by Congress, followed by prosecution of criminal misconduct by individual officials who have exceeded their authority, who have abused the public trust, and who have engaged in felony racketeering on behalf of the pharmaceutical cartels.

Summary

As in all walks of life, in government there coexist scoundrels as well as saints. Many FDA officials may privately feel remorse over the shady history of their agency. However well meaning some of them may be, good intentions alone do not remedy the pattern of abuse of government authority, although it may help.

The actions of conscientious FDA officials may be easily overwhelmed by the politically motivated policies of its director and by the irresponsible and often criminal actions of its enforcement branch. The issues should remain the legal causes of action, the political and legal authority to remedy them, and the need to reform the FDA as an agency so that its stated intentions become aligned with its actions. The rights of herbalists and of consumers are in jeopardy until this realignment occurs.

The stated purpose of the FDA to protect consumers against fraud and unsafe products is a valid one, and could be beneficial if FDA officials are CONstrained to obey the laws of this country as the rest of us are required to do.

However, this valid purpose has frequently been used as a subterfuge for committing terrorism against honest individuals whose ideas and products are an economic threat to the status quo. Where institutional wrong-doing has become a way of life, no progress can be made until the FDA takes internal measures to reform rogue agents and bureaucrats; such individuals should be fired and prosecuted to the full extent of the law for any criminal violations of public trust.

To pretend that the FDA has American citizens' health uppermost in its concerns without major internal reform would be foolhardy. Until this happens, no mere words on paper, no reasonable-sounding regulations, or public statement of good intentions, will have any weight.

While the herbal professions, both in the clinic and in manufacturing, may have room for improvement, it may be a serious mistake to endorse the FDA as the agency most able to foster this improvement, when its legal authority and jurisdiction do not extend this far.

Obviously an effective solution to such deep corruption is widespread EXPOSURE and heavy PRESSURE from we-the-people. If we continue to allow the foxes to guard the henhouse, then we deserve what we get. Which brings us to the following assault that was perpetrated in one of the example countries mentioned early in the above article.

Assault On Alternative Medicine In Australia

Referring back to the recent June issue of The SPECTRUM, on page 9 of the News Desk is a lengthy article written by Joe Vialls, titled "Massive Scam-Assault On Alternative Medicine Begun In Australia" which states in part:

[quoting]

This week, Australians nationwide were deliberately denied access to more than one thousand products ranging from vitamin pills to multi-mineral supplements.

Under cover of the fake "SARS Crisis" currently saturating the Western media, Australia's Therapeutic Goods Administration has suddenly moved to outlaw and remove from store shelves about 80% of all vitamins and other related alternative products.

Although less than a week ago customers were happily buying everything from vitamin A to Z, and enthusiastically chewing every conceivable mineral and trace element, these same customers today face empty shelves in more than 5,000 healthfood stores across the country.

[end quoting]

The article continues in great detail about the sleazy shenanigans imposed upon a wide range of alternative products, while proven dangerous pharmaceuticals were not even considered in that effort to "protect" the consumer. So the actions themselves tell the story of who's behind this assault.

It should also be noted that immediately following the above News Desk article is the article titled "Quackbuster Quacks Lose Court Case—Big Win For Alternative Medicine", which is likewise important to this overall story since it marks a possible "turning of the tides" in favor of acknowledging public outrage on this matter of "protecting" our health choices.

This next item, related to the shenanigans going on involving Australia, comes from a "Breaking News" email I received on 6/18/03 from the International Advocates For Health Freedom. While there are a lot of specific details in the following, I am including the information here because of its immediate value for our Canadian readers (as well as being a serious "test case" for subsequent implementation in other countries):

Canada's Time-Bomb To "Harmonize" Vitamin Regs To Australia

Please read the letter (below my comments) from Canadian health food store owner and activist Trueman Tuck of Friends of Freedom to Prime Minister Chretien.

Canada was scheduled to gazette new regulations today which would harmonize their vitamin laws to Australia's (where over 1600 dietary supplements were wrongly removed from the shelves under false pretenses this summer).

Canada's effort to do this will constitute a POLITICAL TIME BOMB, Tuck warns. He reminds Prime Minister Chretien that three lawsuits are already pending against Health Canada over this, and that a huge groundswell of support behind C-420 threatens to drive the current health minister from office and really hurt the ruling Liberal Party at the polls in the coming election.

The Canadian situation underscores my urgent global alert: we MUST monkey-wrench the Cartel's global takeover plans by donating to the Alliance for Natural Health's (ANH) lawsuit to overturn the EU's Food Supplement Directive. (Do that via the www.alliance-natural-health.org website.)

Americans in particular take note: We can't ignore what is happening on our northern flank in Canada. We're seeing an effort to isolate us in the world and take us last via the mechanisms of globalization. The best way to arrest this global process of harmonization is to help ANH launch their lawsuit to overturn the EU FSD due to how it threatens to impact Codex, which in turn would impact the planet. If you haven't already read my article on this, see it at the www.iahf.com/anh_lawsuit.html website.

See Trueman Tucks letter to Chretien below.

ALL HELL IS BREAKING LOSE IN CANADA!

THE WORLD HAD BETTER TAKE NOTE!

THIS IS PART OF A HIGHLY ORCHESTRATED PLAN, BUT WE CAN ARREST IT BY HELPING ANH.

Attention Marjory Loveys:

Thank you for speaking with me last week.

I was very shocked that you were not aware of the groundswell of anger from grassroots citizens concerning the total sell-out and betrayal occurring with the PHARMACARTEL-controlled Health Canada officials that has been brewing since Gazette 1 came out in December 2001, and Kava Kava was needlessly removed, instantly and totally, from the Canadian market in August 2002.

As we discussed, our organizations representing literally millions of Canadians, organized the largest grassroots protest in Canadian history in 1997 and 1998 over these same issues. One of our coalition partners, Freedom of Choice in Health Care, submitted a 250,000-name petition in 1998 saying: "Our foods are not drugs."

In our new 2003 coalition campaign we have already collected and had filed with the House, 100,000 signatures in May and June alone, with more pending and a summer of campaigning ahead of us.

Our target is 500,000 petitions supporting "OUR FOODS ARE NOT DRUGS" regulatory regime via new legislation. (See Bill C-420 which was drafted by our permanent Health Freedom Legal Defense Team.)

The details are on the (www.friendsoffreedom.org) Friends of Freedom website; see especially the main menu, top left: Health Freedom Action Campaign downloads; HC regulatory history.

and pending: one on June 26, 1997, being brought back, first court date June 20, 2003, another filed May 29, 2003, and another filed June 12, 2003—all of which our permanent legal team are assisting in.

Unless Gazette 2 is stopped and our groups are “let inside” as concerned stakeholders to help design “Appropriate Legislative Renewal”, several other complementary suits are planned as well.

Gazette 1 is a complete betrayal of all recommendations and promises and must be stopped this week. It is also legally outside the delegated authority of the Governor General to implement under the 1920 drafted Food And Drugs Act, made law in 1927, amended in 1934, and last before Parliament in 1952.

There have been over 400 pages added by questionable regulatory delegation to this 20-page 1952 legislation. This was commented on in the introduction of the 1998 Standing Committee Report. (See our referenced section of our website for copy.)

Even DINs are legally questionable, as is most current Food and Drugs policy and regulations.

Our groups finally met with Heather Watson from the Minister’s Office, after over 8 months of being refused any meeting, on May 29, 2003. We calmly, professionally, and with full documentation presented our case for stopping the drug-style third category regulations that will actually make some 60,000 very safe and affordable food-based, non-drug medicines “DRUGS”, subject to equal or greater control than deadly and dangerous synthetic prescription drugs.

You had asked me for a briefing on the major issues that several million concerned Canadians have with Gazette 1, and the just released Gazette 2, that the PHARMACARTEL INTERESTS IN HEALTH CANADA ARE TRYING TO FORCE INTO LAW THIS COMING WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 2003.

Briefing

In general, the concerns that our groups—including the millions of citizens and countless industry members whose views we represent—have regarding the upcoming NHPD regulations (Gazette 2, poised for imminent release) include the following.

A partial list of potential problems and pitfalls of the new Natural Health Products Regulations:

FACT 1: The new Natural Health Products Regulations have taken a much different course than that which was set out for them by the Standing Committee on Health and the Transition Team. In the

HEALING CODES FOR THE BIOLOGICAL APOCALYPSE

One half of the world’s current population should soon be dead according to authoritative projections. Will you, your family, and friends be among the survivors or the deceased?

Dr. Len Horowitz and Dr. Joseph S. Puleo investigate 2000 years of religious and political persecution and the latest technologies being used to enslave, coerce, and even kill billions of unsuspecting people.

This work returns the most precious spiritual knowledge and “healing codes” to humanity. It offers hope for the loving masses to survive the worldwide plagues, famines, and weather changes that are now at hand. Healing Codes

Transition Team’s final report document, which was signed-off on by the Minister of Health, a process of Legislative Renewal was stated to be unavoidable if the recommendations of these groups were to be achieved. This means that a new Act, separate from the Food And Drugs Act, would be necessary to achieve a true third category for Natural Health Products (NHPs), separate from either foods or drugs.

CONCERNS: In the process that has taken place over the past five years, Health Canada has refused to engage in a process of legislative renewal, instead opting for a separate directorate and regulatory framework in which NHPs are classified as a subset of drugs (all of which are subject to restriction using the devices of Schedule A, Sections 3(1), 3(2), and Schedule F [see below]). In this light, the current regulatory proposals are in contempt of Parliament. They seem to be following a much different agenda than that prescribed for them, and have not even come close to protecting the rights of Canadians to freely access NHPs of their choice.

FACT 2: The regulations maintain complete power to arbitrarily restrict any given NHP by blocking its sale, and/or make it available by prescription only [ref: Section 96, Gazette 1, entitled: “Prescription Natural Health Products”]. Health Canada has refused to implement the Transition Team’s recommendations to revoke Sections 3(1), 3(2), and Schedule A of the Food And Drugs Act dealing with disease claims.

CONCERNS: The regulations reserve the right of the Minister to issue a direction to stop sale of any product [ref: Section 15], suspend or cancel any given product license [ref: Section 16], and/or suspend a product license before giving the licensee an opportunity to be heard [ref: Section 17], all based on the Minister having “reasonable grounds to believe that a Natural Health Product may no longer be safe”. The critical words here are “believe” and “may”. Human history is replete with examples of horrendous acts and tyranny carried out under the pretense of belief, and “may” automatically implies “may not”. In these Sections it is not even mentioned that this “belief” has to be supported by reasonable and adequate evidence and that this evidence must be presented prior to a restrictive action.

Furthermore, there are no mechanisms in the regulations providing for accountability of the department officials administering them.

If an official had the intention, these clauses could be dramatically abused. Given that the HPB over the last 25 years has continually demonstrated its bias against, and its will to suppress, the Natural Health industry, wording such as this is of grave concern.

Additionally, given that NHPs under these regulations will be forced to state a claim on their labels, it is of great concern that Health Canada has refused to delete Sections 3(1), 3(2), and Schedule F, dealing with disease claims. This creates a huge “gray zone” in terms of which claims will be considered structure function, and which will be considered disease claims. Health Canada’s dramatic inconsistencies dealing with such issues in the past may mean that a claim acceptable today may not be tomorrow, and provides another mechanism by which products may be restricted or blocked from market. Furthermore, in some instances natural products have been extremely well scientifically validated (as stated in the Transition Team report) to be effective in mitigating disease.

FACT 3: The three criteria that were stated by the Natural Health Product Directorate to have been continually asked for by Canadians as consultations took place, and hence, three of their main stated objectives for the regulations were that: (1) first and foremost, Canadians wanted increased access to a wider range of NHPs including many that are available in the United States, but restricted for sale in Canada; (2) they wanted assurance that what was on the label was in the bottle; and (3) they wanted more information on the label regarding what the product was for. To achieve these objectives the regulations will mandate that every NHP making a claim, which is to be supported, must pass through a Standards Of Evidence Procedure [Ref: Standards Of Evidence Draft Document] and then appear on an approved label for that product.

CONCERNS: The regulations are attempting to implement standards which are inappropriately rigorous for NHPs. They fail to acknowledge the long-standing safety and low risk of NHPs (fully acknowledged by the Standing Committee on Health), and insist on the continued application of a pharmaceutical drug model of regulation.

Moreover, the Standards of Evidence Procedure can easily be abused to block a product's access to market, if that is the will of the officials administering it. NHPs are once again being made to justify their existence, when their longstanding safe usage should be justification enough. NHPs are once again being treated like drugs when the entire point of the third category was to differentiate the two. If this wasn't acceptable to the public when they protested in 1997, why is it acceptable now?

Fears regarding inferior and/or dangerous NHPs that do not meet their label claims are largely unsubstantiated by actual examples. A huge majority of Canadian NHP suppliers already strictly follow Good Manufacturing Practices and the last death attributed to an NHP in Canada occurred in the 1950s (administered by a physician). There is a much better method of ensuring public safety without over regulating. [See: The Natural Health Industry Wants Appropriate

Regulations document.]

FACT 4: Due to labeling and claim requirements, once these regulations are enforced strictly, they will be a barrier to the import of countless products from the U.S. and abroad.

CONCERNS: This may include products that Canadians have been safely using for decades and are perfectly happy with. The regulations do not take such citizens into account. Aspects such as this meant that instead of protecting Canadians' rights to access NHPs of their choosing, the regulations seriously threaten this right. Given the regulatory history of the Health Protection Branch, as written, the regulations will almost surely result in decreased, not increased, access to NHPs.

FACT 5: The regulation's requirements are not financially feasible for many small to medium-sized producers of NHPs, whose companies would be seriously destroyed.

CONCERNS: There is a much more effective method of achieving the above stated objectives without shutting down small manufacturers and/or employing methods which can be applied in a biased manner. [See The Natural Health Industry Wants Appropriate Regulations document.]

FACT 6: The regulations demonstrate a failure to consider crossover effects into and from other legislation, i.e., GST, Income Tax Act, Excise Act, Canada Health Act, etc.

CONCERNS: For example, due to these regulations, GST has been charged retroactively, back to 1998, to companies based on the claim by CCRA that due to the new definition of a Natural Health Product (i.e., acting on legislation that has not even been passed yet), these companies should have been charging GST on a wide variety of products [ref: CCRA document P-240].

Given their regulatory history, and the involvement of an immensely powerful drug lobby, the Health Protection Branch cannot be trusted to administer the new regulations fairly. Despite the verbal assurances of well-meaning NHPD officials, the words that are written on paper in Gazette I mean that if these regulations are at any point administered by officials with a bias against NHPs, it could mean the end of the industry as it now exists.

The regulations take a market in Canada with approximately 60,000 food-based, non-drug medicines that should be, if the promises made in 1998 were kept, somewhere over 75,000 products, without decades of unnecessary Health Canada interference, and take everything off the market unless site and product is properly licensed by the pharmacartel-driven Health Canada officials.

The 1994 DSHEA in the U.S. was the leading-edge "food-based, non-drug medicines act" in the world. Its weakness was GMP, which we all want "appropriate GMP" in our new Canadian legislation. Unlike the drug-style regulatory third category, DSHEA grandfathered every existing safe product into the new regulatory regime.

The new regulatory regime in Canada is a "white list" regulatory regime—totally unacceptable.

IT WILL ONLY SERVE THE FINANCIAL INTERESTS OF MEDICAL DOCTORS, PHARMACISTS, PRESCRIPTION DRUG INVESTMENT INTERESTS, LARGE HEALTH INDUSTRY INVESTMENT INTERESTS, AND RELATED FINANCIAL INVESTMENT INTERESTS!

Health Canada admits that only 10,000 of the 60,000 NHPs [more properly called food-based, non-drug medicines] have DINs now. Health Canada also admits that hundreds of small and medium wholesalers and manufacturers in Canada, and outside Canada, will not be able to afford to make the transition.

It is also fact that, in the early 1990s, when the "Modern Medical Investment Interests" were successful with a drug-style regulatory regime in Australia, over 30% of independent health food stores were put out of business in the next few years. This really pleased the mass-market grocery and drug stores, and the chain health food retailers.

There has been no effort to truly implement what non-trade associations requested. Public interest is not in any way being properly incorporated into the new regulatory regime. Legal issues constitutionally are also being ignored, as well as the need to fully integrate "modern medicine" with "traditional healthcare".

These regulations are not delivering what the involved parliamentary groups prescribed, and seem to be following a much different agenda. As a result, if these regulations proceed as written, Canadians will in due time not have their unfettered access to NHPs as promised to them by the Government of Canada.

Politically this is a time bomb that will be very dangerous to any politician who chooses "bottom-line support of modern

Whether the politicians are Members of Parliament in Canada, or members of Congress in the United States, the mechanism for controlling the public remains the same. And as the above author suggests, relentless pressure should be put on these politicians to make them think twice before taking that pharmaceutical Big Business bribe and voting against the welfare of the public. Many people are awakening to these shenanigans and growing more angry with each passing day about the fence that is being constructed around their health choices.

With that said, and expanding on last month's central subject, let's look at another reprehensible example of the medical Gestapo in action. The following is excerpted from the www.othf.org website:

last month's front-page feature article]. 18 months earlier they raided another manufacturer, BioTech, in Northern California, doing the same thing, except the FDA was more violent and aggressive in those raids.

Jacque Bovee, Nurse,
Raided By Federal Agents

After 37 years of dedicated world service, Jacque Bovee, RN, was raided in her own home in San Mateo, California, by 6 federal agents (with handguns) and a policeman early on 12/4/01 “to confiscate BioTech equipment”. The search warrant was issued by Special Agent Robert Ottaviano on 12/3/01, and signed by U.S. Judge Joseph C. Spero, Northern District of California (U.S. District Court). The warrant stated its purpose was to “confiscate BioTech equipment and information from the year 2000.”

At approximately 7:30 a.m., loud knocks were heard at the door. Jacque was just getting out of the shower and looked down from the second story window to say she would be right there, as she was not dressed. She threw on her nightclothes and rushed down, thinking something had happened to one of her children.

The 7 agents barged in, handing her a search warrant. Jacque asked for their IDs and names, several times.

She was given only 2 business cards:

David Bourne — “Resident Agent In Charge, Office of Criminal Investigations”
Food & Drug Administration
S.F. Resident Office
1301 Clay St., Suite 260
Oakland, CA 94612

Christopher S. M. Wilkinson
Dept. of Consumer Affairs,
Division of Investigation
Sacramento, CA

Special Agents (FDA/OCI) Robert Ottaviano and Keith Owens were also listed.

No names of the female agents present were given, or IDs shown.

Jacque was told to sit on a hard kitchen chair during those next 7 hours. After shivering in her nightgown, she was allowed to get dressed (with two escorts watching). Hours later, Jacque asked to go to the kitchen for breakfast, and was told not to move. Jacque stated she was feeling nauseated since she hadn't eaten, because she took her hormone pill Estrace, which causes nausea unless taken with food.

She was again told no, but upon Jacque's insistence, she was allowed to get one piece of toast. She was followed and watched in the kitchen. She was allowed to go to the bathroom once (with an escort).

No rights were given.

Jacque was not allowed to go upstairs to the office in her home to what was being packed and sealed in boxes. The agents looked at all furniture, drawers, closets, and personal items. They then searched the upstairs rooms where the bedroom and office was. Covered boxes were brought downstairs. Approximately 25 sealed boxes were taken out to the agents' cars without Jacque seeing what was in them.

Pictures of all rooms and furniture were taken.

Questions were asked and a tape recorder ran.

Jacque was told that "this would help" her. She was told by Christopher Wilkinson that she "better call the RN Board" regarding her license.

Items seized included approximately ten frequency machines, several from 1995 (not BioTech), the CPU unit, neurometers from Japan (not BioTech), phone and charge account records, client research records and charts, desk papers, empty suitcases, personal appointment book, stocked parts, LEDs, and all testimonies!

Personal items were requested back by an attorney.

A copy of her calendar appointment book was mailed back, but unreadable. The CPU unit was returned. Damage to the unit has been estimated at over $1000 by Comp USA.

All records and research was erased since 1994, the modem and hard drive destroyed, and the casing taped in place after being pried open (6 pieces were taped in place that were broken). Nothing else has yet been returned.

Business was shut down, rent and bills could not be paid; Jacque was forced to move.

Over $30,000 worth of machines, parts, manuals, and information was taken. An additional $30,000 has been spent on charges for the move, rent, and expenses since the move.

All charge accounts had to be cancelled since records were taken. A former client graciously paid $17,500 to line up a criminal attorney, if charges were pressed. Damage to carpet from mud, as it was raining and many trips were made to carry all the boxes out, totaled $400.

Moving from the apartment due to business being shut down cost $1200.

Clients, children and grandchildren feared coming to the home.

Jacque had nightmares and insomnia.

Jacque's history involves: volunteer work at 15 yrs. old, Nurses' Aide at 16-18, LPN for 10 yrs., RN for 27 yrs.

This experience included the following:

- Psychiatric, medical, surgical, ER, OB-GYN, telemetry, pediatrics, nursery, geriatrics, orthopedics, neurology, burn and plastic units, alcohol-drug-bulimic units, urology, oncology, and prison work.

- Charge and supervisor position were held.

- Volunteer work for the homeless continues.

- Character and work references were always excellent.

- She has two children, four grandchildren, and 26+ foster children.

- Jacque is licensed in 7 states as a nurse, in two as a foster parent.

Jacque's studies include: additional college toward a Master's Degree; holistic studies with Hannah Kroeger; spiritual studies in India, Guatemala, and Honduras; Feng Sui; Reiki; ear coning; ayurvedic medicine; Edgar Cayce; massage; and frequency (Rife) machines.

Jacque has never had any criminal or other illegal charges against her. She has always been an honest, hardworking citizen, dedicating her life and compassion to the sick.

All clients came on their own accord after a friend/family recommendation. They were never promised a "cure".

Machines were purchased on a "trial, guaranteed money back in writing" basis. Jacque was always honest, donated several machines to the poor, and worked long hours to help the sick.

She discovered the Rife machines when ill herself in 1994. She was diagnosed with two disk bulges in the lower spine, along with severe degeneration, scoliosis, lodosis, sponylolisthesis, and osteoarthritis (joints had been removed), allergies, malignant melanoma, hypothyroidism, TMJ, gallstones, spastic colon, diverticulitis, hysterectomy, and wore bifocals. Her back problem (that left her flat on her back for two years) was stated to be "permanent damage and stationary".

Her cancer doctor said she "would live one year" (27 years ago). Her health has become better than 40 years ago.

This experience leads her to help hundreds. Rife companies always said the use of these machines were legal for research and experimentation.

Criminal charges may be made against Jacque and the BioTech Company.

Consider your blood pressure before you dwell upon the fact that such a high-calibre person as Jacque Bovee is suffering such arrogant harassment due to her open-minded approach to the healing arts—while the well-trained professional pill pushers smile as they hand you a bombshell bill for a simple hangnail office visit, and then take off for the country club or yacht. It's a sordid affair where money has purchased the souls of many who once pursued more idealistic goals of helping humanity.

Beck And Becker

Jacque Bovee is another victim of the Medical Mafia's longtime assault on electromedicine. This is a subject so central to this story that we need to take a small digression here to acknowledge two more (this time, modern) pioneering giants in that field—Robert C. Beck, D.Sc., and Robert O. Becker, M.D.—in addition to Royal Rife and Wilhelm Reich discussed last month.

One very important reason for taking this detour is central to the legal argument that is, in turn, central to who is right and who is telling whoppers. The Medical Mafia, through their various agents like the FDA, would have you believe there is nothing to electromedicine, that it's quackery. But the truth of the matter is that there exists quite a large body of scientific evidence to support its efficacy—to use a favorite medical term of the pharmaceutical business.

With that in mind, let's take a moment to add two modern pioneers to the formidable list of earlier researchers that includes Rife and Reich, who we discussed last month. (And there were still others who took similar, if less well known paths, who likewise deserve our attention at some future time.)

We first featured gifted physicist Bob Beck's pioneering research back in the May 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM. Since that now infamous "Black Pope" issue is long out of print, we are again sharing that outstanding Beck article elsewhere in this issue, particularly for the benefit of our many newer readers. Bob's many years of selfless (and often dangerous, in terms of being under attack from the Medical Mafia) work has helped to place simple devices, utilizing the powerful technology of electromedicine, within easy reach of anyone so inclined to pursue this proven effective healing modality.

With that admirable healing legacy established and thriving, Bob passed on into the Higher Realms on Sunday, June 23, 2002. After a nasty fall which created water on his brain, Bob's heart eventually gave out, and cardiac arrest followed. Bob is survived by his loving wife, Johanna. Bob was (and IS still!) a dear friend watching over The SPECTRUM.

Moving closer to the center of the medical arena, we meet another important pioneer of electromedicine, Robert O. Becker, M.D. who was TWICE nominated for a Nobel Prize. In a great article posted on the <http://alpha-stim.com> website, written by Daniel Haley, we are given a brief synopsis of the importance of Dr. Becker's work:

Politics In Healing

Chapter 9:

The Miracle Of Electro-Medicine

"We'd have had regeneration 15-20 years ago if it hadn't been for the government! Nobody knew how the salamander regenerated its limbs until Dr. Becker came along", exclaimed Ruth Harvey. A private researcher in alternative medicine, it was she who first put me onto the story of Dr. William F. Koch. (Chapter 3) Ruth was referring to Dr. Robert O. Becker, a world-

THE POLITICAL SUPPRESSION OF EFFECTIVE CANCER CURES: We have a war on cancer, but the more money we spend on cancer, the more people die of it.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH AMERICAN HEALTHCARE? Why does one American die every 3 to 5 minutes (100,000 - 150,000 a year) from the effects of FDA-approved pharmaceutical drugs, used as directed?

Read why we don't have effective cancer cures in ten "stories that should not have happened, but that needed to be told". Read about cancer cures that were and still are being relentlessly suppressed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the American Medical Association (AMA), working for the Big Business of pharmaceuticals.

WHAT IS THE SOLUTION? Not more money for bureaucrats, but freedom from bureaucrats! The author's Rx: a freer market in non-toxic therapies, to provide competition to the drug companies and drive their prices down, as only a free market can do. With a free market in non-toxics, we would have cancer cures available, including the ones in this book. Can you afford to NOT read this book?

The Body Electric: Electromagnetism And The Foundation Of Life

In this landmark book, Robert O. Becker, MD, a pioneer in the field of bioelectric science, and Gary Selden present a fascinating look at the role electricity plays in healing, challenging the traditional mechanistic model of the body. Colorful and controversial, this is a tale of engrossing research, scientific and medical politics, and breakthrough discoveries that offer new possibilities for fighting disease and harnessing the body's healing powers.

renowned orthopedic surgeon and pioneering scientist in electromedicine—the kind of person who wants to know what makes living things "alive".

From 1958 to 1980, Dr. Becker was chief of orthopedic research at the Veterans Administration (VA) Hospital in Syracuse, NY. During those years, he published 150 papers in medical journals and was twice nominated for the Nobel Prize. Unfortunately, even in electromedicine, political decisions intruded and hampered his research.

Almost all of his funds came from the VA. In 1980, all funds were cut off because of Department of Defense (DoD) irritation over Becker's warnings of danger from unlimited exposure to electromagnetic (EM) fields. Friends in Washington had told him that opposition to his VA funding was coming from the DoD; their people were saying:

"How do we shut this guy up?!" However, cutting off his funds did not shut up Bob Becker.

Retiring to the foothills of the Adirondacks, he wrote The Body Electric (1985) and Cross Currents (1990). The first is a fascinating and highly readable description of his electromedical discoveries. All of them had been published in technical language in medical journals, but in The Body Electric, assisted by writer Gary Selden, Becker presents them in laymen's language. In Cross Currents, Becker contrasts the marvelous promise of electromedicine with the perils of electromagnetic pollution—the potential dangers of careless and indiscriminate exposure to electromagnetic (EM) fields.

In the late 19th century, Sears & Roebuck listed in their catalog an "electric corset" for alleviation of arthritis pain. It sold well,

A Writ For Martyrs by Eustace Mullins

This is a fully documented exposé of the atrocities which federal agents regularly commit against American citizens.

This book reproduces 121 pages from Eustace Mullins' FBI file, which he obtained only by the personal intervention of a college classmate, Senator John Warner, Rep. Of Virginia. The FBI refused for two years to send Eustace his files through Freedom of Information Act inquiries. When Eustace found it, he discovered a plot by the FBI, with 60 pages of memos, in which J. Edgar Hoover personally ordered that Eustace be committed to a mental institution for life.

On the basis of these revelations, Eustace obtained two "Default Judgments" against the FBI in Federal Court. One judgment was for $50 million, and one for $35 million, which remain on the books today.

This book also documents atrocities committed against Eustace's handicapped sister, his ailing mother, and his invalid father, who all died of heart attacks after daily harassments by the FBI terrorists.

which usually doesn't happen when things don't work. Many doctors used electrical treatments of one sort or another, but there was no underlying theory of why they worked.

The field of biochemistry, on the other hand, was constantly producing new discoveries. As the 20th century dawned, there was a growing sense that the human body was a chemical creation, that "life was just an array of chemical reactions" (Body Electric), and that "modern" medicine, then, must be chemical in nature.

This understanding laid the foundations for the great pharmaceutical companies, which deal in chemical drugs—some excellent, some dangerous. The acceptance of chemicals as the basis of medical treatment has become so ingrained that a cousin's reaction may be typical. As I was explaining the Rife device, he interrupted me to say: "It never occurred to me that medicine could be other than a drug."

This perception of the taken-for-granted chemical nature of medicine was set off by the Flexner Report of 1910, a study commissioned by the Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations to bring medicine up to date. The study's director, Abraham Flexner, decreed that there was no scientific basis for electromedicine, which then gradually vanished. In the 1930s, Dr. Morris Fishbein warned in his Journal Of The American Medical Association editorials against the "quackery" of electromedicine. Electric corsets disappeared from the Sears catalog. That was the end of the first wave of electromedical research.

[Editor's note: More knowledgeable readers of The SPECTRUM will have to kindly overlook the obvious innocence of this author's interpretation of the historical motivations for the Medical Mafia's attacks on all forms of alternative healing modalities, including electromedicine. Eustace Mullins' classic research work Murder By Injection is a good source for a dose of reality about the sinister beginnings of Rockefeller's medicine business, the American Medical Association, and related assaults on our health freedom.]

By the 1940s, the accepted scientific paradigm limited the effect of EM currents or fields on living organisms to electroshock and thermal effects—for instance electric blankets or the electric chair. That was where things stood until Dr. Robert Becker came along.

He is regarded as the creator of the field known as Bioelectromagnetics, in which he showed the profound biological effects of very minute electric currents and very low strength electromagnetic fields on living tissues. The rebirth of electromedicine as a recognized and respected field of medical study is largely due to his work.

Dr. Becker's work revealed the often astounding ways in which the body responds to electricity. And it is the recognition of that fundamental electrical nature of living organisms (including plants) which the Big Business of drug medicine would like to keep suppressed from public awareness.

That subject of health information suppression is the serious matter to which we now turn, beginning with a brief look at the Internet. We then move to a most provocative and empowering interview that tears apart the arguments for suppression of both information and products that SHOULD be freely available to public choice.

Internet "Threat" To Existing Cartels

To get an idea how many people are turning to the Internet for their information about health matters, in an article written on June 12, 2001, by Michael Mahoney, titled U.S. To Target Fraudulent Health Sites, he states: "According to a Harris Interactive Poll taken last year [2000], the number of Americans looking to the Internet for healthcare information DOUBLED to 98 million from 1998 to 2000."

And you can be sure that number continues to increase, to a level well over half the entire population in the United States alone. As was stated in last month's introduction to this subject, people are fed up with the state of so-called modern healthcare. Both in terms of choices and costs, more and more of the public are searching for the better answers they instinctively know are out there.

In turn, this has caused the various covert agents (FDA, AMA, FTC, etc.) of the pharmaceutical cartel to redouble their efforts to block or otherwise discredit the alternative health information accessible through the power of the Internet. So watch that avenue closely for further attacks and disinformation tricks to try to keep you from finding Truth via this super library at your fingertips.

And that brings us full-circle, back to the main subject of last month's article reporting the April 2, 2003 raid on Jim Folsom's home and Rife machine business in San Diego.

Interview With Attorney Jim Turner

On 6/10/03 I conducted an interview with courageous and dedicated Washington DC attorney Jim Turner, who is the lawyer for Jim Folsom and also Operation Health Freedom. He has some dynamite points to make about the FDA and the status of their recent raid on "electro-wellness" in San Diego, and Jim Folsom's business. Also, Mr. Turner offers some very real strategies for those of you interested in "doing something" about this incredible Big Business stranglehold over the issue of your health freedom.

Interview With Attorney Jim Turner

Martin: What do you see happening with Operation Health Freedom? Do you think that the time has finally come for Americans to have access to alternative technologies?

Turner: I think the time has been here for a long time that they should have been having access to it. I believe they have the legal right to it. I believe that's what the laws say. And I believe that the FDA and the FTC are going way outside their legal authority in pursuing a particular view that they have, as individuals, of what people "should" be allowed to do. That's not what the law is about, and that's not what the police are about. They are not supposed to be going around substituting their judgment for the judgment of the rest of society.

Martin: How do you see this being challenged? Because, obviously, the FDA has been pretty much given carte blanche by Congress.

Turner: I don't believe that at all. I don't think that the FDA has been given carte blanche by Congress at all. I believe they have completely distorted the laws. So, I think that what we need to do is, we need to have a three-pronged attack.

One is: We need to defend these cases, very vigorously, and FORCE THEM TO PROVE that they have the authority to do what they are doing.

In a lot of the thinking that they've presented in their public pronouncements, and in the way that they behave, they ASSUME all kinds of things.

I mean, just take the issue of the Energy Wellness instruments.

[Editor's note: Here Jim Turner is referring to the Rife-type electro-medicine instruments, advertised monthly in The SPECTRUM and elsewhere, that were the target of the recent FDA/Postal Authorities raid on Jim Folsom's business in San Diego.]

Their assumption is that there is, basically, nothing there, there are no contents to the box, that it's just a bunch of unhooked wires that is designed to fool people and get elderly people to waste all their money.

First of all, I don't believe that the Food and Drug Law was designed to require prior approval of devices for that purpose; it's not what it is there for.

Then, secondly, that's not what it is. It DOES have a very strong theoretical underpinning, and a lot of evidence that it actually does what's claimed for it.

And I believe the evidence is strong enough to support the sales of the Energy Wellness instrument, in accordance with what Congress required. I think the FDA, and Project Cure.All, and the FTC, and the Post Office are WAY OUT OF BOUNDS in what they are doing here! And I think they've also way over-reached in their tactics.

Martin: But, effectively, what has happened, by Congress? How do I want to say this? The FDA, in their raids, in their, what I will term, "terrorist tactics", by literally stealing hundreds of thousands of dollars of equipment from various businesses over the last 20 years, and because they are able to go in and do this, and in many cases not prosecute, they really do have a free reign because there are NO REPERCUSSIONS FOR THEIR ACTIONS!

Turner: I don't think that's Congress's fault. If Congress has to vote on the right of the public to have access to things, they've always voted for the right of the public. In 1976, they passed the Proxmire Act, which broadened the public's access to dietary supplements. In 1990, they passed the NLEA, the Nutrition Labeling Educational Act, which broadened the rights of the public to read about nutrition information on products. In 1994, they passed DSHEA, the Dietary Supplement Health and Education Act, unanimously, increasing the public's right to have access to dietary supplements.

It's been the FDA and the FTC and the Post Office who have REFUSED TO OBEY THE LAW! When they've been taken to court by various plaintiffs, the judges have consistently ruled that the FDA has gone outside of its authority, and the FDA has consistently refused to follow those rulings! There are hearings in Congress that have laid bare, repeatedly, the kinds of things that the FDA is doing that are not proper.

There is a kind of "cultural war" underway!

There is the right of the individual to have control of their own health and make their own choices, and then there are the restrictions that are placed, which are very, very specific restrictions: A person who is putting something before a member of the public cannot lie about it. Beyond that, there are NO restrictions. They have the right to go forward, and present things to the public.

See and hear David Icke at the top of his form as he presents six-and-a-half hours of incredible information before a sellout audience of 1200 at the Vogue Theatre in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.

You will laugh, you may cry, and you will be on the edge of your seat as the fantastic story of true human history, and WHO really controls the world today, unfolds in Icke's unique style, aided by video footage and hundreds of illustrations.

This is the presentation that the Illuminati (the forces of global control) tried so hard to stop—media interviews were cancelled; immigration officials turned up at the theatre to question his right to speak; pressure was applied on the venue to cancel the event itself; and pies were even thrown at David at a book signing by a rent-a-mob who ludicrously and outrageously sought to dub him a "racist".

There is no requirement that the kind of thing that the Energy Wellness device does, or any instrument is said to do—there is no requirement that it be preapproved by the FDA. The notion that the law which says if you're going to cut somebody open and put a pacemaker in them, or a new joint, or a new valve in their heart, the argument that you should demonstrate that these things work before you cut them open and put it in has been extended to say that if you have something that is outside the body, and you say it's going to help them have a healthy life, then it's got to be preapproved by the FDA.

UNDER THAT LOGIC, YOU'VE GOT TO GO GET YOUR UMBRELLA PREAPPROVED!

Martin: [Laughter] Right.

Turner: You've got to put your umbrella up, to keep the rain off, so you don't get sick.

The FDA says: "Excuse me, you've got to come forward and prove that this umbrella is going to keep you from getting sick. And if you can't prove the mechanism of action in double-blind studies, and establish that carrying an umbrella around is going to keep you healthy, then you can't claim that it will."

That's the level that they are at in their work. And this is NOT what Congress intended. I believe, if we can organize ourselves—you're asking what the strategy is:

Strategy A: To defend against the extension of the law to places where it shouldn't be (that's the current law).

Strategy B: Go back to Congress and get clarifications of the law, directly presented to the authorities, and say: "Look, guys, you're not allowed to do this!"

I had one case where this same combination of people tried to put a doctor out of business who had a cancer cure, and we went before an administrative law judge, and at the end of the trial the judge not only ruled that the agencies were incorrect, but in fact, he said they had violated the law which says you're not allowed to FALSELY attack somebody, if you're a part of the government. He held a hearing, and he would have been awarded attorney's fees under that law, except that my client had a net worth above $2 million dollars.

In this present case for Jim Folsom, our plan will be to go to trial—if they want to continue to go to trial and actually conduct the trial. We plan to win the trial, and then we plan to bring an action under the Access To Justice Act, and ask for the government to be reprimanded for bringing this case, and to get attorney's fees. That's the course of action on the legal part of it.

On the legislative part, we think Congress should clarify, once again, as they continuously do, that these actions [by the FTC, FDA, Postal Authorities, etc.] are NOT what the Congress intended. The Congress never said: "Before you even bring charges, go and take a bunch of stuff away from people, and then threaten them that you're going to make it worse on them if they continue to sell them."

These agencies don't have the authority to do that! But they believe they have that authority, because it has gotten to be kind-of a sociological belief among the people who sit around and drink coffee and beer together, and think they're cops, so this is what they should be doing.

Strategy C: To educate all of the opinion makers in the society about what's going on here. I mean, the behaviors that the FDA, the FTC, and the Post Office are engaging in here are trying to draw a solid line that says: "Everything on this side of the line is proved to be safe and effective for everyone, and everything on the other side of the line is proved to be unsafe and ineffective for everyone." Then they go and try to enforce that.

First of all, just as a premise, it's not enforceable. But secondly, and most importantly, that particular mentality is driving the country into bankruptcy, through a healthcare system that can't afford to carry out this kind of distinction. The distinction is an impossible one. The things that exist in the world that are safe for everyone are in a minority. The things that exist in the world that are harmful to everyone are in a minority. Most things are harmful to some people, and safe, or even essential, to others. To make a law that says "no one can have this because someone will be harmed" is foolish; and that's NOT what the law says! That is what the FDA has INTERPRETED it to mean.

Furthermore, it's just fascinating—I mean, forget alternatives for the moment. The FDA took a diabetic drug off the market recently because 25 people allegedly died from it, and 800,000 people were taking it. It was an improvement. Many of those people of that 800,000 were much happier taking that drug than the one they had before, but the FDA took it all away from them.

One of the things that we need to do, as a group of people who are doing the Health Freedom Campaign, is to recognize that the MENTALITY that the FDA is operating under is the thing that is causing the problem—the FDA, the FTC, and the Post Office. That mentality is the problem. It is NOT what the law says; it is an attitude that twists the law to crush anything that these people don't happen to like. And that's what they do [as bought puppets on behalf of the major drug companies who are, in turn, owned by the elite world controllers, as Dr. Len Horowitz, Eustace Mullins, and others have so often and thoroughly exposed in the pages of The SPECTRUM]. That's what we're going to have to fight against.

So, Part Three is: educate these people! They do not, apparently, know. At least in our meetings with them, they don't seem to appreciate or understand that there is a long, scientific pedigree behind "energy medicine". And that, in fact, our own government is putting substantial amounts of money into it. And, in fact, some of the most significant advances in medicine have been made around the understanding of the energetic dynamics of the body, things such as MRI scans. In fact, most of the health improvement we've had over the past hundred years has been from non-biomedical intrusions. It's been from engineering improvements—in the water, in the sanitation that we have—that's how we've managed to get infectious diseases under control.

Now, the fact that we have "chronic" diseases that exist, that we haven't addressed and should be addressed, and it's been probably 60-70 years that we've tried every kind of biochemical intervention against chronic diseases and been unsuccessful [on purpose].

We ought to start thinking about the fact that there are many other approaches that need to be put into the mix with whatever it is that we're doing. The failure to do that—the continuing effort of the FDA, the Post Office, and the FTC to go after people who are not inside the "conventionality"—is a core piece of why our healthcare system is ranked 35th in the world, has a life expectancy for males that is around 20th to 25th in the world, and we're about 14th in the world for female life expectancy, and we're about the same for infant mortality.

These are SERIOUS PROBLEMS! The 35th worst healthcare system in the world?! A life expectancy lower than many other countries, yet we are the most expensive healthcare system!

The reason that is true is in large part because of the way that the FDA, the FTC, and the Post Office insist on driving the costs up by driving the competitors out of business, by creating situations where people are not able to exercise their OWN common sense, their OWN good judgment.

If the kind of arguments that are used right now are allowed to run rampant, then, as I said earlier, an umbrella would be considered a device for which you could not make claims. Congress never intended that. Congress did not intend for all kinds of things that they're dragging into the courts.

Now they're talking about taking dietary supplements and putting a number of them under the Controlled Substances Act. Well, we've had such a great, great "success" with the Controlled Substances Act in keeping the “war on drugs” under control, and cleaning our society free of the illicit use of drugs!

Now, maybe this publicity is a good thing, maybe now we’ll get massive uses of these things that are helpful to people, rather than only have them used by people who already understand their values.

Anyway, my point is: this is not what Congress intended when it passed these laws. It is not what the people wanted, and whenever the people of this country have been able to get engaged and push for protection of their health rights, Congress has, in fact, followed them and followed them vigorously.

And I believe that we need to do that now by educating the opinion leaders in the country, and I’m talking about: we’ve got to educate judges; we’ve got to educate legislators; we’ve got to educate journalists; we’ve got to educate teachers. And we’ve got to do that from the grassroots up.

The people in this country are so far ahead of where the decision-makers and the opinion-makers are that the people now really need to put their focus on bringing them along.

[Editor’s note: Of course, as SPECTRUM readers are well aware, the “opinion makers” and “decision makers” get their orders from much higher up the Pyramid of Power—or they wouldn’t have been placed in those puppet capacities in the first place. However, it still remains true that putting enough pressure on these bureaucratic figureheads will indeed cause change that reflects the public mind because, beyond anything, these so-called leaders are cowards, just as are the higher-up controllers, and neither have any way to override a large, focused, oppositional energy force generated by a coherent public mindset.]

Then, at the same time we’re doing that, get the legislation to re-assert what has been re-asserted every time that it’s come to the attention of Congress. Remember: Congress is doing about 10,000 other things besides “alternative health”; we have to really work to get it on their agenda.

And then, at the same time, we have to, in every jurisdiction where lawyers for the government want to prosecute somebody, we come forward with the solid arguments about why their prosecutions are not sound.

Now, that’s not to say there are not people out there doing things that deserve prosecution. We’ve worked really, really hard to get standards for use of dietary supplements, for example, good manufacturing practices. It was in the Act when it was passed. The FDA has dragged its feet for 10 years, just trying to create a problem by having people who do not meet proper standards be out there that they can make issues out of. Ok, I think those people should be prosecuted. But it should be for failure to have good standards in their product. Let me give you an example:

Operation Health Freedom — Defense Fund has been set up to defend the two cases in San Diego, California, and two cases in Northern California. These cases are very significant, because if they lose—we will all lose. If any of these cases are won, it’s a win for everyone in the Rife community. The FDA raided and closed down two separate individuals in Southern California and two in Northern California for manufacturing and distributing Rife frequency generators. We are at a critical point in time! The outcome of these cases affects all of us in the Alternative Healthcare and Energy Wellness Movement. The Powers That Be are planning to stamp out Rife technology for all time by making it illegal. One of our main goals is to reach 10 million people in 30 days. Please help—“send a copy to a friend”.

A few years ago, the FDA seized Bran products from five companies because, they said, the companies claimed that certain kinds of Bran would help eliminate certain kinds of cancer. By the way, that claim that was being made in those days is now legal; but then, it wasn’t. The FDA seized these products, and they said this was an improper claim, and they were going to prosecute these people to the full extent of the law. They were going to do everything that they could to put these people out of business, because they had made this claim, and it was not a supported claim, and there was not a bit of evidence to support this claim, that this was a false claim, it was a wrong claim. All of these things are untrue—BUT, the final paragraph in their press-release said: “And besides, they didn’t have any Bran in their products.”

Now, as far as I’m concerned, anybody who makes a claim that Bran is going to cure cancer, and says “buy my product”, and there is no Bran in it, ought to be prosecuted! I'm all for that. I don't think anybody is against that.

But that's not what the FDA did. The FDA went out there and said all these things about the claim, and then said, as a final afterthought: "And by the way, there wasn't any Bran there."

When those people had to pay their fine and got convicted, everybody thought it was because they made a false claim about Bran curing cancer. In fact, they made a false claim about having Bran in their product. That's the kind of misleading thing that the FDA does. That's what we're fighting.

Martin: Now, does the Attorney General ever bring action against the FDA, the FTC, or the Postal Authorities?

Turner: Never. The Attorney General would never do that.

Martin: Doesn't that issue need to be addressed at some point?

Turner: The Attorney General is the lawyer for those agencies, by law. He is their lawyer. The FDA doesn't go to court. The Attorney General goes to court. The FDA gets its lawyer, the Attorney General, to go to court.

Martin: What's the alternative, a Special Prosecutor?

Turner: An alternative, for example, one of the alternatives: If our team wants to launch a major campaign, in every case where the FDA brings these actions, you fight a vigorous, vigorous battle, win, and then sue them under the right to the Criminal Justice Act, which says that if false charges are brought against an individual, then the government can be held accountable for the attorney's fees.

You start winning those kinds of cases and they'll start backing-off. It requires serious legal activity, that requires serious strategic planning, and it requires serious financing, and it requires a resolve to stick to the battle on an ongoing basis.

Some of these cases in which the FDA has seized stuff and held it for years, never returned it, and never brought charges, may, right now, be ripe for such actions.

Martin: For many years the FDA, FTC, and Postal Authorities have gotten away with these actions. Do you think the time has finally come? Do you think there is a "collective consciousness" that we are finally there, that this kind of action will succeed?

Turner: I'm not sure. What I am clear about is that they have not gotten away with as much as you think. The FDA loses a lot of cases, and it's been called a lot of things by a lot of judges.

I'm not sure that the attitude of the public about this is quite accurate. I mean, if these cases can be defended and the information is brought to bear, judges have a strong record of ruling against the FDA. And the FDA has a strong record of ignoring that. The record is building.

I don't know that it's so much a level of consciousness as that the behavior of the FDA has been consistently outrageous for such a long time that there are more and more people who are aware of it and getting tired of it. When I say people, I'm talking about judges and lawyers and authorities.

One thing is that the FDA attorneys keep turning over. You get new, young attorneys constantly, and the same thing with the United States Attorney's offices. And these are not cases that are the high profile, glamorous, vigorous cases that the United States attorneys, and the FDA attorneys, make their reputations on. The result is, it's not like the best lawyering done; it's a very, very murky, unformed area.

It is a tragedy for the people in this country that their right to healthcare is being trampled by people who don't seem to consider it to be important.

Now, in the case of the United States attorney in San Diego, we sat down and had a very, very good meeting and presented, very seriously, what our intentions were in presenting our case, and we got a very, very respectful response from the United States attorney, from the inspectors that were there. They had people from the FDA and the Post Office Department, and I think there are also FTC people involved in those cases. We got a very respectful response, and we are going to present a full-blown case. We're going show what the law requires. And we're going to show the evidence we have that complies with the law.

We're going to make the argument that these instruments do, in fact, meet the requirements of the law. We're going to have scientific evidence, and we're going to have people testify that they were not, in any way, misled, and so forth. And we're going to make it clear that the law that needed to be met with here is the law that says you can't make false statements; you have to have substantiated statements on products of this kind. We will demonstrate that those were, in fact, made here. That's our plan.

Now, my point here is, in meeting that challenge as the first wing of having a battle, and these attorneys were very responsive, and the people who were the inspectors were very responsive. They understand what we are saying; we understand what they are saying; and we will go and have a full-blown legal action here. I would think, my own feeling is, they do not have the evidence to win a criminal case. That's my feeling. I, of course, am biased. I'm a lawyer for one of the sides.

Additionally, I believe that the evidence, when it stacks up before Congress, will cause them to reinforce the laws that they've passed in the past in saying that the public DOES have the right to make choices that are presented to them with substantiated claims, and then we need to get it clear to the decision makers that, in fact, that kind of information does exist.

Now, I don't know whether we're having an "opening of consciousness". I know that millions of people are spending billions of dollars going to people who are not part of the drug, surgery, and radiation medical establishment. And I think there are places for those things, but they are not the only thing that should be there. They're not even the primary thing that should be there. But I do believe that there is a huge new public awareness.

I believe that the record—actually, it's

Why the official story of 9/11 is a monumental lie

David Icke

$29.95 (+S/H)
Code: AIW (1.75 lb.)

Since September 11, 2001, the people of the world have been told the Big Lie. The official story of what happened on 9/11 is a fantasy of untruth, manipulation, contradiction, and anomaly. David Icke has spent well over a decade uncovering the force that was really behind those attacks and has traveled to 40 countries in pursuit of the truth.

When the attacks came, it was easy to recognize the "Hidden Hand" behind the cover story of "Bin Laden did it". Icke takes apart the official version of 9/11 and the "War on Terrorism" and shows that those responsible are much closer to home than a cave in Afghanistan. He explains why 9/11 was planned and to what end. It is vital to maintaining our freedom that the light shines on the lies and deceit behind September 11.

Icke also places these events in their true context as part of an agenda by hidden forces working behind the puppet politicians to create a global fascist state based on total control and surveillance. But it doesn't have to be like this; it does not have to happen. We can change the world from a prison to a paradise and, as Icke explains, the power to do that is within you and within us all.

been probably 60 years that the FDA has been behaving this way, the FDA, FTC, and Post Office have been behaving this way. They ran their great crusade against health alternatives starting in 1960, when they became very public and vigorous about it.

You have to remember: they launched a big campaign in 1964 to bring these things under control, and THEY WERE THROWN OUT OF COURT! They were again THROWN OUT OF COURT in 1974, by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, which threw them right out. They never brought those regulations back. In 1976 they had a million letters to Congress when the Proxmire Act passed.

Constantly, when this issue is focused and decision-makers have to decide whether it's the courts, the Congress, or the public, when decision-makers have to decide, they've invariably decided on behalf of the right of the individual to make informed choices. We need to just keep that in mind.

It isn't that we've been losing all the time; it's just that we've been cheated! They've been going around behind the backs of the authorities; they've been working in the dark, working in the alleys, working in the hidden corners. They've been intimidating individuals. They've not taken on the entire set of issues. That's the battle that we're going to have to bring home in the three areas that I've described—litigation, legislation, and education.

And I think that, if we systematically and firmly, over the next 3 years, do that battle, when we come out the other end we will, in fact, have gotten the rights the Congress has already made clear, and the Constitution makes clear; they will be once more reaffirmed, hopefully in a way that we can bring these authorities under control so that they will choose to go after people who are ACTUAL criminals. That's the plan.

Martin: Well said, very well said.

Turner: Any more questions, or is that enough?

Martin: I think you made such a beautiful statement just now, I hate to muddy the water.

Turner: Ok, let's just go with it.

Martin: Anything else you'd like to cover that we haven't?

Turner: I think that pretty well does it. We just need to get everybody who we can to enlist in this activity, and understand that it's on behalf of THEIR health. The potential for health in the world today is extraordinary. One of the greatest barriers to it is the authorities who are charged with "protecting us". And they go way, way out-of-bounds, and they actually undermine our own ability to be healthy by the way they behave.

Martin: That's right.

Turner: And, by the way, they do it to themselves, too! They're depriving themselves of these things.

Martin: Well, you know, Codex is still very much alive and well, internationally.

Turner: Yes, but that's under a lot of pressure, also. And it's going to be a long time before what they're trying to do happens. That gives us a lot of leverage to be able to make it not happen. This is all part of the same struggle.

Martin: More power to you, you're doing a great job.

Turner: Hang in there and keep it moving.

Closing Thoughts

In the last few weeks, the FDA and associates have continued their arrogant assault against vitamin manufacturers and "alternative" health practitioners in this country—as if they were smugly above the laws that pertain to the rest of us. To monitor the latest information and updates on these matters, refer to the timely websites in the box elsewhere in this article.

What's clear from all that we have examined above is that there's a very fundamental and important war taking place. This is a war for the rights of individuals to access a wide array of tools—from vitamins and herbs to Rife machines and light therapies (remember our June 2002 SPECTRUM)—which we choose for our own health and wellness. These rights will be completely taken away by aggressive forces of Big Business, using our taxpayer-supported governmental agencies as fronts, if they are allowed to do so.

A great way to prevent this continued assault against our right to good health is to be proactive in Operation Health Freedom—and including various action items that have been outlined herein. For the latest updates on what you can do, and how you can actively participate in your own health and wellness future, again: refer to the websites in the box elsewhere in this story.

In my opinion, the steps for corrective action outlined above

WOULD include criminal prosecution for those in such agencies as the FDA, FTC, and Postal Authorities who have participated in illegal activities through terrorizing American citizens and literally stealing private merchandise (grand theft) and private records of legitimate business. Until a message is sent, loud and clear, to those in bureaucratic fortresses (including even the American Medical Association and other related pharmaceutical fronts), these abuses will continue, unabated, as directed by international Big Business interests far removed from the public eye or general welfare.

Go back and re-read the astonishingly prophetic quote that began this article. Then consider that it was as late as 1990 when U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist stated the crux of the matter under discussion here: "(No) right is held more sacred, or is more carefully guarded, by the common law, than the right of every individual to the possession and control of his own person. Justice Cardozo aptly described this doctrine: 'Every human being of adult years and sound mind has a right to determine what shall be done with his own body.'"

How could an official national position be stated any more clearly or concisely? Now we need to make that position a matter of fact.

This is a challenging time when we must be awake, attentive, and active in networking with others who can assist in making a strong voice heard. A lone voice may be drowned through the tricks of the many agents of deception, but united our voices form a powerful, formidable chorus. Isn't it time this music filled the air?

"Medicine is a collection of uncertain prescriptions, the results of which, taken collectively, are more fatal than useful to mankind."

Take Time To Consult Your Higher Self's "To-Do List"

7/4/03 MASTER HILARION

Good afternoon, and blessings to you, my friend and scribe, for bringing through this message. Many are searching for the deeper truths that feed the hungry, and heal the hurting, soul. These ones recognize and greatly appreciate the confirmations of "the still, small voice within" which we of the Higher Realms offer as general messages through this publication conduit in response to your thoughts and prayers.

I am the Ascended Teacher known as Hilarion, Master of the Fifth Ray, the Emerald Ray of Healing. While that is my chosen focus at this time in my own evolution as a unique spark of Creator's Desire (just like are you), I come within the balanced White Light that is Creator's Will, for the upliftment of all who I may assist through these words.

Many are called, but few answer that call amidst the pressures and distractions of day-to-day living in your modern world. As we have so often pointed out, the Dark Energies who work in alignment with the Great Deceiver are masters of distraction. Besieging most of you ones experiencing on schoolroom Earth, these Dark Energies draw from a nearly endless "bag of tricks" to keep you running in circles—sometimes literally.

While your life may seem full and busy from the point of view of your "day-planner" books, I am here referring to the view from the perspective of the spiritual growth objectives that your Higher Self (the Soul You) set out for you to accomplish in your journey in the Earth schoolroom environment.

This is why we have, so many times in these messages, recommended strongly that you take some time EACH DAY to be quiet and listen within. Otherwise you can proceed through an entire "busy and seemingly full" lifetime, only to do what so many do: Transition, arrive at the "other side", and while reviewing the life you just departed from, marvel at how you got so far off track from what you originally intended to do in that life.

In many ways it's a lot like the jokes some wives tell of sending their husbands shopping for them. The husbands were sent, with a list, for some essentials at the grocery store. But on the way they got distracted by the "Big Sale!" sign at the hardware store, and came home with a new lawnmower blade and doorbell button—but completely forgot about the essentials they were supposed to get at the grocery, having never looked at the list in their pocket.

Perhaps those hardware items are likewise useful to have at some point, but a little bit of time spent consulting the list in the pocket would have made for a far more rewarding overall shopping trip in terms of accomplishing the goal of what was really needed at that time.

My scribe was first exposed to the "busy-ness" distraction phenomena many years ago after moving from a small and quiet locale to one populated with a lot of "successful professionals" of great fame and outward (material) accomplishment. It astonished my scribe to regularly observe (with some amusement and even more uncharitable disgust) these busy ones racing out their driveways to, say, a "save the whales" meeting—while in the process nearly running over their elderly neighbor who they never took the time to speak with, and yet who would have dearly loved the company of a neighborly visit now and then.

(And as my scribe came to find out, because of taking the time to be neighborly, the elderly lady turned out to be an endless and colorful source of the history of that illustrious neighborhood wherein, for example, two young college guys, working out of the garage next door, in the 1930s, started building electrical equipment in an enterprise that later grew into a very famous modern corporation.)

One of the biggest distraction tricks used by the Dark Energies on you more "metaphysically aware" ones is the justification (excuse) of having "endless time" from the soul's point of view. The quiet whisperings in your ear go like this: If you don't get something accomplished now, in this life, you can always "get it right" at a later time, since the soul's time is infinite.

Because that statement is quite true (as far as it goes), it makes the perfect hook for the Dark Tricksters to use to pull you off your path. And most people fall for it every time—especially when your Higher Self's "to-do" list contains tough challenges that you (the physical you) would rather not deal with.

In point of fact, a great deal of the need for Healing (my department) on your planet is due to you ones employing a wide array of "half-truths" as subtle excuses to justify avoiding the important matters impinging upon your life, meanwhile filling up that “day-planner” book with so much grandly justified busy-ness that you run out of pages.

What then gradually happens is that a kind of internal “tension” begins to build within you in direct proportion to how far “off course” you are from the direction your Higher Self intended for this life. That “tension” in turn is at the root of precipitating many (if not most or all) physical and mental ailments. Remember that your renowned psychic Edgar Cayce always referred to illness as dis-ease—and for very good reason!

One of “our” teachers who is on your Earth plane at this time has a very popular television program helping people to heal from residual traumas associated with the death of loved ones. At least once every program this teacher will remind both the studio audience and the vast television viewing audience how important it is to interact with loved ones while they’re still alive, rather than running to a medium to “bridge the gap” once the loved ones have passed on.

You see, dear ones, it’s true that your journey of the soul exists within an infinite span of time. But consider, then: Why do ones feel so bad inside when certain “terminal” events occur? Why do ones often feel the nagging effects of missed opportunities and a weight of regret on their backs? And why do these feelings sometimes run so deep that they produce long-term mental problems like depression or other incapacitating trauma?

Because, dear ones, your heart mind recognizes—and appreciates more fully than you do consciously—the exquisite interplay at many levels that draws opportunities (gifts of growth) to you in the first place. The fact that “all is connected” implies a level of profound interaction well beyond the appreciation of the conscious mind, but not the heart mind. Thus, on a much more profound plateau, the heart mind sees “missed” opportunities of soul growth in the same way as your conscious mind sees the missed errands of the shopping trip.

The “tensions” develop and accumulate when you make yourself so busy (superficially distracted) that you neglect to pull the “to-do list” from your Higher Self out of your pocket—to remind yourself what it is you (the Soul You) truly desire to accomplish NOW, in THIS life, in relation to other people and events also a part of your experiential time-frame.

You are experiencing in a time when great healing is possible. Your Higher Self chose for you to be where you are at this time, knowing that these healing conditions would exist, along with coordinated challenges, as a tremendous opportunity environment for soul-growth. It would thus be wise to take the time and make the effort to recognize and eliminate what may be mere busy clutter in your daily lives. And in so doing, you will find that you move into a healing state of greater heart-satisfaction and inner peace.

Remember that you are NEVER alone, and the call for help will ALWAYS receive an answer from we of the Higher Realms. Be attentive and open to whatever response(s) you may receive, and you will be well on your way to a healthy life. Keep in mind that a productive life means neither crawling into a cave of isolation and fear, nor going bonkers in a whirlwind of chaos. A little time spent each day in contemplation of your purpose can make all the difference between filling your life with food for the soul or cluttering your days with distractions you later regret.

I am Master Hilarion. I leave you now in the Great Healing Light of Creator. May you each regularly go within to consult your “to-do list” and KNOW it points the way to not only personal healing, but by extension, also to the healing of your entire world!

Do you enjoy the spiritual messages shared here in The SPECTRUM? If so then you won't want to miss these two volumes packed full of earlier shared messages.

“Our Elder Brothers from the Higher Realms of Creation are attempting to communicate with ALL of us at this time. Why? Take a look around you. The old ways of doing things aren't working. Our planet is entering a time of massive, turbulent change and renewal. To put it bluntly: we NEED help! And that's where these books come into the picture. Yes, eventually 'the Phoenix will arise from the ashes' after this Great Cleansing process, but the ride could be quite a bumpy one,

especially for those ill-prepared for what is to happen.”

— Back Cover, Vol. I

“Let us begin with WHO you are. You, the non-physical YOU, are an infinite thought projection of the One who created you. (God!) You are the product of His desire. You are, in effect, Desire manifest in uniqueness of purpose.”

— Esu “Jesus” Sananda (Vol. II)

More Quotes From Volume II

“Be not in fear of the changes that are upon you, for they are a very necessary part of the [planetary] transition. The Earth will heave to and fro, and many wondrous things will you experience, but lose not your sight upon the final goal. We will always be there with you, and we are but a call away.”

— Ceres Anthonious “Toniose” Soltec

— Sanat Kumara (“Grandfather”)

“The physical body is ‘merely’ a conduit for the interaction into and the interfacing with the physical experience. I say ‘merely’ because that body is a most exquisite creation indeed and poorly understood by your current level of so-called medical science.”

— Master Hilarion

“Be at peace, you who acknowledge and take within these messages of Higher Guidance, for you are being given that which you will need, in the way of instruction, to meet and surmount these challenges ahead.”

Bush's "Good Ol' Boys" Ties To Clear Channel Radio

Editor's note: Longtime readers of The SPECTRUM are in general well aware of the quiet yet firm governmental controls over the supposedly "free speech" print and broadcast media here in the United States. It's a big reason The SPECTRUM exists.

However, since Junior Bush was placed in office, and so-called "Homeland Security" measures were put in place, many have noticed a much tighter control now being exercised over American media outlets. Some Russians in the present-day United States have even jokingly commented that it feels a lot like the "old days" in the Soviet Union, where you just got used to taking the opposite of what Pravda propagandized in order to arrive at a pretty accurate version of what was actually going on.

Of course, related to another good article in this month's SPECTRUM, more and more of the public are awakening to the fraud of a "rubber stamp" Congress that shows few signs of minding the store they've been charged with overseeing. How else would Bush Junior have gotten placed in office? How else would such Gestapo legislation like the Homeland Security Act and Patriot Act have arrived into law? Or more to the point here, how else would Junior Powell be running the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) so as to promote large media conglomerates?

With that in mind, we share the following "aha!" information that reveals just how tight the connections are between Bush and a very major media conglomerate. Of course readers of The SPECTRUM are likely to further discern the "shadows" of those behind-the-scenes controllers from higher up the Pyramid of Power who manipulate both Bush AND the media as puppet-tools to, in turn, manipulate the minds of a largely unsuspecting public.

This superb information is excerpted from the always informative www.takebackthemediasite.com website, for 6/4/03; and they, in turn, credit the New York Press and a skilled journalist pen-named "Atrios" for 3/20/03, with their article titled "Bush Ties To Clear Channel Radio Conglomerate". Given the present rather "deadly" environment toward honest media reporting (such as befell some Iraq War journalists till the rest of them got the message), the choice of a pen-name is certainly understandable when presenting information of this nature.

6/4/03 "ATRIOS"

Clear Channel Worldwide Inc., the nation's largest owner of radio stations (over 1200 stations in all 50 states and DC), sponsored the numerous "patriotic rallies" which were held in various cities around the country. They organized, advertised, provided speakers and entertainment for them, and even handed out numerous American flags to participants.

While Clear Channel promoted these as patriotic rallies, the attendees obviously felt otherwise. In addition to waving their provided flags, they also held signs condemning their fellow Americans—liberals, Hollywood, the Dixie Chicks. They were not so much patriotic rallies as pro-war rallies, and not so much pro-war rallies as rallies against anyone who opposes the Bush Administration's policies.

There are close ties between the company and President Bush. The Vice Chair of the company is Tom Hicks, a member of the Bush Pioneer Club for elite (and generous) donors. The relationship between Bush and Hicks goes back even further, however.

The two were embroiled in scandal when Hicks, as University of Texas Regent, was responsible for granting endowment management contracts of the newly created (under legislation signed by Bush) UT Investment Management Co. or UTIMCO. The contracts were given to firms politically connected to both Hicks and Bush, including the Carlyle Group—a firm which has the first President Bush on the payroll and had the second one on the payroll until just weeks before receiving this lucrative business.

The board of UTIMCO also included the Chair of Clear Channel, L. Lowry Mays. In addition, Hicks purchased the Texas Rangers from George Bush, making him a wealthy man through a deal that was partially sweetened by a shiny new taxpayer-financed stadium, which included valuable land obtained at below market rates through the use of eminent domain.

Whether or not the close ties between the radio behemoth Clear Channel and the president have anything to do with their rallying support for his policies is unclear. If it were a small company, it would not much matter. But Clear Channel is a media giant, dominating the radio and promotion industries. The potential for the alignment of big media and the government should concern us all, especially as FCC Chair Michael Powell [son of Gen. Colin Powell] continues to push to reduce the barriers to even further media consolidation.

*A BuzzFlash News Analysis
(www.buzzflash.com)*

It's no coincidence that Clear Channel

"The hand that rules the press, the radio, the screen, and the far-spread magazine, rules the country."

— Learned Hand (memorial address for Justice Brandeis, December 21, 1942) executives Tom Hicks and L. Lowry Mays have contributed tens of thousands of dollars to Bush's gubernatorial and presidential campaign coffers. Or that Clear Channel gave $119,370 in "soft money" to Republicans in 2001-2002, this on top of the $82,850 it gave in 2000. (Democrats, meanwhile, got $25,000 in soft money in that same three-year period.) Or that Clear Channel stations have been known to pull radio ads criticizing Republicans.

So what, if anything, did Clear Channel hope to gain by currying favor with a pro-war Washington? Well, consider that Congress is currently studying the effects of media consolidation and may make changes that could affect Clear Channel's reach.

Concerned that media ownership is concentrated in too few hands, Sen. Russell Feingold (D-WI) introduced the Competition In Radio And Concert Industries Act in 2002, which would limit further deregulation. The Senate Commerce Committee has held hearings on the legislation, and the Federal Communications Commission has scheduled a vote for June 2. [They relaxed the rules, as you would expect.]

FCC Chairman Michael Powell—yes, son of THAT Powell—already has indicated that media-ownership regulations could be relaxed even beyond that of the 1996 Telecommunications Act that enabled Clear Channel to go from owning 36 radio stations (four less than the former legal limit) to becoming the largest radio station owner in the United States. Clear Channel executives like Powell's thinking; they're not as fond of Feingold's.

After all, life's been pretty good for Clear Channel. While the number of radio stations it owns comprises 10% of the nation's total, Clear Channel takes in 20% of all radio advertising revenue ($16 BILLION in 2001) and reaches 25% of total listeners. It also owns approximately 39 television stations and more than 770,000 billboards.

Clear Channel is also the biggest live-concert promotions firm, which has angered some in the music world. Recording artists, for example, have alleged that Clear Channel "punishes" musicians who do not hire Clear Channel as their tour promoter by reducing the number of times their album is played on certain stations or by taking it out of rotation. Clear Channel, of course, denies the charges.

Certainly all the negative publicity has gotten to Clear Channel. It recently hired a public relations firm to improve its image and Washington DC lobbyists to help its cause.

Just last week, Clear Channel announced it was doing away with the pay-for-play system whereby record companies funnel money through independent promoters to radio stations in exchange for airplay. Instead, Clear Channel proposed a "new, restructured relationship with the recording industry...on specific group-wide contesting, promotions, and marketing opportunities."

But unless anyone thinks this is a step toward a new, improved Clear Channel, consider what one artist manager told the Chicago Tribune: "Clear Channel is getting rid of indie promoters so they can work more directly with the labels and artists? We'd better all keep a hand on our wallets."

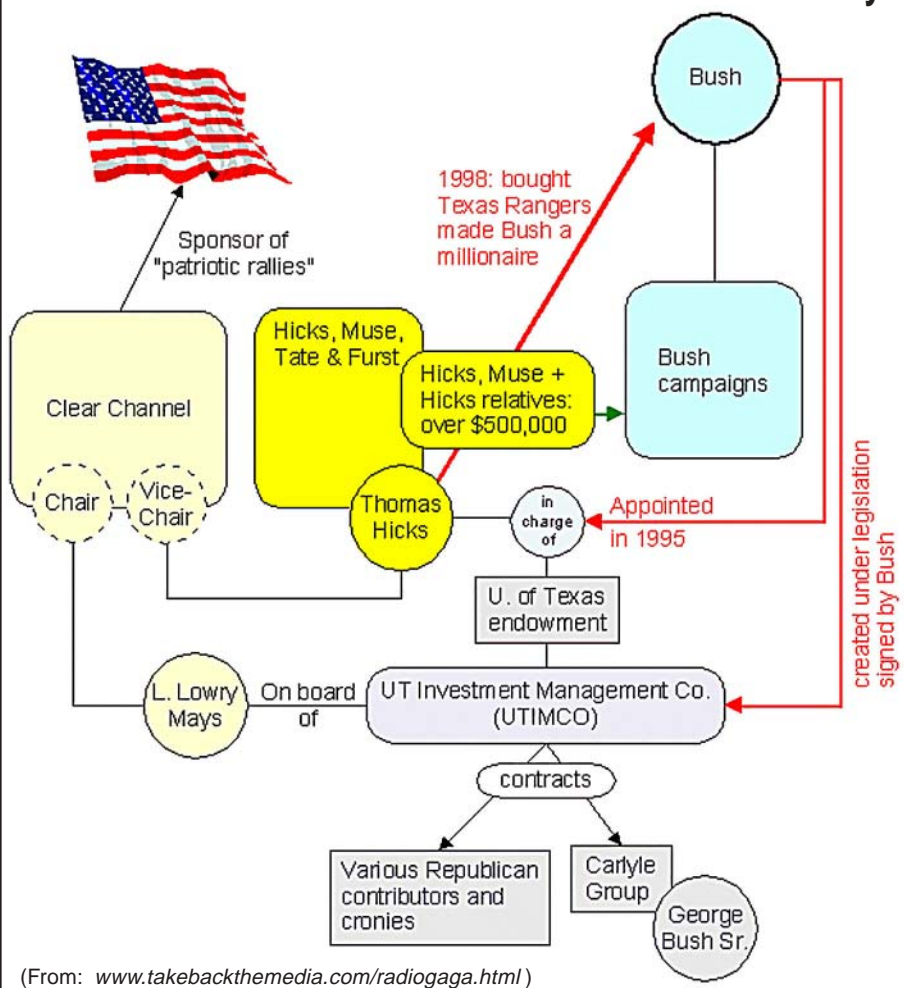

Clear Channel has long been a source of frustration for the music industry—as well as anyone who longs for radio diversity. But its political interests didn't attract much attention until recently.

After September 11, to the amusement/horror of music critics and radio industry professionals, Clear Channel issued a list of 150 songs to its member stations that it deemed too sensitive to play in the wake of the terrorist attacks. The list included an odd mix of songs: the more understandable choices featured flight references (Bennie And The Jets and Ticket To Ride); others were associated with New York (On Broadway); and, most surprisingly, many were related to peace (Bridge Over Troubled Water and Imagine). The list also included all songs by the political rock group Rage Against the Machine. Clear Channel had, overnight, become the new arbiter on music-to-grieve-by.

One month later, the Clear Channel-owned radio station KMEL in San Francisco fired its popular community affairs director, David "Davey D" Cook, shortly after his show aired the anti-war views of Rep. Barbara Lee, the lone member of Congress to vote against military action in Afghanistan, and rapper Boots Riley of the Coup. The

SCIENCE, POLITICS, AND THE NEW MILLENNIUM by Dr. Nick Begich

Best selling author and lecturer Dr. Nick Begich presents an overview of the HAARP (High-Frequency Active Auroral Research Program) transmitter and antenna in Alaska. His countless years of research helps to provide a glimpse of new technological achievements that can help better the environment and reshape mankind in the future. Pulling from an array of extensive documentation from government, academic, and media sources, Begich is able to explain the big picture in terms that anyone can understand. There was a city-wide power loss shortly after Begich began his presentation, but through the use of a quickly placed battery pack, very little of this valuable presentation was lost.

station claimed it did so for financial reasons.

As the San Francisco Bay Guardian reported in January 2003, KMEL had been a "national radio powerhouse" and was responsible for helping launch the careers of rappers like Tupac Shakur. All that changed after KMEL was bought by AMFM, Inc. in the late 1990s, which itself was bought by Clear Channel in 1999. As has happened in so many other cities, a once vibrant station was turned into yet another bland clone, and the firing of Cook only confirmed that KMEL was no longer interested in its community base.

Then, in 2002, Clear Channel gave $420,000 to the United Service Organizations "in recognition of the sacrifices made by the men and women in the armed forces. The donation will enable the USO to continue its mission of providing quality programs and services to our military personnel and their families" according to a press release. This "donation" raises more questions about Clear Channel's ability to provide objective coverage—which it also compromised with the "Rally For America".

And it makes one wonder if the artists performing for the troops overseas had to sign deals with Clear Channel as well. It would be nice to think the $420,000 was nothing more than a benevolent gesture, Clear Channel's no-strings-attached gift to the troops (albeit one no other media owner seems to have made), but history makes this doubtful.

Earlier this year, a Philadelphia radio talk-show host by the name of Glenn Beck proposed the first "Rally With America". Beck's show is syndicated by Premier Radio Networks, a Clear Channel subsidiary that also syndicates Rush Limbaugh and Laura Schlessinger, among other conservatives.

[Editor's note: Premier Radio Networks also took over Art Bell's vastly popular and equally informative (but hardly conservative) longtime late-night talk-radio program several years ago. "Coincidentally" soon thereafter began the "back problems" experienced by Art that led to his "retirement" and replacement with new, more conservative host George Noory.

Confirming what this article outlines, it is repeatedly and bluntly obvious to careful listeners that the new show exhibits a philosophy of very little tolerance for the expression of any kind of anti-Bush views—in the spirit of "patriotism" of course.

Which reminds me (E.Y.) of an event worth sharing from several months ago on that show.

Finally, after likely much audience request pressure for a long time, the show had longtime SPECTRUM friend David Icke as a guest on 4/30/03. During that program, David executed one of the most smoothly "athletic" maneuvers I've ever witnessed on controlled radio of jumping over hurdles to get out Truth.

This happened at one point far into the interview, when David started talking about the longtime criminal enterprises of the Bush family, a subject very familiar to SPECTRUM readers. Host George Noory quickly cut him off with something like: "Now, now, David! Be nice. We can't have any unsubstantiated allegations on this show about our president and his family."

To which David graciously yet commandingly shot back something like: "Well, ok, George; maybe we can't talk about the Bush family's many crimes on YOUR show, but your listeners can still go to any of several of my books for quite a few facts concerning the Bush family's longtime criminal track record." George said nothing and David just moved on to his next point.

Just look at that maneuver, worthy of—ahem—a good soccer player! David acknowledged and respected George's position of fear and control. Yet without so much as a millisecond pause to collect his thoughts, at the same time David still managed to air a brief commentary on Bush family shenanigans to support the rest of his discussion material, and additionally managed to create a lot of curiosity in listeners who DO want to know more about that subject, AND got in a commercial to direct those so interested to his excellent books that cover what he couldn't discuss further on the air! What better response in a heavily controlled environment could one ask for?]

The idea quickly spread, with rallies taking place in Cleveland, Atlanta, San Antonio, and other cities. A spokesperson for Clear Channel said the rallies were organized independently by radio stations in participating cities "in response to the expressed desires of their listeners and communities". They are, however, promoted on Clear Channel's website, and Clear Channel is the only major media company to back war-related events.

"I think this is pretty extraordinary" former FCC Commissioner Glen Robinson, who teaches law at the University of Virginia, told the Chicago Tribune in March. "I can't say that this violates any of a broadcaster's obligations, but it sounds like borderline manufacturing the news."

So how does any of this relate to Bush?

Let's go back to 1989. Bush has just invested $605,000—money he borrowed—in a syndicate that bought the Texas Rangers. (He would later repay the loan with proceeds from the sale of Harken stock. Remember Harken?) Though Bush had a 1.8% share of the club, the terms of this deal with the Rangers specified that once his partners made back their investment, his share would jump to 11%.

The Rangers' stadium was on the small side, so the new owners decided a grand, new stadium was in order. A 13-acre parcel of land was bought in Arlington, Texas, at below-market rates. "Bush and his partners used Arlington's [municipal] powers to condemn the land for the stadium, and relied on taxpayers to repay the bonds sold to build the Ballpark—receiving what amounts to a direct $135 million subsidy" wrote Robert Bryce of the Austin Chronicle. (Indeed, a jury later found that the ballpark property's original owners were owed more than six times what they were paid.)

When the new stadium was completed in 1993, the value of the Rangers immediately increased by $26 million, to $132 million. In 1997, Financial World magazine named the ballpark the most profitable stadium in major league baseball. But it wasn't worth $250 million.

Yet, in 1998, Tom Hicks, a friend of Bush, bought the Rangers for this enormous amount, making Bush—who walked away with close to $15 million—a very, very rich man. But then, Hicks had done pretty well for himself in previous years, thanks in part to Bush.

When Bush became governor in 1995, Hicks, who was then head of the corporate raider firm Hicks, Muse, Tate & Furst, was confirmed as a University of Texas regent. Hicks hired lobbyists to garner support for a bill—which Bush approved—creating the UT Investment Management Company (UTIMCO), a nonprofit corporation dedicated to managing public university money.

The best part: Bush also got rid of the requirements to disclose "all details concerning the investments made and the income realized" and to have "a well-recognized performance measurement service" review the investments. UTIMCO was, in essence, left to operate on its own.

Hicks became UTIMCO's first chair and started handing out contracts to private investment firms to manage some of the endowment. He was aided by none other than Clear Channel's chairman and CEO, L. Lowry Mays, who was also on the board (and still is).

According to the Houston Chronicle, by March 1999, UTIMCO handled more than $11 billion of University of Texas endowment money, along with the state's higher education trust, the Permanent University Fund. Close to $2 billion was handed to private investment management companies—hundreds of millions of which ended up in the hands of firms run by associates of Hicks and major Republican Party donors. One of them, the Carlyle Group, is well known for its financial relationships with President Bush and prominent members of the Reagan/Bush Administrations.

Of course, this didn't sit well with everyone in Texas. Flogged by the press, Hicks didn't seek reappointment when his term expired in 1999.

No matter. Like Mays, Tom Hicks and his brother, R. Steven Hicks, had also gotten into the media business. In 1999, they merged their radio companies into AMFM, Inc. That same year, Clear Channel bought AMFM, and Tom Hicks became Clear Channel's vice chairman.

According to Salon's Eric Boehlert, who has written a series of articles on Clear Channel, Mays paid $24 billion for the Hicks' AMFM, thus positing Clear Channel as "king of radio's hill".

Money, remember, makes the world go around.

* * *

What is clear about Clear Channel is that it can't be disentangled from Bush's personal fortune or his public policy.

THE IMPORTANCE OF HOW AND WHEN THE CROP CIRCLE PHENOMENON BEGAN by Colin Andrews.

One of the earliest and best-known crop circle researchers and authors, Colin became involved in this mystery when, in 1983, he saw a quintuplet formation near his home in Andover, England. An electrical engineer by training, he was intrigued about what forces could create such perfect glyphs in crop fields. In 1989 he and Pat Delgado wrote Circular Evidence, a best-seller, followed by Crop Circles: The Latest Evidence, a year later. Colin founded Circles Phenomenon Research International (CPRI) and later moved to Connecticut. His scientific investigations have been widely recognized as models in the field and he has been featured in many crop circle documentaries. Recently, he has stated that while he considers many complex formations to be man-made, one cannot rule out unknown paranormal involvement in the rest.

SACRED GEOMETRY WORKSHOP by Drunvalo Melchizedek.

Drunvalo's information was given to him from 1972 through the 1980s by Thoth, best known as the Egyptian deity of inner wisdom pertaining to science, mathematics, and literature. Since the 1980s, Drunvalo has been presenting his Flower of Life Workshops (either personally or through his trained facilitators). His work has been spread to at least 40 countries, is taught in many languages (such as Spanish, Dutch, German, French, Japanese), and has deeply touched thousands of people around the globe. When the teachings of geometry are used to show the ancient truth that all life emerges from the same blueprint, we can clearly see that life springs from the same source—the intelligent, unconditionally loving Creative Force some call "God". When geometry is used to express and explore this great truth, a broader understanding of the universe unfolds until we can see that all aspects of reality become sacred. The ancients, such as the Egyptians, Mayans, and others all knew this truth and incorporated sacred geometry teachings into their mystery schools as a way for anyone to begin to practically understand his or her personal relationship to "God" and the universe. In this presentation, Drunvalo speaks on the experience in his life that led him on the path to practicing the Flower of Life teachings. A full two-hour presentation on the Flower of Life and sacred geometry.

The merger of government and business in the current Administration goes far beyond the workings of any previous president.

As Michael Lind, author of Made In Texas, told BuzzFlash in an interview, Bush, a failed businessman and mediocre student, excels at one thing: the practice of corporate cronyism. In the ideal world of corporate cronyism, a tight-knit group of businessmen and government officials operate as one seamless entity of mutually beneficial economic forces. It's a plutocratic version of socialism, where the state and the privileged business compadres of those running the government march lockstep together to achieve corporate welfare goals, funded by the taxpayer. It's an economic system where access to the marketplace is limited to a close-knit group of cronies and campaign contributors. It has as much in common with a truly free market system as communism.

In the case of Clear Channel, the "Support Our Troops" rally was an extension of the Karl Rove strategy to force peace advocates to appear to be opposing our troops by not supporting the Iraq war. Furthermore, since the support for the war was lukewarm, Rove knew that the rallies had to be packaged as gatherings, to show backing for the young men and women who would do the fighting. Clear Channel fulfilled this strategy, although the numbers attending their thinly veiled pro-war rallies paled in comparison to the [many] hundreds of thousands who attended peace marches and events.

In many ways, Clear Channel has become the radio version of Fox News: You can find virtually nothing in its musical playlist or agenda that is not consistent with the Bush Cartel public relations agenda.

With increased deregulation, the mutual financial benefits that the Bush Cartel and the owners of Clear Channel have enjoyed will just be another representation of the growing cancer of corporate socialist cronyism, in which the crony media barons use their stations and papers to advance the political agenda of the Bush Administration—and contribute to Republican coffers. In turn, the Bush Cartel takes steps—such as increased deregulation—that enable increased profitability among the Bush Cartel media cronies.

Of course, if you are not a crony, it's not really socialism for you.

No, if you are not a crony, it's using the government for highway robbery—by making such robbery legal.

Bob Beck's Research On "Bio-Electrical Cleansing"

Editor's note: The following article is being shared in conjunction with our front-page feature story this month (as well as last month), especially for our many new readers. What you are about to read is updated from an article that originally appeared in our long out-of-print (and now infamous) "Black Pope" issue of May 2000.

At that time, 3+ years ago, the "health war" that's now heated up to battle-ready conditions was still only simmering. That was a time when a small-but-rapidly-growing number of informed people were quietly searching out "kinder and gentler" (not to mention much more effective and much less expensive) alternatives to the conventional medical treatments they were feeling coerced into accepting.

But even those mildly climbing numbers of searchers alarmed the forward-thinking bosses of Big Business who, in conjunction with their Medical Gestapo terrorist organizations worldwide, planned the global strategies which, when soon implemented, were supposed to squash those profit-threatening alternative healing modalities once and for all—and bring the wayward sheep back into the fold of the "true religion".

One such cheap, effective—and thus definitely quite threatening—arena of non-drug healing options is called electromedicine. And one of the modern pioneers (and SPECTRUM friend) who developed brilliantly simple technologies related to that field was Dr. Robert C. Beck, D.Sc. On Sunday, June 23, 2002, as a result of complications from a nasty fall, Bob transitioned back up into the Higher Realms from which he was surely sent as a gift of love to help his fellow mankind.

For many years Bob Beck freely gave away the fruits of his creative discoveries and deceptively simple inventions in the field that could be called "bio-electrical cleansing techniques". He deserves much praise for his refreshingly humanitarian approach to helping people see how to achieve a level of wellness not possible with conventional medical methods.

As you may suspect, he was often under the scrutiny of the Medical Gestapo for proposing and freely offering techniques which cost mere pennies to employ—as opposed to the lucrative and often dangerous choices that the pharmaceutical cartel works to manipulate you into believing are your only options. And yet he persisted.

With the well-honed traps and trickery of that Medical Gestapo in mind, you will note the following information is liberally sprinkled with conditional words like "theoretical" and "hypothetical" and "experimental"—to

4/19/00 NEWS DESK SPECIAL

Who Is

Dr. Robert C. (Bob) Beck?

In 1992, Dr. Beck was a highly respected research physicist, recently retired from his work with government contracts that were often classified, from his own business interests, and from his work as a university lecturer. He was known for his leading-edge designs in measuring subtle magnetic fields and extremely low-frequency fields.

His last research project in the early 1980s, that focused on the brain and altered states of consciousness, resulted in the design of the Brain Tuner. This won him an award from the John Fitzer Foundation.

That all changed when he read about a research project at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City [which was mentioned in the front-page feature story of last month's SPECTRUM]. In March 1991 Science News magazine gave a brief report that said: "Zapping the AIDS virus with low-voltage electric current can nearly eliminate its ability to infect human white blood cells cultured in the laboratory...."

Doctors William Lyman and Steven Kaali also presented their research at a symposium. This research piqued Bob Beck's interest, but he found only closed doors when he tried to get further information. The paper they presented had been deleted from the symposium report.

[Editor's note: As a small yet revealing aside, how many of you remember back to what happened when one particular guest host of Art Bell's widely popular late-night talk-radio program bumped into Dr. Beck and his discoveries for the first time? This was back when Art "retired" the first time and the network was testing out a good replacement candidate.

First, one night, a caller alerted the guest host to this subject, and the guest host retorted: "Something that remarkable just can't be true, or I would know about it!" Then a week or so later (1/17/00) the same guest host, now more informed and humbled (from probably having eaten quite a bit of crow once he found out just how many years Dr. Beck's devices had been around), has Dr. Beck and related guests on the show; it was a wonderful and powerful program.

The guest host is all excited by this time and, when enthusiastic "open lines" call-in responses persisted for several subsequent evenings (despite other guests and their topics having been presented in the meantime), he gushes that this electromedicine stuff is the best thing since indoor plumbing and should receive wide attention.

But then, a day or so later, that very popular and exceedingly competent guest host (who was obviously about to be crowned with the hosting job on a permanent basis) is all of a sudden gone from the program. Poof! New host arrives with no explanation of why. Coincidence?

And before "disappearing" from his job hosting that show, this guest host mentioned he had an extremely difficult (and ultimately unsuccessful) time, though he persisted valiantly, trying to get either of the two above-mentioned primary authors/researchers from Albert Einstein College of Medicine to be guests on the program. Since when have you known such "shyness" to be so prevalent, especially when the discovery is of such an outstanding and far-reaching magnitude?]

In 1993, after a patent was filed (U.S. Patent No. 5,188,738) showing how microcurrents would neutralize pathogens such as viruses and bacteria, he was finally able to get the details. The patent was based on using a medical procedure to remove blood from the body in order to treat it with microcurrents of electricity. He later found this research was a rediscovery, as many patents had been filed over the years showing the efficacy of electricity for health.

[Editor's note: And that last point is a very important and solidly demonstrable fact which various legal teams are utilizing in their counter-attack against the pharmaceutical cartel's stranglehold on our health choices. The Truth eventually reveals itself.]

Dr. Beck applied his genius to come up with a method to pass the necessary microcurrents into blood while it still flowed undisturbed in the body.

Dr. Beck's research is fully described in his latest [at that time, three years ago] Workshop Handout entitled "Take Back Your Power". In this detailed report, learn how to build your own electrical devices for health—including the "Electrical Pulse Box" blood cleaner, the magnetic pulser, ionic/silver colloidal generator, and water ozonator. Please refer to the Sharing Health Products website (sharinghealth.com) for how to order this must-read collection of Dr. Beck's many years of research.

Dr. Beck built several units to experiment on himself and for friends. Bob eventually re-grew a healthy head of hair and lost his excess weight. This gave him a new lease on life.

He also took the initiative to fund a study with two medical doctors who were treating AIDS patients. While each of the patients who stayed with the blood electrification protocol became symptom free, their PCR test results were not consistent. (The PCR test has now been exposed as unreliable and never intended to measure HIV.) The study was discontinued without being published.

Word started to spread as Bob and those who regularly met with him over breakfast were getting healthier—avoiding colds and the flu. He gives credit to blood electrification, ionic-colloidal silver, and the magnetic pulse generator for his now healthy head of hair.

In 1997, Sharing Health From The Heart Inc. was told by one health practitioner that he had known Bob Beck for many years. Having watched the improvement in health in Bob and those around him, he decided there had to be something good about blood electrification.

In addition to blood electrification [via the electrical pulse box], Dr. Beck devised a simple method to produce ionic-colloidal silver in the home [using this same electrical pulse box]. This revived interest in an almost forgotten natural antibiotic [for which so many suppliers were charging exorbitant prices for what costs mere pennies to produce].

The AIDS project also brought to his attention the importance of the lymph system and the need to clear pathogens that could easily lay dormant there and later reinfect the blood. His "Magnetic Pulse Generator" was born [distinct from the electrical pulse box] to create the necessary microcurrents in the lymph and tissue.

He then started lecturing at health

How Can Electricity Help Restore Health?

Check The Beck Protocol ... A First-Aid Kit for the Future

The healing power of gentle currents of electricity was known in ancient Rome (electric fish) and was used extensively in spas and clinics before The Medical Health Model was established. Today The Natural Health Model recognizes the electrical nature of the body and the importance of working with the body's natural ability to heal itself.

The Beck Protocol offers a four-part program for health using micro-currents of electricity (Silver Pulser), pulsed magnetic fields (Magnetic Pulser), Ionic-Colloidal Silver and freshly Ozonated Water.

shows to let others know of his discoveries and experiences. He was careful not to sell anything except the information with the schematics [as his following technical papers describe] to allow others to build their own units.

Instead he endorsed a manufacturer: SOTA Instruments Inc. (sotainstruments.com) [this is a very reputable company that has been a longtime advertiser in The SPECTRUM].

In 1996, when SOTA Instruments, Inc. expanded their line to include the Silver Pulser and Magnetic Pulser, Dr. Beck immediately gave the units his enthusiastic endorsement. When Dr. Beck came up with the idea of freshly ozonating a glass of water to help flush out toxins, he endorsed SOTA's Water Ozonator as well.

Russell J. Torlage, founder of SOTA Instruments Inc., worked closely with Dr. Beck to ensure any design changes met with his approval.

A native of Fort Worth, Texas, Mr. Marrs earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in journalism from the University of North Texas in 1966 and attended Graduate School at Texas Tech in Lubbock for two years more. He has worked for several Texas newspapers, including the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, where beginning in 1968 he served as police reporter. Mr. Marrs then became a general-assignments reporter covering stories locally, in Europe, and the Middle East. After a leave of absence to serve with a Fourth Army intelligence unit during the Vietnam War, he became military and aerospace writer for the newspaper and an investigative reporter. Since 1980, Mr. Marrs has been a freelance writer and public relations consultant. He also published a rural weekly newspaper along with a monthly tourism tabloid, a cable television show and several videos. Since 1976, Mr. Marrs has taught a course on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy at the University of Texas at Arlington. In 1989, his book Crossfire: The Plot That Killed Kennedy was published to critical acclaim, and within three years had gone into an eighth printing in both hardbound and softbound editions. Crossfire reached the New York Times Paperback Non-Fiction Best Seller list in mid-February 1992 and remained there for more than six weeks. His book became a basis for the Oliver Stone film JFK. Mr. Marrs served as a chief consultant for both the film's screenplay and production. Mr. Marrs has appeared on ABC, NBC, CBS, CNN, CSPAN, the Discovery, Learning, and History Channels, This Morning America, Geraldo, Montell Williams, Today, and The Larry King and Art Bell radio programs.

ALIEN AGENDA: Investigating The Extraterrestrial Presence Among Us

BY JIM MARRS

Jim Marrs is best known for Crossfire: The Plot That Killed Kennedy (1989), the book that Oliver Stone's film JFK was partially based on. Now Marrs attacks new mysteries and conspiracies in this extensive review of UFO history and government cover-ups. After describing his own UFO sighting near Jackson, Mississippi, in 1952, Marrs recounts his involvement with other UFO cases as a newspaper reporter, and his suspicions that the U.S. government knows much more about aliens than it will admit. He incorporates an ample amount of information from UFO books of the 1960s and 1970s—strange lights on the Moon, the ancient-astronaut theories of Erich von Daniken, cattle mutilations, Nazi saucers at the South Pole, the contactees of the 1950s—and updates it credibly with UFO data from the 1980s and 1990s, providing a reasonable survey of abductions, secret underground UFO bases, the MJ-12 group, crop circles, remote viewing, and channeling. How can something as momentous as contact with aliens be kept secret? In an appendix, Marrs refers to the Bilderbergers and the Council on Foreign Relations as examples of how small groups of powerful individuals can withhold information and manipulate world events. The facts are mostly accurate, and the writing is crisp and journalistic.

Children Of The Matrix

How an interdimensional race has controlled the world for thousands of years—and still does!

We are born into a world controlled by unseen forces that have plagued and manipulated humanity for thousands of years. You may look around and think that what you see is "real". But in truth you are living in an illusion designed to keep you in a mental, emotional, and spiritual prison cell.

Icke exposes these forces and their methods of human control and reveals a fantastic web of global manipulation, orchestrated by forces beyond this physical realm. He exposes the hidden bloodlines, through which other-dimensional entities live and operate unseen among us; and he shows how the bloodlines of the royal, political, and economic rulers of today are the same as those who ruled as the kings and queens of ancient times.

The truth is not only out there.

Much of it is right here.

Microbe, Fungi, And Parasite Elimination Device

Expanded Instructions For Experimental-Theoretical HIV Blood Neutralization

Suggestions For Acquiring And Using An Inductively Coupled, Magnetic Pulse Generator For Theoretical Lymph And Tissue HIV Neutralization

In a remarkable discovery at Albert Einstein College of Medicine, New York City, in 1990, it was shown that a minute current (50 to 100 microamperes) can alter outer protein layers of HIV virus in a petri dish so as to prevent its subsequent attachment to receptor sites (Science News, March 30, 1991, page 207).

It may also reverse Epstein-Barr (Chronic Fatigue Syndrome), Hepatitis, and Herpes B.

HIV-positive users of this information may expect a NEGATIVE p24 surface antigen or PCR test (no more HIV detectable in blood) after 30 days. This is reminiscent of a well proven cure for snakebite by application of electric current that instantly neutralizes the venom's toxicity (Lancet, July 26, 1986, page 229). And there may be several other, as yet undiscovered or untested, viruses neutralizable with this discovery.

This very simple blood clearing treatment offered great promise as a positive method for immobilizing known strains of HIV still present and contaminating some European and U.S. blood bank reserve supplies. It was further suggested that infected human HIV carriers could be cured by removing their blood, treating it electrically, and returning it by methods similar to dialysis.

Dr. Steven Kaali, MD, projected that "years of testing will be in order before such an in-vitro (blood removed for treatment) device can be made ready for widespread use" (Longevity, December 1992, page 14). This paper reveals a "do-it-yourself" approach for healing involving no medical costs or dialysis.

In the writer's opinion, both blood and lymph can be cleared in-vivo (which means blood isn't removed) simply, rapidly, and inexpensively with similar but non-invasive techniques described herein. Electronic and controlled electroporation approaches may well make vaccines (even if possible someday), pharmaceuticals, supplements, oxygen, and diet therapies, plus other proposed remedies, obsolete—even if they worked and were free.

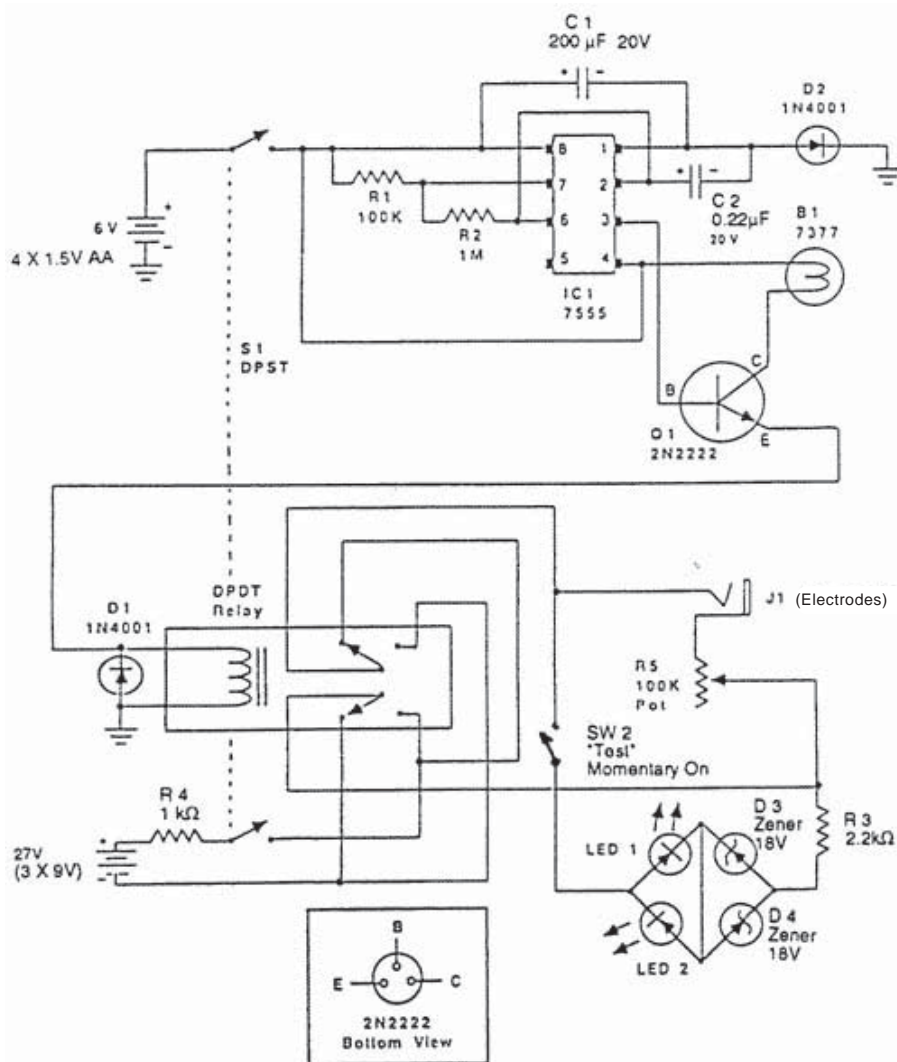

In a public lecture (October 19, 1991) the writer's opinion proposed this theoretical do-it-yourself method for accomplishing HIV "neutralization" in-vivo. Subsequently, his original modalities and protocols have been extensively peer reviewed, refined, simplified, and made universally affordable (under $75 for both devices, including batteries, when self-made).

These two simple treatments, used in tandem, can potentially nullify well over 95% (and perhaps 100%) of known HIV strains residing in blood, lymph, and other body tissues and fluids. Following is a summary of two years of offshore feedback with this non-iatrogenic, do-it-yourself, simple, and inexpensive experimental solution to the ever escalating AIDS dilemma.

There are no known side effects since milliamperage currents are much lower than those in FDA-approved TENS, CES, and muscle stimulators which have been in daily use for many years. Battery replacement costs are under 25¢ per month per user, or about 1¢ per day for a typical 21-day "spontaneous remission". No doctors, pharmaceuticals, ozone, or other intervention appears necessary.

The pocket-sized, battery-powered, blood-clearing instrument is basically a miniature relay driven by a timer chip set to 0.67 Hz. Its 0-to-36 V user-adjustable biphasic output minimizes electrode site irritation. The described system delivers stimulation through normally circulating blood via electrodes placed at selected sites (such as one electrode behind ankle bone on inside of foot and another identically located on opposite foot) over the sural, popliteal, posterior tibial, or peroneal arteries, where the subject's veins and arteries are accessibly close to the surface. Optimum electrode positions are reliably located by feeling pulse.

Micro-current treatment is of such low amplitude that it creates no discomfort when used as directed and is demonstrated to have no harmful side-effects on healthy blood cells or tissue.

A major obstacle to this simple and obvious solution is disbelief, and subjects must assume responsibility for their own health—a “heresy” in today’s society where we’re conditioned to look for answers only to a medical establishment that has no current knowledge remotely promising “cures” for numerous well-known terminal diseases.

Using neutralization approximately 8 to 20 minutes per day for about three or four weeks should, in the writer’s opinion, effectively immobilize well over 95% of any HIV, and simultaneously any other electrosensitive viruses in blood.

In heavy infections, shorter application times could prevent overloading the patient with toxins. Simply treat for a greater number of days. In time, the restored immune system will handle residual problems.

In the special case of impaired circulation due to diabetes, longer treatment times may be indicated. Immobilized viruses may be expelled naturally through kidneys and liver. More rapid neutralization is easily possible, but not recommended, because of potential excessive toxic elimination reactions (Herxheimer’s syndrome). T-cell counts may drop initially (because of lysing and subsequent scavenging by macrophages) but should recover to over 200 within 90 days.

Latent/germinating HIV reservoirs in the body’s lymph or other tissue may theoretically be neutralized with a second and separate device by the strategy of generating a very high-intensity (19 kilogauss), short-duration (10 microsecond) magnetic pulse of greater than 35 joules by discharging a modified strobe light’s capacitor through an applicator coil held at body points over lymph nodes and other possible internal sites of infection.

By the physics of eddy current/back emf “transformer action” (Lenz’s law), the desired criteria of minimum current induced through infected tissue, on the order of 50 to 100 microamps, should be readily attained. Several pulses repeated at each site may insure a reliable “overkill” for successful HIV neutralization. A magnetic “pulser” is very inexpensive and simple to build.

These “theoretical solutions” are being disclosed under constitutional freedom-of-speech guarantees in spite of extensively organized hostile opposition to non-pharmaceutical cures. Data can be legally offered only as “theoretical” and no medical claims can be made or implied.

CODE OF FEDERAL REGULATIONS 21 § 807.65 Subpart D — Exemptions. Paragraphs (d) & (f) exclude and exempt from regulation:

“(d) Licensed practitioners, including physicians, dentists, and optometrists, who manufacture or otherwise alter devices solely for use in their practice.”

“(f) Persons who manufacture, prepare, propagate, compound, or process devices solely for use in research, teaching, or analysis, and do not introduce such devices into commercial distribution.”

Use of this device therefore appears legal and exempt from FDA regulations when you construct it yourself for research and/or use in your own practice! But double-check your local, county and state regulations for possible exceptions.

Anyone at his discretion and assumed responsibility should be free to build, use (on himself), and network his “research” results. With these data, an average intelligent high school student should confidently be able to assemble both theoretical blood- and tissue-clearing modalities in about three hours and for a total investment of around $75. Components are widely available.

After assembling, “cures” cost under 25¢ per patient for batteries. If electronically unskilled, “busy”, or technically illiterate, call an “Amateur Radio Supply” store (Yellow Pages) and find a ham radio operator, hobbyist, or TV repairman, or pay any kid on the block to do it for you.

After “spontaneous remissions”, some users may wish to interest their doctors. But be advised that electronic cures may be vigorously suppressed or ignored because there is presently no credibility, nor drug cartel profit, in a 25¢ AIDS solution. Also, the 1910 Rockefeller-Flexner Report attempted to discredit electromedicine with a conspiracy to inflate pharmaceutical profits.

I’m definitely NOT soliciting funds. This was independently developed by Bob Beck at his private expense and offered freely for “theoretical and informational purposes only” and with absolutely no profit motive. Non-FDA-approved devices are illegal to use within the U.S.A.—except via little known FDA regulation loopholes whereby doctors and researchers are allowed to use anything on patients if they build it themselves [Code of Federal Regulations 21 § 807.65, subsections (d) & (f).]

Expanded Instructions For Experimental-Theoretical HIV Blood Neutralization Hypothetical Protocols For Experimental Sessions

Revision: December 18, 1995

PRECAUTIONS: Do NOT use on subjects with cardiac pacemakers. Any applied electrical signals may interfere with “demand-type” heart pacers and cause malfunction. Do NOT use on pregnant women, or while driving, or when using hazardous machinery.

Users MUST avoid ingesting anything containing medicinal herbs, foreign or domestic, or potentially toxic medication, nicotine, alcohol, recreational drugs, laxatives, tonics, etc., and certain vitamins for one week before starting because blood electrification can cause electroporation which makes cell membranes pervious to small quantities of normally harmless chemicals in plasma. The effect is the same as extreme overdosing, which might be lethal. [See “Electroporation: A General Phenomenon For Manipulating Cells And Tissues” by J.C. Weaver, Journal Of Cellular Biochemistry 51:426-435 (1993).] Effects can mimic increasing dosages many fold. Both the magnetic pulser and blood purifier cause electroporation.

Do NOT place electrode pads over skin lesions, abrasions, new scars, cuts, eruptions, or sunburn. Do NOT advance output amplitude to uncomfortable levels. All subjects will vary. Do NOT fall asleep while using.

Fig. 340—The superficial lymphatics and glands of the upper extremity.

Do NOT place electrodes above waist. (See Exception Note.) Generally use only on feet (see Gray's Anatomy for blood paths) so as to minimize possible current paths through unhealthy heart. The magnetic pulser should, however, be safe to use anywhere on body or head.

Avoid ingesting alcohol 24 hours before using. Drink an 8 oz. glass of distilled water 15 minutes before and immediately following each session, and drink at least four additional glasses daily for flushing during "neutralization" and for one week thereafter. This is imperative. Ignoring this can cause systemic damage.

If subject feels sluggish, faint, dizzy, headachy, nauseous, or has flu-like symptoms after exposures, reduce number of pulses per session and/or shorten applications of blood clearing. Use caution when treating patients with impaired kidney or liver function.

To avoid shock liability, use batteries only. Do NOT use any line-connected power supply, transformer, charger, battery eliminator, etc. with blood clearing device. However line supplies are ok with well-insulated magnetic pulse generators (strobe lights).

Health professionals: Avoid nicotine addicts, vegetarians, and other unconsciously motivated death-wishers and their covert agendas of "defeat the healer". Tobacco, the most addictive (4-1/2 times more addictive than heroin) and deadly substance of abuse known, disrupts normal cardiovascular function. True vegetarian diets are missing essential amino acids absolutely necessary for the successful rebuilding of AIDS-ravaged tissues. Secondary gains (sympathy/martyrdom, free benefits, financial assistance, etc.) play large roles with AIDS patients. "Recovery guilt" as friends are dying has even precipitated suicide attempts masked as "accidents". Avoid such entanglements.

Superior Electrodes:

Excellent, convenient, and vastly superior electrodes, reusable indefinitely, can be made by butt-soldering lead wires to ends of 3/32" diameter by 1-1/8" long type 316 stainless steel rods available from welding supply stores. Use "Stay Clean" flux before soldering (zinc chloride/hydrochloric acid). Shrink-insulate TWO tight layers of tubing over soldered joints to prevent flexing/breaking and lead/copper ions from migrating. Wrap two turns of 100% cotton flannel around rods; wrap with a few turns of strong thread, wrap and tie both ends and cut off excess cloth. Treat end windings and knots with clear fingernail polish or "Fray Check" (fabric & sewing supply stores) to prevent unraveling. Soak in a strong solution of sea salt (not table salt) containing a little wetting agent, like Kodak Photo Flow, ethylene glycol, or 409 kitchen cleaner. Add a few drops of hydrogen peroxide, silver colloid, etc., for disinfectant. Store solution for reuse.

Fig. 304—The radial and ulnar arteries.

Fig. 305—Ulnar and radial arteries. Deep view.

Saturate these cotton "wicks" each time before applying to skin. Tape soaking wet electrodes tightly over pulse sites with paper masking or Transpore tape or with 1" wide stretch elastic bands with tabs of Velcro at ends to fasten.

Electrodes should closely conform precisely along blood vessels, not skewing ever so slightly over to adjacent flesh. This insures better contact and provides very low internal impedance. Avoid crossing arms or legs while treating, since this may shunt the current. Rinse and blot-dry electrodes and skin after each use. NEVER allow bare metal electrodes to touch skin (during use) as this will cause burns manifested as small red craters taking weeks to heal.

Electrode Placements:

Locate maximum pulse position (NOT to be confused with acupuncture, reflexology, Chapman, etc. points) on each foot by feeling on inside of ankle 1" below and to rear of ankle bone, then feel top center of instep. Place electrode on whichever pulse site on that foot feels strongest. Scrub skin over chosen sites with mild soap and water or alcohol swab. Wipe dry. Position the electrodes lengthwise along each left and right foot's blood vessel. We presently prefer foot-to-foot electrode placements, which will encompass about five times the volume of circulating blood undergoing pathogen neutralization compared to the earlier foot-to-back-of-same-knee placements originally suggested in our 1991 paper.

Exception Note:

With subjects having perfectly healthy hearts and not wearing pacemakers, it is convenient to use left-wrist-to-right-wrist exactly over ulnar arterial pulse paths, instead of feet. Wide rubber bands over wires at elbows keep leads out of the way when using hands.

With electrode cable unplugged, turn switch ON and advance amplitude control to MAXIMUM. Push momentary SW 2 "test" switch and see that the red and green light-emitting diodes flash alternately. This verifies that polarity is reversing 4 times per second (frequency is NOT critical) and that batteries are still good. If LEDs don't light, replace all three 9V batteries. When the white incandescent bulb dims or appears yellowish, or relay isn't clicking, replace all four AA cells. Zener diodes will extinguish LEDs when the three 9V batteries' initial 27 Volts drops below 18V after extended use.

If subject has a perfectly healthy heart, wrist-to-wrist placement is more convenient. Never use any electrode larger than 1-1/8" long by 1/8" wide, to avoid wasting current on surrounding tissue. Confine exactly to blood vessels ONLY. Add a drop of salt water to each electrode's cotton cover every 10 minutes to keep electrodes thoroughly saturated during entire session.

Now rotate amplitude control to MINIMUM (counter-clockwise) and plug in electrode cable. Subject now advances dial slowly until he feels a "thumping" and tingling (at the electrode placements on the wrists). Turn as high as tolerable, but don't advance amplitude to where it is ever uncomfortable.

Adjust this voltage level periodically as subject adapts or acclimates to current level after several minutes. If subject perspires, skin resistance may decrease because of moisture, so setting to a lower voltage for comfort is indicated. Otherwise it is normal to feel progressively less sensation with time.

You may notice little or no sensation at full amplitude immediately, but feeling will begin building up to maximum after several minutes, at which time amplitude must be decreased. Typical comfortable input (to skin) is 3mA, and maximum tolerable input (full amplitude) is 7mA, but this "reserve" limit is unnecessary and uncomfortable. Current flowing through blood is very much lower than this EXTERNAL measurement because of series resistances through skin, tissue, and blood vessel walls.

Use the blood neutralizer for about an hour daily for 21-30 days. Use judgment here. Carefully monitor subject's reactions. For very heavy infections, go slower so as not to overload the body's toxic disposal capability. With circulation-impaired diabetics, etc., you may wish to extend session times up to 90 minutes to two hours. Again, HAVE SUBJECT DRINK LOTS OF WATER. You may be overexposing if post-treatment discomfort is felt.

Subjects may feel sleepy, sluggish, listless, nauseous, faint, or headachy, or have flu-like reactions if neglecting sufficient water intake for flushing toxins. We interpret this as detoxification plus endorphin release due to electrification.

Let them rest and stabilize for 45 minutes before driving, if indicated. If this detoxing becomes oppressive, treat every SECOND day. Treating at least 21 times should "fractionate" both juvenile and maturing HIV to overlap maximum neutralization sensitivity windows and interrupt "budding" occurring during the HIV cells' development cycles.

Treatments also safely neutralize many other viruses, fungi, bacteria, parasites, and microbes in blood. See U.S. patents: 5,091,152 and 5,139,684 and 5,188,738 and 5,328,451 and others, as well as numerous valid medical studies which are presently little known or suppressed.

Ingesting a few ounces of 5-to-20 parts-per-million of silver colloid solution daily can give subjects a "second intact immune system" and minimize or eliminate opportunistic infections during recovery phase. This miracle substance is pre-1938 technology and, unlike ozone, is considered immune from FDA harassment.

Silver colloid can EASILY be made at home electrolytically in minutes and in any desired quantities and parts-per-million strength for under 1¢ per gallon plus cost of distilled water. It is ridiculous to purchase it for high prices.

Colloidal silver has no side effects, and is known to rapidly eliminate or prevent hundreds of diseases. Silver colloids won't produce drug-resistant strains as will all other known antibiotics. No reasonable amount can overdose or injure users, either topically, by ingestion, or medical professional injection.

Suggestions For Acquiring And Using An Inductively Coupled Magnetic Pulse Generator For Theoretical Lymph And Tissue HIV Neutralization

Revision: December 18, 1995

Note: These data are for informational and instructional purposes only and are not to be construed as medical advice. Consult with your licensed health practitioner.

In keeping with do-it-yourself, inexpensive, hypothetical approaches to self-help, the simplest and most rapid means for obtaining a capacitor-discharge magnetic-pulse lymph and tissue pathogen neutralizer would be to find and modify a used, functioning, portable, battery-and-AC-powered electronic flash (strobe light) for cameras. These are acquired at swap meets, yard sales, pawn shops, or in junk boxes at used camera stores. Or purchase a new [back in 1995] Vivitar (brand) model 1900 (around $22) carried at some professional camera stores. This compact, lightweight, inexpensive, rapid recharging flash is only 17.5 watt-seconds of power, but is readily available and easily modified. It works well enough for casual use, but runs on batteries only, so has greater operating expense than an AC/DC unit.

California swap meet prices for USED strobes range from $4 to about $18. One Sunday the writer found a dozen AC/DC strobes, all in good working condition. Carry four AA batteries with you so you can test the flash units before purchasing. I chose to modify a long-discontinued Vivitar (brand) model 110 because it was larger than the rest and seemingly more powerful; however, almost any brand or model of comparable output power (35 watt-seconds) should work. Preferably select one with 115V AC as well as battery operating (DC) capability.

First wind the applicator coil. Junk VHS videocassette reels are cheap, plentiful, and adequate for this application. Remove 5 screws from shell, remove reels, and discard tape. Be SURE alternative spools (if used) are non-conductive or system will not work. Avoid shorter-length VHS tape reels which may have center hubs larger than 1" diameter, and won't hold sufficient wire. Drill 1/4" holes through hub and through center of flange(s). Make two 4" discs from 1/4" thick plastic or fiberboard; drill 1/4" center holes and another 1/4" hole off-center so coil's inside lead wire can be pulled through. These "stiffeners" will sandwich the reel's flanges so they won't warp or split as wire pressure builds up while winding progresses. A 2" (or longer) 1/4-20 machine nut and bolt with washers through centers will clamp flange stiffeners and reel and also provide a shaft to hold in a variable speed drill motor or similar wire-winding device, if used. Then remove bolt and stiffeners.

Specifications:

130 turns #14 plain enamel insulated copper magnet wire wound onto 1" ID hub and 3-1/2" OD VHS spool with a gap width for wire of 5/8". Scrape enamel insulation 1/2" from end. Pull inside end of magnet wire through hub and stiffener and to outside. 130 turns should fill the spool. (That's about three 1/2-lb rolls of wire, spliced together.) Remove bolt, stiffeners, and finished coil.

Now solder ends of 3 ft. of thick (heavy gauge) two-wire extension cord to each side of coil. Finished coil weighs 1 lb 3 oz, has 0.935 millihenry inductance, 0.34 ohms resistance, and takes 20 minutes to hand wind or 3 min. with drill motor.

Strobe Modification:

This consists simply of wiring the finished applicator coil, with the 3 ft. leads, in series between the flash tube and its storage capacitor. Be extremely cautious when working with case open because a strobe's capacitor can hold a residual high-voltage charge for a long time even when "off". Before modifying and to avoid shock, short out the capacitor by placing clip leads directly across the flash tube. Remember to remove this shunt later.

To install coil, unsolder either wire from flash tube and connect one lead wire from coil to that side of tube. Connect the other lead from coil to the wire you just removed from tube. Insulate connections with tape. This places your coil IN SERIES with the flash tube and enables the tube to act as an ionized gas relay or "thyatron" that dumps most of the capacitor's stored energy through the coil when fired. Lamp will still flash, but less brightly. Cover flash window with black paper. Replace case. You're done!

Fig. 341—The superficial lymphatics and glands of the lower extremity.

Is It Working Properly?

A good way to test for strength of pulsed magnetic energy is to lay a thin steel washer (one strongly attracted to a magnet) flat on top of the coil, 1/2" off center. A 1" diameter "fender" washer with 1/8" center hole works well. Let the flash unit charge for about ten seconds or until the strobe's "ready light" comes on, then push the flash button and see how high the washer is "kicked" by eddy current repulsion. A 35 watt-second strobe repels a washer about 14 inches vertically. Think of your pulsed coil as the "primary" of a transformer and anything conductive nearby (living tissue included) as the "secondary" into which current is induced when cut by the coil's time-varying magnetic lines of flux.

Your do-it-yourself magnetic pulse generator delivers a measurable output intensity SEVERAL THOUSAND TIMES more powerful during each cycle than $7,000 German "Magnetotrons", Elecsystem "Biotrons", or Canada's "Centurion"—devices widely exhibited at holistic medical expos, none of which is nearly powerful enough for HIV, Herpes, Hepatitis, or Epstein-Barr neutralization or adequate electroporation.

It is functionally similar to the "Diapulse" miracle-working healing modality when the coil is applied over the liver and other organs. Magnetic fields—and, therefore, induced currents—penetrate ALL body cells, bones, and tissues in proximity to the coil (effective approximately 4" deep) and can theoretically neutralize electro-sensitive viruses such as Herpes B, HIV, Hepatitis, Epstein-Barr, and possibly many others as yet undiscovered that can hide within nerve sheaths and are therefore untouchable via the immune system, white cells, or injectables. This may account for the impossibility of curing many known chronic infections via pharmaceuticals, antibiotics, or any presently known conventional treatments other than electrotherapy.

Use this magnetic pulser on body sites daily, concurrently with the blood-clearing electrical pulse box. This magnetic pulser is considered safe to use anywhere on the head, chest, and body, except with cardiac pacemaker users. (See Gray's Anatomy for lymph gland locations.)

Fig. 337—The thoracic and right lymphatic duct.

To Use:

Press fully insulated coil flat against body over lymph glands and other selected locations. Let strobe build up to full charge (about 10 seconds or longer between pulses) and fire coil while contacting each site. Subjects will feel no physical sensations except for light "thumps" during this phase of treatment. Exposure levels are considered safe because the intensity of this magnetic pulser is much lower than Nuclear Magnetic Resonance (NMR) imaging that is in routine use on tens of thousands of patients.

But, should subject feel "headachy" or nauseous or sluggish or display flu-like symptoms after exposures with either of these two devices, reduce number of pulses or time (duration) of application, and drink more water.

If the immune system is very badly damaged, you may need to repeat all routines after several months to ensure permanent and complete neutralization.

WHEN USING, KEEP ELECTROMAGNET COIL SEVERAL FEET AWAY FROM CREDIT CARDS, WATCHES, ANY KIND OF MAGNETIC TAPE, COMPUTERS, FLOPPY DISKS, HOMEOPATHIC REMEDIES, ETC., since its powerful magnetic field can degauss and erase magnetic data as well as subtle-energy potentized medicines.

As an unanticipated serendipity, magnetic pulsers are reported to erase deeply rooted lymph and tissue pathology, and possibly even classical "miasmas" as well as many other microbes, fungi, bacteria, parasites, and viruses. The pulser (flash unit) should preferably be used with AC power to save battery costs, since you'll only get about 40 full pulses per new set of alkaline batteries. For sanitary purposes, enclose the coil in a plastic sandwich bag that is discarded after each user. When treating numerous subjects, if there's no AC adapter, it is economical to purchase and utilize a small, rechargeable, 6-Volt lead-acid "motorcycle"-type storage battery.

How Much Should This Cost? [1995]

Used electronic flash lamps cost approximately $4 to $18. Three 0.5 lb. spools of #14 magnet wire retail for about $9.66 each at Action Electronics. (You'll need approximately 1.5 lb.) The 4 AA alkaline batteries cost about $ 2.89. A 12 ft, #14, 2-wire, 15 amp AC extension cord costs about $2 and makes 4 sets of leads, or use heavy-duty speaker wire. VHS spools cost approximately 50¢.

Whoppers Of Mass Delusion Plague Bush Gestapo

Editor's note: The comedy of Truth seems to be what balances the tragedy—at least in the larger scheme of things. And nowhere is this Balancing Act more noticeable than when Al Martin simply reports The Truth from his common-sense and well-connected perspective.

If you've been studying the "news" propaganda over the last few months, it's very apparent that both Bush and Blair are nervously aware of how little their respective publics buy the "weapons of mass destruction" blarney that launched the Iraq war. And while it's hardly much of a step for readers of The SPECTRUM to imagine that the fervent assurance from both puppet-leaders comes from having planted said weapons in order to later be found, what happened next, as Al reports, is once again what always makes Truth stranger than Fiction—and helps to explain a lot of the peculiar recent posturings on this matter of those ever-elusive weapons.

Of course, that's not the only scam being played on the American and British publics in the aftermath of "needing" to send so many Americans to Iraq at great expense. The Big Business of looting and plundering is as alive and well these days as it has always been amidst the cover of confusion during wartime activities. Or as Al puts it: "You could call it Operation Skim Iraq. Remember: the Bushonian Cabal is working while you sleep."

For those newer readers who may not be familiar with this crusader, according to his own biographical statement (at his AlMartinRaw.com Internet website), Al is America's foremost whistleblower on government fraud and corruption. A retired U.S. Navy Lt. Commander and former officer in the Office of Naval Intelligence, he has testified before Congress (the Kerry Committee and the Alexander Committee) regarding Iran-Contra. Al Martin is the author of the revealing and witty exposé titled The Conspirators: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider (© 2001, National Liberty Press; order from Wisdom Books & Press: see information nearby).

The WMD Scam, The $2 Billion Cash Scam, And The $44 Trillion Shortfall (6/2/03)

Sources from the Department of Defense report that the covert-ops team sent to Iraq to plant the "Weapons of Mass Destruction" in order to justify the U.S. War on Iraq have been killed by "friendly fire"—unfortunately before they could tell anyone where they hid the cache of WMDs.

Now the plan for a U.S. Army detachment of Gomer and Goober to "find" the WMDs has been completely derailed—as in: "Shazam! You know those weapons of mass destruction you keep talking about? Well, Sergeant, I think I done found 'em."

The truth keeps leaking out. Someone in the military became aware of a CIA operation recently to bring chemical weapons into Iraq where they would then be conveniently discovered by someone else in order to justify the "Iraq Adventure".

Another piece of it is the disposition of this $2 billion that was "found" (actually it was a bloc of $1 billion, then another bloc of $600 million, then another $400 million, in pieces). Doesn't it strike anybody as curious why we haven't heard anything about the disposition of this $2 billion in cash? Maybe it's just not THAT important. If Fox News says its not important, it ain't. It means the documents have already been shredded if Fox News says it's not important.

According to a recent Financial Times article: "The Bush Administration has shelved a report commissioned by the Treasury that shows the U.S. currently faces a future of chronic federal budget deficits totaling at least $44.2 trillion in current U.S. dollars."

Apparently Deputy Reichsfuehrer Ashcroft was asked why the story was suppressed in U.S. media and he explained that the Bush Administration declared the report to be seditious, and thus a threat to the security of the United States. And that is how they are using the law.

Once the president declares anything seditious, they have the right. Actually it was Ashcroft who has the power to do it. Once it is formally declared seditious, they have the right to suppress it because it was contrary to the interest of the nation, according to Ashcroft.

And this is the new way.

The truth about Bushonomics has to be declared seditious. The truth can't come out because, if the truth did come out and the people realized the truth about Bushonomics, everything would fall apart.

The article continues:

"The study, the most comprehensive assessment of how the U.S. government is at risk of being overwhelmed by the 'baby boom' generation's future healthcare and retirement costs, was commissioned by then-Treasury secretary Paul O'Neill.

"But the Bush Administration chose to keep the findings out of the annual budget report for fiscal year 2004, published in February, as the White House campaigned for a tax-cut package that critics claim will expand future deficits.

"The study asserts that sharp tax increases, massive spending cuts, or a painful mix of both are unavoidable if the U.S. is to meet benefit promises to future generations. It estimates that closing the gap would require the equivalent of an immediate and permanent 66% across-the-board income tax increase. Mr. O'Neill, who was fired last December, refused to comment.

"The study's analysis of future deficits dwarfs previous estimates of the financial challenge facing Washington. It is roughly equivalent to 10 times the publicly held national debt, four years of U.S. economic output, or more than 94% of all U.S. household assets. Alan Greenspan, Federal Reserve chairman, last week bemoaned what he called Washington's deafening silence about the future crunch."

This is the result of more than 20 years of B-FLAP (Bush Fantasy Land Accounting Principles).

And what were the consequences of this story? A 150-point reversal in the Dow Jones Industrial Average because of the leakage of this story.

This is a story which you can point to in an exact time frame—from the time the DoJ got involved, to the time Google took it off, to the time it was put on the CNN and CNBC wires. I think what happened (and this is typical), it was put out by someone who didn't really understand the significance of it.

You could tell, as the afternoon progressed, that the story wasn't even really out there, but there was a tremendous effort to deny and discredit it—not only by the White House, but also by the Bushonian Pundits on CNBC and FNN, and by the anchors themselves. They try to deflect it and discredit it by linking it to Clinton.

How does the Bushonian Cabal and its media shills try to discredit a story? They try to link it to a "conspiracy theorist", and if that doesn't work, they try to link it to the Democrats and/or Clinton. Then there will be a column in the Wall Street Journal about how the Democrats should be shot. This is for the passage of a tax package that the majority of the people didn't understand and didn't want.

But I actually agree with them. The report should have been suppressed because it is seditious under the news laws. It does pass the muster to be declared "seditious" because it would be a threat to the United States—if the people knew the truth about Bushonomics.

What would the American people prefer: to have everything fall apart overnight, or have a slow gradual deterioration over a period of five or six years till everything falls apart?

(AlMartinRaw.com is however not seditious because we are not publicizing the report. We have not received an exact copy of the document, nor are we disseminating it verbatim along with its conclusions. Therefore, it is not necessary for the Office of State Cyber-Security to sabotage our website as they did last week.)

This report, however, does qualify as a seditious document and it meets the legal test in that the revelation of the truth about Bushonomics would be injurious to the security of the State.

In other news, movie pundits have been pointing out that romantic comedies and action movies are having record box office gross receipts. But horror flicks are way down in popularity.

And my response to that is: Who needs to go to theaters to see horror movies when there is a Bush in office?

In times of Bushonomics, horror movies are unnecessary.

Then they reduced the terrorist alert from orange to yellow. The stock market was up about 120 points, and at the very moment when the market started to sell off, they announced that the terrorist alert was changed. Coincidentally. Immediately the stock market went back up to the highs of the day.

Now the terror alerts are themselves being used to manipulate the market. I've pointed this out before. The raising and lowering of terrorist alerts has been done time and again to manipulate the market. But now it's becoming so blatant. I can't believe that the people can't see this.

Here's another story the Bush White House tried to step on: The White House made a sudden reversal and decided to drop the child tax credit for the so-called "working poor".

The House Republicans—also known as the "Bushonian Rubber Stamp"—took out this measure. Why? Tom DeLay [R-TX] actually told the truth, and that why I love him. He is so candid. They had to make up for the $4 billion that the Treasury loses every year (and will lose again this year) because the House Republicans blocked the Democratic initiative to eliminate the expansion of the offshore tax shelters which have been put in since Junior has come to power. This is costing the Treasury $4 billion a year. And that's the Republican idea to replace the missing $4 billion every year, by allowing certain U.S. corporations to evade U.S. taxes by having these offshore shelters.

DeLay said that we'll make up the $4 billion by eliminating the child tax credit for the working poor. And he comes out and says: look, they don't vote Republican anyway. And I love it.

You could say it's transparency in government. It's a sign of the power and the argument I'm making that this is now a de-facto One Party State. Ari Fleischer said between the lines—these are people who don't support George Bush anyway. Why should they get $440 tax credits? This is the only way we can finance multi-trillion-dollar tax cuts for the Republican Rich.

The middle class is all beat out. Now we have to start working on the lower middle class. After all, repossessing all the old vans and pickup trucks isn't really going to add much to the Bushonian cabals revenue stream.

And here's another case of Failing Upward in the Bushonian Regime: It was announced that Josh Bolton would be nominated as the new director of OMB (Office of Management and Budget). Bolton will now replace the discredited Mitch Daniels, who resigned from office two days before being subpoenaed for the Indiana power fraud.

Bolton is currently the deputy White House Chief of Staff and is the unofficial coordinator of the White House's Lie Coordination Bureau, a job at which he failed miserably. He didn't get Ari Fleischer's job. He's going to OMB. In a Bushonian Regime, they need absolute control of the OMB director, so the OMB director comes up with the so-called "correct numbers". It's the B-FLAP numbers.

Now he can act as Chief Bushonian Shill and Manipulator of said office in order to continue the institution of B-FLAP. This is something Mitch Daniels wasn't very good at because, every time the OMB releases a budgetary report, it

RULE BY SECRECY: The Hidden History That Connects The Trilateral Commission, The Freemasons, And The Great Pyramids
BY JIM MARRS

In this astonishing book, celebrated reporter and New York Times bestselling author Jim Marrs painstakingly explores the world's most closely guarded secrets, exposing clandestine cabals and the power they have wielded throughout time. Defiantly rooting out the truth, he unearths startling evidence that the real movers and shakers covertly collude to start and stop wars, manipulate stock markets and interest rates, maintain class distinctions, and even censor the six o'clock news. And they do all this showed that the economy was declining under Bushonomics. This could be called the "Sink or Swim" government model. They keep swimming—until their Heritage Foundation or American Enterprise Institute guaranteed-for-life $300,000-per-year post becomes available.

There was also a minor flap about the bankrupt WorldCom (which has laundered its corporate name back to MCI) receiving a fresh multi-million-dollar, no-compete contract from the Pentagon in Iraq. AT&T and other telecoms were upset, but that's just too bad. AT&T has cut back making contributions to the Republican Party and this should wise them up. That's what happens when you publicly announce that you've cut back Republican political campaign contributions. In other words: you know where to wire that money? What's the problem?

"Get over it" is the new motto of the Bushonian Era. Enron no longer happened. The 20 million people who were hurt by this scam—pensioners, shareholders, employees, as well as mutual funds and banks, will just have to get over it.

In Bushonian times, if you lose your job, if you lose your pension, if you lose your healthcare benefits—just get over it.

The Bushonian Cabal has now begun the process of rewriting history, regarding the reasons we went into Iraq. We all knew this would happen, since we have mentioned before the story about the "weapons of mass destruction" was bogus. We knew that at some point history would have to be rewritten to cover everybody's asses—both in Washington and in London.

This is the typical way they've done it in the past, even in Bush Senior's Regime. When the Bushonian Regime wants to rewrite history, it first starts with a Campaign of Confusion and Misdirection. They're doing it this time too.

The New Provisional Supreme Military Commander General Clarke (who is now being referred to as "Viceroy") was shown wearing the old King Idris's uniform, which was just dripping with gold. He was shown in his office in Baghdad smoking a cigar, a Davidoff, of course, and he said that he was disappointed that no weapons of mass destruction were found before we went, when we were in, or now that we're gone. He said that the search has now been concluded after an exhaustive search involving 3000 military personnel and others. He is now declaring Iraq to be free of WMDs, and he said that apparently they never had them,

THE CONSPIRATORS: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider

WHAT IF a criminal cabal, a de facto white-collar crime syndicate, took over the U.S. Government and used its systems and operations for its own profit? According to former government operative and now whistleblower Al Martin, this is exactly what has happened.

For example, at a meeting with General Richard V. Secord, Martin was briefed about Iran-Contra operations and allowed to view voluminous CIA white papers concerning Operation Black Eagle, the code-name for the Bush-Casey-North program involving U.S. Government-sanctioned narcotics trafficking, illicit weapons deals, and wholesale fraud—corporate securities fraud, real estate fraud, banking fraud, and insurance fraud.

Martin has first-hand knowledge of the dirty deals, high-level scams, frauds, and treasonous activities of the U.S. Shadow Government costing taxpayers hundreds of billions of dollars—and still growing. This is a story of true conspiracy, an uncensored look at what really goes on in the back rooms of criminal power politics.

or at least not since we went in.

Then, about an hour later, Rumsfeld says that General Clarke wasn't authorized to make that statement, and he said: "It should be obvious to the American people that Saddam Hussein had weapons of mass destruction."

Of course, what he didn't add is the obvious fact that would lead the American people to that conclusion: that Saddam Hussein was sold such weapons under the Bush I Administration. Rumsfeld conveniently left out that part. Then Rumsfeld said the search is not over. Even though the search really is over, and even the British have given up on it.

Apparently this is what happened in this separate covert operation that the military had in conjunction with the CIA to plant the weapons. The weapons were planted, but it was a very small contingent. The guys who did this were all subsequently killed by friendly fire. They were all meeting in Baghdad, and a cruise missile or something had gone astray, and all the people involved in this covert operation were killed, before they could tell anybody where they had hidden them.

The Department of Defense and the CIA are going nuts because they had told the British. This is part of Blair's problem. They had wanted the British to find them, to help Blair, because he was taking so much heat from his own party about it. And now the British couldn't find them because the guys who had planted them died before they could tell anyone.

Then, to add further confusion, Assistant Secretary of Defense Wolfowitz gave an interview to Vanity Fair magazine in which he suggested that weapons of mass destruction were NOT the primary reason why we invaded Iraq.

Then Rumsfeld comes out a second time and says that Wolfowitz's comments were taken out of context. Rumsfeld said that we haven't found the WMDs yet, but we know they are there. (But we're not telling you the reason we know they're there is because the Bush-I Regime sold them.)

Then 3000 guys were sent in (at a cost of $36 million to the American taxpayers) with metal detectors and vapor detectors and they still couldn't find them. They showed the pictures of these Brits with shorts and sandals and their metal detectors, and it looked just like Miami Beach—looking for pieces of eight.

But what a tawdry lurid mess this is. And it's all an opening salvo to provide a cover to the Bush Regime and to the Blair Regime. Now everybody is confused and the Administration is orchestrating the confusion by putting out press releases and then saying that they weren't authorized.

This is the opening salvo to turn weapons of mass destruction into weapons of mass disappearance, to de-emphasize weapons of mass destruction, and by the end of this campaign of confusion, everybody will forget it.

Since the WMDs weren't found, obviously this can't be the reason for the war. Now there will be a whole new set of lies to supplant the original lies the American people were told.

This is rewriting history in front of our eyes, by the usual Bushonian method of first confusing the people and then misdirecting the people's attention. Then, when you've done that, you refocus the people's attention on the new set of lies. Then voila! The term WMD will disappear from the lexicon and it will be as if that never happened.

And that's how it begins.

Now, on May 31, after sowing the seeds of confusion, the top story on Fox News and MSNBC is: "White House Orders Intensified Search For WMDs in Iraq". Bush has ordered an intensified search

THE REAL TRUTH ABOUT THE DRUG WAR

by Michael Ruppert

"This is the man who cost CIA Director Deutch his guaranteed appointment as Secretary of Defense after confronting him at Locke High School with hard facts about CIA dealing drugs." (Dick Gregory)

Mike Ruppert was an Honors graduate of UCLA in Political Science; he comes from a family rooted in intelligence and the military. As an undergraduate he interned for Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis and worked at 5 LAPD Divisions before graduating and becoming an officer in 1973. During Mike's 5+ years of active service, he received thirteen citations and four commendations. Twice the CIA attempted to recruit

Mike: the first time just before he graduated, and again after he was a highly praised field officer and budding narcotics investigator. In 1977 he discovered CIA bringing drugs into the U.S. through New Orleans in an operation supervised by his then fiancée, a CIA agent. He began to speak out and was forced out of LAPD in November 1978 after being shot at and threatened. He has been speaking out publicly ever since. In 1981 he spoke out about CIA and drugs inside the White House during a visit to his college classmate Craig Fuller. Fuller later served as Chief of Staff to Vice President Bush.

OPERATION MIND CONTROL: THE CRYPTOCRACY'S PLAN TO PSYCHO-CIVILIZE YOU

by Walter Bowart

Walter Bowart is best known as the author of the best-selling 1970s classic Operation Mind Control, which even today, remains an authoritative guide to the intricate world of mind control. Delving deeper than just drugs or electroshock, Walter H. Bowart takes serious research a step further, into the Monarch mind-control program and the development and programming of multiple personalities for future secret actions including murder and terrorism.

That this research, in so many great halls of learning, has exceeded a cost of untold secret millions of dollars, indicates that this project being produced by our secret police is a matter of ambitious policy rather than the happenstance of cloak-and-dagger adventure.

To alter and control human minds is the ultimate anarchy. What is offered by official apologists as a tribute to the deeds of daring-do by romantic spies are acts of hatred and sadism against all people in an insane and degraded determination to extirpate conscience from society.

and they are actually holding up returning military personnel. It's now costing American taxpayers an additional $10 million per day to look for something that isn't there and that can't be found.

Rumsfeld now says that we can prove that the Iraqi ice cream trucks [see last month's SPECTRUM] were dual use technology. That means ice cream sandwiches in the front and weapons of mass destruction in the back.

Rumsfeld also reminded everyone that the president, using his vast expansion of power to use presidential edicts, given to him by the American people, as he points out, who overwhelmingly agreed with the U.S.A. Patriot Act, that the president is using these powers to declare by presidential edict that Iraq has weapons of mass destruction.

All official records of the United States government relating to this matter now reflect the "fact" that Iraq has weapons of mass destruction—as so declared by Presidential Edict.

As Rumsfeld accurately pointed out, whether any weapons of mass destruction are ever found or not, it's now completely secondary because it has been so officially declared by Presidential Edict, which is duly unchallengeable and unquestionable.

Rumsfeld is absolutely right. It doesn't make any difference. This is Bushonian Heaven. With the president's expanded powers, the facts can no longer get in the way.

Pentagon Whistleblower Exposes Dark Secrets Of Iraqi War, Part 1

(6/9/03)

In a World News Exclusive, AlMartinRaw.Com confirms asset seizures from U.S.-occupied Iraq by Bushonian minions in the CIA and the U.S. Defense Department. The Pentagon whistleblower, concerned for her safety, has decided to tell her story about the latest CIA/DoD fiasco. This is her story.

Be warned: It sounds like a 21st Century version of Treasure Island meets Ali Baba and the Bushonian Thieves. And it's all true.

The whistleblower's name is Nelda Rogers. She is #2 in the chain of command within this DoD special intelligence office. The unit of this office is a debriefing unit within the central debriefing for the Department of Defense.

Nelda Rogers is evidently a 28-year employee of the Department of Defense. It is a ten-person debriefing unit. The information they are leaking out is information that was obtained while she was in Germany heading up the debriefing of returning service personnel who were involved in intelligence work in Iraq for the Department of Defense and/or the Central Intelligence Agency.

This actually appears to be a Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) operation. In fact, some of the information appears to be similar to the DIA document report from September 2002. Ms. Rogers spent much of 2002 in Germany, so this was from the timeframe before the Iraqi engagement actually started, when they were making all the decisions and planning all the covert operations before the formal beginning of the conflict.

This woman also has an office at the Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Alabama and shuttles regularly between her office in Washington and Huntsville.

According to Ms. Rogers, there was a covert military operation that took place both preceding and during the hostilities in Iraq. The unit involved was manned by ex-military guys, black-ops guys who were brought back, which is very commonly done. The unit was paid through the Department of Agriculture, in order to hide it, and this is also very commonplace.

The Department of Agriculture has been consistently used to hide payments for covert operations. In fact, the so-called IraqGate/Banca Nazionale del Lavoro (BNL) scandal used “credits” through the Agriculture Department. The Ag Department has traditionally been used as a paymaster on behalf of the CIA, DIA, NSA, and others because nobody ever scrutinizes them.

The Ag Department doesn’t even go through the same type of auditing process. It has a special exemption wherein the General Accounting Office does not put it through as rigorous an audit every year. It was a rather staid agency, which didn’t conduct a huge volume of transactions. Nothing about Ag was supposedly covert, and that’s why the Department of Defense has used the Agriculture Department as paymasters.

At any rate, the operation in Iraq involved 100 people, all of whom apparently are now dead, having succumbed to so-called “friendly fire”. The scope of this operation included the penetration of the Central Bank of Iraq, other large commercial banks in Baghdad, the Iraqi National Museum, and certain presidential palaces where monies and bullion were secreted.

The initial phase of the operation was to first identify where all of the physical cash, bullion, diamonds, and rare and valuable antiquities were stored. It was a combination of Saddam Hussein’s and his family’s money. There is no real distinction in Iraq. When you say Saddam Hussein, or his family, or the ruling elite’s personal cash bullion, etc., and those assets belonging to the Central Bank of Iraq, they are literally one and the same. This is a dictatorship in which Saddam Hussein and his family essentially owned and/or controlled all other organs of financial state power. In other words, the Central Bank of Iraq was the personal bank for the Hussein family.

They did know that the Central Bank of Iraq had claimed assets mostly in U.S. dollars and some euros and other currencies, and gold bullion of about $4 billion. The Department of Defense, through information they received from the Treasury Department, believed that this number was rather accurate.

And that’s what they were looking for. They identified about $2 billion of cash in U.S. dollars, where it was, and another $150 million in euros, in physical banknotes, and about another $100 million in sundry foreign currencies ranging from yen to British pounds.

When these people died, it was mostly in the same place in Baghdad, supposedly from a stray cruise missile or a combination of missiles and bombs that went astray. There were supposedly 76 who died there, and the other 24 died through a variety of “friendly fire”, “mistaken identity”, and some of them—their whereabouts are simply unknown.

This unit concluded that the deaths appear to be an “accident”, unless, as the whistleblower pointed out, there was “an operation within an operation”. That is, unless there was an operation to get all the information they had while another group within the group then liquidated the original group.

But as she points out, if that were the case, the seizure of these assets would have gone much more smoothly because it would have been handled by a group of people who knew what they were doing.

These seizures, however, were handled in a clumsy manner. First there was the $1.6 billion hidden behind the wall in the palace, which had already been identified. She already knew about it personally—exactly where it was. But because these people all died before they could pass along all of their information, it left some confusion as to where exactly some of these assets were, and more importantly, it left a gap in the chain of command when these people were taken out. Consequently there was not a central and cohesive operation to seize these monies and bullions.

In other words, the follow-up operation was evidently using incomplete information. Therefore it was done very sloppily. People were breaking down walls with sledge hammers looking for money, and then having U.S. troops, which were not authorized to be there, making off with some of the “treasure”.

In a 21st Century update of Treasure Island, it wasn’t as if they lost the “treasure map”. It was as if they had the treasure map, but they didn’t have all the clues in place because the people who had the clues had already died. Since they didn’t have all the clues, they had to keep looking for clues, and because of that, when these people were taken out, whoever was controlling this operation could not get substitute forces in theater quickly enough to seize these assets because regular U.S. troops were already in Baghdad.

This was a contingent of CIA/DoD operatives, but it was really the CIA that bungled it, she said. They were relying on the CIA’s ability to organize an effort to seize these assets and to be able to extract these assets because the CIA claimed it had resources on the ground within the Iraqi army and the Iraqi government who had been paid. That turned out to be completely bogus. As usual.

SEEDS OF FIRE: CHINA AND THE STORY BEHIND THE ATTACK ON AMERICA

Seeds Of Fire explains how China will use a crisis to launch itself as a new Super Power—and become America’s new major enemy.

China by 2015 will have deployed tens to several tens of missiles with nuclear warheads targeted against the United States, mostly more-survivable land and sea mobile missiles. It will also have hundreds of shorter-range ballistic and cruise missiles for use in regional conflicts. Some of these shorter-range missiles will have nuclear warheads; most will be armed with conventional warheads.

That prediction is from a CIA briefing paper to the Bush Administration. It is one of almost 100 pages of never-before-published official documents in SEEDS OF FIRE: China And The Story Behind The Attack On America, by Gordon Thomas. No one can afford to ignore this book!

SEEDS OF FIRE is a book that every patriotic American — everyone who cares about the future of this country, everyone who wants to know what goes on behind the scenes — must buy and read. This is THE book. Written by a highly experienced intelligence analyst, it is simply a MUST. You cannot ignore the warnings Gordon Thomas gives.

As an example of his total credibility, hours after the book was published, the CIA was forced to confirm its findings about the threat China poses. The CIA publicly confirmed what Gordon Thomas reveals in SEEDS OF FIRE. Just how big a threat China is.

This has been kept out of the news agenda because it does not suit certain business interests to have that truth emerge. But at last here it is. Every patriotic American should buy and read this book! It is simply revelatory.

Other revelations include the Inslaw/Promis “largest global software theft in history”, MK-ULTRA mind-control applications, and the link between newspaper magnate Robert Maxwell and the Los Alamos laboratory nuclear secrets “spy” case.

But it is the China connection that ought to alert all thinking Americans to “the sleeping giant” of the Orient. Be informed. Be astonished.

The CIA essentially screwed it all up. As she pointed out, the guys who were supposed to be there to pick up this $1.6 billion, when they were loading it up into trucks, the CIA people were supposed to be handling it. They had a special "black" (unmarked) aircraft to fly it out. But none of it happened because the regular U.S. Army showed up and stumbled onto it and everyone who was involved had to scramble.

The big bloc of cash, the $1.6 billion, was found in the Hussein Presidential Palace in Western Baghdad. This was also where Saddam kept his collection of rare objets d'art. It was also where all the Louis XVI furniture and Napoleon-era (First Period) furniture was kept. Saddam was a great collector.

Will this furniture end up in the Bush ranch in Crawford, Texas? It's too early to say, but a lot of it is already in Paul Bremer's new office. And General Jay Garner also got a lot of it. They are now in charge of the "Spoils of War" Department.

It should be noted that Iraqi "asset seizures" go directly to the New U.S. Ruling Junta.

The American Generals are now sitting in chairs which individually are worth a quarter million dollars each. In other words, the Ancient Imperial Policy of Loot and Pillage is still intact, and this fine tradition is being carried on by the American command.

Garner even had the private air conditioning units carried out of Hussein's office to be put in his own.

The new U.S. civil and/or military administration offices in Baghdad (including some commercial offices like the Halliburton office) are furnished with very pricey antiques. They have a Napoleonic suite ensemble, for example, with the love seat, the chaise, and the end chairs, not to mention some Napoleonic bronzes which are worth a million or more.

They seized all of Hussein's private stuff out of his palace. They seized Hussein's personal store of cigars and gold inlaid cigar boxes, and his personal liquor cabinets—which incidentally contain the largest stock of circa 1860s Napoleon brandy, which is about $2000 a bottle. Evidently the biggest stock outside of France was housed in Hussein's Palace. And so they're just sitting on his antique furniture, drinking up his brandy, and smoking his Davidoffs.

Remember: this is the property of the People of the United States. But it will be forgotten. There has been some information, which has come out about this topic, but it's all references to some "old furniture". People don't understand that we're talking about stuff that's worth millions.

[Editor's note: Thoughtful readers of The SPECTRUM may have questions about the validity of the "paper money" part of this stash of loot. Starting back in our February 2003 issue, Sherman Skolnick outlined the way expert engravers are employed to produce superior counterfeit money as part of the spy-versus-spy games of international blackmail and diplomatic intrigue. Thus there is a good chance that, once again, Saddam is laughing as he left behind, to be found by the unsuspecting, exactly what he knew was really worthless paper. And of course you're not going to hear such an admission on the evening news—any more than you're going to hear these kinds of details of ineptness and plunder that Al is sharing.]

But to get back to the story:

Of the original 100 operatives, 22 were trained at the Redstone Arsenal (see previous columns from 2001 and 2002) at the Department of Defense Special Covert Operations Training Center, which is still there by the way. General Tommy Franks had been informed of the operation and also he had been apprised of the situation that people had been killed. No doubt he decided to keep his mouth shut for what will be a $3 million advance on his book, now that he is retiring.

To recap:

There was about $2 billion in U.S. currency, approximately $350 million in euros and assorted other currencies, an indeterminate amount of gold bullion, an indeterminate amount of fine quality cut diamonds and other precious stones, an indeterminate amount of rare antiquities including early Mesopotamian gold artifacts, etc.

The current disposition of over $2 billion in currency is unknown. What is going to happen to it is unknown. The current whereabouts of the gold bullion is unknown, other than it's in the possession of the American Government (not to be confused with the American People).

It appears that there was an effort to sell some of the antiquities through back channels in London. Someone at Sotheby's, however, knew what this stuff was and leaked it out to the BBC. Several weeks ago there was a story on the BBC about someone attempting to sell, in London, antiquities looted from the Iraqi National Museum.

The U.S. government tried to portray this situation as being that these were some soldiers or reporters, but the truth is that this was an official covert action of the government trying to peddle some of this stuff.

Evidently one of the guys who got killed had a "want list" from the Saudi princes who were prepared to buy these artifacts for cash—quietly. The problem is that the "want list" got lost.

Then the CIA goes to London, to Sotheby's, to a department that handles discreet purchases for the Saudi Royal Family, and they were trying to make contact. Unfortunately, somebody there had a big mouth when they saw the stuff.

Apparently this operation was not cleared with the British Government, which had no idea this was happening. Had they cleared it with MI-6 and the Blair government, then it could have been handled quietly.

But it was sheer incompetence. The problem was that when the original cast of characters got taken out of the picture,

...and the truth shall set you free

David Icke exposes the real story behind global events which shape the future of human existence and the world we leave our children. Fearlessly, he lifts the veil on an astonishing web of interconnected manipulation to reveal that the same few people, secret societies, and organizations control the daily direction of our lives. They engineer the wars, violent revolutions, terrorist outrages, and political assassinations; they control the world market in hard drugs and the media indoctrination machine. Every global negative event of the 20th Century, and earlier, can be traced back to the same Global Elite, and some of the names involved are very well known. Never before has this web, its personnel, and methods been revealed in such a detailed and devastating fashion.

Icke reveals the esoteric background to the global conspiracy and offers an inspiring spiritual solution in which every man, woman, and child on planet Earth breaks free from the daily programming—the "coup d'état on the human mind"—and takes back their infinite power to think for themselves and decide their own destiny. His words are designed to inspire all of us to fling open the door of the mental prison we build for ourselves, and to walk into the light of freedom.

they had an incomplete picture and some of the envisioned operations had been screwed up. It was, after all, these people who had planned the transportation, the discreet storage, and its subsequent movement of the loot—all the operational procedures after the stuff was seized.

Consequently it left the CIA and the Department of Defense bumbling around. It's like the seizure of the 3 trucks loaded with gold bullion. We still don't know the real story. First the government said it was $500 million; then that got discredited. At current prices that would be 40 metric tons, and CNN showed a picture of 2-1/2 ton Iraqi army trucks; so how do you fit 40 tons on three 2-1/2 ton capacity trucks?

Then the story got changed again. They said it was 2000 gold bars. Then they said we don't know how much it is. Even the leaks—the way the information was let out publicly—you could tell that the whole thing was bungled. They couldn't even get the lies straight for the media.

It was a typical Department of Defense/CIA operation. When the two have tried to collaborate on any covert operation in the past, it has been bungled. They never had a successful operation in which they were able to collaborate.

Historically, an example was in 1989, when the Bush regime was selling turnkey non-conventional weapons systems to Iraq. Then there was the problem of how do we get the weapons systems there since Iraq was an "embargoed" country. In other words, it was against the law to ship weapons to Iraq.

The Department of Defense was handling it in conjunction with the CIA. The CIA operated through its own people within the Commerce Department to mislabel the stuff. Then what happened is, after they mislabeled it, they bungled it: They shipped it to the wrong place—because it was mislabeled.

That's the problem when you have ringers. The CIA had a couple of its own ringers within the Department of Commerce who were mislabeling the shipments and doctoring the invoices. The problem is when the stuff got put on a pallet and a truck to go someplace. For instance, Crate A, which was supposed to go to this cutout company in London, wound up getting shipped to South Africa, and nobody knew where it was.

And that's how the South Africans got involved. They thought it was wonderful—being shipped all these valuable biological and biochemical weapons. They, in turn, went to the Israelis, because they just wanted to sell it for whatever they could get. The South

THE REPTILIAN AGENDA: PARTS I, II & III

David Icke has produced two amazing videos with the Zulu shaman, Credo Mutwa, who reveals astonishing information which, until now, was only available to the highest initiates of the African shaman tradition.

Credo says, "The world must know this—and know it now!"

He reveals how a shapeshifting reptilian race (the "Chitauli") has controlled humanity for thousands of years and how their bloodlines are in the positions of royal, political, and economic power today.

These videos will re-write the UFO/

extraterrestrial story in a way that will blow your mind. UFO researchers have ignored Africa and therefore ignored one of the greatest sources of knowledge on the planet.

While people still argue over Roswell and the extraterrestrial beings apparently found there, African tribes-people have been interacting with these ET "gods" for thousands of years.

Credo has not only seen dead "greys" many times, he has seen them examined behind their "grey" exterior and he knows exactly what they really look like—and it is nothing like we think!

After making these videos, Credo was visited by two people from Cape Town who offered him 50,000 rand, and a house anywhere in South Africa, if he would agree to never speak to David Icke again and never have anything to do with him. Credo's reply can be imagined!

Africans had a long relationship with the Israelis, but the Israelis then wanted to know how the South African government got U.S. equipment like this.

Another Department of Defense/CIA bungle was when Gene Hasenfus's plane was shot down in Nicaragua. That's essentially when "Iran-Contra" began to unravel. (See my book The Conspirators: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider.)

The CIA told everyone: Don't worry, we have an extraction plan in place to get Hasenfus out. We'll either get him out, or we'll kill him to make sure he won't talk, so he can't tell the Sandinistas anything. He's just a kicker (he kicks cargo out the door) and he doesn't know the difference.

The CIA thought that Hasenfus was smarter than he actually was. Even General Richard Secord said so in that civil lawsuit in 1990 against Southern Air Transport, which Hasenfus had filed. Secord actually said that he thought that Hasenfus actually knew the CIA was going to screw him. So why not try to negotiate with the Russians?

But that was a Great CIA Bungle.

Hasenfus could have played it to the hilt, but he wasn't smart enough to do it. When the KGB showed up at the central jail in Managua to interview Basinfus, and the CIA knew about it, they had assumed that Basinfus already knew these KGB people, that the whole thing was initiated by him.

That's when the infamous Elliott Abrams gave Sally Hasenfus, his wife, $10,000 in a paper bag and said: "Don't worry we'll get him out." Then Oliver North got directly involved to extract him. But they didn't care. They were going to either let him languish in prison—or have him killed.

And he didn't have a clue the whole time; but they assumed he did, when the KGB showed up.

The KGB, meanwhile, knew that the guy didn't know that much, but they saw an opportunity to capitalize on it. The KGB made it appear that Hasenfus knew Russian contacts in Managua, that he had arranged all this, and that he had all these secret documents.

They played him perfectly.

Then, when all this stuff got back to Bill Casey, the CIA director, he went nuts about it. The KGB told Hasenfus that the Russian government was authorized to pay him a million dollars if he would cooperate.

Hasenfus wasn't even told all this by the Russians. The Russians just leaked this out to the CIA, pretending they had told him this. It drove the CIA wild because there were a lot of documents on that airplane, but they had no idea what documents were or were not on the plane.

By this time (1986) there were CIA documents on Iran-Contra floating around everywhere.

But to get back to the Iraq Debacle Du Jour:

During this entire operation, there were extensive tape recordings of interviews made with the Iraqi returnees, the covert operatives (as well as their affidavits). These were men who were hired by the CIA and who were involved with this operation. They were retired military guys who were involved in black ops all their lives and who keep getting hired back from time to time, from the pool, as it were.

And that's the first part of the story of the CIA/DoD Iraqi "Plant the WMDs" Fiasco.

Postscript: Most recently, on June 7, CNN announced that supposedly 3000 of the most valuable artifacts owned by the Iraqi State Museum, including the great Treasure of Nimrud, which is considered to be one of the greatest treasures on Earth, has been found in the vaults of the Iraqi Central Bank.

It was a laughable report because the CIA has been in control of the Iraqi Central Bank for about 6 weeks. It's not that big of a place. There are only 4 main vaults in the building. Then they had the audacity to say, in the release from Civilian Administrator Paul Bremer's office, apparently these 3000 items found in the vault were "overlooked". But how can you overlook 3,000 items ranging from individual pieces of jewelry to gold statuary that is 9 feet tall?

It looks like they know that a lot of this bungling is going to come tumbling out. They have then just busted out this operation on the antiquities side of it.

When they found out that there were leaks, they were probably frightened to peddle these items to the Saudis because they probably feel that there is too much information about the illegal covert operation involved in securing this stuff.

It must be remembered that the Great Treasure of Nimrod, considered to be some of the most valuable artifacts ever produced, is that which the late King Faisal of Saudi Arabia once offered $3 billion dollars for. There are only a few buyers for such a collection in the world, and those buyers are in Saudi Arabia.

Isn't it intriguing how the media isn't being allowed any access in the recovery of the war booty? The media is now being purposely excluded. Bremer's office will not be making any accounting to Congress concerning these treasures. Nor will any accounting be made to the GAO or the OMB concerning the exact amount of bullion and monies recovered.

In the Iraqi Asset Seizure Caper, "recovery" means how much of it will be skimmed off the top.

First you deny the media access. Then you purposely make yourself look foolish and confuse everyone with incorrect numbers, which are then changed and changed again.

After more than two days of flip-flops and lies, no independent oversight of inventory or control, no report to the Treasury, OMB, or GAO, who is to say how much is actually there and how much is going to actually go back to the U.S. Treasury?

You could call it Operation Skim Iraq. Remember: the Bushonian Cabal is working while you sleep.

PART II, coming next week [below]. More whistleblower revelations about the most recent NASA shuttle disaster, how NASA lied about the problems and decided not to correct them for cost reasons—does NASA use actuarial calculations?—and more on the demise of Chandra Levy and the connection of her death to CIA/Cuban drug smugglers, arms dealers, and hit men (the typical CIA jack-of-all-trades).

The Pentagon Whistleblower's Story, Part 2 (6/16/03)

The Department of Defense whistleblower continues with her information about the NASA Columbia disaster cover-up and more details on the Chandra Levy murder cover-up story.

Nelda Rogers also headed up the special debriefing unit, which debriefed NASA engineers and other personnel after the Columbia shuttle blew apart. They have tape recordings and other evidence which indicates that NASA was well aware of the existing problems with the spacecraft—and yet they chose not to install sensors which would have detected the problem early and allowed countermeasures to be taken. It was evidently all not done for reasons of cost.

It's very clear that the disaster was avoidable. In other words, NASA was aware of the problem and installing the sensor system would have detected the problem before it reached a critical stage.

It should be remembered that, for three years in a row, NASA only got a fraction of the budget it requested. Heads will roll at NASA and then the Bush Administration will have an excuse to throw more money at them. The reason why it hasn't come out yet is because, after all, NASA's shuttle program is under military command. It's under the command of the United States Air Force. In other words, somebody's head would have to roll that's a little too highly placed. That's the implication. If it was just a bunch of engineers whose heads would roll, nobody would care.

The engineers actually work for NASA in the federal civil service. NASA is a civilian agency, but the generals whose heads would have to roll would be at a politically untenable level. That's ultimately who is in charge. The shuttle program is a military program.

And therein lies the problem. There is no designated scapegoat. They must be having a hard time cutting off the liability at an acceptably low level. They have even named a Columbia Accident Investigation Board, but no scapegoat has been named yet.

The reason you haven't heard about this yet is because culpability has not yet been assigned at an acceptable rank level.

[Editor's note: Knowledgeable readers of The SPECTRUM are likely to come to the conclusion—and rightly so—that this "whistleblower" and her story, at least about NASA and the Columbia shuttle disaster, are themselves craftily executed conjurings of disinformation in yet another panicky attempt to win over the less gullible segment of the public who just aren't buying any of the lame official disaster explanations offered so far. Go back and review the story Space Shuttle Columbia Disaster: Clear Message In Open Sky in our March 2003 issue for some illuminating food for thought.]

And speaking of rank level:

In another story, the Navy admiral who was in charge of the U.S. Naval Academy abruptly resigned after he was found drunk and half naked with a bunch of female cadets and/or officers in the car with him. liability kind. They “regretably” accepted his resignation. It was especially regrettable for him, though, because he won’t be getting any more young fluff. His new orders read: “No more fluff for you.”

But to continue with Nelda Rogers: She is another whistleblower looking for media outlets. She is interested in getting this material out for her own protection. She is concerned about her own well being. In other words, she doesn’t want to be Colby-ized. That’s a reference to former CIA Director William Colby, who was found dead, floating in a canoe.

Nelda says she’s never been in a canoe in her life and doesn’t want to be put in one—floating downstream in the wrong direction. This is the proverbial situation where you’re up the creek without a paddle—a/k/a being Colby-ized.

Also there is further information available regarding the mystery set of fingerprints found at the Chandra Levy murder scene.

The fingerprints evidently belong to a character named Alejandro Martinez, a longtime CIA employee and former CIA drug pilot during Iran Contra. Martinez was based in Miami and was close to Oliver North. And now he’s disappeared and nobody seems to know where he’s gone.

The story came to light when he went to buy some fresh “pocket litter” (false identity papers) because he needed to get out of the United States in a hurry. It was assumed that somebody in the police department had taken a closer look at these finger prints which had been previously unidentifiable. But this story is getting hotter and hotter.

It is Treasure Island in Iraq.

DoD/CIA Covert Ops Bungles It Again.

And remember: this is another case of Bushonian Asset Seizures in Iraq, not the U.S. Government; it’s Bushonian.

Do you think any of this Iraqi booty is going to become the property of the U.S. Government? Of course not. It’s a case of living it up in the million dollar suite of Napoleonic furniture at General Gardner’s office. Then there’s the mystery and intrigue of Baghdad itself. You have Ali Baba and the Flying Carpets and the Forty Thieves.

The Bush Administration has just freshened up the old tale. This puts a whole new spin on Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves. A 21st Century version if you will. Who needs flying carpets when you have black airplanes coming in to pick up all the loot?

At any rate, Bushonian Regimes tend to create conspiracists. They keep trying to cover up, and after awhile they all tend to

COMMON SENSE II

Thomas Paine’s pamphlet Common Sense was written and widely circulated in 1776. The simple logic and wisdom presented in Common Sense persuaded thousands of ordinary citizens to support a movement that sought to unite the colonies in an effort to win their independence from England. The birth of our nation and freedom from King George’s tyranny is a direct result of this nation’s people understanding the REAL issues and choosing freedom over tyranny.

We, the editors of Common Sense II, are anonymous—just as Common Sense was originally published anonymously. We recognize that this 92-page, 3" x 6" booklet has tall shoes to fill. Time is running out and we must once again persuade our countrymen to choose freedom over tyranny.

The sole purpose of Common Sense II is to awaken our sleeping countrymen. We have compiled the most illustrative and eloquent writings available, and have arranged them in the manner most likely to persuade a nation to stand up for freedom and independence—our God-given rights!

get shaky. The Bush Regime should be called Create a Conspiracy Theorist Regime.

What’s more important is that the Republicans are gradually losing the battle. You can see this on the Internet when they continue to paint conspiracists as nuts and fruitcakes, and try to discredit information that way.

That battle is being lost because the number of people who are looking for alternative new sources is growing.

You can see this on the radio, as well, when the Big Troika of Bushonian Apologists (Rush Limbaugh, Sean Hannity, and Bill O’Reilly) are all scrambling to keep the façade up on the Weapons of Mass Disappearance. Of course, if they read AlMartinRaw.com, they would know that those who were supposed to plant the weapons were killed—before they could accomplish their “mission” and tell the troops on the ground where they actually hid them.

But the people don’t buy the Bushonian Cabal’s stories. Assistant Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz himself admitted in Vanity Fair magazine that invading Iraq on the rationale of Saddam Hussein’s so-called WMDs was a “bureaucratic pretense” (his words) and nothing more. But they keep trying to spin it that this was taken out of context.

The angst of these people to maintain the Bushonian Cabal in power, and the angst to maintain the gravy train, is astonishing. That’s all it is to these people. They don’t care about the politics behind it. They would flip sides in a minute if they could make more money.

Hillary Clinton’s book is outselling all these right-wing nuts’ books put together. Michael Moore’s Stupid White Men is still a best seller more than a year after the book was released. And Moore points that out in every interview that he has outsold every other book written by every right-wing nut. There is a market and there remains a groundswell.

[Editor’s note: And for those of you who have been following the latest censorship tactic on Michael Moore, perhaps with some amusement, just go to your local Blockbuster video store and ask them why his award-winning movie Bowling For Columbine STILL is not available to rent—even though it was originally announced as scheduled for release in early May. You’ll get as many lame excuses quoted to you from the memos of over-paid executives at Blockbuster as there are Bush Gestapo “homeland security” directives striking fear into the wallets of those Republicanized executives! See the article Michael Moore Triumphs At Academy Awards back in our May 2003 issue for comic relief from the Gestapo’s seeming ability to control the American people via a media event like the Academy Awards.]

The problem is that people cannot seem to be able to connect Bushonomics with their own financial losses. And that is the whole key. If you’re watching Fox News you would not be able to make the connection and understand the equation.

There is a whole new market for my book The Conspirators: Secrets Of An Iran-Contra Insider. There is a growing appetite for alternative news and that's the way this book should be billed. This is alternative news and it is The Truth. There is a greater and greater appetite for truthful information about the Bushs.

But Nelda Rogers' story coincides quite well with the September 2002 DIA report which stated that, after an exhaustive and extensive investigation, the Department of Defense concluded that Iraq does not have weapons of mass destruction, although they were believed to have the capability to build them.

Rumsfeld knew the report was "sensitive", so he met with George Bush and Bush decided at that time to purposely suppress the report. This report was recently leaked out. You can tell that even CNN is feeling the heat. Fox News wouldn't even run the story. CNN and MSNBC ran the story extensively, but then they started to all of a sudden run the Lacy Peterson story. That's what they've been running in lieu of this DIA report story.

When sensitive news about the Bushonian Regime comes out, they switch to salacious news and mix in every effort to discredit the truth about the Bushonian Regime.

You can tell how hot it is and how hot this issue is becoming by the amount of effort the Bushonian Regime is exerting, even on friendly media sources, to de-emphasize this issue.

And of course the Lacy Peterson story works wonderfully, because if you want to de-emphasize any important political issue, particularly something the Bush Administration lied about, you simply run a salacious story. You put satanism and dead babies on the news and you'll have every flag-waving H-squared C-cubed in Nebraska watching it. (H-squared is the homely housewife; C-cubed is the coffee clutch contingent.)

In other news, the Department of Justice is not releasing the second tranche of Enron documents. As we all know, last December 2002, the DoJ released the first tranche of Enron documents concerning their investigation.

They said they would release the second tranche in April 2003—because that would be the most sensitive of all since that would be the documents in which the investigators traced the offshore Enron money flowing into shadowy Republican-controlled accounts in the Cayman Islands and the Netherlands Antilles. Now what has happened is that we have not heard one word about Enron or the Enron documents since the first of the year. The Department of Justice said they would release them in April, and here it is in June and they still have not released the documents.

Enron has, however, laundered their corporate name to Pipeco. There is no more Enron. It has vanished in the Corporate Name Laundry. That's the one "positive" thing they've done. What they're doing is allowing time to catch up: launder the name, shred any remaining documents, and distance themselves from any old problem people.

But why won't the Department of Justice release the so-called second tranche of Enron documents? It's cover-up, as usual.

Deputy Reichsfuehrer Ashcroft was called before Congress because they had received millions of emails about the loss of civil liberties because of the U.S.A. Patriot Act. In answer to this, Ashcroft read the names of the dead people from 9/11 as if that should justify the loss of civil rights and liberties of the American people.

Ashcroft also pointed out that, out of all the millions of cards and emails they had received, 70% of those respondents begged the Department of Justice to strip the American people of the few remaining rights they have left, so our Great Leader, the President, could go out and catch more terrorists.

It's also interesting to note that 40% of the respondents said that any citizen that publicly criticizes Bushonian policies or the Bushonian Cabal in general should be charged with sedition and imprisoned or stripped of their citizenship and expelled.

Further, a quarter of said respondents stated that, should there be a another 9/11-type of incident in the United States (for instance, if the Sears Tower in Chicago or the Transamerica Building in San Francisco goes down) that George Bush should simply dissolve the Democratic Party and rule as a defacto dictator.

You can be assured he's licking his chops at the possibility.

Remember what he said in the year 2000 about being a dictator. Here's the actual transcript from CNN (www.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/0012/18/nd.01.html):

[quoting]

Transition of Power: President-Elect Bush Meets With Congressional Leaders On Capitol Hill, aired December 18, 2000, 12:00 p.m. EST, Frank Sesno, CNN anchor:

In the nation's capital, it's all about George W. Bush—he's here and doing business—while in state capitals, it's the day the Electoral College meets and votes. And if all goes as planned, the electors will certify Bush's narrow victory in last month's election.

He's already looking forward as he makes the rounds here in the nation's capital. A key item on his agenda today: meeting congressional leaders.

CNN's Chris Black joins us from Capitol Hill with more now—Chris.

Chris Black, CNN Congressional Correspondent:

Frank, President-elect George W. Bush came to Capitol Hill today for the first time since the election, intending to listen to congressional leaders, the bipartisan congressional leadership. But he also made it clear to them, in more than two and a half hours of meetings, that he intends to stand by his tax cut proposal and other planks in his campaign agenda.

(begin video clip)

Gov. George W. Bush (R-TX), President-Elect:

I told all four that there were going to be some times where we don't agree with each other. But that's ok. If this were a dictatorship, it'd be a heck of a lot easier, just so long as I'm the dictator.

[end quoting]

With the passage of the U.S.A. Patriot Act, George Bush's wish has indeed become a self-fulfilling prophecy.

No Honest Business Is Safe From The Bankruptcy Club

Editor's note: There's no argument among those who see what is truly happening within the United States that the downward slide on all fronts of society is generating an increasing amount of unrest. More and more people are asking more and more questions about what they're experiencing, themselves, on a daily basis, that's more and more obviously at odds with the media's fabricated portrayal of "reality".

After addressing that matter from a general perspective, Sherman opens up a rare window for us to view one of the most insidious and widespread corruption rackets that's hardly realized by most Americans even exists—unless YOU'VE been a victim of this scam.

As Sherman explains it so well, starting (appropriately) from the top levels of the Pyramid of Power:

"The Aristocracy is in the process of discarding laws that allow Americans, much unlike Europeans, to get a fresh start after illness, business reverses, and such. That is, in the past, discharging debts through bankruptcy court. That court system needs a whole series of articles by us, to outline the fraudulent system, even such as it is currently. So that common Americans, for example, are pushed into Chapter 13, where their properties are plundered instead of saved, by way of the corrupt 'Bankruptcy Club', made up of a few handfuls of crooked judges, lawyers, and court clerks, primarily in big cities like Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and such."

Why is this matter so important? Because honest, healthy (and usually smaller) businesses are the backbone of America. But that backbone has yet to be broken sufficiently for the New World Order gang to securely tighten their control noose around our necks.

Thus, behind the obvious motivating incentive of the money to be made by the "robbers" actually doing the dirty work (in various go-fer or puppet capacities through the façade of the courts), the higher-order New World Order agenda focus continues to be the dissolution of the strong American middle-class industry. Thus the well-hidden bankruptcy court scam acts as a win-win mechanism accomplishing the further collapse of the American Backbone through the easily manipulated incentive of greed by a collection of low-life puppetry who are in turn manipulated by the elite controllers or Aristocracy, as Sherman would term it.

If you are a business owner or know someone who is, be sure they see AND UNDERSTAND what Sherman shares in this series of articles. It could mean the difference between life and death—should those ravenous parasites come knocking at the business door one of these days.

The Overthrow Of
The American Republic, Part 34:
The Spiral Staircase To Revolution
(6/2/03)

Most ordinary Americans grow up with their viewpoints of their world shaped, from childhood, by the oil-soaked, spy-riddled, war-mongering monopoly press.

1. EDUCATION at the high school and middle school levels.

Their school textbooks, whether in public or parochial schools, are put together and published on behalf of the Establishment, "the powers that be", the Ruling Class, the Ultra-Rich, whatever you call THEM. That is, by the Aristocracy, those unseen, mostly unpublicized, mostly unphotographed persons who govern us without the consent of the governed. They violate the Social Compact that underlies our organic law, the U.S. Constitution.

Seldom mentioned is that the Bill Of Rights was made necessary to add to the Constitution, to make the Constitution acceptable. Minus the Bill Of Rights, the U.S. Constitution, in the view of some, is a more ordinary plan for parliamentary government.

Who notices? The Bill Of Rights, in most every Amendment in the beginning, has the word NO in it. A chain upon the central government. The state constitutions, on the other hand, basically support and grant rights, and state privileges and immunities.

So, high school and middle school students' understanding of history, geography, science, mathematics—all are molded and dispensed to squeeze the young into mainstream viewpoints.

Every war in the history of the nation is inevitably, in these textbooks, described as being about the common people and their sons and daughters supposedly fighting for “freedom”. This being so, even if ordinary Americans were sent off to fight a war on the other side of an ocean, at a time in history when the oceans protected us from Europe’s quarrels. We do not accept George Washington’s Farewell Address wisely warning us to avoid foreign entanglements.

Someone in a high school in an upscale suburban neighborhood once invited me to lecture to a group of students gathered from five classrooms. Among other things, I set forth details about the generally unmentioned history of judicial corruption, the venality of the Bench and the Bar and the newsmakers. And also how we Americans were suckered by the British, through monstrous lies in the captive press, to get involved in their forever-wars in Continental Europe, such as World War One.

I told the students about a huge passenger ship that was actually a secret armaments carrier and the pre-arranged sinking of the ship, in 1915, was a road to embroiling America into Europe’s endless wars.

In 1916, President Woodrow Wilson ran for re-election as a supposed “peace candidate”, actually a shill for the war-profiteers. In those years, presidential Inaugurals were in March. Just a few weeks after being inaugurated this supposed Peace Candidate, in April, 1917, began to send, by a draft, thousands of young Americans to be poison gassed and wounded or slaughtered in Europe’s war.

The war was advance planned by the formation, in 1912, of an unconstitutional PRIVATE central bank, the Federal Reserve, masquerading as a “U.S. Government” entity. The purpose was to suck the treasure out of the U.S. to support Great Britain, starting in 1914. England did not have their own money for the weapons they needed and used.

During the question-and-answer period after my speech to the students, I dared address my own question to a very handsome teacher there, who I understood was a favorite at the school.

“Sir, do you tell your students, who evidently like you a lot—do you tell them how Americans were tricked into getting involved later in Europe’s war by the pre-arranged sinking in 1915 of the huge passenger ship, the Lusitania?”

With all the students turning to look at him, he stood up and responded: “It is not in the textbook, not part of the curriculum.”

So I added: “Can you point to something I said that was a lie?”

His face starting to get red, he answered: “I believe you are telling the truth, but I am not permitted to go into such things and keep my job.”

Most all the students kept waiting, perhaps for him to finally call me a liar. He repeated: “What you say is true.”

A student, changing the subject, stood up and hollared at me: “My father is a lawyer. Tell me, who arranged for you to come here and tell us big lies, slandering judges and lawyers? My dad told me that you are just a big liar.”

This occurred ten years after I, as the head of our court-reform group, set off, in 1969, the biggest judicial bribery scandal in U.S. history, causing the downfall of Illinois’ highest tribunal, the Illinois Supreme Court.

(By 2001, the scandal became belatedly a subject of a book, Illinois Justice, by Kenneth A. Manaster. The cover of the book and a brief description is on our website homepage. The Lusitania’s pre-arranged sinking, causing the slaughter of most of the passengers, many Americans, became the subject of a book, Lusitania, by Colin Simpson.)

The day after my high school speech, my listed phone rang repeatedly. The callers were all parents of the students, shouting at me: “My children came home from school crying about what you did to their teacher. Who the hell are you, anyway, promoting big lies. You upset the children and their favorite teacher, with such nonsense. The nerve of you, telling the kids the Bench and the Bar are corrupt.” Most did not wish to hear any explanations from me.

2. EDUCATION at the college and university level.

The mass media brainwash young people that they have to go to college to succeed; at least that is what young people are told. So students figure a college diploma is a “meal ticket”, the open door to a high-paying job.

On radio talk-shows I dare say: “It costs about $33,000 per year to go to a fancy university; and that is not including extras like a car and other expenses. In a bad downturn in business, can a graduate hope to be assured of making WAGES of $33,000 per year?”

And who bothers to point out that most enterprising, creative people did NOT go to, or graduate from, a university? That is, the progressive people who sometimes spend their lifetimes seeking, by their new ideas, to uplift their fellow humans.

3. CLASS STRUCTURE.

Because of a brainwashing system of higher and lower education, most ordinary Americans, unlike Europeans, are almost completely blank when it comes to understanding CLASS.

Notice this excerpt:

“...a lower class, consisting of at least nine-tenths of the population, supports an upper, ruling class consisting of several interlocking groups. These ruling groups are a governing bureaucracy of scribes and priests associated with army leaders, landlords, and moneylenders. Such an upper class accumulated great quantities of wealth as taxes, rents, interest on loans, fees for services, or simply financial extortions.”

Could this become, more and more, a cynical description of the U.S.? It was actually about Latin America, written by a Georgetown University professor, a near-insider, very well-informed on the Aristocracy, Carroll Quigley, author of Tragedy And Hope—A History Of The World In Our Time. Published in 1966, it was suppressed and kept out of circulation for decades thereafter. The excerpt is from page 1115.

Funny thing. Non-progressive U.S. politicians like to shoot-down the ideas of opponents, by saying: “Let’s not have any class warfare talk here.” Really?

The supposed existence of a middle-income group, an in-between entity, is misnamed as the “Middle Class”. Why? Because, if they do indeed exist, they are becoming a phantom. This middle group often despise the poor, and stupidly, in times of general prosperity, seek to emulate the Ultra Rich. The middle group are, step by step, being crushed and made extinct, by the realities of law and finance.

Popular wisdom falsely promotes the view that “revolutions” are made by the

The Untold History Of America

by Ray Bilger

This book shatters the image that has traditionally been portrayed as American History, by exposing the high-level corruption that passes for business-as-usual in the Halls of Congress, the White House, and throughout our entire Judicial System.

Special emphasis is placed throughout the book on the original Native inhabitants of America. They lived for thousands of years on this continent in complete harmony and balance with the Earth. With their help we may yet be able to turn things around so that our tomorrows will be something we will all feel honored to pass on to the children who are our future generations.

poor, the often illiterate, poorly educated (mostly on purpose by the Ultra Rich), sometimes sullen, low-income people. Yet, these folks are smart to the extent that they are survivors, knowing how to keep going even in bad times on little income.

It is not mentioned often enough, if at all, that cutting off the dreams and aspirations of the so-called "middle class" or middle income types, inevitably leads to revolution. Better educated than most, they have some idea where the super rich operate and reside.

On the other hand, a very well-informed, outspoken lawyer, Shelly Waxman, J.D., wrote a book called In The Teeth Of The Wind: A Study Of Power And How To Fight It. (The book is available through the website www.thelawyer.info and he has been several times a guest on our public-access cable-TV program in Chicago.)

He tells of the eight stages of revolution, which he details on pages 260-264. On page 261: [quoting]

Grumbling. Muttering in discontent.

Fomentation. Promotion of the growth or development of.

Fomentation. Movement to action; stirring on; spurring on.

Rebellion. Implies an open formidable resistance that is often unsuccessful.

Uprising. Implies a brief, limited and often immediately ineffective rebellion.

Insurgency. The quality or state of being insurgent, specifically: a condition of revolt against a government that is less than an organized revolution and that is not recognized as belligerency.

Revolt. To renounce allegiance or subjection (as to a government).

Revolution. Applies to a successful rebellion resulting in a major change (as in government). [End quoting]

4. FEDERAL RESERVE.

As of the date of this article, some go into the unthinkable thought. Namely that the U.S. Treasury, with their unlawful agent collecting interest on government paper, namely being the PRIVATE central bank calling itself with a government-sounding name, Federal Reserve, may renounce the out-of-control debt, by defaulting or otherwise repudiating U.S. Treasury Bills, Notes, and Bonds. These Treasury securities, for which the Fed is unconstitutional agent, have been issued from time to time more or less At Par, meaning, a hundred dollars for a hundred dollars face value. They fluctuate up and down after issuance, so that the yield on the market is the current interest rate.

In the near collapse, in 1980-1981, of U.S. Treasury paper, the price of some issues of Treasury securities, because of acts by the Fed, sold for as little as 75¢ on the dollar and yielded 16-1/2%. (Our research series "Sucker Traps" goes into the matter of U.S. Treasury securities.)

One of the main purposes, if not the actual primary purpose, of the Federal Reserve ordering interest rates up, is to prevent the hemorrhaging out of this country of so-called U.S. paper money. Interest rates currently being at a near-historic low, raising the interest rates would cause a widespread real estate collapse. This being so because real estate is one of the few unregulated free markets in the U.S.

Particularly vulnerable are ARMs (Adjustable Rate Mortgages). Currently, reportedly threatening each other is Federal Reserve Commissar Alan Greenspan and George W. Bush, currently the occupant and resident of the White House (installed by a military-style five-person junta of the U.S. Supreme Court).

To protect the so-called "U.S. Dollar", Greenspan wants to raise the interest rates. Bush says no. A "black bag" team (secret break and entry) ransacked Greenspan's residence, looking for secret documents, January 16, 2003. (See prior part of this website series as to that.) Bush reportedly sought to intimidate Greenspan.

5. EMPLOYMENT.

The Aristocracy, to profit themselves, perhaps to create a basis for a failing, failed revolution to aid their control, is in the process of forcing down the wages of Americans. Good-wage jobs in the U.S. are terminated and the work sent to be processed by slave-labor-level wages in Mexico, Sri Lanka, India, Red China, Honduras, and elsewhere.

Like the proverbial frog sitting in the water, not moving as it gets hotter and hotter to the frog's demise, the common American grumbles but takes no effective action—YET.

6. Some of those who seem to criticize the government are reportedly paid stooges for the American CIA through funds funneled from the spy machine through Foundations. (Scroll all the way down our website to a story about this. Also there has been, on other websites such as www.rense.com, a multi-part series on the Media Gatekeepers, the CIA being apparently linked to various supposedly dissident groups.)

7. BANKRUPTCY COURT.

The Aristocracy is in the process of discarding laws that allow Americans, much unlike Europeans, to get a fresh start after illness, business reverses, and such. That is, in the past, discharging debts through bankruptcy court. That court system needs a whole series of articles by us, to outline the fraudulent system, even such as it is currently. So that common Americans, for example, are pushed into Chapter 13, where their properties are plundered instead of saved, by way of the corrupt "Bankruptcy Club", made up of a few handfuls of crooked judges, lawyers, and court clerks, primarily in big cities like Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and such.

8. WORKERS RIGHTS blocked.

Who bothers to widely comment on the fact that, in most states, the rights of workers are being blocked? That is, if a worker is injured on the job, in most states the worker IS FORBIDDEN to directly sue the employer. Instead, the worker is forced to submit his or her claim to a little-publicized administrative-type almost-secret court in a procedure called Workmens' Compensation. Were a jury trial permitted from the beginning, as in other suits for damage claims, the worker might get a hefty award. But under the Workmens' Compensation laws, the worker most often gets a pittance. Yes, the worker has a right to a later cumbersome appeal to the regular court system, which often rejects any appeal remedy with little formality.

So, who says workers have equal rights? Corporations, on the other hand, submit THEIR claims against workers to banker-judges, heavily favoring the corporate interests.

9. REVOLUTION that is designed to fail?

Who wants that? Obviously the Aristocracy.

Seldom if ever mentioned: there has been no genuine revolution in what is now called the United States of America, or whatever led up to the same. The so-called American Revolutionary War is wrongly-named. It was merely the American business interests sore at the London government about collecting taxes.

In the 1930s, a charming patrician President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was falsely described by the media fakers as a traitor to his class. In truth, he was the greatest counter-revolutionary in American history.

Because of widespread hardships in the Great Depression, America was at the point of Revolution. At that time, however, there was a large number of foreign-born; if they had to sleep under bridges when it rains, they preferred to do so in America, not in Europe. By giving a very few benefits to the unemployed, Roosevelt, to aid the Aristocracy, headed off a possibly real revolution. His declaration in 1933 of a Bank Holiday saved the huge money-center bankers while swallowing up the numerous local community banks.

Do we dare say that we are headed for a Revolution? See if you understand that, in view of the earlier parts of this series.

Do the British seek to destroy our central government, reverting us to be subjects of a British (actually German) Monarchy, instead of being citizens of the American Republic?

More coming. Stay tuned.

The Bankruptcy Bordello, Part 1: The Club (6/4/03)

Some always fault us. We are not University graduates. So, how could we know much about finances. We are not diplomatic. Our descriptions sometimes are crude and cynical. To some, we are just uncouth.

We somehow do not fill up our stories with footnotes referring to other people's magazine or newspaper articles. Hence, some consider we could not possibly know what we are talking about.

Most folks do not know or understand what is PRIMARY INVESTIGATION. It is getting as close to the "horse's mouth" as possible. Some are not impressed that, over the last four decades and more, we have compiled millions of records, court files, audio and video tapes, secret notebooks, and secret records of officials we are not supposed to have.

We have secret reports of grand juries as to court corruption; how did those get into our possession? We conducted interviews with key persons who are reliable sources, but we could not dare risk their lives divulging who they are. We use methods of investigation different than taught in journalism schools.

We were once waiting in the hallway outside some courtrooms of the U.S. bankruptcy court, in Chicago, our hometown. Two lawyers came up to us, one tall, one short:

Tall Lawyer: Remember us? Like last time, come away from the doorway so we would not stand out so.

Citizen's Committee To Clean Up The

Courts: Over here is okay. Talk low; we'll hear you.

Short Lawyer (trying to pull his law partner away from us): We should not be talking to them.

Tall Lawyer: We gotta talk about this. We lost a hundred and fifty thousand dollars last year because of "The Club".

Citizen's Committee: You mean "The Bankruptcy Club"? (He nodded yes.) We know. There is one in most every major Federal Court District. What did they try to hit you up for, the usual? The three thousand per month? (Again he nodded yes.)

Tall Lawyer: Yah, but my partner said we gotta go on the cheap. So we did not pay. Well, if you pay that, plus the "assessments", you get the run of the place. Everything is granted. No trouble. Motions are granted. The Trustee is told to get off our back. We could make an easy quarter mil, if we just paid the monthly plus the assessments.

Citizen's Committee: Well, maybe you saw our TV show recently. We had on a prominent member of the Bankruptcy Bar. He admitted there is a Bankruptcy Club. But he said there is nothing sinister. They just meet after court—for coffee, maybe lunch.

Hey, you waiting for the Chief Judge?

Tall Lawyer: Yeah, he's a crook. Without The Club, you come into this place like a dumb John. To screw or be screwed.

We once interviewed a top official of the Criminal Division of the Chicago District Office of the Internal Revenue Service. We made a secret transcript and later put it into various public court records, where it was not challenged or disputed.

The IRS official confirmed they knew about Chief Judge John D. Schwartz. His fellow judges in the federal system in 1984 chose him for a 14-year term as Chief Judge. The IRS official confirmed that they knew that Schwartz had parked for him, offshore, for himself and for other judges, over $140 MILLION and that he did not pay or file any federal income taxes for the previous 30 years. Also confirmed was that the IRS knew that Schwartz had secretly been an official of the First National Bank of Cicero, in the Mafia enclave adjacent to Chicago known as "Al Capone Land".

But the IRS official warned us about the records we had, that we could be punished for having such. The Cicero bank, the IRS official confirmed, is a money laundry, jointly for state and federal officials and their bribery loot jointly with known hoodlums.

In the 1990s, Hillary Rodham Clinton, as First Lady, put us on her "Enemy List", to hound and harass us in and out of the courthouse, because we got her lesbian business partner arrested for selling missile parts to known international terrorists. To terrorize us, Hillary had a top official of the Clinton Justice Department fly into Chicago to confront us in the hallway outside of a courtroom. In the presence of witnesses, he said he was going to get us arrested if we did not stop publicizing the matter of the $140 MILLION and Chief Judge John D. Schwartz.

In 1996 we sued Hillary and him, and Hillary's "baglady", and two IRS officials, regarding the "Enemy List" and related matters. (Sherman H. Skolnick, et al., plaintiffs vs. Hillary Rodham Clinton et al., defendants, Chicago U.S. District Court, No. 96 C 4373.) As we set forth elsewhere on our website, part of the court corruption is the arbitrary assignment of certain cases to a certain judge to put in "the fix". The case was assigned to Chicago U.S. District Judge George M. Marovich, a banker tied to crooked dealings.

As we had already detailed in our lawsuit, filed before it was assigned to Marovich, he owns, near the First National Bank of Cicero, a shopping center, Cermak Plaza. It is shown on his annual mandatory federal financial disclosure form, signed by him subject to the perjury laws if he lied. As our investigations showed, the shopping center has silent partners who are known gangsters, jointly with corrupt top state and federal tax collectors. Through the shopping center they launder mobster and other loot, such as for bribery, extortion, and by way of shakedown.

Judge Marovich did not remove himself from the case and did not disqualify himself. He ordered that we not ever be allowed inside his courtroom. Our further court papers were to be sent in by mail.

In the court record we complained, to no avail, that he was running a "Mailbox Court", depriving us of orderly proceedings. He put our case out of court on an unprecedented ruling—that we had too many facts, dates, and details in our pleadings. Yet, the federal rules require specifics which we set forth.

We took an appeal to the Chicago Federal Appeals Court, where most of the judges hate our guts, because we lambaste their misdeeds on our TV shows. The judges refused to hear our appeal and ordered we be barred from all the federal courts in Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin. When we petitioned the U.S. Supreme Court for a remedy, that our Freedom of the Press rights had been cancelled, they refused to do anything about it. (See our research series about the homosexual underground as to Hillary and her business partner.)

As we found out over a series of years, the Bankruptcy Club in Chicago is just typical of what exists in bankruptcy courts in major cities of the U.S. It consists of a tight-knit group of usually about thirty judges, lawyers, court clerks, bankruptcy court assignees and auctioneers, bankruptcy trustees, and others.

In Chicago, someone apparently "bugged" their monthly meetings and we had the details. They met at the home of a long-time attorney. We found out how they arrange the monthly membership fees and assessments. And the specific banks used to funnel the bribery loot offshore.

One bank used has been LaSalle National Bank, a reputed longtime bribery center for payments to state and federal judges. LaSalle is an "untouchable" enterprise. They arbitrarily reserve the right to themselves to refuse to honor court subpoenas requiring them to produce witnesses or records. AND, the state and federal judges refuse to enforce such subpoenas to LaSalle. The parent of LaSalle has become ABN-AMRO, the Dutch bank octopus originally Algemene Bank Nederland.

Upon the downfall of the Moscow government, the former Soviet bosses stole most of the Soviet gold treasury and parked it for custody with ABN. ABN-AMRO has used gold to buy up shaky banks in some 15 U.S. cities. LaSalle has become the flagship for the U.S. units of ABN-AMRO.

For months we publicized that the Bush Crime Family had large joint accounts with supposed "terrorist" (living in a cave) Osama bin Laden in ABN-AMRO. BUT that the U.S. Treasury repeatedly refused to freeze those accounts until just recently, not divulging the Bush links.

Through ABN-AMRO U.S. and LaSalle, the bribery money for the Chicago Bankruptcy Club is funneled, for example, to the Grand Caymans. It is kept there in "escrow". The funds go forward to the accounts of the officials to be bribed after, not before, they make corrupt rulings favoring members of the Club.

(Visit our website research series on IRS corruption. Shown is the picture of California Rose, the ocean-going ship for money laundry dealings, owned by current and former top corrupt IRS officials of the Chicago District Office.)

Certain litigants in the Bankruptcy Court scheduled me as a witness to detail how the Bankruptcy Club deprives them of Equal Justice. On the day I was to testify, I was waiting in my wheelchair, in the lobby of the Federal Courthouse near the elevators. A tipster warned me to be careful. So, I sent an associate to go upstairs to the courtroom ahead of me. He came running out of the elevator: "Sherman, you gotta get the hell out of the building. They got six deputy U.S. Marshalls waiting outside the courtroom door to arrest you." I fled the place.

Part of my testimony was so hot, very few of my associates knew what it was going to be. They did not know about it even in whispers.

I was prepared to testify with specifics that Israeli intelligence, the Mossad, was part of an unholy deal. They have long taken the position that they and the State of Israel are not enforcers of Federal Criminal laws in the United States. And, that Israeli officials, whether authorized or renegade, participating in so-called "business" deals in the U.S., are not obligated to determine the right or wrong of the situation as subject to American laws.

My testimony was to have set forth specifics of the split of the bribery, shakedown, and extortion loot skimmed off from the Chicago Bankruptcy Courts, and possibly the same in other major Federal Districts. Namely, the deal was that the Mossad, or at least their agents, authorized or renegade, were to get 80% of the proceeds available for them presumably to ship off to Tel Aviv. The remaining 20% was for "handling fees" for "The Club".

A problem developed. There was a falling out of thieves. "The Club" kept 80% FOR THEMSELVES and left only 20% to presumably be shipped off through the Mossad. This problem caused murder and mayhem to be committed on U.S. soil, to be detailed in future parts of this series.

My testimony was to have included the interviews we conducted with a retired Federal law enforcement official, who confirmed to us details showing the U.S. Treasury Inspector General was actually the highest ranking Mafia representative within the U.S. Government. Furthermore, we had interviewed staff members of a Congressional committee quietly investigating IRS corruption, confirming the same details as to the Inspector General.

Purely as a legal formality, not expecting any remedy from corrupt officials, we sent by registered mail, return receipt requested and received, to the U.S. Treasury Inspector General himself, details like the foregoing.

We also conducted interviews with some lawyers we knew since they got out of law school and became members of the Bar. The interviews were five years after they first became attorneys:

Citizen's Committee To Clean Up The Courts: So, how come you do not practice in Chicago's bankruptcy courts?

First Lawyer: Are you kidding? The Club starts you off for one thousand per month plus assessments.

Citizen's Committee: How high can the assessments go and what are they for?

Second Lawyer: The assessments are to grease the court clerks and their supervisors. So that certain records appear and disappear as The Club orders to be done. There is no actual limit on how high the assessments can go. If we paid everything, including what the older members of The Club pay, we are sure to make per year more than 8 times the ticket price.

Citizen's Committee: So why don't you guys pay for the ticket?

First Lawyer: I couldn't come up, in front, with the three thou per month.

Citizen's Committee: Hey, I noticed you hooked up with an older attorney. I saw him recently in the bankruptcy court. How come?

First Lawyer: He's a long-time member. He pays. I am only a junior partner of his. I would have to pay for my own ticket.

(One of the lawyers narrowly escaped big trouble. He was too friendly with a top official of an insurance company. The official had embezzled more than $42 million from his firm but was not prosecuted. How come? The embezzler "wired up" certain federal officials that we could finger. But the lawyer is now afraid to talk to most others.)

In future parts of this series: Why nothing has been done as to murder and mayhem in the bankruptcy courts. How top corrupt IRS Chicago District Office officials stole $50 million for their own personal benefit and not for the public treasury. And why there are so many judges and lawyers in the bankruptcy courts with Jewish last names and Christian first names. And does the situation of them plundering non-Jews foment terrible religious hatred.

More coming. Stay tuned.

The Bankruptcy Bordello, Part 2: Murder Before Christmas

(6/6/03)

Wallace Lieberman was a man of the real world. He knew things up close and first hand. Later, you will find out why he was important.

Lieberman knew that Paul Marcinkus had been the Bishop of the Catholic Church in Cicero. And that Cicero was the Mafia enclave adjacent to Chicago. Locally, the suburb was known as "Al Capone Land". Marcinkus had long been the dominant force behind the First National Bank of Cicero, an "untouchable" enterprise and sinister. Marcinkus went on to become the head of the Vatican Bank.

Although later, far from Cicero, Marcinkus continued his role with the bank in Cicero.

In Chicago, the Catholic Archbishop is an entity known as "corporation sole" (a one-man corporation?). The Catholic Church in Chicago has the most units of any in the U.S. And the Archbishop of Chicago is particularly powerful. He is also the treasurer for the Church for the whole Western Hemisphere. Traditionally, the Archbishop steered the funds through the Continental Bank of Chicago and the one in Cicero.

The actual full name was Continental Illinois National Bank, and its parent, its holding firm, was Continental Illinois. Continental was the principal transaction point for the Chicago Board of Trade (CBOT), which deals with soybeans, corn, wheat, and other commodities, among others.

The Exchange traditionally was run by the French Rothschilds. And especially talented, particularly young Irish Catholics with steel nerves, trade in the pits of the CBOT. These were Irish Catholics, often from important, prominent families, just a layer or two below the Aristocracy, to whom they were obligated and beholden.

On the other hand, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange is dominated by those with Jewish names, who may not all be actually practicing the religion. And they are often steel-nerved types from prominent families, a layer or two below the Aristocracy, to whom they are beholden and obligated.

The office of Archbishop of Chicago, as Lieberman well knew, often had a checkered past. Early in the 1980s, the Catholic Archbishop was indicted on federal criminal charges for embezzling large sums from the Church for upkeep of his mistress. A local well-known reporter who knew how the charges were quietly suppressed, was found murdered. He had earlier told us all about the grand jury. Coincidentally, through a series of odd circumstances, we interviewed a member of that grand jury who likewise confirmed the charges were hushed up. And a retired federal law enforcement official also confirmed the same.

The Continental Bank was much implicated in the embezzlement. The Continental somehow falsely led the Japanese Mafia, the Yakuza, to believe that the holding firm, Continental Illinois, was a "bank of deposit". Were it to be true, which it was not, it would in part be covered by Federal Deposit Insurance. A bank holding firm can transact in non-bank matters.

The Yakuza had put over $20 BILLION of flight capital in the holding firm. When they found out the truth, they made a run on the bank. We were the first to realize the bank and its holding firm were insolvent. Those in the monopoly press who heard our public comments said that Continental was okay and that we were "liars".

One early morning, at 3 a.m., we were as witnesses stationed near the rear entrance of Continental. Cabs were arriving, one after the other, and Asian types were rushing into the rear entrance. They came out later with suitcases stuffed with cash. They did not wish to wait for the funds to be wired to Osaka, where a unit of Continental was operating, and Osaka being the home base of the Yakuza.

A populist newspaper in Washington DC was the only publication to run our exclusive stories with the accurate assessment of the amount of the run on the bank holding firm.

Continental had a troubled past. A major fixture and long-time Board Chairman of Continental was Walter Cummings, Sr. In 1931, with the bank failing, he made a deal with a federal agency, giving them stock in the bank in return for a financial transfusion. The government never forgot about this.

For example, in 1943, Walter Cummings, Sr., quietly and secretly arranged for the shipment to the Soviets of a particular type of uranium they needed to finish the development of their atomic bomb. (We have a document proving this.) Hey, this being so, why did the U.S. government kill in the electric chair Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, some ten years after 1943,

William Cooper: Death Of A Conspiracy Salesman

On November 5, 2001, William Cooper was shot to death by sheriff's deputies in a gunfire exchange. Who was Bill Cooper? Was he a true patriot? A tough survivalist? Or simply a fanatic?

Some knew him as a UFO "expert" (claimed insider information on government knowledge of extraterrestrials living among us)...a conspiracy theorist...a former Navy Intelligence operative...and the person the President once called "the most dangerous man on American airwaves". Cooper always said he acted from his "conscience" and sought to warn all Americans of the dangers of the New World Order, creeping socialism, and our own brand of Nazism. Here is the inside story, as told by a fellow patriot and government whistle-blower. Commander X has collected together for the first time Cooper's thoughts and finds on such subjects as: The Illuminati • The Kennedy Assassination • MJ-12 and the UFO Cover-Up • Area 51 • The AntiChrist • The World Trade Center Disaster • Gun Control • Skull and Bones Society.

claiming THEY gave atomic secrets to the Soviets?

In the 1970s, when the American CIA and others wanted to conceal certain secret transactions in the Continental, the U.S. government apparently reminded Continental how they were saved in 1931. Continental tried real hard to hush up the matter by attempting to keep it out of the Chicago federal court record which we obtained.

In 1984, six weeks before the collapse of Continental became public, guess what happened? Two of their largest stockholders quietly sold out their shares before the shares went to almost nothing. That was the Pope and the Queen of England. (The British monarchy, contrary to public perception, has long been secretly Catholic.) Traditionally, the Pope and the British monarch each had their representative sitting on Continental's Board of Directors.

Editors of some Italian newspapers criticized the Vatican for not breaking Continental's known ties to the Mafia. Pope John Paul I tried to do something about it. But he was murdered with a poisoned cup of tea just 33 days after becoming Pope. (Details are in the book In God's Name published in 1983 by David Yallop.)

He was replaced by Pope John Paul II who was warned not to interfere in business dealings between the Vatican Bank, the American CIA, and the Mafia. In 1981, there was an attempted assassination of John Paul II just to remind him to stay out of such matters. He survived but developed physical complications.

The rear entrance of Continental faced the federal courthouse in Chicago. There sat U.S. Court of Appeals, 7th Circuit, Chief Judge Walter Cummings, Jr. He could keep track of his bank, watching from the courthouse offices. His judgeship was his public persona. Privately, he was a "man of trust" for the Church, trusted to confidentially and secretly handle their business, whether dirty or clean. Upon the demise of his bank in 1984, he quietly warned lawyers, members of the federal bar, that they would be brought to ruin if they dared instigate damage suits against Continental claiming fraud.

And there was fraud. The Yakuza, to pacify them, were given as a "gift", Continental's business dealings division. And so, the Osaka gang purported to open their offices on Chicago's financial zone, LaSalle Street.

Wallace Lieberman knew this, and much, much more.

Lieberman knew that an adjunct to the money laundering of Continental, was the First National Bank of Cicero, continuing to be dominated by Paul Marcinkus, even while he was away overseas as Vatican Bank Chief. Lieberman found out some things early on that did not come to public attention until much, much later. Namely, that there was resident near Naples, Italy, an official of the American CIA with dual citizenship, U.S.

and Italy. That was Roger D'Onofrio, who was part of a criminal gang that included Paul Marcinkus and his confederates, with the aid of Continental and the bank in Cicero.

The Italian authorities were becoming aware, like Lieberman who was thick with the Mossad, Israeli intelligence, that the Vatican Bank with Marcinkus and D'Onofrio and others, were trafficking in smuggled gold, osmium nuclear bomb triggers, superior counterfeit currencies, exotic weapons—just to name a few items.

All this did not surface until early in December, 1995 (right after the possibly related political assassination of Itzhak Rabin, the Israeli prime minister). The Roger D'Onofrio Affair was detailed in reports, datelined Rome by Reuters and United Press International. The American monopoly press pretended not to know anything about it. The Italian authorities also fingered as a gang member the Archbishop of Barcelona, Spain, who denied complicity.

In 1991, Italian authorities vowed to grab Vatican Bank Chief Paul Marcinkus and grill him about all this. Using his Vatican passport as a separate sovereignty gimmick, Marcinkus eluded the Italian authorities and fled to Chicago. With the courtesy of Balkan and Polish Catholics, who live in a sort of enclave in the Windy City, Marcinkus for a while had his food and housing provided for. Outsiders knew not to enter that Chicago neighborhood.

Part of the rackets of the Chicago U.S. bankruptcy courts, which also apparently goes on in major other federal districts, is that a combination of different gangs and forces arrange to plunder mid-size firms, such as in the Midwest, by falsely and fraudulently pushing them into bankruptcy. The Israelis, as in Part One of this series, arrange to skim off or try to skim off funds from companies finding themselves in bankruptcy. Likewise, certain Catholic entities do the same.

How, over the years, did they get away with it? Simple. Chief Judge Walter Cummings, Jr., is the ultimate supervisor of the lawyers, judges, assignees, trustees, at this writing, perhaps it shall never see the light of public scrutiny, but I must do my Duty and record here for all to read one day in a world which hopefully the greed and exploitation of certain of mankind can no longer suppress that which is Truth."

The Missing Diary Of Admiral Richard E. Byrd

auctioneers, liquidators, court clerks, and others, members of which constitute the corrupt "Bankruptcy Club".

One of those who seems to be a part of all this is William A. Brandt, Jr. He is the CEO and President of Development Specialists, Inc. They use the terms and lingo of their industry, such as workout, turnaround, and insolvency consultants. They now have offices in Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, London, Miami, San Francisco, Columbus, and Boston.

Pushed falsely into bankruptcy for the apparent purpose of plundering them, was Wirecloth Products, Inc., headquartered in the Chicago suburb of Bellwood. Their specialty, almost exclusively so, was the making of superfine, gold-plated filters for nuclear submarines, tanks, airplanes, and other military and civilian vehicles. Their product was quite essential in Gulf War One.

Despite that, they were shoved into bankruptcy and Brandt took over. The owners of the firm complained to no avail to the assigned judge, Chicago U.S. bankruptcy judge Jack B. Schmetterer. According to the owners, U.S. Generals were calling from the Persian Gulf: "Where the hell are those gold filters? The fine powder sand is getting into our fuel lines, and our tanks and trucks are stalled." The owners complained, to no avail, to the Defense Department as well as the judge. Later, we found out that the judge was tight with the Mossad, Israeli intelligence. So what was the angle there?

Since Brandt was put up on trustee panels by the Justice Department, we began investigating what all he was into. Not expecting to get any results, we nevertheless applied under the Freedom of Information law to get data on Brandt.

Wow! One day an envelope arrives from the U.S. Justice Department. Out pops Brandt's dossier.

Hey! It shows the American CIA trained him in overseas work, to get rid of CIA operations "fronts", called proprietaries, by falsely claiming they were insolvent. Who was trained to do this trick? Why, William A. Brandt, Jr.

One day I am sitting in the back of judge

Schmetterer's courtroom in my wheelchair, as a journalist and observer. During a recess, the judge addressed me directly, even though I was not part of the litigation: "You know, Mr. Skolnick, everyone in the courthouse knows of Mr. Brandt's CIA background. There is nothing there for you to comment on."

We have been tracking Schmetterer for years. Going back to the time he was a prosecutor. At one time, he was himself part of the auctioneering and liquidating industry active as part of the Chicago U.S. bankruptcy court.

We found out that the various bankruptcy judges in Chicago kept William A. Brandt Jr. quite busy. Some 15 or more sizeable firms were shoved, perhaps falsely to plunder them, into bankruptcy.

One such firm interested us greatly. It was a gold smelting firm, reportedly run by hoodlums handling smuggled gold, apparently once in a while for the American CIA and even, on occasion, for foreign spy agencies. Some of those running the firm were terminated or scared off. How? Well, by murdering them, shooting at them, and they survived, and such. Terrorism.

And who becomes the new CEO of this gold smelting firm, pending in bankruptcy? Why, none other than William A. Brandt Jr. He kept quite busy.

In later years, he has been working in Red China, reorganizing and restructuring some of China's state-owned industries. We have reason to believe that Brandt was well aware of the activities of the Red Chinese Secret Police, laundering dope and other illicit funds disguised as soybeans and such, on the Chicago exchanges.

[Editor's note: Go back and review Sherman's astonishing research in an article titled Wal-Mart & The Red Chinese Secret Police in the May 2002 issue of The SPECTRUM in conjunction with the front-page story for that issue featuring renowned investigative journalist Gordon Thomas and his then-new and still-hot book about China.]

Brandt was likewise big with the Democratic Party. In 2000, he served as a member of that party's Platform Committee.

Just about the time Paul Marcinkus arrived back in Chicago, in or about November 1991, there was in session a very special federal grand jury, investigating as following:

1. How Israeli intelligence, the Mossad, either authorized by the State of Israel or as renegades on U.S. soil, were skimming off large sums to be sent overseas, from the rackets in the Chicago bankruptcy courts.

2. Being explored, was what was going to be done about Chicago U.S. Bankruptcy Court Chief Judge John D. Schwartz, a purported secret official of the First National Bank of Cicero. He has parked offshore, for himself and other judges of "The Club", $140 million. He has apparently not filed or paid federal income taxes for 30 years.

3. Can one of the lower-level members of "The Club" be quickly and quietly thrown away into jail, such as on tax evasion charges, so as to protect the important members of "The Club"? The special federal prosecutor was toying with this knotty problem.

4. Can the special federal grand jury be steered, by the special federal prosecutor, in such a way as to protect the hotshots of "The Club"?

5. An important special federal grand jury witness was Wallace Lieberman, a Chicago U.S. bankruptcy court auctioneer and liquidator, who has personal knowledge of a lot of what is mentioned herein, and could competently testify about it to the federal grand jury.

Questions remained. Will the U.S. Marshals Service protect Wallace Lieberman under their Federal Witness Protection Program? And if they intended to do so, was he being protected?

(Longtime after 1991, it came out that the then-head of the Federal Witness Protection Program in Chicago was also a business partner of a gangster: "Marshal Linked To Mob 'Friend'" was the headline. The story went on to say: "Most troubling to the law enforcement community is that the U.S. Marshals Service runs the ultra-secretive federal Witness Protection Program, where mob turncoats cooperating with the government hid from their old pals. Mobsters who turn on their associates are relocated for their safety—often with their extended families—and given new identities, jobs, cash, and even bodyguards." (Chicago Sun-Times story about gangster John Serpico and former U.S. Marshal Peter J. Wilkes, 8/16/99.)

Was Wallace Lieberman a mob turncoat, turning on his associates?

By December 1991, we uncovered data about the special federal grand jury. As a test, I arranged a meeting with an Assistant U.S. Attorney. (They used to call them U.S. District Attorney, and they handled both federal criminal prosecutions as well as representing the U.S. government in civil matters.) To the meeting he brought one of those no-real-name FBI agents. I detailed a lot of what is contained in this series.

As I was talking about Chief Judge John D. Schwartz, the federal prosecutor, with an apparent slip of the lip, confirms that the Chief Judge Schwartz matter is pending before the special federal grand jury. The FBI agent glares at the federal prosecutor, saying: "Why are you telling Skolnick this?" (Over the years I found out lots about that federal prosecutor, that he was not to be trusted. In 1995, he was appointed as part of a special federal prosecutorial team to prosecute Timothy McVeigh, the supposed "lone bomber" of the federal office building in Oklahoma City, April 19, 1995. That federal prosecutor, in my judgment, went along with the vast cover-up of U.S. government prior knowledge to the multiple bombings that took down that building.)

After the meeting with that assistant U.S. Attorney, we found out data that Lieberman was apparently trying to blackmail his way into a very lucrative crooked deal reportedly involving Paul Marcinkus, William A. Brandt Jr., the First National Bank of Cicero, Chief Judge Cummings Jr., and other apparent members of "The Club". Lieberman fashioned himself an expert blackmailer, and that he could get away with doing such a thing.

On a weekend shortly before Christmas 1991, Wallace Lieberman was found shot to death, Mafia-style, his body parked next to a rear wall of an auto repair shop.

Guess where? Why, not far from the First National Bank of Cicero! Had he been trying to shake them down in person? Or did another faction, planting him dead there, use that to shake down the bank in Cicero?

The local press played down the story as if it had no importance. The Chicago Tribune went along with the cover-up, running the story on Christmas day, December 25, 1991, headlined: "Northbrook Auctioneer Found Slain". The story did mention that a gangster's wife (apparently a partner of Lieberman) was Lieberman's secretary. That was gangster Robert Belavia, previously although a known hoodlum was "untouchable" as far as the federal bureaucracy was concerned.

He was hustled into jail. U.S. District Court judge Ann Claire Williams, a former federal prosecutor, did the usual whitewash. We tried to intervene with a special petition to point out what the Belavia case was really all about, linked to the murder of Lieberman. She quickly pushed us out of court and the whitewash continued. Judge Williams was rewarded by being made a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals in Chicago.

And who was happy about the unsolved crime of the murder of Wallace Lieberman? Was William A. Brandt Jr. thereafter more at ease, like Chief Judge John D. Schwartz? Were the criminals in with Paul Marcinkus and the First National Bank of Cicero happier thereafter?

Several years after this political assassination we did, on-site, a one-hour documentary about the murder of Wallace Lieberman. We put it on our public-access cable-TV program Broadsides. We interviewed the owner of the auto repair shop, near the bank in Cicero. He talked candidly but we promised not to video his face.

He showed us where Lieberman's Mercedes was found in the nearby alley and how Lieberman's body was left in such a way like a traditional Mafia "hit". After the murder in 1991, the state and federal authorities, along with the local police, seemed to not want to pursue the matter.

More coming. Stay tuned.

best of their fresh inventory at a knock-down, under-the-table price, for an appropriate pay-off so the retailer could go back in business and undersell any competitor. The same type of complaints were lodged as to manufacturing firms and corporate operations.

There were complaints with specific details of trustees in the California U.S. bankruptcy courts working unholy deals for their own personal profits.

There were specific details of domestic and foreign interests, including resident, apparently renegade, officials of various spy agencies, such as Italy and Israel, falsely and fraudulently forcing mid-size firms, even larger ones, into bankruptcy, so the firms could be plundered by the "California Bankruptcy Club".

There were details about California U.S. bankruptcy judges, in several federal districts, who granted all the motions and petitions, regardless of the law and the facts and the merits, of "favorites"—those who had some out-of-court financial link to the judges and their immediate relatives and former law and business partners, or secret present business partners.

There were specific complaints about auctioneers of the California U.S. bankruptcy courts un-padlocking the rear doors of firms in bankruptcy and selling the goods at knock-down prices, back to the debtors, or to competing firms, and anybody else willing to pay "under the table". And the bankruptcy auctions were mysteriously cancelled.

And the file cabinets likewise were jammed full of notes of FBI and other government investigators, state and federal.

There were notes from the several different federal district officials of the Criminal Division of the Internal Revenue Service.

And then there were apparent documents, records, and notes that may have originated from the American CIA regarding California criminal gangs from Italy, Israel, and a few other places. It was not clear from the records exactly where these records, filed away in the full file cabinets, were coming from. The notes fingered Israeli operatives and those of the Roman Catholic Church, operating in California more or less as part of criminal enterprises.

There were extensive specific notes of the operations of the Japanese Mafia, the Yakuza, owning most of the banks in California and intersecting with the bankruptcy rackets and the forwarding of illicit funds through secret accounts.

There was parked away, in one of the cabinets, specific notes of a government bank investigator, looking into criminal activities of Wells Fargo Bank and Bank of America, among others. He was fired for digging too deep into the latter day activities of the Yakuza and the California banks. It was a disturbance to American-Japanese relations, however, to be messing around in this subject.

Besides, the Japanese, including the Yakuza, owned upwards of 40% of all U.S. Treasury securities. A little secret. The Japanese had their purchases of U.S. Treasuries backed by gold, a benefit not extended to U.S. buyers of the same. No one in authority wanted to set off a Japanese run, Yakuza or not, on banks. (But go back to Part 2 of this series as to Continental Bank, Chicago.)

Housed in the locked cabinets were specific notes from well-informed tipsters and would-be government whistle-blowers. They complained there was no remedy in that the U.S. Treasury Inspector General was, as described in their notes, "the highest ranking Mafia representative in the U.S. government".

A Congressional subcommittee had a detailed report, not published, and maybe never to be made public, somehow slipped out to "trouble-makers" and certain loudmouths, such as in Chicago and elsewhere.

And topping all this off were the secret reports of very special federal grand juries, sitting in more than one federal district in California, investigating all these goings on.

What was the problem? The files were in the head office of the Chief Federal Prosecutor in one of the Federal Districts in California. So what is wrong with that?

The U.S. Attorney, as he is called in his official title, had failed, for years and years, to take any remedial action as to this. Supposedly, under the rules and procedures of his office, it was entirely "within his discretion" whether to proceed or not to have somebody indicted on federal criminal charges.

So he just filed away all this data in his head office. He had a hang up. One of many. His immediate family member was a culprit, most likely subject to federal criminal prosecution, in the dirty business of the "California Bankruptcy Club". And moreover, the prosecutor came out of certain law firms and law circles up to their eyeballs in the same rackets.

Another problem was the heavy hitters in finance. The records and witness statements showed the illicit funds skimmed off of the California U.S. bankruptcy courts were going offshore, through secret accounts in California banks. One such named was Wells Fargo. But they also funneled clandestine funds for the whole Pacific Basin covert operations of the American CIA.

And a major owner of Wells Fargo is Warren Buffet, the Omaha poobah who claims he became a billionaire from properly operating a local furniture store. For sarcastic reasons, we prefer to pronounce his name as BUFFAY. We are not the only ones who suspect his fortune is based in part on CIA operations, and even, reportedly, dope trafficking on a big scale. (See our extensive research series "Coca-Cola, CIA, And The Courts". Warren Buffet is a major Coke stockholder and has been a board member.)

Another big-time operation, once headquartered in San Francisco but now in North Carolina, tied to the bankruptcy rackets, is Bank of America, and their holding company (minus the OF in the middle of the name)—Bank America. (As to the rotten history of Bank of America, now greatly owned by the Yakuza, see our research stories "The Pope's Banks In America, The Giannini Family, And The American CIA, Part One" and "The Japanese Mafia In The United States".

The way cases proceed in the U.S. bankruptcy courts is that the U.S. bankruptcy court is in a federal district. Any appeal, if one is taken, goes to the U.S. District Court in the district, with the bankruptcy court considered a step-sister to the U.S. District Court. The federal judges higher up in the system select who, if anyone, is to sit as a judge or chief judge in the U.S. bankruptcy court, for a 14-year term. This is unlike the other federal judges who sit for life subject only to "good behavior" and they are almost impossible by impeachment to be removed.

A bankruptcy judge is subject to the supervision of the chief judge of the U.S. Courts of Appeals in the circuit, California being part of the 9th Circuit, of several western states. The federal appeals court, 9th Circuit, is headquartered in San Francisco.

Like in Chicago and elsewhere in major federal districts, the California U.S. District Court judges and U.S. Court of Appeals judges have quite a few skeletons in their closet. Key judges are also, as we describe, banker-judges, tied to banks, particularly so of several judges on the 9th Circuit.

A reliable source told us to expect a package. One day comes the package. Wow! Out pops the secret reports of the very special federal grand juries in California. No real return address was on the package. It detailed a mess many times bigger than what we knew about the Chicago Bankruptcy Club.

One of the reports referred to their key witness, code-named "Jacobs". He was apparently disgruntled about being cheated out of very lucrative deals by the grand jury-identified members of The Club—judges, court clerks, assignees, auctioneers, trustees, or the Bankruptcy Gang in short.

"Jacobs" had direct personal knowledge of the facts to which he was competently testifying and stated he would continue to testify to the special federal grand juries. A summary of his testimony:

1. That he handled a great deal of the illicit proceeds and skimming of the various California Bankruptcy Club members.
2. That through Wells Fargo and Bank America and Bank of America, at several branches and locations, in and out of the U.S., he handled and caused the funds so obtained to be placed into secret accounts. He read off the account names, numbers, secret passwords, and codes. Some of the funds went to Wells Fargo drop-off points such as in Hawaii.

(With the downturn in tourism, Japanese nationals—not U.S. citizens—bought upwards of 70% of properties in Hawaii. And a huge number of Japanese nationals now live in Hawaii. Some contend this situation undercuts the validity of Hawaii being an actual part of "The United States of America", and more properly, is a Japanese colony under the jurisdiction of the Tokyo government. Of course, a great deal of this situation is the apparent headquartering in Hawaii of operations of the Yakuza, numbering many more members than the traditional Italian and Sicilian Mafias. The Yakuza is generally not bothered by American authorities because they do covert operations worldwide for the American CIA.)

3. He read off the names of California U.S. District Judges, part of "The Club". Also Club members are several judges on the U.S. Court of Appeals, 9th Circuit, through their link-up to banks, identified and detailed by the witness.

4. The witness detailed how some of the illicit funds, corruptly skimmed off of phoney and fraudulent bankruptcy cases, and their assets and properties, were put into non-bank transactions to cover up the trail through the holding firm, Bank America, NOT a bank of deposit. Some of the Bank America dealings for The Club were through little known branches in South America, which the witness detailed.

5. "Jacobs" knew and detailed specifics of some of the related secret accounts, passwords, and numbers, of relatives of various federal judges, with the relatives acting as their agents for the handling of the illicit funds. Since the U.S. Supreme Court permits only a handful of cases from the lower courts to be heard in Washington, the federal appeals court in San Francisco is the "end of the line" for cases originating in the federal districts in California.

6. "Jacobs" gave specific details and dates how at least two supervisory officials in California of the Internal Revenue Service were corrupted and compromised in a commotion between two competing firms, both apparently owned by Israelis, with one of the firms facing possible bankruptcy court protection, real or possibly phoney and arranged.

(A congressional subcommittee report noted that the U.S. Treasury somehow did not punish those IRS officials, but instead, they were promoted, apparently with the connivance of the U.S. Treasury Inspector General, mentioned as "the highest Mafia representative in the U.S. government".

7. "Jacobs" testified that he was a form of trusted "accountant" or "bookkeeper" for the illicit funds, proceeds of the bankruptcy rackets in California. He became aware of the rewards but also the jeopardies. Like a "mob bookkeeper", he said he was warned he could not "retire" from this work, except to the cemetery.

"Jacobs" was a key insider witness, a turncoat, necessary to understand the workings of the "California Bankruptcy Club" and their members. Was he given the protection of the ultra-secret Federal Witness Protection Program? Or were the federal officials, operating the program, also in business with criminals, mobsters, and the underworld in general?

Like Wallace Lieberman (mentioned in Part Two of this series), "Jacobs" was murdered. His body was found laying under a bridge.

Our reliable sources filled in the gaps. The highly politicized and corrupt U.S. Justice Department blocked any possible indictments. Too big a problem. They were not about to take down a large part of the banking system in California as well as the federal judges. And besides, the Special Federal Prosecutor no longer had a live key witness.

The Justice Department, knowing how to hush-up messy matters, after the rub-out of "Jacobs", had their gang ransack the offices, homes, and other places of "Jacobs". Key sources, close to the "horse's mouth", informed us in detail how this mass of notebooks, records, and computer stuff was hauled away—shredders for the papers, the hammer for the hard disks.

So, apparently members of the California Bankruptcy Club are at ease these days. What insider would become a new turncoat, subject to no government protection and very likely to be snuffed out? "Jacobs" was very likely bumped off by the duplicity of the federals.

William A. Brandt Jr., has offices in Los Angeles. (See Part Two of this series as to him.) Yes, it would simplify our understanding of the matter if we could, in Los Angeles, find a reputed mob gold-smelting outfit of which Brandt could somehow, in bankruptcy, be in charge of as the new CEO.

Wells Fargo, with the aid of CIA darling Warren Buffet, can continue, without difficulty, doing their covert-operations money-laundering for the American CIA. Does anyone dare ask Warren Buffet, as a major purported stockholder of Wells Fargo, if HE knows anything about the spy agency and the funding of political assassinations? What mass media reporter could pin down Buffet with such a question, and still have a job and be employable within the monopoly press?

Can the Vatican, which retains an interest in Bank America, jointly with the Yakuza, dare remedy anything? After all, look what happened to Pope John Paul I, croaked after only 33 days in office. (In God's Name by David Yallop, 1983.) And John Paul II survived an attempted assassination in 1981, to remind him not to mess with such matters.

Some useful related matter can be seen on the www.defraudingamerica.com website. It is a website of a very well-informed crusader against corruption, Rodney Stich.

More coming. Stay tuned.

The Bankruptcy Bordello, Part 4: Clubbing The Asians (6/9/03)

The mass media have their own understanding of what the public wants to read, view, or hear. For TV, their nameless, faceless program consultants have a motto: "If it bleeds, it leads." So, they are not inclined to send their high-paid reporters to cover business cases in the federal courts, for example, which may educate the common people to problems, to put it crudely, of the warehouses of justice.

As an unpaid freelance journalist, waiting to observe a case we were following one day in the Chicago bankruptcy courts, I saw something in the hearing of another case. It was before Chicago U.S. bankruptcy judge Jack B. Schmetterer, according to our inquiries apparently thick with Israeli intelligence, the Mossad.

In front of his bench, to the left, stood a short little Chinese woman. To the right, lined up, were 12 lawyers. It no longer puzzled me that most of them had Jewish last names and Christian first names. That item has to be explained later in this series.

The woman spoke haltingly, as best she could, in her poor command of English.

Chinese Woman: Judge, me family 14 Hong Kong. Work years. Save money. Me come Chicago for family. Buy shopping center. Business okay. Dirty bank no like me. Push me bankrupt. Lie. Me no bankrupt. No money you give for me family. Brothers fly Chicago. No lawyer. You no money for family. Why give 300 thousand dollar these lawyers. Me nothing? Why? (She started crying.)

Judge Jack B. Schmetterer: The law provides that lawyers must get their fees. I am obligated to award them fees. They presented a petition for fees on behalf of other interests.

(Most every judge in the major federal district U.S. bankruptcy courts is able to so quickly refer to the bankruptcy statutes, they could make ten cases brought by angels dance on a golden pin. They rapidly twist the laws supposedly to fit the facts.)

Judge: I am granting the fee petitions as they seem to be in order.

The 12 lawyers, practically like a choir in unison, said "Thank you, your honor" and rapidly departed the apparent scene of their crime.

On another day, following up a tip, we began thumbing through a huge file marked "Rusty Jones". They once were a heavily advertised rust-proofing firm, spraying or somehow applying their mixture of undercoating to prevent further rusting-out of cars. We discovered a typical rusting out of justice.

A group of lawyers were shown on the docket as being paid huge fees. Part of the docket as shown on the clerk's office computer was incomplete. Item numbers were garbled or gone. So I went to the Bankruptcy Clerk's office and started asking questions.

Citizen's Committee To Clean Up The Courts: Sir, who is in charge of the dockets on your computer?

Deputy Bankruptcy Clerk: The tall fellow across the hall in that office (pointing).

Citizen's Committee: But, sir, there is no number on that office door, nothing. Who is there.

He refused to further answer. I knocked on the unmarked door. No answer. So I was determined to find out what was behind this door. I parked my wheelchair right in front of the door in such a way that whoever comes out of that room will have to be quite athletic to jump over my wheelchair to escape me.

After about an hour, the door opens.

Tall Person: Hey, let me out!

Citizen's Committee: You ain't getting past me, 'til you tell me your title and what you have to do with the clerk's computer.

Tall Person: I am the private consultant who sees that everything is running.

Citizen's Committee: How is the docket changed, if it is ever changed?

Tall Person: (naming supervisor with Latino name) She has the key.

Citizen's Committee: You mean, a key like to a lock?

Tall Person: No, the code to get into the docket entries and change them if necessary. So I searched out that supervisor.

Citizen's Committee: I have here a print-out of five different cases, dockets. Take a look, you can see the case numbers. Each one has been altered, where the fees were awarded to lawyers. Concealed apparently is some data. The tall consultant from the unmarked door over there said YOU are the office supervisor with the code or key. WHY have the docket entries been altered? WHO ordered YOU to do that? And WHY?"

Clerk Supervisor: I am not answering. I have to call my lawyer.

Citizen's Committee: Ma'am, are you pleading the Fifth Amendment or what?

Clerk Supervisor: I have to call my lawyer. (She quickly fled from my presence.)

We began digging into what the Rusty Jones case was all about. Funny thing, the head lawyer of the law firm getting big bucks was born in Israel. We surmised the firm is part of the split from "The Club". And what is anyone in this place concealing? Does the IRS know that details of the fees are made to disappear? But then, we have documented the corruption about the top official of the Chicago District office of the Internal Revenue Service.

One day, a Japanese national has a meeting with us.

Citizen's Committee: You told us there is trouble with the Rusty Jones case. What is that about?

Japanese National: I am in America on behalf of our auto firm.

Citizen's Committee: So you represent (naming firm).

Japanese National: I am the (names his position as top official) of the firm. This is a serious problem.

Citizen's Committee: What is THAT problem?

Japanese National: Lawyers representing certain interests, apparently, in the Rusty Jones case, contend we owe them forty million dollars. They are false claims, yet they are bringing some kind of a supplementary action in the bankruptcy court to tie us up in America. They keep saying it will cost us more than forty million.

Citizen's Committee: What remedy did you seek?

Japanese National: I hope you understand, in Japan we have very few lawyers. It is a disgrace for somebody to be seen going to the courts there to start up with another firm or a neighbor. A loss of face. Very bad. But I have complained in Chicago to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the U.S. Justice Department, even to the judge himself. All the doors close on us. There is something wrong with your courts and your system of justice. I cannot say anything public because there is a Ministry in Japan that would punish us for interfering with relations with the U.S. There is some kind of a system, particularly here in Chicago, according to some of my friends here, to extort sums of money, or cheat Asians through your courts. Maybe I should have understood, as I had part of my business education in a top University in the U.S.

Citizen's Committee: Well, name some of the lawyers. By the way, did you learn about shakedown and extortion when you attended that University in the U.S.?

Japanese National: Well, the full details of the lawyers I found out are not fully disclosed in the court record. A principal partner is actually an Israeli. (Starts naming the law firm partners.) You know anything about such things? In answer to your other question: no, my university professors never said a single word about shakedown and extortion in business relations in America.

Citizen's Committee: Yes, we very much understand. Do you have attorneys in Chicago representing your interests?

Japanese National: Yes, but they do not seem like they will really help us. They seem to go along with some kind of a system you have in Chicago that I do not fully understand. It would not be allowed back in my homeland.

Citizen's Committee: Well, these lawyers who are in the Rusty Jones case, who claim your firm owes so much. What do they want?

Japanese National: Well, they want us to pay a down-payment of 800 thousand U.S. Dollars, in cash, to them, away from the courthouse, actually to accounts in the Grand Caymans. They are threatening harm against us, just like the Yakuza in Osaka. My family is worried. But it is my task to find out what to do.

Citizen's Committee: Will 800 thousand end the problem?

Japanese National: Tell me, is there a system in your country that I do not understand. Is it permitted to give large gifts of money to judges in the courthouse? It seems like these lawyers want a series of payments as gift to judges who are not on this pending matter. What is that about? And from what they are threatening me and my firm, the 800 thousand gift is just the beginning of a series of gifts.

Citizen's Committee: Your own lawyers, did you divulge this extortion to THEM?

Japanese National: No, this other group

Everyday Enlightenment: The Twelve Gateways To Personal Growth

Here is Dan Millman's magnum opus—the most complete presentation of his teachings, showing how to live as a peaceful warrior, how to actually practice a more enlightened way of life. Everyday Enlightenment presents twelve "gateways" or arenas that radically redefine the meaning of success and the purpose of our lives. These twelve gateways: keys to worth, will, energy, money, mind, intuition, emotions, fear, shadow, sexuality, heart, and service, represent twelve books in one, a clear map of the territory of human potential.

Comments by Dan: Those who have read most or all of my books know that each has a different purpose, and expresses another piece of the puzzle of personal and spiritual growth. Like the story about the five blind men who came upon an elephant and perceived a different kind of creature depending on whether they touched the elephant's ear, tail, trunk, or leg—someone who reads The Life You Were Born To Live may see me as a "numerologist". Someone who reads Divine Interventions or Body Mind Mastery or The Laws Of Spirit will have a completely different experience.

Everyday Enlightenment provides, in a single volume, the most complete map to the major practical and spiritual challenges (and solutions) we face in everyday life. It culminates with a final chapter worth far more than the price of the book: "The Practice Of Enlightenment"—a radical approach to living wisely and well.

of lawyers are friends of my local attorneys. I fear it would be unwise to tell my own lawyers what is going on. Someone locally told me you are known for keeping matters like this confidential. Please, for the sake of my family back home, do not use my name publicly nor my exact title with our firm.

We found out from reliable sources that he apparently began payments, some to the judges and "The Club" members of a compromised amount, of 400 thousand dollars each payment. The "bookkeeper" of "The Club" arranged to deposit the funds in the Grand Caymans and the Channel Islands. Banks from all over the world have their units there for clandestine dealings. The Chicago District office of the IRS Criminal Division has the facts, but sit on their corrupt hands. (See our extensive research series on IRS corruption.)

Some Asians doing business in Chicago appear to understand the corrupt system and simply help themselves. Several Koreans operated an electronics supply business. They had a dispute with their bank which apparently wanted to shove them into the hands of the Bankruptcy Club—proper claim or false claim, it did not seem to matter. And how did the Koreans reportedly deal with the situation?

Well, they were accused of apparently starting a fire to burn down their own business. They escaped. But a tragedy occurred. Two Chicago firemen lost their life when, while inside the building fighting the flames, the roof collapsed on them.

The spy-riddled, oil-soaked monopoly press is busy with idle stories about fires in abandoned mattress factories, or non-political murder and mayhem locally. Informing the common people of what is really going on does not interest the liars and whores of the press, those with the fifty dollar hairdoes and the nickel heads.

More coming. Stay tuned.

The Bankruptcy Bordello, Part 5: Untrusted Trustees (6/10/03)

Our group consists, among other things, of volunteer investigators, researchers, and data bloodhounds. Over more than four-and-a-half decades, we have compiled a mass of material on our favorite subjects, of which we have repeatedly publicly demonstrated expertise. That is, court corruption, banker-judges, and bankruptcy court hanky-panky.

One night, some of our group were at a meeting unrelated to our usual work. They were sitting, coincidentally or otherwise, next to a sizeable businessman. After some preliminary chit-chat, they sought to elicit some real discussion, of which one may presume they had some prior indication.

Citizen's Committee To Clean Up The Courts: What do you do?

Businessman: I own a chain of hardware stores.

Citizen's Committee: Are there any problems in your industry? (Pretending not to know.)

Businessman: Plenty. Competition and price undercutting near wrecked me. I could not pay my suppliers and vendors. I had to file for bankruptcy.

Citizen's Committee: In Chicago's U.S. bankruptcy court?

(He nodded yes.)

Businessman: One night this fellow shows up at my home. Introduces himself as a U.S. trustee. Understand, my stores were padlocked, awaiting an auction. So, he asks me my estimate of how much of my inventory is reasonably fresh goods, that could easily be sold in one or more stores of my chain. So, I tell him, it is about two hundred thousand dollars. He says, if I pay him 35 thousand dollars cash, I will have back my inventory and he will see to it that at least one of my stores will be unpadlocked. Auction to be cancelled.

Citizen's Committee: Did you ask him whether this money was to be split up among your creditors or what?

Businessman: Oh, I aint stupid. He made it plain. It was for him personally, and his friends, sort of under the table. No receipt was to be issued. So, I was anxious to reopen. At least one of my stores in an upscale neighborhood in the Chicago area. So I paid the cash on the sly to him.

Citizen's Committee: So what is the problem?

Businessman: I thought I paid him in full. But he and his friends are trying to blackmail me, to get me to now pay them more. And, the bastards did not give me back all of my choicest inventory. They apparently unpadlocked the store themselves, stole some of the inventory, and sold it on the black market.

At a later date, some of our group found a time and a place to "accidentally" sit down next to this U.S. trustee, at a meeting unrelated to court corruption and such.

Volunteers: What do you do? (Pretending not to know.)

Trustee: I am a court-approved U.S. bankruptcy trustee.

Volunteers: (After more preliminary chit-chat, they start asking some real questions.) One of my pals contends you paid Judge (naming him), of the federal court, five big ones to get approved. Is that true?"

Trustee: Hey, what are you guys here, hermits or something? You reward those who do you useful favors! C'mon, this is Chicago.

Volunteers: We also understand you are a sizeable stockholder of Garfield Ridge Trust and Savings Bank (of Chicago).

Trustee: Is there a law against it?

Volunteers: Oh, no, of course not. If Al Capone were still alive, he would not be prevented from owning a substantial share of that bank.

Trustee: So what's the beef?

Volunteers: Well, we happen to know the dope money from the Mena, Arkansas airport deal with the American CIA reportedly has a transit point through Garfield Ridge Trust & Savings Bank, on the way to being laundered by the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. And your fellow sizeable stockholders have been your bank board chairman, Daniel Shannon, who apparently is a super-spook formerly of the U.S. Secret Service. And another fellow sizeable bank stockholder is defrocked former U.S. congressman Daniel Rostenkowski, sent to federal prison for defrauding the private bank of the U.S. Congress.

Trustee: I don't know what the hell you are talking about. Mena, who? Mercantile Exchange? Never heard of them. Goodbye already.

Our website has numerous stories relating to the dope money laundering reportedly through this Chicago bank, enroute to Chicago markets. One bank investigator, with a sense of humor, once told us that ostensibly so much illicit loot is going this route that, guess what? He says they are reportedly bringing into the bank at night,

INTELLIGENCE AGENT'S SHOCKING REPORT: FLYING SAUCERS COME FROM INSIDE EARTH!

- Aliens have established underground bases around the planet.
- Ancient tunnel system has existed since time of Atlantis.
- Entrance ways can be found in many major cities.
- Some government & military officials have taken the side of aliens.

The UFO enigma is more complex than generally believed. Though it is commonly thought that spaceships are arriving here from other solar systems, there is now evidence that several groups of ETs have established bases beneath our very feet.

through a side entrance, boxes all marked "toilet paper" and containing so many hundred dollar bills that they do not count them, instead they just weigh them. Same thing they do apparently through the American CIA dope-money banks in Southern Florida. So much cash was coming in there from the dope trade, the crooked Federal Reserve had to set up a district branch there. By the way, the bank investigator said his higher ups reportedly told him to shut up about this bank and do his work elsewhere.

As mentioned in several of our previous stories, the money from Arkansas is the reputed proceeds from dope trade through Northwest Arkansas, right where the sinister headquarters is of Wal-Mart and Red Chinese dope coming into the U.S. directly from Southwest China. See our series "Wal-Mart And The Red Chinese Secret Police". The tiny First National Bank of Mena (Arkansas) is apparently owned by the Riady ethnic Chinese group, tied to Clinton-Bush, and also greatly implicated with the apparent money laundry, headquartered in North Carolina, called First Union.

One of the strangest group of details to be worked on by our group in over four decades revolved around a lawyer named James R. Vassilos. It took us several years to unravel what he was really all about. He originally came to us complaining about specific instances of divorce court corruption in Chicago's Domestic Relations Division of the Circuit Court of Cook County. We already knew of the massive corruption of which he spoke. So, on that subject, we put him as a guest on our weekly, one-hour taped public-access cable-TV program Broadsides talking on divorce court dirty business.

His estranged wife was heiress to the Dutch bank-octopus fortune, Algemene Bank Nederland. So important was Vassilos with his wife that, in years past, when the Queen of Holland visited Chicago, Vassilos and his wife were among the very very select few to have an audience with the Queen and kiss the royal hand. His brother-in-law, Theo Bark, at one time was a director of ABN. Vassilos in later years told us how his brother-in-law reportedly taught Jim the fine art of money laundering, worldwide, using a German air-carrier package-delivery service similar to Federal Express.

Vassilos claimed his brother-in-law played a key role ostensibly in the corruption of their American flagship, LaSalle National Bank, which they bought from the gold stolen from the Soviet gold treasury, upon the downfall of the Moscow government. (Details are in Part One of this series.) He also claimed his brother-in-law played a role purportedly in running Saudi Airlines under a contract with the major Dutch air carrier.

A year after he approached us, he told us he ran the local version of the National Day of Prayer, May 1992. He gave us the honor of sitting at the front table, right in front of the stage. We were somewhat amused by Jim's habit of mentioning Jesus Christ in every few words.

Present in the grand ballroom of a major downtown Chicago hotel, the meeting had many bigshots. U.S. senators, U.S. congressmen, top officials of the federal bureaucracy, such as from the Chicago District Office of the Internal Revenue Service, a representative of the Mayor of Chicago, luminaries of every type and kind there present.

It took us years to find out, from investigating him and talking off the record with pals of Jim Vassilos, what that was all about. He was using these links, under the guise of pushing Jesus Christ and such, as a way to get under the skin of top local, state, and federal government officials.

In later years we discovered that two years before he met us, he had quietly filed for bankruptcy in Chicago's U.S. bankruptcy court. It was on behalf of him and his law office.

Strange. It came up before chief bankruptcy judge John D. Schwartz. The IRS was listed as a major creditor. But the chief judge refused to allow them to question Jim. More than that, the chief judge did not require Vassilos to disclose his ten law partners of his law office.

We later found out, by interviewing knowledgeable sources in the building they used to occupy, that Vassilos split up his law partners in several different offices scattered throughout the building, as if they were not one entity actually. (As to the chief judge, see Part One of this series.)

How did Vassilos get the chief judge to cover up so much?

Simple: Blackmail. He raised the issues as we later discovered about the chief judge, and the First National Bank of Cicero, and the whole dirty mess of "The Club". Vassilos and others in his combine, had penetrated "The Club". Their records were turned over to certain loudmouths.

His mentioning of Jesus Christ so often seemed to be a front for his blackmail and bribery work. He carried around, always, two bibles—one for real, one hollowed out with a gun inside. He had also been the private attorney for the Deputy Director of the American CIA. He had a specialty of going around the country, visiting former CIA pilots who were framed and put in jail, to discredit them and shut them up about how they discovered their planes were used, for example, for the dope traffic from Honduras to the CIA airport at Mena, Arkansas. The whole Mena mess was run by Daddy Bush, Ollie North, and Clinton as Arkansas Governor.

Once, on the way back from interviewing (or spying on) some of these former pilots, Vassilos was mysteriously grabbed from his vehicle while he was parked at a forest rest-stop on the highway. He was kept in jail—get this—without any actual charges against him. The downstate Illinois judge was puzzled as to how Vassilos was supposedly arrested and dumped into a local jail by operatives of the American CIA. Jim called us collect, and one of our group went to retrieve his vehicle. And wow! To try to find out what happened to him, we opened his huge suitcase, left in his vehicle.

What did we discover? That he owned 500,000 shares in a supposed entity called "Venezuela Telephone Company". Later, one of the TV networks did a documentary claiming the company was a front for dope trafficking by renegade types of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

Over a period of years, we found out how the top officials of the Chicago District Office of the Internal Revenue Service were bribed by Vassilos, he having got under their skin through his Jesus Christ mouthing off.

One day members of our group had a meeting with two top officials of the Criminal Division of the Chicago Office of the IRS. Toward the end of a conference of three hours and fifteen minutes, they finally came around to what was on their mind. They heard that we had the bribery confession of James R. Vassilos—specifics of how he bribed the top brass of the Chicago IRS. AND THAT WE WERE ABOUT TO PUT IT ON THE AIR THROUGH OUR TV SHOW.

"Mr. Skolnick, if you proceed to prepare to put that on the air, we will stop you. We will come and arrest you and your team."

They had earlier in the meeting given us their business card stamped in gold, with their name, title, and direct contact numbers.

How to counter-attack? Across from the cable studio is Kinko's Copy Service. For our TV show, we had the IRS bosses' business card enlarged to 16 x 20. It became the backdrop for our whole one-hour show. That did the trick!

Also, we put into undisputed court records, the details how Vassilos bribed Chicago U.S. District Court Judge Harry D. Leinenweber, whose wife used her maiden name, Lynn Martin, and had been a member of Congress and then the head of the U.S. Labor Department. This was done by Vassilos to torpedo the validity of a $32 million judgment that someone wanted blocked.

Vassilos had a big problem with the U.S. Labor Department regarding a family business. The federals wanted to collect big bucks from Vassilos and certain relatives.

How did he stop that? Simple. He was an expert on bribery. He bribed a top U.S. Labor Department official, while getting under their skin with his religious trick, starting out by repeatedly giving the impression he is a holy man, mentioning Jesus Christ every few words.

The details of the Vassilos confession was looked at by a top IRS official in their Inspection division, in Chicago. Off the record, they confirmed that what Vassilos confessed to was most likely true. They obtained a copy of our TV show for the purpose of forwarding it to the U.S. Treasury Inspector General. Of course, I told the local IRS Inspector I had no confidence in the Inspector General, in view of that office having in the past, as head man, "the highest Mafia representative in the U.S. Government", as confirmed by various law enforcement officials to us.

So, as of the date of this story, nothing has been done to remedy the situation detailed in this series. The U.S. Treasury Inspector General was NOT in any way punished. Nor were the other top IRS officials, nor Judge Leinenweber, or Chief Judge John D. Schwartz, and the various other culprits herein referred to.

More coming. Stay tuned.

The Bankruptcy Bordello, Part 6: Bandits And Bigots (6/14/03)

A terrible hate sometimes builds up over centuries and centuries. For example, the opposition of the British to the Irish Catholics, across the Irish Sea, built up from at least the 12th Century when the Pope gave all of Ireland to the British crown as a papal fief. Then there was the Gunpowder Plot of the 17th Century when, rightly or wrongly, the Catholics were accused of a scheme to blow up the Parliament. In the Battle of the Boyne, 1690, the Catholic King James II and his French supporters were defeated by the Protestant King William III (of Orange).

Early in the 19th Century, the British military was part of a plan to starve out and murder the Irish, committing genocide against them. It was falsely described in most history books as "The Potato Famine". More than 2 million impoverished Irish Catholics set out to escape in voyages to America. Many died enroute across the Atlantic.

(On our public-access cable-TV show in Chicago, we did a three-part series "The Irish Question" for practically the first time in America, telling how the mostly all pro-British American press has lied for generations about the so-called Irish "Potato Famine". In Chicago, the heavily pro-British Chicago Tribune is forever lambasting the Irish Catholics in City Hall. Since the parent firm, Tribune Company, has as major stockholders members of the British royal family, the Tribune never badmouths non-Irish Catholics the same way, giving the prominent Protestants a pass. Thus we call the Tribune "the Queen of England's newspaper".)

The American Aristocracy, heavily dominated by Great Britain, condemned the Irish Catholic influx to the U.S., such as to Boston and Chicago. The Irish did the hard and dangerous work as firemen and police, sometimes taking pay-offs to supplement their awful low wages. In Boston and Chicago they became the bureaucrats, likewise sometimes supplementing their paychecks.

In Chicago, from before the American Civil War or the War Between the States, fomented by the British agitating the natural friction between the North and the South, the French Rothschilds came to be the dominant force in the Chicago Board of Trade. As official bankers for the Vatican, the Rothschilds used prominent Irish Catholics for trading commodities, to manipulate prices. These pit traders, often with steel nerves, were a layer or two below the Ruling Class, to whom they were beholden.

What wrongs the young speculators actually did or were falsely accused of, should not have been blamed on the large Irish Catholic community, collectively, residing in the Chicago area.

(As to how the British, since they invaded the U.S. in the War of 1812, have vowed to destroy the American central government, see our extensive series "The Overthrow Of The American Republic".)

From the time of the death of Jesus Christ, Jews were blamed for his demise. During the series of Christian Crusades that went on for years and years to grab Jerusalem from the Moslems, the Crusaders proceeded east through Europe. On the way, they committed genocide against the Jews. The Crusaders destroyed Jewish communities, slaughtering prominent Rabbis and others, all in the name of religion.

By severe prejudice and malice against them, and kept out of the manufacturing guilds and trades, the Jews were barred. So to survive, they took up to shuffling papers and currencies, and becoming despised money-lenders. Some wanted to somehow get higher in the ladder of power. They became what the Germans call hofjuden, Royal Court Jews. To be acceptable to the Aristocracy, they converted to other religions, retaining, however, their Jewish last names, and sometimes adopting Christian first names. They were, moreover, far too clever not to realize that, if something went wrong with their advice and doings with the regime, they, as the scapegoats, would be thrown away by the Ruling Class to save themselves from public scandal.

In Germany, following their disaster in losing World War One, lawyers and bill collectors with Jewish last names, hofjuden, seized the farms, homes, and properties of ordinary Germans, on behalf of the Prussians and others of the German Ruling Class. This was during the devastating runaway inflation of 1923. The common Germans, relying on paper money backed by hot air, needed a truckload of German currency to buy a loaf of bread. The German Aristocracy, on the other hand, having their funds and properties supported exclusively by gold-backed currency, were not damaged.

The Jews—or at least those with Jewish last names—were the front for the German Ruling Class to grab the assets of ordinary Germans. The hatred that built-up in the common Germans led to the installation, a decade later, of Adolph Hitler, the needed iron-fisted dictator, they thought, to rescue the economy. There was already an anti-Jewish sentiment in the German psyche, and

Revelations of a Mother Goddess An Interview by David Icke

The staggering story of human sacrifice and satanic ritual, involving the most famous people in the world.

Arizona Wilder, formerly Jennifer Greene, was mind-programmed from birth to become one of the three most important female conductors of Satanic rituals on the planet. Her programmer was Josef Mengele, the notorious "Angel of Death" in the Nazi concentration camps. When he died in the late 1980s, her programming began to break down.

In this video interview with David Icke, she describes human sacrifice rituals at Glamis Castle and Balmoral, in which the Queen, the Queen Mother, and other members of the Royal Family sacrificed children in Satanic ceremonies.

She talks of the same experiences with Henry Kissinger, George Bush, Bill Clinton, members of the Rockefeller and Rothschild families, and a host of the most famous names in the United States and the United Kingdom.

Your view of the world will never be the same when you hear the revelations of Arizona Wilder and consider their relevance to your daily life.

these conditions added to that.

About 1980, at a sizeable meeting of the Jewish Genealogy Society, I interviewed numerous elderly Jews there present. On tape, I particularly found the ones who grew up in Germany at the time of the rise of Der Fuhrer. They related the details, seldom if ever publicly mentioned, how the German lawyers and bill collectors, with Jewish last names, exploited and destroyed the ordinary Germans on behalf of the German Aristocracy.

Some prominent Jews at the meeting, however, hearing what eyewitness testimony I was eliciting and taping, kept threatening to seize my tape recorder and expel me from the meeting. I retained the tapes and used them on the only forum available to me at that time—my recorded phone-message commentary. This was before the era of the Internet, and public-access cable TV, and talk shows as exist nowadays.

In my research story "The Great Secrets Of The 20th Century, Part 2" I relate how bigshot Chicago-area Jews, or at least those with Jewish surnames, had me falsely arrested when I attended a press conference for the Nazi-hunter, Simon Wiesenthal, visiting in Chicago from Austria. Me and my wheelchair were seized by a squad of police, and a young Rabbi came behind me, telling me: "Shush; say nothing; go with the police."

I protested in vain: What was the crime I committed? I was not told. It had become known that I was about to conduct the first major seminar in America, at the ballroom of an old downtown Chicago hotel. The subject? "Nazi War Criminals In America" who were not punished as they quietly lived amongst us at that time.

And who led an effective boycott against my seminar? Why, two so-called Jewish defense agencies, the Anti-Defamation League and the B'nai B'rith. (These are the same ones who have fought to block my non-commercial TV program the last 13 years. Perhaps they were upset that, as long ago as 1970, I made public statements that the ADL is a spy operation fronting for the American secret political police, like the FBI.)

And get this: I was thus removed, without cause, from the building (since torn down for highrise development) called the Covenant Club—that is, the Ten Commandments Society.

Over a period of decades, I and some of my associates have studied and investigated the phenomenon in the U.S. That is, in most every major city in a federal district, there is a small group of U.S. bankruptcy court judges, lawyers, assignees, trustees, and auctioneers with Jewish last names, some with Christian first names. In places like Chicago, they operate a corrupt enterprise called "The Club".

Both debtors and creditors are plundered by such a group, often numbering about thirty or so. Some firms are falsely pushed into the bankruptcy court for the purpose of stealing funds and assets. In some instances operatives of Israeli intelligence, the Mossad, either renegades or questionably authorized by the State of Israel, if at all, skim-off some of these stolen treasures to be secretly transmitted supposedly to Tel Aviv. Disputes between the local gang and the Israelis sometime lead to murders. (Review the earlier parts of this series.)

On occasion, I have confronted either members of "The Club" or other prominent supposed Jews. A typical conversation:

Citizen's Committee To Clean Up The Courts: Blacks and Latinos, in particular, contact me. They are blunt. "Those rotten Jew lawyers stole my house and car in bankruptcy court. They took a fee promising to save that. And the Jew judges were part of it. You are a Jew. What are you doing about this?" (Sometimes it appeared to me they were ready to cry.)

Lawyer With Jewish Last Name: Why the hell don't you mind your own damned business? Many of those are dummies. We conduct business, and we do not need your suggestions.

Citizen's Committee: So if someone is Black or Latino, and you think they are not well educated, and you call them "dummies", it is okay to fleece them, right?

Lawyer: I heard about you. No brains.

Citizen's Committee: Do you realize that lawyers like you—with Jewish last names, some with Christian first names—are causing a wave of anti-Jewish feeling to be blamed on ALL Jews collectively?

Lawyer: You have no sense. I should not have started to talk to you at all. Why aren't you trying to protect fellow Jews simply conducting business?

I once spoke to an old-time lawyer, often busy in the Chicago U.S. bankruptcy court. I interviewed him during a court recess:

Citizen's Committee To Clean Up The Courts: Tell me something, how come so many of the lawyers in the bankruptcy court have Jewish last names?

Elderly Lawyer: Well, many in this trade started out in the collection business. You probably know, Jews were kept out of certain manufacturing and businesses. So this is how we proceeded. From collection we naturally stepped up to representing debtors in bankruptcy court. We try to help people down on their luck, because of illness, or loss of their job, or business reverses, and so on.

Citizen's Committee: Yeh, but some in your trade—many, in fact—plunder Blacks and Latinos. You knowingly steer them into Chapter 13, where they have to have a plan to pay-back their creditors. You promise to save their house, their furniture, their car, and so on. Yet, you know Chapter 13 is mostly a deadly trap for Blacks, Latinos, other people of color. And the victims of the work of your colleagues contact me, complaining about "those rotten Jew lawyers". I am a traditional Jew; what am I, with compassion, supposed to tell them?

Lawyer: Tell them to go and get another job.

Citizen's Committee: And what if the times are bad and jobs cannot easily be found? And by the way, are you a member of "The Club"?

Lawyer: I don't know about any Club. Are they listed somewhere?

Citizen's Committee: Do you realize there is a growing epidemic in America of anti-Jew feeling? And those like a group of bankruptcy lawyers, auctioneers, and such are fomenting this hatred.

Lawyer: You don't seem to understand our business at all.

Some spend their time simply criticizing anti-Jew sentiments without bringing up any details which may be, in part, causing it. By the way, by the middle of the 20th Century, with the U.S. having been in a general prosperity, there were a growing number of non-Jews who came to the viewpoint that perhaps the Jews did not kill Jesus Christ after all. But now, because of growing financial hardships in the U.S., there is a sizeable element returning to the previous viewpoint. Something has to be done to spotlight the situation where a small number of hojuden are causing, in some instances, the entire Jewish population to be collectively condemned for what a small number are doing, with Jewish surnames, who may not even anymore be part of the religion.

It is important to openly discuss what happened in Germany leading up to Hitler, which has never, never, never been discussed by the oil-soaked, spy-riddled monopoly press.

More coming. Stay tuned.

"Take all the robes of all the good judges who have ever lived on the face of the Earth, and they would not be large enough to cover the iniquity of one corrupt judge."

Vatican Assassins

Wounded In The house of My friends

An explosive, detailed, shocking, historical account of the long-suppressed history of the Jesuit Order, from 1540 to the present, and their involvement behind the scenes manipulating the world through the Pope, via the Jesuit's General, the "Black" Pope—the most powerful man in the world.

If you were astonished by the front-page story in the May 2000 issue of The SPECTRUM titled: The Most Powerful Man In The World? The "Black" Pope: Count Hans Kolvenbach—The Jesuit's General, then you won't want to miss this in-depth study of perhaps the greatest ongoing conspiracy the world has ever known. Author Eric Phelps goes into countless details and fully documented facts concerning the "dark" side of the Vatican's un-godly history.

"Almost 700 pages filled with names, facts, and carefully wrought conspiracies on the kind of vast scale that creates or destroys empires."

—The Book Reader, America's most independent review of new titles, Fall/Winter 2001/2002

"Probably of all books which could be called 'conspiracy oriented', this is the grand-daddy. This is the Big One, I mean it...."

"It's one of those books that, even if you're a cynic and can come to terms with only half of it, it changes everything." — Jeff Rense, Oct. 11, 2001

Large-print, 700-page, 8½" X 11" book, with over 100 rare pictures PLUS a DATA CD-ROM with 13 rare, out-of-print books used in the researching of Vatican Assassins.

WISDOM OF THE RAYS:

The Masters Teach, Volumes I & II

Do you enjoy the spiritual messages shared here in The SPECTRUM? If so then you won't want to miss these two volumes packed full of earlier shared messages.

More Quotes From Volume II

"Be not in fear of the changes that are upon you, for they are a very necessary part of the [planetary] transition. The Earth will heave to and fro, and many wondrous things will you experience, but lose not your sight upon the final goal. We will always be there with you, and we are but a call away."

— Ceres Anthonious "Toniose" Soltec

— Sanat Kumara ("Grandfather")

"The physical body is 'merely' a conduit for the interaction into and the interfacing with the physical experience. I say 'merely' because that body is a most exquisite creation indeed and poorly understood by your current level of so-called medical science."

— Master Hilarion

"Be at peace, you who acknowledge and take within these messages of Higher Guidance, for you are being given that which you will need, in the way of instruction, to meet and surmount these challenges ahead."

— Aton, The One Light

"Our Elder Brothers from the Higher Realms of Creation are attempting to communicate with ALL of us at this time. Why? Take a look around you. The old ways of doing things aren't working. Our planet is entering a time of massive, turbulent change and renewal. To put it bluntly: we NEED help! And that's where these books come into the picture. Yes, eventually 'the Phoenix will arise from the ashes' after this Great Cleansing process, but the ride could be quite a bumpy one, especially for those ill-prepared for what is to happen." — Back Cover, Vol. I

"Let us begin with WHO you are. You, the non-physical YOU, are an infinite thought projection of the One who created you. (God!) You are the product of His desire. You are, in effect, Desire manifest in uniqueness of purpose." — Esu "Jesus" Sananda (Vol. II)

MARK HAZLEWOOD WITH GUEST JAMES M. MCCANNEY AT THE 2002 GLOBAL WINGS CONFERENCE

(available on VHS & DVD)

This 2.5-hour presentation is a recording of the lecture given in Denver, Colorado, where hundreds of people gathered to learn more about the reasons for our weather variations, directly related to the drastically escalating solar flare activity. Learn about the connection between our Sun and the changes now taking place all over the world, and understand why we can expect much greater effects to take place, as our tenth planet approaches. Prof. James McCanney explains, in easily understandable terms, the true nature of our solar system and tells you why this information is suppressed.

Behold A Pale Horse

audio cassettes, read by the author William Cooper

"William Cooper is the only man in America who has all the pieces to the puzzle that has troubled so many for so long." (Anthony Hilder, Radio Free America)

William Cooper, a former U.S. Naval Intelligence Briefing Team member, accurately predicted the fall of the Soviet Union, the end of the Berlin Wall, and the invasion of Panama. His information came from top-secret documents that he read while with the Intelligence Briefing Team and from over twenty years of research. Cooper reveals his theories on the assassination of John F. Kennedy, the war on drugs, and UFOs. He urges the listener: "Like it or not, everything is changing. The result will be the most wonderful experience in human history or the most horrible enslavement you can imagine. Be active or abdicate; the future is in your hands."
